TAWAS CITY

WILL START TEST WELL NEXT WEEK

Officials and Contractors Hold Consultation Thursday

Drilling of the first test well for Tawas City's water works system will begin next week, announced George Francis of the Francis Engineering company Thursday afternoon before the mayor, members of the council, W.P.A. and P.W.A. officials and contractors. The well is the first of the four projects into which the system has been divided for construction. It is anticipated that the well will be completed within 30 days.

The meeting in the city clerk's office yesterday was called by Howard H. Barnett of Midland, resident P.W.A. engineer-inspector. The several contractors were invited to meet here with the interested officials to discuss the various phases of the contracts and P.W.A. regulations. L. W. Wells of Saginaw, contractor for the distribution system, was represented at the meeting by his son, Don Wells, and his office manager, Clare P. Leonard. Ed. Christman, well contractor, was unable to be present owing to the bad condition of the roads near his home in Ogemaw county.

Work on the distribution system will commence as soon as a sufficient quantity of water of the required quality is secured and approved, stated Engineer Francis. It is estimated that 40 men will be required on the distribution system construction work. The first three contracts have received final approval from P.W.A. officials at Detroit. Proposals on the fourth project, which includes the pumps and pumping station, will be received during the spring.

Edgar A. Weeks

The funeral services of Edgar A. Weeks will be held at two o'clock Saturday afternoon from the W. A. Evans funeral home, Tawas City. Mr. Weeks, who lived alone at his home in Wilber township, was found dead in bed last Monday by a neighbor. He had been dead for several hours. Mr. Weeks has a brother living at Fremont, Neb.

"Captain Blood" and His Pirates at Family Theatre

This thrilling tale of seventeenth century sea pirates is said to be one of the most elaborate and pretentious productions in screen history. Tremendous settings were designed by master builders.

The story opens with the Monmouth rebellion against King James II of England. Young Peter Blood, a physician, who, although he had no part in the rebellion, is sentenced to slavery.

Playing the title role of "Captain Blood" is Errol Flynn, a handsome and dashing young Irishman, who was recruited from the London stage. The feminine lead is played by Olivia de Havilland, and the cast includes Lionel Atwill, Basil Rathbone, Ross Alexander, Guy Kibbee, Robert Barrat, and hundreds of others.

LUTHERAN PASTOR INSTALLED AT HALE

An impressive and well attended installation service was conducted at the town hall in Hale last Sunday afternoon at which Rev. Kenneth Vertz from Mishicot, Wisconsin, was duly installed as pastor of St. Paul's English Evangelical Lutheran church by Rev. W. C. Voss, with the assistance of Rev. E. Ross from Tawas City. Two appropriate hymns were rendered by the Emanuel Lutheran choir of Tawas City under the direction of Teacher Wm. Woltmann.

After a number of inquiries had been made in the vicinity of Hale by Rev. Voss about the desire for Lutheran services at Hale, the first service was conducted on October 21, 1934. Services have since been conducted regularly on Sunday evenings or afternoons. On June 23, 1935 the mission organized into a congregation, adopting the name St. Paul's English Evangelical Lutheran church of Hale. The organization began with ten voting members and 28 communicant members. Since St. Paul's church was begun as a mission, 15 baptisms were performed and eight were confirmed after due instruction in the doctrines of Scripture. Up to the present time the congregation has not acquired any property or its own buildings for the use of divine services and instruction, but hopes to do so in the future.

Rev. Kenneth Vertz, who had temporarily served two congregations previously in Manitowish county, Wisconsin, will be a resident pastor at Hale, and is at present making his home with Glenwood Streeter. He will conduct regular divine services every Sunday morning at 10:30 and class instructions will be held on Wednesday evenings.

Everyone in the vicinity of Hale who would in any way be interested and desirous of services by a Lutheran pastor is requested to communicate with Rev. Vertz.

MRS. CORA SMITH FATALLY HURT IN AUTO CRASH

Car Hits Culvert on U. S. 23 Four Miles From Omer

Mrs. Cora Smith of Detroit, daughter of Mrs. Viola Grigg of this city, was fatally injured Saturday evening when the car in which she was riding collided with the abutment of a culvert four miles east of Omer. Mrs. Smith died three hours later at Omer hospital.

Mrs. Smith was on her way to Tawas City with her son, Harold Colegrove, his little four-year-old daughter, Alice Lou, Mrs. Viola Steadman, a niece of Mrs. Smith, and John Guidley. Little Alice Lou was uninjured but the other occupants were more or less seriously injured. Harold Colegrove suffered several fractured ribs and John Guidley was taken to Mercy hospital, Bay City, in a critical condition.

The car had been driven from Detroit to Pinconning by Harold Colegrove. Mrs. Viola Steadman was driving at the time of the accident, which occurred at about ten o'clock. It is thought that ice on the pavement caused the car to swerve into the abutment.

Cora Grigg was born February 14, 1876, at Deckerville. She came to Tawas City with her parents and had been a resident here for a large portion of her life. For the past three years she had resided in Detroit.

She is survived by her mother, Mrs. Viola Grigg, of this city; her father, John Grigg, of Port Huron; one son, Harold Colegrove; and three sisters, Mrs. Alfred Swales of Detroit, Mrs. Mabel McKinnon of Black River and Mrs. William Brown of this city.

The funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon from the Tawas City Baptist church. Rev. Frank Metcalf officiated. Interment was in the Tawas City cemetery.

What I Think Of County Snow Plow Work

I am not inclined to criticize the men who ride the trucks or those who direct them to get us out of the snow. I really and truly think they are doing all they can with what they have to do it with. It is easy to criticize but sometimes we know in our own mind it is unjust.

For the last two weeks I have been mixing with the boys who are trying to keep the highways passable. I have seen them working twenty-five to thirty hours without sleeping in weather below zero—suffering from cold, too, but not complaining because of the thought that someone was waiting and depending on them to get out—perhaps sick, perhaps stuck in cars on the roadside.

The question is often asked, "Why are men allowed to work so many hours continuously?" The answer is that drivers of these machines must know every foot of the road and the lay of the land over which they travel. Snow obliterates the ditch lines and a green driver would likely be in the ditch in a few hours. Even the experienced sometimes go in the ditch.

Criticism sometimes given to those who direct this work is generally most unjust. Many think their road should be plowed first. If this is not done there is no name vile enough to apply to those who direct this work. When it is considered that the county funds are only a fraction of what is necessary to properly do this work we wonder how the job is done as well as it is. Most of the gas and weight tax is returned to the counties in proportion to registration—which is practically the same as population. A heavily populated county may have no more miles than a sparsely populated one, yet get ten times the money.

Some of the poorer counties have decided not to plow any more snow. With machinery all broken down and more bills than they can pay they find the task of removing this snow too much for them. We are thankful that Isosco is still trying and has opened a large percentage of its roads. John H. Schiber, Supervisor.

TAWAS BAY WATER FRONT

P. K. Fletcher of Alpena has just purchased two 6-meter boats designed by Sparkman & Stephens of New York. This well known firm designed Charles Moeller's "Yucatan." The two boats will be raced in next summer's regatta here.

A meeting of the Tawas Bay Yachting association will be held Saturday, February 29. It will be held for the purpose of discussing the summer program and the regatta.

The East Tawas Club chartered two cars on the D. & M. "snow train" to Alpena last Sunday. Over one hundred made the trip, including the families of club members and their friends. All enjoyed the trip immensely. Much praise was heard about the fine out-door skating rink at Alpena. Courtesy cars were furnished them by friends in the northern city. The cars and drivers were at the disposal of the visitors and entertainment was furnished for everyone.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry V. Crosswell left Thursday morning for St. Petersburg, Fla., where they will remain for two weeks.

A meeting will be held tonight (Friday) at the home of Mrs. C. J. Cresser for the purpose of forming a Campfire Girls' organization here.

Playful Elephants Annoy Farmers of S. W. Africa

Efforts are being made by farmers in the Outjo district of South West Africa to obtain some relief from the administration from a plague of elephants. Elephants, being "Royal game," cannot be shot, and the Outjo farmer who sees his fences, windmills and reservoirs being destroyed by them has simply to look on. This, however, is not the only complaint, for now the elephants have taken to chasing the farmers off their own farms.

On several recent occasions farmers, while inspecting their properties, have been chased by elephant herds. Each time, however, the farmers have been lucky enough to be mounted and have managed to make good their escape, but they have become so annoyed that they are now petitioning to be allowed to shoot the raiders.—Montreal Herald.

NO ALKALIES FOR ACID DIGESTION

MILLIONS have found they do not need to crutch their stomachs with strong, caustic alkalies. Physicians have said this habit often brings further acid indigestion. So much more safe and sensible to simply carry a roll of Tums in your pocket. Munch 3 or 4 after meals—or whenever troubled by heartburn, gas, sour stomach. Try them when you feel the effects of last night's party, or when you smoke too much. Tums contain a wonderful antacid which neutralizes acid in the stomach, but never over-alkalizes stomach or blood. As pleasant to eat as candy and only 10c at any drug store.

Midway to the stream channel he stopped where, through separate vistas, he could see both planes. The gray dawn had brightened enough to make them visible at a distance. He sat down on a log to wait. In the Eskimo suit, the cold was negligible.

A look at the constable's pistol showed it to be fully loaded. He took off the belt and buckled it on again under the loose fullness of his parka. Holstered between the caribou skin and his rabbit-fur undersuit, the oil in the pistol mechanism would become warm. Cold oil is apt to jam a gun.

After making sure of the pistol, he had nothing to do except give his face an occasional rub to prevent frostbite. He sat restfully relaxed, as patient as an Eskimo hunter beside a seal hole. Very slowly the gray dawn brightened. It at last began to mellow into gold.

From across the lake came the crack of rifles—three shots in quick succession. Garth told himself that Huxby or his men were hunting moose. He surmised why. The engineer planned to cover the shattered ends of the three-seater plane's floats with rawhide.

The sun glared over the jagged barrier mountains into the frost-gripped valley. Quite a while later, Garth saw one of his four enemies come out of the trees near the lake shore, on the far side of the frozen glacier stream. The man carried a big folded hide on his left shoulder.

A shout turned the man's steps up towards the ford. Other shouts came from the slope above. Garth smiled. It was as he had foreseen. In coming to repair the floats of the three-seater plane, Huxby and his men had formed a line from the lake shore to timberline and searched the spruce woods.

But the hunters had found no trace of their quarry all the way to the bank of the frozen glacier stream. There, however, the snowshoe tracks coming down from the tundra made plain sign even for cheechacos. Huxby came running along the trail, followed by the man with the moosehide.

Near the plane the engineer stopped for the miner to overtake him. They approached the stranded aircraft warily, with rifles raised, ready to shoot. When nothing happened, Huxby signed for his companion to drop the hide and climb aboard. As the man obeyed, another of the miners came running down the trail.

Huxby was looking at the tracks that led on along the lake shore. The man on the plane peered into the three cockpits. Huxby sighted the cabin plane across the corner of the lake. He shouted and pointed to it, but waited for the second miner to come up before starting on along the trail. The fourth man of the party appeared up the stream bank.

Garth slipped back behind thick cover and swung into a fast pace. He struck the stream bank above the ford. Trees cut off all view of the four trackers. Garth crossed the ice in the open stream bed and found cover again on the west bank. But instead of heading up the gulch, he kept straight on, parallel with the lake shore.

The thought of Lillith amused him. She had been seen only by the miner who had fired down from timberline. At the distance she must have been mistaken for a man. Only a degenerate criminal would knowingly shoot at a woman. But her short snowshoe trail following his own and Dillon's must have shown the trappers that the third member of his party was as helpless as the dead or wounded constable.

They would be perplexed to guess what had become of his two companions. No man could make off with two persons on his back. Even if Huxby had guessed the truth that Dillon was dead and his body aboard the cabin plane, he would be mystified by the puzzle of the third person who, with the snowshoe-runner, had been kept from boarding the plane.

Still smiling, Garth came to the placer camp. The big fire under the gravel-thawing kettles had died down to a bed of coals. The forelegs and hindquarters of the newly killed moose lay in the snow beside the brush leanto. On the floor mat of spruce sprays, along with the bedding, was a pile of food—bacon, flour, sugar, dried fruit, tea. Back of the food were tight-lidded cans filled with dynamite, coils of fuse, and caps.

Garth jerked up the blankets. Under one set lay the strong canvas bag for which he was looking. He had hoped to find the constable's rifle. But one of the miners must have come to the valley without a gun. The carbine had not been left in camp.

The failure to find the weapon did not alter Garth's plans. Working fast, he filled the three-gallon teapot with packages of tea, salt and sugar. The pot went into an empty floursack, along with a little dried fruit, some dynamite, and a pair each of tin cups, plates and spoons.

he tossed coals from the fire into the base of the stack. The wood soon blazed up in several places.

With the floursack pack and the bag of platinum alloy slung over his shoulder, he went downslope.

Garth lugged the sack across the open space and past the stunted spruce beside which Constable Dillon had been murdered. In a drift on the north side of the next tree, he dug a hole, dropped in the sack of alloy, and covered it over.

A backward look at the camp showed the bonfire flaming high. At any moment the frozen dynamite was apt to thaw enough to explode. From off to the left came angry shouts. The direction of Garth's trail had at last warned the pursuers of his raid on their camp. They were heading for it as fast as they could flounder through the drifts.

To add insult to injury, he tramped a heavy trail up into a spruce thicket and built a small fire. Beside the fire, he scattered a handful of dried apricots and prunes. After that he skirted along the edge of the musketry to its north end.

Here he came to where in ancient times, before it started to recede, the glacier had piled a big terminal moraine. This was the immense natural dam that held the lake in its bed.

Among the rocks of the rapids, on the slope of the lower valley below the falls, Garth made out the wreckage of Mr. Ramill's custom-built monoplane.

He worked his way down alongside the rapids to look closer at the wreck. What little had been left of the costly aircraft was not worth salvaging. But the tattered cover of one broken wing thrust up out of the white water within reach from the bank.

Garth started a fire of small sticks. He quenched it with damp moss, and used the charred stick ends to write on the wing fabric:

$5,000 reward for
V. HUXBY
Thief and Murderer.

CHAPTER XI

Female of the Species.

Shortly before noon, the four trappers appeared on the moraine. The man who had not been bogged led the way down. Another miner followed, then Huxby. The man who had lost his rifle lagged behind. The two leaders reached the broken monoplane wing. Garth saw them read the writing.

Huxby jumped down beside the miners, to stare at the offer of reward that branded him for what he was. With a curse, he ripped the tattered piece of fabric from the wing frame and flung it down into the foaming rapid.

The two men glanced furtively at each other. Huxby pointed to the trail on the opposite bank and signed for them to lead the way across. Neither moved. The first man cursed, and shouted his refusal:

"Jump them boulders? I ain't no lynx. I'm through trailing that devil."

"Me too," declared the second man. "I won't break my neck for nobody."

A second look at the crossing forced Huxby to shout his agreement: "Curse the devil! We'll chase back. He's going on around to our plane. That's where he must have left both of his disabled companions."

Along with the angry statement, the engineer signed for his miners to start back ahead of him. Garth smiled. The two who had seen that offer of reward would not forget it, and Huxby was keenly aware of the fact.

When all four disappeared up the moraine, Garth recrossed the boulders. There was no sign of Lillith when he came down from the moraine. He called into the entrance tunnel. Back came a quavering cry of relief. A quick crawl took him in through the low narrow passage.

Lillith was breathing hard, almost gasping. "Oh! oh, thank God! I looked and looked, but I could not see you. I thought you must be lying there—like that poor policeman—dead!"

"Hardly. Look here—and here." He showed the pistol, then dumped his floursack pack. "How about salt on our meat, and a cup of tea with sugar?"

"Alan!" she cried. "You made them give you all this!"

"In a way—yes. Set a pot of snow on the lamp stone, and slice some meat."

trunks could be brought and shoved out to them.

Set on niggerheads, the poles gave support for the trapped men to pull themselves up out of the treacherously sucking quagmire. Other poles made a bridge for them, back to solid ground. But the bearded miner left his rifle down in the ooze.

Garth chuckled and looked to see Huxby backtrack with his men. Instead, the engineer headed up the bog valley towards the gulch. That added to Garth's mirth. By a quick return, the hunters could have stripped off the grizzly's hide before it froze. They were walking away from a rug that would have gone far towards replacing their burnt blankets. He had so tantalized and enraged them that they could think only of revenge.

To add insult to injury, he tramped a heavy trail up into a spruce thicket and built a small fire. Beside the fire, he scattered a handful of dried apricots and prunes. After that he skirted along the edge of the musketry to its north end.

Here he came to where in ancient times, before it started to recede, the glacier had piled a big terminal moraine. This was the immense natural dam that held the lake in its bed.

Among the rocks of the rapids, on the slope of the lower valley below the falls, Garth made out the wreckage of Mr. Ramill's custom-built monoplane.

He worked his way down alongside the rapids to look closer at the wreck. What little had been left of the costly aircraft was not worth salvaging. But the tattered cover of one broken wing thrust up out of the white water within reach from the bank.

Garth started a fire of small sticks. He quenched it with damp moss, and used the charred stick ends to write on the wing fabric:

$5,000 reward for
V. HUXBY
Thief and Murderer.

CHAPTER XI

Female of the Species.

Shortly before noon, the four trappers appeared on the moraine. The man who had not been bogged led the way down. Another miner followed, then Huxby. The man who had lost his rifle lagged behind. The two leaders reached the broken monoplane wing. Garth saw them read the writing.

Huxby jumped down beside the miners, to stare at the offer of reward that branded him for what he was. With a curse, he ripped the tattered piece of fabric from the wing frame and flung it down into the foaming rapid.

The two men glanced furtively at each other. Huxby pointed to the trail on the opposite bank and signed for them to lead the way across. Neither moved. The first man cursed, and shouted his refusal:

"Jump them boulders? I ain't no lynx. I'm through trailing that devil."

"Me too," declared the second man. "I won't break my neck for nobody."

A second look at the crossing forced Huxby to shout his agreement: "Curse the devil! We'll chase back. He's going on around to our plane. That's where he must have left both of his disabled companions."

Along with the angry statement, the engineer signed for his miners to start back ahead of him. Garth smiled. The two who had seen that offer of reward would not forget it, and Huxby was keenly aware of the fact.

"Hardly. Look here—and here." He showed the pistol, then dumped his floursack pack. "How about salt on our meat, and a cup of tea with sugar?"

"Alan!" she cried. "You made them give you all this!"

"In a way—yes. Set a pot of snow on the lamp stone, and slice some meat."

Vivian Huxby shall be tried and hung for murder."

She gasped: "You—hung! But he has all those men to help him. You're alone—worse than alone. I'm only a hindrance."

He smiled banteringly. "Well, I wouldn't say that. A handy cook isn't altogether a nuisance. The pot is beginning to simmer. You might drop in a pinch of tea. How's your ankle."

"Ever so much better. I've exercised it a little every time I went outside. And I've half finished my parka. But how—" she interrupted herself—"how can you win if you don't kill them?"

"Why, for a starter, Miss Cook, we'll let them stew in their own juice for a few days. That will tend to soften their bonds of mutual aid. No bedding and a diet of saltless meat will help those three plunger jacks to consider the desirability of that five thousand dollar reward I offered for their boss."

"Alan Garth, you're marvelous!"

"Not at all. It just happens I know this game, and I told you before that Huxby is only a commonplace wolf. If he were a wolverine, I'd have to look sharp. As it is, we'll stay up here snug and cosy, and enjoy their tea and sugar while you're learning to use your snowshoes."

By noon the next day Lillith's Eskimo suit was finished. Her ankle, though weak, was no longer sore or swollen. Garth bandaged it firmly with a strip of skin, and had her begin practicing on her webs.

Not being hurried or excited, she soon caught the knack of the snowshoe stride. As her ankle became stronger and her feet hardened she developed into a fairly fast snowshoe runner.

Their last climb took them up around the bend in the great cleft. Before they turned back, Garth had the girl fire the pistol. She neither shut her aiming eye nor flinched as she pulled the trigger. Each time the bullet struck within a foot of the nearby mark that Garth set up.

"Not half bad," he approved. "I'll let you go down with me tomorrow morning."

Though the temperature had become milder, it remained below freezing point. As on the other occasion, Garth started down on two hours before dawn. This time Lillith trailed with him.

Huxby had moved his camp to the lake shore opposite the stranded cabin plane. A big fire of birch logs threw its welcome heat into the front of the three-sided leanto. The engineer and two of his miners lay asleep, huddled in nests of spruce sprays and dry moss.

The fourth man sat on a log beside the fire, his rifle between his knees. He yawned drowsily.

The first slight tinge of dawn had begun to gray the east. But among the trees the night was still black. A sudden flicker of light in the darkness behind the leanto brought the sleepy watcher's head up with a jerk. Beside the skin-lad man with the lighted match, he saw a second man squinting at him along the barrel of a pistol.

Mexico's Calendar Stone Carved by Aztec Indians

Among the sights of Mexico City is the famous Calendar stone. It was cut from volcanic rock by Aztec Indians, and the work was done more than four centuries ago, during the reign of the Aztec ruler, Montezuma II, says a writer in the Detroit News.

Aztec tribes were in control of Mexico when it was invaded by the Spaniards. The present name of the country is believed to have come from an old Aztec war-god who was called "Mexitli" or "Mexititl." It is easy to see how his name could have been changed to "Mexico."

The Calendar stone is on view in a museum in Mexico City. On it is carved a great circular figure in the shape of the sun; and the width of the figure is 12 feet.

The stone is composed of volcanic rock, and weighs 20 tons as it exists today. The rock appears to have been obtained from a quarry several miles from Mexico City; and it is estimated that before the carving was done, the rough block weighed from 40 to 50 tons.

It may be that the block was cut down before it was moved from the quarry; but, in any case, it was too heavy for people to lift. There were no oxen or other large beasts of burden in Mexico before the white men came, so it must have been moved with the help of rollers.

At the center of the Calendar stone is a picture or symbol of the sun god and with the rest of the carving, it tells the Aztec story of "the world's history."

The Aztecs declared that four suns had existed before the one they saw in the sky. The first sun was supposed to have been destroyed by a jaguar, the second by a whirlwind, the third by a rain of fire, and the fourth by a flood. It was believed that the fifth sun would be destroyed by an earthquake.

POULTRY FACTS

SOY BEANS MAKE POULTRY RATION

Meal Is Satisfactory Protein Supplement.

By H. H. Alp, Poultry Extension Specialist, University of Illinois.—WNU Service.

Soy bean oil meal is a satisfactory protein supplement for the poultry ration if the ration also contains sufficient mineral.

For growth and egg production soy bean oil meal, supplemented with sufficient minerals of the right kinds, is about equal to meat scraps and fish meal, somewhat better than tankage, gluten feed and cottonseed meal, and not quite as good as dry milk products.

Both soy beans, fed whole or ground, and soy bean oil meal must be supplemented with sufficient minerals. The minerals needed are calcium, phosphorus, sodium and chlorine. These can be supplied by a mineral mixture containing 2 per cent bone meal, 1 per cent ground limestone and 1 per cent salt.

For laying hens the following mash containing soy bean oil meal has been found satisfactory: 160 pounds ground yellow corn, 100 pounds wheat bran, 100 pounds ground oats, 50 pounds meat scrap, 50 pounds soy bean oil meal, 40 pounds alfalfa leaf meal, 10 pounds steamed bone meal, 5 pounds ground limestone or oyster shell and 5 pounds salt. The grain mixture suggested is one-half corn and one-quarter each of wheat and oats or barley.

Whole soy beans are not very satisfactory, since they contain a large amount of oil which makes it necessary to feed them sparingly. Because of this high fat content, ground beans may become rancid during warm weather. The value of whole soy beans as poultry feed does not measure up to that of commercial soy bean oil meal.

Another factor to be considered where beans form a large part of the ration is that flocks do not relish the taste of beans until accustomed to this type of feed.

Stone Age Heater Good to Warm Poultry House

Michigan State college men have gone all the way back to the Stone Age to find an economical way to heat poultry houses and small greenhouses. The work has been done where winter temperatures make heat in laying houses profitable, observes the Country Home.

Their heater is made of an empty oil drum and a pile of stones. A fire door is cut in one end of the drum and a hole for the smoke pipe in the other, and the oil drum is placed on its side on a bed of sand or masonry. A blanket of stones from 12 to 18 inches thick is then placed around the sides and over the top of the drum.

The stove is fired with wood; when the stones about the oil drum become thoroughly heated, they will radiate warmth for hours. In temperatures as low as 30 degrees below zero, it has not been necessary to fire the stove later than nine o'clock at night to furnish ample heat in the poultry house until the next morning. One winter's experience in heating a 10-by-19-foot greenhouse was also entirely successful.

Trapnest Is Best Test

Trapnesting being to the laying flock what the scale and Babcock test are to the dairy herd, it is the only means of accurately determining the production of the individual hen. At the Cape Rouge experimental station, says the Montreal Herald, the hens are selected by the trapnesting method and the poor layers are marketed after their first year's laying. Hatching eggs are selected from high producers, and should weigh at least 24 ounces per dozen. Unthrifty chicks, and cockerels except those from the best hens are marketed. The pullets which are strong, vigorous, healthy and active, which have a large, deep head, stout beak, and large, bright prominent eyes are kept, while the birds which are unthrifty or unhealthy, which have a crow head, long, shallow beak or small, sunken eyes, or are off-types are eliminated.

Poultry Lore

Water is an important factor in the production of winter eggs.

One hundred pullets should eat about 25 pounds of feed daily.

An older and more popular dish than either peacock, goose, or turkey, is the homely duck.

Thinness in poultry indicates lack of proper feed or inability to digest what they eat.

In the Canton, China, district there are duck farms that carry as many as 3,000 ducks on one-third of an acre.

Nine pounds of water are required for each dozen eggs laid, according to records recently completed on 60 White Leghorn pullets at the University of Illinois.

In China, which is a land of the most ancient traditions, duck raising for food "has been practiced ever" as one investigator comprehensively puts it.

Ancient Mexican Port Is Taking On New Life

Acapulco on Schedule of Largest Liners.

Washington.—Gateway for countless galleons from the Orient 300 years ago, but almost ignored in modern times, Mexico's Rip van Winkle port, Acapulco, now is waking to renewed activity. The largest liners plying between New York and California plan to call there this year to drop tourists for Mexico City.

"Conveniently located below the elbow bend of Mexico's Pacific coast in the State of Guerrero, sleepy Acapulco has one of the finest natural harbors in the world," says the National Geographic society. "Yet it has drowsed away a couple of centuries as a quiet little tropical town simmering in the sun, in the bowl of great mountains that drop almost sheer into Acapulco bay.

"The town is a crescent of pastel-colored, adobe cubicles, topped by tiny patches of red tile roofs, and occasional green coconut palms. A few buildings, taller or broader, stand out from the mass of one-story dwellings—church, town hall and jail, covered market building, and a sprinkling of consulates and hotels. Little cotton mills, and soap and oil factories, operated intermittently, show that Acapulco once had industrial ambitions. The narrow winding streets are rarely crowded. Heat makes the air sticky, "like hot fly-paper," but visitors endure the climate to enjoy the town's tropical beauty.

Choked Its Progress.

"Behind it rise the steep, cactus-covered Sierra Madres, which have throttled Acapulco's progress like fingers. There is no railroad to the interior, and less perfect harbors, such as Mazatlan and Manzanillo, have boomed because each has this advantage. So Acapulco has dreamed, "When the railroad reaches here . . . and meanwhile lapsed into a long siesta.

"Cortes used its magnificent harbor in 1513, sending two brigantines on a voyage of exploration into the Gulf of California. But they reported no harbor equal to Acapulco's oval bay, nearly two miles wide. A hilly half-mile-wide peninsula between bay and ocean forms a natural breakwater, offering about four square miles of placid, almost land-locked shelter within earshot of Pacific breakers pounding against the rocky headlands outside.

"By 1550, trade at the port supported a little village, which the Spanish fortified with the grim gray fort of San Diego, still glowering above one tip of the town.

"The Aztec name for the settlement—Acapulco, "place where the reeds abound"—was borne on trade winds around the world. Galleons from the Far East brought fragrant cargoes of gums and spice, of dark cotton prints and rice from India, rich brocaded silks from Japan, exquisite porcelains from China. Occasional slavers discharged cargoes of negroes to work

Joan of Arc Turned Twain to Literature

Oldest Church in New World Is Near Collapse

San Juan, Porto Rico.—Porta Coeli (Gate of Heaven) church, America's oldest existing Christian edifice, at San German, in the western part of this island, is threatened with ruin. Recent heavy rains caused the collapse of a large section of the southern wall in the courtyard surrounding the aged temple.

A general inspection following the incident disclosed that the entire building is badly damaged, and church and civic authorities are taking immediate steps toward conservation of the historical relic by a thorough reconstruction.

The situation will be presented at the next session of the insular legislature next February, and it is also planned to interest the Knights of Columbus and other national Catholic bodies in helping to preserve this shrine.

Porta Coeli, or Santo Domingo church, was constructed in 1535 by the Dominican Fathers. It was the second place of worship erected in the new continent, the first having been St. John the Baptist church at Caparra, the first town built in Porto Rico, in 1511 and no longer standing.

nearby sugar plantations, and legend claims that one brought a kidnaped princess, whose popularity is commemorated in the national Mexican girls' fiesta dress, the China Poblana costume of green-bordered red skirt, loose white embroidered blouse, and gay shawl.

"Export of silver bullion and specie from Acapulco originated the strange custom, still existing, of calling pesos, often made in China and stamped 'Republica de Mexico,' 'Mexican dollars,'

Sacked by Pirates.

"From Acapulco, goods from the Orient journeyed inland over the tortuous, rocky 'Camino Real,' a brigand-infested mountain trail to Mexico, D. F., and thence to Vera Cruz for shipment to Spain. Transport was by strings of burros, or by slow ox carts with thick solid wooden discs for wheels. Buccaneers heard of Acapulco's wealth, and inevitably the town was sacked by pirates and its ships captured when leaving the harbor.

"There are only two seasons in Acapulco, both hot—steaming rainy summer and long parched winter. To 'air-condition' the town, an artificial cut was made through hills of the peninsula shielding it from the sea, and this 'Abra de San Nicolas' admits cooling westerly sea breezes. Many homes are built facing west.

"A few years ago a modern highway was completed from Acapulco to Mexico, D. F., nearly 300 miles away and a mile and a half above sea level. Vacationists can sail to Acapulco, motor via picturesque Tasco and Cuernavaca to Mexico, D. F., and return to the United States by rail. Automobiles and buses now spin along the new route, which crosses and recrosses the old 'Camino Real,' formerly so difficult as to be a 'good road for birds.'"

Pet Alligator Returns After a Long Absence

Framingham, Mass.—A baby alligator was sent to Phillip O'Brien from St. Petersburg, Fla., by his grandfather.

It was named Alley Oop. For six months, Phillip and his young friends fed the alligator hamburger with a pair of tweezers. Then Alley Oop disappeared.

Four months later Phillip's mother heard strange sounds at her front door. It was Alley Oop, who, it might be added, had grown several inches longer.

Alley's whereabouts for those four months is still a mystery.

Our First Leader

Early Washington Birthdays

GEORGE WASHINGTON never occupied the White House. His executive mansions were temporary, and shifted from New York to Philadelphia while the White House was still a dream, observes a writer in the New York Times. Only his name, plus that dream, which was his, went to the city on the Potomac.

But in the stress of the formative years he was remembered with widespread festivities at his first birthday after his inauguration. Indeed, the anniversary had been hailed even earlier, since the first President was a national hero long before he grasped the reins of government.

Ragged soldiers had piped him a pathetic birthday tune at Valley Forge on the bitter February day that closed his forty-sixth year. Fellow Virginians had trod a birthday measure at Richmond in 1781. Maryland and New York had toasted him when he was forty-nine and already in sight of success for his arms and for his country. Frenchmen who had served by his side seized the opportunity of rejoicing convivially over the anniversary of his birth in 1784, when the hostilities and the British evacuation were both in the past. Young men who had been privileged to visit him in his famous campaign tent organized birthday honors fit for a hero; and in that first February of the new era, the celebrations first began to resemble real occasions.

In Alexandria, Va., the town nearest to the General's stately mansion, the birthnight ball was inaugurated an annual affair. In Philadelphia patriots celebrated "with that hilarity and manly decorum ever attendant on the sons of freedom." In New York there met "a select club of Whigs," and drank to Washington, and hailed him with song and sonnet and declamation.

The date thus far widely honored was February 11, Washington was born on February 11, 1732, according to the British calendar usages then officially in vogue. Nineteen years later Britain adopted the Georgian in place of the Julian calendar. But the ancient dates often stuck, and it is not until 1790 that we find Washington's birthday—his first as President—being celebrated on the twenty-second of February instead of the eleventh by the Tammany society of New York.

Tammany in 1790 was patriotic, anti-aristocratic, charitable and ambitious. As yet it did not differentiate between President Washington, its adopted "Great Grand Sachem," and the second of those characteristics. In this, the initial year of government under the new Constitution, New York strove to honor the Chief Executive and also to persuade the congress that had come to reside in its midst that New York city was the logical choice for a permanent capital.

Washington himself was busy in

New York on that February 22. He was moving from the Franklin house, at the corner of Cherry and Pearl streets, to the McComb mansion on Broadway, near the newly rebuilt Trinity church. His diary for the day reveals him as an active superintendent of the disposal of his furniture. On the twenty-third he transferred his family to the new abode, while understanding citizens kindly stayed away from that day's regular levee.

Meanwhile in all 13 states, birthday balls had been held, not only by the cities with their higher social circles, but also in hamlets that could only muster a barn for a ballroom and a fiddle and flute for an orchestra. Soldiers had paraded. Guns had boomed, and church bells rung. Banners and armlets and headbands had blazoned forth the name and often the lineaments of Washington.

In 1791, the Society of the Cincinnati held its first Washington's birthday celebration in New York, having followed Tammany's example by resolving to mark the date each year. The President and the congress (and also the capital of the United States), had meanwhile removed temporarily to Philadelphia. But even New York's disappointment did not prevent Tammany from vying with the exclusive organization of Revolutionary officers to do honor to the day.

Alas, the good feeling did not endure. By 1790, after John Jay had come back from England with his hated treaty, Tammany was fiercely for revolutionary France; Jefferson was its god; George Washington was actually being dubbed, in public, a pro-English aristocrat; and those who celebrated his birthday were coldly accused of being (among other things) bootlickers, idolators, Royalists and sycophants. The country-wide birthday honors of that year, though even more lavish and vociferous than usual, presented for the first time the ogre of party, grinning at the feast.

By 1797, however, the Jay treaty was being regarded much more tolerantly, and certain French proceedings were being looked at a little askance. Those who refused to salute Washington on February 22, to honor a glorious record for its own sake, and to tread a measure at the evening's gala assemblies, now formed a rather conspicuous minority.

George Washington became a private citizen in that year, and was with his Alexandria neighbors at their birthnight ball of February 22, 1798—an onlooker, though in his younger days he had excelled in the minut. There was to be only one more birthday for a living Washington to adorn. He spent that one at home at Mount Vernon, presiding over a particularly joyous occasion. His adopted daughter, his pet, Nelly Custis, was being married to his favorite nephew, Maj. Lawrence Lewis.

The radiance went out of Mount Vernon in December of 1799 and the birthday festivities the country over were turned into mourning processions when 1800 brought the anniversary around once more. This February 22 was a universal requiem. The armlets and headbands with Washington's picture were black where once they had been gayly hued.

Throughout the country business was suspended for 24 hours. Theaters, taverns, public halls, schoolrooms and college auditoriums, village greens and parks as well as churches were given over to exercises, meetings and processions expressive of the deepest grief.

Irish Sweepstakes Origin; Great Odds Against Winning

An act to permit a sweepstakes on British horse racing events was passed by the Irish Free State parliament in 1930, eight years after the Free State was established. The drawings are held three times a year in connection with the Grand National steeplechase in March, the derby in June and the Cambridge-shire stakes in October. From $12,000,000 to $18,000,000 is received for each drawing and of this amount about 62 per cent is returned in the form of prizes. The remainder goes to the Irish hospitals, the Irish government, and the organizers of the lottery.

While most of the publicity is directed at the enormous prizes received by American purchasers of tickets, it should be pointed out also that the odds have been figured out at about 400,000 to 1 against winning first prize and 250,000 to 1 against receiving any prize at all—Detroit News.

Norris Urges Congress to Curb Supreme Court—Oratory on Lincoln Day—Death of Charles Curtis—Long Newspaper Tax Invalid.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

SPEAKING in advocacy of the administration's substitute farm bill, Senator Norris, the Independent Republican from Nebraska, scathingly attacked the Supreme court's AAA decision and urged congress to use its right to curb the court's power. He argued that the 6 to 3 decision itself was unconstitutional by the court's own reasoning and shouted "It cannot stand."

"The regulation of agricultural production, they say, is unconstitutional because not mentioned in the Constitution," Norris asserted. "Nowhere in that great document is there a syllable, a word, or a sentence giving to any court the right to declare an act of congress unconstitutional. Hence, when the court indulges in that pastime it is itself violating the Constitution according to its own words."

Norris quoted from the majority opinion of the Supreme court holding that the regulation and control of agricultural production was a local affair reserved to the states and beyond the power of congress. Under that decision, he declared, not only the pending bill but "a large portion of the laws which congress has passed during the last hundred years are absolutely unconstitutional."

Of the later decision ordering return of processing taxes to the processors, the senator said Secretary Wallace perhaps was too severe in calling it the greatest legalized steal in history, and added: "But it is a gift, the greatest gift since God made salvation free."

Norris urged that congress pass a law requiring unanimous decisions by the Supreme court to overrule the acts of the legislative branch of the government.

LINCOLN day was the occasion for a flood of oratory, largely by Republican opponents of the New Deal. Herbert Hoover spoke at Portland, Ore., on the "State of the Union," which he said was a state of confusion in thought, government, economic life and the ideals of liberty. "The New Deal," said the former President, "has been a veritable fountain of fear. The day after the New Deal was given life at the election of 1932 began the great fear which created the bank panic of March 4. The stock boom today is not from confidence in the future; it is partly from fear of inflation."

In Greensboro, N. C., Senator Dickinson of Iowa warmly defended the Supreme court as "the only remaining guardian of the liberty of the people," and inveighed against what he said was the New Deal's "planned economy" and its "attempted bribery of the states" through the invalidated AAA and its proposed substitute, the soil conservation measure.

Senator Vandenberg of Michigan was a speaker in New York city, and like his fellow Republicans he fiercely assailed the administration, terming it the "third party now in power."

Among the few leading Democrats heard was Secretary Wallace, who, in Indianapolis, defended the administration. Referring to the Constitution, he declared that "most of us" thought the agriculture adjustment act was valid, and "some of us, including three justices of the Supreme court, think so still."

CHARLES CURTIS, former Vice President of the United States and before that representative and senator from Kansas, died suddenly of heart disease at the Washington home of his brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. Gann. He was seventy-six years old, and was the first man of Indian blood ever to preside over the senate. He was one-quarter Kaw Indian, his grandmother having been Princess Julie of that tribe who married a French voyageur. In his boyhood Curtis was a jockey, and later a reporter. Having studied law, he became a prosecutor at the age of twenty-four in Shawnee county, Kansas, and was elected to congress in 1892. He was made senator in 1907, was defeated in 1912, and two years later was again elected senator. He was elected Vice President on the ticket headed by Herbert Hoover, and was renominated for that position in 1932.

Mr. Curtis was greatly liked by his associates in Washington and his death caused genuine grief. President Roosevelt said:

"I am deeply distressed to learn of the sudden passing of my old friend, Charles Curtis. Whether they knew him as a senator, as the Vice President of the United States, or as the man he was in his own right, his legion of friends will remember him, always affectionately, and will mourn his passing."

Vice President Garner said: "I was always fond of him. I was associated with him in the house and senate. He was a fine man and a good friend."

Funeral services for Mr. Curtis and the interment were in Topeka, Kan.

ONCE again the Supreme court of the United States comes to the rescue of a free press. Unanimously the nine justices ruled that the Louisiana law imposing a punitive tax on the advertising of the principal newspapers of that state is unconstitutional. The law was passed by a legislature controlled by the late Senator Huey Long. The court said of it:

"It is bad because, in the light of its history and of its present setting, it is seen to be a deliberate and calculated device in the guise of a tax to limit the circulation of information to which the public is entitled in virtue of the constitutional guarantee. A free press stands as one of the great interpreters between the government and the people. To allow it to be fettered is to fetter ourselves."

"In view of the persistent search for new subjects of taxation, it is not without significance that, with the single exception of the Louisiana statute, so far as we can discover, no state during the 150 years of our national existence has undertaken to impose a tax like that now in question."

"The form in which the tax is imposed is in itself suspicious. It is not measured or limited by the volume of advertisement. It is measured alone by the extent of the circulation of the publication in which the advertisements are carried, with the plain purpose of penalizing the publishers and curtailing the circulation of a selected group of newspapers."

LETTERS have been sent by President Roosevelt to the heads of the Latin-American governments inviting them to participate in a Pan-American conference, probably in Washington, the purpose of which will be to organize the peace machinery of the western hemisphere. Our State department says the meeting will endeavor to provide means for adjusting international disputes by peaceful means. The conference may bring up the Monroe Doctrine for a new definition through multilateral endorsement.

PRESIDENT WILLIAM L. RANSOM of the American Bar Association, with headquarters in Chicago, announced that Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war, has accepted the chairmanship of the association's special committee on co-operation between the press, radio and bar against publicity interfering with fair trial of judicial and quasi-judicial proceedings.

N. D. Baker The creation of this special committee to define standards to be recommended to lawyers, newspapers and radio broadcasters in the matter of publicity as to court trials, said the announcement, is an outcome of the incidents arising in the course of the Bruno Hauptmann trial and various proceedings before governmental boards and bodies, "and it is hoped that such standards can be made effective through rules of court or through legislation."

ACCORDING to the London Daily Herald, a secret decree providing for expulsion of all Jews from Germany as rapidly as possible has been prepared by Nazi leaders and laid before Chancellor Hitler for his signature. The paper said the decree provided for the confiscation of all property of expelled Jews.

This story may not be true, but there is no doubt that Hitler and his associates are determined to extirpate all the organizations and groups which they consider in opposition to the Nazi regime, and Hitler himself has declared the Jews are to blame for all the troubles of the reich in recent years. Scores of Catholic youth leaders have been arrested, charged with co-operation with illegal Communist groups, and it is predicted their organizations will be dissolved. The campaign is carried on with great secrecy. It was announced in Berlin that district governors henceforth would take orders from the Gestapo, the secret state police. This was interpreted as an indication of an immediate carrying out of promises by Nazi leaders for more ruthless, more determined action against enemies within the reich.

PRESIDENT LAZARO CARDENAS of Mexico went to Monterey to investigate a stoppage of business and industry in protest against labor troubles attributed to Communists. He issued this ultimatum: "Employers who are fatigued by Mexico's social and economic struggle can turn over their industries to the workers or the government—that would be patriotic. But stoppage of activities cannot be countenanced."

AMERICA'S delegates to the naval conference in London consented to an agreement that would bind this country for five years or more to refrain from building any more cruisers in excess of 8,000 tons in size. When the news reached Washington there was immediate and loud protest in congress against what was termed a "colossal blunder."

High ranking navy officials refused to comment officially upon the London agreement, but said privately that any program which does not include the co-operation of Japan and Germany would be a failure.

Any agreement will not affect the navy's present building program, these officials pointed out, and they refused to be alarmed about the prospect of future limitations.

TRIAL of the assassins of King Alexander of Yugoslavia at Marseilles came to an end at Aix-en-Provence, France, with verdicts of guilty for the six defendants. For three of the band of Croats, members of the secret Ustachi society, who were apprehended, mercy was recommended and they were given sentences of life imprisonment in French Guiana. The others, who never were caught, were sentenced to death. One of the latter is Dr. Ante Pavelich, reputed head of the Ustachi.

ELMER B. O'HARA, Democratic state chairman of Michigan and former clerk of Wayne county, which includes Detroit; State Senator A. J. Wilkowski and 16 others of lesser prominence were convicted in Detroit of having attempted to steal the 1934 election. Eight defendants in the recount case, which had been on trial for nearly 12 weeks, were acquitted. Two other defendants previously had pleaded guilty, thus bringing to 20 the number facing sentence for their part in the vote recount conspiracy.

Elmer B. O'Hara

For O'Hara, the verdict came as the culmination of a series of calamities in a brief political career. Last November a jury in Macomb county, adjacent to Wayne, found him guilty of bribery in a drainage transaction in connection with real estate deals he had made before 1932 when he entered politics and was elected Wayne county clerk. He awaits sentence under that conviction. After conviction he was removed from office.

In the recount case O'Hara was found guilty on three counts, permitting others to alter ballots, conspiring to permit others to alter ballots, and conspiring to permit others to conduct the recount in an unlawful manner and change the result of the November, 1934, election by putting Democrats in office instead of the Republicans elected.

LEADERS of congress hope for an early adjournment, by May 1 at the latest, and therefore they pushed the new farm bill forward, trying to get it through both houses without much delay. In their desire to get away from the Capital, they already had decided to let the proposed permanent neutrality legislation go by the board.

The farm bill as rewritten by the senate agriculture committee is based on the soil erosion prevention scheme. Some Democrats joined with many Republicans in opposing the measure, one of them being Senator Walsh of Massachusetts. In a statement issued to the press he declared it was a "dangerous" bill conferring "autocratic and blanket authority" on the secretary of agriculture. He said the measure was "neither valid in law nor valid in economics."

Chairman Doughton of the house ways and means committee said he expected definite word from the White House or treasury soon on the amount and kind of taxes that might be imposed to finance the new farm program.

Speaker Byrns said he could see no reason why the tax measure should not emerge from the committee by the end of February.

ACCTION against John J. Raskob, former chairman of the Democratic national committee when Al Smith was the Presidential nominee, and who is now president of the American Liberty league, has been begun by the government for an alleged deficiency of $1,026,340 on his 1929 income taxes. The claim was filed in an amendment to the petition recently filed against Pierre S. du Pont two days before Al Smith had bitterly assailed the New Deal. In the petition, which Raskob described as "New Deal persecution," Mr. du Pont was alleged to have understated his 1929 income by $2,897,832 and an additional tax of $617,316 was asked. In the amended petition accusing Mr. Raskob, it was alleged that he and the industrialist engaged in "fictitious" sales of securities, one to the other, to a total of about $30,000,000 for the purpose of showing losses.

MR.S. HUEY P. LONG, widow of the slain senator from Louisiana, took her seat in the senate to complete Huey's unfinished term, becoming the second woman member of the upper house. After eleven months she will be succeeded by Allen Allender, speaker of the Louisiana house of representatives, who was nominated for the regular term.

Provincetown Offers a Home to Lindbergh

PROVINCETOWN, on Cape Cod, which has not had a serious crime since it was founded in 1727, has offered itself as a United States haven for Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and his family. The great mansion shown here, overlooking the Atlantic ocean, is offered to him rent free. The town authorities have also expressed a willingness to build a private hangar for him on the town's airport. By air Provincetown is two hours from New York and 30 minutes from Boston.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

MR. AND MRS. QUACK ARE STARTLED

IT WAS the evening of the day after the closing of the hunting season of Lightfoot the Deer. Jolly, round, red Mr. Sun had gone to bed behind the Purple Hills and the Black Shadows had crept out across the Big River. Mr. and Mrs. Quack were getting their evening meal among the brown stalks of the wild rice along the edge of the Big River. They took turns in searching for the rice grains in the mud. While Mrs. Quack tipped up and seemed to stand on her head as she searched in the mud for rice, Mr. Quack kept watch for possible danger. Then Mrs. Quack took her turn at keeping watch while Mr. Quack stood on his head and hunted for rice.

It was wonderfully quiet and peaceful. There was not even a ripple on the Big River. It was so quiet that they could hear the barking of a dog at a farmhouse a mile away. They were far enough out from the bank to have nothing to fear from Reddy Fox or Old Man Coyote. So they had nothing to fear from anyone save Hooty the Owl. It was for Hooty that they took turns in watching. It was just the hour when Hooty likes best to hunt.

By and by they heard Hooty's hunting call. It was far away in the Green Forest. Then Mr. and Mrs. Quack felt easier and they talked in low, contented voices. They felt that for

THREE DAYS WITHOUT HEAT

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THREE days without heat, while they're fixing the furnace. And so in the kitchen each day we intern us, Or sit by the fireplace and pile on the splinters, Not much like the cordwood of old-fashioned winters. Three days without heat, and the family shivers, Or late in the morning still clings to kivers, And all because something unknown, unsuspected, Went wrong—that a gleeful young salesman detected.

And yet the unfortunate, woe at its summit, Are those who have trouble and learn nothing from it. The greatest misfortune, whatever our sorrow, Is, having it, not to be wiser tomorrow. When furnaces fail, or when anything falters, Let's hope that our viewpoint accordingly alters. Experience teaches us, children or father, Some truth that repays us for all of the bother.

Three days without heat, but again when we get it In living room, dining room, bedroom, I bet it Will make us appreciate that simple blessing We took without thinking or doubting or guessing. I haven't a doubt there is many a pleasure Our hearts never feel and our minds never measure We have all along without thinking about it. (We would, if we had to go three days without it.)

Although five feet eight inches tall and broad of shoulder, Edwin M. Stanton, secretary of war under Lincoln, was called "Little Stanton" when he first started practicing law in Cadiz, Ohio. The mighty Stanton, who was also near-sighted, weighed only 125 pounds then, at the age of twenty-two.

MOTHER'S COOK BOOK

INVITING DISHES

WHEN cooking carrots add a sliver of onion to the vegetable while cooking, and the addition of a stalk of celery will make the dish, when served with a little butter, quite different.

Mutton and Peas.

Take a piece of lamb or mutton for stewing, simmer in boiling water with an onion, three cloves, two peppercorns and an eighth of a bay leaf for favor. When tender, remove the meat to a hot platter and make a gravy of the liquor from the kettle. Strain and add to it a cupful or two of fresh cooked green peas. More seasoning of salt and pepper may be needed and a half teaspoonful of sugar will make the dish much more tasty. Seasonings are always much more effective if added while the food is cooking.

Date Crackers.

Put a pound of well-washed dates with a cupful of sugar and a half cupful of water in a saucepan and cook until soft and smooth. Cool. Cream together one cupful each of shortening and brown sugar, two and one-half cupfuls of rolled oats that have been parched to a light brown, add two cupfuls of flour, a teaspoonful of soda in half a cupful of hot water. Mix well, roll out very thin and cut into rounds. Place a spoonful of the fruit on the cooky and cover with another.

Cheese Salad.

Dissolve a tablespoonful of gelatin in four tablespoonfuls of hot water, add one-half pound of grated cheese and a pint of whipped cream, season with salt and paprika with a bit of cayenne. Pour into a wet mold and chill. Turn out and cut into slices and serve on lettuce with a snappy mayonnaise dressing.

Piquant Relish.

Take one package of lemon-flavored gelatin, dissolve in one and one-half cupfuls of boiling water and three tablespoonfuls of vinegar. Add one finely cut pimiento, one-half a green pepper cut fine, one-half cupful of grated horseradish. If prepared horseradish is used omit the vinegar. Pour into green pepper shells and chill.

Leg Broken, Dog Walks Into Hospital

APARENTLY struck by a careless motorist, this dog showed unusual sense by walking unattended right into Receiving hospital in Detroit. Rather than disillusion by shipping him to the Humane society, attending physicians accepted "Measles," as he was christened, as a charity patient, and set his broken leg in a cast. The story has an even happier ending, because an orderly immediately adopted the dog as a pet and took him home to convalesce. The photograph shows Dr. Myron Rosenbaum placing the dog's leg in a cast while Nurse Vic Gauthier holds him. Looking on is Orderly Eric Newman, who adopted the pup.

CHINA CHANGES

Chinese Boys Learn Embroidering.

Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

AMERICA'S first foreign trade as a new-born Republic was with China. From Amoy, aboard British vessels had come the tea which was dumped overboard at the famous Boston tea party. Within six months after England had accepted the independence of the Thirteen Colonies, our own first merchant vessel, the newly christened Empress of China, was already on the high seas, bound for Canton—and tea. Both Canton and Macao then figured prominently in early American trade.

One can picture the feverish activity of New York harbor during those early days of 1784 when the little 360-ton ship was reaching the final stages of her overhauling and was being loaded with 30 tons of ginseng (China's "dose of immortality"), 2,600 fur skins, 1,270 camlets, and small quantities of cotton, lead, and pepper.

Then came sailing day, Washington's birthday. The departing Empress of China voiced a salute of 13 guns; the battery responded with 12.

In his pocket Captain Green carried a sea letter, penned by the young congress and addressed to the "Most Serene, Most Puissant, High, Illustrious, Noble, Honorable, Wise and Prudent, Lords, Emperors, Kings, Republics, Princes, Dukes, Earls, Barons, Lords, Burgomasters, Councillors, as also Judges, Officers, Justicians, and Regents of all good cities and places, whether ecclesiastical or secular, who shall see these patents or hear them read."

Thirteen months later, after four months at Whampoa, anchorage for Canton, the sturdy ship was back in New York, her holds filled with 403,000 pounds of tea, 962 pieces of chinaware, 490 pieces of silk, 42 nankeens, and 2,790 pounds of cassia.

Her successful voyage signaled the expansion of our merchant marine. Tiny ships, manned by youthful American sailors, were soon prowling the eastern seas, beating the monsoons up the China coast, and cluttering the Canton harbor. The China trade was on.

Swift Growth of Trade.

Homes in Salem and Boston, and, to a lesser degree, in New York and Philadelphia, became veritable museums of Chinese goods and curios. In 1790 the China trade represented approximately one-seventh of our foreign imports. Within another fifty years our vessels were bringing home about 15,000,000 pounds of tea annually. This trade also gave birth to the swift clipper ships.

American enterprise, however, came to China much later than that of European nations; for, be it remembered, the disappointing new continent's wildernesses, inhabited by savage redskins, appeared on the horizon when Old world adventurers sought China's riches by sailing westward.

But what of the China coast today, the lodestar which attracted those early explorers?

Macao today is a transplanted city, a bit of medieval Europe tucked in a Chinese setting. The pink, blue, and other pastel-colored buildings that line the water front and dot the hills up to the walls of historic Monte fortress, the weathered churches, and government offices are Portuguese. True, the majority of shops are hung with chromatic signs bearing Chinese ideographs, for the city's population is 97 per cent Chinese, but the banner that floats over the tiny area of little more than 11 square miles is the red and green emblem of Portugal.

Here it was that early in the Sixteenth century Portuguese traders, extending the oriental sea route which Vasco da Gama had carved around Cape of Good Hope to India, first opened commercial relations with opulent Cathay. Here they founded the pioneer European settlement in the Far East and held the monopoly on Chinese trade until the Eighteenth century.

In 1557 the Portuguese received conditional cession of this territory because of their assistance to the Chinese authorities in an attempt to subdue the pirates that infested the coast and the river approach to Canton. Pirates still lurk just around the island corners to plunder hapless vessels, and the Portuguese still control the rocky peninsula and two nearby islands, where they gained their first foothold.

Macao Still Important.

Here came the Dutch to be repelled by Portuguese battleships and the Monte guns; later, the long arm of the East India company stretched across the sea to reach into Macao's rich trade pocket. To all early sea trade with Canton, Macao served as gateway. Even the Empress of China had to stop here to get the official Chinese permit before she could proceed to Whampoa anchorage.

How truly the little possession served as the China outpost is revealed by reading the epitaphs carved on some of the tombstones in the little Protestant cemetery. Names of sailors and merchants from Boston, Salem, and British ports appear frequently. Here, too, rest Robert Morrison, the noted British missionary; Edmund Roberts, special diplomatic agent of the U. S. A. to several Asiatic courts; Thomas Waldron, first consul of the United States for Hong Kong, and others who featured in the early intercourse with China.

Macao has lost much of its commercial luster since Hong Kong sapped its vitality; yet today its volume of commerce is greater than in early years, although insignificant in proportion to the total trade now carried on in this region. With recent harbor constructions at the cost of some $2,500,000 and a reclamation project of 130 acres, it again makes a bid for greater attention.

Fish, firecrackers, opium, and gambling are now Macao's chief stock in trade. The important, colorful fishing industry employs some 2,000 junks and 50,000 men and women.

If recent years have brought little change to Macao, the same cannot be said of Canton. The ancient southern metropolis has been undergoing long-needed beauty treatments, and from it new Canton is emerging. Little more than a decade ago Canton presented much the same appearance as when the clipper ships were lading their cargoes from its musty godowns. It was Chinese—deliberately, stubbornly Chinese.

Today old suspicions have been minimized. The Bund, formerly a muddy track lined with rat-trap buildings, is now a wide, well-paved thoroughfare fronted with modern eight and nine-story hotels, department stores, commercial houses, and an up-to-date custom house. Narrow streets and alleys, accessible only to the traffic of wheelbarrows and sedan chairs, have given way to wide streets to such an extent that four conductors find difficulty in playing up the "tortuous channels" of old Canton.

Canton as It Is Today.

The visitor who a few years ago wrote that "you have to choose your place to knock the ashes off your cigar, or they will alight in a dish of soy or dried duck, on the one hand, or a pile of wonderfully wrought silk embroidery on the other," could now whisk through 60 miles of wide, paved streets in one of the thousand or more motor cars that honk their way through the city. Thousands of buildings were razed and much of the old wall demolished to provide for these modern arteries of bustling Canton. The great fire of 1927 also assisted in clearing ground for these sweeping changes.

"Everything new originates in Canton," say the Chinese. Politically there is much truth in this statement. Here is where Sun Yat Sen found followers for his three principles of Kuomintang. By popular subscription, a modern monument and memorial auditorium, in which new political ideas are born and talked into vigorous activity, has been built as one of Canton's forms of recognition of the late leader.

Two new bridges are being constructed across the Chu Kiang (Pearl river), linking Canton city with Honan island. Some of the old temples have been converted into school rooms and the Cantonese boys and girls enjoy tennis, handball, and basketball on courts laid out in the ancient enclosures. All of the old, however, has not disappeared. In narrow lanes one finds secluded restaurants selling snake meat, served in broth. Elsewhere men and boys work elaborate embroidery patterns on silk in half-lighted rooms.

Boat Life on the River.

Another feature of Canton that has changed little through the years is the teeming boat life of the Pearl river and interlinking system of canals. Big boats, little boats, gay boats, and tawdry boats—Canton has them all. Here is a city in itself, with a population estimated between 100,000 and 200,000 people. Formerly there were many more, but a destructive storm a few years ago capsized and demolished many of the craft.

Tiny sampans serve as "taxis" through this aquatic city. Housewives, cooking on small charcoal braziers on the stern decks of their floating homes, need only lean over the gunwales to do their daily shopping. Vendors of vegetables, foodstuffs, cooking utensils, and other household necessities paddle alongside to supply every need.

On many of the boats one sees chickens and babies tied by leashes sufficiently long to give them the freedom of the deck, but preventing them from falling overboard. Here and there a small flower box bravely daunts its foliage and color.

WRIGLEY'S SPEARMINT THE PERFECT GUM THE STANDARD OF QUALITY

Happiest Age to Marry Is 33 for Man, 27 for Bride

Contrary to a common idea, early marriages are allegedly not the happiest, at least for the American populations. A new chart showing the ages at which men and women should marry if they are to have the greatest chance of happiness has been prepared by Dr. Hornell Hart, professor of social ethics at the Hartford Theological seminary. According to this chart the ages at which the chance of marital happiness is mathematically greatest are thirty-three for the man and twenty-seven for the bride.

However, the chart shows a range of greatest chance of married happiness corresponding to groom's ages between twenty-nine and thirty-seven and the bride's ages between twenty-three and thirty-one.—Pathfinder Magazine.
