'Nobody's Fool,' Great Comedy Hit, At Rivola

Are you sad or happy? Grouchy or aglow with good humor? Lonesome or in the midst of life's gayest romance? Never mind, don't answer. No matter what your mood, you'll get a greater kick out of existence after you see Edward Everett Horton in "Nobody's Fool," the Universal cyclone of comedy which will be shown at the Rivola Theatre, Tawas City, on Thursday and Friday, August 20 and 21.

Here is a prescription for longer life and louder, funnier laughs. Get two big eye-fuls of "Nobody's Fool" and repeat the treatment until exhausted from laughing. It is the elixir of youth, bubbling right out of the fountain of joy. Just what the doctor ordered for spring fever, summer complaint, fallen arches and winter skating. All prescriptions filled with a smile at the Rivola box office. You shake well during and after taking this jiggling giggle compound.

Horton's assistant fun dispenser include Glenda Farrell, who is a howling comedy success all by herself; Cesar Romero adds a dash of swashbuckling humor; while Warren Hymer provides abdominal guffaws that will bend ribs and dislocate adam's apples painlessly.

If you want to hear the nation's latest wisecracks, to watch the funniest situations devised in Hollywood this year and have a riproaring time, see "Nobody's Fool." It's rapid-fire comedy and a double-barreled hit.

LOCALS BOW TO PRESCOTT SUNDAY; 6-2

Tawas Unable To Overcome Big Prescott Rally Staged In Opening Frame

Supplied with a comfortable margin by virtue of a five-run rally staged in the opening frame of last Sunday's game with Tawas, the Prescott team gained a 6-2 decision over the local club. Although outthit and outfielded by the Tawas squad, Prescott made the most of its bingles in converting them into enough runs to win the game. Defeat for the locals came as the result of their failure to hit with men on the bases, as a number of scoring opportunities slipped by without any runs materializing.

Tawas was first to score in the game, counting one run in the opening frame after two were out when W. Laidlaw singled, swiped second and reached home when E. Libka singled, but this lone tally was over before Prescott came through in his half to score five times. Brown apparently was not "warmed up" when he started on the mound for the locals and his opposing batsmen were quick to take advantage of this. Myers, first up, walked. E. Christie singled and McCarthy's scratch infield hit loaded the sacks. S. Panigay then caught one of Ferris' pitches for a triple, driving in three runs. B. Christie walked and B. Panigay was safe on an error to again fill the bases. After Turbok fanned, Mott attempted to squeeze in another run with a bunt and, with the help of the umpire, was successful. Brown fielded the bunt cleanly and threw to W. Laidlaw at the plate in plenty of time to force S. Panigay, but the umpire called the runner safe, claiming Walt was not on the plate. Laidlaw wondered whether he had to carve the runner's initials, the date and time in the plate before the ump would call him out.

Recess.

About thirty minutes passed and during this time the Prescott umpire was called numerous choice terms from vocabularies specially trained for occasions of this nature. But, as (Turn to No. 2, Back Page)

Forest Service Will Again Purchase Norway Pine Seed

In accordance with the practice that has prevailed during the past several years the United States Forest Service is again in the market for the purchase of Norway pine seed.

During the past several seasons many local residents have supplemented their income by cone collection during the late summer months. This year collection will be limited to Norway pine only since the Huron Forest has on hand a sufficient supply of seed of other species.

It is hoped that a supply of 400 bushels of seed bearing cones can be collected this year although preliminary reports have indicated a short crop of Norway pine cones this season. The Forest Service is offering a price of $1.25 per bushel of cones and will be glad to make arrangements with any person desiring to furnish cones.

The Forest Supervisor announced that any person interested in cone collection this season should get in touch with his office at East Tawas before August 25. Full details as to quotas for individuals collecting cones as well as information as to points at which cones will be accepted will be given to those persons making inquiry.

Big First Inning Allows Marshall Packers Nine To Defeat Hemlock, 7 to 5

Hemlock's fielders got off to a poor start in last Sunday's game with the Marshall Packers and as a result spotted the Bay City team with a six-run lead which they were unable to overcome during the contest. Two hits, three bases on balls and five errors were responsible for the rally. The battle, which took place at Tawasville, ended in favor of the Packers by a score of 7 to 5. A feature of the game was a triple play executed by Revette, Sullivan and Beffrey of the Bay City team.

Hemlock plays Tawas at the Tawas City athletic field next Sunday.

Suspension of Ten Unions Voted by Federation Council— Many Oil Men Indicted for Conspiracy— Metaxas Dictator of Greece.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

UNLESS John L. Lewis and his associates in the Committee for Industrial Organization repent and cease their "rebellious" activities before September 5, the ten unions they head will be under suspension from the American Federation of Labor. Such was the verdict of the executive council which passed on the charges of John P. Frey, president of the metal trades division, that the CIO was "fomenting insurrection and rebellion." David Dubinsky, head of the garment workers, cast the only vote against the suspension order.

Lewis having definitely set himself against any peace overtures, it appeared that the suspension certainly would be put into effect. The next move will be up to the Tampa convention in the fall, which will be asked to vote the expulsion of the refractory unions.

The ten unions accused by Mr. Frey and found guilty are: Amalgamated Clothing Workers, Sidney Hillman, president.

Oil Field, Gas Well, and Refinery Workers, Harvey Fremming, president.

Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, Thomas H. Brown, president.

Ladies' Garment Workers, David Dubinsky, president.

Textile Workers, Thomas F. McMahon, president.

Flat Glass Workers, Glen McCabe, president.

Iron, Steel, and Tin Workers, M. F. Tighe, president.

Automobile Workers, Homer Martin, president.

Rubber Workers, S. H. Dalrymple, president.

Action on the International Typographical union, whose president, C. P. Howard, is secretary of the CIO; and the United Hat, Cap and Millinery Workers, part of whom are not associated with the CIO, was deferred. The suspended unions have a membership of about one million, or nearly one-third of the total in the federation.

The council stated: "This is the first attempt ever made, during the existence of the A. F. of L., covering a period of more than 50 years, to set up a dual movement within.

"It was the opinion of the executive council that it could not condone the setting up of a rival organization within the officially recognized family of organized labor, or tolerate and countenance it without sacrificing its self-respect or making an unconditional surrender to a minority group composed of members who are in open rebellion to democratic procedure and majority rule, as exemplified at the late convention of the A. F. of L."

Lewis characterized the council's action as one of "incredible and crass stupidity" and said that it was "dictated by personal selfishness and frantic fear."

SIX passengers and two pilots were instantly killed when a big Lockheed Electra plane of the Chicago and Southern Airlines crashed a few minutes after taking off from the airport of St. Louis, Mo. At this writing there is no explanation for the disaster. The plane was almost new and the weather not bad though skies were overcast.

The plane was bound from New Orleans for Chicago, and five of the victims were residents of the latter city. One of the dead was Vernon Omie, a veteran pilot and husband of Phoebe Omie, a noted flyer.

CHARGED by the government with conspiracy to violate the anti-trust law by combining to dominate the purchasing of oil in the Texas, Louisiana and Oklahoma fields and to fix prices of gasoline in the Middle West, 58 persons, 23 petroleum concerns and three publishing companies were indicted by a federal grand jury in Madison, Wis. Among the prominent defendants are Edward G.

H. M. Dawes, president of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana; Henry M. Dawes of Evanston, Ill., president of the Pure Oil Company, and many officials of Standard Oil, Pure Oil, Deep Rock, Soco-Vacuum and various other oil concerns and their subsidiaries. Also in the list are Warren C. Platt of Cleveland, publisher of the National Petroleum News and Platt's Oilgram; his two publications and the Chicago Journal of Commerce.

The indictment charged that the defendant oil companies formed pools in the east Texas and mid-continent fields for the purpose of purchasing gasoline at artificially high prices from independent producers, and in furtherance of such a scheme were members of associations which included the independents. Further it was charged that independent refiners, to aid the plan, had curtailed their production of gasoline.

This, said Mr. Platt, is exactly what the oil companies did with the approval of Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, administrator of the NRA petroleum code, when efforts were being made to limit the production of gasoline, prevent the flow of excess quota oil into market channels, and raise prices in that turbulent industry.

"The government's charge turns on whether a practice legally started and carried on under the recent NRA petroleum code was continued in illegal manner after the NRA was killed by the United States Supreme court," Mr. Platt said.

EXPERT crop statisticians estimate that, as a result of the record breaking drought, this year's corn crop will be reduced to 1,572,000,000 bushels, which would be the smallest yield since 1881 except for the disastrous drought year of 1934. In that year total production was 1,478,000,000, but the acreage was smaller than it is this season.

Argentine farmers are expected to profit to the extent of $50,000,000 or more as a result of the keen competition for corn between the United States and Europe, which has recently lifted prices about 17 cents per bushel in the Buenos Aires market.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT was visibly aroused by Republican charges that the New Dealers were seeking to reap political profit from the drought conditions. At his press conference he broke with the usual rule by permitting himself to be directly quoted as saying:

"It is a great disservice to the proper administration of any government to link up human misery with partisan politics."

THERE is another dictatorship in Europe, this time in Greece. Gen. John Metaxas, premier, announced that a general strike fostered by communists was likely to lead to serious disturbances, so, with the approval of King George II, he declared martial law, dissolved parliament, postponed elections indefinitely and mobilized all workers in essential services such as railways, in order that, called to the colors, they would be directly under government control.

Strong guards were mounted at power stations, gas works and other vital points and all soldiers and police not on guard duty were held in barracks ready for action.

Metaxas promised the enforcement of an eight hour day, a minimum wage and a social insurance system. He remodeled the cabinet, taking for himself the army, navy, air and foreign affairs portfolios. Dispatches to Bucharest said there had been clashes in the northern provinces of Greece between workers and the military forces.

DESPERATE fighting for possession of the passes in the Guadarrama mountains north of Madrid was going on between the government forces and the rebel troops. Loyalist soldiers were hurried to that region, and Madrid claimed some victories. However, the Fascists on the northern side of the range were said to be within sight of the capital and in position for a vigorous advance.

The rebels scored in the south by landing 2,000 Moroccan troops from Ceuta after a lively sea and air fight in which two loyalist warships were driven off. The loyalists were also reported to have met defeat near Avila, losing 600 men and some tanks and trucks.

On the twentieth day of the rebellion the government announced it had captured the provinces of Catalonia, Valencia, Murcia, Malaga, Ciudad Real, Guadalajara, Badajoz and the northern resort city of San Sebastian.

Fascist Italy has been accused of aiding the Spanish rebels, and it is asserted a number of Italian bombing planes were sent to them in Morocco. The leftist French government naturally is in sympathy with the Madrid government and Frenchmen, unarmed, have been given permission to cross the border to aid in putting down the rebellion. German and Russian sympathies, also, are ranged on opposite sides, and all this caused fears that a general war might result. France called on all other nations to preserve neutrality, and Spain warned Italy and Germany to keep hands off.

Gen. Metaxas

SENATOR HENRY W. KEYES of New Hampshire has announced that he is not a candidate for reelection by the Republicans, preferring "to retire from active participation in public affairs." The Republicans therefore will choose between former Senator George H. Moses and Gov. H. Styles Bridges, both of whom have announced their candidacy for the nomination.

Kansas Republicans renominated Senator Arthur Capper, and the Democrats picked Omar Ketchum of Topeka. In Kentucky the Democrats renominated Senator M. M. Logan, whose Republican opponent in November will be Robert H. Lucas.

Marion A. Zioncheck, the eccentric congressman from Seattle, re-considered his decision to retire and announced that, at the request of his mother, he would be a candidate to succeed himself, "to show the people that I am neither crazy nor foolish."

IN THE first few days of the Olympic games in Berlin the American track team piled up such an imposing number of points that it appeared certain none of the rival teams could catch up. Jesse Owens of Ohio State University lead his mates in this victorious march, winning three championships, in the 100-meter and 200-meter runs and the broad jump. In the longer dash he lowered the world and Olympic marks. Ken Carpenter of California won the discus throw with a new Olympic record of 50.48 meters, and Gordon Dunn, also of California, was second. Earl Meadows of Texas was first in the pole vault with a new Olympic mark; and points were won by various other American athletes.

Among the women contestants Helen Stephens of Missouri distinguished herself by breaking the world record in two heats of the 100-meter dash.

NEW YORK Republicans are to nominate a candidate for governor at their party convention in September, and Col. Theodore Roosevelt has said in a letter that he is willing to accept that honor if the party so desires.

Colonel Roosevelt, now forty-eight years old, was the Republican candidate for governor in 1924 and was defeated by Alfred E. Smith. Since then he has been governor of Puerto Rico and governor-general of the Philippines.

Col. Roosevelt

A VOLUNTARY cut of $25,861,936 in the debts of 33,906 "distressed" farmers was reported by the Resettlement administration. The debts, it said, were scaled down by creditors, through the work of voluntary farm debt committees in bringing farmers and their creditors "together in a neutral atmosphere" during the ten months ended June 30.

Expenses of seeking debt readjustments, taken from a fund provided by President Roosevelt Sept. 1 last year, amounted to 1 per cent of the total amount of debts involved, the administration said. So far, $1,100,000 of the allocated $2,000,000 had been expended.

DECLARING that it "will indorse no candidate" of party in the Presidential campaign, the American Liberty league states:

"The league is neither an adjunct nor an ally of the Republican party. It is not an adjunct of the Democratic party, even though many of its principles harmonize with the excellent platform adopted by that party in 1932 and proclaimed as 'a covenant with the people to be faithfully kept.'"

"Certainly the league is not an adjunct of the New Deal party which for the moment has usurped control of the party of Jefferson, Jackson, Cleveland, and Wilson. It has not and will not contribute to any campaign fund."

WHILE the nations of Europe were worrying over the Spanish rebellion and the danger that it might bring about open rupture among the Fascist and anti-Fascist governments of the continent, steps were taken to assure peace. Germany and Italy accepted the invitation of Great Britain, France and Belgium to participate in a conference this fall from which it is hoped another and better Locarno pact will emerge.

No date for the conference has been set, but it was expected to be held either just before or soon after the meeting of the league of nations assembly in Geneva in September.

PEDRO ALBIZU CAMPOS, leader of the Puerto Rico Nationalist party, and seven of his associates were found guilty at San Juan of a conspiracy to overthrow the United States government in the island by force and were sentenced by Federal Judge R. A. Cooper to prison terms ranging from two to six years. In the first trial of these men the jury had disagreed.

The case originated in a clash between Nationalists and police last October in which several persons were slain. Following this, Col. E. Francis Riggs, chief of insular police, was murdered, presumably in revenge for the killing of Nationalists in the October fight.

Washington.—The United States is being given an object lesson in what happens when government attempts to interfere with nature.

The People Must Pay
American farmers these days are threshing their wheat crop. The production is that of a reduced acreage, an acreage that was planned on theory by the Department of Agriculture. The result is that this year's American wheat crop will approximate 640,000,000 bushels. That is about 145,000,000 bushels less than the average crop during the five years from 1929 to 1933. The result is a shortage.

Department of Agriculture figures indicate that the total wheat crop in the world this year will be something like 650,000,000 bushels below the annual production. In other words, the wheat crop is short everywhere on earth and the result is obvious.

In our own case, there is normally a carry-over each year of about 125,000,000 bushels but due to the shortage of the crop this year that carry-over is insufficient to make up the needs of domestic consumption.

Consequently, we soon will see heavy importations of Canadian wheat, a wheat that can be blended in milling with our own production and a very satisfactory flour results. Yet, it must be remembered that on all importations of wheat from Canada or anywhere else, a tariff of 42 cents a bushel must be paid. It is clear, therefore, that consumers of bread must pay that tariff because the importers are going to pass that item of expense along as part of the cost of the flour. In addition to the shortage in the United States, Canadian wheat production is reported to be something like 100,000,000 bushels under normal. There is sufficient production in Canada to permit of export, of course, but the shortage is bound to be reflected in the prices.

And mention of the price brings us back to the individual effect of the combination of acreage, reduced by government edict, plus the act of nature in visiting a drought upon us. Scarcity always results in higher prices. It is the operation of the law of supply and demand. The Roosevelt farm policy has been predicated on the theory that scarcity would produce higher prices and thereby add to the farm income. But drought and other production hazards cannot be predicted and, therefore, the American people find themselves in a position where the unpredictable has happened and the farmers are not getting the benefit of higher prices on a natural and normal production.

There seems to be a stronger demand for wheat now than at any time during the last five or six years. It indicates a restoration of buying power on the part of the masses. In other words, industry again is opening up to some extent and employing workers although the increase in employment has been small thus far.

Industry Opens Up
In consequence of this combination of circumstances, there is now a seller's market in wheat instead of a buyer's market in wheat. To say it another way, there are more people seeking to buy wheat than there are seeking to sell it and the consumers of flour will pay the bill. By way of contrast with present conditions, it may be pointed out that world wheat production in every year except one since 1929. In the 1932 crop year there was slightly more wheat produced in the world than was consumed. The result of the steady growth in consumption over production in the last few years has been to wipe out all of the carry-over—wheat stored in bins and elevators throughout the world—and in every country users of wheat are scraping the bottoms of their bins. The tragedy of it all is that, because of the reduced acreage and the drought in the United States, American farmers are not in a position to take advantage of the higher prices thus established by the sale of surplus wheat which may have been accumulated if the acreage had been normal.

Instead of the United States really controlling the market for wheat, we are in a position where a good many other countries may be encouraged to grow more wheat. The natural and obvious results of this will be to further curtail the outlet for American wheat which so long has been relied on by many foreign nations that are non-producers of wheat.

I do not know how far the New Deal intends to go in revising its basic economic policy regarding crop controlling. I can be sure of only one thing in regard to the New Deal plans: The visitation of the drought in two years in which the political planners of the New Deal attempted to upset natural laws has proved the inability of man to alter the course of nature and by the same token these conditions have proved the inability of government to change human nature. I do not know whether others will agree with my conclusion or not but I am of the opinion that the American farmers are paying dearly for the crop control checks they received in the past two years. Even with a crop shortened by drought, if there had been the normal acreage of wheat, American farmers would have reaped the reward to which they are so justly entitled.

A year or two ago, a committee of the American Bar association made a report defining critical of the New Deal administration for having created so many agencies to which had been given functions almost like the courts. That report pointed out how such units as the now dead NRA and the equally dead AAA could issue rules and regulations that were enforceable as law. They called attention to the further fact that countless of these rules and regulations carried strict and severe penalties, even to the extent of a jail term for an individual violator.

Lately, another committee of the American Bar association has published another report, again calling attention to the un-American principles established in such bureaucratic control. It offers a constructive proposal for the elimination of bureaucratic management of individual affairs from Washington. It proposes the establishment of an administration court which would have power to enforce these rules and regulations but would be equipped with the judicial right of determination so that the thousands upon thousands of regulations with their various penalties would not be enforced upon an individual accused of their violation without giving that alleged violator the right of a hearing. The committee proposal, in other words, would put an end to determination of violations by one bureaucrat.

Ultimately, the proposed court would take over the judicial work of all of the administrative agencies in Washington now numbering something like 75. The initial operation of the court would be limited until it could bring something like uniformity out of the chaos now existing for it is well known that in many cases two governmental agencies will have rules on the same point and those rules will not be the same. In some aggravated situations, it has been found that one agency will prescribe a penalty against an individual business for doing one thing while another agency will have no penalty for the same act. Another instance is known where two agencies have virtually the same regulations but the penalties in the two rules are different.

I suppose the condition can be explained by the fact that dozens of new bureaus have been set up under the scores of New Deal laws and that in the haste to get them into operation, no co-ordination was had between the various groups, but it is my belief that private citizens cannot be blamed for this condition. Since they cannot be blamed for failure of government to function properly, they ought not be compelled to answer for the silly differences in law which bureaucrats have written under authority of congress to draft necessary regulations.

After all, congress is really to blame for this condition. It rushed through laws which President Roosevelt demanded and it did not take time to debate the provisions nor did it examine the sections to know fully what results would flow from them. In many cases, too many, statements of general legislative policy were not clear and congress abdicated its duties to the extent that it wrote into those laws provisions saying that the agency which was to enforce the particular law was given authority to write whatever rules and regulations were found to be necessary. Some authority of this kind always has been given in order to make the national laws flexible but they never have been given to such an extent as they have in the last three years.

Insufficient time has elapsed since the American Bar association committee came forth with its administrative court proposal for an analysis to be made of its potentialities. It may, and probably does, have weaknesses. It does, however, have a strong point in the general idea that a judicial body should determine whether an individual citizen has violated a bureaucrat's law and what the penalty should be rather than have that bureaucrat sit as prosecutor, judge and jury in telling the individual citizen what his crime has been.

Fashion Back to Femininity Trend

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

MANN I S H L Y tailored to the brink of perfection during the practical hours and for sports? Decidedly so, if you would be smartly in fashion. However, it is an entirely different story which the mode is telling "what to wear" at festive midsummer events that take place amidst glamorous settings. Comes then into the style scene as lacy and lovely and sheer costumes—beautiful as ere graced a fashion picture.

The lavish use of nets, laces, organzas, marquisettes, tulle and similar materials of filmy texture and transparency quite exceeds anything of its kind seen for many a year. In the daytime they are tailored and for the night hours and for garden party wear these entrancing sheers are made up as pretty-pretty as genius and imagination can possibly create them.

The trio of dainty costumes in the picture most eloquently carries the message of lovely ladies clad in beguilingly feminine array such as is gracing the midsummer landscape with romance and the picturesque. The first impression one gets from this group, aside from the beauty of the sheer materials, is that of big hats, cunning puff sleeves and hemlines that are generously and gracefully wide. Since first impressions usually ring true, we learn important facts in regard to the correct silhouette for 1936 midsummer garden party and dance frocks.

The winsome dress pictured to the left is of a very fine crossbar net. Style points to note are the fancifully picketed hemline with like-pointed ruffings on the voluminous puffed sleeves, the flower ruche about the throat, also the huge-brimmed hat that is made of the selfsame net (stiffly starched) as the gown. Here also we see the return of the parasol.

"PAX" SILK PRINTS

Prints continue to hold sway in the world of fashion. The lure of them is stronger than ever. Shown in the picture is one of the very interesting and unique "pax" (pax being the Latin word for peace) silk prints designed by a member of the board of directors of the international league for peace. These really handsome silk prints are available to women who are interested in adopting the peace-in-fashions movement. The dress pictured is of a blue and white silk sheer with the word pax so skillfully used as a motif it becomes a part of the patterning. The wide white-bordered cape-bertha is pleated and shirred in accord with the latest styling trend.

Memorial to Crusoe

The government of Chile has decided to make a national park of Robinson Crusoe's island in the Pacific, Juan Fernandez.

The cave where lived Alexander Selkirk, the original of Robinson Crusoe, the lookout from which he watched for passing ships, and his other associations will now be in the care of keepers, and guides will be available for visitors to the island.

Alexander Selkirk, the son of a Scots shoemaker, ran away to sea and rose to be sailing master in one of Captain Dampier's privateers in the South Seas. In September, 1704, he quarreled with his captain and had himself landed with his effects on the uninhabited island of Juan Fernandez. He lived there till January, 1709, when Captain Wodes Rogers took him on board.

Captain Rogers told his story in a book three years later, and it was mostly from this account that Defoe built up his immortal story for boys.

MILES CALLAGHAN SEEKS PROMOTION

Editorial in State Digest a Strong Endorsement For Miles Callaghan For State Senator

The State Digest, a weekly newspaper, a critic of state government printed in Lansing, has the following to say about Miles M. Callaghan, candidate for Senator in this, the 28th district:

"Rep. Miles M. Callaghan of Reed City, for eight years a member of the House of Representatives, has announced his candidacy for senator in the 28th senatorial district. Ten counties comprise that district. Miles will campaign for the new seat as he has worked for the one he is leaving—earnestly, actively, consistently.

"One of the outstanding leaders in the House is the reputation the Reed City solon has carved for himself during his eight years' service in Lansing. He has acquired an intimate knowledge of state affairs and state departments. He has served on the most important committees in the lower branch. His background, therefore, fits him splendidly for the promotion he seeks.

"The wide range of territory covered by the 28th senatorial district presents problems that a man like Callaghan should be able to handle with marked success for his constituents. Wide interests and diversified interests must be dealt with in the fields of agriculture, commercial fishing, manufacturing, conservation, resort interests, highways, public welfare. Miles Callaghan, not being the type of public servant who likes to sit in a chair and watch the flies on the ceiling, is admirably qualified through experience, knowledge and most important of all, perhaps, contacts among the high and mighty here in Lansing whose confidence and respect Callaghan long ago won and held.

"No pussyfooters is Mr. Callaghan. No vote ducker. He has stood upon the legislative floor and fought his losing battles with the same sincerity and zeal he exhibits in a winning fight. He has made some mistakes, of course, but in Lansing he is recognized as one of the top-notchers in law making, a gentleman of his word, who expects—and gets—from the higher ups the things to which his district is entitled. The 28th district presents opportunities for a full time job. Miles has the steam to put into it. His talents and his ability should not be wasted." Political Advertisement.

Now you can have a telephone installed AT NEW LOW COST!

With the recent reductions in installation charges, it now costs considerably less than formerly to have a telephone installed in your home. In times of emergency, a telephone enables you to summon doctor, firemen, police or other aid instantly. It helps the housewife by running errands in disagreeable weather. It brings friends within easy reach, and enables them to include you in their good times. Drastic reductions also have been made in the charges for installing an extension telephone. An extension located in the bedroom, kitchen, den or laundry saves stair-climbing and extra steps; extends telephone protection and convenience to all parts of the house; and costs less than three cents a day. Call or visit the Telephone Business Office for an explanation of the new reduced charges. You will not be obligated in any way.

Settlers Introduced the Bee

The bee was actually unknown in this country until introduced by the settlers. One writer records that the Indians had no name for it and called it the Englishman's fly. Yet the invention of bee line to mean a straight line is purely American, although it has become familiar in England.

Ripples From Guiley Creek

Fishermen who failed to toss their flies to the tree-tops along the Augres the past week missed some good fishing, or at least better than any time since the hot weather of a few weeks ago.

With the regatta at Tawas and other celebrations throughout the state, there have been comparatively few fishermen on the streams lately.

Mr. and Mrs. Hudson of Detroit, with Mr. and Mrs. Myers of Indiana, called here Sunday.

Don Compere and Frank Robinson of Saginaw, with a friend, spent the week end at their trailer-house here. Don had a good catch on the Augres Sunday.

"Mac" McKinley and Earl Kleckner of Detroit packed up the Leary camp at Sand Lake Sunday. Mrs. Earl Kleckner and her sister, Miss Kate Baird, returned to Detroit with "Mac" McKinley, while Mr. Kleckner returned to Alpena, where he is employed. A large group of the family, including Mr. and Mrs. Carol Leary, Mr. Leary's two daughters, Dorothy and Marion, Mrs. Leary's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Baird, and her three sisters, Mrs. Earl Kleckner and the Misses Baird, have spent most of the summer at their camp at Cowan's on the north side of the lake. They have enjoyed their stay here very much, and it is to be hoped that they will return next year.

By HARLAN HATCHER

SYNOPSIS

In 1785 Saul Pattern of Virginia came into the beautiful virgin country of the Big Sandy valley in Kentucky. Chief of the perils were the Shawnees, who sought to hold their lands from the ever-encroaching whites. From a huge pinnacle Saul gazed upon the fat bottom and the endless acres of forest in its primeval quietude at the mouth of the Wolfpen, and felt an eagerness to possess it, declaring it a place fit for a man to LIVE in! Five years later he returned with Barton, his fifteen-year-old son, and built a rude cabin. In Saul's absence the Indians attacked Barton and wounded him so badly Saul was forced to return with him to Virginia. In 1796, when it was reasonably safe, Saul returned with his family and his son, and built a more comfortable cabin. He added to the cabin, planted crops and fattened his stock on the rich meadows. Soon other settlers arrived. A century later, in the spring of 1885, we find Cynthia Pattern, of the fifth generation following Saul, perched on the pinnacle from which her great-great-grandfather had first viewed Wolfpen Bottoms. The valleys heretofore untouched by the waves of change sweeping the Republic, are at last beginning to feel that restless surge. Her lad, Sparrel, and her brothers, Jesse, Jasper and Abral, convert the old water-wheeled mill to steam power. Cynthia feels that something out of the past is being buried with Saul. Cynthia is a pretty and imaginative miss in her late teens, who often re-created Saul and her other forebears, and fancied them still living. Sparrel proudly brings home the first meal out of the steam mill and Julia, his wife, is pleased. Generation after generation has added comforts and conveniences to Saul's homestead, and Sparrel has not minded. The family goes easily into the work of the new season, due to the simplicity of life designed long ago on the Wolfpen. Joy is abundant. Jesse plans to study law.

CHAPTER IV—Continued

"When is she due in Pikeville?" Shellenberger asked.

"Sometime tomorrow, if she's lucky. Pretty fast going, Catletsburg to Pikeville in two days. That's traveling."

There was a score of passengers on the Fanny Freeze, all men save one, a ravel-tired woman who sat with her baby on a chair on the upper deck mindless of the smoke. Some of the men idled about the narrow passageway, or leaned against the railing watching the families digging in the fields. Several gathered among the heap of freight on the lower fore-deck. Shellenberger found Barnes sitting on a barrel of flour in the sunshine.

"Cinders ain't so apt to get in a man's eyes up front here," Barnes said. "Yes, it's much better up here," Shellenberger answered.

Shellenberger regarded Barnes, trying to take in all his dimensions. He was a large man in a dusty brown suit, the pants tight-fitting, hugging his knees, and squeezing down into a pair of straight black boots with brown ears to pull them on by. His sandy hair lared out from under a high crowned black hat and joined a flowing red beard which swept down from his ears to the fifth button on his vest.

Shellenberger filled his pipe leisurely. He could hear a young mountaineer describing his adventures on his first journey out of the hills.

"... I just give up that Catletsburg was sure all a-fire and a-burnin' down the way everything was a-blazin' up like a brush heap in a clearin', and yelled out to Taz, he was back at the tiller, Taz was, I says, 'Let's take the tip, Taz, this daz-burned town's a-burnin' up!' And Taz he made a sight of fun outen a devilin' man on account I'd slept clean a-past Catletsburg and here we was already a-runnin' in to Ashland where they got all them furnaces and things."

The laughter was frayed by the wind and carried back into the swirling smoke.

"I suppose you've been down to Ashland or somewhere?" Shellenberger inquired.

"I rode the Greenup County circuit, and I'm going up to Pikeville to ride that circuit now."

"You are well acquainted with the upper Big Sandy then, I imagine?"

"I ought to be, brother. I've rid a sight of country in these parts in my day. I've rid about every single creek and hollow."

Shellenberger spread out a map of the Big Sandy region.

"There's Catletsburg at the mouth of the river. There's Louisa. And there's Richardson where we took the boat. That's Paintsville, there's the mouth of Gannon creek. . . ."

"That's the mouth of Gannon we're just now passing," Barnes said, pointing to his left over a salt barrel.

"A man could float a good-sized raft down that stream. Is it that wide very far up?" Shellenberger asked.

"It's fifty to a hundred feet wide for a right smart piece up. I've rid the full length of it head to mouth many's the time."

"I understand there are some large tracts up in there, still held by the old original settlers. Is that right?"

"That sure is right," Barnes said. "You couldn't find a finer lot of folks anywhere than along that creek. Some's been living there high on to a hundred years or so, wouldn't surprise me."

"Where'd you say we're at now?"

"Right there. See? There's Gannon Fork running off there to the south."

Here we are rounding that bend. There is Paintsville, Prestonsburg, there is Beaver creek going off to the southwest, and there's Pikeville, then the Breaks and the Virginia line."

"So you are well acquainted along that valley?" Shellenberger repeated. "About where is the Pattern property?"

"Well, now, let's see. The Harts would be about there, and, well, the Patterns would be just about there, near or far, I judge."

"It is a large tract, isn't it?"

"He's got a sight of land, I don't reckon he knows how much he has got. Clever man though, Sparrel Pattern is. He's got books and a deal of learning. He does doctoring. And his woman, there ain't a taker woman on the creek than Julie Pattern."

While Cynthia and Jesse planted the last of the sweet-potato sprouts in House Field, the Fanny Freeze landed on the sharp bend at Prestonsburg and was tied up for the night to a big sycamore that shone yellow in the dusk. Toward noon of the next day, Shellenberger walked briskly down the gangplank at Pattern Landing. Barnes watched him go, saw him greet Nelson, Sparrel's grandson, and got up the bank by the wide path that lost itself in the willows.

Cynthia stood by the door to the kitchen in the evening listening for an instant to the quiet flutter of the live things on Wolfpen about to receive the dark.

"The days in the garden with the sun on your back are good days. They ought to go on and on forever. The evening always comes so fast when you've got things to set out. Then your body feels so good after work, just standing a minute before supper while another day goes out. A body can see the dark come in the same way you see the big hand of the clock move; you look away for the space of a little thought, and then when you look back again it has moved, or grown darker."

Jesse was coming in from Barn Hollow. He stopped at the beehives by the garden fence to straighten a rock under a corner of one of the boxes. Jasper and Abral came up from the barn.

"How's the lambing?" Jesse asked. He poured out water in the pan on the wash rock.

"Thirty-eight lambs now, fourteen pair twins," Abral said.

Jesse laughed at the way he said it. "There's Bible for it."

"That one young ewe is in some trouble," Jasper said.

"I feared that," Sparrel said.

Cynthia felt a surge of pity for the poor ewe which was imperfectly equipped to bear the lamb she had conceived, and was now ruthlessly trapped in a snare whose purpose Cynthia could not fathom. There was a faint noise in the orchard path behind the house. Sparrel got up. The boys listened. Cynthia paused in the doorway. Julia came from the kitchen.

"It must be Nelson," Jesse said.

Two men on muleback came from the path into the yard. Cynthia saw that it was Nelson and a stranger. She concentrated on the stranger whose features were obscure in the last of the daylight.

Sparrel welcomed the visitors from where he stood.

"Howdy," he said in his deep voice.

"Howdy, folks," Nelson said, still holding to the bridle of the mules. "I brought this feller over from the landin'. He says he wants to see you, Grandpap."

"You're welcome," Sparrel said.

"Come in."

"Thank you, Mr. Pattern. My name is Shellenberger."

They shook hands.

"These are my sons, Jasper, Jesse and Abral."

"Howdy," the boys said, and shook hands one after the other.

"My wife and daughter."

Shellenberger removed his hat and bowed.

Cynthia was taken by his bearing.

"He's good-mannered; he says 'Miss Pattern' and that sounds funny; nobody ever said that to me before."

"You are just in time for supper," Julia said politely.

"It does smell like it, and it smells good," Shellenberger said.

From the end of the big table, Sparrel asked for the blessing of God upon the food before them. Shellenberger was making some rapid adjustments between what he had vaguely expected and what he actually saw. The log cabin of popular talk, filled with thin children and hounds holding soul and body together inadequately with corn bread and greasy bacon, had represented for him the four thousand square miles of the Kentucky mountains, and left him unprepared for Wolfpen Bottoms, with his big house, these people, and this table full of hickory flavored ham, candied sweet potatoes, mashed Irish potatoes, fluffy hot wheat biscuits, sweet yellow butter, and black honey tasting of clover blossoms and wild-flowers.

"This is an unusual section of country up here, Mr. Pattern," Shellenberger observed.

"There's not a finer place of country anywhere than right around here," Sparrel said.

The silences at the table were natural and unstrained, broken occasionally by Shellenberger's remarks and Sparrel's replies. Cynthia wondered what Jesse was thinking about this man who had so unexpectedly appeared at their supper table. How he changes the evening and the room! A minute ago it was just like it always is. Now it's— His hair has a bald spot and a cow-lick in it, and there is a funny ridge right above his eyes in his eyebrows and across between his eyes, and his nose is stumpy, and his eyes are deep in. He talks nice, but I don't believe I like him much.

Abral seemed to be interested in him. "Whereabouts do you come from?" Abral suddenly asked.

"Well, I suppose I come from a great many places," Shellenberger answered. "I move around wherever my business takes me. I've just come from Pittsburgh to Catletsburg on a boat and from there to Richardson on a train, and from there to your father's landing on a Sandy River boat."

"Pittsburgh is a long way off from here, ain't it? How long does it take to come from there?"

"Most of three days."

"Why did you want to come way up here to Wolfpen?"

Shellenberger laughed, and Sparrel smiled at Abral's serious and insistent questions.

"You mustn't pry into other people's affairs so, Abral," Julia said.

"Not at all," Shellenberger said. "I wanted to see this fine country up in here, and see if we couldn't do some business with each other, your father and I."

They left the subject there during the rest of the meal. The men got up. The evening was balmy and they sat on the long banistered porch, looking down Wolfpen toward the black mass of Cranesnest Mountain.

"You have a big place here, Mr. Pattern."

"It's a good-sized place," Sparrel said. "My great-grandfather took up about five thousand acres when he came in here and it's been added to a right smart since, maybe another thousand."

"What do you do with all of that acreage?"

"Why, we have about sixty acres of good bottom-land in crops, a good deal in grass, and there's this part here with the house and garden and orchard; my two girls have farms on it, and the rest is just land to have around you to look at and hunt in. I hadn't thought much about what I did with it," Sparrel spoke slowly and clearly. Shellenberger noted the pleasant sound of the voice.

"Then you get all your income from one hundred and fifty acres, let us say, and all the rest of the six thousand lies idle and unproductive." Shellenberger balanced between question and assertion.

"Why, if you think of it like that, yes. Only land, at least a right smart of it, was made to just be there to be around a body and be looked at. I spend part of my time just looking at Cranesnest and the Pinnacle. They don't have to have any use only that."

"And yet you have to pay taxes on the entire place, don't you?"

"Yes." Then, "Just what are you aiming at?" Sparrel asked directly.

Shellenberger filled his pipe carefully and when the pipe was going, Shellenberger turned to Sparrel.

"I need good timber, Mr. Pattern, and you've got what I want. I looked at it pretty carefully as I rode over here. You own everything from here to the river, don't you?"

"Just about, I reckon."

"What do you think that land is worth to you?"

"Well," Sparrel said, "I just hadn't thought anything about what it's worth. There's a fine stand of timber in there."

"I'm told that land in this country is valued from a dollar to a dollar and a half an acre. Of course bottom-land alone is worth more. I'll tell you what I'm prepared to do, Mr. Pattern. If you'll sell me a few thousand acres of this timber hill land, I'll pay you four dollars an acre for it. You would still have more land than you could keep your eyes on; it wouldn't touch your farms or your meadow land."

Sparrel was in no hurry to speak. The proposal lay in the space between them.

"I hadn't thought anything about selling off any of it. I guess I'd just about as soon have my land," he said.

"I am offering you a price about three times what hill land is worth."

Sparrel thought about this a few minutes in silence. Cynthia in the kitchen could hear words from the talk and she began to see the hills trapped like the poor ewe and laid waste by lumbermen.

"There's still a sight of timber below me. Why did you come way up here to my place?"

"Well, I'll tell you exactly why, Mr. Pattern. Most of the good timber down along the river has been bought and cut. There is a lot of it on the sides of the hill away from the river, but you can't get at it profitably. Your place has a fairly good outlet: Big Sandy river on one side, Gannon Fork on the other and smaller creeks cutting into both streams. I'd want to look over the land a little more carefully, but it seems to me that nearly all of the marketable timber could be snaked right into one or another creek, then brought to the two big streams and rafted and floated out. It's worth nothing to you now as it stands; I noticed a good deal of the timber is falling and decaying, and a fire would play havoc with it. I'd rather get what I need in a large tract than bother with a whole lot of small stumpage. That's why I am here and that's just why I offer you such a big price for it. It'll never be worth any more, and it's liable to be worth a lot less, especially if fire should get into it."

Sparrel let the sales speech die away. "I don't guess I want to sell any land," Sparrel said.

Shellenberger attacked once more.

"You can't eat it. I can't carry it away. These natural resources were put there for us to use, Mr. Pattern. You haven't any right to hoard up timber when it's needed to develop the country. This country's got to develop sooner or later, you know. It can't just lie here on a vacation forever for you to look at. We must develop with the country."

"I don't take much stock in this development, the way it's carried out," Sparrel said, still slowly and clearly.

"We've developed this place for about a hundred years, but it's some different from the way they've developed the Peach Orchard section by taking high on to a million dollars a year in coal and timber out of these mountains, and bringing into it nothing but a lot of ignorant, drinking, fighting people from down the river to do it with. That is the way the country's being developed, looks to me like, Mr. Shellenberger."

Shellenberger pulled at his pipe for a while. Then he dropped his voice to an easy friendliness.

"Well, there's not much danger of that in my proposition, Mr. Pattern," he said laughing. "When I buy some land from you, I'll be a neighbor of yours, and we'll see that it stays respectable and everybody benefits. I don't want you to decide right off about it, anyway. Think it over a few days. I want to go down Gannon creek, and I have some business over at Pikeville. We can talk about it again."

With that Shellenberger turned more to the boys and began to tell them about the mills at Pittsburgh, about the river traffic and the Ventura passenger boat, and his travels to Philadelphia and New York, and to Washington. He told of the endless miles of railroad being laid in the West, and how the people were flocking to the cities and farms in the new states and helping business. The boys were excited by the thought of all that was going on beyond the valley.

Cynthia sat by Julia in the kitchen door, a little way withdrawn from the men, listening to the talk of the great world that lay beyond the mountains. And for a long time after Julia had called to Sparrel that the beds were ready, and the menfolk had left the porch and gone upstairs, Cynthia went on with her round of thought.

"It seems a long way off from here, hills as big as the orchard and garden put together. Sometimes when I lie here by the window and look out down the hollow I can feel the fingers of the world creeping up the river and edging in here; Jesse wanting to go off to read the law, me thinking of the Institute over at town."

CHAPTER V

Shellenberger was in good spirits the next morning. He rose early with the family, and instead of using the blue washbowl which Julia had placed in his room, he came down to the yard and joined with the boys at the wash rock, dashing cold water from the well over his face and neck. He talked easily with them about the lumber business back in Pennsylvania and spoke further at the breakfast table of the way the country was growing, the cities booming, and the Ohio valley filling up, and markets expanding, and how that made it just the right time to open up a big tract of timber like Sparrel Pattern's because it was worth more now than it had ever been before and would likely be again. He disconcerted Julia by offering to pay for his night's lodging. He gave Nelson a coin for guiding him over the mountain, and went with Sparrel to the barn to get a mount for his journey. Sparrel let him have one of his saddle mules, as a part of his hospitality to the stranger, and told him how to leave it in Hardin Slusser's stable below the courthouse at Pikeville and he would get it when he rode over at the end of the week on his monthly trip to town.

"You think over my proposition for a few days, Mr. Pattern," Shellenberger said. "You can't afford to turn it down. Look me up at the hotel at the end of the week." He climbed awkwardly into the saddle as the mule jumped about under him.

"You just follow the creek right on around and you won't have a bit of trouble finding the way," Sparrel said.

When Shellenberger had gone, the whole family understood that some intangible alteration had affected the atmosphere of Wolfpen Bottoms. At dusk the night before it was one thing and they were used to it and at home in it; in the morning of the next day a new element had come into the valley and disturbed the spiritual equilibrium to whose tensions they were accustomed. The values by which they lived had endured for just a hundred years. They had been sufficient to order a way of life which brought satisfaction and meaning into the activities of four generations of men and part way into a fifth. They had produced their culture. Now, suddenly, new pressures were there. Shellenberger had unhinged the easy swing of life. He brought with him a strange restlessness and left a portion of it in Wolfpen Bottoms.

Julia looked over the palls of her garden into indefinite space and tasted the feeling of disturbance. Jesse rubbed the black saddle of the shepherd which had bounded back from the barn. Jasper stood by the woodlot playing idly with the catch on the gate, and then walked down toward the sheepfold.

Cynthia sat on a stool near the kitchen door looking into the cloud tangles above the Pinnacle. "The white clouds are soft as lambs' wool in a bag and there could be no burrs to pick out of it. If a body could sit on a fluff of cloud and lean back against a fluff of woolpack and move about and be high above all the land that man wants to lumber, and then the groaning of the big poplar trees when they fall and crush the little under trees might not sound any louder to you than the rush of an oriole's wing, and that wouldn't pain something inside of you. I guess it must be because a body's soul squats too much on the ground where so many things are hurt right before your eyes and cry into your ears that keeps it troubled. And then again, it might reach all the way up to Heaven, and when that man wants to cut down our trees I reckon Grandfather Saul feels an ache in his long legs, and Grandfather Barton gives a cough, and Grandfather Tivis, well, I just imagine he sees the whole valley filling up with unpainted, rough-sawed, siding houses. Still, if you sat all night in Cassiopaea's Chair and went about above things under a veil of moonlight when evil is hidden and the moan of trees and the cry of a young ewe can't be heard because stars sing and you breathe the sweet influence of the Pleiades, and in the daytime you watched the wind play in the white cloud mist under you and wave it the way a breeze from the hollow plays in the beard of the wheat before a storm, then maybe a body wouldn't think about the hurt things in the world at all."

Lightning's Action Not Checked by Any Object

Lightning is a powerful force. The formation of clouds, or the movement of the water particles in violent cloud movement creates positive electricity that seeks relief. If the negative or ground charge is the stronger it spills over as it were and passes skyward of the points of lightning rods or other prominent points. But if the positive charge in the clouds is the stronger and is not neutralized by the negative charge from below it comes to earth with a blinding flash and deafening crash, striking the most prominent point in range.

Breaking the connections between earth and sky does not stop the discharge of lightning. It has to be neutralized, asserts an authority in the Montreal Herald, by contact with the negative charge in the earth. But a broken connection, as when lightning rod is broken, or metal roof and spouts are not grounded, only causes the lightning bolt to go elsewhere and do damage. It stops at the break maybe, but holds out pleading hands to the positive force in the clouds.

SOWING AND REAPING

LESSON TEXT—Galatians 6:1-10.
GOLDEN TEXT—Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap.—Galatians 6:7.

PRIMARY TOPIC—How to Behave.
JUNIOR TOPIC—When We Choose.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Sowing and Reaping. (Effects of Alcohol).
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Sowing and Reaping. (Effects of Alcohol).

Satan is "the god of this world." And as such he has wrought confusion in every realm and particularly in the field of moral distinctions and responsibility. Instead of clear-cut lines of right and wrong, white and black, he has managed to befuddle the minds of many so that they see only a twilight gray of moral indifference. He has lulled many a man and woman into a false security that somehow sin may be yielded to with impunity. To some he says there is no God, and no punishment for sin. To those who will not yield to such a bold attack he more subtly suggests that God is love and that there will be no judgment. Some there are who think that formal association with religious organizations will somehow atone for all their carelessness of life. How great is the need to emphasize the truth of this lesson that "God is not mocked, for whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap" (v. 7). These are eternal and immutable principles.

The epistle to the Galatians expounds Christian liberty as based on justification by faith. This life of liberty is a life in the Spirit, and this means walking in the Spirit.

I. The Christian's Attitude Toward Others (vv. 1, 2).

The spiritual concerns of life are far more important than the material, therefore the writer points out that the believer is

1. Considerate in spiritual matters (v. 1).

Sin is in the world. Men, even Christian men, fall. Who is to help them? and how? Fellow sinners and spiritual weaklings cannot help. Sanctimonious and "holier than thou" folk will only criticize and hinder. The spiritually strong must help the weak, doing it gently, not judging severely.

But not all the problems of the world are spiritual and the Christians will be

2. Helpful in bearing the burdens of life (v. 2).

The Christ spirit leads a man to bear his neighbor's burden.

II. The Christian's Attitude Toward His Own Life (vv. 3-6).

The true believer is characterized by

1. Humility (v. 3). The man who is wrapped up in himself is always a very small bundle.

2. Self-judgment (v. 4). Compare I Cor. 3:10-15. God will one day judge our lives. We do well to judge them now in the light of eternity.

3. Self-reliance (v. 5). The one who is quick to bear another's burdens is slow to ask others to bear his.

4. A sacrificial spirit (v. 6). The true disciple will honor his teacher and will share with him not only his material things, but also the good things she finds in God's Word.

III. An Eternal Law of Life and Conduct (vv. 7-9).

1. The law stated (v. 7). "Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap." We never question this law in the realm of nature. We expect no wheat when we sow wild oats. But, fools that we are, we think God is less exacting, less true to his perfect holiness and righteousness in the realm of the moral and spiritual. Let us awake before it is too late!

2. The law illustrated (v. 8). The flesh stands for self, self-will, or selfishness. The man who lives for himself and his own pleasures reaps "corruption" even in the present world.

3. Its obedience rewarded (v. 9). God is gracious. Well doing is not only its own reward, but in future prospect there is a reward at his hand for those who are not "weary in well doing."

IV. A Summary and Conclusion (v. 10). This gathers up the truth of the entire context, reminding us that "as we have opportunity" (and sometimes it really knocks only once) we are to "work that which is good" (and it may take effort and sacrifice) "toward all men" (even if we don't like their nationality, or color, or creed, or lack of creed), "and especially" (and now we come into the intimate family circle) "toward them that are of the household of faith."

Lacking Imagination
The soul without imagination is what an observatory would be without a telescope.—Henry Ward Beecher.

The Guilty Conscience
A guilty conscience is like a whirlpool drawing in all to itself, which would otherwise pass by.—Fuller.

Don't Trouble Trouble
Do not anticipate trouble, or worry about what may never happen. Keep in the sunlight.—Franklin.

Memory of McGraw and Earlier Days Crowds Out Present

WHEN memories stick with you while you should be doing something else, there is only one solution. So you are stuck with them today:

The time when Benny Leonard, who must have weighed 160 pounds, was obtaining publicity for his vaudeville tour by letting it be known that he might soon defend his lightweight title. His very proper indignation when I suggested that my customers might be easier to convince if he would stand on the scales and indicate which leg he was willing to have cut off so that he could reduce to the 135-pound limit.

There was the year when I was a very young and wise apprentice reporter in Baltimore. Then I thought that all New York sports writers must be phonies. That was because of a firm belief that such names as Damon Runyon, Bozeman Bulger, Hype Igoe could not possibly be real.

There was the time when I first met John McGraw. A ninth-inning decision had cost the Giants a ball game while they were battling for a pennant late in the season. Naturally I expected to hear numerous inside facts concerning baseball and umpires. Instead he took me in to dinner and devoted two hours to talking about the high cost of steam yachts and the pleasure that might be obtained by owning one. Not once during the evening did he refer to the ball game or the decision that had meant its loss to the Giants.

The time when, after a very delightful evening with Jim Thorpe, I shook hands with him at 5 A. M. and solemnly promised that his football career would be crowned by an opportunity to play against Bradley in the professional contest that afternoon. The memory that Jim, although already somewhat old and rather fat, played a swell game. I forget the rest.

The baseball club which was somewhat annoyed at the way a star was conducting his spring training. The daily search that was made of his room while he was at the ball park and the private detective who trailed him until he went to the room at night. The wondering as to why the star always appeared so shaky the next morning. The night I looked out the window and saw the very obscure rookie who roomed directly above the star dangling a quart bottle on the end of a rope.

That year in Baltimore when I inaugurated the city amateur boxing championship tournament which has been copied so profitably elsewhere since then. The bootlegger who withdrew his son from the finals because he became angry at the army captain who was representing the A. A. U. as master of ceremonies. The police department team which went on a sympathetic strike along with the gentleman who sold very good stuff at 50 cents a shot.

That year when there was so much talk about the International league being a one-man enterprise and Judge Landis' official pronouncement that such tales were all the bunk. The great self-restraint I used in not revealing that a few days previously I had been in the same room while Jack Dunn, officially the Baltimore owner, had issued orders which fired an umpire, two Jersey City ball players and one from Newark. The fact that I spent two hours in persuading Dunnie, who was a wee bit excitable at times, that he should not also fire the president.

That evening when Wladek Zbyszko threw Renato Gardini at me because somehow I became so suspicious as to hint that all wrestling matches are not made in heaven.

The time when the very agreeable Bradley agreed to box a four-round exhibition for charity and discovered, too late, that the setup was Kid Williams, who was just getting over being bantamweight champion of the world.

NOT IN THE BOX SCORE:
THE weaker clubs will make a determined fight for a share the wealth plan when the major leagues meet next winter. They claim that they provide half the show even when they visit Yankee stadium. So, they argue, visiting clubs should get a better break than the 20 cents on each paid admission arrangement which has been in effect since the 1890's . . . Sam McQuade, who now makes matches at the Garden, once was an altar boy . . . Uncle Sam's roving poloists have definitely decided not to enter a team in the Olympics, but the British, seeking consolation for their Westchester Cup defeat, will send the same 32-goal side to Berlin . . . Pete Gilhooly, Scotland's celebrated all-around athlete, now trains the Flushing Juniors, runners-up in the Empire State Junior (soccer) league.

Don Petrin, the light-heavyweight, wants the world to know that he now is the daddy of a nine-pound boy. Also that, because he needs more dough than can be had in his father-in-law's bakery, he would like to receive some fight offers . . . It costs $3,000 a night to stage those midget auto races in the Garden bowl . . . International league writers and managers put on even better scraps than the ball clubs. Right now Pilot Vitt of Newark is being panned because he is too hard boiled, while Guy Sturdy of the Orioles gets a blast for being too easy going . . . Al Lane, star Hill school fullback and brother of the former Princeton football captain, has just failed to receive the proper nod from the entrance committee at Old Nassau. He still has a chance to make the grade in the fall.

Dr. Bier, the Pompton Lakes health farmer, claims a record at which all other fight camp proprietors can aim. During the sixteen years he has been conducting the place, no referee ever has counted ten over a main bout performer who trained there . . . One of the more vigorous fight squabbles now concerns the Braddock-Schmeling picture rights . . . If the Garden gets the show Harry Voiler probably will get the call. If it is under Hearst A. C. auspices the break will go to the justly celebrated Bill Duffy . . . Possible successors to the late Charley Knapp as president of the International League are either Secretary Willie Manley or Umpire in Chief Bill Carpenter.

Ruppert Has Heaviest Insurance on Stadium

Colonel Ruppert carries more insurance (a bigger sum and more different varieties) on Yankee stadium than does any other big-time club owner . . . When Charlotte Epstein skipped the Olympic trials she set some kind of a record. It was the first major swimming meet in these parts that the very capable coach has missed in years . . . In Detroit they whisper that Mickey Cochrane and Schoolboy Rowe are so far apart temperamentally, that, for the good of all concerned, the potentially great pitcher will be traded this winter . . . Jimmy Calleran of the Bushwicks soon will dangle a little second-sacker on his knee. . . . Although he is not quite so brash when speaking for publication, Coach Al Ulbrickson confides to friends that Washington's Olympic crew will crack the record set by the 1928 California boat.

The biggest bettor at metropolitan tracks is a young man who once seemed to be headed toward golfing stardom. He plops down as much as 50 C's on a race . . . Aside from the fact that the best Cards' farm outfielder is a Joe Medwick type of kid named Lou Scofield, the Dodgers gave away a lot of weight when they traded the giant Earnshaw. Eddie Morgan, who eventually will arrive at Brooklyn as part of that deal, is 5 feet 9 inches tall and weighs 160 pounds. It is because they are overstocked with one-base-hitting guys of that size that the Dodgers are in the cellar now . . . In addition to being a distinguished surgeon, Dr. G. Randolph Manning is one of the grand old men of soccer. He was the first president of the U. S. F. A.

At dinner recently when a group of very well-informed baseball men were discussing the merits of the two major leagues this proposition was set forth: "The Cubs won the pennant last year while the Yankees finished second in their own loop. Suppose you owned the Yankees and, during the winter, you were told that you could have the pick of the Cubs to strengthen your club. Leave pitchers and Di Maggio out of it. This is a deal where you would have to swap a regular for a regular." The unanimous answer to that was that the difference between their ages might make a Billy Herman-Tony Lazzeri deal very attractive. Otherwise the American leaguers could not improve themselves.

Washington's Escape Cited History tells how Washington, a colonel under General Braddock in the French and Indian war of 1775, was one of the few survivors in the ill-fated ambush of July 9, but there is a sequel which records the wonder of his escape. Years afterward an aged Indian chief came from a long journey to meet him, saying he had a great wish to see the man who was protected by the Great Spirit, and could not be slain in battle, how in that ambush, he had specially singled out Washington, bidding the others to do so also, without any effect, until they were convinced he could not be shot and ceased to aim at him.

Two Kinds of Rabies There are two kinds of true rabies—first, what is known as dumb rabies and, second, furious or violent rabies. In the first the dog acts as if it has something caught in its throat. Generally he behaves abnormally. Lower jaw becomes rigid. Naturally a dog with this type of rabies does little biting. Condition of his lower jaw prevents it. In violent rabies the symptoms are much the same as in the dumb variety, with the evidences of uneasiness or nervousness, and drooling. In violent rabies the dog always snaps at things or people. That is the outstanding difference between the two types.

Floyd Gibbons Adventurers' Club Hello Everybody!

"Two Trains on a Track" By FLOYD GIBBONS Famous Headline Hunter

"IF I'D been embarking on an expedition into some unexplored jungle," says George Force of New York city, "I might have been ready for anything. But as it happened, adventure came to me on a trip home from the office. A trip I took six days a week, fifty weeks in the year." Well, George, I've been arguing for a long time that that's the way most adventures happen.

It was on January 27, 1903, and George was on a train headed for home, which was then in a small New Jersey suburban town. It was a funny old train—as we know trains now.

The cars were wooden ones. They were heated by coal stoves, one of which was set in the middle of each car. It was a cold, snowy night. The train was rolling along about twenty miles out of New York, and just beyond the town of Westfield.

At the other side of Westfield, the train stopped. The express was coming through and the little local was switched to another track. The railroad dispatchers intended it to stay there until the express had gone by.

Tragic Train Wreck on Winter Night. But something went wrong with the signals. The big train—the Royal Blue Line Philadelphia Express—doing sixty miles an hour—was on the wrong track. It was coming straight for the rear-end of the local train on which George was riding, but not a man on either train knew it until it was too late. The first George knew of it was when the crash came. It came with a terrible, jarring impact that shook the train from one end to another. Then, as far as George was concerned, the whole world seemed to be coming to an end.

Says George: "I was in the forward part of the third car. The crash, when it came, was so terrific that it pushed our train half a mile along the tracks. The shock of that collision alone killed many people."

But that shock was only the beginning. Jolted half out of his senses, George was dimly conscious of the whole terrible affair. Like a man in a dream he saw the car he was in turn over on its side. As it turned, George went head first through a window, cutting his face, bruising his back. With the whole upper part of his body out of that window, he was dragged along the tracks as the car, lying on its side, still continued to scrape along them.

Express Locomotive Bores Into Wooden Car. When a thousand things all happen at once, it takes a long time to tell them. Actually, George's whole adventure didn't last more than ten minutes all told. He felt the car turning over almost at the same time as the initial impact. He saw himself going through the window, felt himself being dragged along the rough surface of the roadbed, scarcely a split second after the car had toppled.

That scared him plenty, but the most awesome sight was the one that came just another split second after he fell through the window of that still-moving car.

George was up in the front part of his car. If he hadn't been, he might not have been alive today. For to the rear of the car came a horrible grinding sound. The whole back-end crumpled like match-wood. And into the car—right down its crazily tilted aisle—came the locomotive of the express.

George Describes Scenes of Frightful Horror. George watched it in a daze of fear as it pushed its steaming head forward. It had gone through two cars already, killing and maiming their passengers. Now it was coming after George. Would that hot, smoking juggernaut get him? George held his breath, certain that it was the end, but half way down the car, the engine stopped.

The car was filled with cries and groans. Injured people were everywhere. The car was burning, as were all the other cars in the trains, set afire by the upended coal stoves that heated them.

Says George: "The scenes I witnessed then were indescribable. The car was a twisted, misshapen mass of ruin. Burning ruin, with the locomotive embedded in its midst. Dead, wounded and helpless humans were lying along its entire length. Passengers from the few cars that were not harmed seemed stunned, and it was the less seriously wounded—some of whom had been in the worst of the wreck—who realized that help must be given to the dead and dying and that something must be done about those pinned in flaming cars."

Wreck Cost the Lives of 30 Passengers. George himself was one of the latter. He couldn't get out alone, and only did with difficulty when three or four men came to help. When at last they pried him loose, he was still in a state of half-consciousness. His clothes, from his neck to his waist, had been torn completely from his body. They led him away through a scene of the most frightful disorder. Moaning, bleeding, scalded victims lay in rows by the side of the track, and every minute rescuers brought out more.

Every passenger in the rear car was killed outright. Few escaped in the next one. The engineer of the express train died a few minutes after the accident. All told, thirty people were killed and scores were injured.

And George—well—every time he thinks of that wreck, and the way that locomotive came crashing right into the car after him, he counts himself pretty lucky not to have been one of those poor devils in the last car.

Washington's Escape Cited History tells how Washington, a colonel under General Braddock in the French and Indian war of 1775, was one of the few survivors in the ill-fated ambush of July 9, but there is a sequel which records the wonder of his escape. Years afterward an aged Indian chief came from a long journey to meet him, saying he had a great wish to see the man who was protected by the Great Spirit, and could not be slain in battle, how in that ambush, he had specially singled out Washington, bidding the others to do so also, without any effect, until they were convinced he could not be shot and ceased to aim at him.

Mesh Rash Gave Young Lady an Alarm

Some of these modern sports clothes have startling effects on others than those who have to look at them.

Take the case of the girl who looked in the mirror as she was undressing the other day, let out a terrifying shriek and started for the telephone to get a doctor. She thought she'd broken out in some horrible rash and was coming down with something strange and deadly.

Then she remembered she'd been playing tennis that afternoon in a mesh polo shirt—and had sunburned with a lace-work effect.—Washington Star.

Tops in Forgetfulness

A husband's forgetfulness caused a man to inadvertently send an engraved invitation to his wife to attend his marriage to another woman, although there had been no divorce. He appeared before Magistrate Thomas Aurelio in New York accused of bigamy, and was remanded for the grand jury.

He was asked if he had sent the engraved invitation to his wife. "She must have been on the mailing list," explained Mr. Ryan.—Montreal Herald.

usual, the umpire won the argument. One of the local lads was ordered out of the game and reinstated once or twice but the contest finally got underway—with the Tawas team still intact. An infield out then allowed

Prescott to score its fifth run of the inning.

Brown mowed down the Prescott batters in great style during the next five innings and then was removed for a pinch hitter in the seventh. Hobart finished the game on the rubber and the final Prescott tally was scored off him in the seventh. Myers singled but was forced at second by E. Christie. An error on McCarthy's grounder and a hit batsman filled the sacks. E. Christie then scored on a fielder's choice.

Johnson caused the Prescott fielders a few embarrassing moments in the eighth when he scored the other Tawas counter. Jack had connected for a double and two singles in three previous appearances at the plate and then secured a walk in the eighth to keep his record perfect for the day. He took a big lead off first and a quick throw there by D. Christie trapped him. Johnson streaked for second and then the fun started. Turbok's throw to second went into left-center and Jack journeyed on to third. Here he was safe when B. Panigay's throw to that base went wild and so he started for home.

E. Christie then provided the climax for the show with his wild throw to the plate, allowing the panting Johnson, who had been stopping and going all the way around, to steam in safely.

D. Christie went the entire route on the mound for Prescott. Besides holding the locals to eight hits he struck out 11 men while issuing three passes.

Next Sunday the Tawas crew will take on the slugging Hemlock boys at the local athletic field. This game promises to be filled with action and excitement as both teams are set to stage a real battle. Come out—the game starts at 3:00 o'clock—and the admission price is only 25c.
