

TAWAS CITY

TAWAS CITY SCHOOLS WILL OPEN TUESDAY

Graduation Requirements and Course of Study Announced

Mrs. John King is visiting in Flint with her sister, Mrs. David Laing. Mrs. Chester Bielby and daughter, Donna, of Hale spent the week end with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Will Brown.

As mentioned previously in the Herald, the Tawas City public school opens next Tuesday at nine o'clock. The registration of pupils will take place at this time, and a faculty meeting will be held in the afternoon.

The faculty for the present school year is the same as for the previous year with the exception of the commercial teacher, Miss Doris M. Boone of Hillsdale, Michigan, will teach the commercial subjects and European history instead of Miss Marjorie Mackie. Miss Boone holds a life certificate from the Michigan Western State Teachers College of Kalamazoo and the degree of bachelor of arts from the University of Michigan. She has had six years of high school experience in the public schools of Osseo and North Adams. Both towns are located in Hillsdale county.

"While the requirements for high school graduation are the same as for the past year, a review of these requirements will perhaps be appreciated by both students and parents," said Superintendent A. E. Giddings, yesterday. "Sixteen units are required, and ten of these units must be selected in the form of two majors and two minors from five departments. The five departments are English, history, language, science, and mathematics. A major consists of three certain subjects in the same department and a minor consists of two certain subjects in the same department. The other six units necessary to complete the above mentioned sixteen units may be selected from any that is offered by the high school. The necessary subjects in each of the five departments from which majors and minors may be chosen are as follows: English—one and two, and either three or four; history—European history, American history, and economics-civics; language—Latin one and two; science—botany, chemistry, and physics; mathematics—algebra one, plane geometry, and algebra two. A major in English is required. Physics will count as a subject in either science or mathematics."

The course of study for the high school for the present year is as follows: Ninth grade—general science, citizenship, English, and algebra; tenth grade—English, European history, botany, Latin, geometry, and bookkeeping; eleventh grade—English, Latin, American history, physics, typewriting, music, and (Turn to No. 2, Back Page)

Prescott Invites You To Home-Coming

For the third time in as many years the people of Prescott are staging a real home-coming event, this year to take place September 6 and 7. Starting early Sunday and running until late Monday night, the event will be one continuous reel of good times. The Michigan Mountaineers will be present to entertain and the Gladwin high school band will also be present to provide good music. This is a 40-piece band. There will be movies all afternoon and evening, horse races, contests for the children, two baseball games, one between Gladwin and Prescott and the other between the home town boys and the Bay City Police. Naturally, there are a number of smaller forms of entertainment. This much is assured—Prescott is out to do a good job and extends to you a most hearty invitation to be present.

Notice To Public School Students

Superintendent A. E. Giddings will be in his office at the school building Friday and Saturday, September 4 and 5, from 9 to 10 o'clock. High school students are urged to secure aid in their election of subjects at this time, and both high school and grade students are urged to purchase books.

She was a past matron of Temple Chapter No. 125, Order of Eastern Star, and a past high priestess of Bethlehem Shrine No. 4.

She leaves her husband, Thomas E.; two daughters, Mrs. Myron Rogers, of Charlotte, Mich., and Miss Ethel, at home; one son, Don, of Flint; one sister; six grandchildren and two great grandchildren.

Funeral services were held at the home Tuesday afternoon and the body was then taken to Bay City where services were held Wednesday afternoon at the Hyatt funeral home. Burial was at Bay City.

Tawas-AuGres Game Rained Out Sunday

Sunday's scheduled game between Tawas and AuGres at the local athletic field was rained out after three and one-half innings of play. It was the first game the locals were forced to postpone this season.

When the game was called off AuGres was in possession of a 2-0 lead. This lead the visitors secured in the first frame when Bessinger was hit by a pitched ball and L. Nowak and Gardner followed with singles. Tawas had a couple of scoring opportunities but failed to take advantage of them. In the second Moeller, first up, walked, but was able to get only to second base. In the third Kasischke and Roach singled with one out but were unable to score. Bill Mallon, pitching for the locals, allowed four hits and struck out eight during the four innings he worked, while Gardner, AuGres hurler, yielded two hits and fanned six in three frames.

Sunday, September 6, Tawas will play at Standish.

Miner's Grove Clinches Farmers' League Title

Miner's Grove clinched the Tawas Farmers' league pennant for the current season last Sunday by trimming Sand Lake, 10 to 5. Sunday's victory removed any mathematical possibility of a tied standing for the end of the race. Miner's Grove has won 13 games and lost four, while its nearest rival, Meadow Road, has won ten and lost seven.

Next Sunday's games will mark the close of the season. On that date Miner's Grove is scheduled to play Meadow Road at the Sand Lake diamond and Sand Lake meets Wilber at the latter's diamond.

Hemlock To Play Farmers' League All-Stars Monday

An all-star aggregation composed of players from the four teams in the Tawas Farmers' league, Miner's Grove, Meadow Road, Sand Lake and Wilber, will play the Hemlock club of the Northeastern Michigan League on Labor Day, Monday, September 7. The contest will take place at the Tawasville diamond.

Will Start Water Works Next Tuesday

A communication received by City Clerk W. C. Davidson from the Francis Engineering company announced that work on the water works distribution system would commence next Tuesday. L. W. Wells, contractor for the project, of Saginaw estimated that the work would be completed within 60 days. Equipment and materials will be rushed to the city at once.

WILL PUSH SHORE ROAD TO LIMIT

Five Projects Underway In Four Counties, Says Van Wagoner

The Huron Shore Road, hope of the shore resort country of north-east Michigan, is gradually shaping itself along a 55-mile front in four counties in that section of the state. "Completion of the Huron Shore route is one of our primary objectives," Commissioner Murray D. Van Wagoner said. "Construction will be pushed to the limit which available funds will permit."

State Highway Commissioner Van Wagoner revealed that with the initiation of work in Alpena county, five projects are now underway along the Huron Shore Road on the cooperative construction program of the state highway department and the Works Progress Administration. Other projects are in Iosco, Alcona, Presque Isle, and Cheboygan counties.

Grading operations on the 10.5 mile project from Alpena north to the county line got under way last week after an extended delay. At the present time fifty men are employed excavating muck on the location just north of the French road. Considerable clearing and grubbing has been done on the location north of Alpena under a CWA project in 1933. An allotment of $181,892 has been made for the Alpena project.

The grading of 5.6 miles of the proposed Huron shore route in Iosco county is now 95 per cent complete. Commissioner Van Wagoner said he expects the grading to be completed in October. Forty-five men have been working on this project since February.

The lower half of a ten-mile grading project in Alcona county is expected to be completed by November. Sixty men have been at work on this section of the project which lies in a thickly-wooded area.

Commissioner Van Wagoner said arrangements had been made with the WPA for transfer of men working on the Iosco county project when that job is completed. The additional men will be used to speed up the completion of the grade over the entire 10-mile area in Alcona county. The original allotment for the entire project was $185,740.

A six-mile cement stabilization project is now under construction east of Cheboygan. This work involves mixing the soil with cement for a depth of six inches and sealing the stabilized road with a quarter-of-an-inch thickness of bituminous surfacing. It is the second project of its type to be put under construction in the county and Commissioner Van Wagoner looks to the experiment to point the way for reducing secondary road construction costs.

"I Stand Condemned" Gripping Spy Drama

"I Stand Condemned," the powerful drama of love and espionage in World War Russia which comes to the Family Theatre, East Tawas, on Wednesday and Thursday, September 9-10, boasts three new stars who promise to become favorites of American filmgoers. It marks the debut of Harry Baur, France's leading film actor and an artist who has been hailed as the peer of Emil Jannings and Charles Laughton.

Laurence Olivier and Penelope Dudley-Ward are featured with Baur in this London Film, which casts him as a wealthy Russian war profiteer who finds himself in a position where he can send the young soldier sweetheart of his fiancée before a firing squad. Highlights of the film are a huge Russian cabaret scene, a portion of the Russian Ballet, a scene in a luxurious gambling casino and a gripping trial scene, authentic in every detail, set in a Russian military court.

Bullitt Is Made Ambassador to France—Hitler Stirs Stalin to Talk of War—Secretary Dern Dies in Washington.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD © Western Newspaper Union.

TRANSFER of William C. Bullitt from the embassy in Moscow to that in Paris is not surprising. He it was who was chiefly responsible for the recognition of the Soviet government by the United States, and when he was rewarded with the ambassadorship it was expected he would be able to swing a lot of Russian business to American concerns.

Also it was hoped he could persuade his Russian friends to keep their promises not to disturb this country with communist propaganda. In these respects at least Mr. Bullitt has been a disappointment. But he retains the confidence of President Roosevelt and will not be out of place as ambassador to the leftist French government.

Some observers think Mr. Bullitt is sent to Paris for the purpose of secretly sounding out the major European powers on the possibility of reconvening the world economic conference in 1937.

Jesse Isador Straus resigned as ambassador to France on the advice of his physicians. The President wrote him that "if this administration shall be continued for another four years, I shall count on your returning as a part of it."

REICHSFUHRER HITLER has injected a little more ginger into the international armament race by suddenly announcing that the term for compulsory military service for Germans was doubled—two years instead of one. As matters are just now in Europe, this appeared to be aimed directly against soviet Russia, and if the London newspapers are to be believed, Dictator Stalin recognizes this and reacts as might be expected. The London Evening News and Daily Mail both assert that Stalin, in a secret radio address to the red army, said:

"Comrades of the red forces: We are on the very eve of momentous events. At any moment now you may be called upon to lay down your lives for the defense of the proletarian birthland.

"This is the moment you have been anticipating, and now your birthland is expecting you to do the duty you have so eagerly awaited.

"Our enemies are getting into position. So be ready. The enemies are on the frontiers of our great land. Keep watch.

"Everything money could buy, everything the genius of man could invent and everything the loving labor of the workers could make have been given into your hands for the defense and glory of the Soviet land."

The London papers say other Soviet leaders followed Stalin with similar talks. The foreign office in Moscow flatly denied that the dictator had delivered any such address as was reported.

German economists, worried over the mounting costs of re-arming their country, were told the doubling of the term of military service would not be quite so expensive as it appeared, for more men in barracks means fewer on dole. However, the national debt continued to grow and ways of meeting payments are becoming fewer and more scanty.

SECRETARY OF WAR GEORGE H. DERN died in Walter Reed hospital, Washington, of heart disease and other complications resulting from influenza. He had been ill since last spring but part of the time had insisted on attending to his official duties, keeping this up even from his sick bed. Mr. Dern, who was sixty-four years old, was formerly a brilliant mining engineer and was the second non-Mormon to be elected governor of Utah, serving two terms.

ANNOUNCEMENT was made by WPA officials in Washington that more than 110,000 farmers are now at work on Works Progress administration projects in the drought areas of the West and Central West.

About half of the farmers on the WPA rolls are in North and South Dakota. North Dakota reported 32,762 at work on federal projects and South Dakota 22,927. Relief and agricultural authorities have estimated that 110,000 to 120,000 farmers will need help through the winter in the Dakotas.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S special train made a quick run to Bismarck, N. D., and the special committee on the drought, headed by Morris L. Cooke, reported to him on its inspection of the afflicted area. The President then took an automobile tour through the countryside to see for himself some of the effects of the long dry spell. He conferred with Acting Governor Welford and Senators Nye and Frazier of North Dakota and Acting Governor Holt and Senators Wheeler and Murray of Montana. Next day Mr. Roosevelt's train carried him down to Pierre, S. D., and thence into other drought stricken states.

Mr. Roosevelt's original schedule was changed to permit him to make a quick run to Salt Lake City for the burial services of Secretary of War Dern.

JOHN L. LEWIS' Committee for Industrial Organization in one of its initial efforts to organize the steel workers seems to have succeeded only in leading one big plant to go out of business, throwing 750 men out of employment. Such is the result of a strike in the plant of the Standard Steel Spring company at Coraopolis, Pa., the strike being directed by the CIO. The employees who didn't strike later refused to work because, they said, their families had been threatened by phone with bombing if the men returned to the plant. So the company closed down and began removing the machinery. It was alleged the strikers were assured in advance that they would be given relief money if the plant were closed, and that the state authorities did nothing to protect the plant or the non-strikers from violence.

FEDERAL JUDGE JOHN P. BARNES of Chicago upheld the constitutionality of the Commodity Exchange act and denied an injunction to restrain its enforcement asked by members of the Chicago Mercantile exchange. Judge Barnes agreed with the contention of Special Assistant Attorney General Wendell Berge that the act is "merely an extension of the provisions of the grain futures act," which has been held constitutional by the United States Supreme Court.

FIGURES given out by the Department of Commerce revealed that July merchandise exports from the United States declined to $178,324,000, the lowest level of the year, while imports increased to $193,409,000, leaving an unfavorable balance of trade of $15,085,000 for the month. It was the second successive month an unfavorable balance was reported. However, compared with the 1935 month, exports were up 3 per cent and imports up 9 per cent.

The unfavorable balance was regarded by Secretary of Commerce Roper as convincing proof of economic recovery in the United States because nearly half the increase in imports over last year in dollar volume was accounted for by luxury items such as furs and whisky and commodities not extensively produced in this country, such as wood-pulp, paper, nickel and tin.

The increase in exports over July, 1935, consisted chiefly of finished and semi-manufactured articles, including machinery, electrical apparatus, aircraft, iron and steel manufactures and inedible vegetable products.

AFTER more than five weeks of desperate fighting, neither the Spanish loyalists nor the rebels were able to claim a decided advantage, and it became evident that the conflict would be long drawn out if the other European nations could keep aloof. This latter eventuality was made more probable by Adolf Hitler's announcement that the German government had ordered an embargo on arms to Spain. He thus lined his country up with Great Britain and France, and Italy had accepted the French proposal for neutrality, though with some reservations.

These "neutral" nations, however, do not intend to be imposed upon and both the British and the German governments made strong protests to the Madrid government against alleged violation of the freedom of the seas. Five British warships set sail from Gibraltar and Hitler sent seven from the Baltic to enforce the demands that interference with shipping cease. The crews of these vessels were ready for immediate action.

The United States does not consider the attempted blockade of rebel-held ports any more valid than do the European nations. Secretary Hull told the Madrid foreign office: "My government directs me to inform you that, with the friendliest feelings toward the Spanish government, it cannot admit the legality of any action on the part of the Spanish government in declaring such ports closed unless that government declares and maintains an effective blockade of such ports."

FOLLOWING the confessions and execution of the Russian conspirators against Stalin and the Soviet government, the Norwegian authorities decided that Leon Trotsky, alleged author of the plot, had violated the conditions of his asylum in Norway. They gave him the choice of immediate arrest or signing a promise to refrain from all revolutionary activities, and he chose the latter.

DURING the fall maneuvers France has been testing the strength of its new fortifications along the German frontier—the Maginot line. In the Montmedy region the elaborate system of concrete strongholds was subjected to an "enemy" attack, and observers said the assaulting troops, armed with the newest and speediest equipment, were able to penetrate the line only at a few places and in small numbers. Reservists from the interior of France had moved up to occupy the line in thirty-six hours. Watching the "battle" was a delegation of generals from Soviet Russia.

FLOYD B. OLSON, Farmer-Laborite governor of Minnesota and candidate for the United States senatorship, died of stomach cancer after a courageous fight. He had been ill for months but had kept up his executive and campaign activities as best he could until the end. Hjalmar Peterson, lieutenant governor, succeeds him as governor, but at this writing there is doubt as to whom the party's state central committee will select to make the race for the senatorship. Francis H. Shoemaker of Duluth announced his candidacy immediately, and two other men were being considered—Senator Elmer A. Benson, now a candidate for governor, and Representative Ernest Lundeen of Minneapolis.

TOM BLANTON of Abilene, Tex., a veteran ranter in congress, has lost his seat in that body and says he will return to the practice of law. For twenty years, with one brief interlude, he has represented his district in the house but in the run-off Democratic primary, which is equivalent to an election there, he was beaten by Clyde L. Garrett of Eastland, a county judge.

JOSEPH W. HARRIMAN, former president of the Harriman National Bank and Trust company of New York and a powerful figure in national finance, was released on parole from the federal northeastern penitentiary at Lewisburg, Pa. He hastened to New York where, it was believed, he would seek a position teaching business subjects. Harriman was sent to prison in 1934 for four and a half years after his conviction on charges of banking irregularities involving more than a million dollars.

SENATOR JAMES COUZENS of Michigan, a Republican long noted for his independence of party restrictions and a candidate for re-nomination on the Republican ticket, has announced that he will support President Roosevelt for re-election. His statement was:

"Believing as I do that the most important matter confronting the nation is the re-election of President Roosevelt, I intend to support him. "The outcome of my own candidacy for the senate is neither important to the nation nor to me, but I believe it is important that my many loyal supporters in Michigan be advised in advance of the primary on September 15. "The reasons for this conclusion will be advanced from time to time between now and election next November."

On the other hand, Bainbridge Colby of New York, who was secretary of state in President Wilson's cabinet, announced that he is for Landon, declaring in a published statement: "Governor Landon's candidacy carries the hopes of every American who knows what America stands for, and who respects the principles which have brought us to greatness as a nation, and preserved our liberties as self-governed people. "The thoughtful and independent Democrats throughout the country—and their number is formidable—are determined in this election to rebuke the betrayal of their party by the administration in Washington."

GREAT BRITAIN and Egypt have settled their disputes and signed a treaty of friendship and alliance. It brings Egypt much nearer to its goal of independence while at the same time it provides full safety for England's interests, especially the Suez canal. The British troops probably will be withdrawn from Cairo and other cities and concentrated with the air force within the canal zone around Ismailia. The maximum strength is to be 10,000 in the army and 3,400 in the air force, but in an emergency Britain will be allowed to send necessary reinforcements. The British high commissioner to Cairo and the Egyptian minister to London will be raised to the status of ambassadors.

FROM AROUND MICHIGAN

Mason—Ingham County's peach crop this year will be about 50 per cent normal, due to the drought and last winter's long cold spell.

Coldwater—Mrs. E. A. Sebring went on a quiet search for a milk thief when the production of one of her cows declined sharply. She found the thief—a snake coiled about a leg of the cow, busily engaged in milking the animal.

Detroit—W. M. Hammond, 28, a survivor of the crash at sea of the navy dirigible Macon in 1935, has enlisted for a 4-year term of service in the navy. He told recruiting officers that he had no fear of aircraft but preferred service this time on a surface craft.

Ionia—The State Prison Commission has approved the plan of Dr. David Phillips, now psychiatrist at Jackson Prison, for segregation of moron and sex type inmates at the various state prisons from other prisoners. It recommended this plan be submitted to next Legislature for necessary appropriations.

Adrian—President of the Michigan Milk Producers association since it was organized 20 years ago, Nathan P. Hull of Lansing announced that he would retire from the office when his term expires in November. The announcement was made at a picnic here of the Michigan Producers Dairy Co., an association subsidiary.

Lansing—Michigan's 1936 crop of hatchery trout—nearly 11,000,000 brooks, browns and rainbows—are waiting in state hatcheries and rearing stations for planting in the streams of the state this fall. The work will be done after the trout season closes for 1936. It is believed that nearly all of the fish will be of catchable size next year.

Detroit—Dick Degener, "America's greatest diver" is back home again, now possessor of the Olympic gold medal, won in the springboard event of the Olympic games in Berlin. Degener was developed at Central High School in Detroit, attended the University of Michigan and was a member of the 1932 Olympic team, placing third at that time in the springboard event. This year, he proved himself the best in the business.

Lansing—A report by the secretary of the state safety council states that about 4,000 reports on accidents are being received each month. The subcommittee is concerned only with enforcement and is allied with the National Safety Council. In order that the state may receive complete reports of all accidents, a recommendation has been made that a small fee be paid to local governments for such reports.

Cass City—An 8-months-old baby was killed when thrown from an automobile as the car struck a cow on the highway. The victim was Frances Louise Schneider, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Schneider, of Cass City. She was seated on her mother's lap in the car driven by her father when the auto struck the cow at the intersection of M-81 and M-53. Mother and child were thrown from the car, the mother escaping with bruises.

Cheboygan—The fame of little Shirley Ann Boda, not yet a month old, has spread quickly. Her mother, Mrs. Herbert Boda, recently revealed that she had received a proposal of marriage by mail from a widower in New York state, who said he owned a beautiful home and was anxious to become the father of Michigan's smallest baby at birth. Shirley Ann's father committed suicide on July 23rd, only a few days' previous to her birth.

Lansing—A basic science bill for the state, similar to the laws already on the statute books of nine states and the District of Columbia, is favored by the State Medical Society. Essentially, the basic science proposal would set minimum educational standards in non-clinical subjects for those who aspire to practice the art of healing. It would not affect those now in practice. The examiners would be teachers and not practitioners of healing.

Stanton—M. V. Mitchell, local resident, appeared before the state administrative board in an attempt to have his pension reinstated and was allowed $50 per month. After Mitchell was bitten by an insane man while he was a guard in the Kalamazoo state hospital, the state purchased a farm of 20 acres near Stanton for Mitchell and he was awarded $75 a month. The incident happened more than 20 years ago. He had been drawing a pension until recently.

Empire—Mrs. H. A. Reable of Detroit vacationed in this vicinity with her husband this summer and while here, discovered an albino frog, which scientists say is one of the rarest of biological occurrences. The frog is pinkish-white, with the tell-tale pink eyes that mark true albinism. It is about one-third developed and authorities say is of the species Rana Calamitans whose natural colors are brown, gray and green. Mrs. Reable expects to dispose of her find to some scientific institution.

Peck—At a special election Peck voters authorized a bond issue of $16,000 to build a water works.

Kalamazoo—In a survey of Michigan farm income covering the last four years, the Department of Agriculture reported that June cash receipts for Michigan crop marketings and livestock was the highest for any June since 1933.

Bad Axe—Almost every community has had a queen of some sort this year but this community had something different. Sixteen-year-old twins, Marjorie and Marion Lafave of Gageton, ruled together as thumb district bean queens.

Jackson—After having tied the Foote Hospital record for a five-year period last month, Old Man Stork this month appeared out to exceed the peak. July brought 55 births at that institution. During the first 17 days of August were 36 births, more than two a day. This is at a rate in excess of the previous month.

Traverse City—While rains and cooler weather brought about a great improvement in the condition of the Grand Traverse potato crop, farmers in this district say that the oats crop was the nearest thing to failure ever witnessed. One grower threshed 20 acres and got 50 bushels of oats. Most fields were not threshed but the grain used as hay while the finest fields have yielded from 20 to 25 bushels per acre.

Grand Rapids—The youth of Kent county have taken pity on hay fever sufferers. A giant ragweed pulling event was staged here, with the result that many thousands of the scourge were destroyed. Prizes awarded by interested citizens helped provide incentive to the young people and Boy Scouts, 4-H club workers and just plain boys and girls had an opportunity to do their communities a worthwhile service.

Manistee—The Manistee-Mason county health unit offices have been set up here in the County Savings bank building, and details of contacting city, county and school officials started by Dr. L. W. Switzer of Ludington. No actual health program work will be taken up until opening of the public schools, when children's clinics will be held. The sanitary expert, E. J. Friar, will start his duties at once, making surveys of resorts.

Lansing—The state health department has announced the award of 10 scholarships in the University of Michigan and John Hopkins University to Michigan physicians. The awards are made under the provisions of the national social security act governing the training of public health personnel and cover matriculation fees, tuition, and living expenses of from $150 to $200 per month. The scholarships cover public health training courses.

Lansing—So that the official seal of the state may be made familiar to school children, the secretary of state has had authentic copies of it made for school distribution. The reproductions are colored to bring out the features specified by the legal description. The drawing of the seal, from which the official reproduction was made, was prepared this summer and distribution will be made to some 6,000 public schools and 500 parochial schools.

Ann Arbor—A contract for a clock with a minute hand seven feet long, which will strike the quarter hours on the Westminster chimes of the third largest carillon in the United States, has been given to a Birmingham, N. Y. firm. The 53 bells for the carillon, shipped from Liverpool, England, are expected here next month. The clock will be placed in the tower housing the carillon bells and will be synchronized with the university master clock on the campus.

Lansing—Through an ambitious system of weather reporting, the state board of aeronautics has laid plans designed to provide greater safety for men and women who fly Michigan's airplanes. The plan calls for six hourly weather reports a day from radio stations. The board also revealed that Michigan is second only to Florida in the number of airports under construction. Work is under way on 45 airports in the state and 39 more projects have WPA approval.

Lansing—The cost of living for the average laboring man's family in Michigan increased 9 per cent in July over the first three months of 1936, a report of the department of labor and industry revealed. Cost of feeding an average family of four (two adults and two children) was $7.75 per week in July. The one item of expenditure which has accounted for the largest share of increase is the price of potatoes, the basic food in the diet supplied by the Department as supposed to provide a well balanced ration.

Lansing—The railroads, last citadel of central time in the state, will soon adopt eastern standard time for their schedules. The interstate commerce commission has granted a petition that the state be included in the eastern time zone. Action of the Michigan legislature in 1931 changed the entire time from central to eastern although the eastern schedule had been observed for some time before act was passed. Railroads, governed by the ICC have had to cling to central time, although both have been quoted.

National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—As the political campaign waxes warmer, it becomes painfully evident that the fight in 1936 for the suffrage of the people is going to be very dirty. It is going to be bitter and there is no way now apparent that such a characteristic can be avoided.

I do not believe that either Governor Landon, the Republican candidate, or President Roosevelt, seeking re-election as a Democrat, can prevent the hurling of invectives that are going to be very close to mud-slinging. Naturally the President of the United States seldom makes a mud-slinging speech and Governor Landon personally is a mild-mannered man who believes in discussing issues rather than individuals, but the intentions or the desires of these two candidates cannot control the bitterness that is, to my mind, certain to be found in this campaign in a large measure.

As typical of the sort of thing to which I have referred is the recent speech of Secretary Ickes who, in a national radio broadcast, became quite ill-tempered in his attack on Governor Landon. Mr. Ickes is not known for his composure anyway and when he gets heated up on any subject he is likely to be guilty of remarks that are not becoming to an official of our government or any other.

I have not the slightest doubt that before the campaign has proceeded much further there will be similar speeches attacking Mr. Roosevelt personally and that, while Governor Landon may not approve, there will be unworthy charges hurled at the President.

Mr. Ickes skated pretty close to the line in his attack on Governor Landon by various adroit phrases which were designed to create the impression that the Republican candidate was either ignorant or dishonest. I do not know Governor Landon personally but I can offer this thought: No man is going to be nominated by any political party in a national convention, nominated by acclamation, unless his record is pretty clear. For Mr. Ickes to say, therefore, in effect, that Governor Landon had sold out to "Wall Street" was not the sort of campaign discussion likely to produce confidence among all the people in their government. It is comparable, in my opinion, to a charge that the President of the United States, who advertises himself continually as a friend of the common man, was guilty of increasing his own personal fortune through presidential acts—and every one knows this is not true. But to get back to the theme song of the Ickes' speech, it seems to me that the tragedy of his radio pronouncement lies in the fact throughout his discussion he was preaching class hatred. Every one knows, of course, attacks on "Wall Street" are very common in any political campaign. The demagogues use it every hour of every day everywhere they can find any one to listen to them. It is ridiculous, but it has happened for a good many years. So when Mr. Ickes made the charge that Governor Landon was either unwittingly or knowingly leading a "rich man's fight" against President Roosevelt he was descending to a rather low level of campaigning.

I have seen indications of a reaction against the Ickes' speech in another way. John Hamilton, the Republican national chairman, on his recent organization tour of the western states, propounded the inquiry that seeks to identify the "economic royalists" about which President Roosevelt spoke several weeks ago. If the Roosevelt campaigners continue this class hatred propaganda, I rather suspect from what Mr. Hamilton said in his speeches there will be a perfect barrage of demands to know the names of these economic royalists. It may not seem important; indeed, it seems like it probably is inconsequential, but if the Republicans let down a barrage on the President of the United States, he is likely to be put in a bad corner.

Without attempting to forecast what the Republican opposition is likely to say, I can recall as an observer close to the wheels of government during the Roosevelt regime that Mr. Roosevelt frequently was a guest on the Astor yacht and that one of his chief advisors for many months was the multimillionaire, Bernard M. Baruch. It seems also that a very rich man, Henry L. Doherty, was in charge of the nation-wide dance program held on the President's birthday and Mr. Doherty, be it said, is head of one of the great utility chains.

These are just samples. It may be good politics for the President to encourage these attacks without approving them, but those of us who knew the late Louis McHenry Howe, are convinced that he never would have agreed to that sort of attack, had he been alive and serving as the President's closest political advisor as he did for a quarter of a century.

There is a situation in the federal government that threatens to be quite nasty. I refer to the row that has developed between the Department of Justice bureau of investigation (the G-men) and the Treasury's secret service corps. It is all very much under cover, quite secret, but the row has come to the surface sufficiently to result in a demotion of two long-time members of the secret service.

J. Edgar Hoover has been well press-agented as chief of the G-men. Joseph E. Murphy has had almost no advertising as assistant chief of the Treasury secret service in which he has served for more than a quarter of a century. Mr. Murphy and one of his subordinates have been reduced in rank, their record stained for life.

The two departments have kept the facts well covered up. It seems that something was going on among the G-men that the Treasury secret service thought they ought to know about. They conducted their own inquiry, their own investigation into the other staff of investigators. That is as much as has been made public except Secretary Morgenthau's announcement of the demotion order. I have known each of these men equally twenty years. Each is entitled to the utmost respect. But each operates along an entirely different line—Hoover with some willingness for publicity; Murphy with an absolute policy of never letting his name get into the papers. It is unfortunate that Joe Murphy was the goat.

The board of governors of the Federal Reserve system took an action recently that probably is quite mystifying to the average person.

They ordered all of the banks of the country which are members of the Federal Reserve system to keep a deposit reserve with the Federal Reserve banks 15 per cent greater than ever has been required before. With the technical phases of reserve requirements and the mechanical operation of this particular order, I think we need not be very much concerned. But with the principle upon which this action is taken I think every one with a bank account, however small, ought to be vitally interested. They ought to be interested for the very simple reason that this action illustrates better than any words I can write how far the centralization of control of the banking structure has gone. This action was taken under the National Banking act of 1935, a statute that has been frequently criticized as a "political banking act."

In the instance I have just reported, the change in the reserve requirements probably will have no serious reaction on us as individuals. It probably will not hurt the banks because few banks in the country have had calls for loans in any quantity since business is at such a low level. But the point is that under this law, the Federal Reserve board of governors can alter banking conditions over night. It can issue new rules and regulations that are wholly impossible of understanding by the average individual, but which are almost riotous in their effect upon the management of individual banks throughout the country.

To state this proposition in another way, may I describe it in the terms of a private business enterprise. If a storekeeper in a small town were subjected to regulation from Washington and the regulatory power in the federal government had such discretionary authority as the Federal Reserve board of governors, could that storekeeper even feel that he was managing his own business? I think not. Then, in the case of the Federal Reserve board of governors, it must be added that the president of the board is Mariner S. Eccles who is known far and wide for his radical ideas about banking. It can be further said that Mr. Eccles has the ear of President Roosevelt. This has been criticized many times of course where opponents of the Roosevelt banking policies have contended that the banks can be utilized in any way the administration desires to use them. As an illustration of this, the federal government has been borrowing billions. Most banks are chock full of government securities. While I do not say it has happened, yet because I do not believe it has happened yet, nevertheless there is a possibility that government borrowings can be forced on the banks under such conditions. That is the course of action that has ruined the currency in half a dozen European nations.

NOT IN THE BOX SCORE:

When the Hambletonian was trotted at Goshen, N. Y., recently, a ten-year old jinx which has prevented any driver from winning the event twice was licked. The hoodoo wrecker was Rosalind, the favorite driven by Ben F. White, who won with Mary Reynolds in 1933. White drove carefully, but with an air of great serenity. The White family was $19,604 wealthier by catching the winner's share.

Bullet Joe Simpson, the former Americans' manager who distinguished himself in the World war, and Murray Murdock, who set that consecutive play record, have been offered manager-coach jobs with "amateur" hockey teams in England. Rental for the St. Nicholas Palace, which will be coupled with the Central Opera House as a boxing enterprise this winter, is $1,075 per week. That could indicate that boxing business is picking up. Judging, though, from the state and federal tax returns of other small clubs recently it also could indicate that Steve Brodie and the daring young man on the flying trapeze were far from being the suckers people suspected. Charlie Snow, the blacksmith who specializes in trotters, has shod 50,000 horses during his 35 years on the Grand Circuit.

Although Saratoga is the only New York track with a $1 field, gents who patronize that section of the joint are in a sad turmoil. They sob that the way favorites have been running recently there soon will be dire need for a 15-cent section for two-bit parlay betters. Mrs. Ethel V. Mars, who spends 200 grand or so at the Saratoga yearling sales, does not do all that bidding and buying merely on feminine intuition. The lady, who last year purchased Case Ace, Arlington Futurity winner undefeated in three starts this season, has a staff of experts to minutely inspect each bargain. Because of the many abuses which cropped up last season the next Pennsylvania legislature will be presented with a bill to abolish amateur boxing and wrestling shows.

Anyhow, it might have happened. Doctor: "So, you say you haven't been feeling well lately and have had to run out on your work and your guests?" Hitler: "Yessir, every time I get out in the sun I keep seeing black spots in front of my eyes."

Travis Jackson May Head Giants' New Rookie Farm

If the Giants run a farm at Jersey City next year Travis Jackson will manage it. Could it be that the eyeless racketeer on the posters advertising the national tennis championships symbolizes the U. S. L. T. A.'s blindness to violations of the amateur rules? The racing commission in the state of Washington is making a drive to put all handbook operators in jail. What high public official has threatened to resign his racing post if the starting is not improved at the New York tracks? Jock Whitney's heavyweight, Abe Simon, has such big paws that he has to bring his own gloves when he goes to a club to fight. Francis Albertani has passed up offers from both of the big bushwacking fight organizations to handle publicity for the National Bowling Congress. Caswell Adams, the very able Herald Tribune sports writer, will publicize Columbia's football this fall.

Dutch Carter, the attorney and former Yale athlete who died recently, was a true sportsman. Both his alma mater and the game of baseball, to which he gave such unselfish devotion as a fan, will miss him. That 8 to 5 price quoted on Braddock over Schmeling is far out of line. Bookies claim Terry Burns was bumped off because he welched on a race bet, not because he was hot with Lucky Luciano.

Probably this has nothing to do with the benefits that come from owning a farm. But the prevailing rate of big-time hockey pay is about $4,000 a season. And the paternal Rangers reward their amateur grads, Alex Shihicky and Mack Colville, with $2,000 apiece. In addition to anticipating an undefeated football season, Fordham folks already are trying to persuade the new university president that the ban on Rose Bowl trips should be lifted. Although he seldom appears on the street with one of them, Madison Square Garden Jimmy Johnston has a collection of twenty-five walking sticks.

Stewart Iglehart, ten goal polo player, learned the game on a bicycle. Professor Charles E. Merriam, University of Chicago political scientist, dined with Max Schmeling aboard the Hindenburg on its most recent trip to America. Ray Daughters, American Olympic swimming coach, has been instructing aquatic stars since sixteen years old. Earl Averill's ambition is to quit baseball with enough to buy a cabin cruiser, return to his Snohomish (Wash.) home, and spend the rest of his days fishing in Puget Sound. Young Corbett, former world's welterweight champion, holds licenses as a referee, second and manager in California.

Baseball's Tribute Brings Hope Game Will Uphold Trust

THERE is little wonder that I could not recognize the feeling. I have not felt that way in years. So I just stood there and watched around the Polo Grounds.

On they came in barouches, landaus, buggies drawn by lone horses and by pairs. Cops marched ahead arrayed in those queer old helmets and long-belted coats of a gaslit era. There were ladies in dresses so gay that even now it seems sad their fate has been some lonesome corner in a costumer's shop. There was a band that might well have played under waving torches, while Manhattan whooped it up for Tilden and Democracy. There was wonder of all wonders on this very baseball field where luck has behaved so well of late—a carriage drawn by two white horses.

In the boxes near the dugout sat baseball's veterans, hands gnarled by many a foul tip or hard-spined grounder, clasped tightly in their laps. Some of them still are in their prime as life is reckoned in most businesses. Others were taking a belated grateful glimpse of a parade that long since has passed them by. The faces of all of them—some deep wrinkled, some full fleshed—had that leathery look which never fades from those who have spent many busy hours squinting into a hot sun.

Memories of yellowed newspaper clippings came back as I watched them. There was Jim Mutrie, a shrunken little man with bristling white moustache. Jim, they say, is ninety-two and so he does not see much baseball now. Indeed they also tell that the last time he came over from Staten Island he was so puzzled by unfamiliar scenes that he was lost before leaving the Battery and so never reached the Polo Grounds at all. But it was Jim, whose eyes still flash as in better days, who managed New York's first pennant winner in 1888.

There was Arlie Latham, boon companion of John McGraw and still proudly employed by the game he served so well. Arlie came into baseball in 1872 and it was Mutrie who brought him to New York in 1879. It was then that he came to know Smiling Mickey Welch, who for all that he pitched the town's first Polo Grounds game in 1883, sits sturdily beside him. McGraw would have liked a scene like this. Old time players had an appeal to him that was irresistible. He chummed with them and helped them whenever they needed it.

There also were men of later baseball generations. Otto Knabe once—that was in the days when he played second for the Phillies and when he managed the lamented Baltimore Terrapins—was one of the most hard boiled as well as one of the most capable of players.

George Smith also sits serenely. Columbia George, as few people recall now although it has been a mere thirteen years since he left the game, also was an athlete with whom it was unsafe to take liberties. Now a sedate school teacher—as indeed he was during most of his seasons in the big time—he merely chuckles when reminded of that feud waged for years with Lavan of the Cards.

There they sit. Harry Courtney, probably less than forty even now, but ten years removed from baseball, and a rising young man in Wall Street. Jocko Fields, who starred with both Pirates and Giants. Danny Murphy, great outfielder with the Athletics of the more celebrated $100,000 infield. Moose McCormick, pinch-hitter extraordinary of the Giants.

They sit there watching, tiny smiles, proud and wistful upon tightened lips. On the field they are watching so intently innings are to be played as they were sixty years ago. But this day is something else.

There is a silence while the bugler blows taps.

Now I know this feeling that has not come over me for years. Sports and war are alike in far more things than ethics.

Too long ago I used to watch thin lines of men in gray and blue parade down the streets of a tiny Maryland town on an afternoon late in May. I

I hope baseball continues to keep its Memorial day trust as well.

Ripples From Guiley Creek

By the Trout Specialist

Well, we have Boulder Dam, Jr., here on the creek, though it sounds like an old steam engine as the water pushes the eight paddles 'round and 'round, then drops in surges out the end of the chute. It was two weeks Tuesday since it was started, and Sunday afternoon the wheel was set in place and coupled to the rest of the machinery. There was no way of knowing just how much speed and power would be developed on the combination of automobile parts, belted to an old Buick generator, but, believe it or not, in spite of a loose pulley that was rubbing badly against a steel collar on the end of a transmission, eight amperes were produced by the generator. Allowing for loss in transmission, and by storing in a battery, that is almost a thousand watt hours every 24 hours. There is plenty of work to be done on the dam, machinery, and putting the "juice" in the house, but there is no reason to believe that it cannot be done. Eventually, I think it can be made to work very efficiently, and to do a lot of odd jobs, besides providing lights and radio.

Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Wade and family of Detroit spent the week end at their cottage on the AuGres. Three friends are also spending the week at the cottage. Eighteen people are expected to spend the week end and Labor Day there. A trap shoot and softball diamond have been built to provide entertainment.

Mrs. Jess Myers and daughter, Dorothy, spent the week end here and at the home of Mrs. Clara Sherman.

Many trout are beginning to gather in the deeper water above Boulder Dam, Jr., much to the delight of the trout fishermen.

For the first time since May, "plunkers" (worm fishermen) have been able to get more trout than those who toss the flies. This is due to the high water and cool weather of the past week.

Cats of the World

Cats the world over are chiefly distinguished by variations in size, color and quality of hair, though the Isle of Man has a tailless, and China a hairless, variety.

Penniless Widows Rented

Almost up to the 19th century in Massachusetts, penniless widows were rented out as servants for a year at a time to the highest bidder, sometimes for as little as 18 cents a year, their only compensation being room and board, because the state could not afford a poorhouse.—R. C. Dickey, Nashua, N. H., in Collier's Weekly.

Salt-peter Mines

There is an Illinois statute which makes it a criminal offense to work a salt-peter cave without protecting it from the approach of cattle by erecting a fence. Historians may recall that salt-peter (potassium nitrate) mines at one time were necessary if our pioneer ancestors were kept supplied with the all important gunpowder.

Festival of Midsummer

In pagan times Germany celebrated the festival of Midsummer, or "Sonnenwendfest," as the occasion when day triumphed over night, light over dark, the forces of good over evil, and today many superstitions are still observed. A young couple expecting to be married soon must either jump through the wheel of fire or over a bonfire, so that their union will be a happy one. In some sections, a few handfuls of grain are thrown into the flames, a souvenir of the old custom of offering a sacrifice to the sun.

Good in Something

Jud Tunkins says he likes a weather report. When it brings bad news it doesn't get you agitated by speeches trying to convince you that it's the fault of somebody in particular.

SYNOPSIS

In 1785 Saul Pattern of Virginia came into the beautiful virgin country of the Big Sandy valley in Kentucky. Chief of the perils were the Shawnees, who ever-encroaching whites. From a huge pinnacle Saul gazed upon the fat bottoms and the endless acres of forest in its primeval quietude at the mouth of the Wolfpen, and felt an eagerness to possess it, declaring it a place fit for a man to LIVE in. 23 years later he returned with Barton, his fifteen-year-old son, and built a rude cabin. In Saul's absence the Indians attacked Barton and wounded him so badly Saul was forced to return with him to Virginia. In 1796, when it was reasonably safe, Saul returned with his family and a patent for 4,000 acres, this time to stay. He added to the cabin, planted crops and fattened his stock on the rich meadows. Soon other settlers arrived. A century later, in the spring of 1885, we find Cynthia Pattern, of the fifth generation following Saul, perched on the pinnacle from which her great-great-grandfather had first viewed the Wolfpen Bottoms. The valleys, heretofore untouched by the waves of change sweeping the Republic, are at last beginning to feel that restless surge. Her dad, Sparrel, and her brothers, Jesse, Jasper and Abrael, convert the old water-wheeled mill to steam power. Cynthia feels that something out of the past has been buried with Saul. Cynthia is a pretty and imaginative miss in her late teens, who often re-created Saul and her other forbears, and fancied them still living. Sparrel proudly brings home the first meal out of the steam mill, and Julia, his wife, is pleased. Generation after generation has added comforts and conveniences to Saul's homestead and Sparrel has not stirred. The family goes easily into the work of the new season, due to the simplicity of life designed long ago on the Wolfpen. Joy is abundant. Jesse plans to study law. A stranger, Shellenberger by name, comes to Wolfpen. Sparrel refuses his offer. Shellenberger tells of progress in the outside world. With the advent of Shellenberger some intangible disturbing alteration seems to affect the atmosphere of Wolfpen. Sparrel decides to sell timber land to Shellenberger. Jesse arranges to study law with Tandy Morgan.

"I've seen a plenty, and a whole lot more than anybody can see all at one time. But I'll look at it some more when I'm busy around the house. A body has to look in as well as out to see things."

Doug looked out at her in the puzzled incomprehension he so often regarded her with, and then shifted his eyes to the mule, patting her neck.

"I just didn't allow to see you down here," he said.

"Well, anyway I ought to be getting back. I didn't think about it being so far along into the evening. Daddy and the boys will be getting in about dark."

She arose from the roots and stepped out into the path where the sun caught the pink in her cheeks and the luster in her black hair, and Doug's eyes were frankly upon her.

"Is Sparrel over at town?"

"Yes, early this morning."

"I wanted to see him. Ma's got her pains around her heart again, she says, and she's right poorly again this evening. She needs some of Sparrel's medicine."

"I don't know whether he's got any or not, but Mother knows, and Daddy will be along soon. Come on up to the house and wait and eat with us."

"There Ain't Nobody There With Her Right Now."

"I don't reckon I can do that. I'll have to be getting back. There ain't nobody there with her right now."

They walked up the path together, leading his animal.

"You folks about got all your crops in?" Doug asked.

"They're about all in now, I guess. How are your crops?"

"I got the lower part of Buzzard to put in yet and some late melons down by the barn there by the creek."

They went through the gate into the lower orchard and Doug closed it.

"I'm getting things up and in pretty good shape again around the place," Doug said. "I'm figuring on a new kitchen back of the house and a covered-over porch between like down at Connoley's."

"I guess your mother'll like that."

"I reckon she will, but I wasn't just thinking of her by herself, and he was full of surprise at hearing himself say a thing he didn't know he was going to say. Doug was twenty. He had lived all his years on the Mason place joining Sparrel Pattern on one side of Gannon. Cynthia saw the flush on his face without turning to look toward him. She made no answer but to continue to walk easily by his side on the edge of Long Bottom.

"I've got something nobody knows about, and I've a mind to tell you what it is."

"I won't have any talk on it, Doug, if you want to tell me."

"I got a big 'seng patch set out and they're coming up, hundreds of them. I went out and gathered up seeds out of the berries last fall and planted them in that open spot at the head of Buzzard. I ought to have a sight of money out of them if the price stays up 'til the drover comes."

"I'm proud you thought of raising it instead of going all over the hills hunting for it."

Doug threw the bridle reins over a paling, and then walked on through the barn-lot by Cynthia's side. They went through the gate by the well into the yard. Julia was coming around the house wearing her great calmness which seemed to partake of the timeless alteration of evening and morning in this valley surrounded and protected by thick acres of trees. She greeted Doug with a soft kindness and inquired of his mother.

"I'll just see if I can't find some of Sparrel's medicine for her," she said.

In the small pantry-like room behind the kitchen where Sparrel kept some of his pharmacy, she found a bottle of brown medicine smelling pungently of sassafras and foxglove and marked in Sparrel's neat penmanship, "Dropsy—Heart pains."

"You better stay and eat with us," Julia said. "Sparrel and the boys'll be along soon now, and Abrael's out milking."

"I don't guess I can tonight. I ought to be getting back now."

"Well, you be sure and let us know how your mother gets along, and I'll tell Sparrel when he comes."

"I'm sure much obliged to you all," Doug said.

Lingering at the gate, Cynthia watched the evening absorb him as the morning had effaced Sparrel and taken away Jesse, and she felt that the day had been long and disturbingly strange. She watered the sheep, tasting the difference in the atmosphere of the place as the restlessness of evening surged over all things with the portent of night with its quiet and its restoration. Then she went back to the kitchen to help with the supper.

When Cynthia heard through the dusk the steps of Abrael as he went into the spring-house with the milk, and then the sound of Sparrel and the boys on the porch, she began to feel that the balance was almost restored as before.

But as she lay that night thinking over the day and its moods, and of the brief account of Sparrel's meeting with Shellenberger and their plans for surveying the place, she knew that all was not quite as before. And as she fell asleep she heard the restless voice of the disturbed timberland sighing over the leaves of the forests and running down into the roots and hiding there twisted between the leaf-mold and the sand.

The days that followed Sparrel's journey to town were tense, and the self-contained peace and quiet of the familiar routine were interrupted by an unfamiliar consciousness of suspense. Cynthia felt it acutely as she sat in the weaving-room with a shuttle of thread in her lap going over the brief account Sparrel and the boys had given of their day in Pikeville.

"It has made a difference in everybody, seems like. Daddy tries to be just the same but you can see it on his mind. Jasper is thinking about Jane Burden all right, but he won't ever say anything to anybody. Abrael is nervous and wants the strange men to hurry and come in here. Jesse is all wrapped up in his law book and puzzling all the time over the hard words. Mother spends hours in her garden tapping the earth with her hoe and not showing that anything is any different, but that is her way and she makes everything seem all right as it is. I'll be right glad when Daddy gets his herbs mixed up for me to take down to Mason's and feel the Finemare move under my legs."

Julia placed two loaves of her freshly baked wheat bread in the round basket and Sparrel put in a large bottle of his compound.

"And tell her if she needs anything to just tell you," Julia said.

Cynthia went down to the barn. The Finemare tidily brushed and carried was already saddled and waiting under the shed by the stile block. She set the basket on the step and went into the barn to look for Jesse. She found him in the harness-room astride a saddle on a wooden frame by the open window bending over his law book propped against the pommel of the saddle.

"This is the way we farm on Wolf-pen this spring," Cynthia said.

Jesse was startled at the sound of her voice and almost dropped the Blackstone. "I was just reading a page or two of law. The Finemare's all saddled for you."

"I saw. Much obliged to you, Jesse, for doing it. You looked like it was right hard reading."

"It is awful hard some places, and I got to hunt up lots of words in Dad's dictionary. See here now: 'This law of nature, being coeval with mankind, and dictated by God himself, is of course superior in obligation to any other.' What is 'coeval'? Do you know?"

"Not if it don't mean as evil as mankind."

"No, it couldn't be that. That would make the law be evil, don't you see? And then it says 'in order to apply this to the particular exigencies of each individual.' Wonder what an individual's 'exigencies' are?"

"I don't know, Jesse. That's hard. But lawyers have to know lots of big words about simple things. You'll have to ask Tandy Morgan. But it is nice you're reading about it. Do you know when the surveyors are coming?"

She Was Moved by the Eagerness in His Eyes and the Pleading in His Voice.

"Just any time now."

Jesse laid the book on the shelf above the saddle rack and went with Cynthia to the shed to unhitch the Finemare. Cynthia arranged herself on the red and green carpet-covered side-saddle, her right knee in the leather rest, and her full blue homespun skirt spread carefully over her feet. Jesse handed her the basket and opened the gate.

"Are you going to see Sarah Mason or Doug?" Jesse asked, lifting his eyebrows.

"I'm taking medicine to Sarah, and I reckon he'll be out in a hollow plowing like a body ought to be on a day like this," Cynthia said, riding off.

She rode smoothly in rhythm with the movement of the Finemare, down Wolfpen and into Gannon Creek at the ford, listening to the liquid sounds of the horse hoofs against the boulders under the water, feeling the mare stretch out her neck and nose to gain freedom from the bridle to drink at leisure under the shadow of the Pinnacle.

The Mason place was just off the road behind a weathered paling fence. Cynthia left the Finemare under the elm tree by the gate. The yard was full of chickens. She found Sarah on the back porch which connected the old house with the summer kitchen. The floor was laid but the roof was unfinished.

"Oh, for land's sakes, it's you, Cynthia," Sarah began, painfully drawing her bare and swollen ankles under her faded dress. She was a heavy woman, and her flabby face was lined with work and suffering. Her agitation and distress at the mere sight of a kind neighbor bearing gifts of medicine and fresh wheat bread sent a twist through Cynthia's stomach and she suffered with her.

"Law, Cynthia, I'm that glad to see you I have to cry. Why, it's been months since I saw you, hain't it, and I can't get out any more and Hesse had to go over to help out at Elley's a spell and Doug's head over heels in work and everybody's busy with the planting and I can't get around to do anything or see anybody and I get so lonesome some days. And I get to thinking about Grier dropping dead in the oats patch—it's five year come July—and wondering why the good Lord willed it that way. It's been hard since then with me down and all, but Doug took right a-hold just like he was a man and not a fifteen-year-old boy and he's done fine. He'll go for Julia's wheat bread; we don't have none in the house. How's Julia and all the folks and how's her flowers this year? It's been an early spring and not much danger of more frost is there?"

Sarah paused to wipe the last of her tears. Cynthia put from her mind the thought of deformity and pain, and looked into the lonely heart of Sarah Mason. She selected one of the questions, and said with compassion, "Her garden looks just fine this year. How is Elley getting along now?"

But she did not hear the story of Elley's stomach trouble since the last baby was born. She was gazing across the yard, following her own reflection. "The grass is awful long and bending over and needs a sickle in it. Sarah Mason asked about Mother's flowers because she's not able to plant any. The garden looks bare. The meadow and meadow needs a sickle in it. The meadow place always smells musty, somehow, like it wasn't happy in its life. It's not just because Grier Mason nor Doug never built a mill or a brick kiln or a dyeing vat or a smooth finished loom for their women. It's just the way one place differs from another the way people do. Maybe Grier Mason dropping dead cradling oats and Sarah full of misery and Elley's trouble and Doug hard working got settled in down here and won't leave. I don't think I could ever marry Doug and come to this place to live. Maybe if I actually loved him. He'll make a fine place, but it seems like it squeezes some good part clean out of a body, even just sitting here in the . . . I must be listening to Sarah when she's talking to me."

"A body has to bear what's put upon them. He knows what's best for us. Doug's been making this porch in the evenings. He's such a good boy." She dabbed her eyes.

"Did the medicine help you any?" Cynthia asked.

"It helps a sight. I don't know what we'd do on this creek if we didn't have Sparrel to look after us."

"Mother said tell you if there was anything she could do." She got up and put the empty basket over her arm.

"Much obliged. You're not going back a'ready, Cynthia, so soon?"

"I ought to get back now."

"Doug, he'll be put out to hear you've been here and him not see you. He thinks a sight of you, Cynthia, and that's plain."

"I just rode down a minute to see how you were and bring the medicine."

Cynthia listened politely for a time to the urgings of Sarah Mason, and when she could she said a final good-by.

The soft thump of the horse's hoofs in the moist earth soon established a new rhythm in her soul and she emerged from the feeling of oppression which had engulfed her before the pained and weeping face of Sarah Mason.

Doug was watering his mules in a little pool in the branch at the mouth of Buzzard Hollow. In a flush of joy he called out to Cynthia. His voice took form slowly and waited an instant before she could recognize it as something outside of her own thought.

"Why, howdy, Doug."

"Where you been down our way?"

"To your house to take some things to your mother."

"You don't need to be rushing right back so soon."

"I guess I'll have to be getting back this time."

Doug had left his mules to drink and had come down to the road. Cynthia observed that his face was older than twenty years, and already heavily tanned. He was barefoot. He rubbed the nose of the Finemare.

"She's a beauty," he said.

"How you getting on with your plowing?" Cynthia asked.

"I got all the low bottoms done now."

"I was captivated by her as she sat above him on the side of the Finemare, her knee pushing out the blue twill of her skirt which spread neatly to the tip of her shoe in the stirrup, the round basket on her left arm, her dark hair lustrous under the straw hat, her pink skin glowing under her eyes."

"You're about the purest thing I ever saw on a horse, Cynthia," he said very simply.

"Why, Doug, you mustn't say any such a thing."

"I want to show you that 'seng bed I told you about. It's just a little step. You don't even have to get down. It's right around the bend."

She was moved by the eagerness in his eyes and the pleading in his voice. "Well, just for a minute. I must be getting back."

She slid lightly from the saddle. The mules had finished drinking. Doug slapped one of them on the rump, urging it out of the path. Doug led Cynthia and the Finemare up Buzzard to his 'seng bed."

"There it is," he said with pride.

It lay like a still pool at the abrupt head of the hollow, a flat place at the feet of the steep hills which closed in upon it in the shape of a horseshoe. A thread of water dripped over a green rock cliff from the upper reaches of the gully. It trickled around the edge of the 'seng patch into Buzzard branch and ran on down the hollow into Gannon Creek. Hazel bushes, laurel and spicewood shrubs were thick around its edges. The odors of muggy loam and rotting leaves and of balsam and ground pine on the unsunned slopes of the mountains were tossed together by a light wind in the bowl of the hollow and lay heavy on the air. Cynthia gave a little cry of surprise.

"It's a purty place, Doug."

"They're sprouting fine. Look."

He raked away the leaves and exposed the pale olive plumules springing vigorously out of their forked roots and crowding a passage into the upper air.

"They're fine plants. When did you make it?"

"Last fall. It's too wet and shady for corn anyway, so I just got the idea to plant 'seng berry seeds. I'll make a sight of money off of this patch," he said with confidence.

Cynthia's eyes wandered over the lovely spot and then turned upon Doug standing with his hand on the leg-rest of her saddle.

"I hope you do. It's getting right scarce in the hills."

"If I can make me some ready money I want to ask you something, Cynthia."

"It's a good bed. I must be getting back now. I hope your mother gets all right."

"It ain't that so much. You don't know how it is with all your folks up on Wolfpen to work all by yourself all the time. It's nice to see you and have you look at my patch and not anybody else know about it."

"It's fine and I won't make any mention of it."

She turned away and they went back down the hollow. She mounted the saddle from a fallen willow. Doug handed her the basket, and she smoothed her skirt over her legs, adjusting her knee in the rest, thinking: "He looks up at me nearly as sad-eyed as Sarah, but I don't feel anything only sorry and I wish I was already gone now for there isn't anything to say to him staring up like that."

"I must go. You come up when you can."

"I will. You come back."

The Finemare stepped impatiently off in a running walk which carried Cynthia quickly and without jostle up Gannon toward Wolfpen while Doug followed after her with his eyes, seeing the blue dress vibrating over her arched knee long after she was gone.

CHAPTER VII

The days passed but everybody continued to be restless. Julia had caught up with her garden now, and even she was affected beneath her outward calm.

At the supper table she said casually: "I've a mind to go over to Jenny's tomorrow and stay all night. The men will be coming in soon and we'll be tied down a right smart while they're here."

"That's so, Julia," Sparrel said. "Somebody ought to go over there."

In the early morning Sparrel handed her into the saddle, and the boys opened the gate, watching her ride.

Cynthia waved farewell from the yard. "It seems the natural way of things for menfolk to be going away somewhere. But when Mother ever goes off by herself, Daddy and the boys look glum all day. I'd like to ride as straight and easy on a side-saddle as Mother can. She does everything quiet and easy but I get hot and hurried."

Julia's absences from the place were so infrequent that the house, the yard, the garden all preserved in consequence a more profound silence.

The day was hot and sultry. All the crispness of the mornings was gone in mid-May. When Cynthia built the supper fire in the stove and put the sweet potatoes to bake, the heat filled up the kitchen for the first time in that year. She laid off the neat blue twill dress for the coolness of an old and faded brown calico. "It's an ugly old thing but it's nice and cool to cook in. The first hot days always tire a body out so, I'd just as soon sit down on the porch and not cook any hot supper if it wasn't for the men."

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By REV. HAROLD L. LINDQUIST, Dean of the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago. © Western Newspaper Union.

Lesson for September 6 TURNING TO THE GENTILES

LESSON TEXT—Acts 14:8-13, 19, 20; Romans 10:8-15.

GOLDEN TEXT—I have set thee for a light of the Gentiles, that thou shouldst be for salvation unto the uttermost part of the earth. Acts 13:47.

PRIMARY TOPIC—What Happened in Lystra.

JUNIOR TOPIC—When the Gospel Came to Lystra.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Trials and Triumphs of Missionaries.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Christianity Facing Other Religions.

The progress of the first missionary journey into gentile territory had brought Paul and Barnabas from Cyprus to Antioch of Pisidia in Asia Minor, where Paul preached with great power. Persecution by leading Jews then led them to go on to Iconium where they tarried for a long time preaching "the word of grace" in the face of many difficulties. Next they came to Lystra, in which city we consider first the experiences of

I. The Messengers (Acts 14:8-13, 19, 20).

They were immediately faced with the case of a man crippled from birth—outwardly hopeless, but having that inward faith which Paul at once recognized. He speaks, and God works in mighty

1. Power (vv. 8-10).

Faith releases the unlimited power of an infinite God. It did in Lystra almost nineteen hundred years ago. It does today wherever men believe God. The miracle of healing which took place created a sensation which resulted in great

2. Popularity (vv. 11-13).

The heathen people were looking for an incarnation of their gods. The supreme god in their mythology was Jupiter, and his chief attendant was Mercury. In Paul and Barnabas they thought they saw these two gods, and began to give them acclaim and honor.

The flesh loves popularity. Few temptations are so appealing and so treacherous to the Christian worker as a desire for popularity. Paul and Barnabas might have argued that such public esteem would help them in their later proclamation of the gospel. Or they might have fallen into the specious fallacy of those who say that the approach to the heathen is by way of an appreciation of their religions, and by an adaptation of gospel truth to their philosophies.

True servants of God like Paul and Barnabas were not to be misled into either of these pitfalls. They vehemently turn away the false popularity and earnestly urge the people to "turn from these vanities to the living God." Such faithful and self-denying witness to the gospel is greatly needed.

There followed at once a startling change in the attitude of the people. The fanatical Gentiles are joined and stirred up by equally fanatical Jews who had followed the missionaries, and we soon find them meeting

3. Persecution (vv. 19, 20).

Fickle and short-lived is popularity with men. Let us labor to please God rather than men.

Paul was stoned and left for dead. But God had not forgotten him. He never forsakes his own. It is believed by many that even while being stoned and near to death, Paul was having the experience which no other man ever had, and which he describes in II Cor. 12:2-5. Be that as it may, God miraculously brings him to life and full vigor at once, and the messengers go on their way to Derbe. As they continue their ministry we turn aside for a glimpse into one of Paul's epistles to consider

II. The Message (Rom. 10:8-15).

The carrier of a message is important, but of far greater import is the message that he carries. The word which Paul preached, and which you and I must teach and preach if we are faithful to our calling is "the word of faith." It is the glorious good news that "Whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved."

Reader, have you called on his name? Have you admitted your need of salvation, and in your earnest desire to be saved have you abandoned every trust in self-righteousness or self-improvement and believed on him in your heart as your personal Saviour? If not, "Now is the day of salvation." If you have, it is your privilege and your duty to confess him "with the mouth," telling everywhere by faithful life and testimony that Jesus still saves.

The Getting of Wisdom

True wisdom is a thing very extraordinary. Happy are they that have it; and next to them, not those many that think they have it, but those few that are sensible of their own defects and imperfections, and know that they have it not.—Tillotson.

Money and Health

Money is the thing most envied, but the least enjoyed. Health is the thing most enjoyed, but the least envied.—Colton.

Behold! the New Fall Hats Arrive!

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

THE early fall hats thrill with exciting new silhouettes that fairly make you gasp with their daring. No style is too dizzy, no media too extreme to have place in the smart millinery picture.

In Paris, women of fashion are wearing tiny skull-cap turbans of black silk velvet that flaunt enormous bows at the side or on the forehead. You will be seeing these bow turbans all over town.

Intricate manipulation is the key to high style throughout all millinery for fall and winter. It is a well-known fact that rich fabric and ingenious manipulation always go hand in hand. Which leads us to say that luxurious silk weaves are adding big interest to hats appearing on the autumn style horizon. When choosing your first autumn chapeau look for models in the new silk satins, the velvets in rich glowing color, silk taffetas and the handsome deep-toned velours and duvetyns such as go to make up ultra chic headgear.

The newer shapes have rolling brims with crowns built up to a peak, for the trend is decidedly toward tall peaked and conical effects. See one such shown to the left below in the illustration. It is of spruce green silk velvet covered with fine vertical stitching. You'll see lots of stitching on best-looking hats this fall. Wear this type hat with your tailored silk or sheer wool daytime frocks or suits.

Heavy silk velvets of the Lyons class are being made up in models with sports-type brims. Often these velvets are combined with silk faille as manipulated for the front of the hat to right at top in the group. This type of hat you can wear equally well with tailored silk dresses or with wool dresses of smart "town" character.

It's when you are choosing a hat to go with your best afternoon or cocktail costume that you can let yourself go in the matter of silk millinery. Not only are there the afore-mentioned bow-trimmed skull caps in wide profusion but variations of the popular beret are shown together with unique types such as the model centered below. The back of its tiny crown is of black felt and the front of rust silk velvet draped softly into an ascending point in front — a perfect complement to your afternoon outfit.

This will be a season of color. Millinery will more than ever tie up with colors of the costume. Of course black will be in the spotlight. A large per cent of French wines, rich reds and aubergine purple will be worn. Spruce green is a noted color and olive will be a highlight novelty. All browns will be good in lighter casts. Bordeaux, a wine brown, is also of prime importance.

As to sources of inspiration the Napoleonic influence has been almost universally adopted by leading modistes of Paris. Some sponsor the military style of the soldiers of France of that time. Others glean their inspiration from the conquering armies of North Africa while still others concentrate on the soft, luxurious influence of the gay society of Napoleon's reign.

The beret shown with striking quill as worn by the figure seated (note her velvety duvetyne tunic blouse) bespeaks the military trend. This model, called "Marching On" by its designer, is proving a favorite in high class shops that are showing it. The lady pictured with the vogueish be-curl'd coiffure and the blouse elaborated with applique in leaf design is wearing a becoming portrait beret designed by Marthe. It has new circle ribbon accents.

FALL SUEDE BAG

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

This stunning brown suede handbag has a decidedly "new" look as it visions what style-conscious spectator sports maidens will be carrying to the football game. Bags stitched to match gloves are also a fashion highlight in promise for fall and winter. The handbag pictured has deep inside pockets, staunch handles to swing by and the new jewel slide fastener providing a delicate golden chain across the top. The frock and hat are in soft gray as an effective contrast to brown.

Off-Shades

The fall dress and coat picture will be brightened by so-called off-shades. Particularly is this true of football spectator clothes. Foremost among these are rust, royal and purplish blue, moss green and maple sugar brown.

Contrasting Side Seams

Rochas outlines side seams of suits and evening gowns with bands of contrasting colors.

TREND TOWARD RICH HUES FOR AUTUMN

A new fashion season means a new brainstorm for the experts who must name the featured hues in women's attire. Every name must be suggestive of the hue but it has to be different from its predecessors, otherwise a woman will think it isn't new.

For the coming autumn season, the trend in shades is toward rich colorings and the names chosen show a tendency toward specific description rather than flowery language. Sage green, for example, looks exactly like the herb for which it is named. It has that same soft, grayed tone which is unusually lovely. Maple sugar brown is another new tone which has a pale, subdued cast that is different from the browns usually appearing in the autumn.

Suit Simplicity Subtle and Therefore Expensive

Simple suits are always in demand, but the simplicity of such suits is subtle and therefore always expensive. Chanel has created a beauty which appears for summer in lightweight gray flannel, and for early autumn wear in smooth navy wool. The jacket, with one-button fastening at the waist, is slightly fitted in front and has a straight back. On one of the wide-stitched revers is a slit pocket that holds a hankie. There is a tiny turnback cuff that continues from a set-in seamed panel with three buttons.

Heel Taps

Although many of fashion's high priests claim that flats and low-heeled evening slippers are definitely out, they refuse to take the count, according to the latest style news from Paris.

FLOYD GIBBONS

ADVENTURERS CLUB

Hello Everybody

"The Skulls and the Altar"

By FLOYD GIBBONS.

AN' it's a yarn from old Ireland we're havin' today, an' it'll be Jack Boyd of New York city, that's a-tellin' of it. It happened in November, 1916, long before Jack was ever after comin' to this country, and when he was on a ten-day leave from the trenches of France an' havin' a bit of a dhrink at a pub in the village of Moyno.

In any other country, Jack might have finished his drink and gone his way. But there's something about the "ould sod" that makes it a favorite roosting place for Old Lady Adventure. Maybe the gal was born there.

Anyway, she keeps things humming in that neck of the woods. It's a rare irishman that can go through a day without having something happen to him.

At a table on the other side of the room were two men. They looked like prosperous farmers—landed gentry they call them over there on the other side—and they had stopped talking a couple of times to stare at Jack. Jack didn't know either one of them. He was visiting some friends and had never been in the neighborhood before. But after a while one of the men came walking over to his table.

John and Pat Were a Couple of Old Sports.

The men's names, Jack learned later, were John and Pat. This one was John. He sat down and asked Jack if he'd just come from France. Jack said he had. And the next remark sort of took Jack by surprise. "How would you like to earn ten pounds?" John asked him.

John and Pat looked like a couple of old sports but just the same, ten pounds is a lot of money in Ireland. Jack said he'd make no answer until he knew what he had to do to earn the money. Then sporty old John unfolded as fantastic a set of conditions as ever he had heard in his life.

"Two miles up the river," John said, "there is an old deserted abbey, undermined with caves. There's a tower in the middle of it, about a hundred feet high. At the bottom of that tower is a room with an altar in it. The good monks used to pray there, but since Cromwell's time the abbey has been abandoned, and now it is used as a burial place.

Sentinels of the Ruined Abbey Were the Dead.

"At the foot of that altar there are six human skulls. I want to know if you have the courage to go there tonight at one o'clock, get one of those skulls and bring it here to me tomorrow. That's all you've got to do," John said—and then he looked sort of queerly at Jack as he added, "There are no keepers or watchmen, and nobody will know what has happened—but the Dead."

Two Pale Yellow Lights Were Dancing About the Altar.

But the Dead! Jack didn't like the way he said that. But ten pounds was a lot of money. It would buy him many a pack of fags—many a bottle of cognac—when he got back to the front. He looked John straight in the eye. "Are you on the level?" he asked. "I am," said John. "All right," said Jack, "I'll do it." That night Jack took his service revolver and started for the abbey. He reached it about quarter of one. At one o'clock sharp he swung aside the rusty old gate and made his way through dank, dark passages to the room below the tower.

Weird Lights Flash in the Abandoned Tomb.

It was spooky in there with the moonlight showing through the cracks and casting weird shadows on the gray stone walls. For the first time in his life he found himself wondering if maybe there wasn't some truth in ghost stories.

He was walking toward the altar, when suddenly he saw something that froze him stiff in his tracks. Two pale yellow lights, about the size of plates were dancing about the altar. "My hair stood up," he says, "and my courage ran out of me like water out of a bottle. A bat flicked my face, and I almost dropped my gun. Trembling like a leaf I sat down on a grave and watched those lights dance. Then I coughed, and in two seconds I heard that same cough in another part of the abbey." Jack walked firmly toward the altar. He wasn't afraid of anything in the world now. There was only one light playing about now. The other was on his face.

Sepulchral Voice Warns Intruder Away.

He raised his gun, rested it on his left forearm and took careful aim at the beam that was shining in his eyes. He pulled the trigger twice. There were two sharp cracks—a terrible clatter of broken glass—a loud, reverberating echo. He thought, "Now is my time," and bent to pick up one of the skulls. Suddenly a hollow voice said: "LEAVE THAT ALONE. IT DOESN'T BELONG TO YOU!"

For an instant Jack began to tremble again. He put down the skull and picked up another. "LEAVE THAT ALONE," the voice repeated. "IT DOESN'T BELONG TO YOU!" He picked up three more. Each time that warning voice.

"But by this time," says Jack, "I was getting mad. I shouted out, 'To hell with you, whoever you are. They don't belong to you either.' And with that I picked up the sixth skull and walked toward the gate, firing right and left from my revolver till it was empty."

It Was Just a Merry Prank of John and Pat.

If the story had ended there, Jack wouldn't have believed it himself. Two or three times on the way home he pinched himself to see if he was dreaming. But the next day when he went with the skull to the pub, there were John and Pat. John's right hand was in a bandage, and he grinned and tossed Jack a ten pound note.

"Pat and I had a hundred pound bet," he said, "that no man would take a skull from that altar. When you took us up we both hid in the abbey.

"We had two mirrors that reflected the moonlight, and that's what made those dancing beams. But I didn't figure on your shooting, son. You drilled me right through the palm of the hand. Anyhow, you won me a hundred pounds. Good-by, son, and good luck to you."

"Bumping," Boat Racing

More than a hundred years ago the British evolved a type of boat racing which is peculiar to their own country. This is called "bumping." It began in 1815 at Oxford and was later copied by Cambridge and other universities and schools. The reason for this type of race was that not many of the rivers going through college towns were wide enough for several boats to race alongside. The solution was to develop some sort of single-file racing which would be fair to every boat taking part.

History of Yarmouth

The history of Yarmouth, southwest gateway to Nova Scotia, is bound up in the history of the sea, and it goes back far beyond the days when white men began settling in the new world in the sixteenth century, for at Yarmouth is a Runic stone, which scholars say was inscribed in 1001 by Lief Erikson. The inscription on this stone is interpreted as reading, "Lief to Eric Raises" (this monument), Lief Erikson having dedicated it to his father, Erik the Red, ruler of Greenland.

The Problems of Parents—

Should a Woman Spank Her Eighteen-Year-Old Son in Jail?

"WHAT do you think of the woman who spanks her eighteen-year-old son in jail?"

"This is what the papers say: 'Mrs. — went to the city jail today and administered a spanking to her eighteen-year-old son, who was arrested for stealing. Mrs. — walked into the police station and asked permission to give him a good spanking. The police were agreeable and she went to his cell, took his belt and swung it at least fifty times. The son said he ran away from home two days ago because of previous spanking.'

"It seems to me its rather late in the day for her to start spanking. What do you say to it—?"

This question was put to a well-known writer on subjects pertaining to women, who answers as follows:

I always hesitate to speak arbitrarily about the problems of any parent, knowing, as we usually do so little of the real truth of what they may have to contend with. And even in the case of the obviously misguided mother of which our friend writes, my first impulse is one of sympathy—the thought of how much she must have gone through with this son to so make her lose all balance. For that she certainly has. Even if her son were a character (and they are very rare, mothers,) who seemed to require physical force as a last resort to his discipline, its failure to the age of eighteen proves quite obviously its uselessness in his case.

I do not believe in spanking—at any age. I believe that given normal mentality and ordinarily decent character leanings, a child can be best disciplined by appealing to his finer qualities.

Children, like grown-ups, appreciate respect and try to be worthy of it. They are sensitive to reputation and try to live up to it. Many a black sheep was not born black but made black by being painted so. And many a fine character has been developed and strengthened by confidence and belief in him.

Certainly children need punishment. But the most efficacious punishment is not that administered in a spirit of revenge or parental spite for the annoyance caused by the child; it is the punishment administered in the spirit of necessity, to "help you to remember" that that particular temptation is an enemy. A woman I know made a practice of consulting her four or five-year-old son as to the punishment suitable for certain misdemeanors—that is one he would feel sufficiently to help him to remember. And that child has developed the ability for self-discipline which will make parental chastisement unnecessary long before he is eighteen.

The same mother seemed to have extreme ideas of appealing to the child's strength. The day he first entered school she spoke to him like this: "I am doing my best to help you to live up to the fine qualities in you. If you do anything to be ashamed of I shall feel a shortcoming in myself. But I know you won't; I know I can trust you. Always remember that you are strong in body, strong in mind and strong in character, and it is up to you to live up to those gifts of God by setting a good example." So far the boy has done that. And I know of no better advice to give any parent.

stenography; twelfth grade—English, physics, economics, typewriting, sten-ography, and music. In addition to the regular curriculum outlined above, opportunity for credit will be given in extra-curricular activities.
 Among these activities are baseball, glee club, band, and orchestra. All students are urged to select four subjects. It is advisable to do good work in four subjects rather than poor work in five. And, on the other hand, all should make good use of the time spent in school, and so all are urged not to take less than four subjects.

It is self evident that because of change in subject matter and method of presentation, it is necessary to eventually change any text in use. Authors tend to rewrite their books every few years in order to keep their works in competition with others, and so it becomes impossible to secure new copies of the old editions. It has been the policy of the local school for the past few years to change a few books each year and thus to cause no financial hardship. New geographies will be used this year in the fifth and seventh grades, and a new edition of the sixth grade history. Workbooks only will be used in the third grade, fifth grade, and seventh grade arithmetic classes. A revised Gregg manual will be used in the stenog-raphy course offered to the eleventh and twelfth graders, and as a consequence it will be impossible for any member of this class to use the older edition which has been used in previous years.

Torpedoes Under Water
 A submarine is armed with torpedoes which can be fired while submerged, aim being taken by means of a peris-
 cope, which alone is visible to the surface craft being attacked. When a torpedo is fired from a submarine, the outer door of the torpedo tube opens and water pours in up to the inside door of the tube. In order to reload the tube the outer door is closed, the inner door opened and the water in the tube rushes into the bilges of the submarine and is pumped out.

 cal business. My wife and I own and operate a farm of 100 acres, three miles east of West Branch, giving employment to very desirable tenants.
 We are both members of the Ogemaw County Grange. I have the encouragement of the West Branch Chamber of Commerce, the American Legion Post at West Branch and the confidence and support of every business institution in the city. Have never been an office seeker, and at this time I am making no promises, and wish to be free from any en-
