Splendid Attendance At Zion Lutheran Reunion

On Sunday, July 5th, the Zion Lutheran church was filled to the doors with members and guests who came from far and near to celebrate the reunion of confirmation classes of the years 1874 to 1908, inclusive.

The members and guests began to arrive at the church at an early hour and when the beautifully appointed services began there was only standing room left. The highlights of the service were the inspiring addresses given by Rev. Theo. Wuggazer and Rev. Arthur Wuggazer. The addresses were taken to heart by the assembly and will be pondered on in the years to come.

After the services the members and guests gathered at the school building for a pot luck dinner, served by the Ladies Aid, and spent most of the afternoon renewing old acquaintances. Some of those present had not seen each other for forty years.

Present at the reunion were 84 members of the confirmation classes from 1874 to 1908. The total number present at the services was 350. Out of town guests included the following: Mr. and Mrs. Herman Schulz, Mrs. Ed. Kremkow, Wm. Schulz and family, Leo Schulz and family, Otto Schulz and family, Miss Minna Karus, Mrs. Ida Graul, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Dunlop, Mr. and Mrs. Ferdinand Bischoff, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ritter, Mrs. Martha Moehring, Mr. and Mrs. John Anschuetz and Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Woizeschke of Detroit; Mr. and Mrs. Ben Mau of Bay City; Mrs. Carrie McDermott of Curtisville; Albert Moeller of Petoskey; Mr. and Mrs. Carl Oppenborn of Flint; Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Marzinski and Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Marzinski and family of Alpena; Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Bock and friends of Pinconning; Mrs. Wm. Gottlieb and Mrs. Martha Heinlein of Saginaw; Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Katterman, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Katterman and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Frantz of River Rouge; Theodore Mallon of Ferndale; Rev. and Mrs. A. Wugazer and friend of Fraser; Mr. and Mrs. Herman Kuerbitz of Linwood; Mr. and Mrs. Otto Schwerin of Rhodes; Edw. Woizeschke and daughter, Margaret, of Owosso; Mr. and Mrs. Lavin Woizeschke of Hawks, and Mrs. Mary Dommer of Pierce, Nebr.

Harry A. Goodale, president of the Isoco County Soils Conservation program, received word this week from Maurice Doan, chairman of the Michigan Agricultural Conservation committee, that the average rate of the Class I or soil-conserving payment for Isoco county under the 1936 farm program is $9.40 an acre.

Mr. Doan points out that the rate for each farm will depend upon the productivity of the land on the farm and may vary considerably from the average rate for the county. Farms more productive than the average for the county will receive rates higher than the county average. Less productive farms will receive lower rates.

The county average payment applied to the Class I soil-conserving program is $9.40 an acre.

GRAND JURY TO PROBE KENYON MURDER CASE

Witnesses To Appear Before Justice Smith This Afternoon

A one-man grand jury investigation into the facts surrounding the death of Little Bobby Kenyon opened this afternoon (Friday) before Justice H. Read Smith. Prosecuting Attorney John A. Stewart petitioned yesterday for the investigation following a review of the autopsy report from Dr. John Bugher, pathologist of the University of Michigan, and results obtained Tuesday at Lansing in the polygraph tests.

Mr. and Mrs. George Thomas, uncle and aunt of the murdered boy, were taken to Lansing where they submitted to tests made with the famed lie detector or polygraph.

The grand jury investigation today is not open to the public, states Prosecuting Attorney Stewart. Every person thought to have knowledge which would indicate a clew to the mystery surrounding the boy's murder will be questioned under oath at this inquiry. Prosecuting Attorney Stewart, Sheriff Moran and Lieut. Van A. Loomis of the state police are the examining officers. Workmen at the Hill ranch, where Bobby lived with his uncle and aunt, and many residents of Reno township have been subpoenaed for the investigation.

The autopsy of the boy's body by Dr. Bugher indicated without any question that Bobby had been murdered. The condition of the contents of the stomach and intestinal track indicated that death had come to the boy four hours after he had eaten a meal. The conclusion would be that he had been killed shortly after he left his aunt at the pasture gate. The two had gone after the cows at four o'clock that Monday afternoon.

Allen-Schmalz
On Friday evening, July 3, occurred a very pretty wedding when Edith M. Allen became the bride of Ernest R. Schmalz. The ceremony was performed in their own home which they furnished and had ready for occupancy. The bride will be remembered here as Edith Baxter and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Baxter of Saginaw. The groom is a son of Rudolph Schmalz of Tawas township and is employed as bookkeeper in the Orville Leslie Ford garage.

Mrs. Schmalz chose for her wedding gown aqua blue crepe and lace with white accessories and carried a bouquet of sweet peas and bride's roses. She was attended by her daughter, Mrs. Douglas Reed, of North Star, who wore pale blue with gray, and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Carl B. Allen, of Ithaca, who chose white with black.

Mr. Schmalz had for his attendants the bride's son, Carl B. Allen of Ithaca, and her son-in-law, G. Douglas Reed of North Star.

As the groom and his attendants took their places before a beautiful background of flowers and ferns, Mrs. Reed sang "I Love You Truly." She was accompanied at the piano by Miss Ernestine Cecil of East Tawas. (Turn to No. 3, Back Page)

Instructions Given 4-H Boys In Livestock Judging

The 4-H Club boys of this county who are taking up some branch of livestock work as their summer project spent Friday, July 3, by receiving preliminary instructions in the judging of livestock.

Nevels Pearson of the state 4-H Club department spent the day with these enthusiastic young livestock men, helping them to establish in their minds the good points that should be looked for and the weak points to guard against in the buying of animals or the choosing of individuals for the showing.

The day's program consisted of horse judging at the Waldo Curry farm, after which a pot luck dinner was served at the Tawas Golf course. After dinner the club people settled their meal by a good old fashioned softball game in which the red shirts defeated the blue shirts in a strongly contested game by a score of 7 to 5. Following the ball game instructions were given upon the judging of sheep, using Hampshire ewes loaned to them for the occasion by Vernon Alda. The balance of the day was spent judging dairy cattle at the Charles Timreck farm.

RIVOLI THEATRE TO REOPEN ON JULY 19
The Rivoli Theatre, Tawas City, will reopen on Sunday, July 19, following the completion of extensive repairs and renovations to the building. New sound equipment, screen and projectors of the latest type have been installed in order to assure perfect vision and sound, states Fred Blumer, who will manage the theatre.

The opening program Sunday and Monday, July 19-20, features Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers in "Follow the Fleet."

Marshall Packers Are Defeated By Hale, 11-9
The Marshall Packing company baseball team of Bay City met its first defeat of the season at the hands of the Hale team July 4 at Hale before a crowd of several hundred interested fans, the score being 11 to 9. The Bay City boys had a total of nine hits and the Hale boys collected 12.

The Packing company team had an excellent record of thirteen consecutive victories. The Hale team is undefeated so far this season, having won ten games.

The game was rather a one-sided affair for the first five innings. Hale scored three runs in the first and eight in the third off the offerings of Charters. Charters was lifted in the fourth when Sunquist took on the pitching duties. The Hale boys gathered nine hits off Charters and three off Sunquist. Bay City scored three runs in the fifth, three more in the sixth, two in the seventh, and one in the eighth.

Earl Slosser pitched a scoreless game for the Hale team during the first four innings. Slosser was replaced by Stanley Shellenbarger in the eighth and Stanley held the Bay City boys well in hand during the remainder of the game. Charters struck out two batters in three innings, Sunquist six in five innings, Slosser ten in seven innings, and Shellenbarger one in two innings.

The Hale team was badly handicapped after the fourth inning because two of its players were injured. Rahl, left fielder, turned his ankle when his spikes caught against home plate while sliding, and McGirr, third baseman, was severely hurt by a pitched ball.

8-DAY SAILING REGATTA WILL OPEN AUGUST 1

Event Promises To Be One Of Most Colorful Of Its Kind In State

With more yachts appearing each week on the waters of Tawas Bay, interest in the fourth annual Regatta and Water Carnival sponsored by the Tawas Bay Yacht Club is mounting to a new high. For three months the committee has been preparing an elaborate program which they feel will surpass any celebration of its kind in the state. Entertainment has been provided for young and old alike—a variety of occurrences which will please both yachting enthusiasts and land-lubbers.

The first public announcement of the event was made when spectators along the line of march viewed the float entered by the Yacht Club in the Silver Jubilee parade at Oscoda on the Fourth.

Simultaneous with the gun which will send the yachts away from Point Lookout to Tawas Bay at 12:30 on the afternoon of August first, flag-raising ceremonies in the Tawas will officially open the eight day affair. From that time on until the Commodore's Bay is ended on August eighth, there will not be a dull moment for anyone.

Swimming and diving events, novelty races, tennis and golf tournaments, boxing matches, a trap shoot, water parade, musical entertainment, a pageant—all have been arranged for in order that anyone visiting the Tawas during the first week in August will be certain to remain to see just what will happen next.

A distinctive feature of the week will be the dedication of the Kiwanis monument in Huron National Forest on Sunday, August second. Practically every Kiwanis club in the state will be represented when the monument is unveiled.

From Tuesday through Thursday the Michigan Department of Conservation will have on display in (Turn to No. 4, Back Page)

Invite Local Tennis Players To Enter Bay City Tourney
Tennis players in Tawas City and the surrounding vicinity are invited to compete in the second annual novice tennis tournament to be staged at Bay City July 27 through July 31.

Winners and runners-up will represent this district in the state finals at Detroit starting August 8 with all expenses for the trip to be provided. The deadline for enrolling is July 24.

Any player who has not won a college letter or a major tennis tournament is eligible for the novice meet. Competition is in two classes, men's singles and women's singles. To enroll, write the sports department of the Bay City Times for an entry blank or clip the blank which is carried on the sports pages of that paper daily.

Drouth Crisis Brings Federal Aid—Business Revival Continues in First Half of 1936—Steel Industry Fights Drive for Unionization.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

FEARS that drouth may irrevocably destroy farm crops in North and South Dakota, eastern Montana and Wyoming prompted President Roosevelt to marshal $500,000,000 in relief funds to combat the damage and to develop further plans for fighting drouth.

Secretary Wallace

Secretary of Agriculture Henry W. Wallace, who left Washington for a personal survey of the stricken areas, declared that from all reports conditions had become as serious as they were in 1934, due to lack of sorely needed rains.

The secretary declared that unless rains descend in the sun-scorched regions the government will buy 30,000,000 head of cattle in the next month.

In St. Paul, Minn., the governors of the five drouth-stricken northwestern states met with Federal Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins and administrators from the various states. Mr. Hopkins ordered relief jobs made immediately available for from 25,000 to 50,000 farmers who have seen their sole source of livelihood destroyed. The jobs were to be made available on water conservation projects, farm-to-market roads, rural schools and recreational projects.

President Roosevelt, in Washington, appointed a special committee composed of Secretary Wallace, Budget Director Daniel Bell, Aubrey Williams, Assistant Works Progress Administrator and Dr. Rexford G. Tugwell, resettlement administrator. They will work in cooperation with a committee of department of agriculture officials. The president instructed Budget Director Bell to study government appropriations to determine what funds are available.

CONTINUING business recovery during the first six months of 1936 fulfilled the hopes of optimistic prognosticators and surpassed the expectations of conservative forecasters.

All the leading trade barometers registered fair business weather at the close of the first half of the year. The production of automobiles reached 2,400,000 units in the first six months of 1936, the best for the period since 1929.

Improvement was further reflected by the steel industry, the operations of which rose from 49.2 per cent of capacity at the start of the year to 71.2 per cent at the end of June. The output of electricity climbed steadily to reach an all time peak in June.

The steady recovery of the railroads was indicated by carloadings which worked up to approach their best levels since 1931. The figures for the first six months of 1936 were substantially better than those for the similar period of 1935.

A strong upsurge of home building gave impetus to the construction industry although it still remained at subnormal levels.

AN INCREASE of 90 per cent in the cash farm income on cotton, wheat, tobacco, corn and hogs from 1932 to 1935 was recorded under the Agricultural Adjustment act, invalidated by the Supreme court last January, according to the annual report of Chester C. Davis, former administrator, made public in Washington.

Cash farm income from these five major farm products which came under production control, rental and benefit payments was $1,365,000,000 in 1932, the year before the AAA became operative. For 1935 it was $2,593,000,000.

The report pointed out that cash farm income from all other products increased in the same period from $3,012,000,000 to $4,307,000,000. Mr. Davis, who was recently appointed by President Roosevelt to the Federal Reserve board, declared that cash available for living expenses, taxes and interest from farm cash income was the highest in 1935 since 1929, and two and one-half times greater than it was in 1932.

DEFYING a drive to force unionization of its 500,000 workers, the steel industry in a strongly worded statement issued by the American Iron and Steel institute declared "it will oppose any attempt to compel its employees to join a union or pay tribute for the right to work."

Although the statement did not mention him by name, it was regarded by observers as the first official response to the recent announcement by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, of a campaign to unionize steel employees.

In order to prevent the "closed shop," the industry said it "will use its resources to the best of its ability to protect its employees and their families from intimidation, coercion and violence and to aid them in maintaining collective bargaining free from interference from any source."

The unionization attempt comes at the time when steel operations have set a new record for 1936. Reasserting its belief in the principles of collective bargaining, the industry's statement pointed out that employees now pick their own representatives for collective bargaining by secret ballot. The statement declares:

"The steel industry is recovering from six years of depression and huge losses and the employees are beginning to receive the benefit of increased operations. Any interruption of the forward movement will seriously injure the employees and their families and all business dependent upon the industry and will endanger the welfare of the country."

IN ESTES PARK, Colo., Gov. Alfred M. Landon, Republican Presidential nominee, continued his vacation begun with his family the week before and made plans for reconvening of the Kansas legislature and for the acceptance speech he will deliver in Topeka on July 23.

Although Governor Landon was resting preparatory to the rigors of the campaign, affairs of his state and conferences with political advisers occupied considerable of his attention.

When the Kansas legislature reconvenes a proposed amendment to the state constitution will be introduced, giving the state broad power to provide far-reaching legislation for social welfare and to co-operate with the federal government. Governor Landon was quoted as describing the proposed amendment as "satisfactory."

The amendment, which may be the basis for similar action in other states, reads:

"Nothing contained in this constitution shall be construed to limit the power of the legislature to enact laws providing for financial assistance to aid infirm or dependent persons; for the public health; unemployment compensation and general social security and providing for the payment thereof by tax or otherwise and to receive aid from the federal government therefor."

"YIELDING to the urgings of party leaders, Gov. Herbert H. Lehman of New York announced that he would run again for the office of governor. The governor had announced several months ago that he would not be a candidate again, giving as his reasons the press of personal business and a desire to retire to private life.

Democratic leaders declared the governor's decision will help the national ticket to carry New York in the election next November. In a statement issued to newspapers, Governor Lehman said he could "no longer resist" the appeals of national and state Democratic leaders. The statement said:

"Regardless of personal considerations, however compelling, I feel that I can no longer resist the pleas of my party both in the state and in the nation or of those with whom I have worked in closest association for many years and with whom I have waged the fight for equal opportunity and social security.

"Therefore if my party in this state chooses to nominate me again and if the people of the state again call on me for service I shall proudly accept the call and will devote myself wholeheartedly to the interest of the people of the state."

RETIRING from the post of Comptroller General, J. R. McCarl announced that following the expiration of his term of office he would aid in the government reorganization study undertaken by the senate committee headed by Senator Byrd of Virginia.

Gen. McCarl criticized New Deal emergency agencies as "loosely and extravagantly set up" and as "tax consuming in the extreme." He declared that a systematic reorganization of both regular and emergency agencies would improve government administration and reduce the cost to taxpayers.

Eaton Rapids—With a 15 per cent dividend of $53,262.29 just authorized, the First National Bank of Eaton Rapids will pay off its depositors 100 per cent. A 40 per cent dividend was paid in 1934 and 45 per cent in 1935. Upon distribution of the present 15 per cent, depositors will have received $507,377.65.

Grand Rapids—Planted 104 years ago by the first band of settlers to come into Kent County from New York State, a hollow apple tree on the Thomas E. Graham farm near Grand Rapids will bear a big crop of apples this summer. Through grafting, the tree will produce three kinds of the fruit—Shiawasse Beauties, Northern Spies and Belflowers.

Lansing—About 200,000 Michigan residents received surplus food, clothing and bedding from the WPA in the first three months of 1936, according to reports. The apportionment consisted of 2,053,409 pounds of food, 164,237 articles of clothing and 24,622 pieces of bedding. The surplus distribution was made to supplement the relief budgets of the needier families.

Lansing—The State Crime Commission is considering the purchase of Foster City, located in Dickinson County, a few miles from Hardwood, to be converted into a camp for jobless prison parolees. The purchase would include approximately a section of land, but could not be consummated without consent of the Legislature and a legislative appropriation. It will be referred to the next Legislature.

Lansing—The Mortimer E. Cooley highway bridge in the Manistee National Forest, designed by L. W. Millard of the State Highway Department, was awarded first prize in a national bridge design competition held annually by the American Institute of Steel Construction, Inc. The Cooley bridge carries M-55 over the Manistee River, and cost $250,000 to build. It is 600 feet long with a 300-foot center span, and was opened to traffic last September.

Lansing—State officials have decided to leave the control of "army worm" or "canker worm" caterpillars in two sections of Northern Michigan to individual farmers. James F. Thomson, commissioner of agriculture said that the insects, reported to infest 70 to 73 square miles near Alpena and Vanderbilt, are attacking only second growth deciduous trees. He said these trees may be injured if the attack is repeated for two or three years in succession.

Caro—Five acres of string beans will be harvested this summer by the Caro troop of Boy Scouts, under the direction of Scoutmaster George Neebes. They will wipe out an indebtedness of $120 on the Scout property of 38 acres with a stone lodge on the Cass River about three miles east of Caro. The beans, for which seeds were donated, will be taken to the Caro canning factory. Individual Scouts will receive one-third of the proceeds for their own use, and two-thirds will go into the troop fund.

Allegan—This city hailed the end of a ten-year battle for municipal power as the waters of the Kalamazoo River began backing up behind Allegan's new hydro-electric dam. With a seventy-acre lake and an immense store of potential power, engineers are installing equipment and it is hoped that the master switches will be thrown this month. Allegan's struggle for the right to build and operate its own power plant has been watched closely by other municipalities as it progressed down the long road from 1926.

East Jordan—Because a pair of swans didn't like the living quarters assigned them on Round Lake at Charlevoix, the Jordan River Sportsman's Club now has a flock of 10 swans on Jordan River. The first pair of birds, property of the Chicago Club, migrated here from Round Lake four years ago. Several times the club manager took them home, but they promptly returned, so he gave up and left them here. Four cygnets were hatched two years ago and other swans have joined the flock, one of the town attractions.

Lansing—The U. S. Treasury states that the Postoffice building program scheduled for Michigan from the $60,000,000 authorized for emergency construction by the last Congress would cost approximately $1,502,000. The 14 projects include Detroit, Northwestern station, $285,000; Detroit, North End station, $320,000; Blissfield, $70,000; Eaton Rapids, $70,000; Niles, $60,000; Rockford, $70,000; Mason, $70,000; East Detroit, $70,000; Traverse City, $140,000; Grayling, $70,000; Munising, $75,000; Calumet, $72,000; Wayne, $70,000, and Rochester, $70,000.

FROM AROUND MICHIGAN

Ruth—Herman Buescher, who died here recently, left 99 living descendants to carry on the family traditions.

St. Ignace—A carrier pigeon, evidently lost, was a passenger on a State ferry in the Straits of Mackinac for three weeks. The pigeon's leg band carried the number X-4641-AU34.

Nashville—Hopping greenbacks brought unexpected prosperity to Nashville boys. Frog hunting has proved so profitable that some men have joined most of the village boys in the hunt.

Lansing—Retirement of $1,000,000 worth of soldiers bonus bonds was planned on July 1st by the auditor general. Outstanding bonus bonds were the second highest item in the State bonded debt of about $77,000,000.

Howell—The new Cromaine Crafts Center opened here on June 26. The building was the home of the late Dennis Shields. It was donated to the Cromaine Crafts, a Hartland area project, by his sons, Edmund C. Shields, and Francis J. Shields.

Lansing—Voters of Michigan will decide Nov. 3 whether foods shall be exempted from the State sales tax. The proposal would exempt from the tax virtually all foodstuffs, whether in sealed containers or not, and also prepared meals, as in restaurants.

Lansing—The State Conservation Department is planning removal of obstructions to public fishing in the Pine River in Lake County, on the No-Bo-Shone Association property. The state recently won a 4-year court fight with the association by default.

Marysville—This city has received the approval of school electors to issue a series of bonds totaling $10,000 to finance the building of a new grade school. Greatly increased industrial activity and the opening of factories here have made improved educational facilities necessary.

Lansing—A beauty treatment for the dome of the State Capitol Building here has been ordered by the State Board of Auditors. It has been decided to restore the dome to a color blending with the stone of the building proper instead of the grey paint it now bears. The job will cost about $1,100.

New Haven—Mrs. Leo Gordon, 26 and Mrs. Simon Belovitz, 27, are two of a family of seven girls. Both of them live here. On June 24th, Mrs. Gordon gave birth to a baby girl and 31 minutes later, Mrs. Belovitz followed suit, so it looks like the famine majority is being carried over into a second generation.

Farwell—James H. Johnson, a real fighting man, now 90 years old, cashed his soldier bonus here. He served nine months in 1865 in the Civil War. Besides several Indian wars, he served in the Spanish-American War, Philippine Insurrection, the Boxer uprising in China and the World War. In the latter he was getting along in years and was assigned to the Construction Division on the Pacific Coast.

Charlevoix—The widow of Surfman Earl Cunningham received a gold life saving medal, the posthumous award of the Coast Guard to her husband, who lost his life Feb. 8 while trying to save a party of Charlevoix fishermen from a drifting ice floe. Cunningham was swept out into the lake in an open boat with Clayton Brown and Claude Beardsley. Brown, the sole survivor, crawled ashore across the ice near Goodhart, Mich.

Grand Rapids—Grand Rapids turned time back 100 years to celebrate the centennial of the founding of the furniture industry here. The industry was founded here in 1836 by William Haldane, who died in 1898 at the age of 91. In his two-story frame house, on the site of which the Michigan Trust building now stands, he made furniture with hand tools. From this humble start the industry grew until Grand Rapids earned the title of "Furniture Capital of America."

Lansing—The State Highway Department reports the popularity of a tourist information depot at New Buffalo has resulted in a decision to open similar depots at Monroe, Menominee, and Sault Ste. Marie. Between May 4 and June 20, 1935, the department said, a total of 2,164 persons and 1,209 motor cars visited the New Buffalo station to obtain road maps, directions, and information.

The number in the corresponding period of 1936 was 7,865 persons and 2,127 cars, the announcement said.

Traverse City—Politics will be forgotten here on July 16, when President Roosevelt and governors of the 48 states unite in honoring Detroit, the "city of champions." A hand-carved burl walnut plaque will be presented to Mayor Couzens by Gov. Fitzgerald, acting as representative of President Roosevelt and the 48 governors. The plaque will measure approximately three and a half by five feet. Along the upper border will be carved the seal of the City of Detroit, beneath the seal, a salutary inscription, written by Harold Titus.

Lansing—Michigan will have an accurate basis for developing a scientific procedure for the equalization and valuation of rural property upon the completion of an inventory now being made by 1,125 WPA workers. The workers, under the supervision of the State Tax Commission, are covering every county in Michigan. The inventory includes a classification as to use, cover, soil, and other characteristics of each enclosure; a description and history of all improvements and the collation of all data bearing on value, ownership, and productivity.

Washington.—The arrival of the first robin does not guarantee the immediate arrival of spring but when the first robin is observed, folks generally consider that there is little left of winter. An out and out bolt by an individual in party politics likewise does not guarantee important defections, but, like the arrival of the early robin, an individual bolter, if he be a man of consequence, has a story of its own to tell. A bolt in party politics never attracts attention unless the bolting individual is of some consequence and, therefore, has a personal following. Thus it is that when we observe a bolt by a nationally known individual from his lifelong political affiliation, we immediately understand its significance. The scope of this significance, however, is the thing that concerns us.

Nearly everyone knows now that former Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York, Democratic Presidential nominee in 1928, has made known that he cannot support President Roosevelt for re-election. They know as well that the four other individuals who asked the Democratic National convention to push Mr. Roosevelt aside and nominate a Democrat can be classified as important individuals along with Governor Smith. No one dare say that former Sen. James A. Reed of Missouri, former Governor Ely of Massachusetts, Bainbridge Colby, secretary of state in Woodrow Wilson's administration and Daniel F. Cohalan, one time Tammany chieftain, are unimportant in politics. They have consistently figured in Democratic party councils and thus it becomes apparent that these five robins presage something more than just their own departure from the ranks of Roosevelt supporters.

I make this statement notwithstanding the declaration by James A. Farley that he would not dignify their statement with a reply. Of course, Mr. Farley as postmaster general, chairman of the Democratic National committee, chairman of the New York State Democratic committee and delegate to the Democratic National convention, necessarily was a very busy man at the time the Smith statement, refusing support to President Roosevelt, was released for publication. Nevertheless, I am in a position to know that the Smith statement threw quite a scare into New Deal ranks. Frankly, they did not like it.

How much they do not like the Smith statement remains to be seen. I believe that no one can forecast exactly how much strength this group can pull away from Mr. Roosevelt in the November election. Much will depend upon their personal activities henceforth. If men like Smith and Jim Reed and Ely take the stump, if they go out onto the hustings and actually campaign for Governor Landon, the Republican nominee, it seems to me obvious that such campaigning will damage the Roosevelt cause materially.

It was the natural strategy for Mr. Farley to follow in declining comment on the Smith defection. His assertion that the Smith statement was so unimportant as to require no reply will be convincing to a very great many voters who already have made up their minds to support Mr. Roosevelt. But the truth is that the election has not been won yet by either side and any votes that are influenced by such a group as that headed by Governor Smith will have weight in the final determination of our next President.

The Smith defection becomes the more important in my opinion because it occurred almost simultaneously with the development of a third party under the leadership of Rep. William Lemke, of North Dakota. This picture may not be entirely clear to everyone. It is substantially this: Lemke and his colleagues are attempting to draw together the extreme radicals, the leftist groups. The bulk of these will come from the Democratic party if the Lemke organization develops any particular strength. The Smith group represents the conservative, or rightist, element in the Democratic party. Thus we see detraction from the Roosevelt strength on two sides.

I do not mean to say here that the combination of these circumstances will insure President Roosevelt's defeat. Anyone who would make such a declaration at this time demonstrates his lack of knowledge of political maneuvers. What I am seeking to show, however, is that robins have arrived in the back yard and in the front yard of the New Deal party and if the leaders of the two obstreperous groups engage viciously in this campaign, the time may come when Mr. Farley will recognize their importance. There already has been evidence of the influence of the Lemke radical segment. I think everyone agrees that the announcement of the third party's organization vitally affected the type of platform that was written in Washington and adopted by the Democratic convention at Philadelphia. From many sources comes information that the Democratic platform was made much more liberal—some critics describe it as more socialistic—than would have been the case had Representative Lemke stayed out of the political picture. He has the backing of Father Coughlin, the Detroit radio priest, and his national union for social justice and he has the backing of the remnants of the late Huey Long's share-the-wealth adherents. In addition, the Townsend $200-a-month pension followers will be found behind Lemke to some extent.

I have observed these third party movements many times before and usually they have failed to live up to expectations. They nearly always have developed fights among themselves because the very nature of and the very reason for their existence lies in their varied conceptions of what government ought to be or ought to do. Their sincerity precludes them usually from compromise and when politicians refuse to compromise, their organization, whatever it may be, naturally disintegrates.

This may be the year when the leftist segment will stick together and if it does, it naturally threatens Mr. Roosevelt's success. I confidently expect to see overtures seeping out from New Deal sources in an effort to placate some of the Lemke followers. It is a logical piece of strategy for the New Dealers to seek to wean these recalcitrant folks from the third party.

The European disturbances continue apace. It is a situation that is extremely interesting and one that probably will unfold as the weeks go by, in curious ways. I say curious because to us in America, it has been rather difficult to understand the meaning of many of the maneuvers that followed the outright subjugation of Ethiopia by the power thirsty Mussolini of Italy.

Word that comes rather direct from inner councils in Europe indicates a tremendous fear on the part of Italy and France about German plans. The British likewise are displaying nervousness and the present alliances and combinations of power existing in Europe are none too stable. It is just possible that Germany's Hitler may, by his present activities, force a new cementing of these alliances and understandings among other powers but at this time there is no mistaking the fact that Europe, outside of Germany, is a bundle of nerves.

It seems that the basis for this nervousness is rooted in the clever scheming of Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, who is something of an economic dictator under Hitler. Dr. Schacht is a brilliant negotiator. He understands economics, trade and finance as well as any man in Europe today and when you couple such knowledge with diplomatic keenness, you obviously have a man capable of accomplishing results.

Dr. Schacht is employing the methods he knows best, namely, economic understandings, in making new connections with central European power and the Balkan states.

In the case of Italy, an economic weapon in the hands of Germany might easily prove disastrous because Italy virtually exhausted her gold reserve in the late war and her government cannot go on much longer in furnishing purchasing power for her people. France has been able to open certain markets to the little entente and to the Balkans and has, in addition, provided some financial aid. Thus, when Dr. Schacht pats the neighbors of Germany, on the back and points out where markets can be made for them in Germany, France and Italy quickly develop cases of jitters.

It seems that Austria and Hungary cannot depend fully on Italian markets because of the low gold reserve in Italy. In the meantime as well, France has been losing millions in gold as her own domestic situation has been embroiled in a political whirlpool. The Austrians and the Hungarians and some of the other central Europeans recognize that unless France gets straightened out, there will not be purchasing power available there for their surplus produce. So, Dr. Schacht is cultivating what appears from this distance to be a fertile field.

No Alibis Needed for Uhlman Gained Fame Hard Way

IT SEEMS that several of the boys were mistaken. All along they had insisted that—if he wanted to—the winner of the Louis-Schmeling fight festival could turn the trick with one hand tied behind his back. Yet, as most of the 60,000 who witnessed the twelve round entertainment at Yankee Stadium will agree, nothing of the sort occurred.

Max Schmelling is not one of the great fighters of all time. I mention this for the benefit of those who already have forgotten about the defeats inflicted upon him by second raters and who now will attempt to blow him up into a gaudy bubble. He merely, as was stated in this space, a well-conditioned experienced man who scorned to be scared by such childish things as newspaper headlines.

Such qualities, along with a right that kept exploding long after the Brown Bomber had been reduced to tossing duds, won for him. In spite of the quoted long odds and the feverish babblings of gents scrambling to get on the before-the-battle band wagon, it really is not surprising that they did.

Louis, a gifted young giant who had been brought to the top faster than any heavyweight of modern times, fought a good fight.

It merely happened that in his first real test against a man who could take it and hit back he did not have quite enough. Since such a possibility had been faintly hinted at by sports reporters, unwilling to further offend the better judgment of their editorial department comrades, his downfall need not be considered a catastrophe.

Joe, undoubtedly, was in the best of shape when he shuffled out for the first round. As usual, when not facing a Levinsky or a Retzlaff, he was somewhat slow in opening up his opponent. But, even though he is strictly a counter puncher and was thus handicapped when Schmeling made him lead far more than usual, he scored repeatedly with left jabs. So he won the first three rounds, even though they were close and far from thrilling.

Max Failed to Press 4th Round Advantage

He also was ahead in the fourth, having handed out some tidy two-handed punishment during the infighting, when disaster overtook him. Schmeling, who says that he became confident of victory during the third round, missed with a right. Louis came close. Schmeling slashed with a right.

The Bomber went down. While the audience was gasping, scarcely daring to believe, he was up. But from then on, even though the methodical Max was too shrewd or cautious to follow up as would a Dempsey, Louis was a beaten man.

Even though he fought back determinedly, even desperately at times, it is more than probable that Louis has little coherent memory of what happened while he was losing the rest of the rounds. Six times, once immediately after having been warned by the referee, he landed with his right below Schmeling's belt. He backed away, reeled at times. At other times, he was all too eager to collapse into a clinch.

Coming out of his corner for the tenth his mouthpiece was awry. He fumbled at it, did not seem to know what to do.

As it was, what by now seemed inevitable did not occur until two minutes had elapsed in the twelfth. They had been in a clinch. Schmeling straightened up the Bomber with a left to the chin. Then the German, whose left eye had been closing tighter and tighter since it collided with a jab in the third round, shifted for a better view.

Having trained his sights, he landed with a right and then a succession of lefts and rights. Louis backed up, was forced against the ropes. The bombardment of rights continued. Louis staggered. Another right. He reeled into the ropes, got tangled in them such as Paulino Uzudun did at the Garden last December.

Schmeling stood there, his right hand poised for another shot. It was not needed.

WHEN Larry French went into the Giants' dugout recently carrying a bat he was not looking for trouble. Instead, the Chicago pitcher produced a fountain pen and the request that Mel Ott and Joe Moore autograph the club . . . Citizens who lament misfortunes which befell them in the betting ring shortly before Brevity and King Saxon were retired are preparing a plea for the State Racing commission. They will supplicate the racing rulers, who now use taxpayers' sugar for all sorts of interesting things, to appoint a few paddock inspectors capable of declaring lame horses out of stake engagements.

Two of the most accomplished umpire baiters in the National league draw top salaries as members of the Cincinnati front office force. During a considerable portion of the afternoon they sit in the stands howling at the arbiters. Then if a Klem or some equally able umpire happens to be doing his duty they rush into the dressing room after the game to emit additional beefs. Strangely enough (in a world where even clam diggers rush to the rescue of their mates) the two gentlemen, McPhail and Lane, were football officials long before they got on the Reds' pay roll . . . The reason is that even though Diana Fishwick does very nicely with nine clubs they have to tote 28 around the course for Miss Wilson.

During the racing season in New York not one owner or trainer was suspended for "hopping" a horse—Alice Marble, third ranking woman tennis player in 1934, plans to make a come-back in the East this year. She is the sister of Dan Marble, a former handball champion. The trick cap which Joe Jacobs wears was presented to him in 1929 by Andre Routsis . . . Although the Brooklyn playing field is probably the worst in the league, athletes do more complaining about the Phillies' park. Their squawk concerns the lights and shadows which descend on the field in late afternoon.

All score cards in the American league still misspell Rip Radcliff's name with a final "e." . . . He has been in the league only a year, so maybe there is some excuse, but the same score cards misspell Umpire George Moriarty with an "i" before the "ty," and George has been in the league most of the century . . . George Keogan, basketball coach at Notre Dame, found out that those aches and pains he attributed to senility were merely the machinations of some bad teeth, which have been yanked . . . The amateur boxing season in China will be climaxed by an intercity match between Shanghai and Tientsin, patterned after the Chicago-New York series.

Harold Sueme, rookie catcher the Cubs farmed out to Birmingham, has been placed at first base by Manager Riggs Stephenson of the Barons . . . Ernie Lombardi is the oldest member in point of service on the Cincinnati club . . . He has been with the Reds since 1932.

In answer to inquiries—Alabama Pitts is not out of baseball. The York club of the N. Y.-Pa. league merely has placed him on the suspended list for 15 days because an injured wrist will keep him out of lineup for that time . . . I do not know where Paulino Uzudun is now. Why not inquire at the Hearst A. C. or at some of the Old Men's Homes? . . . Harry Weldon, long ago sports editor of the Cincinnati Enquirer, is credited as being the first man to assemble all sports news on one page.

WITNESSING UNDER PERSECUTION

LESSON TEXT—Acts 3:1-4:31. GOLDEN TEXT—We ought to obey God rather than men.—Acts 5:29. PRIMARY TOPIC—Brave Peter and John. JUNIOR TOPIC—Two Brave Preachers. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Two Brave Witnesses. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Courageous Witnessing for Christ.

In I Corinthians 1:21-25, Paul sets forth the attitude of the world toward Christ and his gospel. The one who preaches Christ crucified must expect opposition, and even violent persecution. This attitude of the world, instead of being a deterrent, should be a spur to activity.

1. Peter Healing the Lame Man (Acts 3:1-11).

The place (vv. 1, 2). It was at the beautiful gate which leads from the outer to the inner court of the temple. This helpless man had been placed at the entrance of the place of worship where he might receive the sympathetic attention of worshippers.

2. The man (v. 2). This beggar was infirm from his birth. He was not more than forty years old (Acts 4:22). When he saw Peter and John, he asked alms.

3. The method (vv. 3-8).

a. Gaining the man's attention (v. 4). Peter and John commanded him to look on them. He asked for money and got healing.

b. Peter commanded him in the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth to rise and walk (v. 6). This was the very thing he had been unable to do all his life, but with the command went the ability to do.

c. Peter took him by the right hand (v. 7). He gave impetus to his faith, not strength to his ankles.

4. The man's response (v. 8). Strength at once came to him. He stood, walked, leaped, and shouted praises to God.

5. The effect (vv. 9-11). The people were so filled with wonder that they ran together to behold this thing. There could be no question as to the genuineness of the miracle for the man had been a familiar figure for many years.

a. This helpless man had to be carried to the temple. Men and women out of Christ are so helpless that they need to be brought where the life of God can be applied to them.

b. Peter, taking the man by the hand, shows the manner of helping the lost. Christian witnesses should bring them to Jesus.

11. Peter Witnessing Before the Multitude (Acts 3:12-26).

Though this miracle directed the attention of the people to Peter and John, Peter seized the opportunity to present Christ to the people.

111. Peter in Prison for Christ's Sake (Acts 4:1-4).

1. The leaders. Both priests and Sadducees joined in this persecution (vv. 1, 2).

The priests were intolerant because these new teachers were encroaching upon their functions. The Sadducees did not believe in the resurrection, which was a vital part of the apostolic preaching.

2. The result (vv. 3, 4). Though they were held in bondage by chains, Christ continued to work. The number of believers greatly increased.

IV. Peter Witnessing Before the Sanhedrin (Acts 4:5-21).

1. The inquiry (vv. 5-7). The inquirers admitted the reality of the miracle but they wanted to know what it signified.

2. Peter's answer (vv. 8-12). With stinging sarcasm he showed them that they were not on trial as evildoers, but for doing good in the name of Christ to the helpless and needy man.

3. The impression upon the Sanhedrin (vv. 13-21).

a. They marveled (v. 13). They were made conscious that they were on trial instead of sitting as judges.

b. They took knowledge that Peter and John had been with Jesus (v. 13).

c. They forbade them to speak in Christ's name (v. 18). They could not deny the miracle or gainsay the accusation brought against them, so they attempted intimidation.

d. Peter and John's reply (vv. 19, 20). They expressed their determination to obey God rather than men.

e. Their release (v. 21). Seeing that the people were on the side of the apostles, the rulers were helpless.

V. The Church at Prayer (vv. 23-31).

As soon as Peter and John were set free, they hastened to their fellow disciples and told their experiences. They praised God for deliverance and prayed for boldness to speak the Word of God.

Pulling Together

If the money getters would line up behind the knowledge getters, and all pull together in a definite well-organized plan, we'd raise the standards of human life higher than the most fantastic imagination ever dreamed they could be raised.

Loving Others

One whom I knew intimately and whose memory I revere, once in my hearing remarked that, "unless we love people we cannot understand them." This was a new light to me.—Rossetti.

Crochet That Is New and Quite Simple to Do

Pattern 5544

"Can anyone do it?" Most assuredly! It is a lovely rug, a matching foot-stool top or pillow for quick crocheting. Easy, six-sided medallions are done one by one, each flower a different color with background uniform or not, as you please. Sew them together and you're ready to begin the border crochet, going round and round with stripes of color used to break the background. Rug wool, rags or candlewicking may be used.

In pattern 5544 you will find complete instructions for making the rug shown; an illustration of it and of all stitches needed; material requirements; color suggestions.

Send 15 cents in coins or stamps (coins preferred) to The Sewing Circle, Household Arts Dept., 259 W. Fourteenth St., New York, N. Y. Write plainly pattern number, your name and address.

Good Books

If a man wants to read good books, he must make a point of avoiding bad ones; for life is short, and time and energy limited.—Schopenhauer.

Eczema in Big Watery "Bumps"

Burning and Itching Relieved by Cuticura

The records abound with grateful letters of praise like the following. Name and full address are printed to show that Cuticura letters are genuine beyond question. "My eczema began with an itching on my hands, arms and feet, and when I scratched, big, watery bumps came. They burned and itched so, that I scratched and irritated the affected parts. It worried me so I could not sleep. "I had this eczema for five years before I started to use Cuticura. After using three cakes of Cuticura Soap and three tins of Cuticura Ointment the irritation was relieved." (Signed) Miss G. E. Reid, 850 Central Av., Hamilton, O.

Get Cuticura Soap and Ointment NOW. Amazing also in relief of pimples, rashes, ringworm and other externally caused skin faults. Soap 25c, Ointment 25c. At all drugists. Samples FREE. Write "Cuticura," Dept. 21, Malden, Mass.—Adv.

Sunday, July 12—Divine services at 9:30 a. m. Sermon topic: What does it really mean to be a Christian?

Sunday school and instructions at 10:30 a. m.

Blessed are the poor in spirit, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.
Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth. Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled.
Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy. Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God.

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Farley and

"WE NEED MORE VACATION TRADE"

GET YOUR SHARE WITH CONCRETE ROADS

It's big business—this vacation trade. Retail stores, restaurants, filling stations, hotels, garages, amusement places, farmers—all profit directly from it. And everybody profits indirectly.

Other communities are in competition with yours. That's why it pays to build concrete roads. For tourists like to follow the concrete—just as you do.

Your community will make money and save money if your roads are concrete. Concrete costs less to build than other pavements of equal load-strength, costs far less to maintain and less to drive on. Insist on concrete.

Box Car School, Out in California

By H. M. IVEY
STANDING in the shadows of the high hills, in the rugged fastness of the extreme northern reaches of Mendocino county, California, is a personification of the Little Red School House which may some day become nationally known and nationally famous.

The Bell Springs Station school—the Box Car school, as it is known to the few who have knowledge of its existence—was born out of necessity and is surely one of very few such answers to a definite need, if not the only one in existence.

Bell Spring Station's population is very limited and its present school enrollment numbers eight. The station itself probably owes its existence to the necessity of providing a place of residence for Northwestern Pacific section workers, for in this isolated district, in the heart of the mountains, the railroad's minute men must be on the job, alert and diligent to keep a clear, safe and serviceable track.

The school building is exactly what the name implies—a Northwestern Pacific box car red, but in arrangement and appointment it serves admirably its purpose and can accommodate a limited increase in attendance.

About 100 feet removed from the railroad right-of-way, well lighted through skylight and eight windows, four on each side, the interior has been done over to make it secure against the blasts of winter. Rattan seats, which have done service in the company's "day coaches," furnish a comfortable seating arrangement before the sloping desks. The "front" of the building, toward which the students face, is provided with desk and table for use of the teacher.

Box Car school was made possible by the interest and co-operation of the Northwestern Pacific high officials, even E. H. Maggard, president and general manager, having lent aid to the project. Others who found time to give consideration to the future of Bell Springs Station youth were William Neff, general superintendent, and M. L. Gillogly, company valuation agent.

If fortunate in finding sympathetic railroad officials, Box Car school was especially fortunate to secure the services of Miss Florence Owens as teacher, one who is entirely in sympathy with her task and discharges her duties with enthusiasm.

REMEMBERING

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

WHEN some old road we wind again,
Some road we walked in other days,
The things we seek to find again
Are flowered fields and shaded ways—
Avoid the rocks that hurt our feet
And take the pathway that was sweet.

And when the mind goes wandering
Along the long age of life,
What folly to sit pondering
Upon the sadness and the strife—
When we might walk the better years,
Recall the smiles, forget the tears.

Beside the fading ember, then
Let love recall the better thing,
The mind alone remember then
The moments worth remembering—
Avoid the rocks that hurt our feet
And take the pathway that was sweet.

dangerous about the chain, Bobby continued to pull and presently there was the trap itself right in front of him. He sat down and studied it. He wondered how it worked. He was afraid of it but he was very, very curious. There it lay with its paws spread wide. Bobby remembered that Billy Mink had said that there would be no danger if he put his paw under it. Very cautiously he slipped a paw underneath. All of a sudden that trap jumped right off the ground. There had been a wicked sounding snap and those two jaws flew up and came together so swiftly that Bobby didn't really see what had happened. He had sprung the trap.

Bobby didn't wait to see what had happened or what was going to happen next. He almost turned a back somersault in his hurry to get away from the strange thing. He scurried along back up the Laughing Brook as if he expected that trap would follow him.

Bedtime Story for Children

BOBBY COON GETS A FRIGHT

BOBBY COON walked slowly down the bank of the Laughing Brook to the little fence with the little opening in it in which he knew a trap was hidden. Bobby was not at all easy in his mind. He didn't know much about traps. If he had known more about them than he did he would have been less afraid. Looking across the Laughing Brook he could see a little brown form bounding along the other bank in the moonlight. It was Billy Mink. He hard. He pulled them away as if they had been burned. Nothing happened. Curiosity gave Bobby new courage. He dug away very carefully the leaves and sand at that particular spot and presently he uncovered something shiny. Anything bright and shiny always interests Bobby Coon. Again he touched it and snatched away his paw. Nothing happened. Then Bobby got hold of that shiny thing and pulled ever so gently. The leaves in the little opening in the fence moved. Bobby pulled again. Those leaves moved some more. You see, Bobby had hold of the chain of that hidden trap. Finding that there was nothing knew that Billy was not afraid and that Billy was going to do on that side of the Laughing Brook what he himself had agreed to do on his side.

Bobby approached the little opening in that fence made of sticks, and studied it carefully. Billy Mink had said there was a trap there, but look as he would, Bobby couldn't see a sign of one. Some wet, dead leaves lay in the little opening in the fence and nothing else was to be seen. Billy Mink had said the trap was under those leaves. Bobby wondered how Billy Mink knew. Billy had told him that there was no danger except right in that little opening.

Very cautiously Bobby pulled away the dead leaves that covered the ground on his side of the little fence in front of the opening. He even dug down into the sand a little. Presently his fingers caught something

THE COIN IN THE KNOT

The magician takes a handkerchief and twists it into the form of a loose rope. He brings the ends together and ties a knot in the center of the handkerchief.

He commands a coin to appear in the knot. He hands the handkerchief to a spectator, who discovers that the coin is there. The handkerchief must be untied in order to remove the coin.

At the start of the trick the magician has the coin concealed in the folds at one end of the handkerchief. When he lets the center of the handkerchief sag, he releases the coin. It slides through the cloth tube and stops at the center. The magician simply ties the knot around it.

RECIPES WORTH TRYING

SANDWICHES are something that are like the poor—"always with us"—and a new filling is always greeted with a kind welcome. Here is one that is called:

Delicious Sandwich Filling.

Mix the following ingredients thoroughly and spread on bread or toast: One cupful each of peanut butter and grape jelly, one cupful of chopped raisins and one cupful of chopped pecan meats.

Apple Cinnamon Waffles.

Take one and one-half cupfuls of flour, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one-third teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-fourth cupful of sugar, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, two eggs well beaten, one cupful of milk, one and three-fourths cupfuls of diced apples and three tablespoonfuls of shortening (melted). Mix and bake on a hot waffle iron. Serve with butter and brown sugar.

Baked Steak.

Place a three-pound sirloin steak in a flat baking dish, spread with butter, after boning the steak. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and add a thin layer of lemon slices, then one layer of chopped green pepper and a third layer of onion slices. Use two large Bermuda onions and one green pepper, one lemon. Cover with two cupfuls of catsup and place in a hot oven to bake, allowing twenty minutes to the pound. Add mushrooms to the gravy in the pan and serve with the steak.

Prune Hearts.

Soak one dozen prunes over night and cut into small pieces. Wash and trim a beef heart, making several gashes in it. To the prunes add six Graham crackers, one-eighth teaspoonful of salt and fill the heart cavities. Skewer with toothpicks, and lace with cord to hold in the stuffing. Add the juice of half a lemon to the prune juice and pour over the heart. Baste often while roasting for one and one-half hours.

"Death Straddles the Fences"

By FLOYD GIBBONS
Famous Headline Hunter

TODAY, boys and girls, Dave Sherin takes the floor. Dave lives in New York city. "I met with my adventure in Ireland," he writes, "and strange to say, it didn't have to do with the Black and Tan revolution or anything like that. I had my adventure with a horse."

A horse. That's the answer to almost anything in Dave's life. Dave doesn't remember the time when he wasn't on a horse and going somewhere. Back in 1924, when his adventure happened, he was a steeplechase rider. And a more dangerous sport doesn't exist, unless it's playing post office with a roomful of man-eating tigers.

Dave had been riding steeplechases and hurdle races for two years over in England when, one September day in 1924, he set out for Ireland for a two months' vacation and a whiff of good Limrick air.

His home was in Kilmallock, and he'd only been there a couple days when a neighboring farmer brought him a high-spirited, half-bred colt and asked Dave to break him to the saddle.

Unbroken Colt Has Wicked Gleam in His Eye.

"The horses I'd been dealing with for the two years before had all been full-blooded 'chasers,'" says Dave, "and I looked on this new horse as being a very soft job indeed. I was wrong. My first inkling of the mettle of that colt came the first time I entered the stable. I was no sooner inside than he began to lash out in all directions. He practically kicked me out the door.

"I decided then that he'd been spoiled by bad handling, and set about coaxing him into a better frame of mind. After a few days he seemed to respond to my efforts and I put the 'tack' or breaking-in equipment on him. By that time I had forgotten the first reception he gave me. I should have been warned, though, by the wicked gleam that was still in his eye."

Well, sir, Dave had the harness on him, and for a few days he let him buck all the hellishness out of his system around the corral. Then one day, he saddled the colt and took him for a canter. For all of three miles, that animal was gentle as a lamb. But finally they came to a field where three or four young horses were grazing, and the sight of those horses seemed to infuriate Dave's mount.

Dave Goes for a Wild Ride Upside Down.

"He quivered a moment," says Dave, "and pushed his head down as far as he could. Then, suddenly, he swung it sharply around, ending up with it under my right stirrup, and at the same moment he plunged sideways, to the left. His sudden action unseated me, and as my left foot slipped from its stirrup I fell across his back to leftward.

"But my right foot held fast in its stirrup, and there I was, slung at the furious animal's side, my right leg sticking up in the air and the back of my head hanging an inch from the ground."

And with Dave dangling at his side, standing on his head on empty air, that wild colt started. Off he went, hell-for-leather across the open field.

Dave's Cranium Bumps the Ground at Every Stride.

"At each long stride he took," says Dave, "my head hit the ground and his hoofs grazed my skull. I have never been in a tighter corner in my life, but strange to relate, my head remained clear and my thoughts connected. I knew he was heading for the boundary fence at the other side of the field, and I never expected to cross it alive. Dangling at his side as I was, I must inevitably hit that fence. Then, if I wasn't smashed lifeless, I'd be a lot tougher than I ever thought any human could be."

On the colt galloped, crossing that field in a length of time that was all too short to suit Dave. Now the fence loomed up before him. Now the colt was falling back on his haunches for the jump.

It all took place in the twinkling of an eye, but to Dave, whose mind was racing with the agony of the doomed, it seemed like slow motion. The colt rose into the air—and the incredible happened. That horse didn't jump that fence. He flew over it like a bird, carrying Dave's head well over the top of the barrier and letting it down on the other side.

Colt's Somersault Saves Rider's Life.

"Then we were in the open again," Dave says, "and he was galloping faster than ever. Across another fence and another he went, clearing them with room to spare every time. And still he kept on, as I swung under his belly, my head brushing the tops of the blades of grass and his hoofs beating a tattoo on the side of my cranium. Then, through the lashing legs I caught a glimpse of a solidly built wall ahead and knew that the most dangerous leap in County Limerick barred his way.

"It was a stone wall, five feet high that dropped away six feet on the other side to a dyke 20 feet across. It's all over now, I thought to myself, and I still remember that I forgot to say a prayer. Then the wall seemed to be rushing toward me and I could feel the colt bracing himself for a great effort. He rose in the air, and the last thing I remembered was a crash like a ton of bricks falling about my ears—"

Dave awoke three days later, and they told him of the miracle that had saved his life. The colt's front feet had struck the wall, and he had turned a complete somersault—the one sort of spill that could possibly have saved Dave.

Llama, Beast of Burden, Used by American Indian

The llama has the distinction of being the only beast of burden that the American Indians were in possession of when America was discovered, observes a writer in the Rural New-Yorker. The peculiar conformation of its feet enables it to tread with security over rough and steep slopes where other animals would find it difficult walking. And then, camel-like, it is capable of making long journeys without water.

The llama is not a fast traveler, for the average distance is from a dozen to 15 miles a day when transporting merchandise, as it is distinctly a beast of burden, yet it supplies the Indian of South America his supply of wool for clothing, fresh meat, though coarse, leather, bone and his fuel, as the manure when dry is burned.

Here is one very peculiar trait of the llama: He carries a burden of from 100 to 125 pounds. If he is overloaded, he simply resents the imposition by walking out to the side of the road, lies down, and there is no persuasion and no punishment that can be administered to him that will induce him to change his obstinate decision!

When you look at a llama, you are beholding one of the most interesting animals of history, for when the great Inca Empire flourished from the Maule River in Chile to the Oasis of Mendoza to the Northern Andes of Ecuador, the llama was their beast of burden.

Speed Scare Persists

Until the coming of the railroads, the greatest sustained speed ever attained by man was established by the Roman Emperor Tiberius. Using relays of chariots, he sped to his dying brother, Drusus, at the rate of 200 miles a day.

For centuries man shook his head dubiously at every new proposal to increase the speed of land travel. When the locomotive was invented it was predicted that speeds of 30 miles an hour would prove fatal to human beings. Today airplanes travel at 250 miles and more an hour. Yet there persists the same haunting fear that at some still greater speed the human system will suddenly collapse.—Washington Star.

"Yep. I wouldn't let myself resent it, feel that I was out of luck falling in love with a man I couldn't have. If you hadn't done that you'd have married one of those fellows in the office. Did you ever think of that?"

She was in the deep leather chair, watching him seriously.

"I suppose that's so."

"It's so of every woman like you; it has to be so. You were young in lots of ways, old in lots of ways, eager and impulsive and mad to live. You just had to run your head into something."

"I wonder," Tony said, frowning faintly, looking away.

"You changed for Larry; you grew up. You were—well, like those pictures in Betsy's book, when you first met him. You grew older and wiser and lovelier."

"And better and more beautiful?" Tony suggested in the pause.

"You know it's true. You're one of the successful women of San Francisco now. You're certainly one of the loveliest."

"Joe," Tony began, after a pause. He flung down an armful of logs.

"Shoot."

"Do you suppose a person ever could come to be glad of—of anything like that—like what hurt me and humiliated me and made me hate myself and every one else?"

"I think," Joe said, standing panting on the hearth, looking down at her, "I think that. Just one of the things one might be glad of."

"A la Browning," Tony suggested.

"Then welcome each rebuff that turns earth's smoothness rough."

"Exactly—a la Browning. And a la every one who ever really grew up. Larry's never really grown up, you know, and neither has Caroline.

Tony was not listening. Her eyes, fixed in reluctance and apprehension, were looking straight through the eastern windows toward the stretch of farm road that curved to the highway a mile away.

"Company!" she exclaimed disgustedly.

"Oh, hell," Joe said simply.

"And I don't know that car, and I don't recognize that man who's driving—"

"It's a chauffeur—there's a man and woman in the back—damn!" Joe said, looking over her shoulder. They turned toward the terrace door and together went out to meet the visitors in the car.

"It's Larry," Tony said then. "Larry and Caroline." She dropped a suddenly cold hand to meet Joe's, warm and hard and waiting. "I'm in for it now!"

The newcomers descended; there was a little laughing confusion of hand-clapping and kissing on the terrace. Larry was heavier than he had been, Tony thought, but as handsome and brown, as shrewd of gray eyes as ever; Caroline was at the peak of her exotic and startling beauty. In dashing black and white, with a great scarf tied under her chin, gauntlets with flaring cuffs, a great silver fox skin linked about her shoulders, and a hat about six weeks in advance of the mode on her satin black hair, she instantly made Tony, in her brown pumps and pleated skirt and sweater, feel like a little girl.

"Tony, luck to find you here!" Larry said. "I was going to ring you up tomorrow."

Did he mean it? Or was he just a little confused? Tony could not tell. She was only overwhelmingly conscious that the dreaded moment had come: she was speaking to Lawrence Bellamy again.

"You didn't let us know!" she stammered.

"You must both lunch with us tomorrow," said Caroline.

"When'd you get in, Larry?" This was Joe.

"Just this morning. We hadn't been in an hour here we thought of coming down before. I tried to telephone, but they said you couldn't be reached by telephone."

"I have one, though. But it's not in the book."

"Joe, what's this about Rio?" demanded his sister.

"Oh, they want me to go down there for three years for the Foundation. It's a plop of a chance."

"And are you going? Let's not let him, Tony!"

"It's a wonderful chance," Tony said. "But let's stop freezing out here and get warm!"

They all went in to the fire; Larry sent the driver away with careful instructions.

"Get your dinner at the hotel, and come back—at nine. Joe, you can give us dinner?"

"Can we, Tony?"

"Joe, we're buried in food. We've ham, we've enchiladas, we've alligator pears."

"Oh, fine!" Larry said. He gripped their hands in a hearty, happy manner. "He can't always have been like this!" Tony thought. "Tony, Joe," he said, "it seems good to get back and hear your voices again and have Tony planning for meals! Meals seem to be your fate, Tony."

"Don't they?"

"And how are you all—your aunt, and Cliff and Brenda?"

"All flourishing. My brother Bruce has a political job in Sacramento now, and he stays up there. Cliff's married, you know, and they have a baby girl. Betsy has two boys, and feels that she ought to write a book to tell other mothers how babies should be raised."

"And when'd you come down, Tony?" asked Caroline.

"Joe picked me up at Betsy's this morning. There was a big Red Cross thing yesterday, and I had to do it."

"And how's the old city office?"

"Just the same. The same old story. Typewriters clicking, and the boys washing themselves and dripping all over their collars, and Betsy Ross mooning about some murderer's little gray wistful-eyed mother."

"You doing signed stuff?"

"Three or four times a week. And I run a woman's page; we have two new girls in the office now, both Stanford graduates."

"I'm going round there tomorrow."

"Are you going to have your office again upstairs?"

"It all depends, Caroline hates San Francisco."

"Yes, but Caroline doesn't necessarily have to stay there. I think Joe and I could have a very nice time in Rio," Caroline said for herself. "You can see us off!"

"You've only been married five months!" Joe observed innocently.

"Five months or five minutes," Caroline said, "Larry can't expect me to sit up there alone in the Fairmont while he runs his old newspaper."

"She likes to pretend she's jealous," Larry said, with a little laugh that was not quite easy.

"I don't like to pretend anything of the kind," Caroline retorted warmly. Tony perceived, with a sense of shock, that there was more in this than met the eyes. Some earlier quarrel was lending depth to this one. "I say seriously that I'd like to go to South America with Joe, if he'll take me," Caroline said, adding with a coquettish laugh, "Phil Polhemus is down there!"

"Well, we'll discuss it later," Larry put in, temporizing, as she paused, looking evenly at her brother. And Tony saw the dark angry red come up under his skin.

She went out into the kitchen, when Caroline went upstairs, and began the familiar inspection of icebox and cupboards. Wood crackled in the stove, and Tony, dodging the green thick smoke as she put back the iron plate, found Larry beside her.

"This is a lot of fuss, our staying."

"Oh, no, it's not, truly! We thought Cliff and Mary Rose might come. All I'm doing—" Tony said, bringing forth a half-consumed ham, and hunting in surprise.

"Caroline used to say that if ever she married again the first thing she'd make her husband buy her would be a chinchilla coat!"

"Our marriage was a mistake—we both see it now," Larry said, paying no attention. It's all like a dream—a bad dream."

"But you don't mean, Larry, that you and Caroline—already are thinking of a break?"

"I've come back here to work," he said doggedly. "She says she despises San Francisco society and hates the West. Her heart is set now on going to Rio with Joe—you heard her just now. I can't go; I don't want to go. I want to stay here and dig into my job." He looked up, and his dark face brightened with the smile she remembered so well, Larry's masterful, slow smile. "And now and then take you to lunch," he said.

Instead of smiling in return she slowly shook her head, her face very sober.

"No, no more of that! That's what I paid for so dearly, Larry, knowing that you belonged to her—to Ruth, and pretending that I had any right."

"Isn't caring for each other a right?"

"I thought so then. I'm older now. I see things differently now."

"You're changed," he said. "In all the lovely ways lovelier, and in so many other ways changed. You're—definite, now. You're—outstanding, Tony. I don't ask you to forgive me. I was confused with the suddenness of everything—I was changed, too—from my illness. Everything at home seemed far away and dreamy; the only realities were the villa, and the hot sunshine, and Caroline all in white being tremendously helpful and kind—the one lovely living thing in all our lives! Can't you understand?"

"I do understand," Tony said. "And I think," she added almost timidly, "I think you admire Caroline more than you think you do, Larry. It seems to me, now, since you are married—since you did marry so—so soon—"

"So soon after Ruth's death. Yes, we both feel that; we both feel that for that very reason we have no right to separate," he conceded, as she hesitated. "But it was one of those marriages that could only have taken place in exactly that way. If we had waited a year, if we had waited until even three or four months after Ruth's death, it never would have happened."

Tony dipped her littlest fingertip into the salad dressing, tasted it, narrowed her eyes.

hands went on steadily slicing the firm pink ham; she lifted each slice on her knife and laid it evenly on the blue dolphin platter.

"How well do you like him, Tony?"

"Oh, tremendously!"

"And are you going to marry him?" Larry asked.

Her eyes clouded, and she gave him a dubious look, slowly shaking her head. "No," she said.

"Then may I say something to you, Tony?—because I have an opportunity now and may not have another. May I say that I'm terribly—terribly sorry?"

"I know what you mean," Tony said, her bright eyes fixed steadily on his, the color coming up quickly under her clear brown skin.

"Of course you know what I mean. Of course you know, and I know, what we meant to each other. I had been ill, I was badly shaken by Ruth's death, Caroline was right there—"

Larry said. And as her eyes narrowed uncomfortably and she made a gesture of restraint he went on, "My dear Tony, this is no disloyalty. Caroline and I hadn't been married six weeks, hadn't been married six days before we both knew that it was a mistake. We'd been drawn into it—lulled into it; you know what the circumstances were. There in that little place, with Ruth's mother dying, nurses there, the doctor coming every day, we lived as much alone as if we'd been on an island. I thought—she'd told me that she cared for Phil Polhemus; we'd seen him out in China. I never thought of myself at all—"

"And then only a few days after Ruth's death she told me—told me that I had been the one always—even in the early days of Ruth's first knowing me, when Caroline was a child. She said we would go to Paris, entertain, she said that that was why she had refused Phil."

"I rather thought that it was something like that," Tony said, in the pause.

The man followed her, a little awkwardly, to the table, and sat down facing her across its end. Tony had a soup plate before her; she began the concoction of a salad dressing, pouring oil, measuring vinegar, occasionally tasting the mixture on the tip of her finger.

"Tony," Larry said, "if I had come straight back, after Ruth's death, would you have been waiting for me?"

"You know I would," Tony answered, with a full, steady look.

"I failed you," Larry muttered, looking away. "Caroline's interest in clothes—men—"

"Oh, yes! Did Caroline get her chinchilla coat?" Tony asked cheerfully, ending it. The man looked up in surprise.

"How do you mean?"

"Caroline used to say that if ever she married again the first thing she'd make her husband buy her would be a chinchilla coat!"

"Our marriage was a mistake—we both see it now," Larry said, paying no attention. It's all like a dream—a bad dream."

a table drawer for her longest knife. "All I'm doing is to reheat the enchiladas and cut the ham, and—let's see, heat up biscuits, and open plum jam, and make a salad."

Larry was not listening, and she knew he was not. He said in a low tone, "Tony, how are you?"

"Perfect!" she told him, smiling.

"No, but I mean—how are you?"

The little intimate significance did not escape her, but there was no hint of fluctuation in her steady wide-open blue eyes.

"Happy!" she told him, with a nervous shred of laughter.

"I'm glad," he said in a low tone, with his narrowed gaze keenly fixed on her. "Do you realize that it is more than two years since we have seen each other?"

"Two and a half, almost," Tony agreed. "It was spring."

"You know I was very ill?"

"Joe told me. Caroline wrote him, you know. And when I would come down week-ends, he'd tell me."

"You and he have become great friends, haven't you?"

"Joe and I? There's nobody like him," Tony said, smiling. Her brown

"But you are not always unhappy, Larry?"

"Not always. At base there's something that holds us together. Only she's quarrelsome, Tony, and jealous."

"I see the jealousy."

"She's intensely jealous of you," the man said.

"Of me? It seems to me the shoe ought to be on the other foot."

"But she knows, of course, how I felt—how I feel for you."

"I wonder how Caroline would have felt if all Ruth's money hadn't been involved?" Tony asked idly.

"It wasn't all Ruth's money," Larry reminded her quickly. "She wrote Joe of the legacies."

"And Joe got a splendid slice, and Joe's the one that ought to have it, too," Tony said. "He helps so many people. There's no end to Joe's goodness!"

"And yet you can't love him? Tony, Tony, Tony, how blind I've been! It's suddenly to wake up, to come back to our old point of view. We said then, 'We must make a go of this, we've drawn the attention of all our world to our marriage, we can't confess failure!' But from that moment to this we've never thought alike, we have nothing in common, we are only making each other miserable!"

Tony looked at him speculatively.

"I noticed the gray hair, Larry."

"That began when I was ill. Oh, Tony, if I could only go back the last eight months and have it all to live over again! It was so simple—so easy, just to bring Ruth's mother home and to come out here to you! But it seemed to be a time when I had to plunge madly ahead—dizzy with freedom, perhaps, feeling that now I could do anything, travel, buy a country place, have horses, do all the things that of late years hadn't interested her—"

"And within a few weeks Caroline and I were somehow engaged, and even then I wasn't taking it all seriously; even then I didn't realize that she was in earnest. We had said at first that of course we would wait the whole year—then she began to—well, and I did, too. I'm not blaming anyone but myself. We were there at the villa, with everything to settle, discuss, decide, and since we were going to be married some day, why not at once, and quietly, and not tell anyone for six or eight months?"

"Larry," Tony said seriously, "you don't have to tell me. Nobody knows better than I how easily one can do a thing in one mood and wonder about it in another."

It was the first touch of anything like sympathy, like tenderness she had shown him, and he grasped at it eagerly.

"Tony, only promise me this: that whatever the complications of the next year are, whatever Caroline and I decide to do, you'll be my friend. I may have your friendship, mayn't I, Tony? You and I may see each other, and talk things over, and go back to the old days when we used to go to lunch at one and talk until half-past three?"

"I don't like to remember those days!" Tony said, smiling. And in the silence Joe put his head in at the door and asked, "Do we eat in here?" and her talk with Larry was over. The door between the living room and the kitchen was opened, and Caroline and Joe began to set a table in by the fire. Larry took the big leather chair and sat there staring at the flames, and occasionally putting a word into the desultory talk.

"What'll you do with this place, Joe, if you go to Rio?" he asked.

"Leave it just as it is. Turn the key in the door."

"What about the dog?"

"Oh, he goes!" Tony said quickly.

"Any more talk of your going to New York, Tony?" Caroline asked.

"Not now, no."

"I got my coat there," Caroline said. "The divinest chinchilla you ever saw. I'll show it to you tomorrow."

Tony did not look at Larry.

"I remember you wanted one."

"Ready, Joe," Tony said. The salad was green and crisp in its bowl; the enchiladas smoking hot. Joe brought a great stack of brown toast to the table. "Does anyone want coffee now? Nobody wants coffee until later, Joe," Tony said.

"Are you going to town tonight, Tony?"

"No. Not tonight."

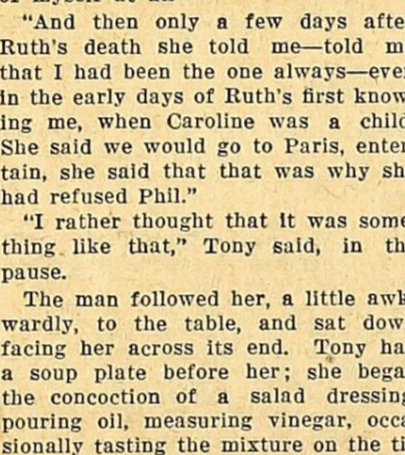

"Staying with Brenda?"

"No." Tony, her face suddenly paling, but her eyes like sparkling blue stars, burst into joyous laughter and caught Joe around the neck as she passed his chair at the table. "Oh, Joe, darling, we'll have to tell them!" she said.

Larry shoved his chair back a little, facing them with a faintly knitted brow. Caroline's face was a study in hurt incredulity.

"You two are engaged," she said quickly, as one not to be surprised.

"And Yet You Can't Love Him."

slckening," Larry said, with a rueful smile, "to have had—to have had all the difficulties in one's life that I had to meet, and to have felt, as I did feel, that if I ever were free I could make my own destiny so wonderful, so happy, and then to have had my chance and instantly thrown it away."

"Were you terribly young when you married Ruth, Larry?"

"Twenty-one."

"A boy."

"That was all."

"And did you love her?"

"I admired her tremendously. She was a great horse-woman, you know, and she had a splendid stable. I remember thinking her glorious, galloping along those lanes in autumn, and telling her men in the stables what to do with this fine horse and that. Yes," he said, with the thoughtful expression she liked best of all on his handsome face, "I always loved Ruth. Not—but then there are different ways of loving. I think she never had any misgivings, I think she was never anxious, until you came along, and everything got out of hand."

"That's the thing I find it hard to forgive myself."

"One can't always help those things, Tony. We didn't—after all, we didn't—what shall I say?—betray her."

"Not in actual fact, no, I didn't," Tony said in a lighter tone, as she rose to carry her salad dressing to the icebox. "I didn't surrender. There were times—" She smiled at him over her shoulder.

"But we didn't," she said. "I remember praying about it, hanging on to my code until my fingernails were almost torn out. But I'm glad now—every woman is glad afterward when she remembers."

Coming back, she sat down at the table with idle hands, looking at him frankly.

"For that part—fire and flame and breathlessness and not eating your dinner and lying awake all night—that part isn't the important part, is it? It never has lasted, it never will."

"Couldn't it?" the man asked, a dark flush on his face, his voice low.

"No, for it isn't the right, the wise and true part," Tony answered. "And, for the rest, Larry, seriously, seriously, haven't you and Caroline a great deal in common? Haven't you two more in common than you and I ever could have had? You like dinners—chinchilla coats—"

"I despise dinners. I despise chinchilla coats!"

"If you two had a handsome apartment in San Francisco, entertained a good deal, were in on opera nights and polo meets—"

"What are you talking about?" the man asked almost roughly. "You're not—you're surely not trying to—trying to persuade me that Caroline and I are rightly married? I tell you it was one of those impulsive, stupid things that men and women only do when they've been lost their bearings, when they've been under a heavy strain. Kelly's single. In their turn at bat the locals came through to score two runs and take the game. Mark led off with a single, stole second and took third on W. Mallon's fly out to right. From third he scored on a passed ball. C. Libka was safe at second on a two-base error and then scored the winning run easily when Marv Mallon poled one into deep right.

With a total of 38 hits ringing out during the afternoon action was plentiful in the fray. Numerous arguments on various decisions helped to prolong the contest.

Johnson, Tawas centerfielder, made himself the hero of the game by collecting five hits and a base on balls in six trips to the plate on a perfect day at bat. His hits included four singles and a triple and all of them came with men on the base paths. Mark was a close second to Johnson. He connected safely five times in six attempts.

Next Sunday the local team will journey to Gladwin. Gladwin has thus far been in the thick of the fight and the Tawas boys expect a stiff battle.

plies only to the diversion of acreage to soil-conserving crops or uses from the general soil-depleting crops, such as corn, oats, wheat and barley.

The maximum acreage upon which farmers can receive Class I payments is 15 per cent of the general soil-depleting base acreage for the farm. These Class I payments are distinct from the Class II or soil-building payments which will be made to cooperating farmers who follow approved soil-building practices on their farms. Producers may qualify for one or both of these payments. The soil-building payment to each farmer is limited by his soil-building allowance which is the same number of dollars as there are acres of soil-conserving crops on his farm this year.

The Class I rate for an individual farm will be established by comparing the appraised yield of the farm's most important soil-depleting crop, which is oats in Isosco county, with the average yield of that crop for the entire county. In every case, Mr. Doan said, only the crop or crops were used which accurately indicate the productivity of the farm as compared with other farms in the county.

For example, our county average oat yield is 28.6 bushels per acre, and the appraised normal yield of oats upon a given farm is 35 bushels per acre. The productivity of the farm would be 35/28.6, which is the same as 122.38 per cent. The rate of the soil-conserving payment for this farm would be 122.38 per cent of $9.40 or $11.50 per acre.

If you are not familiar with this farm program get in touch with the community committee man who made out your farm work sheet or the county agricultural agent, Wilton L. Finley.

Notice

The second installment of returned delinquent taxes and special assessments of 1932 and prior years is due and payable at the office of Isosco County Treasurer or Auditor General on or before September 1, 1936, and if such taxes and special assessments are not paid they will be returned to the Auditor General's office and sold as delinquent taxes.

The amount of the first installment plus 4% is the amount of the second installment.

The first installment or any number of installments may be paid at any time.

Grace Miller, Treasurer.

Notice To Taxpayers

The tax rolls for the city of Tawas City are now in my hands for collection. I will be in the City Hall on Friday and Saturday afternoons of each week beginning July 10. I will be pleased to receive taxes at my residence at any other time.

the Community Building at East Tawas an exhibit which will only be shown at the ten largest state parks in Michigan, the Ionia fair and the Michigan State Fair. Specimens of wild life and furs, murals depicting various activities of the Conservation Department, and motion pictures will all be free for the public to view and marvel at.

Yachts from many points along Lake Huron are expected to participate in an active sailing program which will include the Point Lookout to Tawas Bay race, five races in which sailing craft will vie for the Regatta trophies, and two novelty races.

A Venetian Night parade in which every boat on the waters of Tawas Bay is expected to participate in will be staged Wednesday night of Regatta week. The event promises to be one of the most colorful of the entire eight day affair.

A pageant, given as the one event during the week commemorating Michigan's Centennial, is being written and rehearsals will soon begin, the cast being drawn from residents of the Tawasases.

Open house at the Silver Creek C. C. C. camp preceded by a tour of Huron National Forest conducted by forest officials has been arranged for the afternoon of Sunday, the ninth of August.

The committee in charge of the Regatta and Water Carnival, headed by Merrill Pollard, rear-commodore of the Tawas Bay Yacht Club, includes Chas. E. Moeller, Gerald Mallon, Marvin Mallon, Fred Wilson, Carl Babcock, Clarence McMullen, Deloise Durant, Milton Misener and Basil Quick. The work of preparing such an event has been divided as follows: Water carnival—Deloise Durant; social—Fred Wilson and Milton Misener; course—Gerald Mallon; trophy—Basil Quick; finance—Clarence McMullen and Chas.
