"Mr. Deeds Goes To Town" Is Hailed By Film Critics

"Mr. Deeds Goes To Town," Frank Capra's newest romantic comedy for Columbia, starring Gary Cooper and featuring Jean Arthur, will be shown Sunday and Monday, September 13 and 14, at the Rivola Theatre, Tawas City. The story of Mr. Deeds and his $20,000,000 spending spree has been acclaimed by the critics as the fastest, funniest entertainment in years.

George Bancroft, Lionel Stander, Douglas Dumbrille, H. B. Warner and Mme. Matzenauer are prominently cast in supporting roles. Robert Riskin, academy award winner for his screen version of "It Happened One Night," wrote the screen play from a story by Clarence Budington Kelland.

SYSTEM WILL BE FINISHED IN 60 DAYS

Patrons Will Receive Free Connections To Lot Lines

Preliminary work was started Tuesday morning on the construction of Tawas City's new water works system. A large amount of material and excavating machinery arrived during the week and actual construction will begin near the Detroit & Mackinac Railroad shops on Lake street immediately. L. W. Wells of Saginaw has the contract for building the distribution system. City officials and contractor hope to have the system in operation within 60 days.

Tawas City has an excellent source of pure water from two deep wells located near the athletic field in the first ward. These wells, in a ten-hour test, produced more than 450 gallons per minute. The water is soft and will be suitable for domestic and industrial purposes.

The system will cost $59,000, of which $26,590 is a grant from the Federal government. The balance is financed by two bond issues with payments arranged so that they can be taken from the earnings of the system.

At a meeting of the common council held Tuesday evening it was voted to give patrons free service connections to lot line. This was done to encourage an early maximum use of the system. Patrons must apply within six months from opening of system to take advantage of this inducement. After that date $18.00 will be charged for the service connection. This is about the actual cost.

The service connection from water main to lot line will consist of copper pipe and fittings. This material was purchased Tuesday evening. Fire hydrants for the system, which arrived Thursday morning, were purchased from the Michigan Valve & (Turn to No. 2, Back Page)

Isoco One Of Leaders In Alfalfa Seed Production

Isoco county is one of the leading counties of Michigan in the production of alfalfa seed. The prevailing weather and climatic conditions in this section seem to be favorable for the production of this valuable crop and make Isoco one of the leading counties in its production. The alfalfa acreage has very rapidly increased upon its own merits, and will continue to increase in number of acres and popularity for several years to come.

Alfalfa acreage in Isoco county, according to census report figures, has grown from 52 acres in 1920 to 1,195 acres in 1930 and to 8,376 acres in 1935. This remarkable increase is not only true of Isoco county but of Michigan as a whole. In 1920 Michigan was credited with 74,000 acres and was not mentioned as an important state in alfalfa production. The ten leading states at that time were located west of the Mississippi river. By 1934 Michigan had grown to a position as one of the ten leading states and by 1935 it grew to the leading position in the United States. Michigan is now credited as having 1,040,000 acres devoted to the production of alfalfa.

Farmers of the county who have plenty of alfalfa hay on hand to supply the demands of their livestock through the coming seven months should consider the possibilities of the second crop for seed. First cutting seed crops were very spotted although in most sections of the county the second cutting is setting very well. A rank growth of alfalfa often works against a good setting of seed and much of the second growth is quite short but blossomed very heavily and has therefore set a large crop of seed in proportion to the vegetative growth.

Farmers are urged not to be in a hurry to cut their alfalfa seed as it is ripening very uneven this year, and in order to secure the best quality should withhold cutting until at least two-thirds of the seed pods have turned brown.

Preliminary crop reports indicate that western states are producing a rather limited seed supply this year and therefore should aid Isoco county farmers in paying their 1937 taxes with a minimum number of bushels of alfalfa seed.

Business Men's Club Met Tuesday Evening

The Tawas Business Men's club held their monthly dinner Tuesday evening at the Hotel Isoco, Tawas City. About 60 business and professional men were present.

After enjoying an excellent dinner those present heard interesting talks by Ralph M. Hunter, E. R. McLaughlin, Arthur Winston, C. A. Kohl and A. W. Beshgeloe of Midland on Kiwanis clubs.

R. G. Schreck and Warren T. Murphy, supervisor of the Huron National Forest, discussed the opening of the Tawas Game Refuge by the Department of Conservation to deer hunting this season. This game refuge was established through the efforts of Mr. Schreck while forest supervisor. He maintained that the refuge had been the means of increasing the deer population in this section of Michigan; that the large number of deer in the county was one of our principal attractions in our bid for tourists and sportsmen. He said that the opening of the refuge to hunting would be a damage to this section of Michigan.

Mr. Murphy said that the forestry department, after a browsing check had been made last winter, had recommended that the refuge be moved to the AuSable river or be discontinued. He said the check indicated that there was insufficient food for the present deer population. The Conservation Department decided to discontinue the refuge. Many of those present were of the opinion that last winter's weather was unusual and the check did not indicate a true picture of conditions in the deer territory.

Tawas Hemlock Games Postponed Last Sunday

Tawas and Hemlock were idle last Sunday, wet grounds forcing postponement of their games. Tawas was scheduled to play at Standish while West Branch was to meet the Hemlock crew at the Tawasville diamond.

Next Sunday, September 13, Tawas takes on the league-leading Marshall Packers team of Bay City at the local athletic field. This promises to be an exciting contest as the home lads are determined to give the Packers one of their stiffest tests. The locals will also be seeking revenge for a defeat handed them by Bay City early in the season. Come out and give the boys a hand.

Hemlock will journey to Pinconning for its game Sunday. The Hemlock club has already registered one victory over the Bay county boys this season and will attempt to add another on Sunday.

Slips Off Ledge Into Deep Water While Wading

Miss Jennie Johnson, age 18, of Snover, Michigan, was drowned in the AuSable river off the Orchard Park about seven miles west of Oscoda Sunday afternoon.

The girl had gone wading when she slipped off a ledge into the deep water. Her body was recovered by Floyd Miller of Bay City. Conservation officers Arthur G. Leitz and Norman Aldrich, who had been called to the scene, attempted artificial respiration until the arrival of U. S. coast guardsmen from Tawas Point, but their efforts were futile. Miss Johnson is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Johnson, and two brothers, Boyle and Eldon. The family had been camping at the park for about a week.

If elected I will vote for the new civil service bill advocated by the Governor. —Advertisement

Local Boy's Project Is One Of Best In State

According to H. R. Pettigrove, assistant professor of farm crops at Michigan State College, Raymond Cross, son of Harry Cross of Wilber township, has one of the best bean variety test projects in the state. Mr. Pettigrove, who visited the plot last Friday, said, "This is one of the best fields I have yet seen, and very well planned."

Raymond, a sophomore agricultural student in the East Tawas high school, is carrying on this project in cooperation with Michigan State College as his supervised home practice in farm crops. He is studying farm crops this fall and winter in high school and his project is part of his class work.

The college has between thirty-five and forty of these plots throughout the state for the purpose of comparing yields between six different kinds of field beans in all sections of Michigan. The college furnishes the seed, and Raymond furnishes the ground, the labor, and harvests the beans. Part of each variety is sent back to the college for disease, damage and yield tabulations. The beans are then returned to the cooperator who thus receives the entire crop.

Since the yields of white, red kidney and cranberry beans vary greatly in different parts of Michigan, the results from these test fields will give some valuable information acquired under controlled conditions that should prove useful in recommending bean varieties for the various counties.

Raymond has been supervised in the care of this project by R. E. Jewell, agricultural instructor in the East Tawas high school, and W. L. Finley, Isoco county agricultural agent. He has also received valuable aid and advice from his father.

Ruenger-Wesenick

A pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Wesenick in Reno township Saturday afternoon, September 5, when Miss Florina Ruenger of Wausau, Wisconsin, was united in marriage with their son, Lionel Wesenick. Rev. H. E. Davis, pastor of the Whittemore M. E. church, officiated.

The bride was beautifully attired in white satin trimmed with lace and orange blossoms, and carried a bouquet of white gladioli and tea roses. She was attended by Mrs. Loren Wesenick of Flint, who wore a gown of blue velvet and a corsage of yellow tea roses. Loren Wesenick attended the groom.

The bridal party took their places before an arch of evergreens and cut flowers to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march played by Mrs. Earl Daugharty after a vocal duet by the Misses Ruth and Alice Later.

After the ceremony a delicious wedding supper was served to sixty-three guests. The young couple will reside in Reno. Their many friends extend congratulations and best wishes.

Roosevelt Meets Landon and Other Governors in Drouth Relief Conference—Revised Budget Figures Put Debt at 34 Billions.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© Western Newspaper Union.

Gov. Landon

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT and Alf M. Landon, rival candidates for the Presidency, met in somewhat dramatic fashion in Des Moines, Iowa; but they met as chief executives of the United States and of Kansas respectively for the purpose of discussing plans for the relief of drouth stricken farmers. The conference, held at Mr. Roosevelt's suggestion and including the governors of the other states that had suffered especially from the drouth, began in the state house in Des Moines, where Governor Herring entertained the distinguished visitors at a luncheon. The President and Mr. Landon, it was said, did most of the talking at this repeat and exchanged a lot of joking remarks. Then the conference was started in earnest, each state being taken up in turn. When it came to Kansas, Governor Landon presented in manuscript form a definite plan, in large part the same as he submitted to Harry Hopkins two years ago.

Early in the evening Mr. Roosevelt entertained the governors at dinner aboard his special train. On that occasion he and Mr. Landon had their most intimate talk. Results of the conference, if any, were not made public at once, the President reserving announcement of his plans for a radio address.

HARRY RICHMAN, night club entertainer and aviator, and Dick Merrill, veteran pilot, successfully flew across the Atlantic in their monoplane Lady Peace, but failed to reach London, their destination, by some 200 miles. Running into a hard rainstorm over Ireland, they lost their way and were forced to land near Llandilo, Wales, because their fuel was exhausted. Neither the aviators nor the plane were injured. Richman said the flight was pleasant most of the way.

REVISING the 1937 budget figures he submitted to congress in January, President Roosevelt now estimates that expenditures caused by the bonus and the AAA invalidation will put the public debt at the all-time high figure of $34,188,543,494. He says, however, that better business will run tax receipts up $12,000,000 higher than was expected. The President's revision covered the fiscal year that began July 1 last and will end June 30, 1937. During his absence from the capital it was issued by Acting Budget Director Daniel W. Bell.

The chief items changed by the estimate were:

1. Receipts, fixed at $5,665,839,000.
2. Expenditures at $7,762,835,300.
3. Gross deficit for the year at $2,096,996,300.
4. Public debt on June 30, 1937, at $34,188,543,493.73.

These estimates compared with January figures as follows:

1. Receipts of $5,654,217,650.
2. Expenditures of $7,645,301,338.
3. Deficit of $1,989,388,720.
4. Public debt at end of year of $31,351,638,737.

The $2,000,000,000 deficit Mr. Roosevelt estimated is the lowest of the New Deal. Regarding this figure the President said:

"The estimated deficit for 1937 is $2,096,996,300 which includes $580,000,000 for statutory debt retirement and $560,000,000 for further payments under the adjusted compensation payment act.

"Deducting the amount of the statutory debt retirement leaves a net deficit of $1,516,996,300.

"This does not mean that there will be an increase in the public debt of this amount for the reason that it is contemplated during the year to reduce the working balance of the general fund by approximately $1,100,000,000."

What Mr. Roosevelt meant by this was that instead of borrowing money to cover the difference between receipts and expenditures, the Treasury would dip into the general fund for $1,100,000,000.

IT WAS Benito Mussolini's turn to go into the European version of the Indian war dance, following Hitler and Stalin, and he gave a great performance. At Avellino, center of the Italian army maneuvers, Il Duce announced to a cheering throng that he could mobilize 8,000,000 soldiers, "in the course of a few hours and after a simple order." The premier declared the world is in the throes of an irresistible re-armament race and Italy must reject the idea of eternal peace, which he said is "foreign to our creed and to our temperament." He asserted that the armed forces of Italy are more efficient than ever as a consequence of the Ethiopian war and that the 60,000 men engaged in the maneuvers are but a modest and almost insignificant part of the country's actual war strength.

"We must be strong," cried Mussolini. "We must be always stronger! We must be so strong that we can face any eventualities and look directly in the eye whatever may befall!"

Germany's new army of a million men, created by Hitler's order doubling the term of compulsory military training, is to be financed by increased taxes on all companies and corporations by 25 per cent for 1936 and by 50 per cent for 1937.

JAPAN proposes to build up a submarine fleet approximately 30 per cent larger than that of either Great Britain or the United States. Such was the substance of a note delivered by the Japanese embassy in London to the British foreign office. The decision replaces the submarine parity among the three powers established by the 1930 London naval treaty.

Japan notified Great Britain that it was determined to keep afloat 11,059 tons of destroyers and 15,598 tons of submarines above the 1930 London treaty quotas. This tonnage, if the treaty's provisions were carried out, would be scrapped at the end of this year.

The Japanese note was in reply to Great Britain's memorandum of July 15, 1936, invoking the "escape clause" of the first London treaty in order to increase its destroyer tonnage above the pact's allowance.

Japan gave the lack of sufficient excess destroyers as its reason for retaining a surplus in submarines. The United States, like Great Britain, has decided it must keep in service after the end of the year 40,000 tons of over age destroyers in excess of the total permitted by the 1930 treaty.

SHOULD war break out in Europe, France counts on having the powerful Polish army on her side. Consequently the week long visit of Gen. Edward Rydz- Smigly, inspector general of that army, and a Polish military mission to France was made the occasion of elaborate ceremonies. The train carrying the Poles crossed the border at Belfort and the General Rydz-Smigly was received by the commanding generals of the area and reviewed thousands of troops of the frontier regiments. Going thence to Paris, the Poles were accorded the highest military honors and the crowds in the decorated streets cheered them lustily.

Dinners for the guests were given by President Albert Lebrun, Premier Leon Blum and Foreign Minister Delbos. Later they were taken to the Franco-German frontier where they inspected the famous Maginot defense line of concrete and steel strongholds and passages. A great military review at Nancy ended the tour.

IN AN appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States the Virginian Railway company made an attack on the provisions of the railway labor act authorizing collective bargaining between representatives of the employees and the carriers.

The railroad appealed from rulings by the Eastern Virginia Federal District court and the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals requiring it to negotiate concerning disputes with a unit of the American Federation of Labor. It contended the legislation, passed in 1926 and amended in 1934, violated the Constitution by depriving it of liberty and property, and attempting to regulate labor relations with employees engaged solely in intrastate activities.

BECAUSE labor costs in New York city are too high, the Charles Schweinler Press, largest magazine printing house there, has decided to close the plant in which it employs 1,000 men and women and move where costs are lower. Executives of the company said they did not object to the wage scales imposed by New York unions, but found the differential between the local scale and the rates in force elsewhere so great that it was "impossible" to continue in New York.

When the Schweinler Press moves it will take with it an annual payroll of $1,750,000. Publishers of the seventy magazines printed by the company have been notified of the impending closing. Among them are The Literary Digest and The Nation.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT ATTORNEY L. C. GARNETT of Washington was asked by Vice President Garner to present to the federal grand jury the case of six Railway Audit and Inspection company officials who failed to appear before a senate committee some two weeks ago. Those cited by Mr. Garner were: W. W. Groves, president of the company; W. B. Groves, vice president; Earl Douglas Rice, vice president; J. E. Blair, secretary-treasurer; R. S. Judge, director, and J. C. Boyer.

The committee, headed by Senator La Follette, is investigating the alleged use of labor "spies" by employers in disputes with their employees. At the time of the hearing an attorney for the company told the committee an injunction was being sought in federal court to prevent the officials' appearance and to prohibit production of their records.

MRS. RUTH BRYAN OWEN, now the wife of Capt. Boerge Rohde of the Danish king's royal life guards, has resigned as American minister to Denmark in order to be free to campaign as a private citizen for the re-election of President Roosevelt, and the President has accepted her resignation. This was done in an exchange of telegrams, that from Mr. Roosevelt saying:

"While I am very loath to have you discontinue the very fine services you have been rendering as United States minister to Denmark, I appreciate your reasons for wanting to resign and the motives that prompt you. I therefore reluctantly accept your resignation."

Mrs. Rohde, daughter of William Jennings Bryan, has had a long career of public service. Before entering the diplomatic service she served in the Seventy-first and Seventy-second congresses, 1929 to 1933, from Florida. Captain Rohde, to whom she was married in July last, is her third husband.

SIX bombs dropped from an unidentified Spanish airplane fell perilously near the American destroyer Kane, which was en route from Gibraltar to Bilbao to help in the removal of Americans from the war zone. The Kane fired several rounds from an anti-aircraft gun at the plane. Naturally our government was roused to protest. Secretary of State Hull instructed his agents abroad to request both the Spanish government and Gen. Francisco Franco, leader of the rebel forces, to "issue instructions in the strongest terms" to prevent another "incident of this character."

The rebel forces in the north were making a powerful air attack on Irun, scattering many bombs on that border city, and an assault by land and sea forces was expected at any moment. The government troops there had refused to surrender and their officers said rightist prisoners, including some prominent men, would be exposed in the most open places during the bombardment.

The Madrid government admitted its troops had sustained an "important reverse" in a battle at Oropesa, 100 miles southwest of the capital and were driven back to Talavera. Later a loyalist victory at that place was claimed, though London heard the rebels had scored another victory there. The fighting in the Guadarrama mountains continued indecisively.

RESOLUTIONS adopted by the American Bar association at its meeting in Boston declare firmly against any attempt to limit the power of federal courts to pass on the constitutionality of laws. The association avoided what had been expected to be a lively debate by taking a noncommittal attitude on the report of another committee which denounced in great part the alleged invasion of the rights of citizens by the New Deal. This report, to which there was a minority report appended, was received and filed by the assembly, but not accepted, and the committee which filed it was discharged from further duty.

Frederick H. Stinchfield of Minneapolis was unanimously elected president of the association for the coming year.

PERHAPS the farmers of America don't realize it, but during July they enjoyed the largest cash income they have had since 1929. Figures given out by the Department of Agriculture show the sales of farm products brought them $711,000,000 against $582,000,000 in June and only $451,000,000 in July, 1935.

To their income from sales, the farmers added $24,000,000 in various forms of government benefits, bringing the total cash at their disposal to $735,000,000. The rental and other benefits totaled $57,000,000 in June and $19,000,000 in July, 1935.

"The sharp increase in cash farm income in July was mainly due to the pronounced gain in income from grains, chiefly wheat," the report said. "Receipts of wheat in the principal markets in July were the fourth largest for the month on record, despite the relatively small supplies on farms this year.

"Prices of meat animals in July, while averaging slightly lower than in June, were nevertheless higher than in July, 1935, so that income from meat animals was considerably higher than a year ago. Cash income from dairy products increased more than seasonally."

FROM AROUND MICHIGAN

South Lyon—It was 20 years ago that a windstorm first razed the Worden church, five miles from here. On August 25th, this year, a lightning bolt struck it again and the building burned to the ground. It will not be rebuilt.

Marion—Beekeepers here complain that they have lost a great quantity of bees this summer as a result of the insects drowning in their own honey. The hot weather caused the comb to melt, permitting the honey to flow and cover the bees.

Lapeer—Anthony Alt, a farmer near here, found a rattle snake coiled on his doorstep. After striking it with a club, he attempted to remove its 16 rattles. The reptile struck him on the arm, inflicting a poisonous wound from which recovery was slow.

Marquette—A 14-year-old boy rules Michigan's horse shoe pitchers. Bobbie Hiit of Plymouth defeated Lee Rose of Detroit 51-10, 54-35, 47-52, 52-24, 50-32, in the state finals here. The lad never threw less than 70 per cent ringers during the 3-day competition.

Brown City—Although Roy Harris had a fairly good crop of oats, he was unable to harvest it because of large cracks in the ground, caused by the drouth. Wheels of his binder and the feet of the horses caught in the fissures, from 2 to 10 inches wide and 3 feet deep, so Harris abandoned the attempted harvest.

Port Huron—Construction of the $3,000,000 international bridge over the St. Clair river, has begun. The foundation work is being constructed on the American side at the present time. It is planned that the bridge will be of the steel cantilever type with a single span 871 feet long. There will be a 32-foot roadway between 5-foot walks.

Sandusky—Henry Foote was troubled by 30 prize sheep owned by a neighbor tramping over his bean field. Hiring a truck, he loaded the animals on it, and, driving through the countryside, unloaded six sheep at five different places miles apart. The neighbor, Frank Erard, took the matter to the prosecutor but found that Foote was within his rights.

Lansing—Statewide tests on highway and street practices are planned by the State Safety council this fall. The reward for those who take the tests probably will be windshield stickers, showing that drivers have passed state tests. It was said that a typical question will be "what is the proper use of an automobile horn." The impression of safety rules is the object of the drive.

Durand—The juveniles of this community had their day on August 24th, when the annual pet and doll parade was held. The procession was a block and a half long with ponies, dogs, cats, chickens, big dolls, little dolls and decorated bicycles holding the center of the stage. The affair arouses more interest among citizens than almost any other held throughout the space of a year.

East Lansing—A summary of Michigan cow testing association records showed that milk production of 15,374 cows in 1,036 herds decreased 11.2 per cent during July. Butter fat production declined 10 per cent. Michigan State College dairymen found that average production for cows on test during July was 28.6 as compared with 29.3 pounds of butterfat during April. Feed costs jumped 22 per cent during the month.

Charlotte—The economic dependence of Eaton county on its railroads is outlined in a study made by the Michigan Railroad Employes and Citizen's League. There are five roads operating in the county, having a combined total of 100 miles of track. There are 116 workers employed whose combined wages total $167,155 annually. In addition, the county receives $38,176.61 in primary school money and direct taxes.

Ann Arbor—The University of Michigan cyclotron has generated 6,700,000 volts, which establishes a new record for production of man-made electrical energy. The next step, professors say, will be to increase the amperage to conform to the voltage and then the cyclotron will be placed in regular operation for experiments in the treatment of cancer. The machine uses scores of heavy hydrogen atoms, bombarding them with 10,000 volts as they spiral through a magnetic field, producing radioactive particles equivalent to radium.

Lansing—The state department of public instruction has invoked a higher standard for the state's teaching profession. Four years of college training is now required for a life teaching certificate. The minimum before September 1st was three years. In 1939, a new rule will become effective under which college graduates will be required to serve a 3-year "internship" before they receive permanent certificates. Thereafter, the certificate will lapse if the teacher is unemployed for a 5-year period.

Detroit—Every available inch of exhibition space for the Michigan State fair was sold 10 days before the opening date, according to a report by the fair manager.

Battle Creek—Ernest Shultz, 42, a professional diver, was overcome by monoxide gas as he worked at the bottom of a river. The mishap was attributed to a shift in wind which sent fumes from a gasoline driven air compressor into the diver's life line.

Mason—Carl and Ethel Havens, husband and wife, were electrocuted in front of their farm home when the husband attempted to put up a radio aerial. The aerial fouled a high tension wire and Havens collapsed. His wife was killed when she attempted to save him.

Harbor Springs—Five first places out of a possible seven were awarded to A. R. Pontius, local horticulturist, in the competition at the Michigan Gladiolus show held in Detroit recently. A special award of merit was also given to Mr. Pontius for the best collection of seedlings in the show.

Ionia—This section has developed into one of the best farm horse markets in the east. Efforts are now under way to bring a second carload of work horses here from the western drouth area. Prices at local auction sales average $132.50, with the lowest figure being $70 and the highest $170.

Lakeview—State records for gas production volume were shattered when a well in the prolific Triton township field was gauged at 112 million cubic feet daily, a short time ago. The well had originally come in with a lesser flow but drillers sank the hole deeper into the gas sand horizon of the field tapping terrific pressure.

Ann Arbor—Application to the federal communication commission has been made for permission to construct a 1,000 watt radio broadcasting station at the University of Michigan, in order that broadcasting may be unlimited. It was said that $17,000 of the $25,000 capital stock needed had already been subscribed in Washtenaw County.

Mt. Clemens—Air minded folks are again talking of the Mitchell Trophy race to be held at Selfridge Field on October 17. The new PB-2A pursuit ships are expected to set a new record of 240 miles per hour. Equipped with variable pitch propellers and superchargers, the newly designed planes will take part in the air corps classic for the first time this year.

Traverse City—The far reaching effect of the drouth is shown by the fish worm market this year, which established a record for scarcity and high prices. At the peak of the dry spell, worms sold locally for $1 per pint, the former price being as low as 25 cents per pint. Traverse City dealers imported worms from distances as far away as Indiana and Ohio.

Lansing—National headquarters of the American Legion Auxiliary has announced permanent possession of the Doyle trophy to the Michigan department of the auxiliary, winner of a membership contest. To qualify, Michigan enrolled 125.56 per cent of its membership quota. The trophy will be presented to the state's representatives at the national convention in Cleveland this month.

Detroit—Twenty-one persons died and more than 1,100 were injured in 3,850 traffic accidents during July. These figures came to light when the traffic division of the police department made its monthly report. Most accidents occurred during the rush hour, 5 and 6 P. M. and only two fatalities from midnight to 8 A. M. Sixteen of the dead were pedestrians, of which 12 were improperly crossing streets when struck.

Kalamazoo—If a citizen lives in a trailer, where does he vote? That question was put to the city clerk here by a Kalamazoo man who wanted to register for the primary and stated that he had lived for the past two years in his house trailer. It was decided that for registration and voting purposes a person lives where he habitually sleeps and has a lodging, which leaves the man in the trailer about where he was before he mentioned the subject.

Lansing—The Secretary of State's office has become concerned over the traffic hazard offered by long lines of heavily laden freight carriers and drive-away strings on the state's highways. According to the state law, cars in drive-aways and small trucks must be at least 100 feet apart except when passing and requires trucks and trailers with a length in excess of 50 feet to maintain a separation of 1,000 feet. The department advocates strict enforcement of this law.

Camp Custer—Eight soldiers died and more than 200 were injured during the recent war games here, according to Col. A. T. Briesman, surgeon. Only two of the dead were killed in "action," they being the aviators who were killed when their plane crashed in flames near Otsego. Three others were victims of traffic accidents; one died from a fractured skull, one from diabetes and another from injuries received when struck by a machine before the "mock" war

Washington.—The Associated Press carried a dispatch from Moscow a few days ago that more in it than just the announcement that certain oppositionists among the Soviet leaders were to be executed. The dispatch reported that 16 confessed conspirators against the Soviet state were sentenced to death by the firing squad as the "highest measure of social defense" of a government.

It reported a new stage in the so-called progress of Communism in the Russian state. For the first time since the Bolsheviks came into power they ordered the death penalty for some of the leaders who marched in the Revolution of October, 1917.

So we have a clean sweep now of the men who sat next to the dictator, Lenin; the men who were his closest advisors in council are out of the way, and in their place remains the extensively practical and strong-willed executive, Stalin, who has in this instance declined to allow theory to interfere with a condition.

Here is the picture. Leon Trotsky in exile and under sentence of death if he returns into Russia. Zinoviev shot to death. Kamenev also executed by a firing squad (he will be remembered as an outstanding pillar of Bolshevism). Tomsky, a suicide. Rykov, Bukharin and Rodek under investigation by the dreadful OGPU. A hated secret service is looking into the records of Sokolnikov and Pyotakov. The latter two have been important advisors to Stalin. But what is all of this about? The answer is simple. While these men were charged with plotting the murder of Stalin, with conspiracy, beneath it all lies the thirst of men for power. Through all of this since the fall of the Russian empire and the execution of Czar Nicholas, the Communists have pushed forward. The strongest of them have traveled. That is the why of Stalin. Yet as most always happens under any circumstance where the will of a few men runs free, they have inflicted to the last degree the power that they have gathered unto themselves. In so doing they have not failed to reserve unto themselves such considerations as they thought necessary—a perfectly human trait of character answerable only where a whim becomes a will and there is power to carry it out.

Between Stalin, who was able to enforce his will, and Trotsky, who dwelt in the stary heavens of theories and dreams, there is only a theoretical difference. Each wanted Communism. Trotsky considered the problem in the terms of world revolution; Stalin thought of it as the Russian state and recognized his capacity to carry his plans through in that jurisdiction. So the Stalin-Trotsky feud, as it has turned out to be, has become ferocious and any one who has gone contrary—even entertained thoughts contrary to the will of the mighty Stalin—committed a sin against the state. And a sin against the Russian state under Stalin means to disappear.

It seems to me there is an important lesson for the American people in that situation. Stalin, along with Hitler and Mussolini, is always right. It matters not what the people may desire, what their philosophy of life and living may be, how they propose to encourage or accept responsibility for self-government, the dictatorship continues. Many times in these columns I have criticized bureaucracy in the federal government. There are so many bureaucrats in Washington now that some one has bitterly described them as locusts. It may seem quite a jump from bureaucracy to dictatorship but the difference actually is very small. When the people of the United States concede to the federal government such rights as the federal government attempted to exercise in NRA and even to a greater extent in the AAA, they are taking the first step to grant to a centralized government the authority that leads to absolute control of the person and everything that person does.

There are conditions undoubtedly that need to be remedied before our form of government is anything like perfect. There is always to be considered changing conditions and the changing whims of people themselves. But I entertain the conviction that so long as the American people are unwilling to accord increasing powers to the federal government, the nation as a whole will go forward, civilization will progress and we will enjoy having a government.

The transfer of William C. Bullitt from his recent post as ambassador to Russia to a similar assignment in France upon the resignation of Ambassador Straus has occasioned but very little comment, but it seems to me in view of all conditions and circumstances that it should attract attention. He will take up the job as the chief American diplomat at Paris in most troublesome times, the most difficult, perhaps, that have confronted an American diplomat anywhere since the days of 1911 to 1916. Appointment of Mr. Bullitt then, it would appear, is a move that calls into consideration not only the conditions which he will meet as our ambassador but also his qualifications for the job.

It is to be remembered, first, that the post of ambassador to Paris is the second highest in rank among our foreign diplomats. It is a post that always has called for about the best that our nation can turn out in the way of tactful representation even though we always count the assignment to London as the No. 1 ranking post. The reason is that we seldom, if ever, have had the problems to deal with in the case of the London government that continuously arise between the United States and France. We always have been friendly with France in modern times, but it can not be denied that there has been constant friction between the two peoples. The same has not been true concerning Anglo-American relations. Hence, the job at Paris has always been regarded as more difficult than that at London.

As for Mr. Bullitt's capacity, there is a general feeling that he is not an outstanding diplomat. He has achieved success in some lines, yet I believe the consensus is that in so far as his recent service at Moscow is concerned, the Russians can claim much greater success in dealing with the United States than we can in dealing with the Soviet. Those of us who were present as observers in Washington during the days when Foreign Commissar Litvinov met with President Roosevelt in the series of conferences that resulted in recognition of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics can not fail to recall how Mr. Bullitt labored to accomplish that recognition. It will be recalled as well that Mr. Bullitt insisted throughout these negotiations how trade would follow recognition. He urged that the 13-year old policy of non-recognition, held by Wilson, Harding, Coolidge and Hoover, should be cast aside in the interest of trade, predicting a great flow of commerce between the nations. President Roosevelt eventually made that the real basis for granting recognition.

None of the predicted trade has come about. None will be possible until the Soviet finds means of paying for American goods. American business men are a bit old-fashioned. They want to be paid for what they sell.

After what some critics have called Mr. Bullitt's "dismal failure" at Moscow, he is promoted to the French post. The selection comes at a time when French internal politics are boiling. It comes likewise at a time when the Washington government is striving to expand American exports and when it is hoped that there will not be a further decline in outbound shipments such as official figures of the Department of Commerce show has taken place in trade with Russia.

Senator James Couzens of Michigan who is up for re-election this fall has sort of upset the apple cart for the Republicans, although they profess not to be particularly worried. The senior senator from Michigan has always served in the senate as a Republican but now he makes the announcement that he is going to support President Roosevelt for re-election and that brings the senator's regularity as a Republican into question.

Senator Couzens has been a powerful man politically in Michigan in years past. He has served his city, Detroit, and his state and the nation in a distinguished way. Obviously, such service builds up an important political following but, according to superficial indication, no one knows exactly how much remains of that following. This statement assumes that the senator's strength is not as great as it used to be and all current information supports that view. Yet, in politics, nothing is certain and that is the reason why Senator Couzens's action has proved disturbing.

Former Gov. Wilbur M. Brucker is seeking the Republican nomination for the senate in Michigan and thus the incumbent has his difficulties in getting the nomination because the Democrats will have a candidate of their own. Be it said in favor of Senator Couzens, however, he was fair with the voters of his party by announcing before the primaries what his attitude would be respecting the presidential candidates and his sincerity in this regard may have some effect. On the other hand, it is difficult to say how dyed-in-the-wool Republicans can remain with Senator Couzens after an announcement by which he virtually has read himself out of the party.

NEWS FROM THE 'HILLS OF THE DEAD'

Ancient Ruins Throw Light Upon Mayan Indian Civilization; Old Sculpture Reveals Rare Sense of Humor.

Ruins of Buildings in the Nunnery Quadrangle at Uxmal, Yucatan.

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

IN THE "Hills of the Dead," long-forgotten slopes of the back country in Guatemala, the picks and shovels of archeologists from the Carnegie Institution of Washington, D. C., are discovering new answers to many mysteries of one of the most brilliant of early American civilizations. Under the direction of Dr. V. A. Kidder, these explorers into the past have come upon important new relics left hundreds of years ago by the Maya Indians.

The Mayas challenge the best minds of science. The civilization they achieved received no assistance from the Old World. It is—or was—America's own.

The Mayas were proficient astronomers. They perfected writing, sculpture and architecture to a high degree. They conducted their affairs under an efficiently organized government. Science is still at a loss to explain how they reached the high cultural achievements which they did, but the patient researches of archeological groups may some day find the answer to the riddle.

"Of first importance," according to the Carnegie archeologists, are the findings in Guatemalan hills, although they have not yet been completely analyzed. It is hoped that they may eventually reveal the whole fascinating story.

Find Four Tombs.

The area now being explored is no more than a mile and a half long, but it contains 100 mounds, beneath which are the ruins of a large Mayan community. Farmers of the region call the site Milaflores, but the Carnegie people intend to name it Kaminaljuyu, the Queche Indian for "Hills of the Dead."

Three important tombs of ancient American rulers have already been opened here, and a fourth is to be opened soon. From the evidences revealed concerning the burial practices of the Mayas, much about their civilization is learned.

"It will take months to get the collection in shape," says Doctor Kidder, "but it will prove a tremendous addition to our knowledge of Maya life, ceremony, dress and art."

Opening one tomb, the archeologists found in its center the figure of a middle-aged priest or noble, who had been left sitting cross-legged there many centuries ago. Jade beads and pendants, hand-somely carved, ear plugs and ornaments of crystal and shell, together with a pile of pottery found beside the remains, gave evidence of pompous burial.

Pile Up Pyramids.

At the feet of the skeleton was found another—a slave girl entombed to wait upon her master in the world beyond. Even the dead man's small dog was sent on the long journey with him, for in a corner of the room its skeleton was also found. There were vessels for serving food and millstones to grind the heavenly corn.

The Mayas had a peculiar practice in building their tombs. One pyramid was built upon another, like a nest of jars or boxes. It is believed from the location and formation of the tombs that when one of these priests or rulers died, he was placed in a tomb covered by a pyramid which had been associated with him, indeed one which in all probability he had built himself. When the next in line died, it appears, another pyramid was built, over the first. In the recent Carnegie findings there are four tombs and four layers of pyramids.

Guatemala's lowland jungles, where most of the preceding Mayan discoveries have been made, have already been pretty thoroughly explored. But the new discoveries are in the highlands, and for that reason it is believed they may open up entire new fields of discovery. Though the pyramids were more or less common in the lowlands, this is the first to be found in the hills.

Progressive periods of the Mayan civilization, which may help to trace it back to its mysterious beginnings, are revealed in the new findings. Dr. Kidder has already discovered stratification of buildings. From the various levels of the earth have come generous quantities of pottery which definitely represents a sequence, telling something of the culture of the people over successive eras.

The pyramids belong to a period known as the Old Empire, which is of somewhat later date, flourishing during the early centuries of the Christian era. This empire included many cities in Guatemala, Honduras and southern Yucatan.

The new discoveries bear out the prediction made by Dr. Kidder a year ago, when he said:

"Apparently the highland region was much more of a highway for trade and migration than the densely jungled lowland country. Consequently intensive work on the sites of the region can be expected to provide extremely valuable information as to the chronological interrelations of the various ancient cultures, particularly as it is probable that stratified remains will be discovered."

Stone Art Reveals Humor.

The art of the ancient Mayas is notable not only for its skillful execution, but for the evidence it gives of a sophisticated understanding of human nature—and above all, a delightful sense of humor.

What some critics declare to be the finest specimen of Mayan art in stone was recently discovered by an expedition sponsored by the University museum of the University of Pennsylvania. The stone lintel was the work of an unknown sculptor.

Roof Comb of the "House of Pigeons," an Ancient Mayan Ruin at Uxmal, Yucatan.

In Mayan hieroglyphics were six dates, none of them later than Dec. 2, 757 A. D., according to Dr. J. Alden Mason, of the expedition.

Particularly amusing is the old sculpture in this, a political year. For the scene which it treats is apparently some sort of meeting in the council chamber of a governmental body, and the characters are listening to one of their number as he delivers a speech. That political oratory, then as now, was flavored with a generous helping of plain honesty is evident from the antics and postures of the listeners while the speaker is "waving the flag" in traditional enthusiasm and gusto.

Expert Reconstructs Original.

Now it has long been the custom of sculptors to present such occasions as full of dignity and always working smoothly. But here was a chisel-wielding wag who knew better and did not hesitate to interpret his characters as he knew them, even though his work was to decorate the doorway of a beautiful and dignified temple.

When it was found, the sculpture was badly worn and damaged, but attempts have been made to reconstruct it. Broken lines have been extended with the aid of the many remaining cues to poses and costumes, by Miss M. Louise Baker, expert on archeological art, who is able to visualize the complete scene in its original state.

In the bulletin of the university museum, Miss Baker directs attention to some of the amusing points of the work.

"Two of the trio," she writes, indicating a little group in the picture, "forgetful of the occasion, are entirely absorbed in their own argument, while the third, indignantly bracing himself upon outspread feet, gives a vicious bump with his hip (breaking his own obsequious pose for the moment), demanding attention."

"The seated figures are very human in manner and detail. One dignitary gently pokes the friend in front to ask what it is all about. The friend, willing to accommodate, vainly tries to peer over the intervening mass of feathers (the head-dress of the man in front of him), bracing himself on his foot, in his effort to see—a taut neckline giving the cue."

From Miss Baker's description it seems that even the old Mayan Indians were acquainted with our own present-day problem of the woman who wears a large hat in the moving picture theater.

"The last man, and the only one whose face was not completely destroyed, has lost interest after a fruitless attempt to hear and his hand has probably dropped from cupping his ear to trying with his ear-plugs," Miss Baker writes.

The priceless lintel was chiseled from buff-colored limestone. It is two feet high and a little over four

I am in favor of a road building program for each township and also of spending in each township the amount of money that the McNitt-Holbeck bill allows for the mileage in that township on the same basis that the County Road Commission receives it. For 1936 it was $64.00 per mile.

Real Forbidden Fruit
The coco de mer in the Seychelle Islands is the real Forbidden Fruit of the Bible. According to tradition, Adam and Eve had their Garden of Eden in the Seychelles, which lie between Africa and India.

Soap Known to Ancients
Soap, both as a medical and cleansing agent, was known to the ancients. Pliny speaks of two kinds, hard and soft, as used by the Germans. He mentions it as originally a Gallic invention for giving a bright hue to the hair. It is probable that soap came to the Romans from Germany. Although soap is referred to in the Old Testament, authorities believe that ashes of plants or other such purifying agents are implied. The earliest kinds of soap appear to have been made of goat's tallow and beech ash. As early as the Thirteenth century, however, a factory for making soap from olive oil was established at Marseille. Soap making was introduced into England during the next century.

"The Camera Cannot Lie"
British statesman W. E. Gladstone coined the expression: "The camera cannot lie" in August, 1896, during a speech at Liverpool. The speech tried to rouse indignation of the public over Armenian massacres at Constantinople. Reports of the horrible carnage seemed incredible. Yet photographs showed many heaps of slain Armenians lying in the streets. "Exaggerated atrocity stories?" "No," retorted Gladstone "The camera never lies."

Back in the kitchen, she lifted the stove lid to lay on a piece of wood. The hot lid slipped away from the lifter and fell on her right hand leaving a black smear and the furious bite of fire tearing into the skin. She caught her breath with the first pain, waving her hand up and down to relieve it. "What an awkward thing for a body to do and on a hot day when you can't hardly get your breath in this kitchen, and then to go and burn your right hand just when you're ready to mix up the corn-bread batter."

She washed away the soot and anointed the burn with linsed oil from the bottle in the cupboard and spread soda over it and wrapped it lightly with a white rag.

She placed the large wooden mixing bowl on the table and began to stir in the meal and the sour milk, the soda and the shortening. It was an awkward process. She took the bowl into her right arm, pressing it against her, and stirred slowly with her left hand. Some of the soft batter sloshed over against her dress. A wisp of hair slipped from its place and dangled into her eyes. She pushed it back with her left hand, leaving flakes of cornmeal stuck in it and on her perspiring forehead. She was hot and fretted.

"Gracious, but I feel a sight. I could nearly cry."

Outside she heard the yard gate close sharply as the bucket of rocks on the wire between the gate and the post pulled it shut.

"There's Jesse and I'm so glad I could cry. He'll help me now and me with this burn."

She dabbed at the sweat on her lip, blew upward to flip the lock of hair out of her eye again, and went toward the kitchen door.

"Oh, Jesse, I'm sure glad—"

She had reached the door. Her words ended as abruptly as though the living self had walked straight out of its hot body into the habitation of spirits. She stood perfectly still, hugging the bowl of corn-bread batter, shielding her burned hand, looking at him through the meal-stained lock of hair.

"Good evening," he said. "This is Sparrel Pattern's place if I'm not mistaken."

For the first time in her life she was without the words a meeting needed. She stood dumbly in the door, while the young man came on across the yard to the porch. He was as tall as Sparrel and as straight. He wore a brown corduroy cap, breeches of the same material tucked away at the bottom into heavy shoes, a blue shirt and a black bow tie. He walked with the easy grace and strength of a man who was used to moving about in the open on foot.

"Mr. Shellenberger described the place like a surveyor, that is, if this is the Pattern place," he said, his blue eyes and his voice smiling at her across the porch.

Slowly Cynthia felt her natural self return to the doorway. She looked at the young man. Over his bent left arm he carried a large brass surveyor's compass with shining, upright peep-sights on each end. With his other hand he grasped a long, smooth Jacob's staff like a huge walking stick tipped with brass, and over his shoulder was slung a knapsack and a surveyor's chain.

"This is the place. Daddy and the boys are out about the barn somewhere."

"Well, I'm glad to get here before dark. My name's Reuben Warren. I've come to survey the place. The folks over at the Landing thought I couldn't make it to your place before nightfall if I came on foot, but here I am."

Cynthia was bewitched by his voice and the clear music of his spoken words. His vocabulary was very much the same as that of the better Gannon Creek folk, but the quality of the intonation, the rhythm of the sentences, and the pitch of the voice were unusual to her ear.

The silent interval, lengthening from the ending of his words and filled with the amazement of two people looking at each other for the first time with a recognition beyond their immediate understanding, grew too emphatic, and Cynthia remembered to say that the menfolk would be in soon and to invite him to sit down.

"I'd better get on with the supper if you'll excuse me."

Reuben Warren set the Jacob's staff against the door, slipped the knapsack from his shoulder, and then sat down with the compass on his lap and felt the agreeable glow of rest sweep over the muscles of his legs and settle in his neck and shoulders where the heavy knapsack had imprinted a red band. He sat at ease, watching the dark shadow of the Pinnacle slice upward toward Cranesnest. "The finest place I've seen in all my trips into the hills. I wonder what the man who developed a place like this will be like?"

Cynthia hurried back into the kitchen. "Reuben Warren. What a nice name. Reuben Warren. It's like a singing. It goes like his talk." She poured the batter into the large iron skillet and placed it in the oven, bending over the stove and opening the door carefully with her burned hand. The loose strand of hair again fell into her eye. This time she would fix it properly. She went to the mirror that hung above the table and looked at herself. She gave a gesture of despair.

"Oh, my gracious, Cynthia Pattern, you never looked such a sight in your whole life. That awful wisp of hair over your face and the corn-meal in it like scruff, your hand burned and bandaged, and your sweaty face all red as a beet, and this old brown striped calico dress on and it spotted with batter! And Reuben Warren saw you like that, and he'll think that's the way I always look, and I don't. I never do. Just this one time, and there he should be ready to look at me and think I am stouchy about the house, and I'm not."

The tears started her and bore with them a physical relief and relaxation. There flashed into her mind the picture of her mother Julia years ago in the wood-lot with a dress full of chips, looking up suddenly at Sparrel Pattern on a tall horse, and then staring down at her dress, and running away to the kitchen with her confusion. The vision was so sharp and so unexpected that it completely changed Cynthia's mood and she felt a smile forming through her tears.

"And me dreaming on about a pear tree and a fine dress like Lady Arabella's and him saying, 'Lady, you're the prettiest sight I ever saw in all my born days.'"

She removed the unsightly bandage and brushed away the loose soda, and carefully washed the burned hand. Then she bathed her eyes back into composure. She felt her spirit lifting above the confusion and the heat. As she went on with the supper she began to sing without forming any words that could reach the porch.

She opened the oven to look at the baking sweet potatoes and the bread. She went into the smoke-house and sliced off the best cuts of the home-cured ham to fry. She took dripping spoonfuls of dark fragrant honey from the stone jar, and sweet new butter from the spring-house, and a fresh loaf of wheat bread from Julia's box. Then she slipped the every-day red-and-white-checked cloth from the table and spread in its stead one of the hem-stitched white covers from the cedar-smelling linen closet in the hall. She poured the brown sugar back into the jar and filled the bowl with white granulated. She cut a spray of wild honeysuckle from the clump behind the drying kiln, arranged it in a low brown earthen pot, and set it in the center of the table.

It was all very beautiful now, and she stood back to admire it for an instant. "He'll see that I'm not anyway slouchy, if he has any eyes. And he has. I guess I'm glad Mother went over to Jenny's today, after all."

She heard Sparrel and the boys coming into the yard. She looked at the supper again and ran up to her room to change into a fresh dress. "Blue is best for my face when it's hot and for my hair." She felt neat and orderly, like the table she had just laid. She hurried back to the kitchen. She put the coffee on the stove. She got milk from the spring-house.

"I guess I've got things about ready for him now."

Outside on the porch she could hear the voices of her menfolk making Reuben Warren welcome on Wolfpen. The clear and easy tones of Reuben rippled over the slow deep talk of Sparrel, and in both there was the ring of friendliness.

"Where's your mule?" she heard Abrael ask.

"I haven't any mule."
"Then how did you get over here with all them things?"
"I walked."
"You walked?"
"Yes, I walked. Don't you people ever walk any? You're as bad as city folks." It was the first time she had heard his free laugh.

Cynthia was taking up the supper. She could hear the men at the wash rock, Jesse offering Reuben the soap and Jasper the towel. Everything was ready now and she stepped to the door. The days were noticeably lengthening, as though the light clung to the trees and the sprouting fields and tried to shoulder the darkness from the hollows. "Come in to supper," she said. She saw Sparrel and Jesse and Reuben Warren look at her burned hand as they passed into the dining room, and she let it drop quietly behind her skirt.

"You sit right here, Mr. Warren," Sparrel said, placing him on the right facing the kitchen where Cynthia stood ready to serve. Then Sparrel asked the blessing, raising his head and looking at Cynthia as he said the Amen.

Cynthia returned the look of communication, following Sparrel's eyes over the white table to the honeysuckle in the center. "He thinks it all right to tidy up the table for company, but he wonders why I put on the white cloth for Reuben Warren and let Shellenberger take just what he found."

Sparrel passed the food to his guest, urging it upon him generously after the manner of Gannon Creek folks. Cynthia moved silently about the table with water for the glasses and with hot coffee and warm triangles of corn bread that was soft and flaky together with the crisp red crusts. Her brothers took only the wheat loaf, but Reuben refused it for the corn bread, and Cynthia flushed with confused pleasure, for she felt intuitively that he did it out of consideration for the distress and embarrassment she showed when she met him at the door with batter in her hand. It was the first time in her life that such a secret understanding had come to her and it left her surprised with the wonder of its recognition and communication.

"His face is long, and then it isn't long. And it isn't round. It's like his chin. It's his high forehead with the black hair roached back off of it. Wonder what if I'd been out there with the sheep like I was that day. Things always just come out the way they are, I reckon, without any of a body's what if..."

Abrael had finished and was full of questions. Where did Reuben live? How did that Shellenberger fellow find him? How did he know where to come by himself? How did a man go about surveying a tract of land? And Cynthia stood by Sparrel watching over the table, listening to the talk of Reuben Warren in reply, captivated.

"My father has an office down at Catlettsburg. He is a surveyor. You can look out of the office window and see the Big Sandy and the Ohio coming together in a V around West Virginia. Shellenberger just dropped in one day on his way to Pittsburgh and said he was buying some timber-land from Sparrel Pattern in Pike county and he wanted a surveyor. My father was tied up on a big job over in Ohio, so I packed up the traps and took the train and then the boat and came to Pattern Landing. I got off there this afternoon about two-thirty, and walked over the bridge path. It felt good to stretch my legs. When I saw this place from up there at the head of the hollow, I thought it was about the finest place I've ever seen away from the river."

"I'm Afraid We've Made a Lot of Extra Work for You."

"Does it take very long to learn to be a surveyor?" Abrael demanded.

"It's not a very hard job. You just naturally learn it after so long a time. I guess I've been around with my dad since I was about fifteen."

"When do you mind to begin running off the tract?" Sparrel inquired.

"We'll begin right away. What part are you selling off?"
"The timber-land down the creek, I reckon. But I calculated I'd have the whole place run off first and then we'd cut across to get the part for Shellenberger. Did he say when he would be back?"

"In a few weeks, he said, and we might go right ahead with the work. We might look at the deeds right away if you have them handy."

The men arose from the table. Cynthia placed a lamp on Sparrel's desk, and the men went into the big kitchen to sit and look at the deeds.

"That was a mighty good supper," Reuben was saying as he paused by her, passing from the dining-room. "I guess I worked up an appetite over those hills." He laughed pleasantly.

Cynthia was not used to hearing remarks about the food, and she had no confident words for reply.

"It wasn't very much. Mother is over at Jenny's today."

She ate by herself until Jesse came in again and sat down.

"How did you burn your hand?"
"I dropped a hot lid on it. And it was just before he came and I was about to cry. I thought he was you and I went to the door with a bowl in my hand."

Jesse smiled and looked at the burn. "It's not very deep." But he helped her clear away the dishes and then actually washed them, against her protest, in the kitchen where Reuben and Sparrel and Jasper and Abrael were sitting and talking about the survey.

Cynthia could see them and hear them as she worked.

Sparrel had brought out the tin box, freckled with rust, containing his deeds and papers. The folded foolscap was yellowed and spotted with age.

It was musical to hear Reuben's voice reading the deeds.
"The Commonwealth of Virginia to Saul Pattern . . . four thousand acres, more or less, situate between the Big Sandy River and Gannon Creek, and bounded and described as follows, to-wit: . . . this twentieth day of March, 1798. . . . to Barton Pattern . . . one thousand acres, more or less, situate on Gannon and Marebone Creeks—this ninth day of August, 1814. . . . to Tivis Pattern . . . four hundred acres, more or less, situate on Sycamore Creek. . . . this nineteenth day of August, 1825 . . . to Sparrel Pattern . . . three hundred and fifty acres, more or less, situate on Horsepen Branch, and bounded and described as follows, to-wit: . . . this tenth day of September, 1854."

"These are old ones, all right," Reuben was saying, turning them over in his hands and smelling the odor of old paper. "The Patterns have been here a long time, haven't they?"

"Just a hundred years now."
"I suppose this is a good time to sell if you've got timber-land."

Reuben was again looking at the deeds. "Beginning at a twelve-inch white oak on Cranesnest Point from which a two-foot hickory bears to the northeast about one pole; . . . thence along the ridge about sixty poles to a twenty-inch black oak. . . . These bearings and distances are not very definite. Looks like we'll have to do some hunting and guessing."

"I guess Saul and Barton just stepped it off and marked trees with an ax when they surveyed," Sparrel said with a chuckle.

"Where is this Cranesnest and Pinnacle?" Reuben asked.

"The two points you saw up yonder from the porch, Cranesnest on your right," Jasper said.

"We'll go up there and see if we can make a start tomorrow."

Cynthia heard the talk go on to Sparrel's books and the Weekly Gazette and Cincinnati where all the big Ohio River boats went, and the growth of the coal and lumber business and the Big Sandy River traffic, the coal mines and unsightly villages, and the river towns of Catlettsburg and Ashland and frontown and Portsmouth all beginning to expand with sawmills and furnaces and brick plants and wholesale houses. She finished the kitchen and went to prepare the beds.

The sound of their voices carried no words to Cynthia in the corner room. She smoothed the sheet and got two large soft pillows and laid them in the place of the bolster. "I guess that's ready for him, and it's not any slouchy." She looked at the bed again, and then went to the closet and chose the best red-and-white coverlet in the difficult snail-trail and cat-track patterns, spreading it over the foot of the bed. Then she went down to the kitchen and said to Sparrel in the exact manner of Julia that the beds were ready any time now.

She got into her nightgown, feeling the cool star-touched dark moving about in the bottoms and looking into her room.

"May nights on Wolfpen are cool and soft. What a long day since Mother went to Jenny's. It was just this morning. Now it is night and I have cooked two meals and served a stranger who was not yet so strange. I wasn't by the sheepfold, I wasn't by the well, I wasn't by a pear tree in a soft blue gown. I was just hot and fretted and untidy-looking. But Rebekah had a water-jug on her shoulder, and I don't reckon that's any different much from a wooden bowl in a body's arms, and it's as good to feed a man good bread that he likes as to water some dusty old camels. Mother was on a chip like the orchard is so quiet at night like the Great Dipper above the Pinnacle. Saul is quiet and Barton is quiet, and Tivis. The men are quiet, and the mill wheel down there is still—There weren't any blossoms on the pear tree, anyway."

CHAPTER VIII

Cynthia was up before daybreak, alert and happy in the feeling that she was mistress of the household on this first morning. She brushed her hair carefully. "Mother always looks neat and fresh when she goes to get breakfast, like she was going to meeting or somewhere."

Sparrel was in the kitchen building the fire. He greeted her kindly.

"I didn't have to call you this morning."

"I had it on my mind and I woke up." "I reckon Julia'll be back by noon. She picked a good time to go," Sparrel said, but gently and with no wish to embarrass her.

Sparrel went on to the barn. Before Cynthia had rolled the biscuit dough flat on the bread board to be cut into circles, the boys were at the wash rock. Abrael was excited and playful. When Jesse came up, still rubbing his eyes, Abrael flung a pan of cold water in his face, and then dodged him, laughing, about the well and the rock.

Reuben laughed with them. He saw Cynthia before the table in the kitchen looking fresh and rested and without confusion.

"Good morning."
"Good morning."
"I'm afraid we've made a lot of extra work for you."

"Not at all," she said, and slipped the pan of biscuits into the oven. "It's not much work, and it's always fun to see if the biscuits will rise and get crisp without burning."

"I hope these won't burn," Reuben said.

And they didn't. They were brown and flaky and the men broke them open with their fingers and put butter in them to melt, and ate them with honey. Cynthia served them and watched them eat with satisfaction, thinking of the different moods this strange spring had brought. She liked to hear Reuben talking with Sparrel about the work, his pleasant voice speaking easily and capably to the point.

"We will need two ax-men to clear a sight, and a rod-man and two chain-men. You'll have to help me find the marks on the trees and keep directions. The early deeds won't help much except to tell us that the line crosses a ravine or ends on a rock ledge."

"One of my boys will have to stay on the place to look after things," Sparrel answered. "The other two can help. We can get another chainman and two ax-men all right."

Jesse and Abrael drew lots for the beginning: Jesse won. But Abrael was so full of disappointment that Reuben said to Sparrel: "We can't do more than get started this morning. If you can spare them, suppose we all go up and look over the ground."

And Abrael looked across the table at Cynthia and smiled.

From the kitchen window Cynthia watched the five men, carrying axes, a corn knife, the compass and the chain, go out of the yard by the well, and along the path that led to the Shelf and then, more vaguely, up to Cranesnest.

By the time the men had reached Cranesnest Shelf, the mist was gone from the hollows except for the thin wisps still clinging to the treetops in the deep purple wrinkles of the hills at the head of the hollows.

They stopped by the rails on the Shelf and Sparrel answered Reuben's questions, telling of the Pattern men who lay there, and of Cynthia's fancy concerning Saul.

"I should have been of Saul's time," Reuben said. "Think of being the first white man to stand on one of these points, just as the mist is lifting, and saying to the silence, 'All I can see when the mist is up will be the Pattern lands.'"

"The next best thing is to re-survey the land those old fellows first walked over." Then he laughed boyishly, and they climbed on up to the rocky point of Cranesnest.

The Pattern men stood behind Reuben, seeing the glorious panorama afresh through his eyes: the absolute peace in the Wolfpen Hollow from the house down to the mill which squatted like a black spider at their feet.

"This is a good place to begin just about anything," Reuben said, watching the glint of sun on Gannon creek where it bent out of sight.

They had no trouble finding the oak tree designated as the beginning point in the deed of 1814. It was now a huge tree, and the three ax marks in the rough bark had grown and spread until no inexperienced eye could have identified them.

"That's the old corner tree," Sparrel said. And Reuben, looking at the deed, "Thence in a southeasterly direction, following the back of the ridge, about fifty-five poles to a sixteen-inch walnut about a pole from a big rock which sticks out near the head of a hollow; that's definite, all right."

Slowly they made their way along the ridge, Abrael pushing ahead through the underbrush trying to locate marked trees, Jasper hacking at the slender saplings with his ax, Jesse slashing the greenbriers and the small brush with the knife, Sparrel and Reuben stepping off the distance as they advanced. They climbed over fallen, rotting and moss-grown tree-trunks, through grapevine tangles and berry vines, and over rocks. It was hard, slow going. Then Abrael found a tree notched fore and aft to set them right again.

Believe Death Valley Was Once a Lake Bed

In support of the view that Death valley in California was formerly the bed of a lake, is the discovery of traces of an ancient water-line running along the flanks of the enclosing mountains at a height of 600 feet. The bottom of the valley is 200 feet below sea-level. The winds from the Pacific cross four ranges of mountains before reaching the valley, and by that time they have been drained of their last drop of moisture.

It is said that no spot on earth surpasses Death valley in aridity or Tophet-like heat. The lake that once filled it is believed to have been fed by a river which has now also vanished. The borax deposits of Death valley are commercially important, but labor is all but impossible in a place where to be without water for a single hour in summer means death.

HOW ARE YOU TODAY

DR. JAMES W. BARTON
Talks About

Eating to Grow Thin

FROM time to time a new reducing diet appears, catches popular fancy for a while, and then passes out of existence, never to return.

Now these reducing diets if followed faithfully will take the weight off and take it off in a short time, but unfortunately they remove more than fat from the system. This is because, while removing weight, they fail to supply some of the needed minerals—lime, phosphorus, iron and some of the needed vitamins such as vitamin C which prevents scurvy and skin ailments, vitamin D the bone forming vitamin, vitamin A which helps to prevent colds and bronchitis, vitamin B which assists appetite and digestion.

Therefore a diet that contains good nutritious foods may be too one-sided, as it were.

While the reduction of weight is being accomplished the body must be protected from loss of vital substances or rather these vital substances must be supplied by the diet while this same diet is reducing weight.

Thus the ideal reducing diet is a "protective" diet also.

Ten Diet Rules

One of the simplest yet correct diets for providing a protective reducing diet is that outlined by Dr. Mabel E. Baldwin in her book "Diet and Like It."

There are ten rules to follow:

Include in the diet daily:

1. At least one pint of milk) whole or buttermilk). The chief purpose of this rule is to provide lime (calcium). The only foods besides milk that are rich enough in lime to prevent shortage of this element are cheese and leafy vegetables.
2. About one-quarter pound of meat, fish or poultry, or about two-thirds cupful of beans or peas (measured after cooking). These foods provide protein (body-builder), iron, and phosphorus. Fish is only half as rich in iron as meat.
3. A small portion of butter. The chief purpose here is to provide sufficient A, butter containing more than any other common food. Eggs, fish livers, and the yellow and green vegetables are also rich in vitamin A.
4. At least one egg. This is to provide sufficient vitamin D. Of course everybody knows that cod-liver oil is rich in vitamin D, but eggs certainly suit the palate more than cod liver oil. Eggs also contain iron.
5. At least two servings of raw fruit.
6. At least one serving of raw vegetable. Some raw foods should be included in the diet because the vitamin C content of most foods is destroyed so rapidly during ordinary cooking that diets consisting entirely of cooked foods do not usually contain enough vitamin C. Canned or stewed tomatoes are an exception as they retain the vitamin C.
7. About one-half cupful each of three cooked vegetables. Any vegetables will do but on the days that fish is selected, one of them should be a green leafy vegetable. Vegetables provide the important minerals and also the roughage which by irritating the lining of the lower bowel prevent constipation.
8. At least one portion of whole-grain product. Whole grains provide protein (body builder), starch (energy giver), vitamins, minerals, and plenty of roughage. Whole wheat, for example, contains from three to five times as much iron, lime and phosphorus as white flour made from it.
9. Iodized salt. This iodized salt is to prevent any shortage in iodine. This provides all the iodine the body needs.
10. In addition to foods provided by the first nine rules, include whatever kinds of food may be desired, and arrange so that these amounts of food do not increase the weight.

As we consider the above ten rules, even those of us who are not wanting to reduce weight will recognize what an all-round diet is provided.

Salt Stops Heat Cramps

So serious is the loss of water in those individuals working in hot places—foundries, furnace rooms, bakeries—that some means had to be found to prevent severe heat cramps which affected hundreds of men during the hot weather. Fortunately it was found that a little tablet containing a quarter teaspoonful of ordinary table salt taken with each glass of water was sufficient to prevent the heat cramps and prevent too great loss of weight.

SEEING IS FOUND MOST IMPORTANT OF FIVE SENSES

Scientific research discloses that the eyes receive 87 per cent of all impressions we receive. Our ears receive but 7 per cent; our sense of smell, 3.5 per cent; touch, 1.5 per cent; taste, 1 per cent.

These five senses form our sole contact with the world and the people in it. All that we know comes to us through our senses.

Though the eyes represent our most priceless physical asset, most of us subject our eyes to needless abuse. That this is so, is seen in the fact that 22 per cent of all children in the country have defective sight.

It is significant perhaps that defective eyesight is common among farm families. This is thought to be due to the fact that there are still several million farm homes to whom the advantages of electric lighting are not available.

Perhaps the most popular of these are the gasoline and kerosene pressure mantle lamps—popular not alone because of their exceptional brilliance, but because they are economical to use and priced within the reach of all.

What Does It Prove? Bout Gives Sailor $30,000 for Trouble

WHILE beating his Basque Woodchopper par in slapping over the Boston Bartender at Yankee Stadium, Joe Louis was far short of his top Chicago Kingfish performance.

Whether he is, by any chance, the same gifted athlete he was before the Schmeling mistake is something that need not be gone into here.

Jack Sharkey, two rounds and 1.02 later, he was grinning. That, of course, may have been because he was getting his first glimpse of Leon Ketchel, the human beanpole who some day may be stood up to be bowled over in the same alley and under the same benevolent auspices as last night.

Anyhow it hardly matters. Keeping his right up high, as he did not against the fairly young and fairly agile Schmeling, Louis started slowly. Perhaps a punch into those whiskers he has never yet had time to grow might have caused him some inconvenience and slowed him up even more.

Sharkey went through the first round as if surprised that the bad news was so long delayed. So, he pawed his bemused way into the second round, scarcely landing a blow. He went down from a right to the jaw, got up and went down again shortly thereafter from a right, a left and a feeling of futility.

Sloughed Sailor Need Have No Regrets

While explaining how he held the Brown Bomber to a mere count of ten kayo three years after the stalwart Carnera won the championship from him by means of a slashing, lone uppercut, the sloughed sailor need have no regrets, though.

Not in the Box Score: Dartmouth football fans are worried about Mutt Ray, who recently underwent a back operation. The crack center is far from right and chances are he will see little action this fall.

NOT IN THE BOX SCORE: BITSY GRANT'S European tennis tour cost him $250, exclusive of incidental expenses. His partner in the insurance business, who was supposed to take care of his renewals, fell ill while Betsy was away and let a number of policies lapse.

Although the Giants are in the midst of one of the most magnificent pennant drives of recent years gossipers still operate on them. The latest lowdown is that Hank Leiber and Harry Gumbert will be traded to the Cards for Jim Collins next winter.

Pop Warner and Gil Dobie will be personally matching their football coaching wits for the first time when Boston college meets Temple in October. This is Warner's forty-second year as a coach while Dobie has been on duty for a mere 35 seasons.

Ohio State Fears Grid Date With New York U

Strange as it may seem Ohio State fears that early football date with N. Y. U. this fall. Buckeye track athletes, here for the World Labor meet, reported that folks around Columbus feel the Violets are going to be so tough that there is practically no betting money in sight.

George Varoff, the high-soaring pole vaulter, will stay away from sports until after Christmas. He feels that he has been spending too much time on such play and is anxious to catch up in his studies at Oregon, where he is a sophomore this fall.

Although Jess Sweetser, president of the Metropolitan Golf association, is playing as good golf as any New York amateur this summer, his temperament still gets in his way during tournament competition.

This has been a singularly unfortunate summer for Bill Cook, captain and future coach of the Rangers. His mother died two months ago, just after the popular hockey veteran had moved his family east to the new house he bought near Hamilton, Ont.

Although he appears to be a quiet, well-mannered fellow, Wally Berger of the Bees likes practical jokes even better than base hits. His pet prank is to put elephants in the pullman berths of his teammates.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for September 13 THE COUNCIL IN JERUSALEM

LESSON TEXT—Acts 15:22-29; Galatians 2:1, 2, 9, 10. GOLDEN TEXT—For ye, brethren, were called for freedom; only use not your freedom for an occasion to the flesh, but through love be servants one to another.

Although the first council at Jerusalem (Acts 11) had decided that "to the Gentiles also hath God granted repentance unto life, the question did not stay settled, for there were persistent Judaizing teachers who now contended that even though the Gentiles could be saved, they had to come into the church by way of Judaism and fulfill the Jewish rite of circumcision.

I. Grace versus Law (Acts 15:1). The entire future of the gospel ministry was in a sense dependent on the solution of this problem. Christianity is the only religious faith in the world that presents justification by grace, all others follow the path of works.

There may be times when it becomes the duty of the Christian worker to take an uncompromising stand for the truth of God and refuse to be moved, come what may. But certainly there should be no such spirit in dealing with differing interpretations of Scripture on the part of sincere and earnest Christian brethren.

III. Vindication of the Preachers of God's Grace (Acts 15:22-29; Gal. 2:1, 2, 9, 10). After presenting a plain disavowal of those who had troubled them and subverted their souls (what a serious thing it is to teach error concerning God's Word!), the council being of one accord gave recognition to Paul and Barnabas as men who had "hazarded their lives for the name of the Lord Jesus."

Following an Ideal Blessed is he who carries within himself a God, an ideal, and who obeys it; ideal of art, ideal of science, ideal of the gospel virtues; therein lie the springs of great thoughts and great actions; they all reflect light from the Infinite.—Pasteur.

To Grow Old Gracefully— Nature Is Harmonious and She Has Beauty for Every Age

"I WANT to grow old gracefully." That was the most popular answer of a large group of women college graduates answering a questionnaire sent out by their alma mater.

It may not require powers of observation to notice how many people, women particularly, do not grow gracefully. But it takes a thinking person, one with a keenly developed sense of values, to stop to wish, in the heat and fever of youth, that she may grow old gracefully.

We have said that many women, particularly, do not grow old gracefully. For you rarely see a middle-aged man camouflaged to appear something that he is not—a young man.

And so many a woman looks far younger than her years. She is the woman whose face and figure have retained longer than usual the qualities of youth.

You see many beautiful middle-aged women—women who are their age, and beautiful at the same time. One of the most beautiful women I know is one—now fifty—who has long had prematurely gray—now almost white—hair.

For her cameo-like features are set off to greater advantage by the powdery whiteness of her hair. Because of a glow of health and vitality she does, incidentally, appear younger than she is.

It is when nature's harmony is violated by a middle-aged woman, no matter what her natural charms, attempting to appear a flapper, that beauty is lost.

Precept and Imitation It is by imitation, far more than by precept, that we learn everything; and what we learn thus, we acquire not only more effectively, but more pleasantly.

Household Questions

When making cole slaw, or cabbage salad, add half a small onion, shredded fine and mix with the cabbage. It improves the flavor.

Green bananas may be ripened by placing in a paper bag and keeping in a dark closet for a few days.

After bottles have been washed with soap and water they can be further cleaned and sweetened by dropping small pieces of fresh lemon into each bottle half filled with water and shaking.

When having oak floors laid, have flooring delivered at the house a number of days before work is to be done. Open bales so that dry air can get to the strips to reduce any moisture content.

To remove water spots from silk, dampen evenly and press material while still damp. This may be done by sparging carefully with clear water or by shaking it in the steam from a briskly boiling tea kettle until it is thoroughly damp.

To prevent the juice in fruit tart boiling over, mix a little cornstarch with the sugar before adding it to tart filling.

Leftover juices if boiled and used instead of water to dissolve gelatin will give gelatin a richer flavor.

Do not uncover a steamed pudding for the first half hour of cooking.

Aluminum pots and pans that have become discolored may be brightened by rubbing with a cloth moistened with lemon juice.

Three Letters

Fred C. Holbeck

Who Has Been a Member of the Legislature for the Past Eight Years and Now is a Candidate for STATE SENATOR

What a man may be expected to do in the future, can best be judged by what he has done in the past. On that basis the following three letters are of interest:

Lansing, Mich., July 16th, 1935
Honorable Fred C. Holbeck
East Tawas, Michigan
Dear Representative Holbeck:

The officers and members of the Michigan Farm Bureau deeply appreciate the fine service you rendered to farmers as well as the entire State during the legislative session just closed.

Your efforts to secure an income tax and other tax reforms needed by agriculture were outstanding, and there were many other ways by which you demonstrated day by day your desire to help the farming industry.

Your record, as reported to us by Mr. Newton, is one of which you may well be proud, and I am sure it will be favorably remembered by farmers everywhere.

Sincerely yours,
C. L. Brody, Executive Secretary

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 12th, 1936
Hon. Fred C. Holbeck
East Tawas, Michigan

The officers and members of the Michigan State Grange appreciate the fine service you have rendered to agriculture, as well as to the rest of the State, during the legislative sessions of which you have been a member of the House of Representatives.

Your untiring efforts to change our unjust tax system, to one based on "ability to pay" meets the approval of the Grange and all right thinking people.

The Grange considers you one of its best friends in the Legislature. Your record is one of which you may justly be proud and we hope for your continued service in the Legislature.

Yours fraternally,
C. H. Bramble,
Master of the Michigan State Grange

Grant, Mich., Aug. 9th, 1935

Foundry company of Detroit. R. J. Goldie, a former resident of Tawas City, is vice-president and general manager of this company.

The Tawas City water works is a project that has been talked of ever since the organization of the city.

In August of 1933 the city officials consisting of Mayor Alfred Boomer, Councilmen William Rouiller, Frank Moore, Ernest Burtzloff, William Leslie, H. M. Rollin and Abram Frank decided that fifty years of talking and no concerted action was getting the city water works project nowhere. They therefore engaged the Francis Engineering company of Saginaw to make a preliminary survey of the city to estimate the cost of such a project. Shortly after the engineers made their report the Federal government started the C. W. A. work program. Quick action on the part of city officials secured a grant of several thousand dollars for the construction of sanitary sewers. To date this project has laid over four miles of sewers and has in operation a model disposal plant.

The city officials, while pushing the sewer project, also kept working for a water works system. John Brugger succeeded Alfred Boomer as mayor and in October of 1935 the government asked for a special election to determine the attitude of the taxpayers toward a water works. Mayor Brugger, the city council, chamber of commerce, board of public works and the women's clubs immediately put their shoulders to the wheel and began an extensive campaign to give the taxpayers a clear picture of the situation. At the election the project carried by a vote of 200 in favor thereof and 12 votes against.

The water works project is a part of President Roosevelt's program to employ men and at the same time benefit the taxpayers at large. All the money loaned the city will be paid back by the revenue from the system.

The people of Tawas City are to be congratulated on having such aggressive and far-seeing citizens such as Mayors Boomer and Brugger and the various aldermen who have given their time and efforts to bring this project to the point of construction.

Ripples From Guiley Creek By the Trout Specialist

On Monday night, at midnight, the curtain falls on the 1936 trout season, which was one of the best of the last ten years as far as these streams are concerned. From all reports, practically the whole trout country shared the same improved conditions, though not to the degree that was noticed in the east branch of the AuGres, which was doctored by the C. C. C. boys last summer.

From Decoration Day until the Fourth of July we had the best fly fishing on the AuGres and Guiley that I have seen in the last six years. Since that time, however, catches have fallen off to some extent, but have remained far better than last year. During May, but not yet fly fishing was very good.

While the run of big rainbow spawners was even larger than the huge run of last year, Brown trout were planted here four years ago, but very few were caught this year. I have only been able to get two, one undersized, and the other a 15 1/2 inch beauty that I had to fight among the logs and brush of the upper Guiley. It nearly broke my light Bowen rod.

A total of twenty-one people spent the week end at the cottage of H. P. Wade on the AuGres. Trap shooting, softball, and golf were enjoyed by the group, which reported a very good time.

Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Leary and family of Detroit, with Mrs. Earl Kleckner, Miss Kate Baird and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Baird, and "Mac" McKinley spent the week end at Sand Lake.

E. G. Stensrud of Grand Rapids was here over the week end. Mr. Stensrud is one of the best all-around fly fishermen I know and has been a regular visitor here for the last eleven years. Fishing for bass recently with a streamer fly and spinner, he had four nice ones and was trying for the limit when he hooked what was first thought to be a snag. It turned out to be a moving "snag," however, which towed them out to the center of the lake. It took over 46 minutes to land it, a 22 1/2 pound carp. That was at Barton lake, Kalamazoo county.

TO THE REPUBLICAN MEN AND WOMEN OF THE 28th SENATORIAL DISTRICT:

As a Republican candidate for State Senator in this district, I am asking you to vote for me in the primary to be held next week Tuesday, September 15. Before this time you have been acquainted through the newspapers of this district, and comment of those outside, of my record of eight years in the legislature and while I am not in the habit of making promises before election or primary, I do want to say this, that I will continue my fight for the interests of every county in the district. There will be no north side and no south side, no east end and no west end, but I will make it a full time job for everything of value and interest to this district. Roads, schools, state parks, highways will continue to have my whole-hearted and vigorous support and the interest of agriculture will be foremost in my mind always.

This district is a large one and that it might be properly served, I will maintain an office in Lansing so that the affairs of the district will be properly administered and promptly cared for, that delegations visiting Lansing and individuals having business with departments of the state government can be properly introduced and their interests and concerns looked after without delay.

If this is the kind of representation you want in the State Senate, go to the primary next Tuesday and put a cross in front of my name and I will be grateful and thankful to you for your help and support.

Sincerely yours,
MILES M. CALLAGHAN.

To The Republican Electors of Arenac District

September 15 you are to choose your candidate for State Representative of this district for the November election. In making this selection you are interested in the man who may best serve the majority, not the few.

Before the coming primary it will be impossible to see and contact every voter, as the district is too large. I believe that a farmer can best serve this district. Your interests and mine are mutual. No man can serve two masters. Where his interest is will get the first consideration. I believe that I can serve agriculture and industry, alike. I put agriculture first because I feel that if the farmer is given equal representation in the state legislature, business and industry will prosper through the prosperity of the farmer.

I have no other business except farming and my only income is through this source. I have the endorsement of the leading Republicans of the district and the Iosco County Grange. A letter from C. H. Bramble, Master of the State Grange, says, "I should like to see you elected and sent to the State Legislature. We need farmers of your ability there."

I have the endorsement of former members of the legislature, ministers, school teachers, professional people, county officials and a majority of the businessmen of the district.

I stand for public improvements, no matter which part of the district they are located in, and will use no selfish influence, if elected, to keep a needed improvement from any locality.

A Vote for Edward O. Putnam of Hale for State Representative Will Mean to the Farmers of the District that Their Interests Will be Given First Consideration.

Vote for Marjorie Morley Lickfelt, for six years assistant to Frank F. Taylor, Register of Deeds, as his successor to the office. Pol Adv
