TAWAS WINS FIRST GAME AT BENTLEY

Locals Get Off To Splendid Start In League With 11-6 Victory

The Tawas baseball team got off to a fine start in the 1936 North-Eastern Michigan league campaign last Sunday by trouncing the Bentley nine, 11 to 6. Although about half of the game was played in a drizzle of rain, a considerable number of spectators were on hand to witness the contest, which took place at Bentley. Rain had stalled off starting the game for some time and threatened to force a postponement, but a little later subsided enough that the contest could get underway.

Bentley was first to break into the run column with two counters in the opening frame on singles by Koelsch and Wasalaski and a double by Baldwin. The locals cut one run off this lead in the third when Quick was safe on an error, stole second, and scored on Mallon's single, but lost more ground in the last half of the same frame when Bentley tallied twice. Riggs tripled but was thrown out at home when he attempted to count on Wasalaski's bounder to the box. Baldwin then drove in Wasalaski with a triple and scored a moment later on Sanders' single.

Tawas swiped the lead in its half of the fifth with an attack that netted four runs. A base on balls to Laidlaw, Johnson's single and Davis' walk loaded the bases with one out. Kasischke slapped a grounder to short and Laidlaw, who got off to a good start, beat the throw to the plate nicely, leaving the sacks still filled. Libka was thrown out, short to first, and Johnson crossed the plate with another run. Moeller then went into the game in place of Brown and was hit by a pitched ball to crowd the bases for the third time. Quick produced the other two counters by lacing a single over second, Davis and Kasischke scoring on the hit.

Brown's retirement from the game necessitated a change in the locals' hurling and Quick was elected to this post. Brown had yielded eight hits during the four frames he was on the mound but fanned nine men and was just getting nicely started. However, Captain Laidlaw decided not to work him too long in his first assignment of the year, therefore the change in pitchers. This change looked like a bad move in Bentley's half of the fifth. Albert could not find the plate without throwing a crumple and the Bay county lads recovered the lead, scoring two counters on a base on balls out. Riggs. (Turn to No. 1, Back Page)

Mrs. Reuben Smith

Mrs. Reuben Smith, pioneer resident of Grant township, passed away at her home Tuesday evening, May 12, after an illness of ten days. She was 72 years, six months and 11 days of age. Funeral services were held Thursday, May 14, at the Hemlock Road Baptist church, where she had been a faithful member for many years. Rev. Frank Metcalf officiated. Interment was in the Tawas City cemetery.

Charlotte Hyland was born in Tawas township October 31, 1863, and had resided in Isosco county all her life. On January 17, 1881, she was united in marriage to Reuben Smith of Grant township, who preceded her in death six years ago. To this union twelve children were born. All the children with the exception of one daughter, Grace, survive her.

Left to mourn her passing are: Five sons, Henry of Grant township, Roy of Lansing, Fred of Mount Morris, Chester and Clare of Flint; six daughters, Mrs. Gordon Culham of Cabri, Saskatchewan, Mrs. Marshall Warren of Flint, Mrs. John Van Wagon of Millington, Mrs. John Burt, Mrs. Fred Pfahl and Mrs. Wm. Herriman of Grant township; one sister, Mrs. John Burnett of Lake Stevens, Washington; 35 grandchildren, five great grandchildren, and a host of other relatives and friends.

Mother
This mystery—Death,
Has robbed us of you,
Robbed us while you slept.
Yet we can thank
That angel stork
For planting on your face—a smile;
As if you knew at last
The secret of 'Beyond'
And found it pleasant,
Or—perhaps in leaving us,
You conned our names—
In that last labored breath,
And knew that each of us loved you;
Loved you deeply, and sincerely,
And would love you always.
Perhaps you knew—and felt it comforting—
As that brave heart of yours at last
Gave up the struggle,
That we would shed sad tears the while
We wished that we could have you back again.

4-H Club Members Inspect Huron National Forest

Thirty-two members of the 4-H Clubs from Ogemaw, Isosco, Oscoda and Arenac counties spent last Thursday inspecting all the various activities on the Huron National Forest. With the guidance of Forest Service officials, CCC camps, the nursery and other points of interest were visited.

At the Ranger Station a demonstration of fire fighting equipment was shown. A crew of ten CCC boys demonstrated how trees were planted in the forest. The club members were guests of the Silver Creek CCC Camp for dinner, after which all members participated in a short softball game.

Dog Tax Notice

The 1936 dog tax becomes delinquent after June 1st, 1936. Any person owning a dog six months old may pay the tax at the county treasurer's office on or before the first day of June, 1936, at one dollar for males and two dollars for females. After June 1st, 1936, the owner of a male dog must pay two dollars and of a female four dollars.

Grace L. Miller,
Isosco County Treasurer.

THE FLEET UNDER WAY

Sailing comes in as one of the first of summer activities. With the approach of June owners are greening their boats and soon the bay will be dotted with white sails. Gerald Mallon, owner of the Tawas Bay Boat Works, states that several new boats will be launched here this summer.

Saginaw Choir Will Render Concert Here

The Michigan Lutheran Seminary chorus from Saginaw, under the direction of Prof. W. Schaller, will render a sacred concert at the Emanuel Lutheran church, Tawas City, next Sunday, May 24, at 10:00 a. m. The chorus consists of thirty-three voices, well trained under the able conductor. All music is rendered from memory without any musical instrument as accompaniment.

Among the selections to be rendered by the chorus will be the ancient choral compositions of Neander, Schultz, Bach, Luther, Schein and Krueger. Prof. Schaller, the conductor, will also deliver a short English and German sermon during the three-part program.

Prof. A. Sauer, business manager of the chorus, will direct a few words to the assembly. In case of his absence, Student Manager Willard Kehrberg, son of a former Tawas City pastor, will briefly speak in behalf of the students.

Will Hold Preschool Clinics at Whittemore and National City

The first two infant and preschool clinics of the year will be held by Dr. Gladys Kleinschmidt and Miss Hoffa at the school house in National City on Tuesday, May 26th, from 10:00 to 12:00 a. m. and in Whittemore at the school on Tuesday, May 26th, from 1:30 to 4:00 p. m.

Anyone with small children below school age regardless of age are cordially invited and urged to come. Immunization against smallpox and diphtheria will also be offered at this time if the parents desire to have it done.

Cut-Worm Problem May Be Controlled at Moderate Cost

Cut-worms do large amounts of damage to field and garden crops at this particular season of the year and may be controlled at a rather small cost.

Cut-worms are naked caterpillars which are the larva of medium-sized, night-flying, winged moths or "millers." These larva or worms have a habit of cutting off food and eating it after it has wilted, the damage being that they usually cut off much more food than they are able to consume. They are usually produced most abundantly in sod land and several generations emerge in a single season. The worms pass the winter for the most part as partially grown larva, ready when spring comes to attack plants just coming up from the ground.

There are two types of cut-worms which we are confronted with. The first are the climbing worms which ascend trees and vines and feed upon the swelling and opening buds. These may be kept from their feeding grounds by placing a band of tree-tanglefoot about the trunk of the tree or vine. The common cut-worm is the species which we are usually most concerned with. In the kitchen garden the tomato, cabbage, cucumber and like plants may be protected by enclosing the plant in a paper collar. It is merely a round collar of stiff paper placed about the plant and projecting into the soil for half an inch or more.

These paper collars do very well for the garden but when whole fields (Turn to No. 2, Back Page)

W. A. Evans Purchases New Funeral Coach

W. A. Evans purchased a new Henney funeral coach last week. The coach was delivered to Mr. Evans at Grand Rapids and was shown at the Funeral Directors convention held in that city previous to bringing it home.

This new funeral coach has been beautifully built along the new lines of automotive design and the interior hangings are in burgundy colored mohair. The chassis was made by Oldsmobile.

Four Active Libraries In County Under WPA

Under the WPA Isosco county has four active libraries located at Tawas City, East Tawas, Alabaster and Whittemore.

The Tawas City library has moved from the city hall to rooms over Ray Smith's barber shop.

Book mending is done at the East Tawas library. This is an interesting project and the public is invited to visit the East Tawas library, situated in the city hall, Thursday, May 28th, 2:00, 5:00, 7:00, 9:00 p. m.

The libraries need magazines and books, which will be greatly appreciated in the respective communities in which they are donated.

LOCAL MASONS REMODEL AND ENLARGE HALL

To Install Pool Tables and Bowling Alley; Increase Size of Dance Floor

All that hammering, sawing, singing, yelling, etc., that you have been hearing up in the first ward was caused by the members of Tawas City No. 302 Masonic Lodge while working on the addition to their temple.

A twenty-five foot addition to the annex, with a corresponding lengthening of the basement under it, is now in progress. A bowling alley and pool tables, now stored in the basement, will be installed in the lengthened basement which is being made long enough to accommodate a regulation length bowling alley. The floor above will accommodate in better fashion the crowds who attend the "Masonic dances" during the winter and can serve as a public hall when needed.

In addition to the above, the members are installing water and sewer connections, enlarging the kitchen, installing steam heat, and will extend the lodge room over the annex. When completed it is expected that the resident lodge will have one of the best fraternal homes in this section of the state.

It is the aim of the members to provide a place for recreation for others as well as their own members, especially the boys and girls of the community.

All labor on the project is furnished by the members free of cost to the lodge. A member versed in the particular work in progress is accepted as foreman by the rest and his orders are carried out on that particular part of the work. A mason, a carpenter, and a plumber have issued their orders as far as the work has progressed and later a (Turn to No. 3, Back Page)

East Tawas High School Music Department Will Present Musical Comedy

On Tuesday, May 26, the music department of East Tawas high school will present at the Community Building a romantic musical comedy, "The Gypsy Rover," for which the lyrics and music were written by May Hewes Dodge and John Wilson Dodge, and will be given in modern costumes.

The story concerns Rob, an English nobleman, who is stolen when an infant by his nurse, Meg, who later becomes the wife of Marto, a gypsy. One day, while riding in the woods with her fiancé, Lady Constance Martindale is lost. They wander to the gypsy camp where Constance and Rob meet and fall in love.

The role of Rob is being taken by Andy Tebo, and that of Constance by Ernestine Larson. They are assisted by Meg, Rob's foster-mother (Alice Lattery); Marto, Meg's husband (Robert Small); Sinfo, gypsy lad in love with Zara (Frank Ahonen); Zara, belle of the gypsy camp (Marian Lickfelt); Lord Craven, an English fop (James Stewart); Sir George Martindale, Constance's father (Carlton Nash); Capt. Jerome, captain in the English army (Charles Fairfield); Nina, Sir George's second daughter (Gladys Seifert); Sir Toby Lvon (Robert Amo); McCorkle, a song publisher of London (Lawrence Daley); gypsy children and a chorus of gypsies, ladies, and gentlemen.

The proceeds of the operetta will be used to buy new instruments for the music department.

'Robin Hood of El Dorado'

One of Year's Best Pictures

With Warner Baxter contributing the finest performance of his career, "Robin Hood of El Dorado," coming to the Family Theatre, East Tawas, on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, May 24-25-26, will take its place among the truly magnificent outdoor features of the talking screen.

The story of Joaquin Murrieta, as depicted in "Robin Hood of El Dorado," is the story of one of the California Spaniards who was broken under the iron heel of American invasion on the heels of the discovery of gold. Painted with bold strokes on a romantic canvas, it finds opportunity to present a drama of romantic glamour that is vital entertainment. Spectacular, thrilling and romantic, it embodies the qualities that make the motion picture a premiere medium of entertainment. It is recommended without reservation for the entire family.

Appearing with Baxter in the picture is a notable featured cast which includes Ann Loring, Bruce Cabot, Margot, J. Carrol Nash, Eric Linden, Edgar Kennedy, Charles Trowbridge and Harvey Stephens.

Borah Loses Ohio Primary—House Defeats Frazier-Lemke Inflation Bill—Tugwell's Report on His Resettlement Administration.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD © Western Newspaper Union.

SENATOR WILLIAM BORAH banked heavily on success in the Ohio Presidential preference primary, but the Republicans of that state turned him down decisively in favor of their "favorite son," Robert A. Taft, son of the late President Taft. Of the 52 delegates to the Cleveland convention, Borah captured only five, the others, including the delegates at large, being Taft men. The winning delegation will be virtually unpledged, because it will vote for Taft only on the first ballot. Mr. Borah did not take this defeat calmly. He gave out a statement in Washington accusing the Republican organization leaders of manipulating the votes of colored citizens against him by promising the passage of federal anti-lynching legislation which he has opposed as unconstitutional. The Idaho senator added:

Senator Borah

"The Republican party will go into the campaign laying great stress upon Constitutional integrity and the preservation of state rights. The men who are in control of the party, and who will likely be in control of the convention, will write its platform and name its candidate, have already demonstrated that they care nothing about Constitutional integrity or the preservation of state rights, that their talk on this subject is hypocritical and intellectually dishonest."

Ohio Democrats polled about 500,000 votes in the primary, nearly 100,000 more than the Republicans, and they expressed their preference for Mr. Roosevelt over Col. Henry Breckenridge to the tune of 16 to 1. They also renominated Gov. Martin L. Davey, who will be opposed by John W. Bricker, Republican, in November.

West Virginia also held primaries and there Borah and Roosevelt won easily over nominal opposition. The state's Republican delegation, however, will go to the convention uncommitted. It is interesting to note that one of Ohio's delegates at Cleveland will be Alice Roosevelt Longworth, daughter of "T. R." and a spectator at many previous conventions.

WE ARE not going to have any currency inflation, at least before next session of congress. The Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage refinancing bill, dragged out of committee by a petition signed by 218 house members, and then hotly debated for a day, was defeated by the decisive vote of 235 to 142. The bill called for the printing of three billion dollars for its financing.

The petition signers included 159 Democrats, and before the vote every one of them was told by Pat Boland of Pennsylvania, the party whip, that the President didn't want the measure passed at this time and that if the member voted for the bill it would be just too bad for him. Besides this potent argument the Democratic leaders induced President William Green of the American Federation of Labor to intervene and he called together the federation's executive council and had it write a letter saying it was opposed to the bill because of the inflation feature. This was read to the house by Speaker Byrns and undoubtedly affected the vote, though some members resented being told what to do by Mr. Green.

There was relief in the White House when it was announced the President would not have to veto such a measure in an election year.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT was supposed to have abandoned for the present the Florida ship canal and Passamaquoddy tidal power projects for which the house refused to appropriate further funds. But Senator Robinson of Arkansas was called to the White House for a conference and returned to the house to introduce a resolution authorizing the President to appoint engineering boards of review for the two schemes.

The boards would present their findings by June 29, and, if favorable, the President would have authorization to set aside $10,000,000 for the canal and $9,000,000 for Passamaquoddy out of available relief money.

NEWTON D. BAKER and Dean Acheson, counsel, for five power companies that are trying to block the government's municipal power program, met with defeat in the District of Columbia Supreme court when they sought to subpoena correspondence between President Roosevelt and Secretary Ickes. Jerome Frank, a New Deal attorney, stated that the President had directed that his "privilege" of testimonial immunity be asserted in the case, and Chief Justice Wheat refused to issue the subpoena.

IF THE house concurs in senate action, the title of Harold L. Ickes will be changed from secretary of the interior to secretary of conservation. A bill making the change was passed by the senate at the instance of Senator Lewis of Illinois. Two years ago, when Mr. Ickes was at the height of his power, he wanted the title altered to "secretary of conservation and works" and hoped that many of the agencies of the Department of Agriculture would be transferred to his department. But Secretary Wallace objected strenuously, and lately so much has been taken out of Mr. Ickes' hands that Senator Lewis cut his bill to the one paragraph, making the change of title and leaving off "and works."

WORKS PROGRESS ADMINISTRATOR HARRY HOPKINS issued an order to state WPA directors instructing them not to employ armed guards, not to spy on workers and not to blacklist workers who organize.

The order was issued following a conference with Victor F. Ridder, New York city WPA administrator, who employed a detachment of guards to protect his office against anti-WPA demonstrations which Mr. Ridder asserts were stirred up by Communists.

OPPOSITION in the senate finance committee to the corporate profits tax in the administration's $803,000,000 revenue bill was so strong that both Democrats and Republicans sought for some compromise. Treasury officials were heard in favor of the measure as passed by the house, but former treasury officials and various business and industrial leaders speaking in opposition were seemingly more persuasive. Senator Tom Connally of Texas put forward a plan he thought all might agree upon. It would retain the 15 per cent corporation income tax and repeal only the capital stock and excess profits taxes, instead of repealing all corporation taxes as proposed in the house bill. In addition it would superimpose a graduated tax on undistributed earnings, exempting the first 20 per cent on the amount retained. The house bill reaches a maximum of 42 1/2 per cent of the total income if none is distributed.

Senator Byrd of Virginia, another of the Democrats opposed to the house bill, showed, in a letter to Secretary Morgenthau, that 11 of the largest corporations in the country would pay no taxes under the Roosevelt bill.

RESPONDING to a senate resolution, Rexford Tugwell made a report on the activities of the resettlement administration of which he is the head. He showed that it has 15,804 employees on the administration pay roll and has been allotted $275,549,944 to spend. Of this amount, the report stated, $98,347,005 has been spent and a total of $173,091,823 obligated, leaving $102,458,112 unincumbered.

Up to April 15, according to the report, the resettlement administration had taken options on 9,670,000 acres of land, of which options on 8,469,000 acres, costing $36,344,000, had become legal commitments. As of May 1, the report said, 59,521 persons, including 3,581 on the CCC pay roll, were employed in connection with the land acquisition program.

The report stated that a recent survey indicated that "the purchase of approximately 24,000,000 acres of land would be needed to block in and round out" the existing projects and to establish a minimum number of new projects.

Of 33 subsistence homestead projects, construction has been completed on 18, is in progress on 11 and final plans have been drafted for 4. The report lists four suburban housing projects, financed from a $31,000,000 allocation for this purpose. They are in Berwyn, Md., Bound Brook, N. J., Milwaukee, and Cincinnati.

On rural rehabilitation, the report says the RA has cared for more than 800,000 families. For its rehabilitation advances to individual "clients," the administration will expend $106,000,000 through June 30.

There were more than 71,000 workers employed on projects financed by the organization during April, the report states, adding that the peak is expected to be reached during the summer with 100,000 workers.

BECAUSE the League of Nations council would not immediately recognize Italy's annexation of Ethiopia and the creation of the new Roman empire, Premier Mussolini recalled his representatives from Geneva, and before long Italy may quit the league entirely. At present it is merely "not participating" in its activities. The council had adopted a new resolution virtually condemning again Italy's aggression in East Africa and then adjourned until June 15.

Previously Baron Pompei Aloisi, chief of the Italian delegation, had walked out of a session of the council because Wolde Mariam, Ethiopian representative, was permitted to take a seat and present a plea from Emperor Haile Selassie.

CHANCELLOR KURT SCHUSCHNIGG of Austria has long been at odds with the vice chancellor, Prince Ernst von Starhemberg, and now he has got rid of that active young man and is practically the sole dictator of the country. This was accomplished by the resignation of the cabinet and its reconstruction immediately with Von Starhemberg left out. Schuschnigg is not only chancellor but also minister of defense and foreign minister.

Von Starhemberg had antagonized Schuschnigg by insisting on keeping up his own private army, the Heimwehr, and also by his friendliness toward Mussolini and his general Fascist sympathies.

MANUEL AZANA was advanced from the premiership to the presidency of Spain by almost unanimous vote of the 874 electors gathered in the Crystal palace at Madrid. He succeeds Niceto Alcalá Zamora who was removed from office on a charge of malfeasance after the Leftist victory in the recent elections.

Manuel Azana

Azana, fifty-six years old, is a lawyer, orator and playwright and is regarded as the most astute politician in Spain. To the notification committee he said: "Spain may rest assured that I will be loyal to the principles of democracy and that the welfare of the nation will be my constant concern."

HINDENBURG, the immense dirigible, carrying 107 persons, mail and freight, made the flight from Friedrichshafen to Lakehurst, N. J., in 61 hours and 57 minutes and was welcomed by thousands of Americans, including R. Walton Moore of the State department who brought the greetings and congratulations of President Roosevelt. Three days later the airship started back to her new base at Frankfurt-on-Main. The dirigible was in the command of Capt. Ernst Lehmann, but he received far less attention here than did Dr. Hugo Eckener, the veteran skipper of Zeppelins. Eckener, in bad with the Nazis at home, was permitted to be aboard the ship as an "adviser." He and Captain Lehmann went to Washington together, while the ship was being groomed for the return flight, to call on President Roosevelt and other officials and return their greetings.

On the return flight the Hindenburg traveled swiftly, reaching Frankfurt-on-Main 48 hours and 18 minutes after the departure from Lakehurst.

The Hindenburg is to make ten commercial trans-Atlantic trips this summer.

PARK TRAMMELL, veteran United States senator from Florida and a staunch supporter of all New Deal measures, died in Washington of a cerebral hemorrhage which followed an attack of influenza. Though ill, he tried to remain on the senate floor long enough to vote for a proposal to include $12,000,000 in the War department appropriation bill for continuation of the Florida ship canal. This effort probably cost him his life.

SOME two thousand delegates were present when the annual convention of the American Red Cross was opened in Chicago by Admiral Cary T. Grayson, the national chairman. Speakers at early sessions included Mayor Ed Kelly, and Ralph Christian, schoolboy of Birmingham, Ala., representing the Junior Red Cross. Mrs. Elizabeth H. Vaughan, a nurse of St. Louis, was awarded the Florence Nightingale medal for her long record of nursing service.

Dr. Thomas Parran, Jr., the new surgeon general of the United States public health service, was present and made a speech, and talks were delivered by Robert E. Bondy, director of national disaster relief, and others who directed activities in the flood and storm areas.

SECRETARY ICKES' supporters were easily defeated by the Harry Hopkins forces in the house fight as to whether the Public Works administration should share in the handling of next year's relief funds. But it was understood the feud would be revived in the senate under the leadership of Senator Hayden of Arizona, Democrat and a member of the appropriations committee.

The house majority voted according to the wishes of the administration on the relief bill, which is a $2,364,229,712 measure carrying $1,425,000,000 to finance the Works Progress administration after July 1.

In addition to the relief appropriation, the bill carries $458,631,860 for the social security program, $39,900,000 for the Tennessee Valley Authority, $400,000 for continuing the communications commission's telephone inquiry, and various new and deficiency amounts for other agencies.

The most important amendment permitted to be added to the bill by the house leaders was one submitted by Representative William P. Connery providing that the prevailing wage in communities be paid to WPA workers.

Ickes signed his acceptance of defeat in the battle for funds by ordering an immediate cut of 25 per cent in PWA personnel in Washington and throughout the country. This affects 2,000 persons.

MUSTAPHA NAHAS PASHA, leader of the Wafd or Nationalist party in Egypt, has become premier and formed a new government in which he holds also the post of minister of the interior. Wasfy Ghall Pasha is his foreign minister and Gen. Ali Fahmy Pasha is minister of war and marine.

FROM AROUND MICHIGAN

Port Sanilac—Army engineers have started a survey for a small boat harbor here.

Eaton Rapids—Eaton Rapids High School will graduate 70 Seniors in June, the largest class in its history.

Menominee—Schuyler Williams, veteran Green Bay commercial fisherman, died recently at Cedar River. He was 86 years old, the grandfather of 65 children and great-grandfather of 38.

Carsonville—Silas Montgomery and Tommy Bachus ride daily in their auto-car, an automobile chassis motivated by an airplane engine with a five-foot propeller. The machine will develop 30 miles an hour, running with the wind.

Lansing—Ten cases of meningitis, five of them fatal, were reported in Detroit during April, and the Michigan Department of Health is now supplying meningococcus meningitis serum, an antitoxin, to 50 centers in the state to combat the disease. There have been 10 cases of mild smallpox so far this year.

Tecumseh—In a heavy rainstorm, Herbert S. Waring and Eugene Pangle were hurrying along in opposite directions on the sidewalk, with umbrellas held close over their heads. They crashed head-on and Waring ricocheted against a tree and onto the cement walk, suffering a broken rib, facial cuts and bruises.

Ionia—Although property valued at $258,521 was endangered in the last fiscal year, actual damage by fire reached only $16,293 here. This is one of the smallest annual fire losses on record. Two house fires, both of which came within one week in February, caused the greatest damage, $14,038. Not one false alarm was recorded for the year.

Cheboygan—Stanley Elya, one of the quietest boys in school, and Helen LaFond, star of the debating team and one of Northern Michigan's outstanding extempore speakers, tied for the honor of being salutatorian of the Cheboygan High School graduating class. Both had a four-year average of 91.4. Olive Baier, valedictorian, had an average of 92.

Olivet — Young President Joseph Brewer, of Olivet, is believed to be the only tap-dancing college president. He made his third appearance as a solo dancer at a sorority cabaret recently, finishing with a cartwheel, amid thunderous student applause. Last year he performed, appropriately garbed, as the "Daring Young Man on the Flying Trapeze."

Munising — Two Munising fishermen, Roy Mattson and Ray Hines, were picked up by Capt. H. Janssens and his crew from the Sand Point Coast Guard Station in the west channel of Munising Bay after their small boat had been caught in ice floes. The Coast Guardsmen reported that they had to battle the ice four hours before reaching the pair. Neither of the men suffered from exposure.

Battle Creek — Naseeb Damoose, superintendent of Battle Creek's new sewage disposal plant, has on his hands the problem of disposing of grain estimated to be worth $1,000, which flows into the plant each week from an unknown source. Mechanism of the plant was clogged by the heavy flow of wheat and corn. Investigators said that they believed that the grain was not being dumped, but was escaping from a storage.

Lansing—The state's newly acquired herd of 47 moose trapped on Isle Royale last winter have been taken by boat across Lake Superior to a new home in Upper Peninsula forests. Twelve will be put in the Escanaba River tract, 20 miles south of Negaunee, and the rest at a point about 15 miles east of Munising. Some of the moose weigh 1,100 to 1,200 pounds. Total cost of the trapping expedition will be about $8,000.

Lansing—The Michigan division of the Grand Army of the Republic has called its depleted rolls and is preparing for another encampment. A check of the roster shows that 12 Grand Army men have died since Jan. 1, there being 66 posts in the state with a total enrollment of 198 Civil War veterans on May 9. In 1889 the G. A. R. boasted a membership of 21,418 in Michigan, in 373 posts. The state encampment will take place at Battle Creek, June 11, 12, and 13.

Cheboygan — Under the Federal soil-conservation plan of benefit payments, Cheboygan County Farmers would grow 55,000 fewer bushels of potatoes this year, according to estimates by the County Planning Committee. The Committee estimated corn reduction of $15,500 bushels and 3,300 fewer bushels of beans. Principal increase would be in alfalfa hay. Cheboygan County farmers have 50,000 chickens, the committee estimated, and annual egg production was placed at 300,000 dozen.

Lansing—Michigan's Old Age Assistance Law is less than 50 per cent adequate, the State Emergency Relief Commission declares in its second annual report. For old age assistance $4,100,000 now is available, $2,000,000 in the State appropriation and $2,100,000 in Federal funds under the National Social Security Act. The commission said the State appropriation is based on the assumption that only 20,000 would be found eligible for old age pensions and unless larger funds were made available it would be necessary to reduce grants.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart
National Press Building Washington, D. C.

Washington.—With the national convention of the Republicans only a week away, New Deal strategists are bending every effort toward a program designed to make a knock-down and drag-out fight of that session. It is not disclosing any secret to say that the New Dealers are using this weapon up to the hilt because disruption of the Republican party would make victory easy for Candidate Roosevelt.

Predictions in politics always are perilous. Governor Alf M. Landon of Kansas seems to be in the lead at this time for the Republican nomination, but there are many observers throughout the country who contend that the "Kansas Coolidge" cannot win, and that various other aspirants for the nomination, men whose hats are in the ring, likewise must be counted out. This is to say that a feeling is growing that a dark horse will be nominated.

From the strictly Washington viewpoint, which may be different than elsewhere in the country, astute political observers are convinced that there must be a swift change in sentiment to keep the nomination away from Governor Landon. Yet, it must be said that politics is fraught with just such things and so it is entirely possible that the Republican nominee may be someone other than the present apparent leader in the race.

Those who feel that Governor Landon will be the nominee claim he has played his cards well. But others insist that the Kansas governor made a bad mistake in allowing his name to be linked with the Hearst faction in California. Indeed, I have heard comment that this fact alone will defeat Governor Landon.

It has been interesting to observe the maneuvers of the New Deal strategists with reference to the Landon boom. Some observers contend that the efforts being put forth from New Deal quarters in an attempt to discredit Governor Landon were being engineered because the New Deal fears Governor Landon as a Roosevelt opponent more than it fears some of the other candidates for the nomination. Frank R. Kent, the Washington commentator for the Democratic Baltimore Sun, asserted that the New Deal activity against Landon's nomination constituted "the best evidence of the increasing probability" of the Kansas governor's nomination. Mr. Kent did not say that which some other informed writers feel, namely, that the Landon candidacy would mean a bitter campaign on the part of the Roosevelt forces to re-elect the President. Nevertheless, it has been interesting to note the various ways in which Roosevelt spokesmen and Democratic publicity men have been trying to show the country that Governor Landon is not the man who should be nominated.

I have no quarrel with these efforts. It is the game of politics. Virtually anything goes. It is to be assumed that present Republican maneuvers will be concentrated in a few weeks on Mr. Roosevelt personally as the Democratic candidate. In fact, one hears expressions around Washington that for the first time in Mr. Roosevelt's political career, he is going to be directly under fire.

Just in this connection, one can recall that through most of the New Deal administration, criticism of New Deal policies and plans, almost without exception, was directed at Roosevelt appointees. The President himself has been exceptionally free from the type of personal attack that frequently characterizes political opposition. He has had absolutely none of the kind of criticism that occurred in the Hoover administration and was directed at Herbert Hoover, personally.

So, as we look at the campaign picture just ahead of the Republican convention and only a month in advance of the meeting of the Democrats at Philadelphia where President Roosevelt will be renominated, without opposition in his own party, I think it can be said without fear of contradiction that both candidates this year are going to be smeared personally just as fast and as long as the ammunition holds out.

While we are talking about the forthcoming quadrennial conventions, the two keynote speakers naturally enter into any discussion. Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky will do the keynoting for the Democrats at Philadelphia and Senator Frederick Steiwer of Oregon will deliver the main address to the Cleveland convention of the Republicans. Senator Barkley was the keynoter at the Chicago convention when Mr. Roosevelt was nominated by the Democrats four years ago and, although it is a subject not freely discussed, it is said in high places that Mr. Roosevelt wanted the same man to do the job again, believing the Kentuckian to be an omen of good luck.

The selection of Senator Steiwer was one of those things that can be said to be a surprise and yet not a surprise. He is, without doubt, a good man for the job. Yet in some quarters there is a conviction that Senator Steiwer was picked by the so-called "Old Guard" of eastern Republicans. Some observers still hold the belief that the selection of Senator Steiwer was not wholly pleasing to the Landon forces but that as it may, there has been no particular ill feeling created by it. If it represents a piece of strategy by the eastern Republicans who were dealing with their problem by remote control, they apparently have played into the hands of the more liberal wing of Republicans. It is being predicted rather freely that the Oregon senator's keynote speech will lean strongly to the liberal side but that it will stress sound economics.

The best advance information obtainable on Senator Barkley's plans is that he will devote the bulk of his time on the convention platform to a review of Roosevelt accomplishments in the belief that such a review will take his presentation out of the class of a "defense" speech. Those with whom I have talked concerning the Barkley speech believe he has adopted a smart political course; that he feels there is no need to defend anything that has been done and that the record itself is the thing upon which the Democratic party can make a plea for re-election of Mr. Roosevelt.

Having observed Senator Barkley in action in the senate for a number of years, I believe I am justified in saying that he is a square shooter and a fighter. In this respect, he and Senator Steiwer, the Republican keynoter, are much the same type of man and, therefore, if either convention gets off on a wrong foot, the fault will lie with the convention managers rather than with the proposals offered by the men who are supposed to lay before the delegates a rough outline of their respective party's campaign policies.

Concerning the record of the keynoters in the senate, each stands foursquare. Senator Barkley has consistently battled in behalf of the President and New Deal policies throughout Mr. Roosevelt's administration. Senator Steiwer has been just as consistent in his opposition. Certainly, Senator Steiwer has been much more outspoken against New Deal policies than most of his Republican colleagues, and much more so than Senator McNary.

For many months Washington has heard the plaint of business leaders who wanted to fight socialist schemes and unsound economic policies given birth by New Deal brain trusters but were afraid to do so because of "retaliation." Almost constantly, information has filtered into Washington to the effect that if a corporation undertook to oppose New Deal plans vigorously, there was danger that some agency of the government would "crack down" on them. Much of this information has been taken by Washington observers with a grain of salt but a different aspect has been placed on the situation lately.

It was in the senate that a New Deal Democrat, Senator Homer T. Bone of Washington, broke through with statements that seemed to substantiate the fear voiced so frequently by business. Senator Bone charged that there was a veritable and "budding OGPU" organized within the government. The OGPU, as most persons realize, is the secret spy system of the Russian Soviet and I think no one in this country has a complete knowledge of its vicious character. So, when Senator Bone likened the espionage system in our government to the OGPU, he was making, to my mind, one of the most serious charges yet leveled at the Roosevelt administration.

Of course, Senator Bone was attacking this espionage system because of a feeling that it might be used to coerce members of congress and even executive or administrative officers of the government who were opposed to plans propagated by Presidential advisers. His thought obviously concerned the political phases of such a system, but the fact that he brought the matter to public attention serves, in a measure, certainly, to substantiate some of the claims that business interests have made.

I am unable, however, to reconcile Senator Bone's position respecting the OGPU which he charged was in operation within the government and his utter silence when the obnoxious senate lobby committee, headed by Senator Black, Democrat of Alabama, engaged in the wholesale seizure of private telegrams. It will be recalled that I reported in these columns how Senator Black and agents of the Federal Communications commission went into the files of the Western Union Telegraph company and carried off literally thousands of private telegrams. I was convinced then and I repeat it now that the Black seizure was nothing more than an attempt to dig up dirt on anybody against whom they could find discrediting information. Yet, Senator Bone, by his silence, condoned that course only to denounce later the systems of so-called "inspectors" used by Secretary Ickes of the Department of the Interior and reputedly by several other agencies of the government. I can only hope that if Senator Bone's charges are true that the usual condition will result, namely, that there will be other spies to spy on these spies.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson for May 24

BUILDING FOR THE FUTURE

LESSON TEXT — Luke 20:45-47; 21:1-36.
GOLDEN TEXT—In your patience, possess ye your souls.—Luke 21:19.
PRIMARY TOPIC — A Gift That Pleases Jesus.
JUNIOR TOPIC—What Makes a Gift Great?
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Making the Most of Today.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Living for Spiritual Ends.

While this lesson is indicated as the quarterly Temperance lesson, and the various subjects suggested vary in their objective, a more logical theme would seem to be "Jesus Teaches in the Temple." No individual, city, or nation can truly build for the future that disregards what the Bible says about the future.

I. Jesus Warns Against the Scribes (vv. 45-47).

He had just dealt with the disbelief of the Sadducees. The scribes claimed faith, for they were the teachers of the law. They were punctiliously exacting as to its literal observance. They had little understanding of the need of flexibility in applying its principles to human needs. They discovered that Jesus was teaching things contrary to their interpretations. Jesus taught that the law was made for man, and not man for the law. The scribes were publicity seekers, making parade of their wisdom. Sunday school teachers should earnestly pray that they may serve as true messengers of Christ, not as scribes, with only a head-knowledge of biblical matters.

II. Jesus Makes Estimate of Gifts (Luke 21:1-4).

1. Amount counts for little (v. 1). While the rich cast their gifts into the treasury, and observers may have noted that the clash and clatter of their coin indicated large giving, it is not likely that these gifts meant personal sacrifice or self-denial.

2. Inner conditions determine the value of a gift (vv. 2, 3). In the sight of man the poor widow's deed was not worthy of notice. In the sight of God it merited the immortality of the Bible record. The two-mite gift of the widow revealed her love for God, else how could she spare her all? It revealed her faith in God for tomorrow, for how else would she be fed? It revealed her humility, for she did not withhold her gift because it was so little. Verse 4 is indeed revealing as to Christ's interpretation of the deeper meaning of gifts, for that and the present age.

III. Jesus Prophesies His Return (vv. 5-36).

1. The temple to be destroyed (vv. 5, 6). The temple was the pride and boast of the proud Jew. Such boasting called forth the Lord's declaration that "there shall not be left one stone upon another," a fact that had its fulfillment A. D. 70, when Titus destroyed Jerusalem.

2. The disciples' inquiry (v. 7). There can be no surprise that the disciples should ask for more information about future events. A corresponding verse in Matthew (24:3) should be considered.

3. An order of events was presented to them (vv. 8-24). Perhaps one would not so much say an order, as that he pointed out details on the great canvas of the future.

a. False Christs would appear (v. 8), some claiming to be the Messiah in his first appearing, and some in his reappearing. These make their appeal to such as are not rooted and grounded in the faith. "Go ye not after them."

b. Inevitable wars and commotions (vv. 9, 10) will embroil the nations. "Commotions" signifies tumults, in the absence of war, wrangling within national life, or between nations. The restful follower of Christ is to "be not terrified."

IV. Appropriate Warnings (vv. 34-36).

The grosser sins may not ensnare the believer, but how subtle are the cares of this life. But upon the drunken, the obscene, the frivolous, and upon the follower of Christ alike shall trials and perplexities come. Watch ye therefore, always; pray, always. Only so shall the child of God be ready ("worthy") to escape, and to stand before the Son of God. Benediction is pronounced upon "those who love his appearing."

Christian Worship

All Christian worship is a witness of the resurrection of him who liveth for ever and ever. Because he lives, "now abideth faith, hope, charity."

The Greatest Gift

You propose to give up everything for God. Be sure, then, to include yourself among the things to be given up.

Talent and Character

Talent forms itself in solitude; character in the press of life.—Goethe.

Adventurers' Club

Hello Everybody!

"When the World Fell In"
By FLOYD GIBBONS
Famous Headline Hunter.

GANGWAY for the fire department. Pull up at the curb and let Joe Dooley go by. Don't delay him because he's on mighty important business. He's rushing down to the Adventurers' club to tell the story of the big thrill of his life. Here he is now. Boys and girls, meet Lieut. Joseph Dooley of Brooklyn, N. Y. All right, Joe, let's have the yarn.

"Well," says Joe, "that happened in 1903, when I was assigned to Engine Company No. 11, down on East Houston street." And bang we go, right into the story.

Joe was second in command down at old No. 11. It was a cold blustery night in January, and the alarms had been coming in thick and fast all evening. Nothing eventful—just routine fires.

You know the kind. The ones where the lace curtains blaze up, and somebody has pulled them down and stepped on them before the fire department arrived, or the ones where a fire starts in a pile of trash in a corner of the cellar and the net loss is two packing boxes and the janitor's hat.

When a 4-Alarm Rings the Fire Laddies Step.

That's the kind of stuff that makes up nine-tenths of a fireman's work. It's only once in a while that fire gets beyond control and blazes up in a big conflagration that keeps the firemen out all night while the water freezes on the ends of the hose nozzles. Big fires are rare now—and getting fewer all the time, thanks to fireproof buildings and modern fire-fighting methods. But this was 1903. In those days, most of the buildings were old wooden ones.

The night dragged on, and then came another alarm. Number 11 responded, and they found the fire—a warehouse in Cooper square. No set-up, this one, either. It was the plant of the Boston Excelsior Works, filled to the rafters with baled excelsior, oakum, tow, and other highly combustible stuff.

A four-alarm had been turned in, and a dozen pieces of fire apparatus were there. Joe Dooley's company had been assigned to a position on the first floor. No. 11's boys went in through a driveway built for the concern's trucks, and there they were stopped. The blaze inside was so terrific that they couldn't enter the building. They got their hoses to work, managed to push their way 20 feet inside the warehouse, and there they stopped again.

They held their position, though—held it while the flames beat all around them and turned the water from their hoses into steam as fast as they could pour it on. The place was like an oven, and the smoke was suffocating. They held that position for half an hour, until a fifth alarm brought more apparatus to back them up. Then they moved on, to a point 50 feet inside the burning building.

Heavy Floor Falls on the Embattled Fire Fighters.

The captain was off that night, so Joe Dooley was in charge of No. 11 company. Hook and Ladder Co. No. 9 had been assigned to help him, and he ordered them to clear a path between the bales of blazing excelsior so the hose could be played more effectively. While the firemen from No. 9 were clearing that path, Joe heard a loud, creaking sound. Then, fire flared up in the rear of the piles of bales, and without further warning, the floor above fell down on them.

"It fell with a loud crash," says Joe, "killing one man instantly. Two firemen standing beside me were hurled out through a window by the air concussion caused by the dropping of the floor. After being shot through the window, these two men kept on running until they fell down in the street. Both were hysterical when they were picked up. Otherwise, they were not seriously injured."

Joe Was Trapped in the Burning Excelsior Factory.

But Joe, himself, didn't get off so easily. He was standing between two rows of bales, and when the floor came down, he was knocked flat. He hit the ground, only half conscious, realizing that he was suffocating—knowing that he stood in imminent danger of being burned to death—but unable to move a muscle—powerless to do anything to help himself.

Dimly, he realized that the falling floor hadn't crushed him, and as his brain cleared, he saw that he had fallen between two bales, over which the floor lay like a roof. Smoke was choking him. He had all he could do to breathe.

But he began disentangling himself from the debris of broken planks and beams that hung from the bottom of the fallen floor, and to crawl along through the passage between the bales.

It Takes Courage to Do What Joe Did.

"My brain was reeling," he says. "I didn't know what direction I was going in—whether it was the right one or not. My head was cut, and my leather fire hat had been partly driven down into my skull. I wanted to lie down, but I knew that if I did, I'd stay there, so I kept crawling on, until I saw a gleam of light ahead of me. Then I knew I was headed in the right direction."

Another few minutes of crawling, and Joe was safe again—out in the driveway from which he had started. He was pretty much messed up by the time he got there, and he still carries marks of that terrible ordeal, but he stayed right in the department, fighting fires, until his retirement as a chief officer in 1918, and had plenty more adventures—some of them almost as exciting as the one he's just told us.

Tailor Ants Use Living Spools in Nest Building

The tailor ants and a few other ants are unique among all the earth's creatures, so far as we know, in that they use their young as tools in nest construction.

Few adult insects spin silk, but the larvae of many have this ability to enclose themselves in silken cocoons, from which they will later emerge as fully formed adults. The tailor ant utilizes this accomplishment of its young in making its nests.

Scientists have often torn one of the leaves that formed its box-shaped nest and then watched the proceedings. At first there is a wild sortle on the part of the ants, all in fighting mood. They cannot sting, but they bite annoyingly.

After they have given up trying to find and destroy the intruder, worker ants seize larvae in their mandibles and bring them to the damaged portions. Other workers seize the edges of the leaves and pull them together, while those with the larvae pass them back and forth, stimulating the grub to exude silk, which sticks and holds the pieces of the leaves together.

After their silk has been used for the common good, the luckless larvae have to sleep naked.

The tailor ant lives throughout the Old World tropics and is one of the few ants that are greenish in color, though some of its varieties are red and one, in West Africa, is brown almost to black.—National Geographical Magazine.

Poet Was Son of Slave

Paul Laurence Dunbar, poet, was the son of a former Kentucky slave. He was born in Dayton, Ohio, where he was graduated from the high school in 1891 and began work as an elevator boy. He published his first work two years later. He was employed for some time in the Library of Congress in Washington, but was forced to give up that work after he contracted tuberculosis. He died in 1906, at Dayton.

IN FRANCE TODAY

By ANDRE VULLIET
in the Washington Post

IN THE peaceful silence of the French countryside, out where grass is growing where death was in the making and restful cemeteries recall infernal battlefields, poppies and flags today are waving over 30,000 American graves like a gentle beck flung forth in the wind by those who have not failed "their rendezvous with death."

Although Memorial day, or, as they used to call it, Decoration day, seems to be particularly associated with American soil, those grief-stricken parents, sorrowing comrades and friendly compatriots who are mourning today in the six American cemeteries in France might forget that they were in a foreign land when they see the piety and devotion with which small children from the nearby villages scatter wild flowers on the American tombs.

If the city dwellers are prone to forget the dreadful days of 19 years ago, those who live in the invaded sections where the decisive battles were fought and won, the peasants of Thiaucourt and Montfaucon, the citizens of Sedan and St. Mihiel keep ever present in their minds the seemingly miraculous arrival of thousands upon thousands of strangers from overseas who, like brothers, were prepared to die beside the sons of France.

The story has been often told of how, when hope had almost fled, when resources were exhausted, suddenly, the whole face of the situation was altered and, in the place of France's war-worn troops reduced to the very skeleton of their former effectiveness, the youthful soldiers of a youthful nation appeared, ready to fight for this strange land as though it were their own. It has been often told. But it is a pious duty to say it again every year, on Memorial day.

Every American who visits the numerous French shrines should be grateful to the American Overseas Memorial Day association for decorating each of the more than 30,000 graves with a poppy, a wreath and small French and American flags on each May 30. This reverential task is performed by official American superintendents.

About 40,000 bodies were taken back to the United States, on their relatives' request, at the government's expense. There also are about 70 isolated graves, the most celebrated of these being that of Quentin Roosevelt, President Theodore Roosevelt's son, who was buried where his plane fell, near Fere-en-Tardenois.

These isolated graves are usually decorated by members of the Paris posts of the American Legion or by local French citizens, frequently the mayor of the locality concerned.

The general locations of the most imposing memorials are enduring reminders of the three historic battlefields where the American forces mostly contributed to the final victory. These are known as the St. Mihiel battlefield, with its Montsec monument and Thiaucourt cemetery; the Meuse-Argonne battlefield, and the Romagne cemetery and the Aisne-Marne battlefield, with the Chateau-Thierry memorial and the Belleau wood graves. The St. Mihiel area was in Lorraine, that section of eastern France which had been set aside by the French high command as the concentration area for the American army.

At Thiaucourt, the third largest American military cemetery in France, the 4,152 marble headstones gleam white as the sun marks the time on a large stone sundial carved in the form of a resting American eagle, with the following inscription: "Time will not dim the glory of their deeds." On the hill above Chateau-Thierry, where Joan of Arc rode by in 1429 and where Jean de La Fontaine wrote many of his immortal fables, now stands a memorial to the glory of the American troops. Commanding a sweeping view of the Marne valley, the monument's twin rows of majestic columns rise at the right and left of two figures of symbolic size representing France and America.

Down in the valley, not far from the memorial, nearly 2,300 American soldiers rest in peace in curving rows around the base of the Belleau Wood hill while 6,000 others sleep in honored glory in the second largest American cemetery abroad, at Fere-en-Tardenois.

But the foremost chapter in the history of the American participation is written forever in the French sky, above the Argonne forest and the Montfaucon hill, in the form of a colossal rose granite Doric shaft which towers the ruins of the wartime Montfaucon village by more than 175 feet.

There, between the heavily fortified Argonne forest and the strongly defended Meuse Heights, the battle raged from September 26 to November 11, with more than 900,000 Americans participating at one time, slowly and gallantly making headway until, on November 7, they held the heights overlooking Sedan.

During the battle 123,000 were killed, wounded or missing and a little further down, in the valley, at Romagne-sous-Montfaucon, facing a huge lily pond, a verdant hill and quiet trees, more than 14,200 white marble crosses and stars of David for the Jewish soldiers speak for those who acted the drama and saw not its end.

There, undoubtedly, the most impressive of memorial ceremonies abroad is justly taking place today, as the Meuse-Argonne combat will go down as one of the most glorious pages of American military history.

There, among still waves of graves unfurling in endless wake, a comrade of those heroes, who constantly kept the French high command in touch with their doings, Gen. de Chambrun evoked the glory of their deeds and paid due tribute to those among the dead whose name is "known but to God."

"Was it not one of those very heroes whom we glorify today," he said, "fallen somewhere near Varenne or Malencourt, in Belleau wood or in the Bois des Forges, whose obscure action and last drop of blood were the decisive factors in the trend of the war?"

"Is it then astonishing that each nation, recognizing in the common soldier the veritable victor of the war, should have consecrated to his glory, its most impressive monument?"

In Paris, this evening, if you walk up the Champs Elysees toward Napoleon's triumphal arch, at that time when the sun sinks behind its pillars, you will probably find that the imperial arch opens against the sunset like a doorway to infinite beauty. Yet, there, in the center of Parisian activity, an unextinguished flame burns over a bronze tomb and adds new grandeur to the gigantic vault. And that permanent contrast between the constant flow of Paris life and the unknown dead is one of the grandest achievements of man.

How Sleep the Brave

William Collins in the Kansas City Star.

How sleep the brave, who sink to rest
By all their country's wishes blest!
When spring, with dewy fingers cold,
Returns to deck their hallowed mould,
She there shall dress a sweeter sod
Than fancy's feet have ever trod.

By fairy hands their knell is rung,
By forms unseen their dirge is sung,
There Honor comes, a pilgrim gray,
To bless the turf that wraps their clay;
And Freedom shall upheave their clay,
To dwell a weeping hermit, there!

The Purpose of Memorial Day

IT IS well for all Americans to keep in mind the ideals which at its conception prompted the observance of Memorial day. To emphasize this spirit in the many proclamations of state governors and city mayors, the Memorial Day committee of the Memorial Extension commission has in three trenchant sentences set forth the main purposes of this solemn and hallowed occasion:

To visit not only the memorials and final resting places of national heroes but of their own departed relatives and friends.

To take measures and memorialize permanently local historic sites and the graves of local celebrities in order that their memory may be kept forever green.

To pay homage to the heroes of peace—scientists, educators, philanthropists, statesmen, industrial pioneers, etc.—as well as to the heroes of war.

In these times of uncertainty and wavering, the many leading citizens who are promulgating this proclamation have performed a patriotic service in seeking to strengthen the spiritual observance of our memorial to those who have fought the good fight, have finished the course and kept the faith.

Inscription on World War Memorial at Indianopolis

THE inscription above the first-floor entrance facing Vermont street is: "To commemorate the valor and sacrifice of the land, sea and air forces of the United States and all who rendered faithful and loyal service at home and overseas in the World war; to inculcate a true understanding and appreciation of the privileges of American citizenship; to inspire patriotism and respect for the laws to the end that peace may prevail, justice be administered, public order maintained and liberty perpetuated." Above the entrance to the main memorial hall on the same side: "To vindicate the principles of peace and justice throughout the world." Above the columns facing Meridian street: "To promote order and justice." On the main frieze on the Pennsylvania street side: "To perpetuate peace and liberty." On two ornamental panels between the first floor entrance doors on the north side: "U. S.—Indiana." Below the columns on both the east and west sides: "To commemorate the valor and sacrifice of all who served." The words "Indiana World War Memorial" appear above the first-floor entrance on the east and west elevations. The dates "1914-1918" are on the ornamental panels over the entrance doors on the east and west.

Lift High the Torch

As this striking memorial portrays the constancy of the men who died for God and Country, so we must carry on the task they left behind—the preservation of a nation free and independent. It is our duty and our privilege to hold high the torch of American liberty and preserve our principles as they fought for them. Pray God we may not fail.

Divided Skirt and Shorts Combination That Equips the Young Lady for Sports

PATTERN NO. 1875-B

You know yourself that half the enjoyment of any sport is spoiled if you aren't correctly dressed, and really there's no excuse for not being equipped for any active sport when a model such as illustrated is so easy and inexpensive to make.

The divided skirt is suitable for golf, tennis, bicycling, riding and hiking. It assures plenty of room and comfort, buttons on the side and supports the most youthful blouse. Note

Dealing With Others

THE longer we live the more we shall need to deal kindly with the limitation of others. Many are doing their best, even though there are some things which they cannot do very well. . . . Parents, teachers, employers, and all the rest of us need to be patient and kindly when we face the limitations of our friends and loved ones. Criticism will not help. "Nagging" will be out of place. Let us take certain limitations for granted, and move on with appreciation of all the other good qualities we find in friends.—E. B. Allen.

Pigeon Brings in an SOS; 17 Men Are Rescued at Sea

Officials of the Freeport (N. Y.) Boatmen's association have disclosed that 17 men were rescued from a stranded craft off Squaw Island recently after a carrier pigeon brought an SOS message to shore. The rescue was the first of its kind, as far as is known.

Off West Island the Dawn, a 40-foot fishing boat, broke her exhaust pipe. A pigeon bearing word of the vessel's plight was released and flew 15 miles to the association clubhouse at Freeport. Rescue craft then were dispatched.

AMAZING NEW STOVE USES 96% AIR-4% FUEL

Housewives Everywhere Now Can Enjoy Modern Gas-Cooking Science At Low Cost, Thanks to W. C. Coleman's Invention

Utilizing the principle of carburization used in present day automobile engines, W. C. Coleman, noted inventor and pioneer manufacturer of gas-pressure appliances, has invented an amazing new cooking stove that makes its own gas from ordinary lead-free gasoline.

An ingenious device converts liquid fuel into vapor gas—then mixes it with fresh, live air so that the fuel, when it reaches the burner, is actually about 98% air and 4% vapor gas. This remarkable invention has effected fuel-saving economies which, combined with the heating efficiency of the Coleman patented Band-A-Blu Burners, makes the new Coleman Safety Range cheaper to use than wood, coal or kerosene.

Housewives everywhere express appreciation for the convenience, safety, economy and beauty of a stove which provides cooking equalling that of the finest city gas range.

Readers of this paper wishing full information about these wonderful Coleman Ranges will receive beautifully illustrated literature and a valuable stove check card by addressing a postcard to Mr. W. C. Coleman, Dept. WU-237, Wichita, Kansas.—Adv.

Rattles Do Not Tell Age

A popular belief is that the number of rattles indicates the age of the individual snake, one rattle being added each year. The fallacy persists in spite of the fact that research has shown the rattles or rings to be due to the aldermia shed from the enlarged portion of the tail. Each time the skin is shed—and this occurs at intervals of two to five months—a new ring is added at the base, thus pushing the string outward, asserts a writer in the Detroit News. The terminal rattles are frequently broken off and lost. Thus the number of rattles present at any time offers no indication of age whatsoever.

PUT V-8 PERFORMANCE TO WORK ON YOUR JOB

AND HARVEST A BUMPER CROP OF SAVINGS...

"Ford V-8 Trucks do more work, yet they cost less to operate."

"Our Ford V-8 Trucks are hauling the same loads as the big, heavy trucks we formerly owned... at a lower cost per mile."

"We haul perishables in a Ford V-8 Pick-Up and have always been able to get through, no matter how bad the roads or the weather."

Those are just a few of the thousands of statements from owners that prove how Ford V-8 Trucks and Commercial Cars are handling the toughest hauling jobs and reducing trucking costs. With V-8 performance, you can haul heavy loads on long hauls in fast time. And with V-8 economy, you can keep costs at rock bottom... because V-8 economy is OVER-ALL ECONOMY. New, improved gasoline mileage and high mileage on oil and tires are only a part of your savings. V-8 economy also takes in low first cost, depreciation, taxes, license fees, repair and up-keep costs.

You don't have to take anybody's word for it. You can prove it yourself. Your Ford dealer invites you to make an "on-the-job" test of a Ford V-8 Truck or Commercial Car with your own loads, under your own operating conditions. Here Is The Point!

- Paint cost depends not upon what you pay per gallon for the paint, but upon how much service you get out of every gallon of paint you buy.
- Because there is quality in B. P. S. Paint, it gives service and satisfaction.
- B. P. S. Paint covers from 350 to 400 sq. feet, two coats; a cheap paint will cover not to exceed 250 sq. feet.
- B. P. S. wears for years and leaves a surface fit to repaint, and the colors are permanent as it is possible to make them.
- Think it over seriously; figure out the cost per year and the cost per gallon. B. P. S. will be the best investment.

Growth of Fishes

The growth of fishes probably decelerates with age, but under favorable circumstances it never stops. If fish growth were shown on a graph, the weight curve would show a steady upward line, but the length curve would ascend rapidly at first, then almost straighten out. That is because as the fish grows large, the corresponding increase in girth tends to make the weight increase rather constant—Detroit Free Press.

"Morning sickness"—is caused by an acid condition. To avoid it, acid must be offset by alkalis—such as magnesia.

Why Physicians Recommend Milnesia Wafers

These mint-flavored, candy-like wafers are pure milk of magnesia in solid form—the most pleasant way to take it. Each wafer is approximately equal to a full adult dose of liquid milk of magnesia. Chewed thoroughly, then swallowed, they correct acidity in the mouth and throughout the digestive system and insure quick, complete elimination of the waste matters that cause gas, headaches, bloated feelings and a dozen other discomforts.

Milnesia Wafers come in bottles of 20 and 48, at 35c and 60c respectively, and in convenient tins for your handbag containing 12 at 20c. Each wafer is approximately one adult dose of milk of magnesia. All good drug stores sell and recommend them.

Tony sat down opposite him, looked at him, smiling shakily, trembling. They were alone.

"There'll be a buzz about this downstairs," Larry said, looking at a penciled note on his desk. "I thought I'd rather tell you. When did you see Miss Cutter last?"

"She was in a couple of days ago," Tony said, palling at some quality in his tone. "She was having sinus trouble, and she felt kind of rotten." Tony went on, speaking the less elegantly because she was uneasy and in earnest. "Why?"

"She killed herself about an hour ago. O'Brien telephoned me. She had a photograph of Frank Fitch in her hands."

"Oh, heavens!" Tony whispered, staring at him, very white. "Killed herself?"

"Poison. They rushed her to the Emergency, but they say she was gone when the police got there."

"It makes me feel a little—sick," Tony said, holding on to the arms of her chair with gripped fingers.

"We're taking a Chicago trip for Fitch," Larry presently observed dryly. The girl's look came back to his instantly. "I guess she knew what she was doing when that began, Tony. Fitch wasn't the first man who had ever come into her life, poor thing!"

"Oh, I'm so sorry for her!" Tony said. "She'd given up her apartment, and she missed it so! She was living with some friend out on the Panhandle. I don't think they got along very well. She told me she and Mabel had a scrap about a brassiere or something—"

And suddenly, as Larry laughed, she was laughing and crying at once, her drenched eyes buried in her hands. Confused and ashamed, she stood up, wiping her eyes, turning her back to him, and Larry came around the desk and braced her with his arms for a few dizzying seconds.

"I didn't want you to hear it downstairs in the office."

"I know. And I'm so grateful to you! I don't know why I'm laughing," Tony stammered.

She straightened up, and was free of his touch, and put out her hand to his. "Thanks so much, Larry; it knocked me breathless for a minute," she apologized. "But I'm all right now. I'll get out into the air and be fine!"

Fresh, sweet, her smooth brown cheek flawless, her soft dark hair tumbled in curves and rings about her face, her long dark lashes wet above the raised blue eyes, and the big white collar and plain dark frock, the slim silk-clad legs and square-toed shoes,

"Well, yes," Miss Wallister was beginning to be a little uneasy, and Tony felt sorry for her.

"Is his brother-in-law Oliver Benedict, of the Oakland Sun?"

"You could ask Mr. Opps," Miss Wallister, definitely disturbed now, said guardedly.

"I don't have to. I know it. Let me tell you what all this is about, Miss Wallister," Tony said frankly, "and then you'll know what I'm after. Some time ago Shafts' Department Store, the biggest in Oakland, took away its advertising from us, the Call, in San Francisco, because it said it got much better response from advertising in the Oakland Sun. Now, that worried us, and we sent a man over here to Oakland to investigate, and this is what he found out. Shafts' had put a special advertisement in all the papers, inviting all high-school students to write in to the high-school equipment department, and join a club called 'The Undergrads.' They had Saturday hikes and contests; I don't know what they didn't have. The boys camped, and the girls made cakes, all that sort of thing. Do you happen to have noticed it?"

"I don't know that I did," said Miss Wallister, "and I think you had better talk to Mr. Opps himself; my time is so limited, and I don't quite know what you're driving at."

"I have talked to Mr. Opps—Just a moment more, Miss Wallister, please. That is, someone from the office talked to Mr. Opps, and he admitted that some weeks ago—"

"I don't know what he admitted, and I don't care. If you'll excuse me—"

"No, now wait just a moment," Tony said, in a persuasive, sensible tone. "He's not done anything wrong! And you haven't anything to do with it anyway."

"I certainly haven't anything to do with it," Miss Wallister agreed, with red cheeks and a rising voice, "for I neither know nor care what you're talking about!"

"Well, then will you just let me talk a moment more?" Tony asked simply. "I don't think you understand yet why I came over here to talk to you. The point is this: Did you have all your teachers give out postal cards to the students in the various classes, and have them, as a part of their business course, write into Shafts' and ask for information about the 'Undergrad Club'?"

"I don't know whether I did or not," Miss Wallister answered with a snap. "If I did, I see no reason why I shouldn't!"

"There is no reason why you shouldn't do that," Tony admitted. "It was telling them to say that they saw the advertisement in the Sun that—well, that interested us. Naturally, the Shafts' people thought that the Sun was getting forty responses to the ad to every other paper's one."

"I don't know anything about it," Miss Wallister said, in the pause.

"You don't remember Mr. Opps giving you instructions that that was to be done?"

"I tell you I don't remember anything about it."

"That's funny, for he does," Tony said musingly. "Now, listen, don't get angry at me, Miss Wallister," she added disarmingly; "I'm a working woman like yourself. They give me certain assignments on my paper, and I have to follow them up. I don't know anything about this story, and I don't care anything, except to do my end honestly. All I know is that Mr. Fitch, our managing editor, called me into his office this morning and told me that he had been suspicious of the means by which the Shafts' advertising had been handled over here, and that Mr. Opps—"

Tony glanced at a note in her hand, "Mr. Kern Opps," she said, "had admitted that he had used the schools to further the interests of his brother-in-law's paper. Now probably you had no responsibility in the matter at all—you were merely acting upon his orders—"

"If I did that or anything else," Miss Wallister said with angry promptness, as Tony paused to look at her hopefully, "you may be very sure it was acting under orders!"

"I should suppose so," Tony conceded.

"You don't think for a moment that I'd take a step like that on my own?"

"When was this?" Tony asked, adept now at closing the net. But the shrill, harassed, anxious assistant superintendent was too quick for her.

"I don't remember the incident at all, and I'd advise you to talk to Mr. Opps."

"Someone else in the office talked to him," Tony explained patiently; "he admitted it, and said that he was quite within his rights. Maybe he was, I don't know. The point is that you are his assistant, and we want to know whether or not you feel that that was a perfectly justifiable thing to do."

"I don't think it matters what I feel." With that she reached for the phone and put in a call for Mr. Opps.

"It would matter in this way, Miss Wallister. Honestly," Tony said, smiling, "I am merely making this suggestion: If this got Mr. Opps into trouble—and it might—with the board of education, it might be a good thing for you to have put yourself on record as disapproving of it."

"I won't put myself on record," Tony glanced at her notes.

"This is all I have," she said. "Kern Opps admits use of stamped postcards supplied by the Sun in classrooms; says he was entirely justified. Opps may not be any too secure in his seat when this comes out. You're his subordinate, and naturally you did what he told you to do. But I should think—"

She hesitated, looking at the other woman sympathetically. In the silence the telephone rang shrilly, and Miss Wallister, without removing her eyes from the other woman's face, mechanically reached for it, presently returned it to its hook.

"Mr. Opps is out," she said, turning back to Tony. "You were going to say—"

"Well, I was merely going to say that in your place I'd tell the simple truth," Tony said. "You can't get into trouble telling the simple truth: Mr. Opps did this—I did that—you don't have to worry about it, because it's true."

"Otherwise," she went on, as the trapped woman looked at her dubiously, not knowing what to believe or to do, "otherwise I report that you didn't do it, and the other report is that Mr. Opps acknowledges that he did do it, and you'll have a buzz of reporters here asking you how it happens that you forgot the whole thing entirely, and probably several kids delighted to get their names into the paper by saying that they remember filling out the postcards and being instructed to say that they saw the advertisement in the Sun."

Miss Wallister was sitting facing Tony, her narrowed eyes speculative behind her glasses, her face red. Presently, without removing her gaze, she leaned slightly toward the left and opened the lower drawer of her desk. From it she took a postal card and tossed it to Tony.

"There!" she said. "I'd rather have spoken to him about it first, but since he's given you the whole thing, I'm not going to lie about it. Mr. Opps and I have always been friends, but I thought at the time he was taking a chance, and you can say that I was acting under his directions. I could have reported it to the board, of course; it didn't seem to me important. The children are having business courses, and we encourage them to consult the newspapers for ads and rates and everything else. Our boys keep a regular stock and bond board going, and the girls take turns week and week about acting as stenographers."

"I think that's a splendid idea," Tony murmured, her hand trembling as she put the precious postal card securely in her bag. "I wonder if the other high schools have practical courses like that."

"I don't believe they do." The assistant superintendent aired her views quite eloquently. Tony hated to remember afterward that Miss Wallister offered her a caramel from a limp bag before she went away.

Tony went into the office at six o'clock to meet a sour greeting from the city editor.

"Get anything on the Oakland thing?" he asked.

"Yep."

"No, did you?" Greeny asked, impressed. "Better go right in; here, I'll go with you."

When they were in Mr. Fitch's office Greeny said: "Miss Taft is on that Oakland school superintendent story."

"Get anything on it?" Fitch asked harshly.

"I got it," Tony said simply, experiencing the most thrilling sensation the newspaper reporter ever knows.

"She talk?"

"Miss Wallister?"

"If that's her name—yes."

"Yes. She talked. There's one of the postal cards," Tony said, displaying it. A simple enough card printed in ink script with the words: "I am a student in the Oakland high school. Having seen your advertisement in the Sun I am very much interested in the Undergrad club, and would be glad to learn the conditions of membership."

"Where'd you get this?"

"She gave it to me. That's Opps' handwriting; that was the model."

Mr. Fitch held it in his hands for a few seconds, considering it. Then he said, "Wait here a minute."

Presently the managing editor came back, and with him Mr. Arnoldson and a young man introduced as "Mr. Phil-libert." The last was a notary public.

"You say you got the Opps story?" Mr. Arnoldson said. Tony quaked with happy pride and awe.

"You're going to tell us only the simple truth, Miss—Taft," Arnoldson said, pushing a comfortable revolving chair toward her, "and so you needn't have the slightest uneasiness at Mr. Philibert's taking it down. Just be careful, that's all, and be sure of what you say. You have no objection to having it witnessed afterward?"

"None whatever," Tony said, feeling excited and important. She talked carefully, not exaggerating. The surrender of the postal card finished the story, and the notary indifferently asked her if she would swear to it. Tony had done this before. "To my share of it," she agreed.

"Well done, Miss Taft," Mr. Arnoldson said then, going away. Mr. Fitch echoed the praise, and by this Tony knew that they were extraordinarily exhilarated.

"Who's got Opps' story?" Tony asked, turning toward the city office between Greeny and Mr. Fitch.

"That's the interesting part of it, Miss Taft," Frank Fitch exulted. "No no assignment you ever gave me would have made me feel this step necessary. Next week I will come in and say good-by to you and the boys, but tonight I am too much upset by the disgraceful part I played in today's assignment to be able to do anything except go home."

She leaned over to Van Florence's desk and slipped the note to him.

"Give that to Greeny, will you please?" she said unsteadily. "I'm going home."

"Sure" Van answered, not looking up. Tony went to the pegs where hung her hat and coat and took off her lanky and rumpled smock. It was good-by to the smock, and dirty wash-basins, and the unspeakable roller towels; good-by to the blue cigarette smoke, and the clatter of typewriters and the rumble of men's voices; to Greeny anxious, scowling, shirt-sleeved, twisted in his chair with one leg up over his desk, and to the clicking machines on the A. P. desk, the press boys coming in sweaty and grimed with trailers of galley proof, and the rustle-rustle-rustle of all the newspapers in all the world. Was she acting like a fool? No, Cliff and adorable, consoling, blundering old Bruce and Aunt Meg were very sure that she was not a fool.

Having heard the whole story, they applauded her, as she ate her later supper; they told her that she had been trapped into an intolerable position.

"The funny thing about a job is," Tony mused, "that when you're in, you feel so secure. And when you're out, and job-hunting, you feel like a beggar again!"

"It's true," Cliff smiled over his cigarette. "But Greenwood'll send for you tomorrow. They won't let you go like that. What does Mr. Bellamy think of this sort of thing? Did he know that they'd tricked you into it?"

"Larry's in Los Angeles. No, he wouldn't know anything about that. It was just one of Frank Fitch's bright ideas."

"You'll see, Tony. Greenwood'll send for you tomorrow," said Aunt Meggy.

"I'll not go see him," Tony declared. But she knew in her heart that she would. She was already devoured with fear, regret, homesickness.

The next day passed in dreamy unreality. There was no word from the Call. Tony felt aimless; life was quiet and flat. She went down to the newspaper's business office and asked, hoping that the answer would be in the negative, for her pay envelope. It was there; a whole week's pay, and no comment, no letter. Going upstairs with a fast-beating heart at four o'clock Tony found Greeny at his desk—extremely regretful, but apparently willing to accept her resignation. She said good-by to him and to such men as were there, left messages; the whole thing was miserably unsatisfying.

Out in Market street again Tony considered going to the other newspapers; there seemed to be nothing else to do. In both places she had brief unsatisfactory conversations with superior and uninterested city editors; there were no vacancies at the moment.

She walked home somewhat depressed. The city was full of men and women who had held newspaper jobs and who had lost them.

The next day she washed her hair and put her bureau in order. Then she went to the Cutter funeral with Aunt Meggy, and they walked home with Aunt Sally. She left Aunt Meggy there for dinner, and went home to find that Clifford was dining with his girl's family for the first time, a great occasion for Cliff.

"I want to tip you off," Cliff said, tying his white tie. "It's going to be Mary Rose Bly. Fixed it up Sunday."

Aztec Images Like Egyptian

When Cortez and his band of Spanish conquerors came to Mexico early in the sixteenth century they met with stout resistance from the Aztecs, highly civilized Indians. As the Spaniards despoiled the Aztec temples, pressing the natives into slavery, they discovered many carvings of images and friezes, indicating the existence of a well-organized religion. From a study of the idols and the decorations on the walls of the temples archeologists have noted Babylonian similarities. The Aztec religion was one of many gods, being in that respect like the pagan belief of ancient Greece and Rome.

"When in Rome," Etc.

The expression "When in Rome do as the Romans do" is not to be found in the Bible. It is attributed to St. Ambrose, bishop of Milan, in the Fourth century. In a letter of advice to St. Augustine he wrote: "When I am here (at Milan) I do not fast on a Saturday; when I am at Rome, I fast on a Saturday." As quoted by Jeremy Taylor, his advice was: "When you are in Rome, live in the Roman style; when you are elsewhere, live as they live there." St. Augustine also refers to this in his own writings.

She seized a piece of paper and slipped it into her typewriter. It was the engraved city room correspondence paper upon which she sometimes wrote social notes.

"Dear Mr. Greenwood," typed Tony, her breath coming hard, her eyes glittering and tearless with anger. "Herewith I tender you my resignation from the staff of the Call. I want to thank you for all your kindness to me, and to assure you that one has talked to Opps yet. But we'll get his story now fast enough, without any trouble! She's squealed, and that'll bring him right into line."

Tony stopped short, and the men stopped with her.

"You mean he hadn't talked?"

"Nope. We thought it was best to handle it this way," Fitch said placidly. "I sent a man over to talk real estate with Opps this morning at half-past eleven. Opps had some interest in a development called 'Paradise Oaks' over there. This fellow suggested that he drive out with Opps to see the place; that's why he wasn't in his office when you were talking to his assistant."

"Oh, but I lied to her," Tony began, in a hard voice.

"You got your story, and that's all the Call expects of you," Frank Fitch said smoothly. "Thank you!" He closed his door.

"She'll lose her job," Tony said, breathing hard.

"Oh, no, she won't!"

"Greeny," the girl demanded, holding herself in, "is that fair?"

"Aw, shucks, what's the diff?" Greeny pleaded. "That's the way Fitch has gotten where he is, and he's the smartest man in the business. There's nobody can run a story to earth the way Frank can. Opps had no business to do it, and if he gets hell for it, it's coming to him!"

Tony went to her desk and sat down. She felt sick. Indifferently she tried to bring her mind to her social notes; it was no use. She had been absorbed in her assignment all afternoon; she had run down his story for Fitch, whom she despised, and in doing so had injured, perhaps ruined, a harmless, nervous, hard-working woman of forty, who had believed in her and listened to her and taken her advice—and even, as Tony writhed to remember, had offered her forlorn little mashed caramels in a paper bag!

Tony sat brooding. Quite suddenly taking the telephone, she asked for Mr. Bellamy's office; she must talk to him about it.

Mr. Bellamy was in Los Angeles and would not be back until tomorrow. A dullness, a blankness seemed to follow the announcement; Tony sat for a while with her head in her hands.

Fitch had gotten her into this; Frank Fitch, whose morals were the scandal of the office, had suavely deceived her into deceiving this other woman! Antoinette Taft, who had always prided herself upon being honorable—fine! No, she couldn't bear it.

She seized a piece of paper and slipped it into her typewriter. It was the engraved city room correspondence paper upon which she sometimes wrote social notes.

"Dear Mr. Greenwood," typed Tony, her breath coming hard, her eyes glittering and tearless with anger. "Herewith I tender you my resignation from the staff of the Call. I want to thank you for all your kindness to me, and to assure you that

TOO FEW FLOWERS ARE PLANTED FOR SAKE OF PERFUME

Many plant flower beds for color and decorative masses, kitchen gardens for utility, herb gardens for savor, but only a few plant for perfume in the garden or in cut flowers.

Women of Martha Washington's time knew how to save the delicate scent of rose petals by putting them in jars with salt, or they made a potpourri of different flowers. They gathered damask, roses, and lavender and dried them to make linen drawers sweet, or used violet water. They liked the scent of lilies-of-the-valley and lilacs.

It is possible to plant shrubs and vines and flowering annuals and perennials to add to the fragrance of the garden—roses, English violets, carnations, and little clove pinks, and some of the fragrant peonies for indoor vases, say floriculturists in the United States Department of Agriculture.

The perfume garden is so planned that one group of plantings is succeeded by another, each with its own appeal, such as sweet alyssum, mignonette, pinks, perennial phlox, sweet hellebore, stocks and some of the nicotianas. Nasturtiums have a spicy fragrance. The leaves of rose geranium are both fragrant and spicy and may scent a fingerbowl or flavor a mild jelly.

Many shrubs are delightfully fragrant—the reddish velvety "sweet-shrub" or Calycanthus; lemon verbena; lilac; and mockorange, called Philadelphus or syringa in the North, Carolina cherry in the South; the butterfly bush (erroneously called "summer lilac") from China, whose long drooping rich violet blooms give off deep fragrance all summer. The sweet-scented summer-blooming honeysuckle vine of the South is the naturalized Japanese honeysuckle, Lonicera japonica, ranging from Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Missouri south; the beautiful and fragrant Chinese and Japanese wisteria, and various sweet species of clematis.

Indians Are Threat, but Lajoie's Jinx Seems Sure to Win

UNLESS the more panicky citizens really have their hearts set upon it, there is no imperative need for giving the country back to the Indians. The most dangerous tribe to scour these parts in recent years will settle for considerably less. Like Hiawatha and those other naively noble red men of the past, all they want off the world that for so long has misunderstood and mistreated them is one little strip of bright-colored cloth.

Chief Steve O'Neill will tell you that. It is his well-considered opinion that even the Oklahoma oil tribes would be pickers by comparison if his Indians ever return to Cleveland with an American League pennant.

It is a question though whether the Tribe can do it. There are reasons for doubt. One of them is the jinx which first arrived in the Forest City along with Larry Lajoie.

This broad-shouldered Rhode Islander, who hopped off the driver's seat of a horse-drawn cab to sign his first contract on the back of an envelope, was one of the greatest of all hitters and second basemen. During all save perhaps one or two of his 15 seasons of active service he was on teams which, man for man, were proclaimed the best in the league. Yet, even though Billy Hamilton, Elmer Flick and Ed Deleahanty performed by his side on one of the best of all Philadelphia teams, that club could never finish better than second.

It was the same when he came to Cleveland. He led the league in hitting, drew a tidy salary as player and manager and put the club on a paying basis. But not even such stars as Bill Bradley, Flick and Terry Turner could help him overcome his hard luck.

Year after year the Naps, so called in honor of Lajoie, whose first name was Napoleon, would be labeled as sure winners. Perhaps they would even get past mid-season that way. Then the hoodoo would start acting up.

O'Neill Has the Tribe Hustling at Fast Pace

There would be an injury. Then another. No matter if he did carry a full team of substitutes, something always was happening. Even in 1908 when they turned upon their misfortunes and made a September rally almost as pulse strumming as that of the Cubs last fall, it was no use. With only a week or so to go Fate again took hold of the club and played it as though it was an accordion.

So it was that a man who was a king of the game retired at last after never having been on a pennant winner. So also it seems that a hoodoo has continued upon the town save for that one year of 1920 when another determined king named Tris Speaker managed to make it yield. O'Neill, descendant of kings who ruled Ireland with never a thought that one day their namesake might have to go to work as chief of a Tribe, may also be the man to do it. It is axiomatic in baseball that it is almost impossible for a team to look good when it is not hitting. Yet they have not appeared at all bad.

Those pale-faced Indians of a new dispensation—such as Joe Vosmik, Bill Knickerbocker and Hal Trosky—hustle as they did not hustle while feuding among themselves in recent seasons.

Trosky, 15 pounds heavier than last year, stands straighter at the plate and is a better hitter even than on that May day in 1934 when he was so fortunate as to crash three successive home runs against the White Sox. Averill, Vosmik and Bruce Campbell, who is back again after an illness which would have caused most men to forsake the game for life, function as one of the best of outfielders.

The flaming tempered Johnny Allen seems once more the pitcher he was when the Yankees were chanting their praises of him as a winning teammate. Willis Hudlin, who has been tossing his double-play ball ever since he joined the Indians in 1926, is another hurler of real merit.

Yet—even as was remarked at the start—there are reasons for doubt. Cleveland is one of the better and more excitable baseball towns and it is high time it is given another opportunity for a dance of triumph. But I greatly suspect that this is not the band of Indians to bring back the bunting in the fall while showers of gold and glory descend upon them from the tepee tops of Euclid avenue.

IT PROBABLY is just as well that the Congressional Record keeps the more pious fretters about the nation's naughtiness so busy that they have no time for the sports pages. Otherwise there might be considerable trouble because of the immoral manner in which certain athletes sought to improve their team's chances of winning recently.

I refer to doings in Cleveland and Philadelphia. In one of these towns Catcher Earl Grace twice brushed his mitt against the bat while a Brooklyn player was up there swinging. In the other forthright and energetic Johnny Allen kicked the ball out of Ralston Hensley's hands on a close play at home plate. Since each of these offenses against the baseball law occurs almost daily, though, I do not mention them in any highly moral dudgeon of my own. I merely place them in their proper relation for the guidance of the ethical preceptors of the nation.

Ever since David found a way to beat the weight in his well-publicized contest with Goliath the rules of sport have been subjected to considerable monkey business. No doubt this partly has been due to the fact that healthy young men (and women) engaged in rough and vigorous competition have no time to be bothered with the strict letter of some code. No doubt, there also have been other reasons. I make no comment now. Instead, I cite some incidents from the crowded lives of those who compete for gold, for glory or for both.

There was, for instance, the old Oriole device of persuading runners to linger at third base. John McGraw, probably the best mind ever produced by baseball, was the originator of that one. He merely grabbed the runner by the belt and held him while the umpire's attention was elsewhere.

There also are certain episodes which may be mentioned in connection with purely amateur sports affairs, lest it be considered that too much stress is given here to the carryings-on of the pros.

When Don Meade imitated a regiment of Cossacks, while winning a Kentucky Derby several years ago, there were numerous high-class folks who deeply deplored such tactics. It was a highly enlightening sight but scarcely as entertaining as a hunts meeting once held in an Eastern state. One of the events was for lady riders and it was evident from the start that only two of the gals had a chance. The two took their duties seriously. For the first furlong they tried to ride one another onto the rail. The next quarter was enlivened by each miss endeavoring to retard the speed of her opponent's horse by tugging at the saddle.

After that they really got down to business. They finished the race whipping. But, for once, both horses got a break. The two sportswomen were using the whips on one another.

Golf and Tennis Also Had Their Moments

Golf also had its moments. Once—this is for the greater education of those who squawk that the United States has exclusive privileges along such lines—an American went to England to compete in a tournament. His short game was tops but he was not a long driver. The Britain he opposed in the final could hit them a mile. For the greater glory of the homeland the tournament committee moved the tees a mere 20 yards or so farther away from the greens.

That being almost as good as the time—only three or four seasons removed from the present—when the hospitable French soaked their tennis courts so that their soft-game players would not be inconvenienced against the hard-hitting Americans.

Not in the Box Score: John Titus, the last of the mustachioed big-time ball players previous to the appearance of Frenchy Bordagaray, always chewed a toothpick while batting. . . . Roy Thomas, another famous Philly outfielder, used to don a pair of fingerless kid gloves when he reached first base. That was the sign that he was preparing to steal second and did not wish to get his hands dirty while sliding.

Phil Scott, who was bowled over more often than Jack Doyle, but who got far more money for it, now wants to manage the Irish tenor. Claims that he can make him heavyweight champion in two years. . . . When he was a youngster Tommy Loughran's great admiration was for the defensive skill of Jack Johnson. The two master boxers met for the first time at a Philadelphia ringside recently and gabbed far on into the night about the fistic art. . . . Milton Bakst, the very able newspaper salesman who brought joy to so many bookmakers, finally has picked a winner. He got married the other day. . . . The three Tehel brothers, Andrew, Eddie and Paul, have good reason for being soccer stars. Their dad, Bela Tehel, was one of Vienna's best backs in the nineties.

The Hearst A. C. is vexed at Mike Jacobs because he insists that charity ought to be satisfied with 10 per cent of the Louis-Schmeling gross receipts. . . . Bill Terry never dons his sliding pads until a few seconds before game time. Says they give him too much extra weight to carry during practice. . . . Kay Force, the ex-jockey who now is a trainer, gallops as many as twenty horses a morning. Three and four is the average for the little exercise boys.

Predicts One of Nine Persons Will Be Injured During 1936

Every ninth person will meet with an accident of some sort this year if past statistics can be relied upon, L. D. Cavanaugh, executive vice president of the Federal Life Insurance Co., of Chicago, asserted recently in a statement issued in connection with Accident and Health week. "The number who will probably meet with accidents," Cavanaugh continued, "is five times as great as are expected to die from natural causes. More than 8,250,000 persons were injured and more than 100,000 killed by accidents in the United States last year, according to statistics compiled by the National Safety Council. The toll taken by sickness is even greater. While an average of 17 persons is injured in accidents every minute of the night and day, 51 are disabled each minute by sickness."

School Notes

High School

Harrisville, Roscommon, Mio, Oscoda, Alabaster, and Tawas City high school representatives participated in the AuSable District spelling contest at Mio Saturday evening. Richard King and Albertine Herman represented the Tawas City high school. Albertine won third place among a total of eleven contestants. The Seniors journeyed to Detroit Wednesday to see the Tigers defeat the New York Yankees by the score of 4 to 3. The climax of the game came when Owen hit the ball over the Cherry street fence for a home run and the winning run in the tenth inning. The cars were driven by Messrs. Keiser, Tuttle and Leslie, Miss Worden, and Mrs. Rapp.

Professor French of the Bay City Junior College brought several students from the college Tuesday who gave a program before the local high school assembly. The program consisted of some excellent musical selections and short talks by Professor French and the president of the student council of the college.

Our baseball team added two more victories to its credit by defeating Standish, 9-6, and winning the game from Prescott by forfeit. The Prescott game was forfeited to our team when only the coach and four of Prescott's players had arrived by 4:30. The Standish game was played with a great deal of difficulty—time cut being called three times on account of rain. Bill Mallon pitched for our team and held our opponents to only three hits and struck out 13. Errors on the part of Bill's teammates accounted for three of the losers' runs. By winning the two games this week, our league standing becomes three games won and no games lost. Tawas City remains the only team in the league that has not been defeated. We play Whittemore there Friday, May 22, and Sterling here May 26.

 Seventh and Eighth Grades
 Hugh Prescott was absent four days last week on account of illness. There were no tardy marks in the seventh grade in this last school month.

Norma Malcolm won third place in the spelling contest held at Mio May 16.
 Our percentage of attendance fell quite perceptibly last month. Out of an enrollment of thirty-two, only thirteen had a perfect attendance record.

The following pupils had no mark below "B" for the past month: Norma Burtzloff, Janet McLean, Marion Musolf, Mary Sims, Kathleen Davis, and Martha Herman.

Primary Room

Vernon and Clifford Grove and Arthur Proper have moved to Wilber.

On the honor roll for May are the following: Betty Lue Brown, Mary Louise Kaiser, Janet Musolf, Beverly Bigelow, Dwayne Leslie, Lewis Mark, Ruth Ulman, and Ruth Westcott.

Little Jimmy Misener and Nelson Ulman visited in our room Friday afternoon.

singles by Wasalaski and Sanders, and Winslow's double.

Now in possession of a 6-5 lead, the Bentley management believed Dumbroski had enough on the rubber after the locals' four-run spurge in the fifth and left-fielder Wasalaski exchanged places with him. Dumbroski had been quite invincible during the first four frames, allowing only two hits, those by Mallon and Kasischke, and striking out 12, but his wildness resulted in five passes and two hit batters. Wasalaski, however, fared no better than did Dumbroski; in fact, worse. He lasted only the six inning. Five runs in that frame swelled the Tawas total to ten counters. Laidlaw was hit by a pitched ball and moved to second on Mallon's sharp single. Johnson forced Mallon at second and Davis was hit by a pitched ball to fill the sacks. Dumbroski made a diving catch of Kasischke's drive along the left field line to cut off some runs, but Libka, next up, proceeded to rectify this with a single to short, scoring Laidlaw. Moeller's single sent Johnson across the plate. With the bases still loaded, a passed ball allowed Davis to score and Libka and Moeller to advance a base. Quick then brought the latter two runners in with a single.

Koelsch hurried the last three frames for Bentley and managed to hold Tawas in check until the ninth when Laidlaw's single, an error and Johnson's single added the final tally to the locals' total. In the meantime Quick, after his rather sad start in the fifth, buckled down and allowed only one safety during the last four frames.

The Tawas squad was outlit, 12-11, by the Bentley crew. The locals, though, were aided greatly by the wildness of their opposing pitchers. In the field the 1935 champs outshone the Bay county ball hawks by a considerable margin. Bentley's pitchers accounted for 17 putouts through strike-out means, but in the remaining chances their mates committed six errors. Brown and Quick also did an enormous job at breezing the third strike by, retiring 15 men by that method. Their mates took care of the rest with only one miscue chalked against them.

All of the local boys gave a good account of themselves in their first game of the season. Moeller had a perfect day at bat and turned in a nice job in left field. Mallon did very well in the clean-up position, knocking out two run-producing hits. Johnson connected for a couple of solid bingles in addition to his good work in center. Laidlaw turned in his usual fine brand of catching. Roach climbed into the limelight by fast fielding of what looked like a sure hit in right field and throwing to first for the putout. Wasalaski with two hits out of three times up, Baldwin with three out of five, Sanders with two out of four and Winslow with three out of four were the big guns in the Bentley attack, several of the blows made by these men going for extra bases.

Next Sunday Prescott comes to the local athletic field to cross bats with the Tawas sluggers. Prescott is recognized as one of the most powerful clubs in the league and a real contest is expected.

of crops are jeopardized the paper collars are, of course, inadequate. In such cases use may be made of poison bran bait spread upon the land very lightly at the rate of from 10-40 pounds per acre. In preparing the bait moisten 100 pounds of soda made in the proportion of 8 1/2 gallons water, 32 pounds caustic soda or lye and 100 pounds white arsenic (not arsenate of lead or arsenate of calcium); two gallons cheap molasses; about ten gallons of water, and three ounces of banana oil.

For garden size quantities of poison bran bait use five pounds of bran, four ounces of white arsenic or paris green, one pint of molasses and water to moisten, plus one orange or lemon finely chopped, skin and all.

In all cases this bait should be used very cautiously and spread very thin upon the ground as it is destructive to livestock and poultry as well as cut-worms if they are allowed to have it in sufficient quantities.

There is some quantity of these bait materials available to the farmers of Isosco county, free of charge, and if enough people express a desire for bait it will be prepared and distributed by the county agricultural agent.

steamfitter, an electrician, etc. will take their turn as foremen. It is surprising to see how many "common laborers" there are on each job. And the members are having lots of fun.

Dances, card parties, banquets, etc., have added to the amount subscribed by the members and the committees in charge of each affair have worked hard to make a success of its project.

One of the projects of the lodge is its annual fish dinner on Memorial Day. Last year's dinner and supper were so well received that the members, with the help of the ladies of the Order of the Eastern Star, are planning a bigger and better time this year. Committees are now at work and it is planned to serve dinner beginning at 12 o'clock, at fifty cents for adults and twenty-five cents for children of twelve years and under. There will be lots to eat and many cooks and waiters to attend to everyone's wants.

Supper for twenty-five cents will be served in the evening. And the members are thinking over the idea of having a dancing party in the evening. If it is decided to have a dancing party, that fact will be announced next week.

Plan to have breakfast only at home. Come to the temple after the Memorial exercises and enjoy the annual Masonic fish dinner.

Earthquakes Cause Tidal Waves
 Ocean tidal waves more than fifty feet high have been caused by earthquakes.

Lightning Traced to the Earth
 Tests in Colorado indicate that lightning passes from the earth to clouds and does not originate in the air.

Weight at the Poles
 A man weighs more in Soltzberges than he does in Brazil; centrifugal force at the equator, due to the turning of the earth, makes objects weigh less than at the poles.

Driven Out by Yellow Fever
 More than 20,000 whites left Memphis, Tenn., from 1876 to 1878 because of yellow fever.
