LITTLE HOPE SEEN FOR EARLY U.S.-23 WIDENING

Local Delegation Confers With State Highway Commissioner

Murray D. Van Wagoner, state highway commissioner, told a Tawas City delegation Monday that he saw little hope for widening US-23 through this community before 1939.

The commissioner explained that present widening plans on this trunk-line are concentrated on the area between Bay City and Standish. The delegation, headed by Mayor J. A. B. Unger and including City Attorney H. R. Smith, Chas. Moeller and Eugene Bing, asked that US-23 be widened from the Tawas river bridge to the Tawas City-East Tawas city limits.

When Smith said he had heard reports that the present road "is breaking up," Commissioner Van Wagoner said an emergency would be "taken care of."

"We can't widen this road now but if the road is breaking up that is different. If the highway goes to pieces then it will have to be rebuilt."

The commissioner said he would make a personal inspection of US-23 at Tawas City sometime this year and determine if emergency action is needed.

"I don't think you fellows want any false promises about widening," he said. "Our present widening plans on US-23 involve the area between Bay City and Standish. That is about all we can visualize now and even that much is going to take some time."

"I don't see much hope for any widening before 1939. By that time US-23 ought to be improved as far north as the Straits. You will probably need the widening more then because there is certain to be an increase in traffic."

The delegation claimed that the highway at Tawas City is too narrow to accommodate parking and that no cross-street parking facilities are available.

Eighty Are Present At Mother-Daughter Banquet

At the Ladies Literary Society club rooms in East Tawas about eighty were present at the annual Mother and Daughter banquet. The Junior Club members were also guests.

The tables were decorated with sweet peas, green ribbons and lighted by candles, under the direction of Mrs. McCray, assisted by Mrs. Moss and Mrs. DeGrow, serving committee. Mrs. Kunze, club president, called the gathering to order, and a poem, "We Thank Thee," was recited by Carol-Rae Elliott as grace.

At the close of the dinner, Mrs. Gregory, chairman of the program committee, gave the address of welcome and introduced Mrs. Schreck, toastmistress, who presented the following program:

Piano Duet—Roberta Schreck and Adrienne DeGrow.
Toast to the Daughters—Mrs. Crescer.
Toasts to the Mothers—Mrs. Jewell.
Quartet, vocal—Carolyn Gregory, Miriam Gregory, Alice Latta and Edna Hill.
Reading—Lorraine DeGrow.
Musical Readings—Hettie Jean McKay; accompanist, Mrs. George Leslie.
Reading—Miss Turnbull.
Vocal Solo—Patricia Braddock.
Piano Solo—Mrs. Edwards.

Gable, Harlow and Loy Together For First Time

Jean Harlow became Clark Gable's secretary, and Myrna Loy, his wife, as cameras started turning on Hunt Stromberg's production of "Wife versus Secretary" at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which plays at the Family Theatre, East Tawas, on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, March 29, 30 and 31.

The new picture unites the three popular stars for the first time. Gable and Miss Loy having recently traveled from vacationing in opposite ends of the world—Santiago, Chile, and Budapest, Hungary—to join Miss Harlow.

The union of the famous trio brings to the screen Faith Baldwin's best-selling novel of the same title, which appeared serially in a national magazine. It tells the story of the dividing line separating a man's office from his home, with Gable, as the husband, facing the problem of choosing between the love of his wife, Myrna Loy, and his secretary, Jean Harlow.

In the supporting cast are May Robson, George Barbier, Hobart Cavanaugh, James Stewart, Tom Dugan and Gilbert Emery.

AGRICULTURAL AGENT DISCUSSES CARE OF LAMBS

Interest in the ewe flock should be continued although the lambs demand additional and increasing interests at this time of year.

As lambing time approaches the sheep barn should be cleaned, the floors limed and then rebedded with fresh straw. A few removable panels are highly desirable so as to construct individual pens for ewes with two or more lambs or with lambs that are weak and need individual attention the first few days of their life.

Every farmer may well afford to visit the sheep barn late at night and early in the morning at this particular season and if his assistance is needed it may mean the saving of several dollars worth of livestock. Many lambs that appear to be dead at birth may be saved by such artificial respiration methods as slapping the lamb's ribs with the hands, by blowing into the lamb's mouth, and by vigorously moving the front legs backward and forward. To revive chilled lambs use a warm water bath and massage, then wrap in a warm blanket or place in a box containing plenty of dry straw.

If a ewe with two or more lambs likes one and not the other, put both lambs in a warm box or barrel, taking them out to nurse at the same time. If she now does not own both, repeat the procedure until she likes both of them. When a ewe loses a lamb she should be given an orphan or one from a ewe that has more than she can properly feed.

As soon as the lambs are ten to fourteen days old they should have access to a creep in which a liberal supply of grain is available. One of the best grain combinations consists of equal parts of ground barley, ground oats, bran, and linseed oil meal. When the lambs are five or six weeks old the ground grain may gradually be replaced by whole grain and the proportion of linseed oil meal gradually decreased as the barley and oats are increased.

Select a bright clear day when the lambs are from seven to fourteen days old to dock and castrate them. Both operations may be done at the same time or they may be docked at one week and castrated a week later.

The lambs should be weaned at about four months of age by removing the ewes from the lambs so that the lambs will not be in strange quarters. A few days later transfer the lambs, if possible, to a better pasture or to a field of second cutting alfalfa. Grain should be continued and by all means supply an abundance of salt and fresh water. When the lambs reach the weight of 80 to 90 pounds they should be sorted out and sold so as to make more room for the smaller lambs and to conserve the extra feed which every farmer may well afford to leave upon his soil.

For additional information do not hesitate to get in touch with the County Agricultural Agent.

STABBING CASE GOES TO JURY THIS MORNING

Prosecution and Defense Summaries Are Finished

The case, "people of the state vs. Joseph Nixon and Calvin Roberts," in which Nixon and Roberts were charged with the stabbing of Jesse Shellenbarger, will be turned over to the jury this morning. The case began Wednesday morning in circuit court. Prosecuting Attorney John A. Stewart and attorneys for the defense, H. Read Smith and T. George Sternberg, completed their summaries to the jury at about eleven o'clock. Examination of the witnesses ended at three o'clock yesterday afternoon.

This case had a widespread interest throughout the county and at each session the court room was jammed with people. Senior classes from the several high schools in the county were interested spectators at Wednesday's session.

Shellenbarger was stabbed during the evening of February 11 at the door of Otto Rader's restaurant and in the garden at Hale. Shellenbarger, Nixon and Roberts had quarreled while in the restaurant. Apparently starting for home, the men engaged in a fight on the sidewalk. Shellenbarger did not realize until a few minutes later that he was stabbed. There were apparently no eyewitnesses to the stabbing. Shellenbarger's wounds proved serious and he has not fully recovered from the loss of blood.

DISCUSSIONS

Whittemore, Michigan
March 24, 1936
The Tawas Herald
Tawas City, Michigan

Dear Sirs:
In the figures given in last week's Herald no explanation was given as to how the money contributed by county and state was expended by the Isosco County Agricultural Society. In fairness to officers and directors it should be explained that the money paid by the county was used for new buildings, repairs, equipment, and premiums and the money paid by the state was a per cent of the premiums paid the year previous.

The buildings were better than most adjoining counties and were insured for seven thousand dollars and while the writer does not wish to tell anyone how to vote on the proposition and has the kindest feeling for the forest service, I cannot but think land might be found outside the fair grounds and the price offered seems very small.

Yours very truly,
Fred C. Latter.

Eastern States Devastated by Great Floods—Germany Condemned by League Council—President Asks Billion and Half for Relief.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union

STATES of the Central East and New England suffered severely from the almost unprecedented floods. Scores of lives were lost and the vast property damage cannot yet be estimated. At least 150,000 persons were made homeless. Conditions were worst in western Pennsylvania. The Monongahela and Allegheny rivers, uniting at Pittsburgh to form the Ohio, poured raging torrents down over the great industrial city, driving the people from their homes and places of business. The famous "Golden Triangle" between the rivers was completely inundated; transportation and communication systems were suspended and power plants were put out of commission so the city was plunged in darkness. The plight of the suburbs was equally bad.

Farther east, Johnstown was entirely flooded and the terror-stricken inhabitants fled from their homes, but the great Quemaoning dam was holding and the danger of a repetition of the disaster of 1889 seemed to be passing. Dozens of cities and towns along the Susquehanna and its tributaries were under water, and in New York the Mohawk, Hudson, Schuylkill and Delaware rivers were out of their banks and rapidly rising. The Potomac, too, became a raging flood and in Washington an army of men was working feverishly to save the buildings and monuments in the flatlands.

Ten thousand persons were rendered homeless in the New England states and about a score lost their lives. The emergency there was greatest in the valley of the Connecticut river. Many cities were cut off from rail transportation and also were without light and power.

American Red Cross rose to the emergency, as always, mobilizing its forces to relieve the suffering. Admiral Cary T. Grayson, its national head, issued an appeal for a fund of $3,000,000. President Roosevelt also called for this amount in a proclamation. Secretary of War Dern was appointed emergency flood relief head by the President and immediately ordered the generals commanding six corps areas of the army to extend full aid for prevention of loss of life and destruction of property.

Work Relief Administrator Harry Hopkins gave blanket authority to all WPA officials to employ their workers in any way necessary in rescue work and in strengthening levees.

The United States Coast Guard sent many power launches, provisioned and manned, from the Chicago area to help in the relief work at various points. To prevent robbery and vandalism National Guardsmen were on the job at Pittsburgh and other places.

GERMANY was forced to denounce the Locarno pact because the Franco-Russian mutual assistance treaty was directed only against the reich and ranged 275,000,000 people against it. That is what Joachim von Ribbentrop, Hitler's adviser on foreign affairs, told the council of the League of Nations when it met in London to pass on the complaint of France and Belgium that Germany had violated both the Locarno pact and the Versailles treaty by remilitarizing the Rhineland.

Nevertheless, the council by unanimous vote condemned Germany as a violator of both treaties. How she shall be punished, if at all, remained to be determined. France and all her allies wanted the imposition of sanctions; Italy could not be brought to favor that, being herself subjected to such penalties; Great Britain, striving to preserve the peace, sought some middle way out of the dilemma.

Representatives of Britain, France, Belgium and Italy devised a plan which provides for a conference of world nations to draft economic, disarmament, and security plans. This plan also provides that Germany, in the meantime, would agree not to fortify the Rhineland and, pending a new agreement with Germany, Britain would guarantee France's security.

The French especially liked this because it amounted to a military defensive alliance with Britain, but they did not believe it would be accepted by Germany.

Von Ribbentrop, accompanied by an imposing lot of experts and secretaries, was sent by Hitler at the request of the council. The reichsfuehrer had consented to be relapsed after British Foreign Secretary Eden assured him he would do his best to persuade France and Belgium to consider Hitler's new security plans after Germany had been formally condemned for its action in the Rhineland.

In his address before the council Von Ribbentrop emphatically asserted that France by approaching Soviet Russia in concluding "what really was a military alliance," did not respect the Locarno treaty. And the Soviet-Czechoslovakian agreement also, he declared, constituted a further danger to the reich.

France's proposal to submit the Franco-Russian treaty to The Hague court was said by a spokesman for the German delegation to be futile and useless. He also said the plan suggested by the English, to police the Rhineland zone with an international force, was "absolutely unacceptable."

A third provision, for drawing up a system of mutual guaranties among the Locarno powers, to operate in case of an attack, the spokesman said, was "unnecessary because Germany has no intention of crossing her frontiers." None of the Germans, however, even intimated that Hitler would withdraw any of his troops from the Rhineland.

Hitler was continuing his speech-making tour in Germany. At Koenigsberg he said:

"For once a single man comes forth in Europe behind whom stands a whole nation. He extends his hand to other nations. Whoever dares reject this, my hand, behind which 69,000,000 people are united, must bear responsibility in the eyes of history. I have been the herald of the German people for more than three years. I am now the herald for peace in Europe."

SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE WALLACE announced the establishment of five regions for administration of soil conservation and domestic allotment act, substitute for the invalid AAA. H. R. Tolley, administrator of the new plan, said the department already has begun a field service to administer the program in various states. As under the AAA, the leading part within the states is to be played by the farmers' county and community committees.

Mr. Wallace also directed discontinuance of the four commodity divisions whose work of liquidating AAA production control programs will be taken over by the regional directors. The order leaves intact other administrative units of the AAA, such as the division of marketing and marketing agreements, division of program planning, and the division of the consumers' counsel.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT packed up his fishing tackle and started South for his annual angling cruise, this time on the new Presidential boat, the Potomac. He made a brief stop at Winter Park, Fla., where he received an honorary degree from Rollins college. His plan was then to board the Potomac and spend about two weeks on his old fishing grounds off the Florida coast.

Mr. Roosevelt had invited as his fishing companions his eldest son, James; an uncle, Frederick A. Delano, and three mates of his fishing cruise of last fall, Capt. Wilson Brown, United States navy, and Col. Edwin M. Watson, United States army, his military aides, and Capt. Ross T. McIntire, United States navy, White House physician.

SEIZURE of private telegrams by the Black committee has resulted in a fierce warfare of words between John J. McSwain of South Carolina, chairman of the house committee on military affairs, and William Randolph Hearst, newspaper publisher. Senator Black withdrew the subpoena on the Western Union company in the Hearst case but first made public what purported to be a copy of a telegram from the publisher to one of his editorial writers in which McSwain was called "a Communist in spirit and a traitor in effect." McSwain promptly read this in the house and then vigorously and eloquently defended himself and denounced Hearst.

The publisher retorted with an open letter to his editorial writer in which he said:

"McSwain is a politician of the lower order, and his extreme radical pacifism is a danger to the peace and protection of the nation, and to the safety of the men, women and children who constitute the American people."

ONE and one-half billion dollars will be needed to carry the Works Progress administration through the coming fiscal year, according to President Roosevelt's figuring. Therefore he asked congress to appropriate that sum. He thought it would be sufficient to care for the destitute unemployed, together with $1,000,000,000 in unexpended previous appropriations and the $600,000,000 carried in the budget for the civilian conservation corps and various public works.

Limitation of federal relief expenditures to this figure, however, is dependent upon re-employment of substantial numbers of the idle by private industry, the President said.

As the President's message was presented, Speaker Joseph W. Byrns revealed that Mr. Roosevelt had advised his leaders that any increase in the appropriation over his estimates must be accompanied by new taxes to provide revenues to cover the added cost.

COMPROMISE brought to an end the two weeks' strike of building service workers in New York and thousands of elevator operators and other employees returned to their jobs in some 2,400 apartment houses and business structures. The settlement provided for immediate re-employment of all strikers and arbitration of wages and hours.

RUSH D. HOLT, the young Democratic senator from West Virginia, gave notice that he would continue to hammer at the Works Progress administration until a senate investigation was ordered. He demanded an inquiry into all relief activities under charge of Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, and other agencies affecting relief, the RFC, CWA, and FERA.

In reply to some of the charges made, Mr. Hopkins issued this bulletin:

"No employee of WPA is required to make any contribution to any political party. No WPA employee's job will be in jeopardy because of failure to make such contribution.

"No employee of the WPA shall at any time solicit contributions for any political party, and evidence of such solicitation will be cause for immediate discharge. The question whether or not to contribute to any political party is a matter entirely for the voluntary decision of employees.

"No person will be employed or discharged on the ground of his support or non-support of any candidate."

SINCE the recent elections in Spain the riots staged by the leftists have been growing more vicious daily, and after disorders at Logrono in which a number of persons were killed the Spanish army was aroused to vigorous protest. Premier Manuel Azana was told by the officers that unless his new left government adopted measures to stop the widespread violence the army would take the main tenance of order into its own hands. Gen. Carlos Masquelet, minister of war, was said to be in sympathy with the army's demand.

Azana held a heated conference with Francisco Largo Caballero, president of the Socialist party and is said to have told him that he believed revolutionary Socialists were responsible for most of the disorders, demanding that the violence cease immediately. Largo insisted that the Socialists be permitted to demonstrate, but finally gave in to the premier and issued orders to all Socialists to behave themselves.

Despite strict censorship imposed by the governor of Logrono it was learned that incendiaries there set fire to six convents and churches, four right-center and a richest newspaper, and then attacked the army barracks, attempting to seize artillery.

THE Treasury reported that income tax collections for the first 16 days March amounted to $281,758,032, or a gain of 46.4 per cent over the $192,429,413 in the corresponding period of last year. Practically all collection districts registered an increase.

Since the first of the year, the Treasury said, $361,428,990 has been collected on the income tax, an increase of 45.6 per cent over the $248,060,132 gathered in for the same period of 1935.

ELEUTHERIOS VENIZELOS, probably the greatest of latter-day Greek statesmen, died in Paris, where he was in self-imposed exile, following an attack of grippe. He was seventy-two years old.

Venizelos, former premier of Greece, fled from the island of Crete last March after a revolt he headed collapsed. He was tried and sentenced to death, but King George after his recall offered him amnesty. Venizelos, however, refused to return, declaring "Greece will never see me again." He was an ardent republican and denounced the restoration of the monarchy.

SECRETARY OF LABOR PERKINS was accused of harboring hundreds of deportable criminal and radical aliens in the United States by Senator Robert R. Reynolds of North Carolina when he introduced a resolution calling upon the Labor department to furnish information allegedly withheld from congress.

Senator Reynolds' resolution said that request had been made of Labor department officials for information concerning "in excess of 2,600 aliens in the United States known to and allowed by the Department of Labor to remain in the United States, although subject to deportation." The request, the resolution stated, was refused.

PROCEEDING with its great rearmament program, the British government has named Sir Thomas Inskip, attorney general since 1932, to be the co-ordinator of the entire scheme, giving him a newly created cabinet post. This selection by Prime Minister Baldwin was a surprise. It had been thought the place might go to Winston Churchill, Neville Chamberlain, Alfred Duff Cooper or Sir Samuel Hoare.

Sir Thomas is known as an "anti-linguist," is sixty years old and always is calm and unruffled in the house of commons or at the bar. It will be his duty as defense co-ordinating minister to synchronize activities of the army, navy, and air services.

Marquette—A safety school plan which has reduced accidents involving CCC trucks in the Upper Peninsula to one for each 350,000 miles traveled may be adopted for CCC camps throughout the United States. The 8,000 CCC youths in the Upper Peninsula camps are required to attend classes in traffic safety. Nine months ago, the accident rate for the 200 CCC trucks was one for each 12,000 miles. Not only has that rate been reduced, but there was neither a fatality nor an injury chargeable to a CCC truck last year.

Lansing—The State Liquor Control Commission states that its net sales in February totaled $2,251,756, an increase of $255,560 over January.

Jackson—When fire destroyed a barn and its contents, 50 sheep and scores of turkeys and chickens were burned to death on the farm of Fremont Rappleye, near Pleasant Lake.

Sturgis—Teachers in Sturgis schools will receive a 26 per cent increase in salaries next year, under a $54,000 budget approved by the board of education. Janitors' salaries were raised 20 per cent.

Negaunee—Like the man who hung up an ostrich egg as inspiration for his chickens, the City of Negaunee is hanging up its own ostrich egg for the rest of Michigan. The 1935 taxes amounted to $366,574.10, and all but $5,071.01, or 1.9 per cent has been paid.

Grand Rapids—Grand Rapids will have to raise $475,000 for relief, direct and indirect, for the fiscal year 1936-37. There are now 1,829 persons listed as unemployables on direct relief rolls. Direct relief will require $300,000, and $175,000 is needed for work projects.

Lansing—A bulldog went to jail here because he blew the horn in his owner's automobile. After a half-hour of steady horn blowing, police found the dog had planted a forefoot on the horn button and left it there. The owner had left the dog in the car while he went shopping.

Rochester—Rochester claims to have the longest concrete highway bridge in the State. It is 816 feet long. A longer bridge of 846 feet connects Michigan and Wisconsin at Menominee, but part of it is in Wisconsin. Other large bridges at Benton Harbor and over the Manistee River in Manistee County are 671 and 614 feet long, respectively.

Holland—Word was received here that the Council of Hope College has been bequeathed $20,000 and one-third of the residuary estate of the late Miss Mary Bussing, of New York. The Western Theological Seminary, of Holland, receives one-third of the residue. Miss Bussing, who died in New York Nov. 15, left $319,000 in specific cash legacies by her will.

Port Huron—The Kiwanis Club of Port Huron, has asked the international organization to approve a movement to have the Postoffice Department issue a stamp to commemorate more than a century of peace along the Canadian border. A miniature reproduction of the boundary plaques erected on the border by Kiwanis clubs is suggested for the stamps.

Muskegon—The Fjell Line, Norwegian steamship company has announced that direct passenger service between Great Lakes ports and Europe would be inaugurated this spring. Three steamers with Passenger accommodations will offer fortnightly service to London, Rotterdam, Antwerp, Hamburg and other ports. The company's lake and ocean freight service will be continued.

Grand Rapids—Kent County had 18,000 more acres under cultivation in 1934 than in 1929. Federal farm census figures reveal. Just over 200,000 acres of crops were harvested in 1934. In addition, 1,198 farms were gained during the five-year period. Production of corn, hay, oats and Irish potatoes increased in the five years, three times as many potatoes being harvested in '34 as in '29.

Lansing—Employment and payrolls in Michigan industries receded slightly during February but employment still remained above the comparative 1935 period, the Department of Labor and Industry reported. Employment last month was 4 per cent higher than in the same period last year but 2 per cent under January. Payrolls were 10.5 per cent under January and 4 per cent under February, 1935.

Port Huron—Plans for a proposed bridge across the St. Clair River from Port Huron to Sarnia were again delayed by word from the Government that it intended to build an extra boat channel at Point Edward, where the Canadian termination of the bridge is to be. The Army Board of Engineers has demanded that the bridge be heightened and the approaches lengthened to provide clearance for the channel.

Lansing—State relief officials reported the first decrease of welfare case loads of the winter. Where 78,279 resident families were on relief at the end of February, only 76,823 were listed a week later. Dr. William Haber, SERA administrator, said the decrease probably came because of further WPA employment. "Michigan's relief load apparently is now stabilized," he said. "For five weeks it has been between 74,000 and 78,000 families."

Manistee—The Arcadia & Betsy River Railroad, perhaps the shortest road in Michigan and butt of many an anecdote during its declining years will pass into history this spring when the rails will be ripped up and the locomotives and other equipment sold. The railroad runs from Arcadia to Henry and comprises 17 miles of straight track and two miles of siding. This will yield about 2,000 tons of steel rails, some of which will be suitable for relaying on lines of light traffic. There are two locomotives to be sold.

Jackson—A bass and bluegill rearing pond covering 17 acres has been approved by the Federal Government. The pond will be located south of Portage Lake.

Lansing—The State Highway Department has announced that approximately $50,000 would be spent this year for the development of 12 road-side parks. All will be located at springs, and will have rustic shelter houses and tables.

Ithaca—Clayton Minaker is exhibiting a lemon weighing 15 ounces which he grew in his home. It is 12½ inches in circumference. The lemon tree is 17 years old, and has borne single lemons a number of times, but this time it had two lemons at once, the other being but slightly smaller.

Munising—For the third time in the present generation, two local families have been united by marriage. Ralph Cleary married Helen Sont in Duluth in 1919 and six years later John Cleary and Cathryn Sont were wed. The latest couple is Florence M. Sont and George H. Cleary married this month.

Escanaba—An entire section of land has been added to the Escanaba River Tract as a result of its purchase by the State Conservation Commission out of the $1.50 deer license fund. Included in the section is a mile and a half of frontage on which a great deal of improvement work has been completed by CCC crews.

Kalamazoo—Lyman Soules, twenty-year-old WPA worker in the Kalamazoo Art Museum, was awarded first place in the local Artists' Exhibition by vote of the exhibiting artists for a piece of sculpture called "Rhythm." Soules, a Kalamazoo youth, studied sculpture in Chicago on a Kalamazoo Institute of Arts scholarship.

Detroit—Natural gas for Detroit consumers is drawing nearer. A contract has been awarded by the Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line Co., of Kansas City, for compressor units, which will force the gas from the Texas Panhandle to Detroit. A pipe line already exists as far as Indianapolis, but 235 miles must be built at a cost to the City of $16,000,000.

Hazel Park—Oakland County health officers have warned Hazel Park residents to guard against rats which are being forced to forage for food in homes because the severe winter has cut off food supplies elsewhere. It was reported that a man and a year-old boy have already been bitten while asleep. Both victims received Pasteur treatments.

Coldwater—Patrolman Aaron Baker of Coldwater swam 12 feet under water and escaped after breaking through the ice while fishing in Cemetery Lake near here. He bumped into a submerged log while groping through the water beneath the ice sheet and used the log to break to freedom. He was wearing a fur overcoat when he plunged in.

An Arbor—Appointment of Dr. Kasimir Falans, of the University of Munich, as professor of general and physical chemistry at the University of Michigan, has been announced. Dr. Frajans, who will come here in September, for the last 10 years has been professor of physical chemistry and director of the physicochemical institute of the University of Munich.

Ludington—The highway department has informed the Chamber of Commerce that construction of M-116 through Ludington State Park will be cancelled and the project withdrawn. The action follows the National Park Service order that further development of the State park would cease April 1 if M-116, linking Ludington and Manistee, were routed along Lake Michigan through the park.

Lansing—The national children's bureau has announced approval of individual state plans for crippled children's services under the Social Security act. States were allotted the following Federal grants for the last two months of the quarter ending March 31: Alabama, $7,138.48; Kentucky, $9,008.04; Maine, $4,809.36; Michigan, $12,392.10; Vermont, $2,666; Wyoming, $3,772.92.

Olivet—Quadruplet calves have been born to a registered Holstein cow on the T. B. Oxy farm in Lee Township, all normal in every respect. Their total weight is 196 pounds, the largest weighing 51 pounds, the smallest 43. Three are females and all are marked with the black and white of the Holstein pattern. The mother is a five-year-old Holstein and is the property of Hugh Oxy, 17, son of the farm's owner.

Lansing—The State Liquor Control Commission recently announced a price reduction of approximately one-third on nearly all of its stock of Canadian and domestic wines. The Commission, which now handles only wine of more than 16 per cent alcohol, has about 12,000 cases and 122 brands of wine in stock. Only 12 Canadian and domestic brands will not be affected by the price reduction. Of the 122 brands, 110 are American.

Manistee—The Arcadia & Betsy River Railroad, perhaps the shortest road in Michigan and butt of many an anecdote during its declining years will pass into history this spring when the rails will be ripped up and the locomotives and other equipment sold. The railroad runs from Arcadia to Henry and comprises 17 miles of straight track and two miles of siding. This will yield about 2,000 tons of steel rails, some of which will be suitable for relaying on lines of light traffic. There are two locomotives to be sold.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted By WILLIAM BRUCKART

NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington. — Overshadowing all else in the national capital at this writing is the controversy that is boiling and surging around the head of Alabama's Democratic Senator Black, who is the chairman of the senate's lobby investigating committee. As an offshoot of this controversy, the federal communications commission is in water much too hot for bathing and it begins to appear that when the steam blows off the communications commission is likely to be a thoroughly discredited federal agency because of the part it played in Senator Black's unprecedented seizure of private telegrams from the Western Union and Postal Telegraph companies.

Need Curb on Inquiries

Speaking generally, it has been seldom that a United States senator has ever attempted to assert the authority that Senator Black has used and it is equally unprecedented that a federal agency has gone to the extremes that characterized the action of the communications commission in connection with the seizure of the messages.

But some good may come from the police court prosecution tactics employed by Senator Black and some good may come from the accusations leveled at the communications commission because that body helped Senator Black carry out his plans.

The country-wide indignation that has arisen from Senator Black's usurpation of power has brought to the front a question that needs public attention and needs it badly.

I refer, in this connection, to the steadily expanding efforts of congressional investigators, especially senatorial investigators, to take over, as their own, powers that always have been regarded as reserved exclusively to the courts. The consensus among Washington observers certainly is that the legislative inquiries have developed to a point where the most humble requirements of justice have been and are being completely ignored. Whether they are so intended, these inquiries, and this includes investigations conducted by committees not only of congress but of state legislatures and even city councils, are approaching the point where they are almost tyrannical.

It goes without saying, then, that the time has arrived for citizens to assert themselves. These inquiries will not proceed when the elected legislators, state or national, learn that the people do not approve of such high-handed tactics.

In order to have an understanding of the latest of these escapades, it is necessary to review briefly what has happened in the case of the senate lobby investigating committee. Almost a year ago the committee sought the aid of the federal communications commission in law for investigating the business of the telegraph companies. Senator Black issued a broad subpoena, directing the telegraph companies to make available any and all messages his committee desired. Communications commission agents then went into the telegraph company files, read everything they could find and made copies of all of the messages which those agents, under guidance of Black investigators, thought would be helpful to the Black committee in exposing operations of private individuals.

The purpose of this, as outlined by Senator Black, was to locate clues to the machinations of business interests who were seeking passage or defeat for legislation pending in congress. The Alabama senator wanted to "show up" lobbyists. He contended and has maintained consistently that "these malefactors of great wealth" could not accomplish any influence in congress unless it were done secretly and "in the dark."

In other words, Senator Black persuaded members of the communications commission to help him in his fishing expedition. He persuaded that organization that it should become a party to an unprecedented effort designed as a dragnet, a movement to snear anybody and everybody who had used telegraphic service.

The Black plan was carried out in secret. Senders and receivers of messages which those agents coped knew nothing about it. The operation was just as much "in the dark" as any of the lobbying about which Senator Black complained, even more so. It was only by accident that the facts became known but when they did become known, the lid was promptly blown off.

The end is not yet, nor is it even in sight. One federal judge has issued a restraining order against such tactics and a half dozen other applications for similar orders are pending. Undoubtedly, the questions, whatever the rulings may be, will find their way eventually to the Supreme court of the United States.

The senate itself is looking into the situation. It has, by resolution, asked the federal communications commission to make a report stating the facts and by what authority it acted.

So there is much hubbub about the whole thing and if one may judge from the line of conversation generally heard around Washington, Senator Black is on the hot spot, and the spot thus far has shown no indications of entering a cooling stage.

Senate investigations long have been considered by many people as a modus operandi that creak with unfairness. Unbiased observers frequently have criticized them because of the methods employed. It seems absolutely necessary that the senate should have power to call witnesses, to ask legitimate and proper questions and to force answers. If it is going to enact legislation to correct evils, it must be equipped with such powers. But the point is that in seeking such information, the senate has consistently permitted its committees to act in a fashion that can be described by no other word than outrageous. I have watched them over a period of nearly twenty years and seldom, if ever, has there been an important investigation that did not degenerate sooner or later into a condition that savored of police court practices.

Respectable citizens have been subpoenaed, have gone before the committees willing to tell their complete story, anxious to co-operate and have found themselves treated as outlaws and criminals. This situation has become so prevalent in senate investigations that when any citizen is subpoenaed to appear before a senate investigation these days, his neighbors and friends begin to ask each other what crookedness is involved. In other words, the psychology of the senate investigation, as it has developed through the last fifteen or twenty years, has become one that reverses the constitutional right of an individual that he is innocent until he is proved guilty.

For several years, there has been a bill pending in congress designed to prevent, or at least reduce, lynchings. The theory back of it is that many times innocent persons have been lynched and that every one has a right to a trial by jury in a properly constituted court. Over across the Atlantic ocean, dictators have operated and have employed the "blood purge," the summary death sentence or the execution without granting the accused the right of defense. Undoubtedly some persons guilty of murder or rape have been lynched; undoubtedly the "blood purge" by the Nazi rulers destroyed some bad characters and undoubtedly the summary executions by the Soviet or the Fascists of Italy have provided death for individuals who were festering sores to humanity, but there can be no doubt that in the case of the lynchings or in the case of the "blood purge" or the summary executions, many innocent persons have had their lives snuffed out.

So it is with senate investigations. Undoubtedly they have uncovered some dirty crooked dealings. Undoubtedly they have brought to public attention activities and conditions that ought to have been exposed. Yet, the fact remains that nearly all of our people are decent people, law abiding and self-respecting. And when senate investigations go beyond proper limits they approach, if they do not wholly become, tyranny.

In defense of Senator Black's action in the lobby investigation, I think it can fairly be said that he is not wholly to blame if he has gone further than any other in the program of inquiry and prosecution upon which he has launched. Little by little, bit by bit, the senate has arrogated to itself authority hitherto not used by it. Little by little, it has encroached upon what many believe to be the jurisdiction of the courts and in a like manner it has taken unto itself powers hitherto supposed to have been exclusively reserved to the executive department of government.

It would seem, then, that if other senate committees had established the precedent, Senator Black could properly use the same methods. The trouble in his case is that he did not stop at limits previously set, discreditable as those limits were, but went beyond them.

To repeat, there is every indication that some good will come out of this circumstance. Important men and brilliant lawyers and great organizations like the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, the National Association of Manufacturers and the American Liberty league have taken note of the steadily expanding power claimed by the senate. This means that the questions involved will get into the courts. It is to be hoped that they will be presented to the courts in such a manner that the questions may be finally and lastingly answered, that the powers of the legislators may be delimited and that a definite expression may come from the judiciary that will determine whether members of the house and the senate can serve at once as legislators, judges and prosecutors.

Hello, Everybody!

"Death Rides the Waves"

By FLOYD GIBBONS
Famous Headline Hunter.

DID you ever notice, boys and girls, that in all the stories you read about shipwrecks and storms at sea you never seem to hear anything about the fellows who get the worst of it? I mean the boys down below decks in the engine room.

Harry Helgesen of Brooklyn, N. Y., tells us about what the "black gang" is up against in a storm at sea. He ought to know, too. Harry is a licensed marine engineer in steam and Diesel.

Harry's big thrill came when he was assistant engineer on the auxiliary steam yacht Ulvira on a hard luck cruise in the Atlantic. The cruise started from Brooklyn for southern waters on February 8, 1934, but they never got very far south. The bad luck started the very first day, Harry says, when the ship grounded on Roamer's shoals in the channel. The crew of amateur and professional sailors finally got her afloat again and the ship came back to port and went into dry-dock for inspection. The hull was found O. K., but they had lost a couple of days.

When the Sea Kicks Up There Really Is a Mess.

The next start was made in a snow flurry and everything went fine until they got to the open sea. Once there the sails were run up and the engines cut off. Down in the engine room the "black gang" was getting things ship-shape. Now when an auxiliary yacht is under sail things are generally easy for the boys under decks, but just as they were about to bank the fires, Harry says, the chief mate came down and said they were in for "a bit of a blow."

And a "bit of a blow" was putting it mildly. Wham! a storm from the north slapped the Ulvira with a broadside that nearly turned her over. In a second all was busy as a beehive in the engine room. "Full steam ahead" came the order from the bridge, and Harry and his gang went into action.

Death Signs on the Ulvira's Cruise.

Harry ran up on deck to get the smoke stack hoisted. The stack had been let down when the sails were run up and they needed more draft. On deck all was confusion. A boom had snapped under the strain of the gale and the sail and boom were hanging over the side and into the water like a sea anchor. And that wasn't all.

Hubert Kuechenmeister, a young Northwestern university student and amateur sailor, had been swept overboard. The huge waves breaking over the rail made rescue impossible. Death had signed on the cruise of the Ulvira!

Harry got his stack up and hurried down the ladder to his station. What he had seen on deck wasn't very encouraging, but his job was below decks, and he went to it. Those engines had to get going or the boat and all on it would be lost.

The engine room by now was a mess. The boat was pitching heavily, Harry says, and the huge seas shipped at each pitch started coming down through the bunker plates, hatches and deck houses and filling the bilges with water.

"We started the pumps," Harry writes, "but the ashes stirred up by the water kept clogging the strainers and the water kept rising. The engines were going full blast but we didn't know how long that would keep up. The boiler plates started leaking from the forcing they were getting and the water in the hold was up to the engine cranks. As soon as the water reached the fires we were through."

And the water kept rising. It was swishing across the floor like it does in a ship's pool on a rough day. Anything that floated became a menace as it sailed back and forth at breakneck speed with the action of the ship. In all this dirty water full of ashes and debris, Harry and a fireman spent an hour "diving." Diving in an engine room means going under the water to free the strainer from the debris drawn in by the suction of the pumps.

How Would You Like to Dive Into Slimy Water?

Just imagine diving in that slimy water wondering if you are going to be swept up against the boilers and scalded to death!

Up on deck another fight was going on against the elements as the ship reeled under the shock of the gigantic waves, but our story is below decks and below decks we stay.

The four men in the black gang fought the advancing water for 24 long hours without relief. Once the captain came down and asked if they wanted more men, but the chief engineer knew that a greenhorn would only be in the way and asked for a bottle of rum instead.

The rum came down and Harry says it saved the lives of everybody on that ship. The rum gave the exhausted men new life and for the next two hours they worked like madmen. The high point of the water was only eight inches from the boilers. Another inch and it would be the boats, and the boats could never live in a sea like that.

But that extra inch never came. Instead, the four men watching the water in the ash pits suddenly let up a weak cheer. The water had stopped! The pumps were at last holding their own!

After Death's Vigil the Black Gang Got Hungry.

Well, sir, the gang realized then that they were hungry. Harry climbed perilously up the ladder to the deck to search for food. The galley was a water-soaked mixture of food-stuffs and kitchen utensils that slid back and forth across the floor with every movement of the ship. The ship's cook was gone seasick. And the galley fires were long since dead.

But that black gang had to eat so Harry fished up a side of bacon and finding some eggs unbroken in the ice box he managed to snare a frying pan and carried his prizes down the ladder again.

The U. S. Coast Guard to the Rescue!

Two men braced him then as he held the frying pan over a shovel full of live coals. Harry admits it was the best meal he ever tasted in his life. He admits, though, that he has had better service. They picked the food out of the pan with their hands and had coal dust for salt and pepper—but it tasted swell.

Then came the coast guard and towed the disabled yacht into Norfolk, Va., and the mid-winter, hard-luck cruise of the Ulvira was history.

Heads Toward Locomotive

Passengers lie with their heads toward the locomotive in berths on trains. This position was originated in the earlier days to eliminate drafts and soot, notes a writer in the Kansas City Star. Many persons complain of illness if lying with their feet toward the front of the train. When patients are placed in ambulances, however, the head is toward the rear of the vehicle, which is said to be more restful.

Copenhagen, the City of Spires

There are so many spires and towers in Copenhagen, Denmark, that the capital of the Danes has been called the "City of Spires." The tallest spire surmounts the city hall. The Erløserkirk is also famous for this feature, which has a curious spiral design. Then there is the notable Round tower, originally intended as an observatory, which is ascended by a very wide spiral road, up which a horse and carriage can be easily driven.

Versatility is an engaging quality in this little two piece frock. Make it feminine with bows and a belt of bright print, or slightly mannish with round buttons and a narrow belt.

The hip length jacket with its cut-away effect and front panel are the dominating features of the dress. Notice how the gathers peep cunningly in back and front beneath the circular yoke. A simple skirt, but not too simple to be attractive. Individualism is attributed to the wide tailored pleats in the front.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1834-B is available for sizes: 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Corresponding bust measurements 30, 32, 34, 36 and 38. Size 16 (34) requires 4½ yards of 35-inch fabric plus ¼ yard of contrasting material.

We're Debunked Again: Busy Jocko Doesn't Hunt Vermin

Monkeys have been much maligned. When they go over each other's fur in their cage, occasionally nipping something between their front teeth, they aren't hunting for what you think they're hunting for. So says Dr. H. E. Ewing, entomologist of the United States National museum, in the Journal of Mammalogy, and he backs up his opinion with the agreement of several fellow scientists. Monkeys given the ability to keep clean are highly unlikely to be verminous, the zoologists declare.

But if that isn't what they're after, what are they hunting for? Doctor Ewing made some close observations and a few experiments. In the end it settled down to just hairs. When Jocko finds a loose (or perhaps just a loosening) hair on his mate's back he plucks it out—and nibbles it up.

My sales jump when I travel on CONCRETE

... and my car operating costs drop. I cover my territory quicker with less wear and tear on nerves and car. I save energy for selling. I see more prospects and sell more goods!

Business of all kinds needs concrete roads. They appeal to taxpayers, because they cost less to build than any other roads of equal load carrying capacity. Surface maintenance costs are $114 to $469 less per mile per year than for other types. It pays to demand concrete for every road carrying 100 vehicles or more per day.

The "Other Side" of the St. Lawrence Waterway

THE ST. LAWRENCE Seaway rejected by the U. S. Senate in 1934 on its imagined navigation merits is being stirred into life again with its electric power phases blithely offered as a co-equally important argument. But in neither respect is the seaway needed.

VIEWED as a transportation agency, we already have a lakes-to-the sea route. On it can be, is being, economically borne all the products for which America can find world markets. (Our railroads with their 50% surplus of equipment can handle all traffic given them, now and through the coming generations.)

IT WILL create no new markets, nor new traffic. It is simply a new shipping route, diverting traffic from existing transit agencies. It will function only in summer when railroad efficiency is greatest and need of it would be the least. It will be idle five months each winter when need of it would be greatest.

IT WILL not benefit the auto industry; or the wheat farmer; or bring farm relief; or aid employment; or "cure the depression". It will shorten no trade routes. It has no military value.

VIEWED for its power (half of which belongs to Canada) again the seaway is not needed. The region cannot absorb the vast surplus of harnessed hydro power it now has. The seaway is so remote from consuming (but disinterested) markets that transmission costs would make the new power—as it does present power—so costly as to be unsaleable.

TO ABSORB the contemplated power an industrial district twice as large as Detroit's must be built adjoining the seaway. Without such a nearby market the power and the immense cost of its development would be wasted.

LASTLY, we must furnish the bulk of the new money needed for a project benefiting another nation more than our own and lying more largely in another's territory than in the United States.

FACT, not fancy and emotionalism, should influence our consideration of the seaway. And the fact is America has come to know it as a project that is economically unsound.

How Many Friends Have You?

IT HAS been said that the number of friends you have depends almost wholly upon you; for friendship is like many other precious possessions in that it does not thrive on neglect.

Most expressions of friendship, in this modern age, involve the use of the telephone. Direct, personal, inexpensive, it has come to be the recognized means of arranging nearly all informal social gatherings.

It has greatly simplified the rôle of the hostess, relieving her of bothersome complications once inseparable from entertaining. By telephone the woman of today can obtain acceptances or regrets without delay; she can make a last-minute addition to her guests, can quickly summon a fourth for bridge.

Modern telephone service is a special boon to those who have been parted by distance. It gives them, despite their separation, the opportunity for "voice reunions"—for a kind of personal contact which only the telephone can provide. Over it they can send greetings of the season, condolences, congratulations—all the various remembrances that arise from genuine friendship—and prove that absence need not necessarily mean forgetfulness.

Quick, dependable, the telephone service provided by this Company has won a definite part in the social life of the people of Michigan, and daily fulfills an important function in the many occasions which both promote and preserve the treasure of friendship.

Chevrolet's high-compression valve-in-head engine gives economy without equal!

Every test proves it's more economical . . . Every Chevrolet owner knows it's more economical . . . And every person will readily understand these simple A-B-C reasons why it is more economical

CHEVROLET
A GENERAL MOTORS VALUE

The Chevrolet engine is the most economical automobile engine produced today, because (1) it is a six-cylinder engine, and (2) it is a valve-in-head six-cylinder engine.

Its six cylinders use less gas and oil—in fact, use the least gas and oil—because six cylinders are the most economical combination used in modern automobiles.

Its valve-in-head design cuts gasoline consumption still lower because there is less loss of heat through the walls of the combustion chamber in valve-in-head engines, and the advanced construction of the Chevrolet engine gives maximum heat (or power) saving.

Most important of all, Chevrolet's more efficient cooling system, pressure stream oiling and the greater accessibility of all working parts result in more dependable operation, over a longer period of time, with the lowest maintenance costs. Thus, Chevrolet's valve-in-head engine—only one of its kind in Chevrolet's price range—gives economy without equal.

SYNOPSIS

Antoinette Taft, twenty-three, attractive and ambitious but unable to hold a job, lives in a drab San Francisco flat with her sister Brenda and brother Cliff, who are older, her seventeen-year-old brother Bruce, and their Aunt Meg. In her job hunting rounds she interviews Lawrence Bellamy, editor of the Journal of Commerce, but finds he has no place for a woman writer. She likes him very much, as she tells Brenda later. As the sisters talk, confident Barney Kerr drops in, asking where Cliff is. Barney has his eye on Tony, but she despises him. Tony gets a telephone call from Mr. Greenwood, city editor of the Call, offering her a job as society reporter. Cliff, returning just then, accompanies Tony to the newspaper office. Tony finds the men in the office friendly and helpful. The first night she goes with Cliff and Joe Burke of the sports department to a restaurant and sees Bellamy at another table. She thrills when he nods to her. She is thoroughly happy in the hustle and bustle of the newspaper office. She manages to solve the problem of getting photographs. The only other woman on the staff is Bess Cutter, who does a column and is very friendly with Fitch, general manager. Bess comes to depend on Tony.

CHAPTER VI

"Listen, ever seen Ina Strawbridge—the actress, you know? She's coming out in her big New York success this summer. J'ever see her?" Bessie Cutter asked her a few days later. Tony was conscious of fear, beating like a drum, deep in her heart.

"No, I haven't."

"She's coming next month. I adore her," Bessie said. "Ever have dinner at Olivier's?"

"The French place on Bush street?—O God, get me out of this," Tony prayed.

"Although really," Bessie said, as on second thought, "really my Chinese boy, Pete Loo, serves a better dinner than they do. Only it's a little more exciting downtown. I'll tell you—when Ina's here, let's ask Joe Burke or someone and have a party. What do you say?"

"I'd love it!" Tony agreed cordially. But she went home rather soberly a little while later. Working like mad on a newspaper, putting up with slights and snubs from society folk, getting tired and cold and hungry and missing one's story after all, getting "scooped," getting called-downs from Greeny—all that was fair. But the sickish feeling in her heart when she thought of a dinner and the theater with handsome Mr. Fitch and Bessie was something else again.

She dared not ask Brenda or Aunt Meggy about it; she meditated asking Cliff. But Cliff was a peculiarly quiet, slow-going person, not unsophisticated exactly, not ignorant, but so far removed in his own tastes from this sort of thing that he might easily be much shocked at the mere suggestion. Anyway, Cliff had gone down to San Diego for a stay of several weeks when the crisis arose, and so Tony turned to Barney on an occasion when he had come out to take her to a special movie.

It was a beautiful November night, warm and soft, with stars shining thick over the city, and the lights of Berkeley and Oakland sparkling like necklaces of diamonds against the dark waters of the bay. Barney parked his unpretentious little car at the Market street curb, for the movie; afterward, at Tony's eager suggestion, they drove about for a while. Barney took her up to the splendid curves of Twin Peaks, where they got out and stood staring down at the brilliant panorama below them.

"It's probably the most interesting city in the world," said Barney, with simplicity.

"San Francisco? Well, some day I'll see the others, and then I'll know," Tony answered, leaning her elbows on the fence rail. "Barney," she went on, in sudden courage, "there's something I want to ask you. I've got to ask someone, and there seems to be no one else."

"Shoot," Barney said, in an odd voice. His own elbow was close to hers on the fence, he bent his head toward her. Tony looked up at him with eyes that glittered in the dark.

"You know Miss Cutter, who does the 'Bessie Saw It' column?"

"I don't know her, no. I know who she is, of course."

"Well, she's a big blonde, very affectionate and gushy, and terribly lazy, and I think terribly stupid, too," Tony went on. "She goes about and gathers up these little human-interest stories, and I help her get them into shape. She and Mr. Fitch are great friends, you know."

Barney looked down at Tony; her bright confiding eyes were very close.

"I heard that," he said slowly.

"She's gotten rather dependent on me," Tony resumed, "and she likes me. And now she's beginning to hint about my going up to her place to dine, and to the theater, do you see?"

"Don't you go," Barney said firmly, looking away. "You couldn't be seen with—that woman."

"I understand, of course, about her and Fitch," Tony said, with a little haughtiness bred of his masculine sureness and arrogance. "But—it may be my job to be nice to her."

"It isn't."

"Well, it'll be darned awkward. Of course, I could refuse this once—it's Ina Strawbridge."

"Tony, you couldn't go to the theater with them!" Barney muttered, not listening. "You don't want to have anything to do with a woman like that."

"Oh, Barney, isn't that rather hard? She's awfully friendly, and she must be so much alone."

"Yes, that's all right. But it isn't up to you to square things. She did what she did with her eyes open; she's no baby."

"It seems to me that's rather narrow and puritanical."

"It may be. That's the way men like their women."

"That isn't necessarily the way women like their women. I know they're double-crossing Mrs. Fitch, but certainly he's as bad as she is, and, in any case, I've got my job to think about!" Tony said warmly.

Barney was silent for a little while. Then he said in a gentle brotherly voice:

"I don't think I'd worry about my job, Tony. Just refuse her invitations nicely, and after a little while she'll know; she'll stop bothering you."

"I'll bet he put her up to asking me!"

"Well, maybe. But whatever happened, you can't get mixed into it. You don't know who'd see you. The only women who go with her are her sort."

"Oh, nonsense, Barney! Nobody'd think I was like that just because I went to see Ina Strawbridge."

"Well, I tell you, you oughtn't to do it. And Cliff would say the same."

"She hasn't asked me yet," Tony said drily, in a pause. She wished that she had not consulted Barney.

"I ought to get back," she said, after a pause. Instead of turning from the fence that hung so high above the sleeping city Barney said suddenly: "Listen a minute, Tony—"

She knew what was coming. Her elbows on the fence, her chin in her palms, she did not turn.

"Something I want to get over to you," Barney began awkwardly. "Know what it is?" He laughed unhappily. "You're ten times smarter than I am," he said. "Of course you know what it is."

Tony turned her bright eyes to him thoughtfully.

"You and me getting—engaged, you mean, Barney?" The words sounded flat—funny.

"Engaged," he echoed. "I don't want to—I'm only making a hundred and fifty a month, and I don't want to rush you. But it seems to me that I've always thought that—that you and I—"

There was a silence.

"The thing is—I'm not really thinking of marrying anyone right now," Tony said, awkward in her turn. "I—well, I guess I'm not thinking about it!"

They both laughed mirthlessly, and Barney said gruffly:

"Well, how about thinking about it?"

"I don't know," Tony muttered, feeling missish and irresolute and insincere.

"If we were engaged I feel that I'd have something to work for," Barney told her.

"I know. But—well, I am sort of not—well, thinking about that sort of thing," Tony reiterated.

She walked away from him, toward the car; they got in in silence.

"You pay me the highest compliment a man can pay a woman, you know," Tony observed placatingly, as they drove down the hill.

"I love you," Barney said briefly, coldly.

"I'm very proud of it." She was saying perfectly senseless and meaningless things, but she wanted desperately to save his pride.

"I don't think I meant to tell you so soon—not until I have something to offer you, anyway. But you knew it."

"Well, if I didn't, I do now. And I do like you tremendously, Barney; we all do. After all, I asked you what to do tonight, instead of Cliff or Bessie."

Barney made no comment upon this for some time. Then he burst out unhappily: "I wish to God I could protect you from Fitch and his love affairs!"

"Oh, don't worry about me," Tony assured him. "I'll—I'll tell her that I have an understanding with you and you don't like me to go out with other men!" she suggested suddenly.

"Will you do that?"

"It would be an alibi," Tony said.

"No, but will you do that?"

"Then they may ask you."

"But I mean—we have an understanding, haven't we?"

She looked up at him curiously, unsmilingly.

"Does it mean so much to you, Barney?" she asked, in surprise.

"Well—" he began, and stopped.

"But an understanding is an engagement, isn't it?"

"Why—why not?" the man asked, clearing his throat.

"Only—that I'd like to think about it."

"Think about it, then, Tony," Barney said, lowering his voice. "I don't want to rush you. It's only that I want you so much, and that I'm afraid someone else will get you."

Tony laughed nervously, liking him, in his awkwardness, more than she wanted to like him.

"But you do like me a little, anyway?" All Barney's arrogance and confidence were gone.

"You know I do. I'll think about it—I truly will, Barney." She was laughing again, at the foot of the long stairway now.

She felt in her heart that she never would marry Barney Kerr. Still, it was distinctly a passed milestone to have him want her.

One morning in the office she confided in big blond Vince Toller.

"Vince, you know Bess Cutter?"

"Sure," Vince answered, with a surprised glance.

"She wants me to come up and have dinner with her next Tuesday."

"Well?" He really was very German; it was almost "vell."

"Well—would you?"

"Would I? I go."

"Oh, are you going, too?"

"They ask me."

"Oh—" Tony smiled in sudden relief. "Well, that makes a difference!"

"Why not?" the man demanded.

"Well, after all—" she began stiffly.

"Now, see," Vince Toller said. "I don't bolt with all this moralizing business. She is my friend and he is my boss, now—now, what else do we do? We say, 'No, you are not good enough for me,' and then we don't make friends here where we work. You think she can hurt you?"

"No, I don't!" Tony protested.

"You say, 'No, I'm not like she is!'"

"Well—" Tony tried to pass it off with ingenuous laughter. "I'm not!"

"All girls are like that. Only the right man does not say, 'Come to me.'"

"You have a high opinion of the sex, Vince," Tony said, her face hot.

"Some—the man asks, and they love and they say 'yes,'" he said. "Some—no. He does not like them, he does not ask them."

"And that's the whole difference?"

"No, because sometimes he can say, 'Marry me,' and then the sisters and the aunts are happy. But if there is also a wife, and tiffs he cannot say, then he must do what he can, and to him she comes. Now! Do you go Tuesday?"

"Oh, yes, I'm going," Tony said sulkily. She naturally wanted men to respect her and respect her attitude. It was maddening to be laughed at, to be thought a prude. If men were not going to differentiate between women who quite frankly sold themselves for furs and orchids and luxurious apartments, and girls who held themselves as too fine for that sort of traffic, then—then it was just too bad!

She told Brenda and her aunt that she was going to a little office party that Miss Cutter was giving on Tuesday night; Miss Bruce flushed a little and blinked at her but said nothing, but Brenda chose an opportunity to protest.

"Tony, this Miss Cutter! You told me—I understood that she and Mr. Fitch—"

"They're friends," Tony admitted.

"You said—"

"Oh, Bessie, for heaven's sake!"

"I wish such people wouldn't ask you!" Brenda diverged, in vexation.

"I wish they wouldn't. But they have."

chairs upholstered in pale cafe-au-lait satin and embellished with knobs and scrolls of thick gold. A row of some six long-legged dolls was on a cushioned window seat; an Italian doll, a doll that looked like a little Empress Eugenie; there was a dog, tiny and barking and red-eyed in a tangle of pale brown hair.

"Here, Bismarck!" Bessie said, laughing, looking very handsome, passing cocktails with the air of a woman who knows what men want. "Top bartin'!"

Bismarck barked on, and was shut in the bathroom for his bad manners. Tony, feeling uncomfortable and out of place, nevertheless threw herself into the conversation heartily. Bessie seemed quite different in her own home. In the office she was the woman of the world. Here she was quieter, even a little timid, very anxious that everything should go right and that Mr. Fitch should be pleased. With Tony she was at first a little self-conscious, but that wore off, and the dinner was excellent, and the show most amusing. Vince took Tony home decorously at eleven.

"It was nothing; it was just like any other party. We had dinner at Mrs. Cutter's, and then went to the show, and Vince brought me home. It was all right, not very thrilling, but really business in a way!" she said impatiently, undressing.

It was well over, the Cutter-dinner crisis. Tony hoped fervently that it wouldn't occur again.

One day the city editor asked her if she was in a good humor, and had had her lunch, and didn't have any special dates for the week-end.

"I think I'm all that, Greeny. Only I have that debutante lunch in Burlingame tomorrow."

"You weren't going down there?"

"Oh, no. Just going to telephone."

"Well, listen, here's this midwinter carnival over in Piedmont."

"I think I'd like to do it!" Tony said, with all a girl's eager anticipation of a party.

"Here's what it is; Arnoldson wants a page of it, see, because his wife is the head of the committee. They're opening the new clubhouse with a lunch and a program—sports of all sorts, I believe it is. And then afterward a big dinner and speeches and a fancy-dress dance."

"I Think I'm All That, Greeny."

"O-o-h, fancy doings!" Tony said.

"I don't know what it's all about," the city editor said gloomily; "they're always getting up these things. I should think they'd get sick and tired of seeing each other."

"Between ourselves, they do," Tony told him. "They get bored to death. The girls have nervous breakdowns, and their mothers go off to New York or Honolulu—anywhere, to get out of the everlasting dinners and teas!"

"Then why do they do it?"

"Oh, for something to do. And as a sort of announcement that a girl's marriageable. That's what it is, really; an open market."

"Not so bad to have to work for your living?" Greenwood offered, after thought.

"Not so bad!" Tony laughed joyously. "But tell me what you want me to do Saturday," she said, soberly.

"Go to this Piedmont thing, keep an eye on the cameramen, get in touch with Mr. Arnoldson right away, and do whatever he wants done. Have you a fancy dress—Queen Isabella pawning her jewels, something like that?"

"You're thinking of tableaux. Yes, I have a gorgeous fancy dress. But I shouldn't think I'd be expected to go as a guest, would I?"

"No, you wouldn't be a guest. But I think the old man would like you to mingle in with the glad throng. Well, you go over there Saturday, see?—and get the lunch. Then, if you have some time in the afternoon, do part of the story—I'll see that you get a typewriter—and turn your stuff over to Hotchkiss—he's the cameraman that looks like Mussolini—he'll bring it in. Then you dress up and do the dinner and bring that in as soon as you can."

"Take a ten o'clock train, say?"

"Oh, I'll have someone over there to bring you back. And you're a good sport!"

"Why, I think it'll be fun!" Tony said.

Leaving home with the brown suitcase in the foggy soft morning, Tony had joined the newspaper group on the boat; Spike Ilyan was in charge of the two cameramen and of the expedition generally.

"Can you drive?" Spike asked her, when she was on the front seat beside him, and they were rolling along through Oakland's long streets toward the southwest.

"Yep," Tony nodded. "Why, tired?"

"No, but I may not feel like driving tonight," Spike said significantly.

"Oh, shame!" Tony reproached him.

"No—listen, I'll be all right, but I may be sleepy," Spike explained.

"I'll drive!" Tony was in wild spirits, although she held herself so steadily in check that there was no sign of them. She felt in her pocket now and then for her pencil, her scratch paper. Maybe some big story would break today—a fire, or an engagement.

They reached the clubhouse at eleven; it was always thrilling to say "Press" to the authorities that would have barred their way; it was especially gratifying today because great preparations had been made for the comfort of the press: there were tables and typewriters, and Miss Taft especially was to be considered; Mrs. Rogers had made arrangements for Miss Taft to rest at somebody's house this afternoon and dress there for the dinner.

"I could change right here at the club," Tony, finally finding Mrs. Rogers in a whirl of directions and last duties, said good-naturedly.

"My dear, you'd do nothing of the kind. You're to go to the Patterson house—right near here, it looks over the ninth green, and get a hot bath and take everything comfortably," little Mrs. Rogers protested in turn.

"It's all turning out so beautifully," she exulted. "It's going to be such an exquisite day, when the fog clears up, and we've four hundred reservations for the luncheon. There never was anything like it!"

"I'd just like to walk about and get my bearings."

Tony strolled off, studying the details of the big raw new splendid place, mentally fitting them to phrases.

The new clubhouse had been built on the site of the old one; the golf links were beautifully groomed and green; the roads took their old turnings. It was only the great main building that was new. It was all very novel, very exhilarating; it was more fun, Tony thought, to be a reporter and have a business reason to be here than to be one of the many girls who, as one o'clock approached, were gathering on the lawns and the porches, nervously discussing the subject of the dance tonight.

Others than girls were gathering, too; men who shouted at other men, women whose costumes were like a fashion display; but the debutantes were Tony's special interest, and she devoted herself exclusively to them. She knew them all now, which ones were popular and which ones were not, the rich ones and the ones whose mothers were having a desperate time trying to keep their social footing.

Tony slipped into the ballroom and looked at the decorated tables and the souvenirs and the name cards; she found the press seats, made some notes of decorations, and went out to the great screened piazza where luncheon was spread.

The day was sharply clear with a cold wind; women shivered in their gala attire and put on heavy coats while they lunched. But afterward the sports went well, and Tony had fun questioning and befriending the adorable little members of the "Juvenilia"; fat little rosy boys and girls who paraded their dolls, dogs, cats, ponies, goats about the circle, in decorated leading strings or coaches or cages. The cameramen were patient with the small restless people, and proud mothers assisted gallantly from the side lines. Tony presently could go to the Patterson house and introduce herself as "the young lady from the Call," with a feeling that everything was right with the world.

Uncommon Sense

By John Blake
© Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.

Fashions have always been a mystery to me.

When, almost over night, I discover that men and women are practically all appearing in costumes which differ widely from those that they were wearing a year ago, I never fail to be astonished.

But why not?

As well go through the world thinking in the same way as dressing in the same way.

And if, from Adam's day we had continued to think in the same way we should still be using the leaves from the trees for clothes and trying to support ourselves on the fruit that grew on their branches.

For years the city of New York was a succession of brown stone or granite buildings, all of them pretty much alike, and only a very few modeled on Greek architectural ideas.

Then the island became so crowded that there was not room for expansion in any direction but upward.

Upward the city grew. Great and beautiful sky scrapers were planned and built, and now the sky line of the American metropolis is one of the wonders of the world.

Following close on fashions in business structures came a change of building fashions in little towns and cities.

These, when they followed the old colonial styles imported from England, were at first beautiful enough.

But they soon changed to the mansard roof and to a bad imitation of the Queen Ann cottage, till by and by the country was belted by monstrosities that blighted the landscape.

Sometimes we overdo it. I read in a newspaper the other day that cooked rice is now served in colors to match the scheme of the hostess who wants to be modern in entertaining her guests.

And I notice in the food stores that the packages of edibles of various kinds, once hideous and uninviting, have become things of beauty, which are far more attractive to the eyes of purchasers.

I am told that fashions in education are now shifting constantly, probably to keep match with the fashions in religion that are observable almost everywhere.

And men and women, with the whole past of the world from which to choose, are constantly making their world more beautiful.

On a coastal steamboat the other afternoon I sat behind two obviously prosperous men who were talking about investment their boys.

Inasmuch as they took their seats by the rail not far from mine I did not feel like an eavesdropper while I listened to them.

One of them was saying, when I sat down:

"I am going to set aside safely enough money for Bill to live on. I will put it in trust, so he can get only the interest from it, and that ought to be enough to keep him."

"In these days you never can tell what may happen, and I don't want him to go hungry if there comes another financial upset in the country."

"I think," said the other man, "that that is the worst thing you can do. If your boy is like the average boy, that investment will give him such a feeling of security that he will never step out and do anything for himself. How much of an investment did you have to start with?"

The other man grinned: "About forty dollars."

"Paid my tuition for the first year in a little inland college. But of course I had to work my way through for the other three years."

"And now you're pretty well fixed, as I happen to know. Why don't you give the kid forty or fifty dollars, and tell him to try to live on it for a month and see what happens?"

"The poor youngster would starve."

"Not if he knew that was all he was going to get from you. A little money won't do him any good. If you would give him a fortune, he might learn how to take care of it, and be able to carry on when you passed out. But he probably wouldn't. The best investment you can make for that boy is an education to start with—a business education—and then leave him to his own devices. If he has got the right stuff in him he will get by. But if he knows that he will have plenty of money he will begin figuring out how to spend it, even before he gets hold of it, and that won't do him any good."

"Times have changed," said the father of the boy. "Youngsters need more money to start with than they used to."

"That's nonsense. On the East side of New York, and everywhere for that matter there are boys who are making their way on no capital at all, and some of them will some time be among the big and successful business men of this country."

"I'd hate to have my kid have to buck the world with what he can learn in a college."

"Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are for the kidneys only. They are recommended the world over. You can get the genuine, time-tested Doan's at any drug store."

"If he's that kind of a kid, don't send him to college. But if he's the right kind, he'll get along. But he'll never get along if you tell him he won't need to work."

Uncle Sam Fast Becoming the Greatest Tree Planter

Tree planting in this country is looking up, according to the United States forest service. In 1935 the forest service's own planting on national forest lands was very close to a quarter million acres, more than that planted by all agencies—federal, state, and private—in 1934 when the total was 206,333 acres. Many of the other agencies planted substantially greater acreages in 1935 than the year before.

Uncle Sam, although relatively new at it, is becoming the world's leading tree planter. Up to last year his grand total of plantings by all agencies amounted to only 2,394,397 acres, equal to about half the area of Massachusetts. This year's plantings in the national forests alone will increase the total by more than 10 per cent. There are more than 162,000,000 acres in our national forests alone, and the estimated total forest acreage in this country is over 500,000,000 acres.

Fellas From South Won't Keep Giants From Third Position

THERE may be no truth to the whisper that Eddie Brannick, the singing secretary, has been warned to get off the River Shannon and to concentrate upon the Suwanee in all his future vocalizing.

When the Giants now speak of how they would like to meet and beat those d—n Yankees they are not necessarily kidding themselves about a possible World Series.

If he wished to do so Billy Terry—whose grandpappy was a Georgia colonel long before the Virginia legislature got around to conferring the same title upon the National league's leading hitter—could assemble a very fine team of athletes who were born below the Mason-Dixon line.

Incidentally something might even be done about those two who were so unfortunate as not to obtain their early nourishment from bacon, cornbread, hominy and turnip greens.

Even though Phoenix, Ariz., more or less belonged to the Indians at the time when the Confederacy was trying to shake itself loose, it has displayed a very liberal inclination when interpreting other laws and rules—might let Hank Leiber into the outfield if big Jim Asbell faltered.

By the same token Dick Bartell, the unconstructed Philly who was born in California, need not necessarily have these things held against him.

Terry Is Tops; Giants Have Ambition

To achieve success a team must have excellent pitching, a powerful punch or a fairly generous combination of the two.

Bill Terry is one of the best of managers. Probably no other camp contains as many happy, energetic and ambitious young men as this one.

Carl Hubbell still is a good pitcher, but he is not the sensation he was two years ago.

So it is with the rest of the staff. The newcomer veterans, Marberry and Coffman, can scarcely be depended upon to rise much above spot or relief duty.

There is Jackson's jumpy knee, the question as to whether Dick Bartell can overcome the jinx which leaped upon him last season as it has leaped upon so many former Phillies.

NOT in the box score. The biggest fee ever paid an American race rider for a single race was the $20,000 Georgie Ellis received for doing his best with the Warm Stable's Victorian in the $94,000 Aquacaliente Handicap of 1930.

Cottons and Linens Go Style-High

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

COMES spring! By the signs of the times in fashion's realm you know it. When the new cottons and linens announce their arrival and when to celebrate the event, merchants and style creators hold high carnival in the way of style-revealing previews.

Color is literally on the rampage with the primary hues strongly evident and pastels retaining their importance.

The attractive models pictured are positive proof that cottons and linens are going style high this season.

PADLOCK AND KEY

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Here is the frock of your day dreams, a fitting theme for a happy spring-song. It is of rose colored linen with dark stitched linen belt.

Printed Slip A gay printed slip to wear under a dark dress is just feminine enough to delight any woman.

Outstanding among the new widely heralded fabrics are shantung, hand-blocked linens, printed piques, lace that lends itself to tailoring, blistered sheers, and rough cottons and countless other attractive washable weaves.

SPRING MILLINERY OF MANY PERIODS

New French millinery for advance spring fashions shows the influence of various period styles, according to recent reports from the Paris office of the Du Pont Style News Service.

The Chinese art and costume is especially apparent in creations by Agnes, who also favors the Abyssinian trend, finding inspiration for her triangular and pointed crowns in the Negus coiffure.

The strong influence of the Medici period and coiffure of the Reine Margot are themes which have been developed by Marie Alphonsine.

8 Basic Colors Adopted for Women's Fall Shoes

Eight basic colors for women's shoes have been officially adopted for fall, 1936, by the joint committee of tanners, shoe manufacturers and retailers in cooperation with the Textile Color Card association.

Five of the colors have been repeated from recent seasons. They are maroon, marine blue, chadron, Oriental oxblood and Araby green.

Paris Accessory Ideas Paris is sending over grand accessory ideas, little things that can do so much for a costume.

Lesson for March 29

JESUS EXPLAINS THE KINGDOM

LESSON TEXT—Luke 13:18-30. GOLDEN TEXT—And they shall come from the east, and from the west, and from the north, and from the south, and shall sit down in the kingdom of God—Luke 13:29.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Good News to Men, JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Talks About His Kingdom. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—My Part in Extending Christ's Kingdom. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Requirements for Citizenship in the Kingdom.

I. Jesus Teaching in the Synagogue (vv. 10-21).

The presence of a sorely afflicted woman called forth Jesus' sympathy and he, therefore, healed her. This action on the Sabbath day provoked severe criticism on the part of the ruler of the synagogue.

1. The parable of the mustard seed (vv. 18, 19).

a. Its unimportant beginnings (v. 19).

It begins as the least of all seeds and grows to be the greatest among herbs. The parentage and humble circumstances of Jesus the King greatly perplexed the people.

2. The parable of the leavened meal (v. 21).

When the scriptural significance of the meal, the woman, and the leaven is known, the interpretation is easy.

a. The meal. Meal in Scripture means something wholesome and nutritious. It was used in one of the sweetest offerings which typify Christ (Lev. 2:1-3) and was the food for the priests (Lev. 6:15-17).

b. The leaven (v. 21). In the Scriptures leaven is invariably a type of evil, as the following examples show (Exod. 12:5, Lev. 2:11; Matt. 16:6, 12; 1 Cor. 5:6-8).

c. The woman. In normal life the woman is the administrator of the home, not its head. Her responsibility is to take the bread provided by the head, prepare and distribute it to the household.

d. The leaven. In Scripture we find false doctrine being taught by a woman. Dealing with doctrine is forbidden to women (1 Tim. 2:12). In I Timothy 4:1-3 we find that apostasy will be brought in through false teaching in the ranks of God's people.

II. Jesus Teaching in the Villages and Cities (vv. 22-30).

Jesus knew that he was on the way to Jerusalem to be crucified. He was, therefore, making an effort to reach every person possible with the gospel.

1. A question asked (v. 23). We do not know just why this question was asked. It may have been out of curiosity or by some Jew who prided himself on being of the elect.

2. The Lord's answer (vv. 24-30). He did not answer directly, but by likening the blessing of the kingdom to a banquet hall in a palace.

a. The gate of the kingdom is strait and the way narrow. It is easy to see from his teaching, as well as from observation, that the saved are few.

b. The immediate duty to set forth (v. 24). Regardless of what others are doing, the personal obligation is upon everyone to strive to enter.

c. The door to be shut (v. 25). God's patience will not last forever. His mercy is to end and his judgment will follow.

d. Pleading for entrance on the ground of knowing Christ (vv. 25, 26). This plea is met by the awful command to depart, and even calling them "workers of iniquity."

e. A day of weeping and gnashing of teeth (v. 28). The very sight of the faithful ones enjoying the blessing of the kingdom, while they themselves are shut out, will be extremely awful.

Laughter and Tears

God made both tears and laughter, and both for kind purposes; for as laughter enables mirth and surprise to breathe freely, so tears enable sorrow to vent itself patiently.

Truth

Truth and reason are common to everyone, and are no more his who spake them first than his who spake them after.—Montaigne.

OF INTEREST TO THE HOUSEWIFE

Some stucco walls may be washed with soap and water, but a coat of stucco sprayed over the whole surface is much more satisfactory than washing.

Orange juice mixed with confectioner's sugar and a little grated orange rind makes a very soft and delicious cake frosting.

To prevent diced fruits dropping to the bottom of a gelatin mold, chill fruits and add when gelatin mixture has partly congealed.

Fat for deep frying is at the correct temperature when an inch cube of bread dropped into it becomes a golden brown in 60 seconds. This is for cooked mixtures.

It will be recalled that Mr. Hamilton gave the commencement address in Tawas City last spring.
