Civil War Romance Picture Coming To Rivola Theatre

Research into the historic battle of the Monitor and the Merrimac revealed that in the three-hour fight only ten percent of the Merrimac's crew was killed, and not a single man lost his life on the Monitor. "Hearts in Bondage," Republic's Civil War romance picture, featuring James Dunn, Mae Clarke, Charlotte Henry and David Manners and coming to the Rivola Theatre, Tawas City, Sunday and Monday, September 20 and 21, revolves around the building and subsequent inconclusive fight of the ironclads.

Dunn and Manners play the roles of young naval officers and buddies, whom the war puts on opposing sides, and who in the end are pitted against each other as officers of the two gunboats.

Lew Ayres, for long a popular screen star, who has now turned to directing, not only made "Hearts in Bondage" as his initial directing job, but suggested the basic idea for the dramatic romance.

Among the large supporting cast are such stellar performers as Henry Walthall, Fritz Leiber, George Irving, J. M. Kerrigan, Irving Pichel, Frank McGlynn, Helen Seamon, Bodd Rosing and Cecil Weston.

School Of Instruction Held For Iosco County Soil Conservation Men

Clarence A. Swanbuck of Genesee county held a school of instruction here yesterday for Iosco county soil conservation reporters. The following men were in attendance: Victor J. Anderson, Alabaster; Ferdinand Schmalz, Tawas; Harry Van Patten and Victor Herriman, Grant; Harry Cross and Frank Meyer, Wilber; Edward Burgeson, Baldwin; T. G. Scofield and Glenwood Streeter, Plainfield; Harold Black, Reno.

Harry Goodale has been appointed district soil conservation supervisor. The district comprises Iosco, Arenac, Ogemaw, Alcona, Oscoda and Alpena counties.

Deer Law Violators Arrested By Officers

Fred Green of Wilber township was taken before Justice W. C. Davidson Thursday for violating the deer law. He pleaded guilty and was sentenced to pay a fine of $100.00 and costs of $6.85 or serve 90 days in the county jail. He chose the jail sentence. His gun was confiscated.

Earl Brown of Tawas City and Robert Lickfelt of East Tawas paid fines of $10.00 each and costs of $6.85 Monday for illegal possession of venison.

Fred Munn of Bay City and Otto Peterson of Rose City were assessed costs of $6.85 for having firearms in game area during closed season. Their guns were confiscated.

The arrests were made by Conservation Officer Arthur Leitz and Officer T. W. Carpenter.

YUCATAN WINS REGATTA HELD AT BAY CITY

Saginaw Bay Yacht Club Class A Races Taken By Tawas Boat

The Yucatan, owned by Harold Moeller of this city, again showed her mettle and the skill of her crew when she won the Class A races Saturday and Sunday at the Saginaw Bay Yacht Club regatta at Bay City. The crew included Harold Moeller, Wray Cox and Gerald Mallon.

The Yucatan sailed for Bay City Friday morning, leaving Tawas bay at 9:25. She arrived at the Saginaw Bay Yacht Club dock at 9:45 in the evening. During the trip she was becalmed for two and one-half hours.

The Saginaw Bay Yacht Club regatta started Saturday. The Yucatan crossed the finish line in two hours and 24 minutes over a 14-mile course to win the Class A race Saturday afternoon. Six minutes behind was the Sauk, owned by Hubert Smith of Bay City, and two minutes back of the Sauk was W. F. Jennison's Aurora, another Bay City boat.

Smith Bolton of Saginaw was fourth in 2:55 with the Chinook. Guy Moulthrop of Bay City was fifth with the Y-Not. Time, two hours, 55 minutes and 30 seconds. Fen Davidson of Flint finished just five seconds later with the Rogue.

The Yucatan also took first place Sunday to win the annual week end regatta. The Sauk took second place, Aurora, third; Boreal, fourth; Y-Not, fifth; Chinook, sixth.

If the winds are favorable the Yucatan will be sailed home this Sunday.

Mio Man Attacks Child

Albert Barnaby, age 58 years, was arrested Wednesday near East Tawas by Sheriff John Moran. He was charged with criminally attacking a nineteen months old child. He pleaded not guilty and a hearing will be held Tuesday. Barnaby is from Mio and had recently completed a two-year sentence at Ionia prison for arson.

Alpena Man Has Narrow Call When Train Hits Car

Charles Trojan of Alpena had a narrow escape from death Tuesday night, when he fell asleep at the wheel of the automobile he was driving and crashed through a guard rail on U.S.-23 north of East Tawas. The car ran on to the D. & M. tracks and was struck by the south-bound evening passenger train. The front end of the auto was demolished but Mr. Trojan escaped with minor injuries.

Local Boy Chosen To Attend 4-H Forestry Camp At Vanderbilt

Robert Brooks, son of Mrs. Harry Brooks of Wilber township, was chosen as the 4-H forestry club delegate from Iosco county to attend the first annual 4-H conservation camp now being held at the Pigeon river state forest headquarters eleven miles east of Vanderbilt. Robert is in the ninth grade at the upper Wilber school and has taken up forestry as his first 4-H club project this year.

Each county of the state is entitled to one delegate who is a member in good standing of either a forestry or pheasant raising project. The camp is made possible, and free of charge to the delegates, through a liberal allocation from the Federal Cartridge Company of Minneapolis, Minnesota, and the furnishing of equipment and housing facilities by the State Department of Conservation.

The boys while at camp will be under the supervision of members of the state 4-H club department and members of the State Conservation Department. Instructions will be given in forest fire control, the making of new forest plantings along with proper cultural practices, tree and wood identification, wood lot thinning, and the study of suitable wild game covers.

B. MALLONGIVES BAY CITY ONLY 5 HITS; FANS 16

Marshall Packers Walloped By Tawas, 11 to 2, Amid Comedy Of Errors

Bill Mallon turned in a five-hit pitching performance Sunday and fanned 16 men to give Tawas an 11-2 decision over the league-leading Marshall Packing team of Bay City. Despite their defeat the Packers clung to their slim half-game lead in the league race when West Branch passed up an opportunity to move into first place by dropping its game with Gladwin by a 4-0 score.

Sunday's game at the local athletic field was marred by an enormous number of errors, nearly all of which resulted from bad throws. Tawas was guilty of five miscues during the contest, three of these coming in the first and second frames when the Packers scored their runs. The Packers were not as fortunate in fielding as the locals, as ten errors were marked against them. In addition to these there were several which the scorer failed to chalk up, either because of a kind disposition or because they came too fast. At any rate, the Bay City team gave a very poor exhibition for a club that is out in front in the pennant race.

Given good support by their mates, the two hurlers, B. Mallon of Tawas and Sullivan of Bay City, would have staged a real pitchers' battle. As things were, however, it turned out to be a run-away for Mallon. Sullivan came close to matching Mallon's five-hit performance, yielding the locals only seven safeties, but he fell seven short in equalling Bill's strike-out list. Mallon had an edge over Sullivan in control as he gave only two passes while Sullivan walked five, hit two batsmen and threw two wild pitches.

Tawas sewed up the game in the early innings. After Bay City had tallied one run in its first time at bat the locals came through with four counters in their half of the (Turn to No. 2, Back Page)

Trap Shoot Sunday

A trap shoot will be held Sunday afternoon, September 20, starting at 1 o'clock. Cash and merchandise prizes will be awarded. The best five high scorers from each town and also the high gun for the afternoon will receive prizes.

Shooters are expected from Saginaw, Standish, Oscoda and Whittemore in addition to those from the Tawas. Shooters from other towns are also invited to participate in the event.

The Soo Locks

The Soo Locks are one of the world's greatest engineering feats, locks that literally lift up a lake 20 feet. Through these locks pass more tonnage than through any other canal in the world, including the Panama. Practically all the wheat and iron ore from our great West passes through them on their way to smelters and seaports and all the coal from eastern fields must go through the Soo on its westward passage.

"China Clipper," Air Thriller At Family

The new dramatic air thriller produced by First National Pictures, "China Clipper," will be shown at the Family Theatre, East Tawas, on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, September 20, 21 and 22.

Thrill is said to follow on thrill in this smashing romance and drama of the air. The backgrounds are realistic and authentic, the exteriors having been filmed, for the most part, at Alameda, air base of the Pan-American Airways on the Pacific Coast near San Francisco, where the famous China Clipper hops off on its voyages to the Philippine Islands.

The story deals with the lone fight of a war ace to establish a trans-oceanic air service. The picture ends with a smashing climax in which the man of vision wins against almost unsurmountable odds.

The all star cast includes Pat O'Brien, Beverly Roberts, Ross Alexander, Humphrey Bogart, Marie Wilson and Henry B. Walthall.

News Review of Current Events the World Over

Hitler Demands Return of German Colonies—American Fleet to Maneuver in North Pacific—Discord in World Power Conference.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

HUNDREDS of thousands of Nazis, attending the party convention in Nuremberg, were roused to great enthusiasm by a proclamation from Reichsfuehrer Hitler to the effect that Germany, having re-armed and scrapped most of the Versailles treaty, was ready to press its demand for restoration of its pre-war colonies. This, he asserted, was necessary to the economic independence of Germany and would be achieved within the next four years. Said the chancellor:

"It is regrettable that the rest of the world fails to understand the nature and greatness of our task. If a certain British politician declares Germany needs no colonies as she may buy her raw materials, then this remark is about as bright as that of the Bourbon princess who, when she saw a mob crying for bread, wondered why—if the people had no bread—they did not eat cake.

"If Germany had not, for fifteen years, been squeezed dry and cheated of her entire international savings; if she had not lost her entire foreign holdings; if, above all, she still possessed her colonies, we could much more easily master the difficulties."

Then, addressing the convention directly, the fuhrer launched a new campaign against bolshevism and the Jews.

"Bolshevism seeks to exterminate governments based on a community of race and blood and replace them by non-Aryan Jewish element of no race," Hitler warned. "Sooner or later sovietistic authority states will end in anarchy, since Jewish elements possess only despotic faculties, never organizing reconstructive ones.

"The rock of foundation of the state is an authoritarian will. Unlimited individual liberty leads to anarchy. All states have experienced the destructive effects of democracy."

FOLLOWING closely upon the visit to France of Gen. Rydz-Smigly of Poland, France and Poland signed a military treaty of friendship. It was reported, too, that France had agreed to lend 600,000,000 francs for completion of Poland's new railroad linking the Silesian coal fields with the port of Gdynia, rival of the Free City of Danzig.

Josef Beck, Polish foreign minister, told Berlin the Franco-Polish accord would have no effect on friendly relations with Germany; but nevertheless there was considerable anxiety in Warsaw concerning Germany's reaction.

BACK at his desk after an illness of six months, Secretary of the Navy Claude A. Swanson immediately made an announcement that will be of deep interest to Japan.

The annual fleet maneuvers, which last May were shifted to the Canal Zone as a conciliatory gesture to Japan, will be held next year in North Pacific and Hawaiian waters, and probably the Tokio press will yelp again. With the announcement Sec. Swanson asserted Japanese plans to retain overage submarines and destroyers involve a "violation" of the London and Washington naval treaties, which are to expire December 31 by Japanese abrogation. He followed up his charge with the statement that the United States has completed plans for two new battleships and is prepared to begin construction "at a moment's notice."

The fleet maneuvers, officially designated as "fleet problem No. 18," will be held during late May and early June. The area of operations, it was indicated, will be the triangle between the Aleutian Islands, Hawaii, and Seattle, where the fleet problem of 1935 was conducted. Vessels and planes probably will work as far west as the Wake Islands.

Armament of the new battleships is at present limited to 14 inch guns, but Admiral William H. Standley, chief of naval operations, said frankly that if Japan does not agree to this limitation by next April, "the sky is the limit."

AMERICAN dairymen are protesting vainly to Secretary of State Hull against the reciprocal trade treaty with Brazil which, they assert, is seriously injuring the industry by encouragement of the manufacture of imitative butter. Under the treaty, Brazilian babassu oil, unknown in United States markets prior to 1935, now is being used at the rate of more than a million pounds a month for manufacture of a butter substitute.

Mr. Hull referred the protests to Assistant Secretary Sayre, who pointed out that the provision for free importation of the nut and oil was authorized by congress in the trade agreement act of 1934. He added that the success of the program was of vital interest to the American dairy farmer, "who has more to gain from the re-establishment of prosperous domestic markets for his products through the restoration of an abundant foreign trade than by a policy of excluding even the most remotely competitive products."

THERE was glee in government circles when it was announced that the United States treasury offering of $914,000,000 in 20 to 23-year two and three fourths per cent bonds dated September 15 was oversubscribed nine times. Of course those who are informed know that the reason is the banks, insurance companies and other investment institutions are glutted with money for which they have been seeking profitable employment. Of the treasury's latest offering $400,000,000 of bonds is to raise new cash and $514,000,000 is to provide for the exchange of 1.5 per cent notes maturing September 15.

HUNDREDS of delegates, from many nations, were present when the third World Power conference opened in Washington, with President Julius Dorpmueller in the chair. Prospects were good for a useful discussion of the problems connected with the industry, but discord crept in early in the proceedings. At a round table debate on public regulation and ownership of utilities, M. P. Davidson, representing Mayor Fiorello La Guardia of New York, said the only way to reduce electric rates is by threatening private ownership. Three prominent public utility men promptly "took a walk," and John C. Dalton, manager of the County of London Electric Supply, criticized Davidson's talk as a "tirade."

The discussion started in connection with a paper by John E. Zimmerman, president of the United Gas Improvement company, who held that power "yardsticks" such as the TVA and Boulder Dam cannot be compared with private utilities unless operating conditions are similar. Such yardsticks, he said, will lead to competitive methods already proved "wasteful and unsatisfactory."

In papers taking the opposite view, Prof. William E. Mosher of Syracuse university, and James C. Bonright of the New York State Power Authority, held that public competition with private companies is "indisputable evidence" of declining faith in regulation.

ACCORDING to the New York Times, whose dispatches from Washington are usually most reliable, President Roosevelt is considering for submission to congress, in event of his re-election, a far-reaching plan of governmental reorganization. The plan possibly would involve, the Times stated, the consolidation or abolition of some of the major departments and bureaus.

"Whatever the President finally proposes," the Times said, "one may hear in informed quarters now that the regular cabinet posts might be decreased . . ."

A possibility, the Times stated, would be consolidation of the army, navy and air corps in a department of national defense.

"The administration proposes to follow a definite policy of curtailing or dismantling emergency units that have outrun their usefulness," the paper continued.

FRANCE'S government has decided that conditions in Europe are so threatening that it must spend a huge sum for national defense. So it adopted a program for increasing the efficiency of the army which will cost $930,000,000 in the next four years. The proposal was made by Edouard Daladier, minister of defense. The first installment of $280,000,000 will be disbursed in 1937.

The program calls for an intensive increase of mechanized units and also for rearmament. Furthermore, it provides an increase in the size of the professional army and the creation of a specialized group of long service noncommissioned officers such as already exist in the French navy.

The program also provides for strengthening the frontier fortifications. But the chief improvement will be made in the air force which will be increased by 2,000 planes.

FIERCE attacks by the Spanish rebels resulted in the capture of Irun, on the French border, and the defenders were mercilessly slaughtered save for those who were able to take refuge in France. The town was reduced to smoking ruins, and the victors promptly started an advance westward against San Sebastian, their main objective in the north. Recognizing the fact that this large resort city could not long be defended, the government administration there offered to surrender the place if full amnesty were promised; but declared if this were refused the city would be burned to the ground and the 625 fascist prisoners held there would be shot. There was great discord among the defenders, the anarchists insisting on destroying the city anyhow.

Then the Basque nationals took a hand, assuming control of the city and sending a lot of the anarchists to Bilbao. This move resulted in a virtual armistice while negotiations for surrender of the city went forward.

Later it was reported that the rebel forces had rejected the terms of surrender, and shelling of the city began. The civilian inhabitants were fleeing in panic.

South of Madrid the government forces were said to have made progress and there were claims that Talavera had been taken and that the Alcazar in Toledo was practically battered to pieces by loyalist artillery. The rebels' advance on Madrid from the south and west was supposed to have been halted.

The Madrid government was reorganized and Francisco Largo Caballero, left wing Socialist, was made premier.

French workers in Paris in a great demonstration insisted that the government abandon its non-intervention policy and give active aid to the Spanish government. Premier Blum, while not concealing his sympathy with the Madrid crowd, declared that if France dropped neutrality, Italy and Germany would be able to give the Spanish rebels much speedier and more effective aid than the French could give to the loyalists.

Representatives of twenty-four powers were scheduled to confer in London on plans for the establishment of a nonintervention control committee. Portugal, however, was still holding out.

CREWS of two Portuguese warships mutinied and decided to take the vessels to the aid of the Spanish government forces at Malaga or Valencia. As the ships started to leave their buoys the shore batteries opened fire. Twelve of the mutineers were killed and twenty wounded, and the others speedily gave in. The Lisbon government said the men were under the influence of communist propaganda.

SENATOR GEORGE W. NORRIS of Nebraska, Republican, who said he wished to retire from public life, is a candidate for re-election in spite of himself. A petition placing him on the ticket was filed by more than forty thousand of his friends, and only one thousand signatures were necessary. Mr. Norris is seventy-five years old. Chairman Farley of the Democratic party said the filing of the Norris petition made him "very happy."

Gov. Eugene Talmadge of Georgia, severe critic of the New Deal, was defeated for nomination as United States senator by the present incumbent, Richard B. Russell. In Washington state Gov. Clarence D. Martin was renominated by the Democrats and former Gov. R. H. Hartley was named by the Republicans. Gov. Ed C. Johnson of Colorado captured the Democratic nomination for senator and will be opposed by R. L. Sauter, Republican. Arizona Democrats refused renomination to Gov. B. B. Moeur, selecting instead R. C. Stanford of Phoenix. In Connecticut the Republicans nominated Arthur M. Brown for governor.

HEROIC actions and dramatic rescues marked the collision of the excursion steamer Romance and the steamship New York in a dense fog ten miles off Boston, Mass. The Romance sank in twenty minutes, but every passenger and member of the crew was taken safely aboard the New York. The rescued numbered 268, most of the passengers being women and children from Greater Boston. The New York then turned back into Boston harbor with a twelve foot hole in her bow. There was no panic aboard the Romance, and the officers and crews of both vessels displayed discipline and bravery that elicited high praise.

JULIANA, crown princess of the Netherlands, has found her future husband in a German prince, Bernhard zur Lippe-Biesterfeld. The announcement of their betrothal was hailed in the Hague with utmost joy. Juliana, who is twenty-seven, is beloved for her jollity and good humor, and also she has been carefully trained for the throne. Prince Bernhard, twenty-five years old, has been working for the German dye trust.

MRS. BERYL MARKHAM of England put her name on the roll of fame as the first woman to make a solo flight across the north Atlantic from east to west. She started from London for New York, but her fuel gauge went out and she was forced to land her small monoplane at Baleine cove near Louisbourg, Nova Scotia.

FROM AROUND MICHIGAN

Marshall—A runt pig given last fall to Nelson Klipfer, 15, won first prize in the Future Farmers of America exhibit at the Calhoun County fair.

Durant—After an infuriated bull had fractured three of his ribs and inflicted other injuries, Edward Gilmore, 67 years old, held the animal by the horns until his wife arrived and drove the bull away.

Jackson—The fourteen day quarantine period for incoming inmates at the State Prison of Southern Michigan has been discontinued and in its stead, inmates now face a 30-day period of physical and mental examinations.

Newport—Mrs. Henrietta Yoas, of this community, owns a Holstein cow that is the mother of triplet calves. It took some time for the 8-year-old cow to work up to triplets, having delivered three sets of twin calves previously.

Lansing—A statewide campaign against short measure pumps at gasoline filling stations is under way. The weights and measures division of the state department of agriculture charges that there are "hundreds" of short measure pumps being operated in the state.

Iron River—Transfer of 10,000 sheep from the drought stricken Big Stone ranch, near Bridget, S. D., to the Triangle ranch near Amasa in Michigan, has been completed. Herders, trained dogs, horses and wagons and the sheep were all transported to their new home by train.

Cadillac—Telephones in trailer coaches? They are making their appearance in the state's parks this year. The first one reported was that installed in the coach of Alof Cederstrom, a resident of this city and an employee of the telephone company. He has used it at William Mitchell state park.

Mulliken—The Cole Methodist church near here is being dismantled. The bell is being sent to Canton, China, where it will be used in a church attended by former residents of the United States. The altar rail, chalice and other parts will be sent to other Methodist churches in this country.

Jackson—According to old records recently unearthed here, 1875 was notable for the sale of one wife for $5-$2 in cash and $3 in tools. John Thompson of Napoleon, the records relate, wanted to buy the wife of William Grover. The deal was made for the $5, and the new couple said to have lived happily.

Mt. Clemens—Reorganization of Selfridge Field as base headquarters of the Third Air Base Squadron under the command of Col. Henry B. Clagett, has been announced. The reorganization affects 100 officers and cadets and 800 men attached to the post, most of whom are assigned to new groups with new duties.

Mason—Relative advantages of brine and calcium chloride for laying dust on gravel roads are being tested this season by the highway department. Because of the proximity to salt wells, brine is used in Mason, Lake, Gratiot, Mecosta, Oceana, Clare, Manistee, Ogemaw, Muskegon and Newaygo counties while the calcium chloride is used in the others.

Lansing—The State Department of Agriculture has found that the summer's torrid temperatures and an increasing volume of tourist trade had brought a 10 per cent increase in the state's ice cream consumption. It was said that a survey indicated the year's total would reach between 12,000,000 and 13,000,000 gallons, compared with 11,216,811 last year.

Lansing—August stream gauging operations by the stream control commission indicates an all-time low record for stream flow in the Grand River at Grand Rapids, the Tittabawassee river at Freeland and the Kalamazoo river at Comstock. On the other hand, the Muskegon river at Evert had risen, as had the Raisin river at Adrian and the Black river at Port Huron.

Cheboygan—Boy Scouts here owned 40 acres of land but they have lost it. The property was given them more than 10 years ago but the donor forgot to mark the boundaries and the present generation of scouts does not know where it begins or ends. The best opinions are that the land is where the pin cherry trees are thickest, and the scouts will keep on thinking so long as they are allowed to take their camping trips to an orchard spot.

Saginaw—The "firebug" responsible for 18 fires in Tuscola and Saginaw counties, causing a total loss of $50,000, has been found. He is Burrell Williams, 20, of Birch Run, a farm worker. It was said that he confessed to setting more than a score of fires in three counties during the past three years, destroying property valued at $100,000. Left an orphan at 11, he lived in an orphanage until he was 14 and then became a farm worker. He has been sentenced to life imprisonment.

Lansing—The Michigan state police pistol team emerged with the national championship, at the close of the national rifle and pistol matches at Camp Perry recently. The team shot a score of 1124 out of a possible 1200 in the Colt trophy match.

Lansing—A lot of Michigan airports are going to "change their socks" during the next few months. The state has let a contract for a gross of the very best "socks," the common name for the wind indicator which flies wherever there is a landing field.

Grand Rapids—One of the most brazen robberies of recent years occurred here recently when burglars methodically selected 80 suits from a clothing store. They kept the lights turned on and a radio blaring music to cover their activities. Loss was estimated at $1,500.

Grindstone City—This community is described by Dr. William Lyon Phelps as "The city with a great future behind it," a reputation based on old times when it boasted a large population, and shipped its grindstones throughout the world. The population today is less than a score.

Detroit—Malaria has been more prevalent in Detroit this year than typhoid fever. The disease is gradually increasing, according to a report by the Board of Health. So far, in 1936, there have been 31 cases reported and two deaths from the malady. Cause is attributed to the increased number of persons traveling in the South.

Iron River—It was announced here that the Federal government had abandoned its Basswood re-forestation project near here. The plan had called for moving 113 families to the Basswood area from land judged incapable of support. They would have been employed by a local lumber company to cut 250,000 acres of virgin timber.

Battle Creek—Defacing United States currency is a federal offense, punishable with maximum fine and imprisonment. No action will be taken, however, against a former Socialist candidate for state senator, who admitted defacing a dollar bill with a typewritten notice of a party rally. The man claimed he did not know he was breaking the law.

Ann Arbor—Dr. Albert Hyma, associate professor of history at the University of Michigan, was notified recently that he had been appointed a knight of the Order of Orange-Nassau by Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands, his native land. The Queen made the appointment on August 31st, her birthday, in recognition of Hyma's writings on Netherlands history.

Vestaburg—Grading has been completed on the relocated M-46 highway and concrete is being poured on the 20-foot highway from US-27, three miles west of St. Louis and south of Forest Hill to the Montcalm county line. The concrete pavement from US-27 to near Vestaburg will cost $31,000 and will straighten out M-46 to make a safer highway for automobile traffic.

Hastings—When lightning struck a big tree in Lee Fuller's pasture recently, it killed a ram and three lambs that were standing under it. A fourth lamb could not be found after the storm. Two days later, Fuller set forth to bury the dead. Rolling the 200-pound ram over, up stepped the missing lamb, a bit hungry and thirsty, but unhurt. It had been wedged fast under the ram's body.

Lansing—The farm mortgage debt in Michigan is on the decline, according to a statement received here from the farm credit administration. The federal agency reported the farm mortgage total decreased from a peak of $230,380,000 in 1930 to approximately $175,350,000. About 34 per cent of the farms were under mortgage on January 1, 1936, as compared with 36 per cent in 1928.

Lansing—A new radio-equipped five passenger airplane will be available to the state's forest fire organization for aerial patrol this fall if conditions warrant. The plane was purchased jointly by the department of public safety, the highway department and the conservation department. It is equipped with a short-wave sending and receiving radio set for contact with the state police units.

Alpena—Lightning struck a barn near here, killing three cows, two calves, a pig and a dog, but it spared the lives of four children who were in the building at the time. A cow which was being milked by the oldest boy fell upon the lad, the bolt of lightning burned his leg and toes. The other children were knocked from a bench and dazed, but all escaped before the flames swept the barn.

Lansing—The Highway Department has formed plans for a long term program of improvement of the route from Lansing to Detroit which will involve closing of the so-called "cut-off" at Farmington, which has become known as a deathtrap. More than 40 persons have lost their lives there since the cutoff was opened. A 4-lane highway will be constructed on the 10-mile stretch of US-16 from Howell to Brighton early next summer, and a similar road built at Farmington as quickly as possible.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—The Department of Commerce has lately released its annual "World Economic Review," and again has painted officially a picture of general conditions that I believe to be the most accurate obtainable under present chaotic conditions. I might add that it is one of the few official analyses coming out from the government these days that is not colored in any manner or form.

The reason this review is so interesting is because it points out what can be expected to happen by a disclosure in detail of what has happened in commerce and industry. To that extent it delivers a rather definite body blow at some New Deal policies affecting business. Since it does this sort of thing, the review is entitled to more faith and credit than usually is accorded government publications, whether compiled by the Roosevelt administration or those before it. Political leaders always want to put their best foot forward and the New Deal under Mr. Roosevelt has not failed to carry on this tradition to the fullest possible extent.

The section of the "World Economic Review" that was most interesting to me contained this statement: "Deficits of great magnitude created yearly during the depression to meet payments of wages, salaries, interest and dividends sapped the vitality of the entire business structure and could not have been sustained indefinitely."

Here then is an official declaration from that agency of the government most concerned with commerce and industry which says that corporations and employers of labor maintained as far as they were able the payrolls and interest payments during the depression. It says likewise that had corporations failed to do this, our unemployment problem would have been much greater, the income of those who hold securities, whether in large or small amount, would not have received dividends on their stocks or interest on the bonds and, as a result, it is obvious the buying power of the country as a whole would have been sharply reduced. That is to say, had these payments both to labor and capital, been curtailed there would have been even a lower level of retail business than obtained during the depression. It ought to be added as well that had a lower level of business resulted, the manufacturing industries from which the retail stores buy their supplies would have closed down their plants in even greater number than they did.

As we look back over the last five or six years it is easy to see how things could have been very much worse. It is easy to recognize that the strength that comes from amassing capital in corporation form has developed in this country one of the greatest shock absorbers that any people may have when those corporations, those businesses, are permitted to develop under sound management and with as little governmental interference as the general public welfare will permit.

Now, as to the reason why these businesses were able to accomplish the things they did: The answer is simple. Managements of businesses must follow the same practices in guiding the financial affairs of those businesses as you or I do in the management of our personal affairs.

This brings us to a point of current interest. In preparing for the rainy day, all business, whether great or small, lays aside a certain percentage of its profits. This is called a surplus. The surplus is invested. It is made to yield a return in the form of interest of dividends. It is seldom touched. It is treated just as you and I would treat our savings accounts—just as we deal with our Christmas savings account.

Thus, the arrival of slack times, dull business, no profits, the arrival of the time when we must live on our own fat so to speak, does not find us without a reserve because that is what a surplus is.

The records of the savings bank and of the life insurance companies through the last six years show definitely how many hundreds of thousands of people had to draw on that surplus just as the Department of Commerce statement now reveals how many corporations drew upon their surpluses in order to maintain their organizations, pay the workers and be honest by paying the interest on their debts. All of this sounds like a chautauqua lecture on savings. But however it may sound, it links in directly to legislation that was enacted in the last session of Congress, a law driven through under the lash of President Roosevelt after it was conceived by a bunch of radicals who constitute the majority of the so-called brain trust at Washington. That law levies a new tax on corporations. It does not touch us as individuals except indirectly. The tax applies to surplus, to the savings of business, a savings designed to meet just such conditions as those through which we have gone and which business was able to meet because heretofore it had been permitted to pile up reserves to carry it through the rainy day.

Official figures from the Department of Commerce show that the payments for wages, salaries, interest and dividends from 1930 to 1934 amounted to $21,288,000,000. In 1935, according to incomplete figures, business paid out $1,500,000,000 for these same purposes, thus making the total for five years approximately $23,000,000,000.

Now, in normal times these figures would not prove exciting. Under present circumstances and those through which we have been passing, they border on the sensational. This is true because these payments have been made, not from the earnings of the businesses during the years in which they were paid, but from earnings of earlier good years when a part of the profits were laid aside as a protection.

It would seem therefore that since business has performed a social service of this kind under its own management that it ought to be allowed to continue. I am convinced that it is a much safer method than to have the federal government mess around through laws such as the tax on surpluses for it must be remembered that under the law which I have criticized, no corporation can build up again such surplus as has happened in the past.

I might mention further that the effect of this law is going to be to prevent small corporations from ever growing large. I mean by that, if a corporation, through careful management and frugal savings, was able to expand its plant facilities, increase its production and thereby increase the number of workers it employs, it will be unable to do so. It will be unable to accomplish this for the reason that the operation of this tax law prevents it from storing its savings. The law takes such a heavy toll of any stored-up earnings that no corporation can afford to store them up. They must be passed out in dividends during the year they are earned or else the government puts its tax hand into the business treasury.

One might say that such a distribution is helpful and undoubtedly in the cases of some owners of securities it is helpful. But questions of this kind must be treated in the whole and not on the basis of isolated cases. Consequently, it takes no stretch of the imagination to see how a business is forced to distribute its earnings, to distribute them in good times when a comparatively small number of its security owners need the funds—and the result is obviously a shortage of reserve for that rainy day. In other words, a corporation is compelled to be a spendthrift or else pay a tax that is designed as a punishment.

There is another phase of these payments by businesses that deserves attention. The dividend payments, in fact, many of the earnings reports of business lately have shown a decided up-turn. This circumstance has prompted Democratic Chairman Farley and Attorney General Cummings to enthrone somewhat about business recovery. Each of them insist in recent political statements that prosperity actually is here; that it is not "just around the corner," as Mr. Hoover once predicted while he was president.

But there should be some attention paid to the meaning of the dividend payments and increased earnings. They should be analyzed. It is true that some industries, like the automobile industry, for example, have increased production beyond the hope of any students of economics and that they have restored to their payrolls a considerable percentage of the workers they once employed. Some other industries likewise have moved forward and promise to get on their feet again in sound fashion. Yet I find a number of authorities in the business world who continue to be doubtful. They fear that the foundation is not sound.

These facts have not deterred Mr. Farley and Mr. Cummings from shouting from the house-tops that this is prosperity, resulting from Roosevelt policies. Their declarations, however, are just as fallacious, just as political as some political pronouncements that I have heard from the Republican side to the effect that business is picking up because of prospects of electing Governor Landon as President. All of these statements in my opinion are pure hokum for the reason that the facts generally speaking do not bear out any of them.

FAMOUS HEADLINE HUNTER
FLOYD GIBBONS
ADVENTURERS CLUB
Hello Everybody

"The Thing in the Dark"
 By FLOYD GIBBONS

ARE you all set for the housewarming party? Well, let me warn you in advance that this is going to be about the loneliest housewarming party you ever saw.

As a matter of fact, it's a one-man house warming or maybe I should say a one-boy house-warming. The boy was Arland L. Gray, of Trenton, N. J. I say "was" because Arland has grown up in the meantime. This one-boy party I'm going to tell you about was thrown on the night of January 19, 1912.

As a house warming, it was a terrible flop. It not only didn't warm the house any, but it cooled the boy off considerably by the chills-up-and-down-the-spine system. As an adventure, though, it was a whooping success—and well worth that check for ten bucks that I'm sending Arland right now.

In the spring of 1910 Arland's mother and dad moved from Catskill, N. Y., to Orlando, Fla. That was in the days before the Florida boom, and Orlando was just a sleepy little country town.

Arland Decides to Do a Solo House Warming Act.

Arland's dad bought a piece of partly cleared ground about three miles out of town and started to build a house on it. That's where the housewarming part of it came in.

Arland was just eight years old then—and you know how kids sometimes get funny ideas. Arland somehow or other got it into his head that he wanted to be the first one to sleep in the new home. The house wasn't finished yet. The sides were up and the roof was on, but there were no sashes in the windows, and none of the floors had been laid. But just the same young Arland began pestering his folks to let him go out there and spend the night.

His ma didn't like the idea. She said an eight-year-old boy had no business sleeping in an unfinished house half a mile away from the nearest neighbor. But his dad said it wouldn't hurt him to spend a night alone, and finally his mother gave her consent, too. Arland took a blanket, his .22 rifle and his dog, and off he went, headed for the house on the outskirts of the town.

Strange Animal Terrifies Lonesome Boy.

Darkness had fallen before he got there. It was a warm, tropical night, and the late moon had not yet risen. Arland crept into the building, walking carefully on the uncovered beams of the ground floor. He gathered together some loose boards and lay them across the beams under a low window. Then he spread his blanket and lay down with his rifle beside him.

The bare boards were hard. Arland's makeshift bed was uncomfortable. It was a long time before he managed to get to sleep, and when he did he slept fitfully. He awoke again, hours later, with the strange feeling that something was wrong.

The moon had risen but it was behind a cloud bank. But what was that queer, crunching noise that sounded so close to his ear? As he came wider awake he realized with a sickening feeling in the pit of his stomach that some sort of an animal was standing over him.

Dog Whines With Terror Over Strange Visitation.

Arland lay still. He didn't dare move—couldn't if he'd wanted to, for his whole body had gone stiff with fear. Over in a corner he could hear his dog growling and whimpering. The dog had crawled away as far as he could—was cowering on the far side of the room, whining with a terror that was as great as Arland's own.

"I have no idea how long I lay there," Arland says. "It seemed like hours, but it might have been only a few minutes. The beast—the thing—whatever it was—seemed to be standing right over me. I could feel its hot, fetid breath on my face—hear the regular crunch—crunch—crunch of its moving jaws.

Every now and then a splotch of slimy froth would fall on me. I had a wild impulse to get up—to run out of that house as fast as I could go. Then I remembered that I couldn't run—that if I moved at all I would have to go slowly, picking my way over the bare joists. I didn't even have a floor under me."

Intruder Turns Out to Be Broken-Down Nag.

Thought of the uncovered floor gave Arland another idea. If he could roll from the boards on which he was lying he could fall through between the joists and land safely on the ground only a couple feet below. He had just about decided on that course of action when he remembered something else. His .22 rifle! He began moving his hand cautiously toward it. Inch by inch his hand crept toward that rifle.

His groping fingers found it at last. With his thumb he cocked the hammer. It gave out a resounding click and that startled the beast. In the dim light he could see its huge, blurry head raise—stay poised—motionless—as if it were listening. Arland moved the gun around silently. At length he had its muzzle pointed at the beast's head. His finger tightened on the trigger. And then, suddenly, the moon came out from behind the clouds. Bright yellow light streamed into the house, and in its glow Arland saw, thrust through the window above him the pointed ears and the long narrow head of—an old horse!

The rifle was never fired. The moon had come out just in time to save that poor old nag's life. "And just in time, too," says Arland, "to save me from heart failure. I spent the rest of the night in the middle of the floor far from any window, and it was a very sleepy and very chastened little boy who trailed along home the next morning as soon as it was light."

Schubert's Serenade

Whatever his inspiration, Schubert wrote the "Serenade" to suit the words of a poem by Ludwig Rellstab. A number of Rellstab's poems were originally sent by their author to Beethoven, who declined to do anything with them because of the state of his health, but who recommended that they be turned over to Schubert. This was done after Beethoven's death. In 1828 Schubert wrote a number of fine songs, which were brought out after his death under the title of "Swan Songs," "Serenade" is No. 4 of the Swan Songs, which include six others written to Rellstab's words. Schubert was born January 31, 1797, and died November 19, 1828.

Cruelty to Animals

Lawmakers all go to bat to suppress cruelty in any form to man or beast. All the states seem to retain the criminal offense of docking a horse's tail, although evil consequences may be avoided in Michigan by obtaining from a veterinary surgeon a certificate stating that it was necessary for the "health and safety of such horse." Many of these statutes are longer and more detailed than the murder statutes in the same books. Often, of course, a companion law is found making it a similar offense to crop a dog's ears "except where performed by a registered veterinary surgeon while the dog is under an anesthetic."

Ripples From Guiley Creek

By the Trout Specialist

With the trout season past, the only fly fishing that can be done is on the lakes, for bass, bluegills, etc. If fish are not rising to surface bugs, try a bucktail or streamer fly, with a small spinner, and you'll be well pleased with results. Why use a casting rod or fish with bait when you can get as many fish, have the sport of landing them on light tackle, and save the undersized fish by using flies, either wet or dry?

In using streamer flies, squirrel tails, and bucktail flies, with a spinner, it is advisable to cast out and let the fly sink as far as possible, without danger of catching weeds. Retrieve the fly slowly, in short jerks.

I have heard many arguments concerning the use of automatic reels, and I have come to the conclusion that it is simply a matter of personal opinion. Some of the most expert fly fishermen that I know will not use any but a very light, single action reel, while others, just as experienced, prefer the automatic except with very light rods. I cannot offer my own opinion, positively, because I have never used an automatic to any extent, but from all I have heard in regard to them, I feel that the light, single action reels are the most satisfactory, on the average. Most objections to the automatic are weight, cost, and durability. With all types of fly fishermen, however, no rule can be made with positiveness, as every "purist" has his own ideas, and nobody is more stubborn in his beliefs than a dyed-in-the-wool fly fisherman. I know!

Jess Myers of Saginaw spent the week here. Mrs. Myers, with two daughters, Dorothy and Lorraine, and son, Paul, were week end guests here and at the home of Mrs. Clara Sherman.

"Trust God, Keep Powder Dry"
The phrase, "Put your trust in God, but mind to keep your powder dry," is traced to Oliver Cromwell in an address of advice which he gave to his troops previous to their crossing a river to attack the Royalist force, in which they were successful. He also incited his troops on many occasions to prayer and was in the habit of visiting certain detachments and kneeling with them to invoke the blessing of Almighty God before proceeding to battle.

Did Not Invent Bathroom
Americans did not invent the modern bathroom, for it is copied from one built by Christian IV of Denmark, who lived in the Seventeenth century. It may be seen in the tower of Rosenberg castle, in Copenhagen.

A shower was held last Thursday at the home of Mrs. Elmer Pierson in honor of Mrs. Harry Pierson. Mrs. H. Pierson received many useful articles.

Great Dane, Boarhound

The fact that the Great Dane was called the boarhound gives a clew to its early use in Europe. It is generally conceded that this big dog was at one time employed to hunt wild boars, wolves, and bears. The breed survived the longest in Germany because there wild game was preserved after it had disappeared from the forests of England. And after the Danes were no longer used for hunting purposes German royalty kept Danes as companion dogs.

Ring as Love Token

The ring as a love token commenced its recorded history when the ancient Greeks sent rings of iron to their betrothed as evidence of an agreement. The ring being placed on the third finger of the left hand during the marriage service, for it was believed that a nerve led from this finger directly to the heart. But most of the men wore their rings upon the right hand as a mark of power and independence.

Secretary of the Treasury
In 1789 congress enacted a law providing that the secretary of the treasury may not engage in trade or business, own steamships or otherwise be active in profit-making enterprises during his incumbency. He is liable, on conviction, to a $3,000 fine, dismissal and may never thereafter hold office under the federal government. The same provisions apply to the treasurer of the United States and the register of the treasury.

Studying an Eclipse
Astronomers go to the ends of the earth to study the sun during an eclipse because two layers of the sun can be studied only at that time. At other times these two layers, called the chromosphere and the corona, are hidden by the fierce flood of light from the radiating surface of the sun. Just outside the sun's surface is the chromosphere, a boiling ocean of red hydrogen flames, which sometimes shoot to a height of 100,000 miles. Outside of the chromosphere is the corona, a wide circle of beautiful, pearly light, composed mostly of helium and hydrogen, the two gases used on earth to inflate airships.

Springs in Canadian Rockies
The five chief springs in the Canadian Rockies have a total flow of about 1,000,000 gallons a day, and issue from the ground the year round at temperatures ranging from 78 to 122 degrees Fahrenheit. The chief constituents of the waters are calcium sulphate, or gypsum; calcium bicarbonate, and sulphate, and their therapeutic value is high. Winter weather does not in any way affect the temperature of these waters.

Destroyed Indian Population
The prehistoric Indian population of northern Arizona was destroyed by "tenement" conditions nearly 1,000 years ago. Tracing the habits of the Indian population, an authority said that from the time they moved from single-family pit houses to multi-family apartment houses, or pueblos, similar to modern tenements, the population of these tribes dropped from 23,000 to 2,000.

Freezing Gasoline
Gasoline, according to the United States bureau of standards, has no definite freezing point. It slowly stiffens up like wax at temperatures much lower than those commonly encountered in the Arctic, and as the temperature is lowered it gradually becomes more and more viscous until it is a solid mass. The temperature at which ordinary gasoline solidifies ranges from 180 degrees to 240 degrees Fahrenheit below zero. Gasoline containing benzol will solidify at higher temperatures in proportion to the percentage of benzol.—Indianapolis News

After a long time, they reached a fork of the ridge.
"But the deed says nothing at all about a fork," Reuben said. "Which way do we go?" And the Patterns were embarrassed because no one had been there in many years. They tried the left fork. There was the big rock and a small clump of great walnut trees. There were no marks, but Abrael was so sure that he seized an ax and cut through the bark into the tree, exposing a black scar where Barton had once sunk his ax.

"I guess we'll have to make you our reconnoiterer, Abrael," Reuben said. "What's that?" demanded Abrael.
Reuben smiled at him. "The chap who goes ahead of the detachment to spy out the enemy and get shot first."
"I guess the Indians are all gone now."

"I hope the corner trees aren't." Julia was riding up Wolfpen. They watched the Finemare pace the Long Bottom and disappear into the orchard. "That will give us a start," Reuben said. "We'll get course and distance on this line tomorrow. It's a big job we have on our hands."

They went on to the head of Barn Hollow, and then made their way down the cool seclusion of its tiny branch toward the house. The sound of the dinner bell went up Wolfpen, portions of itself splitting off at each hollow and dying away among the leaves of the underbrush.

"I don't reckon we could have timed it any better than that," Sparrel said. Sparrel introduced Reuben, and Julia spoke kindly to him.
"I'm right sorry I was gone just when you came. I don't very often leave the place."

She helped Cynthia with the dinner table.

In the afternoon, Jasper went to get help for the surveying, and Jesse and Abrael went to the fields. Reuben studied the deeds again, making notes in his brown book. Cynthia brought red scraps of cloth to tie into the marking pins so they could be easily seen by the chainmen, and a large red square to fasten on the flagpole. "I don't reckon I ought to tell him I wove them myself."

"Have you any idea how long it will take to run off this place?" Sparrel asked.
"It'll take a long time. Most of the summer. At least I hope so," Reuben added and laughed.

The days soon slipped into a quietly exciting routine, pushed forward by the activity of morning and evening and the pleasant talk of the men about the small details of their work. It was almost as if the old and customary adjustment of life on Wolfpen were upset not by destruction but by the creation of a new quality of enlargement. Cynthia knew that the joyous tension under which she carried the increasing burden of the housework had come from the presence of Reuben.

Their few words were outwardly the commonplace greetings at the wash rock before the meals, or a phrase at the table, or a polite word as he sat down before the drawing table arranged for him in one corner of the kitchen. But deep within each of them, where the life of a word begins before it is wrapped and delivered in sound, were being formed those mysterious rearrangements of the soul which adjust two people to the recognition of love.

Each evening after supper Reuben would sit for a time on the porch with Sparrel, watching the first evening stars take form above the valley, or he would walk to the barn with the boys. In that interval, Cynthia would finish the dishes and place the clean and polished lamp on the table neatly covered with Reuben's materials for plotting the lines he had surveyed on that day. Then he would come in with the brown leather note-book recording the day's journey through the underbrush, into the hollows and over the hills. Sparrel and the boys would crowd about him to watch the curious process of reproducing in miniature on a piece of brown paper the boundaries of the place they had surveyed.

"There," Reuben said, pointing with the pencil, "is Cranesnest. Then we went straight to the walnut tree, and there is the hollow, and then up the hill to that first big poplar, and down that gully to the big stone in the creek right there. . . ."

She lingered in the room with the men as long as she felt good manners would allow. Then she left them and went out into the orchard in the night. She felt the silent tumult of all things alive and in ferment with growth. The apple trees were filling with plump green fruit, bearing on their navels the last of the withered blossoms. Even the orphaned lamb was turbulent with expanding energy, and his thin and incapable legs were now strong and reliable. All along the valley, up along the cowpaths, all around the garden, everything was shooting recklessly up out of the pregnant ground.

She felt the same power stirring within herself. It was new and disquieting and thrilling and came up from a part of herself that lay beyond and deeper than thought. It was one with the moist air stirring over the valley, gently cooler than her own flesh, laden with the mysterious life-throb of all the years, communicating to her the secret and the urgency of its way. She yielded herself to it eagerly and naturally with senses untouched by her thought or her will and she felt exalted by this strange and secret ache in the eternal mystery of the night and under the unburied and timeless stars above Wolfpen.

"It's a soft night. You can feel the live wind come fresh out of the woods and run softly over your face and delicately under your dress and around your body. And then you are not tired and more, and you seem more alive than you ever were before. Next to the curiosity of the way the chickens crow in the morning, like they thought it was time for the day and God had forgot to light up the sun and set it over Cranesnest, and then they wait a little while in quiet to give him a chance to remember before they break out again; and suddenly when they do the dark begins to run down from the Pinnacle, slow, fast, and then faster until the sun pops up and takes the valley and all the chickens crow again a third time bigger than ever as though they had done the miracle—next to that in this place is the night-sounding quiet at the end of May and the way it goes inside of you and makes something happen to you and you tremble with it. The way it is now. It is not the tremble of seeing a snake swallowing a toad in the afternoon. It's the tremble of being born or released instead of devoured. It feels like the night were trying to say something to you and you can hear it speak. I know what it means even without the words. I reckon Rebekah heard it saying wordless things to her when she listened under the stars in the Holy Land and thought of Isaac in a far country; that she is a woman and that love can reach over a long way and touch her and take her even to another place; and that the life in her will go on in a new place far from her father's land. It begins the way the corn comes up, the fragile blades curled tight into a green girdle boring its way through the ground. You can't see how such a tiny blade can move away the dirt and climb out of the place where it was buried without breaking. If you just so much as touch it it goes to green water and scum on your fingers. But almost overnight the blades unwind in arched pairs from the stalk and when you hold the two points together they make the figure of a heart."

"Does Reuben feel the living thing in the woods when he is all day among the timber, and do the sweet damp smells of the hollow and the intervals of silence in the midst of hill sounds show things inside of him he hadn't found there before? The way he looks up at me and the shine comes into his eyes, like he had been away and had just got back and was happy over it. Reuben's face keeps changing like he took each thing and placed it higher or lower than something else. He looks at me over the head of the others when they don't take up all there is in something he or Daddy says, and he smiles at me to say, 'You see all the colors in a rainbow, not just the red.' I don't, though. Things have been happening so fast and so strange I can't get them all straight and I just sit out here in the night possessed by them and wondering what's going to happen next. I could nearly wish it might stay just the way it is. But it doesn't ever stay the way it is. The night itself goes on. I reckon from the movement of the stars I ought to be back at the house. If you could just gather up an armful of an evening like this the way you do wild honeysuckles and put it away to feel and look at after the moment is gone . . ."

CHAPTER IX

It could not be gathered up, and there were the other men to be cared for now that the surveying was well under way. They made the table very large. There was York Burney whom Reuben had accepted and trained as chainman, and there was Spur Darton who had come as ax-man. And there was red-haired and toothless Ezra Ferguson from above Horsepen. She knew how it would be but she did not dream of complaining or phrasing an inhospitable thought. She could hear his ax on the hill above the orchard clearing a sight through the trees for Reuben's compass, and then the voice of Reuben calling to Abrael to move the rod a little to his left.

"I guess the corn and the sheep and the plums and Mother's poppies can grow all right this spring without me looking after them. God can see after these things by Himself without much help from anybody, but He leaves the kitchen and the beds to the women-folk, and if they don't do them, they don't get done."

Then Shellenberger came again near the first of June, riding down Wolfpen on Nelson's mule and bringing Mullens with him. Mullens was a hard black man of forty, who had spent his years among the timber-lands of Pennsylvania as field manager and boss of the lumber camps. Shellenberger had brought him in to supervise the whole process of getting out the timber.

"Good evening, Mrs. Pattern. Back again."

"Howdy, Mr. Shellenberger." "This is Luke Mullens, who manages the woods for me."
"You are right welcome," Julia said. Mullens looked out from under his deep black eyebrows and did not say anything.

"Just sit down on the porch. The men-folks are still surveying. They ought to be in any minute now," Julia said. Julia arranged the chairs a little closer together on each side and added two plates for the strangers.

"Five extra men-folks takes the work heavier," Cynthia said.
"It's nothing for women-folk to excite themselves over," Julia said.

But the work was greater and harder, and its demands and the coming of the heat, the extra washing and ironing, cooking and dish-washing and the unusual excitement were tiring to Julia and Cynthia, and Julia was finding it hard to get time and strength to keep her garden neat. Neither were the fields so frequently and carefully worked this spring. Never had a Wolfpen bottom gone without adequate cultivation. But the survey must come first, and one of the boys working each day could keep ahead of the weeds. Julia saw these things and Sparrel saw them. But they had guests and they were selling land.

There was much talk among the men-folk in the yard after supper.

"How is the survey getting on?" Shellenberger asked.

"All right," Reuben said. "Some days we run a great deal when it's level, or not too grown up and the marks can be found. Other times we spend most of a day trying to get one straight line up and down a hill to a corner we can be certain of. But it gets on as well as common."

"When will you get around it?" I couldn't say about that. These deeds give no course and only an approximate distance, so we have to feel our way along. Maybe two or three months, more or less." Then he came into the kitchen, where Cynthia was washing dishes, to get his map to show Shellenberger.

It was the first time since he came to Wolfpen that he had been alone with her. Cynthia was acutely aware of his presence.
"I guess I can show him better than I can tell him," Reuben said, lifting the thumb-tacks with the blade of his knife.
"I guess you'll have plenty of help tomorrow."

"Yes, I reckon. Are those men going to stay here, too?"
"I guess Mother is fixing up another bed in your room for them. I don't reckon you mind them being there."

"Not at all. Only, I'm afraid we're making too much work for you, with all these extra people to cook for and look after. We don't want to overdo your hospitality."
"It isn't much more," she murmured simply. And then, when he was gone out to the men: "He's the politest man that ever I saw in my life in his words. But that hard black man, I don't like him, and I'm glad Reuben Warren is one of the men, and not just that Shellenberger and his man who doesn't say anything." And she was less tired because of the gentle words of Reuben.

". . . and today we went over this ridge which you crossed farther north about there, and we ought to reach the watershed tomorrow and turn northwest and parallel Gannon creek into the territory you want to buy." Cynthia could see him in the last visible twilight, pointing with his pencil while Sparrel held the other end of the brown paper and Shellenberger and the dark man looked on.

"These are the creeks I have sketched in, just roughly indicating how they radiate into Wolfpen."

As Reuben pointed and explained, Shellenberger twirled his cigar and said, "I see . . . I see."

"Looks good to me, Mr. Pattern," he said. "I'd like to go over the ground with my field man here and begin to get the lay-out planned a bit so we can get to work as soon as possible. I suppose you can put us up for a few days until we can see where we are? Of course I'll pay you for lodging."

People had come and gone in Wolfpen Bottoms through the century. They had eaten at the Pattern house, they had slept in Pattern beds, and their mules had been stabled in the Pattern barn. But no man, not even a peddler or a drover, had ever paid for a lodging, or given coin in exchange for a meal. Without hesitation, Sparrel spoke the only custom he knew for men to meet by.

"Stay here and welcome, but there isn't any charge when a man comes to your house."

"Then suppose we just give the money to the women," Shellenberger said. Cynthia heard from the kitchen where she was hanging up the pan. The thought of pay for cooking for men-folk had never occurred to her before. But when Shellenberger mentioned it, the thought grew less strange and remote, and as it stayed with her there in the kitchen, the thought of having money of her own for her work became attractive. "It's only because it's no fun to mix bread and say to yourself, 'This is for that Shellenberger and his black-eyed helper,' so if they want to give money for it maybe they ought to give it. Only you don't think about it when you make the bed or dip a spoonful of honey for Reuben. Money for cooking for a man? I just reckon this spring everything is all twisted around till a body can't recognize the way things are."

". . . for we'll be extra trouble, and I'd feel more like asking for what I want if I was paying for it," Shellenberger was saying.

Sparrel dropped it there. They sat on the porch listening while Shellenberger told of his return to Pittsburgh and of the business and the bustle of the great world beyond the hills.

"We're on the edge of great things in the Ohio valley," Shellenberger said. "I reckon it all depends on just what a man wants in this world. Saul and Barton and Tivis Pattern found building a place like this a great thing. And it's been a good place to live," Sparrel said.

"Sure," Shellenberger agreed. "But a thing can't just stay one way, you know. We have to go on with progress."

Julia came quietly to the porch, saying, "The beds are ready, and I've fixed one for the two men in with Jesse and Reuben."

"I'm ready to turn in," Shellenberger said.

York Burney and Spur Darton went up with Jasper and Abrael. Reuben and Jesse slipped quietly into bed. Mullens stood in the middle of the floor glancing at Shellenberger, but not moving his clothes. Shellenberger sat on the edge of the bed unlacing his boots. Sparrel came to the door to make formal inquiry of his guests and to say good night.

"Where's this man to sleep?" Shellenberger asked.

"He can sleep with you," Sparrel said, simply and naturally as custom.

"Oh, no. He doesn't sleep with me. I sleep by myself."

Sparrel had never known a man to object to sharing a bed in another man's house. He looked at Shellenberger, and then at Mullens and then at Reuben. "I guess the beds are about all full now but yours," Sparrel said. "He can sleep just anywhere," Shellenberger said. "Give him a blanket or something."

But the black man had got out of the room and did not answer Sparrel's call. Shellenberger went on with his undressing. He turned back the bright tulip-patterned quilt Julia had spread with care over the bed. He saw that there was only one sheet on the bed.

"And I want another sheet, please, to sleep under and a single small pillow if you have one."

Sparrel stood looking at him, but Julia had heard him speak, and without revealing any of the hurt to her pride, she got them quietly from the linen closet and gave them to Sparrel. Reuben, lying on the bed and looking up at Sparrel, could feel him restraining speech before his sense of outraged hospitality.

"That's much better," Shellenberger said, apparently unaware of the thing he had done. He lay down, drawing the cedar-scented sheet over him.

"Good night," he said.

But Sparrel did not answer until he had reached the door; then he said without warmth, "Good night." And as if remembering Reuben and Jesse, "Rest to you, boys."

Cynthia, in her room next door, lying still and hearing the night blot out the voices: "I reckon I'll be right glad when it's done and we live again like we always have, without a man like Shellenberger wanting to pay for his keep and then doing a thing like that. Before he came we were weaving and planting and making garden and it was like the other springs. Everything has been in a whirl from the minute he rode into the bottom. . . . Only . . . Reuben is a gentleman as much as Shellenberger but he sees finer into people's ways and feelings . . . and he wouldn't come here if that man hadn't."

In the morning Mullens came up to the wash rock brushing the straw from his hair and trousers.

"Where have you been?" Abrael asked. "The barn," he said, with a squint about his eyes.

Sparrel only said, "Morning." When breakfast was over, Shellenberger spoke to him for the first time. "We'll go with the party this morning and see the lay-out. Then we'll go on across to Gannon and figure on an opening."

There was always a magic about Wolfpen in the first hour after breakfast when the cool mist began to rise from the valley, and the hills and trees took form in the increasing light. The men went up Wolfpen to the fifth hollow on the left, turned into it and climbed along the thin channel of Turkey creek to its source, and then up the steep final slopes to the ridge where the line had ended the night before in a mass of underbrush.

There Reuben set up the compass near the last corner tree, and established a course for the new departure. Ezra and Spur plunged into the thick brush, hacking it down with the ax and corn knife. Abrael went along behind them to keep them on the line, Sparrel went ahead to hunt the marked trees and Jasper, grown skilful as head chainman, followed with the measuring chain. Sparrel would find the next corner tree, Reuben would take the bearing of the line and re-establish the corner, the ax-men would move into the brush on the new course, and rod by rod they advanced with the survey.

All morning they toiled, crawling over fallen logs, through clumps of berry vines and greenbriers that bit through corduroy, out suddenly onto rock cliffs covered with moss and edged with pine trees where they must delay the line and find a way around, down into sharp steep gullies unseen since Saul Pattern tramped over them, up again on the other side, always holding to the line which Reuben set with the compass and Sparrel verified by the trees.

At noon they were on a ledge of rock at the very head of Wolfpen. Sparrel pointed over the expanse of virgin timber with his right hand.

"I reckon that will be the section you get, Mr. Shellenberger."

"It looks like we could get a few poplars out of it," Shellenberger said. "Mullens and I will just go back through this section this afternoon."

"We had better eat here," Reuben said.

They all went down under the deep overhanging rock cliff. It was covered with heavy moss and bordered at its base with ferns and laurel and pine trees. It was cool and picturesque.

"This is Wildcat Cave," Sparrel said, and he told some of his hunting stories while they ate from the baskets Julia and Cynthia had prepared for them.

They rested and talked, and then Reuben said it was time to go.

"That ridge over there leads around to the Pinnacle above the mill," Sparrel said to Shellenberger. "You get all that north slope and beyond. Bear that in mind and you won't lose your way."

"We'll see you at the house this evening," Shellenberger said.

Giant Sloth Unable to Walk Over Mile in Month

South America was isolated from other continents for long periods of geologic time, according to scientists. Therefore it developed animals unlike any others in the world, says a writer in the Washington Post.

One of these was the giant sloth. Armed with long, scimitar-like claws, this great beast was so clumsy it couldn't travel much more than a mile in a month. Today's sluggish tree-sloth of South America is one of its descendants.

Another fantastic animal was called thomashuxleya. It was so named by a South American scientist in honor of the great Nineteenth century English anatomist, Thomas Huxley. Its fossilized skeleton was found in Patagonia and reconstructed by the American Museum of Natural History in New York City.

Affectionately known as "Tommy" to the museum staff, this creature is said to resemble nothing else that ever lived.

It stood two feet high at the shoulder and was about five feet long. It had a head, large for the size of its body, and walked about on short but very powerful legs ending in played feet.

Churches Had "Devil's Door" In the Middle Ages many churches had a "Devil's Door" through which the devil could make a hasty exit, during a baptism, when the sponsor "renounced him and all his works" in the name of the child. One such door is on the north side of the old Mullion church on Lizard Head in Cornwall, England.—Winifred White, Stony River, Alaska, in Collier's Weekly.

Lesson for September 20

CHRISTIAN LIVING

LESSON TEXT—Romans 12:1-3, 9-12. GOLDEN TEXT—Christ liveth in me.—Galatians 2:20. PRIMARY TOPIC—How Jesus Wants His Friends to Act. JUNIOR TOPIC—Paul Explains How to Act.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Is Christian Living? YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How to Live as a Christian.

As a fitting conclusion to a three-month study of the Spread of Christianity to the gentile peoples of Western Asia, we consider the teaching of the great apostle to the Gentiles concerning "Christian-Living."

The early chapters of Paul's epistle to the Romans present the greatest exposition of profound Christian doctrine ever written. But even as it is true that the fruit of Christian living can grow only on the tree of Christian doctrine, it is equally true that the knowledge of Christian truth should result in Christian living. "Faith without works is dead."

Our lesson pointedly presents the true Christian life as being I. A Life Yielded to God (Rom. 12:1-3).

A recognition and deep appreciation of the mercies of God leads to a yielding of body and mind in living sacrifice to God. If we are Christians our bodies are the temples of the Holy Spirit. We must not lend our bodies to activities which destroy their usefulness or hinder our service for God but rather yield the body with all its abilities to God!

But after all "it is the inside of a man that counts." The presenting of the body in living sacrifice is possible only when there has been the inner transformation by the renewing of the mind. One cannot live physically without being born; it is equally impossible to live a Christian life without having been born again.

The Christian life is yielded to God not only for its own peace and satisfaction, but it is to be

II. A Life of Service (vv. 9-15).

We are not saved by serving but we are saved to serve.

In the first place the Christian serves the Lord. He abhors evil, but his life is not merely negative, for he cleaves to that which is good. He is not lazy, but diligent. His spirit is aglow with zeal for God and his cause. He is full of joy and hope, patient under trials, a man of steadfastness in prayer.

Such a man will not fail to serve his fellow-man. He will really love the brethren, not merely make a hypocritical show of loving them. He will seek the honor of others rather than his own glory. He will be given to the almost lost art of hospitality. He will be ready to stand by his brother, in the day of joy or of sorrow. He will go even further, for he will bless those that persecute him.

The measure is not yet full for we note next that the Christian lives—

III. A Life of Humility (v. 16).

In these days when we are urged to assert ourselves, to demand our rights, to "succeed" at any cost, and when men are measured by their worldly achievements, it sounds rather old-fashioned to talk about humility, about condescending to lowly things, of not being "wise in our own conceits."

But humility is still the crowning grace of a truly Christian life. Those who follow the lowly Jesus, in fact as well as in profession, are still strongest when they are weak, and mightiest for God when they are humble.

Note also that we follow a victorious Christ who calls us to

IV. A Life of Victory (vv. 17-21).

It is possible to talk much about the victorious life—to discuss it at length as a theological question—and have little real victory.

Paul speaks plainly. The Christian is honorable in all things. He meets every obligation. He is a man of peace. He is not concerned with avenging himself upon one who has done him wrong. Spite fences, boundary disputes, family quarrels, are not for him. Evil is not to overcome him. God gives the victory.

A great lesson, and one that we cannot study without some disquieting thought. Christian, how does your life and mine appear as they are held up to the mirror of God's Word? Let us make a covenant that by God's grace and power we shall go forward in real "Christian living."

A Human Being

There cannot be a more glorious object in creation than a human being, replete with benevolence, meditating in what manner he might render himself more acceptable to his Creator by doing most good to his creatures.—Fielding.

Visions of Better Life

It is well to have visions of a better life than that of every day, but it is the life of every day from which elements of a better life must come.—Maeterlinck.

SEEKING CRITICISM

Did you ever live in surroundings where you wanted criticism and couldn't get it? Such a situation is possible.

Don't Sleep on Left Side, Affects Heart

Gas Pressure May Cause Discomfort Right Side Best

If you toss in bed and can't sleep on right side, try Adlerika. Just ONE dose relieves stomach GAS pressing on heart so you sleep soundly all night.

Adlerika acts on BOTH upper and lower bowels and brings out foul matter you would never believe was in your system. This old matter may have poisoned you for months and caused GAS, sour stomach, headache or nervousness.

Dr. H. L. Shoup, New York, reports: "In addition to intestinal cleansing, Adlerika greatly reduces bacteria and colon bacilli." Mrs. Jas. Filler: "Gas on my stomach was so bad I could not eat or sleep. Even my heart hurt. The first dose of Adlerika brought me relief. Now I eat as I wish, sleep fine and never feel better." Give your stomach and bowels a REAL cleansing with Adlerika and see how good you feel. Just ONE dose relieves GAS and chronic constipation. Sold by all druggists and drug departments.

Miserable with backache?

WHEN kidneys function badly and you suffer a nagging backache, with dizziness, burning, scanty or too frequent urination and getting up at night; when you feel tired, nervous, all upset . . . use Doan's Pills. Doan's are especially for poorly working kidneys. Millions of boxes are used every year. They are recommended the country over. Ask your neighbor!

DOAN'S PILLS

Cards Tumble Sign Possibly Gang Has Underrated Rivals

HAS the same sad fate which overtook our own Polo Grounds front runners for a pair of seasons caught up with the once proud Gas House Gangsters?

Definitely—for all that they were well aware of their pitching frailties—the Cards all along have been vocally confident they were the class of the circuit. When, now and then, they labored through an unfortunate series it did not seem to distress them. They merely shouted that this could be charged up to what Dizzy Dean terms "spermentin" and then moved on to the next address.

In quieter moments all of them—manager and batboy—confided that they looked forward to the waning days of the season. Then, when experimenting had gone quite far enough, they expected to turn on so much heat that even Manhattan clients would be panicked into giving applause.

They spoke with such great—and apparently quite honest—unconcern about the future that there is little wonder even the Giants believed them early in July. Even now—as one who picked them at the start and has abode with them in happy confidence ever since—I cannot believe they were up to some of their old sly tricks on a faithful follower.

Now that they have undoubtedly fulfilled the letter of their prophecies by turning on the heat and causing previously timid men and maids of Manhattan to indulge in ecstatic patty-cakings, I cannot believe that such miracle-working mortals were guilty of double-talking all the while.

So far as I am concerned they could scarcely have known that their boisterous antics would so sorely enrage the Boston and Pittsburgh peasants that the heat would come from such directions. Neither could they have had any inkling that the Manhattan merriement could be partly occasioned by the support they recently have been giving to one of the most amazing teams of recent seasons.

Instead, it seems that Frankie Frisch and his followers underrated their adversaries. In spite of the fact that several St. Louis pennants have been won by mad drives down the home stretch, they seemed to feel that they never could be so sadly overtaken, as were the Giants and Cubs of other too recent seasons.

So they were caught improperly arrayed for meeting visitors who sneaked upon them just as upon the Giants of a season back.

There are several reasons why the Cards still may be fortunate in the pennant chase. One of them is that the Giants started their spurt early and from very far back and so may be halted by the law of averages. Another is that there are men, especially pitchers, who can quickly be brought in from the farms, if Bredon and Rickey decide to risk a minor league pennant for the sake of a big-time success. The third, and probably best, reason is that the Cards are a set of husky, hard-bitten athletes. Only the Yankees, formed out of a very similar mold, have previously seemed able to recover as quickly from adversity. That ability to rise above defeat is most important in a flag chase. In fact, no team without this quality ever won a pennant.

Success in baseball often is almost entirely a matter of spirit. When the Braves came from the bottom to accomplish their 1914 miracle, they scarcely believed what was happening until almost at the finish. Then, when the going might have been tough, they were sustained by the conviction that, no matter how good opponents might seem to be, their own luck was considerably better. So they felt they had nothing to worry about and devoted their best efforts to playing baseball.

Somewhat the same thing happened to the Cubs last fall and to the Cards in 1934, although in both cases the short space of remaining time and utter collapse of a rival had much to do with the result. Indeed, several Cub stars quite frankly admitted that all along they felt it merely was a beautiful dream and only woke up when they found the Tigers whaling the merry blue blazes out of them in the World Series.

NOT IN THE BOX SCORE:

MRS. JOHNNY COONEY sings in the same high-class manner that her husband snares those line drives in the Brooklyn outfield. Pat Malone says that Tony Lazzeri is the smartest player with whom he ever has teamed. Johnny Evers once stole third base with a broken leg. He doubled to left, slid into the bag and came up limping. After that he went down to third and shortly thereafter discovered that a bone had been broken in his ankle.

What with salaries, the track's cut, etc., it costs the average ring book $1,200 a week to operate on New York courses. Because they pay higher salaries, the clubhouse nobles have a nut of close to $350 a day while the field hands need $63 for expenses each afternoon. Practically the only big fight Arthur Donovan has missed refereeing in New York during the past 30 months was the Baer-Braddock upset. Baer's advance squawk kept him out of that one. When viewed from a few yards away Elmer Voight, pro at Sunningdale, is almost a ringer for Paul Runyan. All of which helps explain the almost hopeless confusion of galleries at the recent Westchester amateur tournament. While playing in the same foursome, Runyan, who usually wears a hat, went bareheaded and Voight wore the type of hat Runyan usually affects.

Schmeling First Trained for Advertising Career

Max Schmeling put in three years learning the advertising business in Germany before he forgot it all and became a heavyweight boxer.

Max Schmeling

His friends say he would probably have had big success as an advertising man for he is a shrewd business man. Pat Malone never has cashed a baseball salary check. Sends them home to the Missus. The average bank roll of a racetrack bookie is $5,000 to $7,500, if they operate in the main ring. Since the law does not permit bonding gamblers, the satchel slingers do not have to be annoyed by red tape. They go into action as soon as some responsible person has okayed them with the authorities. The picture of a celebrated tennis star is displayed on an equally celebrated transatlantic liner with the caption, "Hellen Mills Mody."

Would anybody like to bet about where you get the big news first? Six months ago (and at least four times between that date and the Schmeling-Braddock postponement) this writer definitely advised readers there would be no heavyweight championship bout this year. Secretary of State (N. Y.) Eddie Flynn and Mike Jacobs, the pugilistic impresario, have one habit in common. When they make notes and then slip the papers into the sweat bands of their hats you know there is no chance of their forgetting. There is very little wonder that the ambitious Dick Bartell loses so many of those diamond spats. Even when sparring in the dugout the Giants' mite forgets the first fight principle and leads with his right.

Bullet Berkholtz, Ohio State soph, is being tabbed as the new star of the Big Ten football firmament. They say he is a triple threat ace and one of the best ball carriers in years. Black Hat McCarty, the turf historian, once ran a buck bet up into a $25,000 score in 10 racing days. The U. S. Football association plans to be well fixed for soccer players when the 1940 Olympics come along.

In spite of the advance furor concerning Bill Lynch, Princeton's soph fullback, teammates claim that Larry Taylor, his sub, will be the real Tiger star. They say Lynch is weak on pass defense and other such items even though he is a whale at lugging the ball. Horse players are not the only persons who get the old oil from owners. Many trainers feed olive oil to their gee-gees.

Jim Braddock is not the only member of the firm of Braddock and Gould to pull up lame. Gould is nursing a sore left knee as the result of unwisely sliding into second base while trying to achieve greater glory for good old Evans Lock Sheldrake. Four major league ball clubs are planning to do their spring training outside the United States. The Athletics will establish their base at Mexico City, the Cincinnati Reds in Porto Rico, and the Cardinals and Giants in Havana. The last thoroughbred George Phillips saddled recently before he was indefinitely ruled off the turf at Saratoga was named Go Home. Jerry Conroy, member of Jimmy Braddock's publicity staff, is said to be the best baseball player in the fight business. Jerry is a southpaw, plays first base and can hit a la Babe Ruth. Pop Ryan, who used to manage fighters more than a decade ago, owns a restaurant and grill on Eighth avenue in the fifties. Billy Hogan, Gus Wilson's lightweight protege, isn't going to rely on his ring earnings in the future. Billy opened a beer pub in Sparkill, N. Y., and is doing a bit of all right. Irish Eddie Brink, Scranton battler, is an orchestra leader-crooner in his home town when there are no fights to be had—Crooning is an easier way to make a living, Eddie.

"Go-to-School" Knits and Prints

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

DING-DONG goes the bell that sounds the knell of vacation as it rings in "first day of school." And again doting mothers are confronted with the problem of planning practical and as attractive as practical school wardrobes for the children of the household, for as every mother knows much of the poise and happiness of little girls in the classroom depend upon the feeling of self confidence which a pretty frock inspires.

To help in this matter of appareling little daughter to a nicety here are two suggestions we have to offer—knits and prints. Perhaps it would be more accurate to say crochets as well as knits for as much crocheting is being done these days as knitting. Simply a matter of choice. To emphasize the vogue for crochets and prints we are showing three as cunning classroom outfits as ever a fond mother might hope to include in a little girl's clothes collection.

See little Miss Twelve posing to the left in the picture arrayed in an ensemble that couldn't be prettier if it tried. It is crocheted in two shades of blue knit-cro-sheen. For the encouragement of would-be crocheters who feel the urge to copy this most attractive outfit we are telling you that the stitch is very simple and goes like lightning when once you get started. The skirt has gores of the lighter blue and the blouse hidden by the scarf is in matching light blue. It has a stylish high neck that closes with a drawstring. There are crocheted buttons to add glamor to the occasion. The cutesy-cute bag, the scarf and the hat are crocheted to match.

In a many-piece crocheted outfit as just described, the practical side of the question is self-evident. The blouse, the skirt and the jacket may be worn separately, which means that any number of changes are possible, being just what is a most needful virtue for school tots. The simplicity and practicality of the blouse-and-skirt two-piece to the right is a big argument in its favor. This crocheted suit for the grammar school Miss is a real find when it comes to appropriate dress for play or for classroom. The blouse contrasts the dark skirt which is in keeping with the present style trend to bring out striking color effects. The wide sailor collar provides a nautical touch. The gay tassel tie gives a final flourish to this most attractive back-to-school dress which is so easily crocheted or mercerized knitting and crocheted cotton. We almost forgot to mention the crowning glory of these crocheted garments—they wash perfectly and with a little trouble as a gingham, a pique or any wash fabric.

SQUIRREL IN VOGUE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

A pleasing topic of conversation among fur stylists and one that is creating no-end enthusiasm, is in regard to the revival of the ever beloved youthful-looking and wonderfully flattering gray squirrel. When you go fur-coat shopping keep this in mind and look for the charming squirrel models that are making so welcome a re-appearance. Perfect for sports and for more formal wear also, is the stunning double-duty coat pictured. It brings back squirrel worked in the striking new split skin fashion.

Of the question is self-evident. The blouse, the skirt and the jacket may be worn separately, which means that any number of changes are possible, being just what is a most needful virtue for school tots.

Picture for yourself little daughter clad in a cunning print such as the little girl centered in the picture is wearing. The grand thing about dresses made of the new prints this season is that it is perfectly safe to buy the correct size for no longer does one have to allow for shrinkage. That is, if the fabric is one of the newer prints that are sanforized shrunk. It means a great deal to know that little daughter's gay print frock will not shrink out of fit in tubbing.

In the washdough sections one finds the cunningest classroom prints imaginable such as fashions the little girl's dress pictured.

ALIX SCULPTURES

Outstanding among silhouettes for fall are those drawn by Alix. Her dresses are fashioned to display every curve of a rounded, feminine form through masterly manipulation and drapery of soft, clinging fabric. This season, as last, her favorite is jersey, both silk and rayon.

Some of her skirts are so full and flaring that they resemble lampshades or parachutes, while others are caught under the hem like Turkish trousers. Fall coats are cut with a swirling flare. Evening clothes, particularly, would delight an ancient Greek sculptor. Fullness is concentrated in groups of folds or gathers directly in front or back, not obscuring, but, rather, emphasizing, lovely curving outlines. Borders of four or five bright colors emphasize the flare at the hem of many evening dresses.

Luxury and Elegance to Dominate Fall Costumes

Elegance and luxury will dominate the mode this autumn if the costumes already appearing are any criterion. Magnificent fabrics, beautifully cut on exquisite lines, is the recipe for late afternoon and informal and formal evening clothes. Typical of this trend is a white dinner ensemble with a long slim skirt of white and silver blistered crepe and a simple surplice bodice of plain silver metal cloth. The shoulders, with double puffs and the tailored lapel collar, are smart notes on the short jacket that is fitted in back and open in front.

Motorist's Buttons Among the novelty buttons that have made their appearance are those that carry the various road signs for motorists.

A Lesson From the Kitchen—

Captain of Industry Learns Something About Household Economy

AT last we have something to teach the men. Captains of industry are invited to take a lesson from the kitchen!

The ordinary housewife, so long without question overlooked among workers of any real significance, has at last come into her own. A seer has divined in her modest labors a real contribution, or at least avoidance of error, that holds a lesson for the princes of finance!

That seer is the deaf and blind but keenly observing Miss Helen Keller, who draws her observation and its conclusion in the form of a story. And it is a story so satisfying, with so much food for rejoicing on the part of women, that to prevent even one of us from missing it, we must retell the gist of it here.

It is a story about the Joneses—he a captain of industry, she just a housewife. When the Joneses' resources showed signs of dwindling some time ago, it appeared to Mrs. Jones that her household system was foolproof against waste or loss—that the trouble must be in the big business of which her husband was a leading light. Timidly, as becomes one of her modest position and accomplishments, Mrs. Jones advanced a few theories. But naturally her husband would not lend a serious ear. Whereupon Mrs. Jones suggested that he take over for a while the household management, and see if it gave him any ideas. And with the thought that there he might indeed find the root of the trouble with his finances, he eagerly agreed.

At once the captain of industry started making changes. First, he found it wasteful to have the oven going for just one cake, so he baked ten cakes at one time. Then he turned his attention to the labor saving devices, which to his astonishment were idle for a large part of the day. The vacuum cleaner, dish washer, washing machine and others presented quite a problem in efficiency. Mrs. Jones asked if he should not build more houses to make more work for them, and Mr. Jones was about to turn his talents to solving the problem when the ten cakes which the family had obligingly eaten for him began to manifest the usual results. The doctor's bill was charged to "Overproduction"—and to a lesson in household economy which the financier had learned from the kitchen. Perhaps the result was that he called in Mrs. Jones to find the flaw in his complicated system of industrial economy—as one who has failed to one who has succeeded. But that is as far as the story goes!

Household Questions

Pull out old stalks in your vegetable garden as soon as the crop has been picked. This will make the cleaning up of the garden later much easier.

If the soil in which bulbs are to be planted is acid, work hydrated lime into the top soil two weeks before planting.

Never prune climbing roses in the fall. Cut out all dead canes but wait until next spring before cutting out dead shoots.

To clean glass in oven doors rub over with vinegar then wash with soap and water.

A Rural Scene in Pleasing Stitchery

Pattern 5602

The "Duck Pond"—a quiet, shady nook where graceful ducks float to and fro, is a charming subject indeed for a wall-hanging, the detail will prove fascinating to embroider. It's no time before every stitch is in, done in wool or rope silk, and you're ready to line and hang it.

In pattern 5602 you will find a transfer pattern of a wall hanging 15 by 20 inches; material requirements; illustrations of all stitches needed; color suggestions.

To obtain this pattern send 15 cents in stamps or coins (coins preferred) to The Sewing Circle Household Arts Dept., 259 W. Fourteenth St., New York, N. Y. Write plainly pattern number, your name and address.

Defects of Success

Listen to the Voice of Firestone—Monday Evenings over N. B. C.—WEAF Network

"Katydid," Love Song
"Katydid" monotonous midsummer saga, is really the lovesong of the male insect, and is answered by a much fainter call from the green-winged sweetheart.

Astecs' Cats
A breed of cats, now said to be extinct, was raised and kept by the ancient race of Aztecs.

"Gallery Gods"
The ceiling of the old Drury Lane theater, in London, was painted to represent the sky, with clouds and the usual cupids and cherubs. Since the ceiling was immediately above persons seated in the gallery, they were said to be "among the gods." Out of this grew the appellation "gallery gods" to designate those occupying the highest seats in any theater.

School Notes

High School

The officers elected by the Junior class at their meeting Tuesday night were as follows: President, Marguerite McLean; vice-president, Bill Prescott; secretary, Jo Ann Tinker; treasurer, Joy Smith.

The Juniors showed unusual taste in the selection of their class rings this year. We expect to see our junior friends beautifully ornamented in a month or so.

A new method of teaching shorthand has been adopted this year. Students are required to read over five thousand words in shorthand before they begin to write it. Research has proved that this system so thoroughly acquaints the student with accurate outlines that he starts from the first of his writing to make truer outlines. This results in a superior quality of accuracy and speed. There are sixteen in our class.

Plans are underway to organize a debating team. Several students have shown interest in this new activity and prospects are that we will have a very successful season. We have joined the Michigan Forensic League and will debate with several nearby schools during the school year. The question used will be "Resolved—That all electric utilities should be governmentally owned and operated." We hope the community will show an interest in these debates by attending. It is a great help to the team.

The Senior class elected the following officers at a class meeting held Wednesday morning: President, Phyllis Bigelow; vice-president, William Mallon; secretary, Harvey Rempert; treasurer, Effie Prescott.

The Seniors have decided to secure their class pictures of Mr. Vandenberg of East Tawas this year, the same as the class of 1936.

Effie Prescott entered the Senior class Wednesday.

The advanced English class has completed a study of Beowulf, the oldest English epic.

The high school band held its first rehearsal last Thursday. There were sixteen players present. Others who will enter within the next month are Phyllis Bigelow, Betty Rapp, Kathleen Davis, Dorothy Blust and Hugh Prescott. Many students are showing much enthusiasm, and several are planning to buy a wind instrument and enter the band.

The Girls' Glee Club met Friday, with a membership of thirty-three.

The high school orchestra met Wednesday for its first rehearsal. There were eighteen present, and we expect several new members next week.

The enrollment in the high school is as follows: Ninth grade, 19; tenth grade, 18; eleventh grade, 26; twelfth grade, 20; postgraduate, 1.

Seventh and Eighth Grades
Maxine Strawyer visited our room Friday.

The seventh grade has new arithmetic and geography text books.

There are now nineteen enrolled in the seventh grade and sixteen in the eighth grade.

Richard Prescott entered school Friday. Truman Rutterbush enrolled Tuesday but had to leave on account of sickness.

We are having the privilege of studying a map of Tawas City, loaned to us by Mr. Thornton, the editor.

Fifth and Sixth Grades
We have an enrollment of 41 in our room this year—23 in the fifth grade and 18 in the sixth grade.

Jimmy Prescott entered the fifth grade Tuesday.

We are reading "Silver Chief" for opening.

Third and Fourth Grades
There are 21 pupils enrolled in the third grade and 20 in the fourth grade, making a total enrollment of 41.

The third graders memorized the poem, "Sliding Down Hill," for their language lesson Thursday.

We had our pictures taken Wednesday afternoon.

Iosco County Normal News

The Iosco County Normal opened September 8th with an enrollment of fifteen students. The names of the students and their residences are as follows: Martha Becker, Tawas City; Edna Bischoff, Tawas City; Lloyd Brodie, Curtisville; Colletta Callahan, Wilber; Richard Goodale, Wilber; Marian Grack, East Tawas; Thelma Heilig, East Tawas; Albertine Herman, Tawas City; Mary Mcomber, Turner; Nelda Mueller, Tawas City; Ray Redmond, Curtisville; Helen Roiter, Alabaster; Frances Ross, Lincoln; Gladys Seifert, East Tawas; and Lulu Belle Hellenberger, Hale.

The Normal class has elected the following officers for the year 1936-1937: President, Ray Redmond; vice-president, Frances Ross; secretary, Nelda Mueller; treasurer, Mary Mcomber; press agent, Albertine Herman. Mrs. Osgerby is the class sponsor.

On Thursday evening the class had a corn roast and get-acquainted party on the beach. Stories were told and several games were played, while the members enjoyed all the marshmallows and corn, raw or otherwise, they wanted.

Arctic Climatic Changes

The evidence that climatic conditions have changed in the Arctic and Antarctic zones is mainly geologic. It is believed that tropical conditions existed as far north as Greenland between the glacial epochs. Remains of animal and vegetable life have been found in these regions which indicate that once the climate was warm enough to permit of their growth and existence.

Noble Gases

Noble gases are gaseous elements, including argon, helium, neon, krypton, nitrogen and xenon, and are so-called because they do not enter into combination with any of the other elements.

candidate, Edward O. Putnam of Hale, received 838 votes and Alexander MacKay of West Branch received 975 votes. In the district MacKay won over Putnam with a vote of 3305 to 1608.

According to unofficial returns received yesterday afternoon Miles M. Callaghan won over Fred C. Holbeck with a majority of less than 100 votes in the contest for the nomination of state senator on the Republican ticket. The vote for Callaghan was 7337 and for Holbeck 7245. Iosco county gave Holbeck 1444 votes and Callaghan 451 votes.

Iosco county gave Frank D. Fitzgerald 1698 votes in his race for governor. Rosco Conkling Fitch was recognized with 194 votes. Luren D. Dickinson, the old favorite, received 980 votes, for Lieutenant governor and Thomas Read received 728 votes. Former governor Wilber M. Brucker received a substantial margin in Iosco county in the vote for a senatorial nominee on the Republican ticket. The vote for Brucker was 1143 while James Couzens received 790.

initial frame. The Packers' other run came in the second. Although the locals already had enough scores to win they were not satisfied. They chased around for three tallies in the third and then to top things off stirred up a batch of four more in the fourth. This ended the scoring in the game.

Tawas will journey to Twining for its game next Sunday. Twining is close on the heels of the league leaders and the fact that Tawas has come along in fine style in its last several games indicates that a good game is in prospect when the locals tangle with the Arenac county boys.

An additional feature will be furnished at the game in the form of an electrically amplified play-by-play account and comment on the progress of the contest.
