Orville Leslie To Build Super Service Station

BEAUTIFUL SITE ON BAY IS SELECTED

H. G. Page Company of Flint Will Construct New Building

Ground will be broken immediately for Orville Leslie's new super service station and Ford sales room. H. G. Page & Company of Flint will be the designers and contractors. The plant will be located on the site of the residence of the late Peter E. Shien. This is one of the most beautiful locations in the city and it is Mr. Page's opinion that Mr. Leslie will have one of the most handsome automobile sales and service plants in northern Michigan when the building is complete and the grounds are landscaped.

The principal feature of the facade of the building will be a 30-foot tower. The lower portion, made up of 22 plate glass windows and jutting out from the main line of the building, will form a semi-circular front to the sales room. The ceiling of the sales room will extend up to the roof dome. This will give Mr. Leslie a very attractive room in which to display cars. The remainder of the building is one story in height. The completed station will be 60 feet wide by 126 feet long and provide 1700 feet of floor space. It will be constructed of steel and cast stone faced with white and black enameled steel tile. This material is one of the latest developments in the building field. There will be a full basement.

The one-story section on one side of the tower will be used for grease and oil service. Offices will occupy the section on the opposite side. A private office will be located on the mezzanine floor which will extend over a part of the auto salesroom. The mechanical department will occupy the rear portion of the building. The mechanical department in the new plant will have the latest in equipment. Mr. Leslie states that a 24-hour service will be given after the building is opened. There will be ample room for car storage, used car sales and parking. Large capacity gasoline and oil storage will be located on a railroad siding which will be built along the back portion of the site.

The Shien residence, an attractive landmark for many years, has been moved across Maple street where it will be remodeled and used by Mr. and Mrs. Leslie as their home. Dudley Nelem has the contract for remodeling the residence. It will be headed from the central heating plant located in the basement of the service station.

H. G. Page & Company have designed and constructed some of the finest garages and service stations in Michigan. Included among those recently constructed by this firm were super service stations for Ireland Auto company at Standish and H. W. Schultzy at West Branch.

St. Joseph High School Basketball Team Feted

Last Tuesday night Mr. and Mrs. Edward Martin feted the St. Joseph basketball team at the Isoco Hotel, congratulating them upon their successful season. Twenty places were set for the team and their friends. Rev. Kirchhoff, Captain George Bergevin, and coaches Ed. Klenow and D. Durant spoke of the games played during the past season. The St. Joe team won 11 out of 16 games played, and lost their first game at the tournament at Sterling to St. Michael's of Pinconning whom they had beaten twice previously.

The complete first team will graduate this year and next year's squad will be composed entirely of freshmen and sophomores.

COUNTY AGENT URGES PROPER CARE OF EWES

"Due to the extreme severity of the weather conditions during the past two months the farmers of Isoco county should give their ewe flocks as well as their brood sows immediate attention in order that a satisfactory spring lamb and pig crop may be insured," cautions County Agricultural Agent Wilton Finley.

"The extreme cold and the deep snow have prevented farmers from feeding their ewes in the field and from allowing them to run on old meadow fields or in corn fields to secure a large part of their winter ration. Because of this fact," he said, "the ewes have not taken as much exercise as they should have and are more liable to have trouble at lambing time as well as to drop lambs that are smaller and much weaker than the average."

"Because of these hazards every farmer can well afford to give his ewe flock considerable attention from now on until the lambs are large enough to look after themselves."

"The ewes should be fed a roughage ration consisting of at least one-half alfalfa hay and more alfalfa is highly desirable if it can be provided. The roughage should be fed at some distance from the barn so that the ewes will automatically receive lots of exercise in going to and from the feed racks. If it is impossible to feed in the field the ewes may be driven in order to secure their exercise. They should be driven down the lane or road a half mile or so and then allowed to return to the barn at their own speed."

"Along with a good roughage ration every farmer may well afford to feed a little grain for three to four weeks previous to lambing and until the flock is turned on pasture. One of the most desirable grain combinations consists of two-thirds oats and one-third bran, feeding at the rate of one pound per ewe per day. Many other grain combinations may be used with much satisfaction."

"The flock should have fresh water before them at all times as well as a mixture of one-half steamed bone meal and one-half loose salt."

"If the ewes are thin and somewhat out of condition they are perhaps wormy and should be drenched at once and then fed an additional allowance of grain."

East Tawas Wins District Class C Basketball Title

PINCONNING IS VICTOR IN CLASS D RACE

Many Close Contests Take Place In Tournament Held At Sterling

"East Tawas—District Class C Champions." That title was bestowed upon the East Tawas high school basketball team Saturday night in Sterling at the conclusion of the cage tournament held there last week end. The Indians won the distinction of top-notchers in their class by nosing out Sterling, 19-18, in the semi-finals Friday night and by whipping Standish, 22-18, in the finals Saturday evening. The splendid spirit and good sportsmanship shown by Coach Steve Young's charges made them popular contenders for the class C trophy and deafening applause gave a stamp of approval on the final outcome of the race.

The Indians did not gain the crown without a struggle. After drawing a bye for the opening round Thursday, they were matched against Sterling on Friday evening. Sterling was in its best form and managed to hold East Tawas' powerful scoring machine well in check during the whole game. Sterling grabbed an 8-2 advantage in the first period and at half time was in possession of a 14-10 lead. A steady advance on the part of the Indians enabled them to knot the count at 16-16 by the end of the third quarter. In the last chapter, after each team had scored two points, a foul was called on a Sterling player just before the gong sounded ending the game. Haglund, taking the free throw, settled the issue between the two teams and kept the contest from going overtime by dropping the ball through the ring to give East Tawas its margin of victory. Fairfield led the Indians in scoring with eight points, while Templin was high-point man for Sterling with 11.

Moving into the finals on Saturday East Tawas came up against the Standish quintet. The Arrows of Standish made the most of their advantage in height and weight, romping off to a 7-4 lead in the initial period, and by half time had stretched this margin to 12-4. When the second half was about to open the East Tawas Indians came out of their tepee a dejected looking group of athletes. Not only had they been kept with their backs to the wall during the first half, they also seemed still a bit dazed from the close call given them by Sterling the previous night. With the Arrows showing a strong offensive and presenting a defense that made East Tawas look very weak, Tawas supporters were pleading and hoping for a reversal in form on the part of their favorites. However, when the third canto ending (Turn to No. 1. Back Page)

RECREATION NEWS

The boys in the handicraft classes sponsored by the W.P.A. recreation program at Long Lake are doing some splendid work. Some have gone in the woods, cut trees and fashioned boards from which they have made sleds, skis, bows, etc.

"Exclusive Story" Drama Of Crusade Against Vice

A new romantic team comes to the Family Theatre, East Tawas, this Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, March 15, 16 and 17, when Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Exclusive Story" will be shown with Franchot Tone and Madge Evans heading the cast.

And judging from their success together, the new team will undoubtedly be seen many times again.

The story itself is a dramatization of the real-life activities of a New York newspaperman, Martin Moore, who started the metropolis with a series of articles exposing the "numbers" racketeers. He is the writer who recently was given a prison sentence for refusing to divulge the source of his astonishing information.

Stuart Erwin portrays the not-so-dumb reporter whose unearthing of evidence leads to the apprehension of the gang. Joseph Calleia is excellent as the rat-hearted public enemy and gang leader.

Others in the large cast are Robert Barrat, J. Farrell MacDonald, Louise Henry and Margaret Irving.

I will not be responsible for any debts contracted by anyone other than myself after March 2, 1936.

New Tax Program Stirs Hot Debate—Black's Seizure of Telegrams—Norris Dam Is Completed—Italo-Ethiopian Peace Draws Nearer.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© Western Newspaper Union.

CONGRESSMAN SAM B. HILL of Washington and his subcommittee of the house ways and means committee took up

Rep. S. B. Hill
The so-called "windfall" tax on processors who successfully challenged the AAA in the courts, it was believed, would yield another $200,000,000. This will be used to reimburse the treasury for losses suffered as a result of the Supreme court's invalidation of AAA. There remains an additional $317,000,000 which it is proposed to raise through excise taxes on a wide range of farm processors.

Chairman Hill said the experts and the members of the subcommittee were agreed that the tax on undivided surplus should not apply to banks and life insurance companies.

There was wide divergence of opinion concerning this tax among leaders in congress. Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois, Democrat, for instance, declared himself against it as an unnecessary additional burden on business, and indicated he would support, instead, a plan to tax the income from federal securities now exempt. Senator Borah, Republican, said that in principle he endorsed the plan of taxing undistributed earnings, while Senator Hastings of Delaware, also Republican, denounced it as "confiscatory." Senator King of Utah, Democrat, and Representative Knutson of Minnesota, Republican, were moved by the program to demand immediate cutting down of federal expenditures, and in this Mr. Borah concurred. Speaker Joseph W. Byrns and Majority Leader W. B. Bankhead professed to see no difficulties in the way of the proposed measure.

One thing that boosted the chances of the President's tax program was a report from Secretary of Commerce Roper that corporation income in 1935 was 300 per cent higher than in 1932.

IN THE course of his probe into the affairs of enemies of the New Deal, Senator Black of Alabama, chairman of the lobby committee, assumed the right to seize and examine their private telegrams, and thus his investigation was carried into the courts. Silas Strawn, Chicago attorney learned the committee was about to subpoena his telegrams and he obtained a temporary injunction blocking such action. He has asked the District of Columbia Supreme court to make this injunction permanent.

The wholesale examination of telegrams was atacked by Representative Wadsworth of New York, and defended by Senator Black.

"It strikes me," Wadsworth said, "that we have reached a strange stage in the development of democracy when private correspondence can be seized without court procedure or search warrant."

Black said: "Repeatedly it has been held that the senate can call for what it pleases. There appears to have been a concerted effort by those who seek to influence legislation behind the scenes, through subterranean channels, to prevent us from getting evidence."

GOVERNOR LANDON'S boom for the Republican Presidential nomination is progressing in a way that must be pleasing to his supporters. Kansas Republicans in a state convention pledged him the state's 18 delegates to the Cleveland convention, declaring him to be "the best-fitted candidate." That Kansas should support its governor is natural and expected, but he also is garnering a good many delegates elsewhere, and endorsement in some states where the delegates are uncommitted.

Sentiment favorable to Landon appeared in New Jersey, and Hervey S. Moore of Trenton, a Republican leader, was contemplating starting an active campaign for him in that state.

ON THE third anniversary of his inauguration President Roosevelt pushed an electric key in the White House which set in motion machinery that closed the sluice gates of the Norris dam in the Tennessee Valley project. This signaled the completion of that part of the vast work on the Clinch river.

"I hope as many people as can will go to see the Norris dam in eastern Tennessee," the President said in a formal statement. "It exemplifies great engineering skill, high construction efficiency, and, above all, it is the key to the carefully worked out control of a great river and its water spread over parts of seven states.

"The Norris dam is a practical symbol of better life and greater opportunity for millions of citizens of our country. The nation has come to realize that national resources must not be wasted and the Norris dam is evidence that our program for conservation of these resources is going forward."

SENATOR BORAH and Senator Van Nuys of Indiana, the latter a Democrat, introduced a bill directed against certain practices of the chain stores. The measure would make it unlawful for any person engaged in commerce to grant any discount, rebate, allowance or advertising service charge to a purchaser over that available to the purchasers' competitors. It also would prohibit sales "at prices lower than those exacted by said person elsewhere in the United States for the purpose of destroying competition or eliminating a competitor."

Co-operative associations would be exempted from provisions of the measure. Violators would be subject to a $5,000 fine and a one-year jail sentence.

The so-called Robinson-Patman anti-monopoly bill, also aimed at chain stores, will be passed by the senate before very long, according to a promise made by Senator Robinson to a mass meeting of 1,500 independent merchants who went to Washington to lobby for the measure. This bill legislates against special prices, rebates, advertising allowances and brokerage fees giving sales advantage to chain stores.

THROUGH its committee of thirteen the League of Nations appealed to Benito Mussolini and Emperor Haile Selassie to consent to immediate negotiations for an end to hostilities and a definite re-establishment of Italo-Ethiopian peace. Though consideration of the proposal by his cabinet council was delayed a few days, Mussolini, according to advices from Rome, was disposed to acquiesce provided territory in Ethiopia already occupied by Italy is considered hers and left out of the negotiations.

Haile Selassie accepted the proposal without reservation. In recent days his armies in the northern sector have been routed in big battles and have lost many thousands of men, and the Italians have penetrated far toward the interior of the country; and in the South the invaders were preparing for a rapid advance.

Back of the league's appeal was the standing threat of extension of sanctions to include an embargo on oil. This suddenly brought about a situation rather disconcerting for the league. Dr. Giuseppe Motta, Swiss foreign minister, gave a warning that if the oil embargo was applied his country might feel it necessary to leave the league in order to preserve its neutrality if the consequent threatened war in Europe resulted. Motta pointed out that if Italy quit the league and hostilities ensued, Switzerland, through her membership in the league, would appear in Italian eyes as a party to a hostile coalition, and would be subject to invasion, by Italy on one side and perhaps by Germany on the other.

BRITAIN'S government evidently believes another war is coming, and intends to be well prepared. It made public a gigantic program for increases in the army, navy and air forces and for swift mobilization of man power and industry. No official cost estimate was given out but authorities said the total over a three-year period would be not less than one and a half billion dollars. The program includes these features:

Army—Four new battalions of infantry are planned. All units are to be modernized, mechanized, and re-equipped. Especial attention will be paid coastal and anti-aircraft defenses.

Navy—Two new battleships next year and an increase in cruiser strength from 50 to 70, with five new ones to be laid down this year. Naval personnel also will be increased by 6,000, a new aircraft carrier will be constructed, and the air arm of the navy will be strengthened.

Air Force—About 250 new war planes will be added to the home defense squadrons, bringing the total to 1,750. Twelve new air squadrons for imperial defense—that is, air forces available for transfer to danger areas—will be added, and more pilots will be recruited.

Following this announcement the annual naval estimates were submitted to parliament. They call for $349,650,000, an increase of $49,400,000 over the previous year.

JAPAN was calmed down after the amazing revolt and attempted coup d'etat of a thousand soldiers led by a group of young "fascist" officers who thought the Okada government was hampering the military progress of the nation. So far as can be judged at this distance, the net results of the uprising were: Admiral Viscount Makoto Saito, former premier and lord keeper of the privy seal; Korekio Takahashi, minister of finance, and Gen. Jotaro Watanabe, chief of military education, were assassinated by the rebels. Premier Okada escaped death, his brother-in-law being mistaken for him and slain. The mutineers, threatened by loyal troops and the fleet, obeyed an edict by Emperor Hirohito and surrendered. Of their 23 leaders, two committed suicide.

The immediate concern of Emperor Hirohito and his advisers was the selection of a man for premier who could form a new government that would satisfy the various parties. First Prince Fumimaro Kono, young president of the house of peers, was asked to undertake this task, but he declined on the ground of poor health. Then the choice of the emperor fell upon Koki Hirota, a moderate who is well known in both the United States and Russia. Hirota at once began picking out his ministers, saying: "My cabinet will be composed of young, able statesmen."

Hirota's selection was taken to mean that the emperor has determined to proceed with the modernization of the country, and to exercise his power to rule instead of permitting himself to be the exalted agent of military overlords.

MAJ. GEN. WILLIAM WEIGEL, retired, one of the army's most reliable commanders, died in the army hospital on Governors Island at the age of seventy-two. He served 44 years, through Indian campaigns, in the Spanish-American war and in the Philippines, and went to France in the World War as a captain. He was rapidly promoted through grades, to brigadier general on August 15, 1917, and to major general on August 8, 1918, when he was given command of the Eighty-eighth division, a new national army unit which he trained and took overseas. Previously he had commanded the Fifty-sixth brigade, Twenty-eighth division, a Pennsylvania outfit, at Chateau-Thierry.

MORE than 150,000 workers in 11,000 buildings in New York city were called out on strike by James J. Bambrick, president of the Building Service Employees' International union, and the sky-scrapers from the Battery to Washington Heights were badly crippled. Elevator men stopped their cars, furnace men banked their fires and scrubwomen threw down their mops, and all marched out of the buildings and formed picket lines. There was some scattered fighting between the pickets and men hastily hired to take their places.

Since the strike affected not only office buildings but innumerable apartment buildings also, the occupants of the latter were deprived of heat and telephone connections, and in many cases sick persons were marooned without food supplies. This led Mayor La Guardia to call the city health officials into conference, and to declare a civic emergency and order Health Commissioner Rice to see that fires were stoked and that trips necessary to health of the tenants and care of the sick were made in all residence buildings of more than six floors.

IMMEDIATELY after President Roosevelt signed the new soil conservation-farm relief act passed to take the place of the invalidated AAA, Administrator Chester C. Davis began planning ways to spend the $500,000,000 authorized. Under his orders more than five thousand employees of the AAA who had been waiting since January 6 for something to do got busy placing the new program into effect.

The goal of the new law, Mr. Roosevelt said in announcing his signature, is parity, not of farm prices, but of farm income. He said the New Deal has "not abandoned and will not abandon" the principle of equality for agriculture.

Davis planned, as the first move, a series of four conferences with agricultural leaders in Memphis, Chicago, New York and Salt Lake City to formulate plans to take 30,000,000 acres out of commercial production this year and place them in legumes and other soil conserving crops.

The new law provides benefit payments to farmers who co-operate in federal suggestions for conservation of soil fertility in 1936 and 1937. It provides, also, for federal subsidies to states setting up permanent state programs in 1938 and thereafter.

"REMEMBER the Alamo," the battle cry of Texas, was heard all over the state as its centennial celebration opened at the village of Washington-on-the-Brazos, where the declaration of independence from Mexico was signed. The old "charter of empire" was taken there from its place in the state capitol rotunda in Austin, and Gov. James V. Allred of Texas and Gov. Philip LaFollette of Wisconsin went along to take part in the ceremonies. The party then went to Huntsville, where Gen. Sam Houston gathered an army of Texans to fight the Mexicans, and there Gov. Hill McAlister of Tennessee made the address. San Antonio and other cities followed on the program, and the celebrations will continue for months, reaching a climax in the opening on June 6 of the centennial exposition at Dallas.

MICHIGAN NEWS BRIEFS

Owosso—Edward Rolphs, of Akron, became president of the Michigan Farmers Union, succeeding John Lentz, of Maybee, who died recently. Rolphs was named by the board of directors, in session here. Rolphs succeeded as vice president by Charles Downing, of Willis.

Bennington—St. Patrick would have found a much more fertile field here in pioneer days for his labors against snakes than in Ireland, according to a record left by S. B. Bugbee. He reported that upon purchase of his farm in 1837 he took a short stroll and killed 40 snakes, many of them rattlers.

Charlotte—Harold E. Haun, of Charlotte, a State trooper stationed at Paw Paw for the past year, has been chosen by the State Police Commissioner, from the entire personnel of the State Police for a year's post-graduate course in the Bureau for Street Traffic Research conducted by Harvard University, with a $1,200 allowance for expenses.

Grand Rapids—Two more hard winters are coming—not this year, of course—Father Bernard R. Hubbard thinks. Father Hubbard, known as the "glacier priest," is noted as an Alaskan explorer and meteorological research expert. He says that the sun spot theory as applied to weather conditions indicates that the next two years will be frostbitten ones.

Lansing—The fifteenth annual Citizens' Military Training Camps for Michigan will be conducted from July 2 to 31 inclusive, Maj. Wharton G. Ingram has announced. Camp Custer at Battle Creek has been selected for training infantry and cavalry candidates; Fort Brady at Sault Ste. Marie, for Upper Peninsula residents, and Camp McCoy in Wisconsin, for the field artillery candidates.

Port Sanilac—One of the diminishing number of Indian landmarks in Southern Michigan, an Indian burying ground, is becoming a summer playground. It was the burial place for the followers of Chief Pontiac and for redskins before and after Pontiac's rule. For years, it was a treasure trove for hunters of Indian relics, but now it has been so paved over that scarcely a sign of its original use remains.

Dowagiac—A partial revival of the old apprenticeship plan, designed to do away with a portion of the severe indictment against American education, is about to be instituted in Dowagiac schools. Steps have been taken to form an instruction course to train pupils for jobs. The next steps in the classes will be outlining of subject matter to be studied and the formation of "out of school, on school time, trade training" projects.

Lansing—Protests from the Ann Arbor Chamber of Commerce and the Ypsilanti Board of Commerce against the proposed discontinuance of the Michigan Central Railroad's commuter service of Detroit have been made to the State Public Utilities Commission. The two organizations contend that the company now has 40 regular passengers for its 7:45 a. m. train, enough to support its operation. Their briefs set forth that the service is indispensable to commuting business men.

Boyer City—Despite the fact that some of the famous smelt streams still are choked up with winter ice, plans are going forward in communities, both in the Lower and Upper Peninsulas, for the annual celebrations which are held in connection with the gathering of sportsmen who enjoy wading out into the icy waters and dipping up these little fish. Some festivals are expected to be held this season in Boyer City, Beulah, and East Jordan in the Lower Peninsula, and in Escanaba and Mepominee in the Upper Peninsula.

Kalamazoo—Swooping down upon the Wolf Lake Hatchery near Kalamazoo, merganser ducks and herring gulls every Montana grayling in the pond there in an almost unprecedented fashion. There were several hundred grayling, from 10 to 14 inches long, which were being held for propagation and planting, after being raised from imported eggs at great cost and effort. Loss of these adult fish means that Michigan's plans for propagation and planting Montana grayling are all off for at least two years.

Ann Arbor—A descendant of Fletcher Christian, who led a mutiny on H. M. S. Bounty way back in the time of King George III and ended his days in exile on a lonely South Sea Island, was a recent patient at University Hospital. He is Archie McLiver, 51 years old, of Benton Harbor. He relates that his mother was the great-granddaughter of Fletcher Christian, and migrated from Pitcairn's Island to Norfolk Island in 1856 when her birthplace would no longer support its growing population.

Lansing—The worst winter in decades through which Michigan is passing may prove to be a blessing in disguise for tourist, resort and marine interests, say State officials. The State Stream Control Commission has concluded that serious damage threatened by low levels on lakes and streams has now been definitely averted. The credit goes to the heavy snows and zero weather. Similar optimism was expressed by the Department of Conservation. Higher water levels in the inland lakes are almost assured for the next few years.

Lansing—The State Emergency Relief Administration announced that it will distribute $1,112,000 to 83 counties as their allotment of State aid for March.

L'Anse—Completion of a ninety-nine-foot steel fire tower and log cabin for the towerman on Panorama Hill in L'Anse Township, Baraga County, has been announced by the Big Bay CCC camp.

Gaylord—Fire did damage estimated at $10,000 to the elevator of the Hankey Milling Co. here. Stored in the building were 8,000 bushels of potatoes, 5,000 bushels of grain, 1,500 barrels of flour and five tons of seed.

Kalamazoo—Miles D. Pirnie, of the Kellogg bird sanctuary near Gull Lake, has filed a claim against the County for $246 for valuable birds killed by dogs. The birds were in a fenced inclosure, he claims. Among the birds killed were two valuable black swans.

Owosso—An idea of the game which once roamed Shiawassee County is given in the records left by Barret Putnam, of Scioto Township. He reported he killed 58 deer in one autumn and 500 from 1848 to 1862. During the same time he killed nine bears, all with a single-barrel shotgun.

Saginaw—Four persons escaped serious injury when the taxicab in which they were riding plunged 16 feet off a bridge to land upside down on the ice of the Saginaw River. Lawrence Thomas, 21 years old, told police that his cab skidded on a patch of ice as he approached the Court Street bridge, turned completely around and crashed through the railing to the ice below.

Ann Arbor—An atom-smashing "siege-gun" and a massive cyclotron, both being installed here, will give the University of Michigan one of the world's most powerful batteries for experiments in atomic disintegration. The "gun" is a seventeen-foot vacuum tube with a 1,000,000-volt powerhouse. A radioactive substance which it manufactures will be used for treatment of diseases of a cancerous nature.

Howard City—Thomas Irving Gordon, who was proud that he had lived 106 years and still wasn't "like a pumpkin after the seeds have fallen out," died recently at Grand Rapids. Up to his last month, he was as active as at 75. On his 100th birthday on which the Governor and 4,000 others gathered to honor him, Gordon took his first airplane ride. For several years of his life, after that, he drove his own automobile.

White Cloud—Newaygo County will soon be entirely reforested, if plans of county schools and 4-H ranger stations are carried out. Fifteen schools are planning to set out 100,000 trees this spring, mostly Norway and Jack Pine. Tracts to be reforested range in size from 40 acres to 300. The Fremont Chamber of Commerce is taking care of a 150-acre tract, known as Fremont Community Forest, and White Cloud High School is setting out 15,000 trees.

East Lansing—Prof. G. A. Brannan, research assistant in animal husbandry at Michigan State College says that the Michigan farmer wastes thousands of dollars annually by being over-generous in fattening his cattle for the market. He explained that a heifer, if held in the feed lot as long as a steer, becomes overweight and loses in market value. Brannan said that an experiment to determine the difference in qualities of meat from heifers and steers led to the conclusion.

Alpena—There was something besides cold and starvation at Valley Forge—not much, perhaps, but Mrs. Nelson M. Eddy, of Alpena, can give her friends a little insight into history. In spite of their suffering, the men at Valley Forge in the winter of 1777 had the heart to form military Masonic lodges. Mrs. Eddy has a Masonic apron worn by her great-grandfather who was a captain in the Revolutionary War, serving from Bunker Hill to Yorktown. He joined the Masons at Valley Forge.

Port Huron—What a 70 workmen failed to do in three weeks Nature did overnight. The men had been working in Sarnia Bay trying to release three steamers from the ice so that they could be moved alongside elevators to discharge cargoes of grain. Thirty men first started the job, and using saws operated by gasoline motors, tried to cut a channel in the three-foot-thick ice. As fast as they cut a channel it froze in back of them. Then 40 more men were hired and they also failed. A sudden thaw left a channel open overnight.

Coopersville—Major cities may entertain the Grand Army of the Republic once a year, when veterans of the war of '61 get together to live again the stirring past, but little Ottawa County village has a daily G. A. R. reunion. Though all around the State villages are reporting the death of their last Civil War veteran, Greenville still honors three men who fought in the Union Army. Charles Nichols, 90 years old; John M. Park, 87, and John Jackson, 92, and as they all live in the same block they hold a daily reunion.

Flint—Bisko, a dog with more courage than pedigree, received a diploma for extraordinary merit from the Dog World Magazine for saving Mrs. Hesse Askin, 41 years old, who had fallen on the ice and broken her leg. Bisko had been hurt several days before, probably by an automobile, and her owner, Arthur Mattson, of Flushing, had feared that he would have to dispose of the dog. Pleas of Mattson's wife and children persuaded him to wait. Then Bisko settled things by discovering Mrs. Askin, and running home to bark for aid.

NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington—A routine War department order came through the other day which said, cryptically:

Thunder Over Hagood "By direction of the President, Maj. Gen. Johnson Hagood, U. S. A., is relieved from assignment to the command of the Eighth corps area and further duty at Fort Sam Houston, Texas. Major General Hagood will proceed to his home and await orders."

Each day, there comes from the War department anywhere from two or three to a couple of dozen orders by which army officers are transferred from one post to another, from one assignment to another or given new instructions. It is not unusual at all. That is why I said at the outset of this item that the order respecting General Hagood was routine. But it was routine only in the language that was used. Otherwise, it was significant. Just how significant it will prove to be remains as a secret to be unfolded by the future. Suffice to say that seldom has one minor incident of government administration created such a storm as this army order because it has become a political issue. General Hagood is the third ranking officer in the United States army. He has been in the service something like forty years. His record is generally regarded as distinguished, but at the same time he has never been a pussyfoot. He has spoken boldly, sometimes too boldly and sometimes out of turn, yet I think it is generally agreed that General Hagood is sincere.

But, to go back of the "routine army order" by which he was summarily relieved of his command at the important army post of Fort Sam Houston, we find a record of General Hagood's testimony before an appropriations committee in the house of representatives. In that testimony, General Hagood spoke with his usual bluntness. He apparently offended somebody when he did it. His testimony has been criticized and commended, the War department and Secretary Dern have been attacked and defended and even President Roosevelt has been dragged into the controversy because somewhere, somehow New Deal opposition has become convinced that President Roosevelt and Secretary Dern punished General Hagood by removing him from his post because he dared to point out flukes and flaws and ridiculous aspects in New Deal policies of handling taxpayers' money.

General Hagood was called before the appropriations committee by its chairman and told to express his candid sentiments, his honest convictions and any constructive suggestions he might have respecting improvement of the United States army. The general, somewhat blusteringly, related to the committee that the army must have additional housing facilities. He related conditions in many army posts and asserted that many persons on removal were accorded better places to live than Uncle Sam's soldiers.

That part aroused no particular controversy but when General Hagood told the committee of the difficulty the responsible army authorities have in getting money with which to provide better housing for the soldiers, he stepped on administration toes by saying that it was more difficult to get "five cents for a pencil than a thousand dollars with which to teach Civilian Conservation corps boys new hobbies or boondoggling." He said he could get a hundred dollars to build a gravel walk and a rose garden but could not get ten dollars with which to repair a broken steam pipe in an army barracks.

The next outburst by the general brought forth his description that money being handled by Relief Administrator Hopkins was stage money; that nothing worth while or of a permanent character was being done with that money and the explanation that he called it stage money because "it is being handed around and you can do nothing with it in the end." His plea was that some of these funds which he said were being otherwise wasted should be employed to build structures of concrete and steel "that can be shown to our grandchildren 50 years from now."

In hearing General Hagood's testimony, the committee understood that the War department had given him permission to speak freely. Indeed, such assurance had been passed along to the committee from the War department did not know what General Hagood had on his chest. If it had known, it certainly could have expected exactly such expressions because General Hagood never has pulled his punches. He has said each time what he thought.

By saying what he thought, however, he undoubtedly moved across the line of discretion. Army officers must guard their speech. They are under disciplinary regulations. It has to be so. Otherwise, we would see frequent outbursts by army officers in opposition to established policies, rules and regulations and it takes no stretch of the imagination to see what a disordered mess would result.

On the other hand, General Hagood was certainly privileged to believe that his observations were being made only for the committee of congress before which he appeared. The doors to the committee room were closed and locked and only committee members were in attendance. It happened, however, that subsequently the stenographic record of the committee hearings was made public and when that happened, the storm broke. Almost simultaneously with the removal of the bond of secrecy on the committee record, the War department order degrading General Hagood was written. When that happened, the politicians literally blew up. They shouted charges of censorship, terrorism by the President and Secretary Dern, dictatorship, political punishment and half a dozen other vicious accusations.

A few of the administration spokesmen in congress defended the War department action. Almost in the same breath these administration spokesmen sought conferences with Secretary Dern and others in an attempt to persuade the President and the war secretary to soften the punishment but those moves were futile and Representative Blanton, Texas Democrat, shouted on the floor of the house that the Hagood punishment would cost the Democratic party "a million votes unless it were withdrawn."

As a part of the defense of the War department action, Gen. Malin Craig, chief of staff of the army, made public his memorandum to the secretary of war respecting General Hagood's attitude and his testimony before the congressional committee. In the course of this 2,000-word memorandum, General Craig described General Hagood as a "wise-cracker," and he was probably correct in so far as General Hagood's remarks about stage money were concerned. Yet, I have found very few among the Washington observers whose opinions are worth while who saw in the Craig memorandum any real justification for the severe punishment meted out to General Hagood.

The order still stands. General Hagood is going to his home in Charleston, S. C., "to await orders." No one familiar with the army procedure expects that General Hagood ever again will be given an army assignment. He will be sixty-four years old next year and at that time automatically retires from active duty. So there is hardly any question but that General Hagood has held his last command.

The whole situation, suddenly come to be known as the Hagood case, is bound to be multiplied and mirrored. It will figure in the coming political campaign because, however justified the War department action may have been in the interest of discipline and good army administration, there are thousands of individuals who never will be convinced that the Hagood removal was for any purpose other than as punishment because he criticized New Deal spending policies.

Although there is, and can be, no connection between the two, it was the basis for a really humorous reaction that during the time when the controversy raged over General Hagood's removal from his Texas army post, a federal government committee was busily engaged in making plans for federal participation in the Texas Centennial exposition which opens at Dallas June 6. Uncle Sam is spending $3,000,000—the largest sum congress ever has authorized for federal participation in such a show—so that twenty-odd government agencies can display to exposition visitors what the government has done with its billions since the cards were shuffled for the New Deal.

The Agriculture department, as usual, will be represented by the largest of all federal exhibits. The Commerce department and the State, War, Navy, Treasury, Justice, Post Office, Interior and Labor departments will have their booths or buildings. The Federal Housing administration and the Farm Credit administration will be there with displays of their wares, and the Public Health service will attempt to further the cause of health in its usual splendid fashion.

One unusual feature of the government's participation will be a negro building in which it will tell the story of the negro race and its progress since the first slaves were brought into America. Plans call for the use of negro labor in the construction of this exhibit building and as far as possible negroes will prepare the exhibits.

The Bridal Veil
Why the bride wears a veil at her wedding has been the subject of many an argument among scholars. Some authorities believe that the bridal veil originated in the ancient practice of hiding the bride's face to show her submission. Others contend the opposite—that the veil originally was an emblem of independence.

HERE'S one from a fellow reporter—and by golly, after reading his yarn I am almost convinced that maybe there is a thrill or two in the newspaper business after all.

Charles K. Ulrich of Long Island City is the lad, and it happened on Sunday, January 26, 1913, while Charley was working as a reporter for the New York Herald. He was sent by his city editor to interview a man who had called up on the telephone and promised the paper the biggest "beat" since the Spanish-American war. Well, Charley doesn't know about its being the biggest beat, but it certainly landed him in the biggest mess of trouble since that war the fellow mentioned.

The address they had given Charley was in the sixth story of an apartment building in One Hundred and Twenty-second street. On the way up, he noticed that the negro elevator boy turned three shades whiter when he told him whom he had come to see. The boy said: "I hopes you has a good time with that bird." But Charley attached no particular significance to his cryptic remark.

As he approached the door, Charley heard angry shouts and oaths within, accompanied by the screeching of a parrot. During a lull in the shouting he heard sounds such as a man might make by beating a bird-cage with an iron rod. The sounds mystified Charley, but they didn't alarm him. If they had, he might have saved himself a lot of trouble.

Charley rang the bell. A tall, stout man opened it. He was in his shirt sleeves and on his left shoulder was perched a parrot. He had a heavy stick in

Alluring Daytime Frock

With Distinctive Yoke

1832-B

The yoke of this frock is unusual and a distinctive departure from the obvious round or squared-off affair, because it extends out over the shoulders and forms flaring little caps—caps which conceal two inverted pleats and which are transformed into lovely loose raglan sleeves. The blouse gathers at the yoke and waist in front and back, rendering fullness and a soft drapery appearance. The twin panels in the skirt give you height, and the skirt an added swirl. Two huge gathered pockets in unison with the blouse are interesting features and very practical. Make a self-fabric belt trimmed with a diamond shaped buckle and two harmonizing buttons, and notice how smart and up to the minute your frock will be.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1832-B is available in sizes 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44, and can be procured for fifteen cents. Size 36 requires 4 3/4 yards of 35-inch material.

Color Blindness Traced to Variety of Causes

Color blindness, also called achromatopsia and daltonism, is the inability to distinguish certain colors or shades of color. Total color blindness, in which there is no perception of colors as such, but only of gradations of light and shade, is rare. The most common form, states a writer in the Indianapolis News, is that in which some bright colors, different in different cases, are confused with each other, though other colors are correctly perceived. Color blindness may be congenital (i. e., present from birth) or acquired. It is said frequently to be transmitted from grandfather to grandson, and is more common in males than in females, in the proportion of over three to one.

Acquired color blindness may be caused by a diseased brain or by a diseased or wounded optic nerve; but it appears to be unconnected with defects of sight and with retinal diseases generally. It is sometimes temporary, but even in such cases is usually recurrent in increasing acute forms. The average eye distinguishes six spectral colors; an acute sense of color distinguishes seven.

Color blindness, affecting one eye or both, has no known remedy. It must, however, be distinguished from mere ignorance of color names. A case of color blindness was mentioned in 1684, and others were noted in 1777 and 1779; but the most famous early instance—from which the defect was known as daltonism—was that of the English chemist, John Dalton, who in 1794, described his own case. Investigations during the Nineteenth century established the importance of color blindness, especially in the mercantile marine and railway service; and tests were devised for applicants for such positions.

People Who Are Old

Some people at eighty are actually younger, physically, than others at sixty or even forty. People who are really old are those whose bodies are no longer so strong or active as they were, people who with their years have become worn, infirm, disabled or sick. For people in middle life or later, who are merely not so active as they were, the answer may be different.

An Addition to the House

Very few purchasable things add as much to a home—solid value per dollar of cost—as modern telephone service.

It adds security. The presence of a telephone in the house means that here no time will be lost when some sudden crisis demands the services of a doctor. It means dependable, 24-hour contact with the police. It is a valuable form of insurance, for its swiftness in summoning the fire department can easily mean the difference between trifling damage and a crippling loss.

It adds comfort. The telephone frees every member of the family, and especially the housewife, from the drudgery of unnecessary steps. It saves them bothersome errands.

It often enables them to escape hazardous exposure to disagreeable weather.

It adds enjoyment. The family accessible by telephone has greater opportunities for social pleasures. Over it they can both extend and receive invitations; they can send congratulations, or exchange greetings of the season. They can take part in "voice reunions" with distant friends or relatives—can indulge in the amenities of life to an extent denied those families without this modern, inexpensive convenience.

By delivering genuine value, telephone service of the type this Company supplies to Michigan has earned recognition as a welcome, sensible addition to the house.

State of Michigan

To the Circuit Court for the County of Iosco in Chancery:

The petition of John J. O'Hara, Auditor General of the State of Michigan, for and in behalf of said State, respectfully shows that the list of lands hereinafter set forth and marked "Schedule A," contains a description of all lands in said County of Iosco upon which taxes were assessed for the years mentioned therein, and which were returned as delinquent for non-payment of taxes, and which taxes have not been paid; together with the total amount of such taxes, with interest computed thereon to the time fixed for sale, and collection fee and expenses, as provided by law, extended against each of said parcels of land.

Your petitioner further shows that the Court that said lands were returned to the Auditor General under the provisions of Act 206 of the Public Acts of 1893, as delinquent for non-payment of said taxes for said years respectively, and that said taxes remain unpaid; except that lands included in said "Schedule A" for taxes of 1890 or prior years were returned to the Auditor General as delinquent for said taxes under the provisions of the general tax laws in force prior to the passage of Act 200 of the Public Acts of 1891, and which taxes remain unpaid.

Your petitioner further shows that in all cases where lands are included in "Schedule A" as aforesaid for taxes of 1890 or of any prior year, said lands have not been sold for said taxes or have been heretofore sold for said delinquent taxes and the sale or sales so made have been set aside by a court of competent jurisdiction, or have been cancelled as provided by law.

Your petitioner further shows that in all cases where lands are included in "Schedule A," as aforesaid, for the first instalment of taxes of 1932, or of any prior year, said lands have not been sold for said delinquent taxes and the sale, or sales, so made have been set aside by court of competent jurisdiction by Legislative Action (See Act 126, P. A. of 1933, as amended by Act 11, Extra Session of 1934, as amended by Act 73, P. A. of 1935), or have been cancelled as provided by law.

Your petitioner further shows and avers that the taxes, interest, collection fee and expenses as set forth in said "Schedule A," are a valid lien on the several parcels of lands described in said schedule.

Your petitioner further shows that the said taxes on the said described lands have remained unpaid for more than one year after they were returned as delinquent; and that said taxes not having been paid, and the same being now due and remaining unpaid as above set forth, your petitioner prays a decree in favor of the State of Michigan against each parcel of said lands, for the payment of the several amounts of taxes, interest, collection fee and expenses, as computed and extended in said schedule against the several parcels of land contained therein, and in default of payment of the said several sums computed and extended against said lands, that each of said parcels of land may be sold for the amounts due thereon, as provided by law, to pay the lien aforesaid.

And your petitioner will ever pray, etc.

Dated Feb. 17, 1936.

John J. O'Hara,
Auditor General of the State of Michigan, for and in behalf of said State.

A list of the lands referred to as included in "Schedule A" is on file in the office of the County Clerk and subject to public inspection. They are subject to public inspection.

The Man Who Knows

Whether the Remedy You are taking for Headaches, Neuralgia or Rheumatism Pains is SAFE is Your Doctor. Ask Him

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches, or the pains of rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it—in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach, or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct.

Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains . . . and safe for the average person to take regularly.

You can get real Bayer Aspirin at any drug store—simply by never asking for it by the name "aspirin" alone, but always saying BAYER ASPIRIN when you buy.

SYNOPSIS

Antoinette Taft, twenty-three, attractive and ambitious but unable to hold a job, lives in a drab San Francisco flat with her sister Brenda and brother Cliff, who are older, her seventeen-year-old brother Bruce, and their Aunt Meg. In her job hunting rounds she interviews Lawrence Bellamy, editor of the Journal of Commerce, but finds he has no place for a woman writer. She likes him very much, as she tells Brenda later. "He's a stunning young thing, as tall as Cliff, not much more than thirty, I think, and very much the gentleman." As the sisters talk, diffident Barney Kerr drops in, asking where Cliff is.

Tony, Brenda and Barney sat on lazily, idly, at the wide-opened window in the dim light. Bruce was snoring audibly on the couch.

"We can have a light if there's any purpose in it," Tony observed.

"No, I have to go," Barney said, not stirring. "I wonder why we're all so tired tonight?" he asked, after a space.

"Oh, we sold the Izaak Walton," Brenda remembered to announce suddenly. "Dr. Talbot bought it."

"I wouldn't thank you for all the first editions that ever were!" Tony remarked. This observation was permitted to die away into silence. Then Barney asked:

"What took Cliff to Sac?"

"They'd punched the switchboard wrong for the Weinstein thing," Tony stated indifferently.

"Who said so?" Barney's words were like bullets.

"Cliff did."

"What'd he say?"

"Well, if you must know, Barney, Cliff was shaving this morning, and Mr. Ridley telephoned. Cliff's first speech was 'The hell!' Then he rushed out like a fire wagon, and the next thing I knew he had telephoned that he was off for Sacramento."

"I'll bet you it was all right when he got there," Barney said, after thought.

"Was that bad, Barney?" Brenda asked anxiously. Darling old Bundy, Tony thought; she had had so much anxiety in her twenty-eight years!

"Oh, kinder."

"Was it—was it Cliff's fault?"

"It was all our faults, I guess. We did the drawings."

"It seems," Tony volunteered, "that they wanted this marble slab to stand up vertically, as it were, and it was cut to lie down sideways, and they said they'd have to take out a piece of wall in the basement."

"Who said so?" Barney asked, in the explosive, incredulous manner he had used before.

"Well, that was it. That was the trouble."

Except for repeating under his breath Cliff's own expetive, Barney made no comment on this. There was silence again. "See Bellamy on the Journal, Tony?" he asked.

"Yes, I did. This morning. Nothing came of it."

"Ha!" Barney ejaculated, and at his tone she felt her cheeks flush in the shadows. It was as if Barney felt himself personally charged with the business of getting Tony Taft, who had lost so many jobs in the past few years, still another.

"What was it that your Aunt Sally had in mind?"

"She wasn't at home when I telephoned, so I don't know," Tony said untruthfully. It was none of his business whether she was working or idle!

"Miss Grace, in our office, is going to marry Jay Klinker," Barney said after a moment. "She's not such a smart girl, but we all feel badly to have her go. For one thing, she's always on time." The voice that he had been trying to keep very casual over his pipe took on a slightly sentimental note. "I think that's darned important," he went on. "Being on time, dependable. And then she's a smartly dressed girl, neat. Men like women in offices to be neat—look nice. Then another thing, you never hear her. Quiet. All the girls like her, but there's none of this giggling and whispering—"

"I loathe you, you smug pig," Tony said pleasantly in her heart, as he paused. "Who are you to rub it into me that I don't get to the office on time and that my clothes are shabby? I loathe and despise you, smoking there and feeling so sure of yourself, and if you had forty thousand a week I wouldn't marry you under chloroform!"

Aloud she said nothing, and the rain began to spatter and whisper in the dark again. Barney said for the third time, "Gosh, I've got to go," and this time he did go, with a little doorway murmuring to Brenda, and a casual "Night, Tony!" to the younger girl.

After a while Brenda said: "Feel awfully bad about that Journal job, Tony?"

"No," Tony answered readily, but in a tone so low that the other girl knew she was holding it steady. "Not so much about that. But—oh, I don't know, the whole thing! Other persons get into the work they like, and get paid for it, and make good. I seem to have to do everything I hate—book-keeping, jobs in stores, companion to crazy old ladies in love with their chauffeurs, teaching in private schools that go bust owing me a hundred and twenty dollars! It would seem that I can't do what I want to do, and I hate to do what I—"

She laughed, presently resuming on a less impatient note, "I hate to do what I have to do," she said mildly. "I hate office work, Bendi. If it were the stage, or a newspaper, or doing anything in the movies, I'd work like a dog. But just to go downtown tomorrow and get a job taking letters from young pipsqueaks who haven't the remotest idea what they're talking about, and hang my coat in a locker, and go to a cafeteria for lunch—and go on with it, Brenda, for three years and five years and ten and twenty— It scares me!"

"You'll never drudge along in an office for twenty years or for five!" Brenda predicted, in a troubled voice.

"You have!" Tony thought. Aloud she said nothing.

"You'll marry," Brenda said. Tony could feel her cheeks flush resentfully. "Maybe Barney—" Brenda went on boldly.

"I don't think it'll be Barney," Tony answered moderately. "I wish," she went on, her tone warming, "I wish you could have heard the nice little sermon he was just preaching to me! Barney's so outrageously stuck-on-himself!" Tony interpolated, resentfully: "about being on time at the office, and dressing smartly—"

"He didn't!"

"He did."

There was a silence.

"It only means that he's in love with you."

"He's in love with Barney Kerr—that's who he's in love with!"

"No, honestly, Tony, Barney isn't so conceited! But he likes you so much that he worries about you—honestly, I that's it."

"Any man can ask any girl," Tony observed, after thought. "He's never said anything."

"Not on a hundred and fifty a month, with a mother like his."

"He's really in love with the whole family, and I don't blame him, when you look at the family he's got!" Tony said. "He's lonely, and he likes our food, and he can talk about oil circuit-breakers and pole-top whatnots with Cliff, and that's all there is to it."

"Tony," Brenda began, as Tony fell silent, "would you like him to ask you to marry him?"

"Yes," Tony answered without hesitation, "so that I could refuse him!"

Brenda laughed.

"He's too smart to risk that," she said. "In some ways he's much wiser than Cliff. But anyone seeing the way he watches you, Tony, and worries about your affairs, and—well, even in this giving advice this evening—anyone can see that he's thinking of you all the time. And I know this," Brenda went on seriously, "I know enough of human nature to know that the minute a man like that marries a woman, she—she becomes sacred. You'd be completely spoiled—everybody quarreling, but that's neither here nor there! Aunt Sally'd be pleased—and I suppose you would be."

"But why should you want me to get married, Bendi?"

"I want you to be happy."

"I wouldn't be. And once you're married, you can't get out."

"I daresay it's quite different, though, once you're in."

Tony was silent.

"But, why not Barney?" The older sister persisted lightly. "Cliff loves him; we all do. We've known him all our lives."

"In the first place, he isn't in love with me," Tony said. "In the second, I'm not in the least in love with him, and I never could be. And at that," she added honestly, "I think he wants me, has it in his mind, anyway, that we will marry some day, and I believe I could marry him and make him a darned good wife! But there's no—no flame to that, Brenda."

Tony finished, in a low tone.

"There's no glory. If I were successful at something—as a head nurse, or a reporter, or a photographer, or a lecturer, it'd be different. I'd marry with—style, then. I'd feel that I'd been a success at one thing and would be at another. But if I married Barney now it'd be just—just taking care of poor wild Tony, who tried for the stage and the newspapers and was fired and snubbed all round, and who finally realized that a woman's truest role is that of a wife and mother—"

She stopped, her voice thickening.

"It is the happiest life," Brenda offered, in a slow voice with notes of pain in it. "If you love a man, that is," she added.

"Ah, but you see I don't," Tony said. "I know the real thing when I meet it. In that newspaper office today—down at the Journal rooms, I mean, I met a man—"

She stopped. Presently she resumed again, a little shamefacedly:

"You'd think I'm an absolute fool if I say that something—something flashed between us—between this Mr. Bellamy upon whom I'd never set eyes in my life before, and me—that was nearer—nearer—love, than anything Barney's ever made me feel! He had only to look at me to make me feel silly and cold and shuddery, you know that wonderful feeling that you're going all to pieces and don't care!"

"I don't know," said Brenda, laughing in sudden relief, "and I do think you're silly, idiotic, if you ask me. What do you know of this man?"

"Nothing!" admitted Tony, laughing too. "Except that he's somewhere around thirty, and married—"

"Married?"

"Yes, of course—he would be."

"But that isn't love, Tony."

"Well, maybe it isn't. But it's something—something a girl wants to have before she gives in, Brenda. Just the shape of his mouth—it's quite hard and large, and the look in his eye—he looks up and smiles at you quite a while after he's finished speaking—"

"Antoinette Taft!"

"I know. I know how it sounds, I admit that it's supremely silly! I only used it as an illustration.—What an earth!" She said the last words on an odd note of fright. For the telephone was shrilly ringing.

She ran out in the narrow hall. Brenda's face was a study in varied emotions as she listened to the conversation that was by turns puzzled, awed, excited, rapturous.

"Oh, Bendi, Bendi," gasped Tony, rushing back to fall at her sister's knees and clutch at her dramatically. "It's the Call! Some Mr. Greenwood of the Call! Bendi, he wanted to see me tonight—I'm to see him at two tomorrow! He wanted me to come down right now. Twenty-five a week—twenty-five a week, and I'm to try the society column! Oh, Bendi, you'll help me, won't you? I mean with the people who come into the store—I mean getting engagements and parties and everything! Oh, Bendi, he sounded so nice! He said he was out of his senses trying to get someone, and I said I couldn't come down tonight—"

"What is it?" Aunt Meggy here interpolated dazedly, from her doorway.

Cliff, blown and pale and tired, was in the hall doorway. "What's all the shooting about?" he said.

Tony enlightened them ecstatically.

"Oh, Cliff, just as I was despairing—I'd been to the Journal today, and there didn't seem a chance—just as I was despairing, this Mr. Greenwood telephoned from the Call, and he wants me to gather up all the news I can and begin tomorrow—and twenty-five a week, Cliff!"

"That's something like," Cliff said, with his slow smile.

"And, Cliff, you know I can do it," chattered Tony. "You know I can, Bendi! Aunt Sally'll help me, and Mrs. Terry!"

"Want to go down now and clinch it?" Cliff asked.

"Oh, Cliff, could we? He really did want to see me, because tomorrow's the day he usually has off, and he said I'd have to 'scout around and dig up a lot of mush for the Sunday page! He sounded so cute!" Tony said, in a rush.

"Get your hat on," said Cliff. "I know a man named Burke who works on the sports section. We'll go down."

"You angel!" Tony called back, flying into her room to change. Brenda smiled at her oldest brother. "She's two girls," Brenda said. "She was down and out five minutes ago, no hope anywhere—she's been telling me what a failure she is—"

"Failure, shush! She's only twenty-three." Cliff was lighting a cigarette.

"How'd it go in Sacramento, darling?"

"Oh, I think I butchered the switchboard, all right. However, we think we can work out of it."

Cliff put on his damp overcoat again, as Tony came out radiant and fresh in her dark blue coat and small hat, and they went away together.

CHAPTER III

"It's so much easier to go in there with you along, Cliff," Tony said, when they had left the street car and made a wet run for the lighted doorway of the big newspaper building.

"Sure," he said. "I hope Burke's there. He may not be, though."

The elevator flashed up past floors that were dark and deserted at eleven o'clock at night. They stepped out at the fourteenth floor; everything was brightly animated and exciting here, and Tony looked about her with avid interest at the glass-top doors that were opening and shutting continually upon seething inner apartments. A quiet girl at a telephone switchboard looked up.

"Mr. Greenwood?" The girl repeated the name cautiously into a black rubber mouthpiece. "There's a Miss Taft to see you here."

Sitting back, she said, "You can go right in. It's room 18."

Tony followed her brother dazedly. Here was room 18, with "City Room" lettered in black on the door, and "Charles Greenwood" set modestly in a corner below it.

Cliff opened the door, and Tony had her first look at the city room. It angled the entire width of the building on two sides. The third side, she was presently to learn, was the Sunday paper department, and the fourth was variously divided by the library, the files, the photographers' lairs. Down below were the business offices, imposing in heavy chairs and eucalyptus paneling; up here everything was confusion, disorder, haste.

The instant her nostrils caught the first scent of it she knew that she belonged here; that this was her world, her battlefield, her first love. Men were everywhere; shouting, smoking. Typewriters were clicking; there was a ripping sound as paper was torn from a reel; there was a constant eccentric chatter of a telegraph machine from the wide littered desk marked "Associated Press." Tony saw men wearing green eye-shades, eyeglasses men; saw one very handsome big dark fellow scolding away about something to an older man at a corner desk.

Mr. Charles Greenwood was a dark little weasel of a man who occupied a corner desk shut away from the general office only by a nicked and battered fence of dark wood with a gate. He was in his shirt-sleeves and smoking a cigar when Clifford and Tony were ushered into his immediate neighborhood.

The desk before the city editor was heaped high with the society pages of recent Sunday papers. He had evidently been clipping and pasting desperately; he indicated a drawer full of uninviting-looking letters.

"We got to have a page of this stuff, good," he said, "for Madame La Duchesse. That's the swell stuff, see—the Burlingame crowd, the Ja-di-dahs, see? You know that crowd, don't you?" he broke off to ask suspiciously, looking up at Tony.

"Well," Tony answered firmly, without the flicker of an eyelid.

"Well, now, look here. You'll have 'Ducky's' desk; that's what the boys called our last Madame," Greenwood broke off to say, appealing to their sympathy. "She was a hellion; she just raised hell in here, and she's left everything in a mess! Now, when you came here to leave your name—when was that?"

"Three times since Christmas," Tony reminded him.

"You said that you thought you could handle it?" His eye was suspicious again.

"I can."

"Understand that every Thursday we've got to have a whole page of it with two photos?"

Her heart failed her for a second.

"Certainly," Tony said, with a reassuring nod.

"You can clip a lot of it for tomorrow, see?" the harassed Greenwood further explained. "Look over the papers; I've got the Oakland papers here too, and pick out whatever looks good to you. I won't be here, but you give it to Mr. Florence—he's that drunk-lookin' crook over there—"

"All right!" the fat man at the desk said significantly. "All right."

"Get it all together and hand it in before ten tomorrow night. And you'll have to get your own column, too—say about sixteen items—get 'em good, because we've been running down lately, and the old man was raising hell about it today. You run round among your friends, and you'll pick 'em up easy. Then, if you run into any good club stuff—women scrapping—bring that in, that's always good. Keep your eyes open—oh, and by the way, you'll do that dance down at the Burlingame club next week, will you?"

"Certainly," Tony agreed, her head spinning.

"All right, then—you take all this stuff along to your desk—MacGrath!" shouted the city editor, "help Miss—help Miss Taft to take all this stuff to the Duck's desk, will you, and rustle her up a typewriter somewhere, and get her some paper. She's going to do our Sunday page tomorrow, and boy, will it be good! All right, Miss Taft, I'll see you Friday—keep your shirt on, and ask the boys for anything you want. Oh, and by the way, root us out a couple of good pictures tomorrow for Sunday. I didn't get round to it!"

Tony and Clifford and the amiably burdened MacGrath went to a cluttered desk by a black window that was trickling rain. Everyone looked at them; Tony did not dare raise her eyes.

She found her new domain frightfully dirty and the typewriter frame empty.

"I'll have Laren get you a typewriter downstairs," said MacGrath, in embarrassed apology. "There isn't a decent one on the floor. Looky, here's the book they keep the names in—who's in society, and who's married to whose sisters, and all that."

Tony clutched the shabby leather record eagerly.

"Oh, that'll be priceless!"

"He's all right," confided MacGrath, with a jerk of his head toward the city editor's desk, "only he cusses a lot."

"Could I—just to get this stuff in order—could I come down tomorrow early—say about ten?" she asked. "He told me to come in at one. But I'd like to get started—"

"Oh, gosh, come at seven if you want to!" MacGrath said with a stare.

Tony Had Her First Look at the City Room.

Baron von Steuben Frederick William Augustus Henry Ferdinand, Baron von Steuben, was a Prussian officer on the staff of Frederick the Great, who came to America late in 1777 and offered his services to the Continental congress as a volunteer officer. General Washington at once appreciated the worth of such a trained soldier and made him inspector general at Valley Forge. In spite of the hardships under which the army lived that winter Von Steuben changed them from a mob into well drilled troops. As a reward congress gave him the rank of major general and inspector general of the entire army. Upon retirement he was given a grant of land at what is now Steubenville, N. Y., where he lived until his death in 1794.

The Aran People There are three islands of Aran—Inishmore, Inisheer and Inishmaan, comprising that group of islands off the Irish coast.

The Aran people wear homespun clothing and pampooties, a sort of moose-casin fashioned from cowhide, and are immensely interested when a traveler arrives attired in Bond street's newest products. The white-washed cottages and peat fires that are Irked so intimately with Irish history are there, and so are the fairy tales. It is a bleak land, with poor soil, but fish are plentiful. The land is peaceful and unaffected by the bustle that has become a part of modern life.

Theater Employee Arranges to Appear on Stage After Death

He wanted to appear, after his death, on the stage of the theater where he came daily for half a century to direct the lighting. So in his will, John Reed, employed long ago as gas-lighter by the Walnut Street theater, left provisions for a Shakespearean role. He wanted to be the skull in "Hamlet."

"My head to be separated from my body immediately after my death," provided his will, "the latter to be buried in a grave, the former to be brought to the theater where I served all my life and to be employed to represent the skull of Yorick—and to this end I bequeath my head to the properties."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Dizzy Dean's Howl Just Ballyhoo, Not Temperament

IT WAS perhaps to be expected that the feeling of unrest that has been irritating so many microphones and congressional records should at last come to aggravate the gentlemen who perform in sports. From winter resorts, from night clubs and from less ably ballyhooed centers of athletic antics and endeavors terse bulletins proclaim the news that the boys no longer are weakening their niftiest sayings with smiles.

As one who must live (not too well) by sports I have been reading such reports with proper diligence. While reading—and while duly recollecting how the well-acted rages of wrestlers and other celebrated statesmen so often have elevated the minds of the customers—I also have been doing some wistful wondering.

Obviously, if the performers can engage in their work with blood in their eyes—as well as on their noses—the situation soon may be vastly improved. New patrons will be attracted and the waning attention of those who once were steadfast in their faith will be revived.

This increased zest for laying it on the line should be beneficial for all concerned. Promoters and their besweated prima donnas should be enabled to purchase new limousines. The National league might be enabled to pay its best umpire what he deserves, the state of New York might get some decent income from the quasi-legal gambling and even the Phillies might be enabled to arrive at the clubhouse each day with a smile on their lips and two bits in the bank.

Unless you know your baseball well enough to be aware that Dizzy Dean merely is a large body of man entirely surrounded by press agents you are apt to suspect that vast sea of bitter jealousy separates him from his Alma Mater and his fellow students. Actually nothing could be farther from the truth.

For instance, there is the chit-chat that is being exchanged concerning his newest contract. Dizzy quite rightfully is claiming that he is the best pitcher in baseball and therefore is worthy of the best salary. His St. Louis owner, if I have read some of the more eminent sports commentators correctly, is attempting to pay him off with rain checks. So there is blood on the moon.

All this does injustice to Sam Breadon and Branch Rickey. It is true that they are suave gentlemen who often have been wonderfully persuasive when dealing with lesser toilers in their vineyards, but they also are gentlemen who are richly endowed with common sense.

This means that when their star performer has boasted and blasted himself onto enough front pages they will immediately prove to him that advertising pays. With due acknowledgment of the fact that they have a pennant-contending club and also a pitcher who would be cheered even if he wore a Giants' uniform in Brooklyn, they will lay it on the line.

Naturally, Dizzy will not get the $40,000 which he is hurling into the contest right now along with a plethora (sure I looked it up) of bitter adjectives. Just as naturally he does not expect it any more than he expects anyone to take seriously the harsh words he has been saying about his battery mate, Virgil Davis, Esq.

Cleveland May Inherit Big-Time Hockey Team

Cleveland seems definitely to be the town to inherit the big-time hockey franchise which Les Canadiens will surrender after the present season. Al Sutphin, who will give up his Cleveland Falcon, International league, hold-ings, is to put up the dough. He will operate a farm team in Rochester. . . . San Jose, Calif., will send 39 of its citizens into professional baseball this year. . . . In the future there will be a close connection between the management of Aldo Spoldi and that of Cleto Locatelli. . . . Pedro Montanez (just to get all this lightweight business attended to at once) has two self-appointed bodyguards, recruited from the ranks of his Puerto Rican followers.

One of England's most promising fighters is a nineteen-year-old featherweight who gets around quite nimbly in spite of the fact that he has a club foot. He hits hard, thinks fast and (no kidding) his name is Al Capone. . . . Although this is only his second season in big-time hockey Bill Miller, Les Canadiens forward, already is rated as one of the game's smartest players.

Dizzy Dean.

SINCE it is probable that the true purpose of sports is to permit customers and contestants to release pent-up emotions, I often gaze with wonder upon the Joe Louises, the Hank Leibers and the Glenn Cunninghams. How these eminent sporting gentlemen—popularly and properly labeled as "Dead Pans"—manage to get away with it is a problem that well could interest any student of box office appeal.

Yet they do get away with it and, indeed, those faces which never have twitched a muscle even at the tightest of moments, have perhaps come to an important reason for their owners' eminence.

No doubt the average fan, accustomed to running through all the emotions in the course of a day, always will love the mobile-mugged Babe Ruths better because he can understand them better. But this very element of difference also causes him to stare in fascination at the celebrities who are as unblinking while slashing an opponent to ribbons as while nibbling a crumpet.

Strangely enough, in view of the general belief concerning the feminine temperaments, women athletes seem to assay a higher percentage of dead pans than do the men. There are moments when certain little twists or twinges of their bodies indicate their opinions rather freely, but the faces of Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, Miss Helen Jacobs, Miss Jane Sharp, Miss Norma Taubele and Miss Josephine Cruickshank remain as calm in victory as in defeat.

Recalling "Dead Pan" of Helen Wills Moody

Miss Moody, who refused even to look at Miss Jacobs while shaking hands for the benefit of the photographers at Sea Bright one year, is perhaps the most famed of those dead pans. Yet there is the distressing case of Miss Taubele, who looks so sad during a match that she feels that way before it is over and so bursts into tears when she loses. Also there is the misfortune of Miss Cruickshank.

Just as Miss Virginia Van Wie of the golf tournament is a vastly different person from the young lady who is known to her friends as Gino Van Wie, Miss Cruickshank seems to have two personalities. So, in those very cheerful moments away from the courts, she regrets that sober face she always displays in competition.

This regret—shared by some other contestants who feel that if they could warm the sympathy of the crowd the tempo of their play would be speeded in time with the applause—is on the red ink side of the dead pan ledger. On the other side the absolute control over nerves and muscles enjoyed by a Paavo Nurmi or a Bill Carr, though, had a most important part in making them the great runners that they were. Oblivious to all outside influences, they could pace themselves through all those split seconds of action and reaction which make records.

Occasionally great stone faces are useful for purposes of the moment, although not a usual part of the athlete's equipment. For instance, there is the "dummy" play in basketball, where a man stays close to the basket, looks unconcerned and endeavors to lure his opponent into a false sense of security. Then a pass is thrown to him, he puts up his hands to catch the ball at the last possible moment and—if he is such an adept at the play as Nat Holman, Marty Friedman, Max Posnak or Moe Spahn—scores a field goal.

Still this variety of dead panning is perhaps as far apart from the regular article as was one of the more celebrated exploits of Silent Jack Richardson. Having been presented by Harry Sinclair with a horse named Bruns, Mr. Richardson let every one believe that this was just the sort of horse that should be given away. Then, on the proper day and at the proper odds, which were 30 to 1, Bruns won at Empire City.

Perhaps Max Baer's scowls, grimaces and smirks attracted undue attention because there have been so many dead-panned boxers. Firpo never smiled. His eyes were wide open and he stared coldly. Jeffries' face seldom changed from a frown. Willard's eyes glared out of a face that might have been carved from wood. In spite of the reported emotionalism of their race it cannot be recalled that Peter Jackson or Jack McVey, very good negro fighters, ever wore other than the same stolid look that marks Louis.

Not in the box score:

Jack Dempsey and the Hearst A. C. are making faces at one another because the former heavyweight champion is muscling in on the fight promoting gag. . . . Monk Meyer, army's 145-pound backfield star, refuses to take a bath during the four days immediately preceding a football game. Fears that the water may weaken him. . . . At the more conservative Yale the football cases are prohibited from bathing on Fridays during the season. Same reason.

If you are making book on the Olympic basketball eliminations to be held at Madison Square Garden in April don't overlook Greeley State. The team is undefeated in the Rocky Mountain conference. . . . Ralph Hurtado of Panama, who claims that his ancestors were Indians, fought his first fight bare-footed. He never goes out doors when it is snowing.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for March 15 JESUS TEACHES HIS DISCIPLES TO PRAY

LESSON TEXT—Luke 11:1-13. GOLDEN TEXT—If we ask anything according to his will, he heareth us.—I John 5:14.

PRIMARY TOPIC—When We Pray. JUNIOR TOPIC—Teach Us to Pray. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Jesus Says About Prayer. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Why Should We Pray?

Prayer is a matter which ought to be of great concern to every believer, for, "The Lord is nigh unto all them that call upon him, to all that call upon him in truth. He will fulfill the desire of them that fear him; he also will hear their cry, and will save them" (Ps. 145:18, 19). There was something about the praying of Jesus that so impressed the disciples that they requested him to teach them to pray (Luke 11:1). May everyone of us enroll at once in the school of prayer with Christ as our Teacher. In response to the disciples' request, Jesus set forth the following principles of prayer.

I. The Right Relationship of the One Praying (v. 2).

1. Filial—"Father." The suppliant in prayer must be a child of God. God's gifts and blessings are for his children. This relationship can only be entered into through regeneration. Not all men have a right to say, "Our Father," when addressing God. Only those who are children of God by faith in Jesus Christ can so address him.

2. Fraternal—"Our Father." God has many children. His children are bound up together in nature and interests. Even in our secret prayer we should address him as "Our Father," which is a recognition of the interest of others alongside of ours.

II. The Right Attitude in Prayer (v. 2).

1. Reverent adoration—"Hallowed be thy name." As children we have certain rights and privileges, yet holy reverence becomes us.

2. Loyalty—"Thy kingdom come." When praying to God we should come with a spirit of loyalty which cries out, "Thy kingdom come." We should not only receive him as the Lord of our lives, but should loyally labor with him in inducing others to submit to him.

3. Submission—"Thy will be done." We should have no will of our own regarding the rule of God. We should let him direct us in all things.

III. The Right Spirit in Prayer (vv. 3-8).

1. Dependent faith—"Give us this day our daily bread" (v. 3). We should realize that not only bread, but life itself is ours to enjoy because of him and he is able to do for us "exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think."

2. Penitence and love—"Forgive us our debts" (v. 4). We should come to him realizing that we have sinned, and cry out to him for forgiveness. Our heart should be so filled with love for others that we will forgive those who sin against us, as God has so willingly forgiven us.

3. Holiness and caution—"Lead us not into temptation" (v. 4). Because we are God's children, and realizing the depravity of our natures and the consequent tendency to practice that which displeases him, we should shrink from that which, if indulged in, would dishonor him, and earnestly cry unto him to lead us not into the place where we would likely fall.

4. Intercessory (vv. 5, 6). The man who asked for bread did not ask for himself, but for a friend. Prayer which pleases God is unselfish in its requests.

5. Perseverance (vv. 7, 8). Though the friend refused at first and offered excuses, because the one making the request would not take "No" for an answer, he arose from his bed and gave him as many as he needed. Prayer pleases God and gets results.

IV. Encouragement to Pray (vv. 9-12).

1. God's promise (vv. 9, 10). True prayer cannot fail of an answer, because God definitely promises that, "Every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened."

2. Example of an earthly father (vv. 11-13). No father will give a stone to his son who asked for bread, nor a serpent instead of a fish, nor a scorpion instead of an egg. God is infinitely more willing to answer the prayers of his children than earthly parents are to give good gifts to their children.

V. The True Goal of All Prayer (v. 13).

God's best gift is himself in the person of his Holy Spirit. All those who practice the principles which Jesus taught in this model prayer shall experience the blessing of the Holy Spirit.

An Inner Life

A man who has no inner life is the slave of his surroundings, as the barometer is the obedient servant of the air at rest, and the weathercock the humble servant of the air in motion.—H. F. Amiel.

Mercy

As freely as the firmament embraces the world, or the sun pours forth impartially his beams, so mercy must encircle both friend and foe.—Schiller.

Uncommon Sense

By John Blake © Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.

Man has attained an ascendancy on this earth because he reasons.

Of all the creatures on earth he alone is able to think consecutively.

I admit that many of his tribe reason a very little.

But, unless they are morons, they can use their reasoning faculty, and if they don't, they alone are to blame.

If you do not make use of your reasoning power, you have no one but yourself to answer for it.

In spite of the Declaration of Independence, I submit that all human beings are not born equal.

But they all have an equal chance to live and to learn and to think out their own problems.

Use that mind of yours. Keep it open. Keep it busy. Keep it active.

There is an old proverb to the effect that a man has two eyes and two ears, but only one tongue for a definite purpose.

Begin by learning to use your own language clearly and effectively. There is nothing that will help you more on your way up the ladder than the ability to use words well and clearly.

Cultivate as far as it is possible the acquaintance of men and women who think deeply and speak well.

Read as much and as widely as it is possible.

All the world's wisdom up to this time can be found in books.

You need not learn alone from your own experience.

The experience of others is yours to employ whenever you are willing to take the trouble.

Wrestle with your own problems before you apply for help from others.

Make the acquaintance, and if possible gain the regard of intelligent busy people, who have mastered their own problems, and are usually willing to be of help to others.

There is so much to be gained from life that it is a shame to neglect it. You may not leave the record of your achievement on the sands of time.

But you will at least get what there is to be got out of this life, and that is a great deal.

It is natural said a great American orator "to indulge in the illusions of hope."

"Illusions" was the right word.

Hope always is an illusion. Through all time it has functioned as does the will-o-the-wisp, that little dab of ignited marsh gas which you sometimes see moving over bogs if you go out in the night in the summer time.

The man who indulges in the illusions of hope will never be rich, or important, or even moderately successful.

He gambles with his life as a professional gambler plays his game, with the difference that the professional gambler knows he is going to win—for he operates an apparatus which can't lose, while the illusion holder is lucky if he ever wins at all.

It stands to reason that if you know your own business and practice it that you will have more chance of success than if you try too much some other fellow's game.

Yet there are thousands, probably millions of people in this country who imagine that they can by using some kind of a "system" get rich quickly and continue to keep the money rolling in.

The psychology of such people is curious.

Having no knowledge whatever of the stock market, they put their savings into it without consulting intelligent men in Wall Street, lose it, repine for a little while, and then when they get a little more money through hard work go through the same process again, and once more are stripped of all they have.

Back your hope with knowledge and experience and you stand a reasonable chance of succeeding in the enterprise in which you have embarked.

Back it on tips, or your own "hunch" that experience is not necessary to enable you successfully to play some other man's game, and you will soon be going to your friends for help which you ought not to be given and which in all probability you will not be given.

In gambling houses, in the brokers' rooms where tickers count out the hours, you will find dozens of forlorn and poor but always hopeful men—and sometimes women.

What they live on I don't know. But it cannot be anything substantial for they are a sad and disconsolate set of people.

Why should anybody think that a game that thousands of people have played unsuccessfully can be beaten by a lucky guess or two?

Why should they think that luck will go over the heads of many deserving but unfortunate people and single out the shoeing gambler for its capital prizes?

Crocheting a Fluffy, Lacy Afghan, to Be the Heirloom of Tomorrow

What more conducive to "forty winks" than this fluffy, lacy afghan! Its crocheted warmth will ward off the most treacherous draughts, its color brighten and gladden any room it adorns. A very simple pattern to follow, too. The stripes look like tiny daisies strung together, and are in a crochet stitch which busy hands and needle soon learn to do by heart. Lovely in three shades of one color, it is also effective with each stripe a different color.

In pattern 5254 you will find directions for making the afghan; an illustration of it and of the stitches used; material requirements, and color suggestions.

Woman Linguist Maintains Vow of Silence 25 Years

Anne Louise Reinzl, of Boston, could talk fluently in seven languages. But for more than 25 years she uttered not a single syllable of one of them to a living soul!

In 1910 she became a recluse, locking the door of her home to all visitors. Gas, electricity and water companies had to turn off supplies because she refused to admit their inspectors. Recently kindly neighbors grew anxious when she was not seen about. Police were called, battered down doors, found her lying on the floor with a fractured leg. She was rushed to a hospital, where she died, aged ninety.—Pearson's Weekly.

There Is No Appeal From Decisions of Moral Law

A man may have a legal right to take advantage of another. But he can never have a moral right to do it, and the moral law will decide against him every time with no appeal.

Human law has a limited range. Moral law conditions the universe, and no one, in the end, can escape from its decisions.

Firestone TIRES
RUN up to 28° COOLER

THIS IS WHY THEY GIVE YOU More Dependable Service AND SAVE YOU MONEY

Every truck operator knows that internal friction causes heat and heat is the greatest destroyer of tire life. The only way to counteract friction and heat is by Gum-Dipping, the Firestone patented process which soaks the cords in liquid rubber, saturating and coating each tiny cotton fiber and strand within the cord, counteracting friction and heat at their very source. As a result of this patented process, Firestone Tires run up to 28° cooler than tires built without Gum-Dipped Cords.

This is why Firestone Tires are used by thousands and thousands of truck operators from coast to coast, including the largest transportation fleets. These operators choose tires strictly on performance... they know that Firestone Tires give them more dependable service at lowest cost per mile. See your nearby Firestone Auto Supply and Service Store or Firestone Tire Dealer today and start reducing your operating costs.

FIRESTONE TIRES RUN COOLER

This scientific instrument accurately measures the heat generated in tires at high sustained speeds. Firestone Tires run up to 28° cooler than tires built without Gum-Dipped Cords—this means added strength, greater dependability and longer mileage.

School Notes

High School

The local speech contest was held in the high school building Wednesday evening, March 4. Robert Mark received first place with his oration entitled "Let Us Banish War." Betty Holland, who gave "Youth's Goal," and Philip Giroux, who gave "Military Preparedness," apparently tied for second place; but Betty Holland, having the greater number of high places, received the honor. Lucille DePotty won first place in declamations with Robert Ingersoll's speech, "Liberty of Man, Woman, and Child." Emma Sawyer, who gave Cretcher's "The Valley of Bones," was placed second. Of the extempore speakers, Jean Robinson won first place with her talk on "Roosevelt, the Peace-Maker," and George Laidlaw spoke on "The Significance of Our Water Power."

The Junior class entertained the Senior class at a bunco party last Friday evening. Jean Robinson and Ernest Ross had the highest scores. A lunch of sandwiches, cake and coffee (minus sugar) was served in the basement.

W. H. Barton of East Lansing, representative of the W. M. Welch & Company, called at the school on Tuesday. He called to find the approximate number of diplomas needed for the class of 1936, as the local Board of Education has a contract with his company for a quantity of diplomas, with the necessary number to be prepared and delivered each year.

There are but thirteen weeks more of school this year after the present week.

Some of the members of the Senior class expect to attend the Iosco County Normal during the ensuing school year.

Dr. Karl H. Reichenback of the American History department of the University of Michigan will lecture Friday, March 13, at two o'clock over W.J.R. This is one lecture in a series concerning critical moments in the lives of nations. This particular lecture is entitled, "The United States Enter Into Foreign Affairs."

No. 1 Continued from the First Page

the outlook for the Indians was still more dismal, the score then standing 15-6 in favor of Standish.

In the final chapter the huge throng of spectators witnessed one of the most thrilling struggles of the tourney; that of Standish trying to hold its lead and East Tawas attempting to overcome it, with the championship at stake. They also saw Pollard, Tawas forward who had thus far in the contest accounted for only one point, establish himself as the hero of the game in this period. After several minutes of play had elapsed Pollard snared a couple of beautiful shots from near mid-floor. This galvanized his mates into action and they strove frantically to "feed" the ball whenever possible to this lad who seemed their only hope in bringing them to the top. The way he came through left the crowd gaping with wonder. Altogether he accounted for 12 points in this quarter, which added to four more supplied by his mates, were enough to overcome and pass Standish before the final whistle blew. The snappy passwork and accurate shooting of the Indians in the last few minutes of the game had brought about the longed-for results in spectacular fashion. The game ended with the score 22 to 18 in favor of East Tawas high. Worthy of mention is the fact that in making 16 points in the last quarter the Indians failed to "cash in" on only one attempted shot and that one struck the ring before falling to the side. All the others were "pay-balls." Terming it "excellent shooting" would be a mild way to describe that kind of basket-tossing.

In the other class C games which took place during the three-day tourney Sterling eliminated Whittemore from the running Thursday night and Standish disposed of West Branch on Friday evening. Sterling was hard pressed by the Whittemore five but managed to eke out a 33-25 victory. A late period rally by Whittemore fell short of overcoming the comfortable lead built up by Sterling in the first part of the contest. Navidonski paced the victors with 13 points while Webster with 11 was high scorer for the losers. The strong Standish quintet met with little difficulty in turning back the West Branch squad, the score being 25 to 13. Scoring for both teams was quite evenly divided among the players.

PINCONNING WINS THRILLER TO COP IN CLASS D

Pinconning high school won the class D championship Saturday night by virtue of a 24-23 victory over Pinconning St. Michael. Pinconning was slow in starting, trailing St. Michael by 13-4 at half time, but a 13-point rally in the third frame swung the lead in their favor, 17-15. The last quarter contained many breathless moments when these two teams put everything they had into the struggle. As the score indicates, the outcome of the nip-and-tuck contest was uncertain until the final gong sounded.

To move into the finals Pinconning high tucked away two decisive victories, the first coming Thursday night at the expense of Alabaster. This game resulted in a 44-12 score. On Friday night the St. Joseph team of West Branch fell victim by a 34-10 count.

Pinconning St. Michael, on the other hand, met with a great deal more difficulty in reaching the title match. In the opening round St. Joseph of East Tawas, a team which had defeated St. Michael twice during the past season, forced the game into overtime when a last period rally tied the score at 23-23 at the end of the regular playing time. A free throw decided the contest in favor of St. Michael in the overtime period. Berthiaume was high point man for the victors with 11, while Reinke and Bird accounted for the majority of St. Joe's tallies. On Friday night St. Michael had somewhat of a breathing spell, conquering Prescott easily, 22-13.

STERLING SCHOOL IS FINE HOST TO TOURNAMENT

Sterling high school made a splendid host to the tournament in its new gymnasium and the many courtesies shown had a pleasing effect upon the large number of people attending the affair. This, coupled with the thrill-packed drama contained in the three days of competition, made this year's tourney an outstanding event. A considerable amount of praise is due Referees Cansfield of Albion, Templin of Sterling and Kraus of Oscoda for the excellent manner in which they handled the games.

East Tawas and Pinconning, the district champions, take part in their respective classes at the regional tournament in Mt. Pleasant this week end.
