FREE PARKING LOT ESTABLISHED IN CITY

One of the things long needed in the city has been a place to park cars convenient to the business district of the city. This need will be filled to a great extent by the new free parking lot which has been established at the rear of the stores belonging to E. H. Buch, S. Ferguson and Eugene Bing. Such a place will relieve a portion of the traffic congestion on Lake street which has become a considerable problem during the past few years.

On account of injury to my eyes I will not be a candidate for the office of Register of Deeds at the coming primary election. I wish to thank all my good friends for the splendid votes which I have had in previous elections. May I be allowed to recommend Marjorie Morley Lickfelt as a candidate for the office of Register of Deeds as she has been a deputy in this office for over six years and has had almost full charge of the office for the past two years. She is capable and well qualified to do the work.

Benjamin H. Ellsworth

Benjamin H. Ellsworth, age 70 years, six months and 10 days, passed away Tuesday, April 14, at his home in Whittemore.

The deceased was born in Caro on October 4, 1865. He was united in marriage to Agnes Watson in Cass City on November 14, 1884, and to this union were born six children, two sons and four daughters. The eldest daughter, Ella, preceded him in death in 1903. The family moved to Iosco county in 1903 and Mr. Ellsworth resided here until the time of his death.

He leaves to mourn his loss, his widow; two sons, Ray of Silverwood and Leslie of Whittemore; three daughters, Mrs. Mina Lail of Whittemore, Mrs. Anna Clayton of Hale and Mrs. Dora Leslie of Tawas City; two brothers, John of Caro and Malen of Flint; 30 grandchildren, three great grandchildren, nine nieces and nephews, and a host of friends.

Funeral services were held Friday afternoon from the Whittemore M. E. church, Rev. H. Davis officiating. Burial was made in the I. D. S. cemetery.

Relatives from out of town who attended the funeral were: Mr. and Mrs. John Hartley, Mr. and Mrs. Claude Spardling, Mrs. Ross Brown and Mrs. Floyd Brown of Caro; Jay Hartley and daughter, Marie, of Cass City; Mrs. Margaret Nickle, daughter, Lila, and son, George, of Lansing; Mrs. Emerson Ellsworth, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Ellsworth and family of Silverwood; Mr. and Mrs. Orville Leslie and family of Tawas City; Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Clayton and family of Hale, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry McCready of Standish.

Horses Should Have Special Attention At This Time Of Year

Soft shoulders and muscles are easily injured at this season of the year and may mean a considerable handicap during the entire spring and summer if horses are not given the attention they really deserve. Nearly every horse and especially green colts that are going into the harness for the first time are soft and more susceptible to injury than they would be if they had been worked every day all winter.

For horses that are a little thin in flesh it is advisable to feed a little additional grain, allowing one pound for each one hundred pounds of live weight of the animal per day, increasing this feeding slightly as the animal settles into spring work. With alfalfa hay the most desirable grain ration would be one-half ear corn and one-half oats by weight.

Tender or soft shoulders will cause considerable trouble unless the horses are equipped with well fitted collars and harness. A horse that has not worked at all and is fat should be fitted with a rather snug collar. A properly fitted collar permits free admission of the hand at the bottom but is snug enough along the sides to allow only the finger tips. A good deer hair sweat pad helps on colts or horses that are not in good flesh. Horses that fill a collar full now may not after they have worked two or three weeks and then should have a sweat pad added. The shoulders should be sponged off with cold water at noon and at night. It is often well to add a little salt to this water. The cold water and salt tend to toughen the shoulders and may aid greatly in preventing.

School Notes

High School

A hundred words from the Ayres spelling list were pronounced to all of the students of the high school during the week. The medians obtained by the ninth, tenth, eleventh, and twelfth grades were 84, 85, 89 and 93, respectively. The results are the same as the usual results and show that students are apt to improve in spelling during the high school course even though no formal classes in spelling are held. Jean Robinson, Richard King, and Albertine Herman spelled all of the 100 words correctly. The following students spelled 95 or more of the 100 words correctly: Ruth Clark, Erma Lou Pfahl, Norma Musolf, and Fidalis Groff of the ninth grade; Lucille DePotty, Mildred Cholger, and Myrton Leslie of the tenth grade; Madge Brugger, Isabelle Dease, Betty Holland, Phyllis Bigelow, Beatrice Deacon, and Thomas Metcalf of the eleventh grade; and Robert the twelfth grade.

TIM DOOLITTLE TO FURNISH MUSIC FOR 3 FESTIVAL DANCES

Private Lives of Pine Center Gang Told Briefly

Tim Doolittle and his Pine Center Gang, WJR radio stars, will furnish music for three perch festival dances at the Edgewater Pavilion. These will be held Saturday evening, Sunday afternoon and Sunday evening, April 25-26. The Gang is very popular and large attendances are expected at all the above affairs.

This group has traveled more than 275,000 miles on personal appearance tours. Although several of these personal appearances were made in the immediate vicinity of Tawas City, little, if anything, is known here of the private lives of the Gang, even by close friends of its members. The brief sketches given below concerning those comprising the group will therefore be of interest to their many followers.

Bruce Myers (Tim Doolittle) made his radio debut in 1923 and later "Broken-down Baritone" and later became the original Seth Parker of the air, having done the skits prepared by Phillips Lord for some time before the latter went on the air in the role of Seth Parker. He is the son of a Baptist minister and a graduate of Hillsdale College.

William H. Hurley, "Rambling Bill Hurley" to the radio audience, is a tall, dark, handsome gent—a native of the north, who started calling old time square dances when he was 13 years old. Bill is married and the father of two children, Donald, 13, and Erma, 11. He is widely known as the singing caller. His capacity with the group is that of manager.

Dorothy Leader, known as "Dotie the Sweetheart of Pine Center," was voted the most popular girl at the Southwestern high school, Detroit, in 1933, the year of her graduation, and she is the only girl in the Pine Center Gang. However, she is just like one of the boys when it comes to playing baseball, riding horses, baiting her own fish hook, and she gives a very good account of herself with a pair of boxing gloves with Gibby or Curly.

Ted, the talented violinist, is a resident of Highland Park. After spending four years with the high school orchestra there, during which time he made the all-state orchestra two years and all-national orchestra one year, he attended Olivet College and made a name for himself as leader of the College Ramblers.

Curly, who plays the guitar and is called George Merckling in real life, holds a B. A. degree in architectural engineering from the University of Detroit, class of 1930.

Al, the clown of the Gang, is a hard boiled business man, known to his friends as Al Sager, and as a proprietor of the Sager Music house on Broadway avenue, Detroit, became known as an authority on musical instruments. He is the bass player in the group and owns and plays a number of instruments. He was for years pipe organist in the Masonic temple, Detroit.

Gibby, the pianist, billed at the tender age of seventeen as "Gibson Rothchild," wizard of the piano, was featured by the Dawson Hill orchestra of Cleveland. He is 24 years of age. (Turn to No. 3. Back Page)

FETE TO OPEN TONIGHT WITH QUEEN'S BALL

King's Dance Sunday Night Will Mark End Of Festivities

Opening of the festive part of the fine program which has been arranged for Tawas City's annual Perch Festival takes place tonight (Friday), when the queen's ball will be held at the Edgewater Pavilion. Music for the occasion will be furnished by Bill McKay and his Ford Mountaineers.

Miss Isabelle Dease, queen of the fete, will at that time be crowned in an impressive ceremony by James F. Thompson, commissioner of agriculture. George A. Prescott will introduce the speaker. Miss Dease is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Dease. Her maid of honor will be Miss Phyllis Bigelow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Bigelow, who was runner-up in the queen contest. The remainder of her court consists of the Misses Mildred Cholger, Janet Keiser, Norma Musolf and Lucille DePotty. All the girls are students at the Tawas City high school.

During the course of the festival various features of entertainment are scheduled. The queen and her court will take a prominent part in these activities. A detailed account of the program is given elsewhere in this issue.

Culminating the festivities on Sunday evening will be the perch king's dance at the Edgewater Pavilion. This feature has been arranged to provide a smashing climax for the celebration. Tim Doolittle and his Pine Center Gang will furnish music and entertainment at this affair.

Statistics Show Rarity of Quintuplets

Talk about your long shots! The Dionne quintuplets were a 57,000,000 to 1 chance!

Medical science lays just those odds against a duplication of the five world famous babies who are currently making their feature picture debut in "The Country Doctor." Fox picture coming Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, April 26, 27 and 28, to the Family Theatre, East Tawas.

Only once in 57,000,000 births do quintuplets occur, according to the best statisticians, who find records of only thirty-three actual human quintuplets in five hundred years. The tiny Dionnes are the only ones in medical history to survive.

In "The Country Doctor," which is a dramatic story of a rural physician and his heroic work, the five darling Dionnes croon, laugh and play with Jean Hersholt, the leading featured player.

Henry King directed the picture, produced under the supervision of Darryl F. Zanuck, and featuring June Lang, Slim Summerville, Michael Whalen and Dorothy Peterson, in the important supporting roles.

Guest Columnists Reveal Inside Facts About Various Sports

Hugh Bradley is still vacationing. This week guest columnists write about soccer, basketball and the relative merits of hockey and polo.

Soccer, or association football, is the most nearly universal and the greatest of all international sports.

Physical fitness is essential to succeed in all branches of athletics, but soccer demands more stamina than almost any other.

In the course of this grind the player acquires the endurance necessary to carry him through a bruising, hard-fought contest calling for ninety minutes of continued action.

Soccer is football in its most ancient form and is one type of football that does not belie the generic term.

Historians tell us the early Greeks played a game roughly resembling football. The Romans also had a pastime in which an inflated ball was used.

Centuries ago football played a part in the celebration of Shrove Tuesday at Chester, England, and contemporary chroniclers state that the head of a Dane was used for a ball.

Oliver Cromwell speaks of playing football in his letters. At that time it was lawful to kick an opponent in the shin, trip him or take the ball away from him by any means.

Soccer was introduced into the United States gradually, and its development has been slow compared with its progress in other nations.

More than sixteen nations now play the game. In England and Scotland attendances of 100,000 are not uncommon.

With the growth of the sport in this country came the need of a national organization. The United States Football association was founded in 1913.

1,300 Soccer Teams Now in Organization

Approximately 1,300 teams, comprising 22,000 amateur players and 700 professionals, are engaged in competition under the auspices of the U. S. F. A.

A great deal of impetus has been given to the advancement of soccer in America by frequent visits of well-known teams from abroad.

The advent of a representative combination from the Scottish Football association last summer was a red-letter occasion in the history of American soccer.

The U. S. F. A. is going to send a team to the Olympics if the necessary funds can be raised.

If it is successful the United States will be represented by the most powerful group of soccer players ever assembled under the Stars and Stripes.

Let's Forget Changes in Basketball Rules

JUDGED by the number of persons playing basketball (between 3,000,000 and 4,000,000), it is truly the national sport.

Mr. Ned Irish, through his use of Madison Square Garden the last two years, has created a national impetus which no other factor has equaled.

The greatest weakness of basketball in the East of the country is the lack of a coaches' association.

I am absolutely opposed to elimination of the center jump, the out-of-bounds play after a successful free throw, the three-second rule as applied to the free-throw circle.

At the basketball coaches' convention held in Chicago last year, Dr. James Naismith, inventor of the game, made a strong appeal for retention of the center jump.

Cutting out the center jump would, furthermore, put too much strain on the players by depriving them of the short rest between the scoring of a goal and the return of the ball to the center circle.

The three-second rule was introduced to prevent the tugging and pushing that accompanies the "back-up" type of pivot play.

Coach "Prog" Allen of the University of Kansas wants the baskets raised to a height of 12 feet.

Without doubt, the blocking question caused more intersectional controversy than all other disputed points.

Basketball has proved its merit. Let's forget rules changes.

Hockey's Lure Matter of Game's Uncertainty

By Stewart Iglehart

The tip-off on my personal preference in the sports that have bruised and amused me since my early years is, I think, best shown by the pictures on the walls of my office.

When a polo match is over rarely is there any lasting fatigue. The hockey player, who, after his two-minute stretch, comes off the ice with any breath left just isn't doing his job.

The skill elements in both games are somewhat similar in that practice—and constant practice is the main item.

Then when he's all set, the poloist takes the field to find that speed rules. The horse is boss.

Polo Is Faithful in Following Form

However, such a method is neither possible nor necessary. Polo follows form nearly as faithfully as its seasons follow the sun.

Even though it has the element of speed, polo can never achieve nationwide appeal. It's too definitely a rich man's game, although I believe in the future it will increase with such impetus as Pete Bostwick has injected into it.

Spring Veal Is Delicious and Seasonal Menu Meat

Offers a Wide Variety of Tempting Dishes for Family.

Spring is the best season for veal. This is not always so well appreciated as in the case of lamb.

Veal can be one of the most delicate and delicious menu meats, or it can be of negligible interest in flavor.

There is a definite flavor to young veal which is akin to poultry. The competent housewife realizes this and knows that in certain preparations of poultry, a proportion of veal can be included without detriment.

What are known as calf carcasses, that is, those from more mature bovines, have neither the taste of young veal nor of fine beef.

The leg of veal is the best for roasting. Cutlets are the best for steaks, with chops for frying.

Savory Seasoning. Season the water in which the knuckle is cooked so that it is savory with herbs, parsley, thyme, sage, sweet marjoram, basil, etc.

Larding, Breeding, Etc. Since veal has so bland a flavor and is so free from enriching fat, it is apt to be larded.

"If I'd only gone home, Larry. But I was sort of hanging around Greeny's desk, and suddenly—without thinking it out at all—I said to him, 'Oh, by the way, did you hear about the Journal?' If I'd only thought—"

The Very First Occasion Upon Which They Two Had Been Alone Together.

Greenwood sent her down to the Hotel Del Monte to cover the social side of the big golf tournament at Pebble Beach. Tony took Brenda with her for the enchanted week-end, and the sisters wandered through three perfect days of sunshine and gaiety and excitement, and went up at night to their high little dormer-windowed bedroom exulting in their particular share of the general festivity.

And it was there that Brenda told Tony very simply that she was going to be married to Alvin Atwater, a doctor in Monterey. "Isn't it a darling name?" Brenda said, lingering on it fondly. No, he had no money and no practice; he had just graduated from medical college, and he wasn't—no, he wasn't handsome.

Tony, even before meeting him, was extraordinarily elated at the news. She had seen the change in her sister; seen Brenda's quicker flushes and heard her softer laughter; she had teased her about some suitor unknown ever since the holidays at Carmel in May. If Brenda liked the long, lean, pale young doctor with the enormous hands and fan ears, then Tony would like him too.

Brenda and Alvin would live in Monterey on nothing. "Except that his father said he would send us five hundred dollars to start in on," said Brenda modestly.

Tony, at Larry's suggestion, had gone to see Ruth shortly after the Journal incident and had frankly confessed to her own stupidity and carelessness in the matter. And Ruth, adamant until the full acknowledgment was made, had instantly softened, as Larry had predicted she would, and had forgiven Tony fully and gladly. So that it was natural for Tony presently, in her own glowing and animated way, to tell the Bellams of her sister's plans.

"He's one of those tall, limp, asparagus-colored men," she said of her prospective brother-in-law. "He sticks 'way out of his collar, and he sort of curves himself around Betsy like an anaconda. He adores her so it makes him perspire when he looks at her!"

"They're to be married—?" Larry asked.

"In September."

"Tony," Ruth said, on one of these August days, "why don't you come to Santa Barbara with me?"

"Come—?" The mere thought left Tony's cheeks paler for excitement.

"Why not? You're going to have a week's vacation."

"But I thought you were staying for a month?"

"I am. But you could come back when you liked."

"You're not crippled," Larry contributed. "Anyway," he said in an odd indifferent tone that impressed Tony as puzzling at the moment, "anyway, I come back and forth with the car every week-end. If you and I started at—say, five o'clock on Monday, I'd have you in your office at noon. We'd get some breakfast in San Luis or Paso Robles. I've done it lots of times."

"Oh, Ruth, Santa Barbara!" Tony said, on a long sigh of bliss.

Generously, enthusiastically, Brenda shared with Tony a week later the fun of packing the bag for Santa Barbara. Tony, in a state of indescribable excitement, set the alarm for four o'clock and was dressed and ready when Larry's motor horn gave the signal below. The empty, dirty, shabby street was transfigured with the dawn; the air was chill; there was mystical silence, mystical light abroad. Larry got out of the car to see that she and her suitcase were comfortably bestowed in the back seat. Tony leaned over Ruth's shoulder to give her a kiss; they were away.

The way ran smoothly across quiet, deserted Market street, out past the big hospital whose elevator balls still showed red squares of light, down to the big open highway that was bounded on one side by flat fields hardly touched by real estate signs and small ventures in suburban homes, and on the other by the languid lower waters of the bay. Birds were flapping lazily over the marshes; a train puffed majestically along the embankment, throwing short staccato puffs of steam into the wet morning air.

There was little talk among the three as they rolled contentedly along; it was enough to be alive in the glorious summer dawn and see the sun rise over the great shoulders of the eastern mountains, and send long streamers of warm early gold across the orchards. San Jose, Morgan Hill, Gilroy, all the little valley towns were sound asleep, but when they presently reached Salinas chinmeyes were smoking and early housewives were astir, and quite suddenly Tony was conscious of a sharp stab of hunger.

"Breakfast here or further down? It's not quite eight," Larry presently said. "Oh, breakfast here!" the women exclaimed together. They got out, a little stiff after the more than a hundred chilly miles, followed their man into the clean little bright breakfast room, fell upon sliced eggs, smoking hot coffee, brown toast, and fried eggs with the appetites of wolves.

Tony and Ruth took off their coats and stowed them in shipshape fashion before getting back into the car. The sunshine had strengthened into a threat of real heat, now, and the fields and hill ridges between which the road wound were scented with dried tarweed and the rich smell of apples and prunes. Wheat dazzled gold in the light, and the mountains off to the southeast gave off little dazzling spirals of oily hot air.

Presently they turned west and were out on the cliffs above the ocean; for a hundred magic miles the road followed the lip of the sea. Ruth, on the front seat, went to sleep; Larry yawned, smoking one cigarette after another. But Tony watched alertly in insatiable interest and fascination, and was still wide-awake and cheerful when they reached their journey's end, a comfortable hotel cottage in a garden, at four o'clock on a burning afternoon. Ruth preferred a tub bath and a nap, but at five Tony and Larry were in the cool salt breakers, the girl almost mad with delight.

"I tell you that the ocean does something to me!"

"I see it does," Larry shouted back, as a great wave caught them.

Tony found her room small and warm in the last heat of the day, but she herself was made anew, and could unpack and find a book and stretch herself for an hour's idling before dinner with a sense of complete luxury and comfort. Ruth was evidently asleep, for there was no sound from the room next door. From the street came the purr of passing motors, and of the voices of other swimmers coming up cool and rested from the sea. There was a strip of garden just outside her opened French window; roses were glowing there, and the tall spikes of plox; there were eucalyptus trees; a sprinkler was sending a refreshing wet sound through the warm air.

Dressed in the orange cross-barred organdy, Tony reflected that she might be wearing the least expensive clothes in Santa Barbara tonight, but that that did not mean that she was the least attractive girl. Evidence to the contrary gratified her on all sides, as she walked at Ruth's side across a stretch of blazing garden to the hotel for dinner. And presently there was a young man at their table to make their quartette complete and add to this enchanted night the further enchantment of a new affair. For he liked her instantly, did Mr. Duncan O'Connor, demanding of her pathetically where she had been all his life, when the music began, rising automatically to dance with her.

"Antoinette—it's a name to dream on," said Duncan O'Connor, dancing.

"It's my favorite name. Taft is too long for me to remember; my brain isn't very good. This is my favorite music in the whole world; I mean it. You're what?" Larry's niece?"

"No, just a friend. He and I and Ruth have been friends for ever so long. No; I'm the society reporter on the Call."

"I'm on a newspaper here. I half own it."

"Why, how old are you?" Tony looked up at her companion curiously, as they walked back to the table.

"Nine-and-twenty, poppet."

"Have you reached ages already?" Larry asked, pulling out Tony's chair.

"I haven't reached Antoinette's," Duncan said modestly.

"He's got a certain line," Larry warned her. "But don't believe one word he says."

The music recommenced, and this time it was Larry who rose and held open his arms for Tony. Tony rose obediently, but for some reason she found it oddly exciting, thrilling, even frightening to move to the throbbing of the music over the wide floor with him, his arms about her, and her heart beating so close to his own heart.

"Ruth wouldn't dance?"

"I asked her. She never does."

She was quite breathless when she went back to her salad; afterward she danced with Duncan again, and with a boy that Duncan knew. Then Larry and Ruth said that they were going back to the cottage, and Tony said she would go too; they were all tired. On the way back she said that she meant to get up and swim before breakfast.

"It's a date," said Larry. "I'm playing golf at ten, but I'd love it at eight. And we can breakfast afterward."

"I'm playing bridge," Ruth said.

"Alice telephoned about it. I don't believe I'll get up early and swim. Tomorrow's going to be a scorcher."

"You can amuse yourself somehow tomorrow, Tony?"

"Amuse myself! I could amuse myself here for a thousand years!"

"You make this dull old place seem fun!" Larry said.

CHAPTER XIV

The week flew by; it was unlike any other time Tony had ever known. The hours seemed dreamlike, unreal, shot with unearthly sunshine, perfumed with flowers that were sweeter than other flowers, set to the deep organ-toned voice of the tireless green ocean into which she flung herself shouting with joy every morning and every afternoon. Cool and sweet in fresh linen, she went with Ruth to afternoon readings, to one or two teas; she became a familiar figure at the Beach club; her blue bathing suit drying on the line, her blue eyes dancing over the lunch room with their appetite for joy and adventure never quenched.

Larry came down on Friday night; Saturday, Sunday dashed by, the holiday was over. Again the linens and organdies were packed, and again the alarm was set.

Duncan O'Connor had come up to the cottage to say good-bye a few hours earlier. In the twilight, and she had walked with him in the garden for a few minutes, and let him kiss her. Somehow it didn't seem important, but it all fitted into the dream of youth and joy and beauty and autumn beside the sea. She was not in love with noisy handsome Duncan, but she liked having him think himself in love with her.

Ruth was not awake when she and Larry crept from the house the following morning in the soft dawn; dew was heavy on the garden, and a blanket of fog shut off the sea. Tony felt strangely sad; the dripping awnings and beaded spears of grass seemed melancholy to her. Almost in silence she established herself in the front seat beside Larry; he threw her a rug to wrap about her knees, and she was glad of its warmth.

"Next stop for breakfast!" Larry announced, turning up his coat collar, pulling on his driving gloves.

"And my party is over!" the girl mourned. The burned brown hills, the veiled ocean, slipped by; reluctantly the sun pierced the land fog and drove it away, and Tony saw the flashing light of the new day reflected blazingly in the windows of the sleeping little houses along the road.

Breakfast at Santa Maria, and more miles and miles and miles clicked off on the meter. She and Larry talked; presently he told her that it seemed to him the shortest run he had ever made from Santa Barbara.

Then, only a few miles out of the city, suddenly on the left there was the looming shadow of a truck thundering out of a crossroad, and the veering of the big car that was coming swiftly toward them. Their own car, reeling dizzily, was driven off into the soft shoulder of the highway, slipping, slipping, wrenched desperately by Larry's hands back toward the line—slipping in spite of it—and the steep hill and the bay just below—

Tony gasped; heard him say sharply, "Keep quiet, we're all right!" before there was a second of sickening horror, and the alternation of flying white sky and brown grass past the window, and the rending and smashing of wood. Then an awful silence, and a gentle little tinkle of glass.

She was struggling with a door above her head; she was out on the grass, her hand to help him. Larry was beside her. Tony looked up a steep hillside at a fringe of cars and spectators against the sky above; looked down at the crawling gray level of water. She felt physically sick; tottered dizzily on her feet; was suddenly safe and tight against Larry's heart.

"Tony, my darling, my darling—you're all right?"

She shut her eyes, rested her head weakly against Larry's shoulder. Immediately two or three officers were beside them, were talking, were helping her up the hill. From somewhere a taxi appeared, and Tony was bundled into it and found herself alone with Larry again, speeding toward the city.

He kept his arm tightly about her, and she rested her head against him; they did not speak for a long while.

"Home, huh, Tony?"

"I—I think so."

There Was a Second of Sickening Horror.

"You were a brick; a perfect brick. I never saw him at all! What did you do, open the door?"

"I don't remember; I must have. I saw you—all tumbled over the wheel." She shut her eyes. "I had the feeling of death—death close, and—and inevitable!"

"You were a brick," he said again. "When they reached the dingy Fulton street doorway he went up with her to the shabby little apartment on the top floor; it was the first time he had seen it. Aunt Meggy and Aunt Sally were there; Tony shakily introduced Larry and gave them an idea of what had occurred.

It was one o'clock. Tony washed her pale dirty face and treated the little cut on her forehead. Before they went away she showed Larry her father's photograph and her mother's, and the view that lay below the sitting-room windows. Then he took her downtown, and they had delicious soup and a thick steak and coffee.

She was still pale; too much excited to eat very much. But the hot drink brought back her color, and when Larry left her at the office door she looked more like herself.

"I'm not going to say anything about this to Ruth, Tony."

"The car will probably be in shape by the end of the week, and if it isn't, I'll just wire her that I'm coming down by train; I often do. Tony," said Larry, looking down at her from his great height, in parting, and smiling his kindly smile, "it was kind of nice to see your home."

"You're going to have a black-and-blue mark on your cheek."

"I suppose so. It feels sore. You may be more shaken up yourself than you realize," Larry said. "I'll telephone tonight and see how you feel. What time do you get home tonight?"

"Monday? Oh, for dinner. Around six somewhere. Betsy and Cliff are dining with her young man's father at the Palace, and Bruce's away; he's been on a ranch all summer, you know."

"I've got a business dinner, worse luck," Larry said, "or I'd invite myself up."

She smiled in sheer surprise and pleasure.

"Oh, wouldn't that be fun! I never —I was going to say I never thought of asking you," Tony said artlessly. "But we'd love it, some night, if you'd come!"

"I will come. And I'll never try to kill you again."

"Good-by, Tony."

"Good-by."

Tony turned into the Call building; went upstairs. She reported duly to Greenwood's desk; he was not there. Telephone, typewriter, telephone again; Tony compiled her daily social column in the usual way. Mollie Mackay came in and observed, in a stream of odd gossip, that the Journal and the Examiner deal might go through, after all; she had heard that four big offices on the floor above the Examiner's regular rooms were to be turned over to Lawrence Bellamy.

Tony had told some of the men of the office of the morning's close escape from death; she felt languidly unwilling to reopen the whole story with Mollie. Somehow it suffocated her to talk, today.

Mae Ethyl Muzzy was being pathetic and feminine and helpless under the gallant tutelage of Arch Slosser. Mae was the most recent addition to the staff; Tony fancied that she would not last long. She had appeared a week or two earlier, the blondest blonde ever seen outside of a doll shop. She was to do "feature" stories. Her only interest was in the men with whom she found herself surrounded. Some of them capitulated to her at once; the others ignored her; there seemed to be no middle course with Mae.

History of Taxation

Taxation has had a long history and the meaning of taxation has undergone shifts as taxation itself has changed. Tribute in Greece and Rome was an exacting laid by the conqueror upon the defeated and was one of the chief sources of supporting both Greece and Rome. Cicero in one of his writings spoke of taxation with horror as something that might take place in Rome if things kept on going from bad to worse. But tribute in one form or another lingered on until in the modern state it gradually made way for taxation of free people imposed upon themselves to carry on public activities. Careful study of taxation shows gradual evolution through the centuries from the idea of tribute into the idea of taxation.

Armies That Crossed the Alps

The Alpine system covers nearly the whole of Switzerland, a great part of Northern Italy, several departments of France and a large part of Austria. The historical passages of the Alps have been those by Alexander the Great, Julius Caesar, to attack the Helvetians; Hannibal, Napoleon, who crossed the Alps into Russia, only to find that the retreating Russians had left Moscow in ruins. The greater part of the French army died in recrossing the Alps into France.

Lesson for April 26

JESUS LOOKS AT WEALTH AND POVERTY

LESSON TEXT—Luke 16:19-31. GOLDEN TEXT—The rich and poor meet together; the Lord is the maker of them all.—Proverbs 22:2.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus' Story of a Beggar Man.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Which Was the Rich Man?

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Money Cannot Buy.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How Can We Make Our Social Order Christian?

The topic as given by the Lesson committee is hardly a fair statement. The supreme message is the presentation of contrasted lives and destinies as expressed through the accidents of wealth and poverty. Lazarus was not entitled to heaven because he was poor, neither did the rich man reach the place of torment because he was rich. In this lesson two worlds are unveiled before us, disclosing extremes of character and conditions of persons. In this world we see a rich man reveling in luxury and a poor man in sore affliction begging at the rich man's gate. In the other world we see the same men in reversed positions. These lives were intended to be representative.

1. The Contrasted Lives (vv. 19-21).

The rich man (v. 19). He seems to have lived in a mansion secluded from the common people. He was clothed in costly raiment. He was served the richest food that could be provided. His sin was selfishly to indulge his appetites without consideration for others.

2. The beggar (vv. 20, 21). He was laid at the rich man's gate with the hope of getting at least the crumbs from his table. The rich man gave him no consideration. The dogs of the street were more kind to him than the rich man. Though destitute and helpless, the man's name is most suggestive. "Lazarus" means "God is a help," indicating that a godly life shone through his poverty. Worldly condition is not a sure test of a man's position in the sight of God. All rich men are not wicked and selfish, neither are all poor men godly.

11. Their Contrasted Deaths and Burials (v. 22).

The beggar. He was found dead and his body was hurried off to a pauper's grave. No notice was taken of his death by the world. Doubtless the only loss to the world was that he was no longer to be seen at the rich man's gate.

2. The rich man. He also died. His gold could not bribe the messenger of death. Doubtless a costly funeral was held, attended by those who moved in his social class, the officiating priest pronouncing great eulogies over him.

111. Their Contrasted Destinies (v. 23).

1. The beggar. He was at once carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom. The souls of believers are especially cared for at the hour of death (Phil. 1:23). They go immediately to be with the Lord.

2. The rich man. Though he had an elaborate burial, he lifted up his eyes in hell being in torment. When the veil of futurity is lifted, we see the positions of these men are reversed. The poor man is in the company of just men made perfect because of his life of godliness on the earth, and the rich man is stripped of his purple and fine linen and cast into hell with all wicked men, because while on earth he lived only for selfish ends.

IV. The Reality and Fixedness of Life Beyond the Grave (vv. 24-31).

1. The cry for mercy (v. 24). Dives, which is the Latin name for "rich man," was now willing to claim relationship to Abraham. He was keenly conscious and the appetites which controlled him while on earth were still with him. Part of the torment of hell will be the cravings of appetite and lust with no means of their gratification.

2. Abraham's reply (v. 25). This reply cast the matter back upon the man's memory. He said, "Son, remember." The lashings of a guilty conscience will be most real in hell.

3. Their fixedness. Human destinies are fixed during this life. When one passes out of this life he enters into a condition unchangeable.

4. God's Word is the all-sufficient light (vv. 27-31). Dives now requested that Lazarus go on an errand of mercy to his brethren. He regarded the testimony of a spirit of more value than the Word of God. Many today are more willing to trust the rappings of a ghost than the sure Word of God. Abraham declared that God's Word is sufficient, that those who rejected Moses and the prophets would not repent though visited by one who had risen from the dead.

Floyd Gibbons ADVENTURERS' CLUB Hello, Everybody!

"Twelve Stories Up" By FLOYD GIBBONS Famous Headline Hunter.

GOING up! Take the next car, please! It's an indoor aviator who's come to tell us his tale of woe today—Distinguished Adventurer Edward T. McCrann, one of the best doggone elevator pilots that ever answered a buzzer.

Ed jumps around almost as fast as that elevator he used to drive. When I first heard from him he was living in New Haven, Conn. Two weeks later, when I had occasion to communicate with him he had moved to Washington, D. C.

It's five years since Ed has run an elevator, and he still remembers it as one of the most monotonous jobs he ever had. It was just the same old trip, from morning to night. The same old buzzer ringing and the same people getting on and off in the same old building in Hartford.

It happened about 7 o'clock on a June evening in 1929. Nearly all the tenants were out of the building. The superintendent came up from the basement and started looking over the elevator. He said there might be something wrong with it because he had heard a rasping sound in the shaft that shouldn't have been there.

Elevator Man Goes Up on Top of His Car.

One look at the top told the story. Some workmen had been doing a job on the inside of the shaft. They had strung a wire to furnish them with light, and had left it behind when they finished. That wire tangled with the main cable, way up at the top, just where the cable came out of the heavy grate that supported the motor.

Ed was just a high school kid then. He was lean and active, and the job didn't look any great shakes to him. He consented readily. After all, it was something to break the monotony of that everlasting up and down trip. The super got into the car and dropped it down below the door level. Ed climbed on top, and up they went to the top of the shaft, just above the twelfth story.

The super ran the car slowly as they neared the top. When it got close enough so that Ed could reach the dangling wire he yelled, and the super stopped the car. The car halted just even with the twelfth floor. Ed reached up and began untangling the wire.

The superintendent opened the car door and stepped out onto the twelfth floor. "Hey, Ed," he called, "I'm going down the hall for a screw driver. I'll be right back."

Ed yelled, "All right," and went on with his work. The wire was fastened a little higher than he'd thought. He grabbed the grating under the motor and lifted himself up. His toes were barely touching the top of the car and he was straining his free arm to reach the end of the wire when he heard someone enter the elevator.

He Clung Perilously by His Fingers to the Grating.

below him. Thinking it was the superintendent he paid no attention. He made another lunge toward the wire—caught it.

And then, to his consternation, the motor began to whine and the car dropped away from under him, leaving Ed in a panic, clinging to the iron grating with both hands.

By the time Ed's presence of mind came back to him the elevator was halfway down the shaft. He started to yell, but he was so close to the motor that he couldn't be heard above its noise. The elevator went clear to the bottom and stopped. The door clanged open and someone walked out. Then everything was quiet except for Ed's cries. What had happened? Could it be possible that the superintendent had forgotten all about him? Ed yelled again. The sound echoed hollowly in the long shaft. Then silence—the dead, eerie silence of an empty building. And Ed hanging by his fingers 12 stories above the ground.

"The seconds," he says, "seemed like years. Try as I might I couldn't get my mind to working. It was racing like mad trying to figure a way out, but it never found one. There just wasn't any."

"The grating was greasy and I could feel my fingers slipping—slipping. Suddenly I heard steps in the hall and yelled again. It was the superintendent coming back with the tools. He must have guessed what had happened when he heard me and saw the elevator door was closed. He yelled something to me but I was so scared I couldn't make out what he was saying. My fingers slipped a little more. Then I heard him racing down the stairs."

Superintendent and Elevator to the Rescue!

Again Ed's fingers slipped. He tried to hang on with one hand while he got a fresh hold with the other—and almost lost his grip altogether. It seemed like years—seemed as though he was holding on with nothing but his fingernails, when finally he heard the elevator start upward and knew that if he could hang on just a moment longer he'd be safe.

"There were tears in my eyes," he says, "as that car came shooting up toward me. My body was covered with sweat, and I can't say if it was cold sweat or hot. My hands slipped again as the car came on. 'I didn't have the courage to look down—didn't know how close the elevator was—when at last, my clawing fingers lost their hold on the grate. I shut my eyes as I started falling. A prayer ran through my mind and—'

And then Ed came to a stop with a thud—safe on the top of the car, about six feet from where he had started.

When Ed got off the top of that elevator cab he was limp as a rag. It wasn't until next day that he found a solution to the mystery of the moving elevator. A doctor on the twelfth floor came out in a hurry and, seeing the cab without an operator, ran it down himself.

He had heard Ed yell, he said, but paid no attention to it. "And if you could feel one hundredth of the horror I felt as I hung in that dark shaft," says Ed, "you'd realize why I shiver just a little bit, even now, when somebody mentions that doctor's name."

Success

It is said that a man can successfully lie with his eyes, but not with his mouth. The face is such an index of character that the very growth of the latter can be traced upon the former, and most of the successive lines that carve the furrowed face of age out of the smooth outline of childhood are engraved directly or indirectly by mind. There is no beautifier of the face like a beautiful spirit. The want of mind lowers all the powers of the body; but so does an evil and debased mind which is still more wonderful.

Find Castaway

A Robinson Crusoe was discovered by the crew of the French windjammer Toiosa, on Rinca Island, 100 miles north of the Strait of Magellan, South America. He was clothed in goat skins and uttered guttural cries, though he led them to a natural spring when they indicated they wanted water. The man appeared to be of Nordic stock, either Scandinavian or German, or possibly British. He is considered to be a shipwrecked sailor who has lost the power of speech, probably through never having spoken to a soul for many years.

Silk Prints and Chic Accessories

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

PRINTED silks headline the fabric story both for daytime and evening. Prints this season have an entirely new and refreshing look. New techniques and new patterns make current prints definitely 1936 and not carry-overs.

The latest treatment for daytime prints spaces tiny amusing motifs over the background. These miniature objects are frequently used instead of the dot theme. Animals are popular in patterns. Horses, and cunning dogs are decoratively delineated. Barnyard themes include roosters, tiny pigs, ducks and flying birds. Even fish and fowl have become print-conscious while butterflies dart over many of the modern silks.

As to flower prints, daytime florals are the most infinitesimal in years. Small bright florals spattered here and there, tiny bouquets and single flowers give silk prints a decidedly different look this season. Larger, more conspicuous flowers are reserved for afternoon and evening. Gorgeous florals on black, white or colored ground reflect exotic beauty.

The woman who diets will find the new vegetable and fruit prints quite to her liking. Radishes, carrots, beets, peppers, parsnips and tiny ears of corn thrive on silk crepe and silk shantung grounds. Fruit prints abound in the mode via apples, cherries, plums, strawberries and grapes in discreet and colorful patternings. The newer prints also include landscapes, newspapers, music notes, the alphabet and Roman numeral motifs.

Twin prints are news. Printed silk taffeta is combined with silk crepe in twin prints for jackets and redingote ensembles. Silk mousseline coats match the design of the printed silk crepe frocks worn under them.

When one dares to think of the novelty and chic of the new silk prints in the same breath with the novelty and chic of the accessories that will be worn with them the situation becomes positively exciting.

For example, jewelers are playing up the charming and beguiling eccentricities of the new silks by creating vegetable and fruit dress clips, bracelets, buckles and various other gadgets of colorful enamel and other composition, sometimes using bright stone settings to convey the idea.

Gloves too have entered into the conspiracy, coming out in colors to match the bright hues of the prints.

The very attractive young women pictured here, as one sees at a glance, thoroughly fashion-wise as to what is modish in silk prints and flattering accessories. The seated figure is wearing a gown made of a silk print that spaces miniature butterflies instead of the traditional dot. The three butterfly bows of starched lace down the front of the buttoned jacket-bloss together with white roses on her cunningly veiled sailor of lustrous straw give a sprightly touch. Take note of the well-bred version of the leg-o-mutton sleeve.

The other high-brow lady has chosen one of the new pure silk vegetable prints for her gown. A beet is used as motif of the familiar polka-dot theme for her modish wine and white suit. A new and important detail is the flower treatment that places a carnation on each lapel of her tailored close-fitting jacket. The silk faille hat has a third carnation. The dress is a one-piece type.

GABARDINE SUIT

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The perfect tailoring of this distinguished suit is achieved by the use of fine wool gabardine which neither wrinkles or stretches and is never too heavy for comfort. The jacket is subtly fitted. It has two slash pockets set in at the sides. The straight cut skirt has the popular inverted pleat at center front, so that the skirt is amply full for walking but keeps a slim silhouette line.

To Match Prints

One of the new ideas that Paris is advancing is that of porcelain jewelry painted to match the printed dresses with which it is worn.

Printed Trimmings of Silk Used on Elegant Daytime Frocks of One Color

Pattern No. 1851-B

The smartest of the new dresses are those in a single color with flashes of printed silk to trim them. This design is one of the best, made of blue cloxy silk and trimmed with a print in red and blue on a white ground. The front of the bodice has a row of buttons extending to the neckline and a collar of the printed silk. A slender, pannelled skirt is split up the front to show a printed strip that is attached underneath. Three-quarter

Prehistoric Bones Found in Southern California

Bits of bone have furnished scientists with evidence that man may have roamed southern California in the glacial epoch—nearly 25,000 years ago. Prehistoric remains of an imperial elephant, largest of all land mammals, and what appeared to be a human being were unearthed by WPA workers, digging 12 feet below the surface of the Slauson avenue drain, Los Angeles. In a closely assembled group were fragments of tusks, two teeth, and parts of a large vertebra. Near by were smaller bones, including a skull.

ing them from blistering. As teams start work in the spring the collars should be lifted from the shoulders at frequent intervals to allow the air to cool them and any dirt or dust should be removed by rubbing the hand down along the shoulder surface.

If galls occur, use a white lotion made of one ounce of sugar of lead, one ounce of sulphate of zinc and one quart of water for bathing the affected parts. Remove the harness and collar at noon while feeding, also alter the draft so as to reduce the pressure on the affected spot and the horse will work with much greater ease.

Grooming night and morning helps to stimulate the skin and cause the old hair to shed more readily. If the weather is hot, wash the animal with lukewarm water at night after the harness is removed, then remove the excess water from his coat by rubbing the animal with a small birch paddle. Never throw cold water on a horse, but always bathe with a sponge.

Big things have happened since you or your friends bought refrigerators

Visible COLD

The controls of the 1936 Kelvinator keep food compartment temperatures ideal, regardless of how hot it is in the kitchen. And you can see what the temperature is, because a Built-In Thermometer tells you that food is being kept surely, safely, dependably cold.

Visible ECONOMY

Today, for the first time in the history of the industry, Kelvinator provides you with a Certificate of Low Cost of Operation. The 1936 Kelvinator uses one-half or one-third as much current as many refrigerators now in use. This saving alone may justify replacing your old refrigerator.

Visible PROTECTION

You may know today, beyond a shadow of doubt, that the refrigerator you buy will give you long years of service. Because the 1936 Kelvinator is backed by a 5-year Protection Plan, written and signed by the oldest company in the electric refrigeration industry.

EVERY CITY and town in America—in clubs and homes and on the streets—people are talking about Kelvinator—the new refrigerator.

Those who have put off buying any electric refrigerator—who have waited for new developments—have found in the 1936 Kelvinator the answer to every question a conservative buyer could ask.

Owners of automatic refrigerators are replacing them with new Kelvinators, not because the old ones are worn out, but because new developments, new discoveries, new inventions now offered for the first time have, by comparison, made former refrigerators obsolete, wasteful and old-fashioned.

The 1936 Kelvinator gives you Visible Cold. It maintains low temperatures in the food compartment to a new and amazing point of accuracy. And, for the first time, a Built-In Thermometer tells you in unmistakable figures how cold it is. You know food is being properly preserved, health properly protected.

It gives you Visible Economy. Many refrigerators now must be considered wasteful of electric current, for Kelvinator uses a half or even a third as much current as many now in use. And there can be no doubt about economy, for every Kelvinator is sold with a Certificate of Low Cost of Operation.

And it gives you Visible Protection. Every Kelvinator is backed by a 5-year Protection Plan signed by the oldest company in the business.

The 1936 Kelvinator gives a new meaning to the word "convenience." There are flexible rubber grids in every ice tray, automatic defrosting switch, sliding shelves, interior light—everything to lessen the burden of housekeeping.

If you are one of the 7 million owners of automatic refrigerators, or if you have not yet bought, see the 1936 Kelvinator, get all the facts about this new refrigerator, learn how easily you can own one by our liberal Deferred Payment Plan.
