WOULD DREDGE TAWAS RIVER AT MOUTH

Board Of Commerce Elects Officers At Annual Meeting

A proposal to dredge the mouth of Tawas river was the principal thing to be discussed at the annual meeting of the Tawas City Board of Commerce held Monday night. The board took action by authorizing the appointment of a committee to investigate the matter. H. Rea Smith and J. A. Brugger were appointed. Several citizens have indicated that they would subscribe toward funds to do the work. Dredging of the river mouth would be an important improvement for the city. It would provide a safe harbor for small craft and improve perch fishing in the river.

Another project considered at the meeting was a community building. The need of a public building of that kind has been felt for a number of years. A committee was appointed to confer with the various organizations of the city and to formulate a plan of action. The committee appointed consisted of M. T. Coyle, M. C. Musolf, Rev. W. C. Voss, C. L. McLean and A. E. Giddings. The construction of a community building would undoubtedly receive the enthusiastic support of nearly every citizen in the city.

The following officers were elected for the Board of Commerce for the ensuing year: H. J. Keiser, president; Dr. J. D. LeClair, vice-president; M. T. Coyle, secretary-treasurer. The board of directors has the following members: H. J. Keiser, Dr. J. D. LeClair, M. T. Coyle, Wm. Hatton, Ernest Burtzloff, J. A. Brugger, Fred Luedtke, M. C. Musolf and Chas. Moeller.

The executive committee and all of those who assisted in making the annual perch festival a success were given a vote of thanks. The report of the festival committee secretary was read and a pleasing thing was disclosed. After paying all expenses a considerable balance remained which can be used to secure additional attractions for next year's festival. H. J. Keiser was elected chairman of the committee to put on next year's event.

In reviewing the first year's work of the Board of Commerce much can be found in its activities that was beneficial to the city. Future benefits are limited only by the amount of cooperation and support received from the citizens of this city.

Among other features of the program will be an address by Circuit Judge Herman Dehnke of Harrisville, Past Grand Master of the Odd Fellows in Michigan, and a response by one of the daughters. Several musical numbers will supplement the speaking program.

One of the interesting features of this affair will be the expected presence of the oldest member of this lodge, Frank F. Taylor, register of deeds of this county, who became an Odd Fellow 53 years ago. He will be present with his daughter, Mrs. George Prescott, and a granddaughter, Mrs. Prescott is the wife of George A. Prescott, secretary of the Michigan State Fair board.

Al Jolson, probably the world's greatest entertainer, starring in what is heralded as the most pretentious musical extravaganza in which he has yet appeared, "The Singing Kid," the latest of First National's mammoth spectacles, will be the feature attraction at the Family Theatre, East Tawas, on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, May 17, 18 and 19.

The production is a splendid human interest drama which swings intermittently between rollicking comedy and heart wrenching pathos. It is full of color, glamor and romance, with two great specialty numbers in which scores of beautiful dancing girls appear, and with many catchy new songs.

Jolson appears in the role of a great Broadway entertainer, whose gold digging fiancée, after fleeing him of all she can, elopes with his manager who has cheated Al out of every cent he has saved.

Besides Jolson the cast includes Sybil Jason, Beverly Roberts, Edward Everett Horton, Lyle Talbot, Allen Jenkins, Claire Dodd and Wini Shaw. The Yacht Club Boys and Cab Calloway and his band are also featured.

Mussolini Says Conquered Ethiopia Will Be Italian Colony — House Battles Over New Relief Bill — Some Campaign Developments.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© Western Newspaper Union.

ETHIOPIA is conquered, Emperor Haile Selassie has fled to Palestine aboard a British cruiser, and the Italian army is in possession of Addis Ababa. The war in East Africa is ended. But this climax may be only the beginning of a still greater story, for Benito Mussolini tells the world that all of Ethiopia now belongs to Italy, to be treated as a colony and defended by force of arms if necessary.

He toned this down just a little by giving the French ambassador assurance that he would not infringe on French and British interests in East Africa, meaning the French railway from Djibouti to Addis Ababa and the British interests in the Lake Tana headwaters of the Blue Nile. It is Duce intimated that if France and Britain would support his program he would give them full trade privileges in Ethiopia and exclude all other nations.

The League of Nations council was about to meet in Geneva and it was believed the anti-Fascist sentiment among the French left parties that have just come into power would influence the French attitude there. The British, too, were said not to be reconciled to Mussolini's victory and it was understood Foreign Secretary Eden would insist on continuance of the penalties against Italy, provided the other leading nations agreed. Indeed, the league could not well raise the sanctions if the European powers take the stand assumed last fall by the United States and refuse to recognize acquisition of territory by force. All of them realize such recognition in this case would create a dangerous precedent.

Mussolini's success in East Africa is a humiliating defeat for Great Britain, and a sad blow to the prestige of the League of Nations. Anthony Eden told the house of commons that Britain's failure to take military sanctions against Italy was "due to the horror of war and not to fear of the ultimate outcome." The Laborites enraged Eden by their attacks and he refused to disclose what the government's policy at Geneva might be, demanding a free hand to deal with circumstances as they might arise.

One result in Washington of the taking of Addis Ababa was severe criticism of the State department for having so wretchedly protected a legation there. Minister Engert had only a few weapons and the building was open to attack. Representative Edith Nourse Rogers of Massachusetts introduced a resolution calling on Secretary Hull for information as to measures taken for protection of the legation staff.

EMPEROR HAILE SELASSIE of Ethiopia gave up the hopeless fight against the Italian invaders and fled from Addis Ababa with his family. Mussolini's victorious troops soon after marched into the capital, the first to enter being a picked regiment representing all units of the Italian army, the Askari, infantry, artillery, air force, engineers, grenadiers, bersaglieri, Alpini, cavalry, marines and Fascist militia-men.

Their coming was welcomed by the foreigners who remained in the city, for as soon as the negus left, the natives began to pillage, plunder and burn. The business center of the town was speedily wrecked and the government buildings were stormed and ravaged, these including the treasury from which the state's store of gold was stolen, and the armory. The streets were strewn with corpses and the Ethiopians, crazed by liquor, rushed about shooting at random and gathering up their loot to carry it to the hills.

WITH the introduction of the unemployment relief bill calling for appropriation of a billion and a half dollars, a lively fight started in the house. The Republicans and a fair sized bloc of Democrats attacked the measure chiefly because the entire big sum was to be turned over to Harry Hopkins, WPA administrator, in accordance with the wishes of President Roosevelt. The Chief Executive had refused to countenance the earmarking of $400,000,000 for projects of the heavy type sponsored by Secretary Ickes, head of the Public Works administration, and so the adherents of the latter gentleman were prepared to revive the old Ickes-Hopkins feud. Majority Leader Bankhead was confident the bill would be passed as reported by the appropriations committee.

At a Republican caucus Representative John Taber of New York, ranking minority member of the appropriations committee, explained the measure to his colleagues as that they could conduct an "intelligent opposition" to it. He promised a real fight on the bill. When Hopkins was before the committee in secret session, he was ordered to give detailed information concerning his expenditure of the four billions deeded him by congress last year. Hopkins reluctantly admitted that nearly two billions of the original huge fund was still unexpended.

Added to the extra one and a half billions requested by President Roosevelt, Hopkins would have three and a half billions to spend in an election year, it was pointed out.

CALIFORNIA'S Presidential Republican preference primary, eagerly awaited by the whole country, resulted in the defeat of the Landon slate of delegates that was put forward by William R. Hearst and Governor Merriam, with Landon's tacit consent. The winning delegates, backed by Herbert Hoover and nominally pledged to Earl Warren though uninstruced, carried the state by a majority of about 90,000. Mr. Warren announced at once that he released them from their pledge, to vote as they see fit in the convention.

This looked like a blow to Governor Landon, and to a certain extent it was; but his managers claim at least 18 of the delegates will go over to the Kansan on an early ballot. Moreover, many friends of Landon deprecated the fact that Hearst was supporting him, believing it would do him more harm than good; and they were glad to see him freed in part from what they consider an incubus.

Democrats voted almost solidly for Mr. Roosevelt. Upton ("Epic") Sinclair's ticket received something over 100,000 votes, and that of John S. McGroarty, Townsend plan supporter, about half as many.

In South Dakota a slate of uninstruced delegates favoring Landon won over a ticket pledged to Senator Borah, though the margin was slender.

HENRY P. FLETCHER, Republican national chairman, has taken a leaf from the plans of the Democrats and announces that the men nominated at the Cleveland convention to head the Republican ticket will be notified of the fact at a grand outdoor ceremony in the Municipal stadium, near the convention hall, immediately after the adjournment. This plan, of course, is conditional upon the wishes of the nominees. The Democrats had previously announced plans to notify President Roosevelt and Vice President Garner of their re-nomination with a ceremony at Franklin field, Philadelphia.

SENATOR ARTHUR H. VANDENBERG of Michigan has asked Gov. Frank D. Fitzgerald of that state to present his name to the Republican convention in Cleveland for the Presidential nomination, but the senator insists this does not make him an active candidate.

"The Michigan state convention generously instructed the Michigan delegation in Cleveland to present my name," the senator said. "But the delegation is unpledged—at my request. It is free to vote as it pleases. I have not sought a delegation here or elsewhere and I shall not do so. I have not sought the nomination and shall not do so. My situation is not changed in the slightest."

Friends of Senator Borah in Utah pledged unsuccessfully for a Borah pledged delegation from that state. The Republican state convention in Ogden voted to send an uninstruced group to Cleveland, following the recommendation of the resolutions committee.

Col. Henry Breckenridge, who offered himself to the Democrats as a Presidential nominee aspirant merely so that disaffected members of the party might have some place to go, received about one-seventh of the votes in the Maryland preference primary. The rest, of course, went to Mr. Roosevelt. Breckenridge made no campaign.

THE national resources committee, which is headed by Secretary of the Interior Ickes, has submitted for the approval of President Roosevelt a plan for the creation of a Pacific Northwest Power agency that would out rival the Tennessee Valley authority and would produce almost as much electrical energy as the entire nation could utilize.

Two of the New Deal's power ventures, the Bonneville and Grand Coulee dams, would be embraced by the PNPA. The ultimate cost of Bonneville will be 75 million dollars and that of Grand Coulee 204 millions. The additional dam and power plant projects proposed by the committee would entail expenditures of approximately 526 millions, making a total of 805 millions.

FROM AROUND MICHIGAN

DANIEL O. HASTINGS, senator from Delaware, chairman of the Republican senatorial campaign committee and outspoken opponent of the New Deal, will not seek re-election when his present term expires. He so announced in a letter to the party leaders of his state, giving as his reason the necessity to devote himself to his law practice. This may have influenced his decision, but it is more than suspected that the real reason was the fact that the du Pont family, all-powerful in Delaware Republican politics, had decided that the senatorial seat should go to Gov. C. Douglas Buck, who is related to the du Ponts by marriage. Senator Hastings has always been ready and eloquent in defense of the du Ponts against attacks by the New Dealers.

Sen. Hastings

Jackson—Jackson is the first city in Michigan, outside of Detroit, to receive a WPA traffic survey. The WPA will provide $14,320 and the city $500 for the project.

Manistee—Officials of Michigan's 51 Elks' lodges are laying plans for an impressive series of floats in the parade during the Grand Lodge Convention at Los Angeles next July. They will depict the state's industries and attractions.

Lansing—An emergency appropriation of $15,000 to enable the Department of Agriculture to continue testing cows for tuberculosis in several Western Michigan counties has been approved by the State Administrative Board's finance committee.

Gagetown — Moses P. Freeman claims some sort of a record for having been clerk of Elmwood Township, Tuscola County, for 25 terms. He is now serving his twenty-sixth, and has been village clerk of Gagetown for nearly as long. He was born in Ontario, but was brought to this country by his parents at the age of two.

East Lansing—For the first time in the history of Michigan agriculture, every county in the Lower Peninsula has a county agricultural agent. Some counties share the time of their extension specialist with one or more adjoining counties. A number of counties also have home agents, working with the women in the counties, and club agents working with rural boys and girls enrolled in 4-H clubs.

Lansing—A Michigan Merit System Association has been organized to create public sentiment against the spoils system in politics. The purpose has approval of Gov. Fitzgerald, who said at a meeting in Lansing that civil service reform is not making satisfactory progress. The cost of establishing the merit system in Michigan, the Governor said, would be saved many times through more efficient government.

Lansing—The East Lansing office of the United States Weather Bureau reported in a crop summary that fall-sown grains and seedlings have been injured by spring frosts, although they came through the harsh winter weather in good condition. The report added that "vegetation has made slow growth and is considerably less advanced than is usually the case for the season. Precipitation was below normal in March and April.

Lansing—James F. Thomson, State agricultural commissioner, said that the State fair in Detroit will emphasize the celebration of Michigan's centennial. One of the features will be a $10 award to any person attending the fair who can prove he is 100 years old and has spent his life in Michigan. The fair will give a prominent place to Michigan's honey industry. It ranks second only to California as a producer of the sweet.

East Lansing—A mail poll of the principal fruit producing states with which Michigan orchardists compete indicates that their ill fortune will mean many extra dollars to this State's industry. Winter damage to orchards elsewhere has been severe, while Michigan came through with only light losses. A normal fruit crop in this state is estimated to be worth $15,000,000 and that is the kind of crop expected this year.

Traverse City—Manistee, Benzie, Leelanau, Grand Traverse and Wexford Counties prefer live deer to dead deer and sportsmen are fighting the proposed open season on the deer herds of the five counties next fall. In this battle the sportsmen are opposed by the scientists of the State Conservation Commission, who are doing their best to prove their point that killing a few deer in 1936 will result in ample food for those remaining and work toward a healthier herd.

Ypsilanti—Fred Wenzel, 21, and his brother, Elmer, 20, living on a farm south of Ypsilanti, were injured when their automobile, driven by Elmer, plunged over a seven-foot embankment into the wreckage of a bridge which had fallen during the night. The accident occurred at the Huron River at the Wayne-Washtenaw County line. The car dropped into four feet of water, but its momentum carried it up the sloping floor of the bridge and it crashed into the steel railing.

Gaylord—After 18 months of enforced suspension the Department of Conservation has resumed the assembly of aerial photographs into mosaics. This is a phase of land survey work. Aerial photographs of Isle Royale, Dickinson, Gogebic and Ontonagon, Grand Traverse and Wexford Counties taken from an altitude of 12,000 feet will be assembled into township mosaics on a scale of two inches to the mile. Photographic reproductions of these will be used for cover and base field mapping.

Lansing—Frank Murphy, high commissioner of the Philippines and former mayor of Detroit, was scheduled to depart from Manila May 13 to enter the Democratic primaries for governor of Michigan. Commissioner Murphy will be a delegate from the state to the Democratic National Convention in Philadelphia June 23. It was also established that Murphy has been reluctant to surrender his position in the islands. He is understood to have agreed to enter the campaign only at the request of President Roosevelt.

FROM AROUND MICHIGAN

Jackson—Jackson is the first city in Michigan, outside of Detroit, to receive a WPA traffic survey. The WPA will provide $14,320 and the city $500 for the project.

Manistee—Officials of Michigan's 51 Elks' lodges are laying plans for an impressive series of floats in the parade during the Grand Lodge Convention at Los Angeles next July. They will depict the state's industries and attractions.

Lansing—An emergency appropriation of $15,000 to enable the Department of Agriculture to continue testing cows for tuberculosis in several Western Michigan counties has been approved by the State Administrative Board's finance committee.

Gagetown — Moses P. Freeman claims some sort of a record for having been clerk of Elmwood Township, Tuscola County, for 25 terms. He is now serving his twenty-sixth, and has been village clerk of Gagetown for nearly as long. He was born in Ontario, but was brought to this country by his parents at the age of two.

East Lansing—For the first time in the history of Michigan agriculture, every county in the Lower Peninsula has a county agricultural agent. Some counties share the time of their extension specialist with one or more adjoining counties. A number of counties also have home agents, working with the women in the counties, and club agents working with rural boys and girls enrolled in 4-H clubs.

Lansing—A Michigan Merit System Association has been organized to create public sentiment against the spoils system in politics. The purpose has approval of Gov. Fitzgerald, who said at a meeting in Lansing that civil service reform is not making satisfactory progress. The cost of establishing the merit system in Michigan, the Governor said, would be saved many times through more efficient government.

Lansing—The East Lansing office of the United States Weather Bureau reported in a crop summary that fall-sown grains and seedlings have been injured by spring frosts, although they came through the harsh winter weather in good condition. The report added that "vegetation has made slow growth and is considerably less advanced than is usually the case for the season. Precipitation was below normal in March and April.

Lansing—James F. Thomson, State agricultural commissioner, said that the State fair in Detroit will emphasize the celebration of Michigan's centennial. One of the features will be a $10 award to any person attending the fair who can prove he is 100 years old and has spent his life in Michigan. The fair will give a prominent place to Michigan's honey industry. It ranks second only to California as a producer of the sweet.

East Lansing—A mail poll of the principal fruit producing states with which Michigan orchardists compete indicates that their ill fortune will mean many extra dollars to this State's industry. Winter damage to orchards elsewhere has been severe, while Michigan came through with only light losses. A normal fruit crop in this state is estimated to be worth $15,000,000 and that is the kind of crop expected this year.

Traverse City—Manistee, Benzie, Leelanau, Grand Traverse and Wexford Counties prefer live deer to dead deer and sportsmen are fighting the proposed open season on the deer herds of the five counties next fall. It was also established that Murphy has been reluctant to surrender his position in the islands. He is understood to have agreed to enter the campaign only at the request of President Roosevelt.

Lansing—Michigan's 113,686 war veterans will receive about $100,000,000 as adjusted compensation for war service. Payments will be made through the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago. Date of payment is set for June 15.

Lansing—The State Public Utilities Commission issued an order reducing electricity rates in the Thumb area an estimated $35,000 a year. The territory affected is that in St. Clair, Huron, Tuscola, and Sanilac Counties. The principal benefit to domestic users will be the free replacement of lamps.

Harrison—A log bridge, 103 feet long, which CCC enrollees have been building over the Muskegon River near here, will be completed this month. It is constructed entirely of timber cut in the Houghton Lake State Forest. When completed, the bridge will be the longest of its type in the lower peninsula.

Lansing—Michigan has had but 35 forest fires this spring. The average number for previous years is 400. Of the fires since the beginning of the year, 20 occurred on opening day of the trout-fishing season. Conservation Director P. J. Hoffmaster reports that last year there were 2,700 fires which ravaged 18,000 acres of forest land.

Ann Arbor—Despite published statements that the Nazi political machine would assume an important role in the celebration of the 550th anniversary of Heidelberg University in Germany this June, administrative authorities at the University of Michigan have confirmed a previous announcement that two University delegates would attend.

Lansing—Allocations and expenditures on NYA projects in Michigan exceed $1,100,000, according to Dr. William Haber, State director. "On 214 work projects in operation we already have an allocation of $593,050 and have created jobs for 6,473 young men and women," he said. "The high school aid program has 9,473 persons at work and $196,439 has been spent so far."

Lansing—The State Administrative Board has earmarked $100,000 as half of a joint State-Federal fund for the medical care of indigent children. The board approved the proposed expenditures of $6,479 to fireproof the stairways at the Kalamazoo State Hospital and authorized the Grand Army of the Republic to draw $800 from its annual appropriation for the next fiscal year to finance its State convention.

Midland—What to do with brine pumped from oil wells and with refuse from manufacture of sugar from beets has become a serious problem in Michigan. To discuss the matter the Stream Control Commission has invited representatives of Saginaw, Bay City, Midland and other cities along the Saginaw River watershed to take part in a conference. The oil producers may be compelled to return the brine to the ground.

Lansing—The State Board of Fair Managers threw the State Fair at Detroit open to out-of-state competition for the first time in three years. The board went on record as opposing the State's present 17-year contract with the Detroit Racing Association for the use of the race track and grounds. The association pays the State $12,000 a year rental. The State also participates in the profits of the association, but the Board feels this is not enough.

Lansing—Spring truck loading restrictions have been removed from all highways south of a line east and west through Bay City, Mt. Pleasant and Hart, with two exceptions. Restrictions still prevailed on the detour on M-78 at Durand and on US-127 between Hudson and the Ohio State line. The State Highway Department's announcement said that load restrictions also were lifted on all concrete and concrete-base pavements in the Lower Peninsula north of that line.

Lansing—A sharp decrease in traffic fatalities for the first three months of this year was noted in a recent report by the State Health Department. The total for January, February and March was 294, as compared to 331 fatalities from traffic accidents in 1935 for the same months. Comparative figures for the three-month period of last year and this follow: January, of this year, 114, last year, 98; February, this year, 70 last year, 105; March, this year, 110, last year, 128.

Jackson—Announcement was made by Warden Harry H. Jackson, of the State Prison of Southern Michigan, that the prison community store will be discontinued June 30. The store, which was instituted in 1912 to make possible the purchase of groceries and other supplies by prison employes at a reduced price, was attacked several months ago by a group of Jackson merchants. Gov. Fitzgerald promised them that the store would be closed when its stock was exhausted.

Dearborn—The City Council has accepted the deed to Ford Field, a gift to the City from Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ford, who in the past have leased it to the City. The deed specifies that if the Field is used for other than park purposes or if liquor is sold there, it shall revert to the Fords. Ford Field, which is Dearborn's only park, has about 20' acres bordering the River Rouge in the western part of the city. It will be re-named Clara J. Ford Park in honor of Mrs. Ford at the formal dedication ceremonies on Dearborn Day, July 16.

National Topics Interpreted By WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington—Business, as represented by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, again has clashed with the New Deal, and again the clamoring by business added nothing. Its attacks apparently bothered the New Deal not at all, for the New Deal has proceeded after the manner of the mastiff trotting along without concern while a poodle barked and snarled.

Business made no overtures for compromise with the New Deal and New Deal spokesmen were not hastening to make peace with business leaders. Altogether, there was not the slightest indication given that there will ever be peace between the two elements of economic thought.

The one thing that impressed me about the recent annual meeting here of the chamber of commerce was the solidarity of business in its opposition to general New Deal principles. That was to be expected but it has not always been the case. In days past, there were many business groups and individuals who adhered to the New Deal and vainly tried to work out an understanding with the administration. At this annual meeting, however, there was not the slightest effort made on the part of business to accomplish any arrangement whereby business and the administration would work together.

This can mean only one thing: President Roosevelt is going into his campaign for re-election without the support of business interests except where, in particular lines, benefit has accrued incidentally to specific businesses.

One would think that such a condition would constitute a threat against the President's re-election. Such appears not to be the case, however, because of the particular type of campaign which Mr. Roosevelt and his political commander in chief, Postmaster General Farley, are making. The President's recent political speeches have made it quite clear that he is seeking support wholly from the agricultural and labor segments of our voters. His appeals are quite open and frank and they are drawing considerable criticism because it is held they constitute the initiation of class struggle in this country. Whatever the reason for the President's course, it remains as a fact that he is very busy cultivating voters who have suffered most in the depression.

When I reported above that business came off second best in its fresh assault on the New Deal, I did not mean to imply that it had not made a vigorous fight. It probably gained some ground in getting before the country its side of the story, a phase of our national situation which has not been as fully advertised to the country as have the activities and accomplishments of the New Deal. The story of the losses suffered by business actually is not a great deal different from that of the individual, and many businesses are existing on a hand-to-mouth basis just as is the case with thousands of individuals. Because business, in our mind's eye, at least, is larger than an individual, political demagogues regard it as fair game and for that reason, I am inclined to believe, business has not had a fair chance on the part of most of us when considering national problems.

On the other hand, business has many units within the whole that have not played fair. There are a great many corporations that are guilty of plain oppression, even to the extent of fraud and corruption of business methods. For the crookedness of this segment, all business has been blamed by the New Deal. This is not equity. The unhappy part of it all is that unless all business stands together, good, bad and in-between, it can get nowhere at all in defense of its legitimate rights.

There is, therefore, a wholly natural and yet quite unfair result emanating from this condition. New Deal planners, in their efforts to catch the crooks, have punished legitimate business far too much if one is to accept even partially the public statements and the private expressions of the business men who attended the annual meeting of the chamber of commerce. This ought not to be and I think that legitimate business has just ground for complaint on this score.

So, as the situation now stands, I believe it can be said in all fairness that neither side in this battle between the New Deal and business comes into court with entirely clean hands. Business has its cankerous sores. The New Deal has its nitwits and theorists who know nothing about practical economics. The result of this is plainly seen, and it becomes more and more apparent that Mr. Roosevelt cannot accomplish his objective of complete recovery until he directs some of his subordinates to put their feet on the ground. Indeed, there are some of the New Deal subordinates who ought to be tossed bodily into the street, just as there are some business men who ought to be thrown into jail.

The chamber of commerce meeting brought forth the information that business, as a whole, had kept hundreds of thousands of workers on its collective pay rolls during the depression when conditions did not justify their retention. The claim was advanced that business had expended something like twenty billions in wages paid from stored-up reserves. It was further asserted that business was alone responsible for such gains toward recovery as have been made.

New Deal spokesmen, from President Roosevelt on down, have consistently accused business of failure to take on workers and help solve the unemployment problem. At the same time, the banking structure of the country has been accused chiefly by the President of refusal to extend credit to business, and business as a whole has been classified by the President as greedy.

It seems safe to say that as regards these charges, business does have an answer, for throughout all history capital has refused to work unless there was a reasonable promise of return. Now, in addition to the lack of that promised return, business is and has been constantly confronted with uncertainties on the part of the New Deal. The present pending tax legislation is typical. The most dangerous provision of that legislation is that which will prevent business from building up reserves such as those upon which it has been drawing during the depression.

If the business claim is true that it has paid out twenty billions more than its operations justified for wages during the depression, it causes one to ponder over the future. One is inclined to ask what strength business will have to do even as much for the working classes during the next depression as it has done in this one.

With reference to the New Deal policies toward business, a statement by the Rural Electrification administration has just come to my desk. It touches on that very delicate question of how far the government can enter into business in competition with private enterprise without destroying or driving out private initiative. The complaint on the part of private business that the government is continually wedging its way into private fields is well known but the REA statement puts something of a new slant on the view. In fact, it brings to the front one of the elements of government in business not generally recognized.

The REA statement consists of a letter from REA Administrator Morris Cooke to the State Corporation Commission of Virginia. The Virginia commission was urged to consider the situation in which the REA and one of its loans will be placed in event of a certain ruling by the Virginia officials. In effect, Administrator Cooke asked the Virginia commission to rule against private business in order that a $366,000 loan made by REA to a co-operative organization in Virginia can be protected.

To review the facts briefly, let me explain that a private electric company applied to the Virginia commission for authority to extend its lines for transmission of energy into a farming section adjacent to cities served by the electric company. It happened that the REA had sent agents into this same territory and had obtained promises from many farmers to buy electricity from a co-operative concern to be organized and financed by REA. The private company apparently horned in to what Mr. Cooke thought was the territory of REA by right of discovery or some other such reason, and so he is now engaged in attempting at least to prevent the private company from entering that field.

The point of this circumstance is that here is a federal agency, steeped in bureaucracy and with the usual bureaucratic thirst for power, which actually is attempting to drive private industry out of its way. It is doing it under the thinly disguised reason of protecting a government loan.

I have heard considerable discussion of this case. Many observers and students of economic questions contend that the federal government has absolutely no right to engage in that sort of business. While it may be, and probably can be, said that the electric company was attempting to take the cream of the crop by extending its lines only to territory adjacent to its headquarters, the fact remains that the normal re-employment which that private company would do will be cut down proportionately by the extension of the federal activities into that area. It may appear that the workers displaced for the private company will be taken on by the federally financed co-operative lines but such is not the case. It is just one more indication of how government, once it enters private business, continues to expand and to destroy initiative which private enterprise has and which government never has been known to have.

Hello Everybody!

"April Fool's Tragedy"
By FLOYD GIBBONS
Famous Headline Hunter.

YOU'VE all heard about the girl who plays a man like a fish on a line. Well, here's a case where that situation was reversed. Distinguished Adventurer Patricia Root, of New York city, has come here to tell the story of how a man once played her like a fish on a line.

What's more, Pat Root isn't a bit sore about it. As a matter of fact, she's darned grateful to the guy. She would have died if he hadn't—well—sort of made a sucker out of her. Fish lines can be pretty tough on fish, but this one meant life to Patricia.

It happened on April Fool's day in 1933—and you can forget about the date, because there's no fooling about this adventure. Pat was visiting in the Virgin Islands, way down in the West Indies, and as our story opens, she and five other people were starting out to go tarpon fishing.

"But not tarpon fishing as most people picture it," says Pat. "We set out in a boat from the island of St. Thomas to Thatch Cay, a small key about a mile off shore. But there we left the boat, for we were going to do our fishing from the shore."

Pat Began Tarpon Fishing From a Rocky Ledge.

Pat was just fifteen at the time. The others were older. There was John and his wife, Maria, Carl, and two native Virgin Islanders, Wilmot and Paul. They crossed the key to a spot where a high cliff ran right down into the sea. There was a little ledge at the base of the cliff just big enough for one person to fish from. And there they fished for the big, hundred-pound fighting tarpon, taking turns with the line down there on that narrow ledge.

It was late afternoon before it came Pat's turn to fish. She clambered down to the ledge and was a bit frightened at the way the waves boiled up, almost to the spot where she was standing. Says she: "We should never have gone fishing that day. There was a ground sea running and a ground sea has a peculiar motion. None of us had noticed that the ocean was getting rougher. At least, I didn't, until I turned to look up at the others sitting on the top of the cliff and suddenly found myself engulfed in water."

She Was Washed Into the Shark Infested Sea.

A huge wave had leapt up and flooded the ledge Pat was standing on. Before she could catch herself she was washed off into the deep water. "For the moment," she says, "I didn't realize the terrible hopelessness of my position. I heard a splash beside me and saw Wilmot come to the surface. He had jumped from the top of the cliff.

"Wilmot put an arm around me and swam with me toward the ledge. We reached it—clutched to it desperately—but neither of us could climb the sheer, precipitous side of the rock wall that led to it. It was only then that I realized that we couldn't get back on shore again."

Again and again, Wilmot carried Pat to the cliffside, but each time the dashing waves washed them back. Wilmot's strength was beginning to fail him, but he still labored frantically. He knew what Pat didn't—that there were sharks in those waters and there wasn't a moment to lose.

Carl Tossed the Strong Tarpon Line Into the Sea.

Fishing for Human Lives in Storm Swept Waters.

At length, as he reached the ledge for the last time, a wave washed him upon it, but by that time he was too weak to pull Pat after him. She was washed back out to sea while Wilmot, totally exhausted, lay on the ledge until Carl came down and carried him to the top of the cliff.

While Carl was carrying Wilmot back to the cliff top, John, down on the ledge, was trying to reach Pat's outstretched hands. A moment later another wave carried him off into the water, too.

The waves were now rising so high that it was dangerous to stand on the ledge. But Carl tried it. No sooner had he carried Wilmot to the top of the cliff than he started down again, this time with a strong tarpon line in his hand. He tossed that into the water. John caught it and looped it around Pat. "It got twisted around my neck," Pat says, "and for a moment I just hung there. A wave covered me and the line fell off. When I came up, I caught it again and twisted it around my finger."

And then began the queerest bit of life-saving you ever saw. Up on the ledge stood Carl, fishing rod in his hand, slowly bringing Pat in toward shore as if she were a fish. That line wasn't strong enough to sustain her weight, so Carl "played" her—reeling in as she rose on the crest of a wave, and letting the line out as she fell again.

The Waves Finally Tossed Her Up to Safety.

Minutes passed while this strange game went on. Pat began to wonder if Carl would ever get her ashore. She was sore and bruised where the waves had dashed her body against the rocks. The thin line wrapped around her hand was all but cutting her fingers in two. "I was beginning to bleed from my arms," she says, "when I heard John shout for help three times. Then there came a long silence. I didn't know it then, but John was done for. A shark had gotten him."

More minutes passed. Pat was gasping for breath—ready to faint from the torture of that cutting line. Then Carl took a desperate chance. Shouting to her to keep up her courage he began to reel in the line. Inch by inch she neared the ledge. It was almost within her reach—she had her hand on it. Then, at the crucial moment, a wave came to her rescue and washed her bodily up on the ledge.

Carl carried her back to the top of the cliff, bruised, exhausted and covered with blood. "Since that day," says Pat, "I have forgotten the real meaning of April Fool's day. To me it has become the anniversary of an awful tragedy."

February Called Cabbage Month; Later Sun Month

The ancient Saxons called February Sproutkale, or the Sprouting of the Cabbage. Later, this was changed to Sunmonth, or sunmonth, because it was at this period that daylight increased and the pruning of trees began.

The word February comes from the Latin, "februare," meaning "to expiate," because, during this month the Roman ceremony of purification took place. Originally, it was the last month of the year, and not until 452 B. C. did February assume its present place.

When Julius Caesar reformed the calendar, he gave 31 days to each alternate month from January, and 30 to the others, with the exception of February, which got 30 in leap year and 29 every other year. But when Augustus took power, he was unwilling that the month named after him should be shorter than those on either side, so he took a day from February and added it to August. So that three months of 31 days should not run consecutively, he reversed the other two.

Must Think First

"Mr. Goudy, the great typographer, when he was asked how he designed a new font of type, brooded a while and then he said, 'Why, you think of a letter and draw around it.' But whatever method the writer adopts, or finds forced upon him, his first problem is to teach himself to think; and to find audience which is hospitable to thought."—Christopher Morley.

Uncommon Sense

By JOHN BLAKE
© Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.

He thinks that he is retired. Always from the time of his graduation from Yale and later from a medical school he has looked forward to the time when he could play a little golf, do a little reading, which he has lacked the time to do, and perhaps just sit around his office and talk with congenial friends who gather there.

Two or three times a month I stop in at his office and talk to him. Never have I called but the telephone has rung.

Sometimes a man working in the shipyard has been badly hurt, and the boss on the job refuses to have anyone but my "retired friend" attend to his injuries.

Sometimes a woman "up country" whose offspring he has always brought into the world, is going to have a baby. Nobody but Doctor Jim is wanted.

Every now and then, if there are no calls, he drops in to see some of his poor and elderly patients, who will pay him—"when they can."

When he gets a little time to rest he goes to the big city where some of his fellow physicians are practicing, and brushes up on some of the new methods of treating disease.

He has saved a little money, I know. But his purse is always available to former patients who are out of jobs, or who are so used to having him treat them that they feel aggrieved if he does not come when he is called.

He always comes—sometimes for a consultation, sometimes just by himself. His features have changed but little with time. His voice is as clear and resonant as ever.

He seems to bring healing and comfort along with him when he leans over a bed and quietly counts a pulse.

I suppose there are many like him in the country. Doctoring is his business, just plain doctoring, but it is the kind of doctoring that accumulates friends. A sick person always seems to "get better" the minute he comes into the room. He is well along in years, yet his step is elastic, his eyes are keen and he inspires confidence wherever he goes. Such a man would have made a great reputation in a city. But he prefers to live and work among his people.

NIGHT and DAY

you're safe on CONCRETE

AT night the superiority of concrete becomes most apparent because of its visibility. Its light gray surface with sharply defined edges reflects light but is not glossy. Concrete conforms precisely to the formula for the ideal pavement set up by the International Illumination Congress of 1928 and by the Illuminating Engineering Society in 1934. The importance of this is emphasized by the fact that the rate of death per accident is 43% higher during hours of darkness. Concrete, smooth but non-skid, insures a quick, certain stop even in the rain. Blow-outs, spring breakage, steering gear failures, accidents of all kinds are less apt to happen on concrete. Yet concrete is not only safe—it is more comfortable—it saves in driving costs—it costs less for upkeep—and cost of construction is less than that of any other pavement of equal load-carrying capacity.

"It's connected now, Madam"

A TELEPHONE, the moment it is connected, brings definite benefits to a home. Large or small, in city or country, that home is improved by the presence of a telephone.

Of foremost importance is the benefit of protection. A telephone is a form of insurance against fire and theft. It has saved Michigan homes by the speed with which it has brought firemen to the scene. It has routed burglars by its promptness in flashing an alarm to the police. And in times of illness—during those dread hours when there is sickness in the house—a single telephone call can give help of a kind that no one could appraise in terms of dollars and cents.

Another benefit of the telephone shows itself in the work of the housewife. It reduces the drudgery in her daily routine, saves her many steps. Particularly in bad weather does she appreciate the privilege, made possible only by the telephone, of doing her shopping without leaving the house.

In social matters the installation of a telephone can mark a new era in the family life. No longer are the various members of the household out of reach of their friends and relatives. A telephone in the home instantly puts them "in touch." It makes social gatherings and many of the pleasures of friendship available both to adults and children.

The telephone is one of the most worth-while of present-day conveniences. Dependable and economical, the genuine value of its service has made it an accepted feature in the modern Michigan home.

CHAPTER XVI—Continued

"Then suppose we consider it as not having been said, not having been done, Tony?" the man suggested simply, after a little pause.

"If you could," she stammered, with the rich color rushing into her pale face.

"All right, then, it didn't happen!" he said. And Tony went on up to the city office in a very vertigo of joy, as happy today as she had been wretched yesterday. Two or three times, while she was ploughing gallantly through the scattered notes and pages that would somehow frame themselves into the sprightly social page of "Madame la Duchesse" next Sunday, she stopped and put her elbows on the desk and her face into her hands for sheer ecstasy.

She had no trouble getting her Sunday photographs now. Sometimes it amused her to remember with what a panic of apprehension she had once faced the necessity of getting them every week. It was all quite simple, when one knew how; and Tony did know how, now. She was in touch with all the good photographers; and whenever they could they helped her out, and whenever she could she gave them credit in the newspaper.

When distinguished strangers came to town Tony called on them, asked quite frankly for photographs, and whenever an especially significant social gathering took place she went to it and took her cameraman along. Always, in her middle right desk drawer, there were ten or a dozen shiny prints in reserve. During the week she would make a selection from them and write the sentences that gave them their reason for appearing in her columns. These scraps of composition, with clippings from Eastern papers about Californians, notes from her own daily column, were all pasted together, and connected by chatty little phrases such as "Speaking of luncheons," or "By the way, Betty and Joan are both to be bridesmaids before they are brides."

It was hack work now. Now and then she had to stay very late for one cause or another, stay after most of the men had drifted away at midnight, until Frank Fitch's office was dark, and only two or three of the city room reporters remained, and faithful Ingersoll was at the Associated Press desk, and drunken Goldberg was the night editor. Tony always found this experience thrilling; she felt her hair getting fuzziy and her face hot; an utter weariness of words would possess her, yet it was a wonderful thing to be a part of the old paper, and have one's share in putting it "to bed."

In and out of the big hotels, meeting ministers and ambassadors on their way to and from the Orient, and writers and actresses and film folk, in and out of the city hall, getting to know the mayor, meeting the governor, known to the presidents of the clubs, Miss Taft went her tireless and busy way. All June was busy with Commencement exercises, and the latter half of December was filled with Yuletide cheer. Youngsters were coming home from Eastern schools, every club had a dinner or a tree. Tony, violets on her shoulder, her cheeks rosy in the cold air, played her own part in all their lives.

"You're so sure of yourself!" Brenda said admiringly. "You're different. I hardly know you, Tony."

"You're never sure of yourself in the newspaper game, Bendy. Anyone may be out, and anyone may be in, at a moment's notice."

"You don't have to worry!" Brenda said in fond pride. She stood with her back to the microscopic sink she had just reduced to immaculate cleanliness and smiled at her sister.

A banker's convention was meeting at Del Monte, near Monterey, and Tony had been sent down to cover the feminine interest of the occasion. She and Brenda could be together for long quiet hours during the three days, for the busy times for Tony were in the late afternoon and evening, when the bankers came in from meetings or golf, and social activities began.

Brenda's small domain was one of the least expensive apartments. But Tony somehow found the little Atwater home touching and charming.

For one thing Brenda loved every inch of it with an almost solemn devotion. Her idolatry of Alvin included everything that concerned him. Quite simply, and without apology, Brenda put Alvin's lightest wish above all other considerations and obligations. Aunt Meg was not to come down and visit them because "my dear, he says old ladies get him nervous." Brenda was not going to a hospital in July; "Oh, it just costs money, and you have to have nurses, and their meals, and I can get some good old Mexican woman in and have it without the slightest trouble here. Alvin worries so about money, and I don't want this baby of mine to begin by burdening him."

"We'll all adore it!" Tony said, and Brenda, smiling at her with a face already a little drawn and pale, said gratefully, "Ah, I love you for saying that, Tony."

In these days Tony felt much older than Brenda. Her life moved in wider channels than the peaceful ones that Brenda knew now; the cheerful buying of half a pound of butter, half a dozen eggs, the thrifty hoarding of the cut lemon, the cut onion. Brenda's evenings were spent talking with Alvin, listening to the radio, working out the crossword puzzle in the evening paper.

The older sister's complete absorption in her new role made Tony feel oddly lonely. She had no part in Brenda's life now, much as they loved each other, much as they loved to be together. Brenda was only a background for Alvin, and Alvin felt for his handsome, successful young sister-in-law only the rather nervous liking of a busy and worried young doctor toward the person closest, after himself, to his wife. Tony was smartly dressed, successful; perhaps Alvin Atwater was a little more conscious of Brenda's tiredness and paleness, the flatness of Brenda's purse, the inevitability of dishwashing and bedmaking for Brenda, when Tony was by.

On a hot February day, the last of the convention, they took their lunch down to the shore of Pebble Beach and lay talking on a warm strip of sand that lay between the rocks.

"You go up tonight, Tony? Ah, it's been so delicious having you, even for this long," Brenda said. "You've done me—I can't tell you how much good! I was sort of dragging about, and I didn't seem to have any ambition about Iago's clothes, and you've braced me so wonderfully. I knew you would! And tell Cliff, and tell darling Aunt Meg—"

She was full of messages for them all. But Tony knew that she and Alvin only asked of them, just now, to be let alone. They had lost Bendy for a while; they were all eclipsed by the figure of Alvin. But she would come back.

"Oh, my dear, we forgot to look up Doctor Vanderwall at Carmel!" she exclaimed suddenly.

"We could do it this afternoon!" Brenda said, stricken.

"We could not. This is too nice!" But after a moment Tony reconsidered it. "Perhaps I should," she said reluctantly. "Ruth is sure to feel hurt if I don't!"

CHAPTER XVII

They had had their lunch now, and the little basket that had held eggs and cookies and lettuce sandwiches was empty. The sun was beating down steadily; there was shelter, down here in this little angle of beach, and a sense of security and protection.

Brenda said on a long yawn: "Let's do it; let's be decent. We can go home by way of Carmel and look him up."

"All right," Tony dropped her head on her arms again.

"Does he like you?"

"Madly. If we find him at home you'll see."

"Well," Brenda protested laughing, pleased with the idea, "he probably doesn't display it in company."

"Oh, but that's just what he does," Brenda asked you?

Brenda asked it a little self-consciously, and Tony, looking up quickly, laughed with a suddenly flushed face.

"Re—peatedly. In company and out. Always."

"And you don't like him?"

"I admire him enormously. I think he's splendid. He's tall and fair and full of fun—he's nice."

"Not reliable?"

"As reliable as death! He's young," Tony said. "But he's going to be one of our Best Known Americans—with capitals, Bendy."

"Then, why? No money?"

"As a matter of fact, he has money. After he'd sent me enough violets and orchids to sink the Bremen, I asked Ruth. He's rich. At least, to our way of thinking he is."

"Does he know you're down here?"

"I'm not sure. He goes skimming about from Montana to Laguna—hunting rock parasites, I believe it is. He sent me a frightful English magazine with an article in it about the parasites of Kennebunkport or something."

Brenda was silent for a long while. Then she said simply:

"You're not happy, are you, Tony?"

"I ought to be," Tony temporized.

"I try to be. Sometimes, when I look back on the old days," she said, "and remember how young we were, and how poor we were, and yet how we used to laugh and carry on and sing—"

"It seems so contrary; it's just life, I suppose," she added as Brenda, watching her intently, did not speak.

"Tony, may I ask you something?"

"Ask away, Bendy."

"Is it Barney?"

For a minute Tony stared at her sister in amazement; then her color came rushing back, and she burst into laughter.

"Barney Kerr! Good heavens!"

"Well, Cliff said he heard he was going to be married."

"And so he is, and the girl hates me as the siren who wrecked his life and broke his heart. Poor simp,"

Tony said amusedly, looking very handsome in her thin white frock, with a white hat on her dark hair, and her skin all the browner by contrast. "She'll spoil the life out of him. And she has money, and that's what his mother wanted. He'll be all right!"

"Then if it isn't Barney, who is it? It isn't this doctor," Brenda mused. Tony was silent for a space lying facing her sister with her elbows planted in the sand, and her chin in her palms.

"Is it who I think it is, Tony?" Brenda said, very low.

"I guess so."

Brenda was silent for a while. Then she said:

"Does he know?"

"Yep," Tony answered briefly.

"Tony, she doesn't know!"

"Of, of course not, of course not," Tony said impatiently. "There's nothing to know, anyway. I broke down—the night you were married, it happened to be, and blubbered out something—I don't know what, and a day or two later he said we would act as if it had never been—and that's all there is to it!"

"You mean," Brenda said, troubled, "that he pretended—tried to pretend that there was nothing to it, that you must just forget it?"

"What else, in heaven's name, could he do?" Tony's tone was one of lifeless patience.

Brenda was silent; watching and pondering.

"I think you're being a tremendous sport."

"I'm trying to be. Noblesse oblige something, I suppose," Tony said, in a bored voice. "No girl has a right

"I couldn't, I suppose. It's like that, of course."

"It's like that." And now the blue eyes were raised, looked full into his own. "So you see, then," said Tony.

"So I see then, I suppose," he said after a moment, shrugging. When Brenda turned around they were both laughing, and Tony was saying of Joe's oceanside farm: "It must be simply disgusting!"

But afterward, when she was saying good-by in Brenda's little apartment, she was serious again. Brenda had shyly detained her, a thin hand on Tony's shoulder, and had asked: "Do you—do you imagine he's unhappy too, Tony?"

"Larry," Tony had said rather than asked. "I don't know." Tony rested her head against Brenda's temple, like a tired child. "I love you, Bendy," she said. "You're sweet. Don't think I'm a fool, playing with fire, thinking it's smart to fall in love with the boss. I hate it. I didn't want it to be this way."

"There must be some way out!" Brenda said desperately.

"There isn't any way out, Bendy darling."

Tony kissed her and left her there. Getting into the car, entering once more upon the life that was so especially her own, the life of newspaper gossip and newspaper work, Tony felt in a wistful sort of fashion that she had never loved Brenda quite as much as she loved her now, or been so alienated from her.

It was eleven o'clock at night when she and the other reporters reached the city office to report their task done; Greeny was there, grudgingly content with what they had sent in; nobody else was there except a few stragglers, and poor Neverton, entirely unconscious and sprawled on his desk. Tony went home to find her aunt alert and interested, and managed to report the major details regarding Brenda and Brenda's husband and Brenda's home before collapsing exhaustedly between the clean straight sheets and snapping off the light.

And then again, as darkness and peace and rest shut down upon her, the slow pictures of memory began to revolve: Larry in his office, Larry coming down to the city room for a busy moment; Larry overcoated and deep in conversation with men in the elevator; Ruth's drawing room with the wood fire and the teacups, and the photographs on the table and bookshelves, and the scent of toast, and Larry coming rosy and cold to the doorway to say, "No, no, thanks! I'm going to have a shower and change before dinner."

He always said that now, when he found Tony there, or made some excuse not to join her and Ruth. And for that reason Tony went as seldom as she could, went to Ruth's house only when Ruth's invitations were so pressing that to decline them might have been to arouse suspicion.

Once, quite unexpectedly, Ruth said: "Tony, you like Larry?"

"I adore him," Tony said simply, with a laugh and a flush.

"You two don't see each other as much as you did."

"He's my boss now, Ruth. He's the biggest man in the office—Danielson's gone, and Arnoldson's sick half the time. I can't get gay with Larry any more."

"Oh, if that's the reason," Ruth was satisfied. Anything that aggrandized her Larry was understandable to her.

But she had a quarrel with Tony, nevertheless. With much archness and much kindly and even slightly condescending pleasure Ruth had accepted the situation between Tony and her nephew Joe Vanderwall. Joe was of the same lineage as herself; he was brilliant, successful, lovable, and he had means. All these things were extremely important to Ruth, to whom Tony was still naturally merely the clever and fascinating reporter to whom Mother had given her first handsome coat, and the tale of whose family's delightful makeshift and emergencies had opened to the helress an unexplored section of life.

But if Joe liked Tony, and Joe made no secret of the fact that he did, then Ruth was enchanted with the idea that she and Larry would presently have this younger couple like a little sister and brother to oversee and advise and help. Her first astounded criticism of Tony had come when the changed attitude of the other three had revealed to her the unwelcome truth that somehow things were not going right between Tony and Joe.

"I think she has a good cheek, I really do!" Ruth said in amazement to Larry. "Tony surprises me. She appears to be the type that just naturally doesn't fall in love."

"She gets a great kick out of her work," Larry, scrapping his chin with a bony brown hand after shaving, answered mildly.

"Work nonsense! Where'll her work get her in a few more years? There's no real future for a girl in newspaper work, and she certainly isn't going on into writing. She says herself she has no imagination."

"She has lots of imagination."

"D'you think so, Larry?"

"Oh, yes. She hasn't got it into line, that's all. I wish to heaven I had her imagination," Larry said. "She puts something into life. I don't know what it is—glamour—something."

"Well, I think she's a dear, and I think she's most amusing sometimes, although perhaps she rather overdoes it and makes things funny at the expense of the truth," Ruth was beginning guardedly, when Larry cut in healthily.

"That's the thing exactly. She adds glamour. That's all I meant by saying she has imagination. Now, you, Ruth, if you tell me a thing today it's just as you told it ten years ago. Tony never tells a thing twice alike."

"I'm afraid perhaps I call that truth," Ruth suggested, with a prim little cough. "And I'm afraid that I'm old-fashioned enough to think it's important."

Larry had heard this tone before, had been in this little predicament before. Tying his tie, looking at his wife through the high mirror of his chest of drawers, he said:

"She hasn't got sense enough to see what a chance she has with Joe. He's so big he can afford to act like a fool now and then, and Tony's just dumb enough to think that means he is a fool."

"She is dumb in some ways," Ruth said affectionately, in a mollified voice. And then curiously: "Larry, do you think it could be some one else?"

"You mean with Tony?"

"Yes; down in the office, I mean. Do you suppose that there's someone else?"

"Ha!" Larry said, in the tone of one thinking.

"I'll bet you there is. For one thing, she acts like a girl in love."

"I don't know who it could be," Larry said, arranging a handkerchief in his breast pocket. "Come out and watch me have my breakfast."

"I'm going to have some, too," Ruth said, putting her feet out of the luxurious nest of satin comforters and lace pillows from which she had been watching him.

That same day, at three o'clock in the afternoon, Tony's desk telephone rang in all the other din of the city office, and Tony, answering it, heard Larry's voice.

"Tony? I'm glad I caught you. Could you come upstairs for a minute?"

The stars and Catharine wheels of opalescent light had settled a little, but her voice was uneven as she said: "Coming." She went into Larry's own sanctum, magnificent now in leather chairs and soft gray-brown eucalyptus walls.

LESSON TEXT—Luke 19:1-10; 45-48. GOLDEN TEXT—Thou shalt not steal.—Exodus 20:15. PRIMARY TOPIC—A Visit From Jesus. JUNIOR TOPIC—Why Jesus Visited Zacchaeus. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What It Means to Be Honest. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Taking Religion Into My Business.

"Jesus entered and was passing through Jericho" (v. 1), one of the most noted cities of Bible history. It had been the stronghold of the Canaanites, standing squarely across the Jordan, taken by the marching pitcher-bearers of Joshua (Josh. 6), the city where Rahab experienced salvation through her faith (Heb. 11:31). It was fitting that Jesus should pass through the Jericho of his own day, for a new victory was to be experienced through faith—the conversion of Zacchaeus.

1. Zacchaeus Seeking Jesus (vv. 2-4). This man, a tax-collector for the Roman power, had heard that Jesus was kind to publicans; for had he not had mercy on Matthew? Curiosity seized him; he must see what manner of man Jesus was. Who can know how many have been led to find Christ through the exercise of curiosity. The citizens of a city are drawn to a church or a tabernacle through the growing interest of a revival campaign. Curiosity widens, becoming the initial motive in many who later have faith in Christ to the saving of their souls.

1. His difficulties (vv. 2, 3). His infamous business was a handicap, at least in the eyes of the populace. The very fact that a Jew should hold office under the hated Roman power would make him extremely unpopular. His riches condemned him. The fact that he had acquired much wealth in this calling pointed to extortion in the collection of taxes. He was unpopular; he was pushed aside.

The shortness of his stature (v. 3) was a handicap, but not so great a one as his spiritual state. He doubtless had been pushed about much of his life and had built up an attitude of mind that now manifested itself.

2. His persistence (v. 4) stood him in good stead. If too short to see, he was not too timid to climb. He had been obliged to climb all his life. Always obstacles placed before him he had brushed aside, or had climbed over them, if a desired goal lay beyond. Now, the goal was a sight of Jesus, and he climbed. Though the rich man of town, he would not let pride keep him from the undignified act of getting up among the branches of yonder tree for Jesus was to pass by.

11. Jesus Finding Zacchaeus (vv. 5, 6). While Zacchaeus was trying to see Jesus, Jesus was looking for him, as always he is looking for the seeking soul. With no word that would embarrass or humiliate him, Jesus bade him come down from the tree, and declared his intention to go with him to his home. How wonderful is grace, that regardless of one's past life Jesus will receive the seeker as a friend and enter into fellowship with him. Zacchaeus did not hesitate, but made haste to come down, and with joy opened his door to the new-found Friend.

11. Zacchaeus' Conversion (vv. 7-10). His conversion was sudden and thorough. He was converted before he reached the ground.

1. What the crowd said (v. 7) was characteristic; they murmured and said that Jesus had gone to be guest of a man who is a sinner. They could not think of his sin in the past tense, but said it instead of was. Jesus forgives and forgets. He "came to seek and save that which was lost," and he "remembers our sins against us no more forever."

2. The proof of conversion (v. 8) was immediate and satisfying. His new life was begun with resolution and restitution. He dedicated half his goods to the poor. If he before had been a grafter, he was now a generous giver. He was ready to untangle the skein of tax irregularities. While God forgets the past, he nevertheless expects the forgiven sinner to make restitution where possible.

IV. Honesty in God's House (vv. 45-48). If honesty must be exacted from publicans and sinners, much more should it be required of those who have to do with the worship of God. It is easy to condemn those who made capital out of the requirements of temple worship in Jesus' day; it is not so easy to condemn those who use the Church of Christ as a stepping stone to personal profit and political preferment. "Judgment must begin at the house of God" (1 Pet. 4:17).

A Firm Faith
A firm faith is the best divinity, a good life the best philosophy; a clear conscience the best law; honesty, the best policy; and temperance the best physics—living for both worlds is the wisest and best life.

God's Promises
I believe the promises of God enough to venture an eternity on them.—Watts.

Giving and Getting
So many people think that love is "getting" whereas love is "giving."

Few Roses Are Fragrant
Of the 7,000-odd varieties of roses, not more than 30 are fragrant and only three contain enough oil to warrant their use in the making of attar of roses, a perfume that has, at times, been worth its weight in gold.—Mrs. L. L. Thomas, Portland, Ore., in Collier's Weekly.

Many Sports Folks Share Ruth's Hazy Memory for Names

DURING the seasons of his greatest glory, the newspaper boys were ever uncovering one flaw in the perfection of that stout citizen who now devotes his declining years to golf. No matter how often they might dine or otherwise commune with him, they always were discovering that the first 15 or 20 meetings were the hardest.

After that the stout citizen would give up guessing as to whether this was Bill or Dan or Joe. From then on their lives could be made more beautiful by knowledge that Babe Ruth would know them, collectively and individually, as "Kid."

Babe Ruth

Of course, from time to time gentlemen—from whatever estate the newspaper business happens to be in—resented this disregard for their undoubted worth and baptismal monickers. Most of them, though, merely took it as new evidence of the pressure that besets a great man or smirked complacently at mirrors which persisted in giving bald evidence that this "Kid" stuff was all wrong.

How Billy Southworth's Memory Was Stymied

Sadly, being one of those who are reluctant to share the miseries and the secrets of his profession with the world, the reporter was forced to admit the truth.

There was, for instance, the St. Louis baseball scrivener who devoted several seasons to giving his best aid, advice and comfort to Billy Southworth. Perhaps the reporter and the Cardinal manager were not as close as Park and Tilford but to all outward appearances they seemed two hearts that beat as one. Then fate (along with the failure to win a pennant) decreed that Southworth should try his baseball fortunes elsewhere.

Scant months later the two were reunited in a hotel lobby.

"How are you, Bill," caroled the baseball writer, rushing forward.

"Ah, uh." It was not that Mr. Southworth is a snob, a ribber or a guy who devotes his life to dealing out the ice. His brow was wrinkled in earnest concentration for a full minute. You could see that he was bearing down, determined not to let memory slip a fast one over the corner.

"Ah, uh—Say, I know your face. Didn't you use to play the piano at—?" But the curtain must be drawn over this deplorable scene.

Carpentier Didn't Know Joe Beckett Socially

It can be lifted upon the fact that athletes also fail to know one another. By this I do not refer to the Helen Willises, the Helen Jacobses or those others who probably have very good reason for not nodding as they pass by.

Instead, we can turn to the more elysian spheres. There we can consider an episode in the life of a gentleman once admiringly hailed by the press as the "Orchid Man," although he certainly was not in the florist racket.

"What kind of a fellow is this Joe Beckett?" he was asked.

"I don't know," was the quick, confident and smiling reply. "I've never met him."

"Sure you have," persisted the interviewer, shifting to English so that the waiter might get in on the laugh, too. "Don't you remember? He was in the ring with you twice and you knocked him out both times."

"Yes, I know." Georges Carpentier continued affable and willing to oblige. "But that was in the ring. I was only getting paid to fight him. There was no sense in talking to him then, was there?"

Not in the Box Score

Both the Cubs and the Dodgers, his old and his new playmates, are using the Freddy Lindstrom sliding pad this year. It is a pad sewed inside the left trouser leg. . . . Nat Fleischer, the magazine editor, shortly will publish an encyclopedia of boxing. It will contain the history and bout by bout records of fighters since 1703.

IT, PERHAPS, was no mere coincidence that one of the warmest days of the year arrived along with Max Schmeling.

Naturally the ballyhoo for his fight with Louis will continue to set the pace for other temperatures until the dark Uhlan sits down in front of the cream-colored Bomber on June 18. As Mr. Arthur Brisbane probably quite often has advised the world, a million bobs is a lot of doughnuts. Therefore even such specialists in charitable promotion as the athletic club directors must shower down their sparks of imagery so that all citizens with money to burn will have no trouble finding their way to the festal altar.

Just as naturally, though, all this good clean fun has brought new wrinkles into the otherwise bland countenance of Uncle Michael Strauss Jacobs. While wandering hither and yon, now peeping in anxiously to see that Herr Schmeling has been properly tucked into his pretty white (11:00 p. m.) bed, now peeping out fretfully to inquire whether Bolobos Yussell Jacobs has been yanked out of his pretty white (11:00 a. m.) crib, Uncle Mike ever faces the future with suspicious eye. Even while engaged in such elevating work as handing out A's (or some other letter of the Broadway alphabet) to the boys who have done the best daily compositions, the haunted gleam ever is present.

This is because, first of all, Uncle Mike has no illusions as to where charity lines up for the gun. Then again, he is a business man as well as the most eminent promoter since the days of the late lamented Rickard. So, because it is his own dollars which must back the ballyhoo and because a full 200 G's worth of them must be laid on the line long before June 18, this most celebrated of Main Stem traders must ever give his best regard to those items of fate which never appear upon the immaculate balance sheets.

To make sure that no misfortune besets the path of the two athletic young men before they can wrangle before their gold embroidered audience, he must carefully scan all angles. While doing so he must comport himself with due memory of those other promising prizefights which were forcibly detoured, while seemingly on the straight and narrow way to success.

In mentioning this, there is no desire to cast hints or make promises. Instead, because the way of a promoter is tough and because no fight is a success, a flop or even a sure thing until the gong has sounded, I merely am sympathizing with Uncle Mike. There have been all too many such affairs which have encountered dire fate in spite of the best of skill and intentions.

For instance there was the time when Stanley Ketchell and Sam Langford were ready to enter the ring of the old Fairmont club up in the Bronx. Perhaps a little bird whispered, although the bird for which the Bronx is most famed is not given to whispering. Or it may have been that the higher-ups conveyed more direct and forcible tidings to Billy Gibson, the promoter. Anyhow, the affair was junked and later conveyed to Philadelphia.

Wills' Battle With Tunney Never Did Come Off

Sometimes, though, fate behaves very handsomely in dealing with all parties concerned. High up in this sorting of fights which never came off there can be mentioned the Sharkey-Campolo affair, which was scheduled for Yankee stadium. Just as the woefully small crowd was wending its way into the arena, the skies wept in sympathy with the promoters who were about to lose a small fortune. So the thing was called off forever.

There also was the time when Gentleman Gene Tunney was supposed to meet Stevedore Harry Wills. A considerable portion of the press thought favorably about the glorious possibilities of that one and, indeed, the tickets already had been ordered for it.

What happened need not be gone into here. Some say that Tex Rickard begged Tunney to lay off and promised him a shot at Dempsey.

Things I believe:

That the sign on Connie Mack's door should read "Wrecking Done Here. Terms Strictly Cash."

That folks who predict that Tony Canzoneri will be massacred at Madison Square Gardens in May forget the first Ross-McLarnin affair. Just as is the case now, Vancouver Jimmy had been idle for too long before training for that one. So his legs were shaky and his timing was off all evening.

That the National League executives, having proved themselves great big strong business men of sterling character by blackballing the Jew who was voted the best umpire in the game, should make up with Dolly Stark. That the National League umpiring, never on a very high average, is worse than it has been in years. That, if Brooklyn really is the best of all baseball cities, it is very poor judgment to keep shooting the most incompetent arbiters into the Dodgers' games.

That the A. A. U. may be shocked to discover a Commercial league digging deeply into that Sunday afternoon hockey gold mine next season.

That a man with a bag of gold also will come into the lives of the more eminent winners at the Olympics this summer. And that professional track and field events will be a success.

More Gay Prints! More Gay Flowers!

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

"what to wear." You will know.

MORE, more, more! And still fashion keeps calling for more gay prints in the spring and summer wardrobe, for more gay flowers on your hat, on your lapel, at your throat and at your waistline, for gloves that are going in strong for high color, for footwear, too, that is most daintily gay. As flamboyantly colorful a season is this, as wildest flights of imagination e'er might venture to picture.

When the salesperson shows you the newer prints that fairly scream with color, do not be timid, but throw discretion to the winds and indulge to your heart's content in all the Dubonnet reds and the gorgeous tulip shades that are so fashionable and the lovely violet and purple tones and the radiant mimosa hues and the glamorous blues and the stunning greens plus dozens of equally captivating hues such as the color-card of fashion records.

Typical of the present trend is the costume to the right in the illustration. A galaxy of flowers in multi-color is the theme of the lovely triple sheer of hemberg print which fashions it. The colorings are as riotous and entrancing in this triple sheer as ever glorified a midsummer garden scene. You cannot but look your pretty-prefiest self in a flower print like this. Then, too, this costume is eminently practical. It is the sort that has a way of fitting into the picture anywhere and everywhere. With such a dress-plus-jacket ensemble in your wardrobe you will never be haunted with the ever-recurring question of

The white pique bow and gilet treatment sound a winsome note of freshness. The short pleated sleeves are distinctively chic. The little jacket is double-breasted and belted at the back. These brief perky youthful-type jackets, some of which look like basques, others flaunting animated peplum, are quite the rage. You may, however, if you wish, go to just the extreme opposite and have the coat made of print that tops your print dress, full-length buttoned down the front from neck to hem Long or short, be sure your print dress has its matching coat, jacket, or cape.

If you are looking for something distinctively new and out of the ordinary in prints, here it is, pictured to the left. White shadow flowers on a dark background such as this is the very latest print news. Fancy, if you will, white shadow-outlined flowers against a rich Dubonnet red, or contrasting a vivid green ground, or gray or black or the color you like best. No happier choice could be made than this cool frock made of triple sheer print of hemberg. It is dark enough to be practical and it is light enough to look and to feel summery and sheer. Marquise sleeves cut full and shirred at the wrist with appliques of the flower motif cut from the print itself and a very feminine jabot of the marquise, contribute to the charm of this gown.

We couldn't resist including the cunning flower-trimmed hat in this group. It fits so perfectly into the scheme of things colorful and entrancingly spring-like. It is just such a headpiece as will crown any flower-print dress with glory. The shiny black of its basket-weave straw is contrasted by a spray of gay posies—yellow bachelor's buttons and blue cornflowers. The bow is of silk taffeta in matching cornflower blue.

New Frocks Are Inspired by Fashions From Orient

The stately robes of the Manchus and the distinctive apparel of the peasants have inspired extremely smart occidental frocks. Printed jacket dresses copy the brilliant coloring and designs of Chinese embroideries and porcelains, and feature graceful mandarin sleeves. The coolie jacket becomes a tunic with the typical standing collar and slit sides, posed over a slim straight skirt. Black paper taffeta makes a delightful dinner dress with a high neckline piped with jade green, short kimono sleeves and a jade green sash. It is worn with black kidskin sandals and a flat beret of black felt faced with green.

For Tailored Suit

The hat of the season for tailored wear is a soft felt, much like a man's fedora, that you can wear day in and day out. Another very popular hat is a small felt beret in black, in pale misty blue, or a queer bright shade.

Color Combination

Perfume green with wine red is a combination featured in a heavy lined beach costume. The green is used for the blouse and the red for skirt and tailored shorts.

OF NOVELTY COTTON

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Cottons for swank is the message from fashion headquarters. This gay topcoat is of checkerboard patterned cotton, woven in navy and white. The novelty cotton suitings and coatings shown this season are thrilling. A one-piece frock in white twill is worn under this coat. A printed silk scarf at neck and waist adds tone and gaiety. The hat is white felt embroidered in white angora.

The White Ensemble

One of the loveliest ensembles seen recently was white in every detail—the gown, the ermine wrap, long white gloves, two strands of pearls, diamond bracelets, a diamond hair clip and three pure-white orchids pinned to a narrow shoulder strap.

Seers Reports Tent Theft; Saw Thugs in Crystal Glass

Madame Lula Pula of Auburn, Calif., gypsy fortune teller, told the sheriff her tent had been stolen.

"Why didn't you look in the crystal ball and learn who took it?" she was asked.

"I did," she replied. "It was taken about 3 a. m. by 15 men whose names I didn't get. I was angry and put the Romany curse of them, but out of kindness of heart removed it and decided to report the case to the sheriff."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes weak women strong. No alcohol. Sold by druggists in tablets or liquid.—Adv.

Have a Care

To have the courage of one's convictions doesn't mean to inflict them on somebody else.

He Speeds 70 Miles Home; Finds He Drove Wrong Car

T. Shoemaker of Clatskanie, Ore., wanted to get home quickly. He dashed to a parking lot for his car and raced away. On completing the 70-mile drive, he discovered he had taken some else's car and left his own in the lot. The owner of the borrowed car accepted his apology.

Do You Have STOMACH UPSETS?

MR. Charles O'Farrell of 402 North Howard St., Bloomington, Ill., said: "When I feel out-of-sorts, have no pep, no appetite, I buy a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is great to relieve indigestion and gas on the stomach. After I use a bottle of it I feel fit as a fiddle, have a fine appetite and can eat almost anything without fear of stomach distress." The body of the New Firestone High Speed Tire is made from selected long-staple cotton dipped in liquid rubber, absorbing eight pounds of rubber in every hundred pounds of cotton. This patented Gum-Dipping process insulates every fiber in every cotton cord, preventing internal friction which creates the heat so destructive to tire life, and giving to the tire added strength.

This heavy, broad, traction and non-skid tread is held to the cord body of the tire with Two Extra Layers of Gum-Dipped Cords, a patented construction, making the cord body and tread an inseparable unit.

A leading university in 2350 tire tests has found that the new, scientifically designed Firestone High Speed tread stops a car up to 25% quicker. Its super-traction and non-skid efficiency have also been proved in the famous Pike's Peak Race where for eight consecutive years it has been used on the winning cars.

School Notes

High School
The high school band plans to take part in the band festival in Mio this Saturday. We are leaving by bus at 8:30 a. m. in order to be on time for the massed band rehearsal. There will be short concerts by various bands, and a massed band concert at 3:00. After that the bands will march individually through town, and march back in massed formation. We are working hard on the marching with Isabelle Dease as our new drum-major.

Marguerite McLean is a new member in the clarinet section of our band.
We note by the "Normal College News" that Dr. No-Yong Park, Harvard scholar and authority on Oriental questions, addressed the general assembly of the Michigan State Normal College, Ypsilanti, Wednesday. It will be recalled that Dr. Park gave an address early in the present school year in the local high school assembly room. We have two of his books in the high school library.
Owen J. Cleary of the Cleary Business College spoke to the high school assembly Tuesday afternoon. The theme of his talk was concerning "impressions," and developed the idea of the effect of impressions which we make upon our fellow citizens.

Our baseball team won two games during the past week. They defeated St. Joseph Wednesday, May 6, by a score of 22 to 6. The features of the game were home runs by Bill Mallon and Laurie Frank. Tuesday, May 12, the boys defeated Harrisville by a score of 8 to 5. Bill Mallon, pitching for our team, struck out 14 opponents while allowing eight hits and walking one. Willard Wright and Walter Zollweg led our boys in hitting. Willard getting a double and two singles in four trips to the plate and Walter getting two singles in two official times up. We play Standish at Standish Friday, May 15, and Prescott at Tawas City on Tuesday, May 19.
