HOWELL MAN HELD IN CLARE FRANK DEATH

Longsdorff Charged With Negligent Homicide In Hunting Fatality

Theodore Longsdorff of Howell faces the charge of "negligent homicide" following the verdict brought in yesterday by a coroner's jury at the inquest into the death of Clare Frank of Whittemore. Frank was fatally wounded Sunday when a bullet, which had passed through the rear of the car in which he was riding, hit him in the back. The accident occurred near Buck creek while Frank and his companions were returning home from a deer hunt. He was sitting in the back seat.

It was brought out at the inquest held Thursday at East Tawas that Longsdorff had been shooting at trees at the time and near the scene of the accident. It was said that hunters, who were near, had warned him that such practice was dangerous, but he took a last shot at a bottle along the roadside and in the general direction of the car in which Frank was riding. The car had just passed Longsdorff.

Frank exclaimed to his companions, who were unaware that the car had been hit, "I have been shot." They stopped the car and examined their rifles to discover how the accident had occurred. Finding nothing wrong with their rifles, they got out and found that the trunk and rear of the car had been pierced by a rifle bullet. They immediately rushed the wounded man toward Tawas City but he died on the way.

After firing the fatal shot Longsdorff, apparently unaware of the accident, got into his car with his companions and drove away. Wilfred Youngs of Tawas township and Fred Oakley of Reese secured Longsdorff's car and hunting license numbers.

Clare Wellington Frank was born May 2, 1907. He was married August 9, 1932, to Miss Sophia Birkenbeck. He is survived by the wife; three small children; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Frank; three brothers, William, Lawrence and Roland, and a sister, Gladys.

Funeral services were held at one o'clock Wednesday afternoon at the home at Whittemore and at two o'clock at the L. D. S. church, Tawas City. Rev. M. A. Sommerfeld officiated. Interment was in the Tawas City cemetery.

The tragedy was a shock to his many friends who deeply sympathize with the bereaved family.

The following program was enjoyed:

A group of songs by Mrs. Kunze. She was accompanied by Mrs. Edwards.

In the absence of Miss Worden, Mrs. Olive Davison had charge of the Child Delinquency forum. She was ably assisted by Mrs. Grace Mark and Miss Elsie Musolf. Mrs. Mark told of the work being done in Flint and Miss Musolf her work in Ypsilanti. These personal contact talks made the subject much more interesting.

Mrs. Kunze spoke briefly on the county Red Cross Roll Call and Mrs. Dease on the work in Tawas City. Lunch was served.

Flags Presented To Schools

Regular P.-T. A. Meet Held Last Thursday

The regular meeting of the P.-T. A. was held in the high school assembly room Thursday evening, November 12, with a fair attendance.

Following the general routine of business the president, Mrs. Westcott, turned the meeting over to the chairman of the program committee, Mrs. Dease. With well chosen remarks Mrs. Dease presented the following program:

Singing, "God Bless Our Native Land"—Assembly; Responsive Reading—Mrs. Dease and Assembly; Singing, "Keep the Home Fires Burning"—Assembly; Band Concert—High School Band; Reading, "So They're Talking War Again"—Miss Boone; Address—Mr. Campbell; Piano Solo, Patriotic Medley—Mrs. Giddings.

In keeping with the season, all numbers of the program centered about Armistice Day. The band was received as usual with hearty enthusiasm.

Preceding her reading Miss Boone made interesting comments relative to her subject.

Mr. Campbell in his splendid address depicted most vividly the horrors and aftermath of war. He made a forceful plea for peace and challenged P.-T. A., school, church, and home to united efforts for the maintenance of peace.

All present agreed that the meeting proved most worth-while. It was much regretted that a large attendance was not realized.

Following the program there was extended a cordial invitation to the basement where the committee in charge (Mesdames Bing and DePoty) served lunch which was much enjoyed by all.

Tawas City Will Meet Harrisville In First Debate

Monday evening, November 23, at eight o'clock Tawas City will open its debate season when our affirmative team meets a team from Harrisville at the high school here.

The question being discussed in nearly 250 schools of the state is one very vital to the interest of every American citizen. It is, "Resolved that all electric utilities should be governmentally owned and operated."

On November 14 our squad participated in a debate tournament held at Flint. They contested with schools such as East Lansing, Flint Northern and Flint Central, all of which have produced state champions or have been close contenders for that title. We have every reason to be proud of the showing which our teams made at that time in view of their inexperience. They are very worthy of your support.

Members of the team debating Monday night are Betty Holland, Otto Ross and Isabelle Dease.

We strongly urge everyone to attend these debates. You will appreciate the enlightenment you will receive and the team will benefit from your presence.

Card of Thanks

We wish to express our thanks to the many friends whose thoughtful kindness in our hour of sorrow will ever remain in our memory, for the beautiful floral offerings, those who loaned the services of their cars, the American Legion Auxiliary for taking charge of the flowers, Rev. Ernest Ross for his kind and comforting words, and the quartet which sang so beautifully.

RENO FAMILY HURT IN AUTO-TRAIN CRASH

Car Demolished When Hit By Locomotive At Grade Crossing Here

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Robinson and six children of Reno township were injured early Wednesday afternoon when their car was hit by a Detroit & Mackinac switch engine at the Matthew street crossing. Mr. and Mrs. Robinson and family were returning to their home after spending the forenoon in this city transacting business.

The car was driven over the crossing with no one aware of the approaching engine. The locomotive was running at a moderate speed at this point but the car was demolished and carried about 100 feet down the track.

All suffered varying injuries. One child, Ruth, age 10, suffered a broken leg. An infant child was badly cut about the head and the two were taken to Samaritan hospital, Bay City. Mr. Robinson received head injuries and was in a dazed condition for several hours. The true extent of their injuries had not been determined at this time, but their many friends hope no serious complications will result from their terrible experience.

Teachers' Institute At Mio Is Well Attended

The teachers of Iosco, Ogemaw, Roscommon, Montmorency, Crawford and Oscoda counties met at Mio last week Wednesday for their annual institute. This is the first time that the teachers of these six counties have worked together in this way, and the attendance was good. All the county commissioners and 229 teachers—66 from Ogemaw, 57 from Iosco, 50 from Montmorency, 25 from Roscommon, six from Crawford and 25 from Oscoda—were present. Besides these there were many other interested people at the meeting.

John R. Emens, director of teacher training and certification, Department of Public Instruction, in his address explained the work of the state board in codifying the fifteen kinds of certificates under which teachers of the state of Michigan have been operating in the past. These varied and conflicting certificates were issued by many institutions and recognized by the state. They have now been greatly reduced and simplified and hereafter will be channeled through the state board. The five different kinds of certificates which are now being issued to candidates for teaching in Michigan are named as follows:

1. A state elementary provisional-permanent certificate.
2. A state secondary provisional-permanent certificate.
3. A state limited certificate and renewal.
4. A county limited certificate and renewal.
5. A junior college certificate.

These changes will affect future candidates, rather than the present teaching profession.

The program presented at the all-day institute was very interesting and instructive.

SAGINAW MAN LOSES LIFE IN TRUCK CRASH

Edw. Willette Killed When Truck Skids, Hitting Oncoming Car

Edward Willette, truck driver for the Saginaw Beef company, was instantly killed Saturday when his truck skidded sideways into the path of an oncoming automobile driven by Howard Coss of Chesaning. Coss suffered a fractured leg and arm and severe cuts about the head. Russell Schuch of Oakley, a companion, received minor injuries.

The accident occurred south of the Bear Track Inn on U.S.-23. Willette was returning to Saginaw and had left Tawas City only a few minutes before the tragedy took place. Just before leaving he told friends that he was anxious to get home where a party was being held that evening which he hoped to attend. He had many friends in this city who were shocked by his untimely death.

Willette had apparently been trying to avoid hitting the car, but lost control when his truck went off the pavement.

The agricultural instructors of Standish, Harrisville, Sterling, Pinconning, West Branch and East Tawas high schools held a meeting Thursday night at the Holland Hotel in East Tawas to discuss and lay plans for the formation of a district organization of the Future Farmers of America. While the first steps in this move are being carried out by the instructors, the actual organization will be in the hands of the officers of the local chapters of the F. F. A.

The meeting was called as a dinner meeting with the discussion of business postponed until after a fine meal had been served by the staff of the Holland Hotel. The group also discussed and made plans for the formation of a district Vocational Agricultural Instructors Association.

These two organizations should do much toward strengthening the vocational agricultural program in this section.

Four Stars Featured In "Labeled Lady"

Jean Harlow—William Powell—Myrna Loy—Spencer Tracy all in one picture! There's a collection of outstanding film names each of which is capable of ruling a motion picture cast in his and her own right. Only once in a movie moon is such a stellar aggregation of stars gathered together for one production. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has assembled them for its extravagant production of "Labeled Lady," the new season "special" which comes to the Family Theatre, East Tawas, on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, November 22, 23 and 24.

It is a well known fact that when a film company loads four of its greatest personalities into one picture, that picture has what it takes, "Grand Hotel" and "Dinner at Eight" are outstanding examples of star-studded hits of the past. Now comes "Labeled Lady," engrossing story of an heiress slandered by a metropolitan newspaper and suing for libel to the tune of five million dollars! The movie involved four principals—the heiress, the newspaper's managing editor, the girl whom he is pledged to marry, and a very clever gentleman of the Lothario school who has achieved a unique reputation for his unrivaled ability to quash just such libel suits.

Secretary Roper Plans National Census of Unemployed—Armistice Day Duly Observed—Opening of the Huge San Francisco-Oakland Bridge.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© Western Newspaper Union.

NOW that the election is over, Secretary of Commerce Roper is laying plans for the complete census of the unemployed in the United States which has so long been called for. He said he would ask congress to appropriate between 13 and 15 million dollars for this count and that it would require the services of about 25,000 persons who would be given special training for several months.

"The census would not only take up an enumeration of those classified as unemployed," said Roper, "but we want to find out which trades or industries the unemployed would fall into. We would also like to help the states in classifying the unemployed from the unemployed."

"There are many economic questions involved. Some families have enough income to support them, but one or more members may be out of work. We want to obtain information on this phase."

The secretary intimated that the census machinery might be made permanent so that a close check be kept on persons out of work, as is done in England.

According to the American Federation of Labor, 2,900,000 workers have been re-employed since last January.

"Employment has been gaining steadily since January, without setback," the federation said. "This unusual development points to the strong upward trend of business, which was of such force as to offset the usual summer layoffs."

"Comparing September this year with September, 1935, we find 2,250,000 more persons employed in American industry, indicating that while a portion of this year's gains merely restored winter losses, by far the major part represents lasting gain in employment recovery."

"This year's gains (comparing September, 1935 and 1936) have been largest in manufacturing industries where about 675,000 wage and salaried workers were re-employed; about 300,000 more farm laborers are at work, 285,000 more in trade, 200,000 more in building and 100,000 more have been added in railroads. Most of the other gains were in service industries."

IN A joint report by the federal bureaus of agricultural and home economics the prediction is made that farm cash income available for spending in 1937 will continue the upward trend shown in 1936. As a basis for this expectancy the bureaus cite increases in net income from agricultural and non-agricultural sources, lower interest rates and long term financing of debts.

Record production of truck crops also was forecast. All sections of the country will share and all important truck crops will be included except celery, onions and spinach, it was stated, with the likelihood that in spite of indicated larger supplies, improvement in consumer buying power would help maintain the higher prices of 1936, which were about 10 per cent over 1935.

SECRETARY OF Agriculture Wallace in an interview intimates that for a year there may be no new legislation for crop control along the lines of the outlawed AAA, for farmers would like to have one really good crop without forced curtailment. But he added: "We will need some legislation eventually unless the weather changes or the world demand for our products greatly improves."

Wallace was asked whether the lack of a control plan might not result in another surplus, leaving the administration up in the air without any machinery to cope with it. He said he could not estimate a surplus ahead of time and that he would rather wait to see what would happen.

"It may be possible to find a solution that will prove better than the AAA or the soil conservation act," he said.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT led the nation in observance of Armistice day by going to Arlington National cemetery and laying a wreath of chrysanthemums beside the tomb of the Unknown Soldier. The ceremony was quiet and simple. General Pershing, commander of the American expeditionary forces, and Secretary of the Navy Swanson stood by the President's side and a small detachment of soldiers, sailors and marines was present. General Pershing also placed a wreath at the tomb, and all stood bare headed as "taps" was sounded precisely at 11 o'clock eighteen years after the guns ceased firing on the western front in France.

Everywhere in the United States and in all the allied countries the anniversary was suitably observed, and in Poland the day was one of especial rejoicing for it is regarded as the birthday of that re-born nation.

An ironical note came from Geneva where the League of Nations announced that 8,200,000 men are now permanently under arms throughout the world. Of this total 545,000 are attached to world navies.

The league calculations show that men under arms throughout the world just before the outbreak of the World war numbered 5,900,000, not counting naval units. The figures released show that since 1931-'32 world armies have increased 1,700,000 men. In Europe total armed forces are now 4,800,000, compared with 3,600,000 in 1931-'32.

SAN FRANCISCO'S dream of 30 years was realized when the great bridge across the bay of Oakland was formally opened with elaborate ceremony. This longest vehicular bridge in the world has been under construction since July 19, 1933, at a cost of $77,000,000, the funds being largely supplied by the Reconstruction Finance corporation. It is eight and a quarter miles long and, except for a tunnel passage through Yerba Buena island, is entirely over water.

It is divided roughly into two parts, mechanically speaking. The west side, from San Francisco to Yerba Buena, is of the suspension type. The cables are the largest ever spun for a bridge—nearly two feet in diameter. The east crossing, from Yerba Buena to Oakland, is of the cantilever type.

As the climax of a four-day celebration, President Roosevelt pushed a button in his White House office lighting two green lamps on the bridge and officially throwing it open for traffic.

COL. JOSEF BECK, foreign minister of Poland, concluded his visit to London and departed with assurances of Great Britain's friendliness and desire to co-operate with Poland in its contest against Nazi intrigues, especially in relation to the Free City of Danzig. Foreign Minister Eden talked with Colonel Beck for three days and was told by him that Poland would reject the overtures of both Moscow and Berlin and work for the same neutrality in eastern Europe that Belgium intends to maintain in the west.

One feature of Poland's celebration of its independence day was the bestowal of a baton on Gen. Edward Rydz-Smigley, making him the fourth marshal in the revived nation's history. He thus succeeds the late Marshal Josef Pilsudsky and is regarded by many as the new military dictator of Poland. President Moscicki presented the baton during an imposing ceremony in the courtyard of Warsaw castle.

WHEN Admiral William H. Standley retires on January 1 from the post of chief of naval operations, it will be filled by Admiral William D. Leahy, now commander of the navy battle force. This selection by the President was announced in Washington. Half a dozen other high officers of the navy will be advanced when the change occurs.

It was also announced that Maj. Gen. John H. Russell, commandant of the marine corps, would be succeeded in that post when he retires from active service December 1 by Brig. Gen. Thomas Holcombe. The latter will be elevated to the rank of major general of marines.

KING Victor of Italy had a birthday, and President Roosevelt, in his cabled message of congratulations, was careful to follow the American policy of not recognizing territory acquired by force, addressing him only as "king" and not as "emperor." However, the Italian conquest of Ethiopia was formally recognized by both Austria and Hungary, following Germany's example.

CORNELL university at Ithaca, N. Y., is to have a new president in the person of Dr. Edmund E. Day, an internationally known social scientist and economist. He will assume office June 30 next on the retirement of Dr. Livingston Farrand. Doctor Day, who is 53 years old, is a graduate of Dartmouth and has taught there and at Harvard and the University of Michigan.

FROM AROUND MICHIGAN

Sturgis—Delegates to the annual convention of the Michigan State Grange unanimously re-elected C. H. Bramble of Lansing state master and chose Alpena as the 1937 convention city.

Berkley—Twenty-five years ago, Arthur Mitchell swallowed 35 buckshot while hunting. Recently he underwent an appendectomy. Surgeons removed an appendix six inches long, with the 35 buckshot in it.

Lansing—The state highway department and the WPA have announced jointly an $11,000,000 road construction program designed to continue through the winter in the upper peninsula and a part of lower Michigan.

Sandusky—It has been estimated that recent rains and heavy frosts have cost Sanilac county bean growers $1,400,000. About 25 per cent of the crop has been ruined. Rain has forced many farmers to abandon machinery and attempt to harvest the crop by hand.

Adrian—Officials are under Stream Control Commission orders to submit plans by March 1st for a secondary sewage disposal system, estimated to cost $60,000 and intended to decrease River Raisin pollution. Completion of the plant has been ordered by May 1, 1938.

Elsie—Mrs. Thelma Dunham, 36 years old, and her mother, Mrs. William Wright, 55, of Elsie, died of burns suffered when Mrs. Dunham poured oil onto some coals in the kitchen stove as she started to prepare dinner. The mother was burned while beating the flames from Mrs. Dunham's clothing.

Lansing—Michigan's wheat crop is ready to go into the winter in the best condition in many seasons. With a world shortage of wheat to reduce the prospective carryover from the 1936 crop into the 1937 marketing season, growers are cheered by the outlook for fair prices in the next harvest.

Grand Rapids—The same crew that removed the first rail from the 40 miles of street railway tracks here in August 1935, took up the last rail during October. Buses are now used in place of street cars. The Federal government supplied $1,868,966 for the project and the city $69,434 in cash and $75,000 in salvaged rails.

Traverse City—Potatoes are pouring into the city's warehouses but very few of them are finding their way to market. Most growers are selling just enough to pay harvesting costs and are holding the remainder for higher prices. The quality of the crops is the best in several years, growers report. The average yield in Grand Traverse county is 100 to 125 bushels per acre.

Ionia—Harwood & Son, prize stock breeders, probably have the most unique steer in the state among their herd. He is "Scotty," one ton of beef on the hoof, a Scotch highland steer. He was saved from the Kansas City stock yards by Harold Harwood several years ago, after being exhibited in circuses since the time he was brought to America as a calf. "Scotty's" dress is unique—it's all horns and wool.

Allegan—Six Allegan county farmers have won charter membership this year in the Michigan Thousand Bushel Club but none of the winners harvested a thousand bushels per acre. The yields varied from a high of 834 bushels per acre to a low of 750 bushels per acre and all were certified by a county agricultural agent. The project was sponsored by the Pennsylvania railroad, the Michigan Muck Farmers and the Michigan Club.

Bay City—Raphael G. Phillips, Bay City's veteran municipal judge, was one of two Republicans to survive the Democratic landslide in Bay County. Phillips, who lost both hands in a hunting accident when a youth of 12, has made an enviable record as police justice since first being elected in 1921. Although physically handicapped, he leads a normal life, drives an automobile, operates a typewriter and does the other things a person with both hands does.

Hastings—"If a farmer pays taxes on his property to the middle of the road, does he have the power to post his land against hunters to the middle of the road?" That, according to the local justice of the peace, is a poser! A local youth was arrested on charges of violation of the Horton act for hunting on land without the owner's permission. He pleaded not guilty, saying that the squirrel which he killed was shot in the road, where he had a right to hunt.

Cheboygan—A two-year-old bull elk, feeling ill, stopped an ambulance in the Pigeon River state forest and obtained help. Bill Tremblay, driver of a CCC ambulance, said the elk barred his way, walked over to him on wobbly legs, and made him understand that it was in need of help. "Fellow, I can't take you in the ambulance, but you stay here and I'll send a truck for you," Tremblay promised. When the truck arrived the animal permitted a rope to be placed around its neck and rode quietly to a stall.

Paw Paw—The new district headquarters of the Michigan state police here, first of the 25 modern police posts built for the state by the WPA has been completed and is now occupied.

Lansing—Acorns have made a sleek, fat deer for the army of red-clad hunters. Game workers believe that the plump appearance of the whitetails is largely due to their customary fall diet of acorns, of which there is an abundance this fall.

Ypsilanti—The state is speeding plans for a $1,416,000 addition to the Ypsilanti State hospital in the hope of advertising this month for bids for its construction. The state will contribute $500,000 as its share of the cost and the WPA will contribute $410,000.

Detroit—This should be the election bet story to end all election bet yarns. Thomas P. Danahey is wearing a sunflower. When asked if he was "mourning the death of the sunflower," he said: "No, I lost an election bet and have to wear a sunflower four years."

Ann Arbor—A "well-organized, optional, nonprofit-making dating bureau" for the benefit of non-fraternity men and women is one of the planks in the platform of the "independent" candidates for sophomore class offices in the university literar college at the University of Michigan this year.

Lansing—Snow removal was barred as a WPA project by the State administrator. That activity is a normal function of local government but where a shortage of labor exists, public agencies may hire WPA workers if prepared to pay their wages. WPA trucks will be available on a similar basis.

Clarksville—Carl Roth, local farmer, believes he may have set a state record for 1936 when he harvested 1,242 bushels of yellow onions from a single acre. The onions were of excellent size and quality. Roth planted 10 pounds of onion seed last spring. The return from this seed was 2,600 bushels of fancy onions.

Charlevoix—The Sportsmen's club this fall is planting 5000 marked steelhead trout in hopes of learning how far the migratory instincts of the species take them. The marking consists of clipping the small dorsal and fins from the back. It gives the fish a streamlined appearance making them easily distinguishable.

Lansing—Michigan State College "swapped" a pipe organ with the Michigan Reformatory for a few machine shop tools. Warden Fred A. Chapman, of Ionia, explained the inmates wanted an organ for their chapel. The college had no suitable place to install the instrument, but needed the tools for use by engineering students.

Lansing—Public Debt Commission approval was announced for School District No. 8, Troy Township, Oakland County, to refund $12,000 in bonds so that they will mature serially from 1938 to 1943, and Union School District No. 1, Clinton Township, Macomb County, to refund $69,000 in bonds maturing serially from 1938 to 1951.

Lansing—Michigan's new "lady lawmaker"—Mrs. Elizabeth Belen, elected to the State House of Representatives from the first Lansing district—boasts that "I can make as good a pie as any one." She becomes the second woman elected to the Legislature in this State. Mrs. Cora R. Anderson, of L'Anse, was the first, serving through the 1925-26 session.

Cadillac—Work on the municipal airport, a WPA project, has been started. Plans call for four runways, each 250 feet wide and with clay surface. The diagonal runway will intersect near the center. Two other runways each 2,525 feet long, come together at one end. A hangar, 40x60 feet, is to be built and space will be provided for spectators and for parking.

Blackrock—When P. Corcoran gave away two puppies he never expected to see them again, but he was counting without the mother, a Pommeranian. She vanished for four days and then brought back one of her pups that had been given to a family several miles away. The other pup was with a family three miles out of town in the opposite direction. The mother disappeared again and was back with it three days later.

St. Ignace—Prentiss M. Brown, Michigan's new junior senator-elect, is enjoying a three-week vacation of quiet rest, insured by law. Brown, elected to fill the late James Couzens' seat in the United States Senate, voluntarily entered his home to join his wife and five children who are quarantined because his 14-year-old son became ill with scarlet fever. The quarantine prevented Mrs. Brown from going to the polls to cast her vote.

Mt. Pleasant—As one of the youngest of the nation's crude oil producing states and with leading petroleum geologists predicting that the state has great potential undeveloped oil reserves, Michigan may become increasingly important in supplying eastern crude oil markets. With the possible exception of Pennsylvania, where water flooding of oil fields has materially increased the state's production, and Illinois, Michigan stands virtually alone in the east as an area of large potential reserves.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart
National Press Building Washington, D. C.

Washington—Probably sufficient time has elapsed since the election to give us something of a perspective, something of an understanding of what happened November 3. In that record-breaking vote for the re-election of Mr. Roosevelt, there lie covered perhaps the greatest number of reasons why votes were cast as they were, ever to influence a national election. The results left the Republicans stunned; they were surprising even to the Democrats and that is no secret.

I have consulted with numerous among the better informed political students and political writers concerning the basis for this deluge of votes that came so nearly making for Mr. Roosevelt that there had been only one time in history when the opposition received fewer votes in the electoral college than Governor Landon will receive. The inquiries have brought almost as many different answers as there were people interviewed. Each one of these persons was thoroughly convinced that his diagnosis was correct and yet after hearing all of them I have a conviction that each one was only partially right. It was, in my opinion, a combination of reasons that brought about such an enormous vote for election of Mr. Roosevelt. The various reasons entering into that combination were influential individually only as regards a comparatively small percentage of the population.

How else can it be explained? Unless separate reasons operated in various sections of the country and, indeed, upon segments of voters in those various sections, no such thing could have happened as the election, for example, of Henry Cabot Lodge, a Republican, to the senate in Massachusetts, while Mr. Roosevelt carried the state overwhelmingly for himself as a Democrat. There were other instances where Republicans won in statewide elections while the state's electoral vote went to the President.

This necessarily shows that even in states that normally vote a straight ticket, either Democratic or Republican, there was some appeal which Mr. Roosevelt had for the voters that was non-existent insofar as the lesser candidates were concerned. In other words, there were split tickets and if this ever proved anything, it surely proved this year that the nation was overwhelmingly in favor of Mr. Roosevelt personally.

I think that, as always, the national ticket carried many men into the house and senate, only it is quite apparent that the percentage of representatives and senators elected this time on the strength of the national ticket was larger than usual. I mean that instead of local personalities carrying the national ticket, the national ticket swept in the local personalities because it is the tendency of a vast majority of voters to vote a straight ticket.

What I have just said seems really to complicate the whole picture. It seems to complicate it for the reason that such a paradox as the election of Mr. Lodge in Massachusetts occurred within this deluge of votes.

But whatever else can be said, nothing can overshadow the consequences of the vast power handed to Mr. Roosevelt. He is in complete control and has a right to feel that anything he does will be accepted by a large majority of the population. With the exception of George Washington, who was elected President by the unanimous vote of the electoral college, and James Monroe, who had all excepting one electoral vote with him, no President of the United States has ever been awarded such a verdict.

So, it strikes me that the outstanding question before the United States today is "how will Mr. Roosevelt use this authority?" It is in his hands to become a man of history, a man who will stand out among all of our Presidents if he uses his power wisely. It is to be suggested in the same breath that if he misuses or abuses that power he can easily become just as infamous.

I said above that there were so many reasons influential in bringing about the unusual vote for Mr. Roosevelt that it was almost impossible to enumerate them. Nevertheless, I shall try to set down some of the more important ones that appear to have been operative. It must be remembered that these larger reasons embrace numerous and sundry variations. Each of the important reasons is made up of a number of less important and less significant and even less influential reasons. Each of the larger and each of the smaller propositions had its effect.

I do not want to have it appear that the order in which I name these various reasons has any significance. In fact, I think it would be utterly foolish for anyone to attempt to say that one particular reason was more influential than another.

How, for instance, can any one individual know what caused particular voters to vote a particular way without knowing the individual voters concerned? So, I am simply outlining some of the reasons that the political students agree have been important:

That the federal government can or should interfere in the management of basic industries like agriculture, manufacturing, power and possibly in the commercial field of finance.

That the government can or should be centralized to a greater extent in the federal machinery as distinguished from the state machinery. This implies a disappearance to a large extent of the age-old contention for state's rights. It goes even beyond that and into the field of local government which, it must be said, has not been too efficient.

That the people, as citizens of the United States, ought not be hamstrung by rigid constitutional provisions and strict interpretation of them by the United States Supreme court. This may easily be expanded into other propositions such as modification of revision of court powers; mandatory retirement of judges when they reach a given age, or constitutional amendments giving the federal government more direct contact with individual citizens and individual businesses.

That the great business leaders of the last score of years are outmoded and that the time has come for a fresh start in business leadership just as the advent of the New Deal accomplished a fresh start in the political leadership. In this thought is hidden various and sundry possibilities. There are those, for example, who have become permeated with a hatred of big business. Likewise, there are those who feel that only portions of big business have been unfair and have crushed the little fellow. Aside from these two is a third group that surely feels the necessity for strict federal control of all types of business, good as well as bad, in order to prevent private initiative from getting out of bounds.

That many of our citizens are willing for the federal government to participate in business by direct competition with private initiative. This thought, expanded, naturally takes on the aspect of a broader movement for public ownership of various businesses than has been evident heretofore.

It is axiomatic that reasons effective with one person are not effective with another and reasons that operate to control the views of a county or a section of a state or even a region of states undoubtedly have had nothing at all to do with votes taken in other parts of our nation.

There are unsettled conditions. There are ten or eleven million people who are out of jobs. Some of these felt that they had been benefited by one Roosevelt policy; some felt they had been benefited by another. However one may examine the picture, it seems to me inescapable that it was a combination of reasons and not any single proposition. It may be added, as some honestly feel, that the Roosevelt political machine was able to encompass all of these factors and to show in the various sections of the country how effective particular policies had been in those particular sections. That to my mind is going beyond the scope of intelligence because strong as the Roosevelt political machine is, it had to have and had to hold the faith of an extraordinarily large number of voters in addition to those controlled by the machine in order to roll up a majority of nine million votes.

So, again we get back to the question: what will Mr. Roosevelt do with this new mandate, this fresh delegation of power that has been given to him?

Already there are signs developing among the old line, conservative Democrats of a desire to persuade him to be less radical than he was in his first four years as President. These Democrats feel that this country needs a little less of reform and considerably more of sound governmental management. How much effect they will have on general administration policies obviously is problematical. It is problematical because included among the new senators and representatives, especially among the representatives, are many men who do not impress me as having the slightest understanding of governmental functions. Consequently, from these and from those wild eyes already in the house membership, we undoubtedly will see some of the worst harum scarum pieces of legislation ever proposed in the national house of representatives.

It is such circumstances as are presented in the type of legislation that I named that will test Mr. Roosevelt's real capacity as a statesman.

Why we have Thanksgiving Turkey

THREE times a year, at Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's, the people of the United States advance upon a certain huge golden bronze fowl, cut its throat, strip it of its plumage and convert it into a savory dish which fairly makes the old table groan under the extra burden. Since we have raised this bird into a national significance which parallels to an almost equal degree that of the eagle, symbol of the government itself, it has a special interest to all Americans. Although many folks may still be "as poor as Job's turkey," says a writer in Pathfinder Magazine, they somehow manage and contrive to have turkey for Thanksgiving, whether they can or cannot afford it.

In years gone by those families who could not afford turkey turned to chicken, duck, beef, rabbit, or even pork and were glad to get it. But now let's get back to the question of why we have or try to have or would like to have or imagine we would like to have turkey for Thanksgiving dinner. The answer of course is that the turkey is strictly an American bird and serving it at feasts of thanksgiving is an old and ancient American custom. Some authorities will tell you that we eat turkey on Thanksgiving day because after the first harvest in the fall of 1621 the Pilgrim Fathers at Plymouth set aside a period for feasting and offering thanks. To provide food for this feast hunters were sent out by Governor Bradford and they returned with a large supply of game. Hospitality was extended to the Indians, 91 of whom attended the festival which lasted for three days. Conspicuous among the game on the tables were numerous wild turkeys, then common in the woods of Massachusetts. From this circumstance, they say, arose the popular association of these birds with thanksgiving days.

This of course is the true origin of the custom so far as white man has been concerned with it. But the origin of turkey feasts goes back much farther. The millions of families who plan on enjoying hearty Thanksgiving turkey dinners this year will in reality be observing a custom that prevailed ages before the Pilgrims first gathered around their festive board in New England. Smithsonian institution records now bridge the years that veil the aboriginal civilizations and show that the Indians of the Southwest domesticated turkeys and fattened them for their ceremonial feasts. While the Pilgrim Fathers, grateful for good harvests and a year of prosperity in the New World decided on a day of thanksgiving to be celebrated at a banquet of roast turkey, really gave posterity the spirit of thanksgiving, the practice of such feasts had been established long before by the cliff dwellers who actually got their birds from a pen as we do today and not from a thicket as the Pilgrims did.

According to Smithsonian records the turkey of the aboriginal Indians more nearly approximated the

When the Festive Bird Goes Into the Oven.

Thanksgiving turkey of today than the scrawny wild fowl felled by the blunderbuss of the Pilgrim huntsman. Most of our domesticated varieties of turkeys today are really descended from the Mexican wild turkey that ranged over Arizona, western New Mexico and southern Colorado—virtually the dooryard of earliest American civilization. The Pilgrim turkey was merely the wild variety of the same bird which roamed the eastern part of the United States.

Just as the turkey was exclusively an American bird in the time of the aboriginal Indians, so it is today. No fowl from any foreign country approximates it. In fact, wherever turkeys are raised today, and they have been introduced to many foreign countries, the ancestral stock came from America. And so far as is known turkeys are never imported to this country. Contrary to popular opinion the turkey did not get its name from Turkey (the country of that name). The first turkeys taken from the New World (America) and sold in Spain were handled largely by Hebrew merchants. Since the turkey was frequently confused with the peacock it was quite natural that the Hebrew trades should apply to it their name for the peacock, or "tukki." More or less common use of this name followed, which easily became in English our present name "turkey."

THE JUDGE SAYS:
"THANKSGIVING is approaching—it's time we told ourselves over and over again the things about which we should be thankful. There are plenty of those things. But, most important of all, I think, is the chance given to make ourselves happy again."—Judge Harry B. Keidan.

Thanksgiving Day

NO DOUBT the same old question will be asked that we have so often heard—what have we to be thankful for? The question is foolish, almost as foolish as the attempts to answer it. Thanksgiving means gratitude, and there is probably no man alive who does not hold ingratitude to be one of the blackest sins. Of course, there can be no gratitude except as it is shown not only for something but to some one. Therefore, observes a writer in the Indianapolis News, it is that the thought of Thanksgiving necessarily implies the existence of a Divine Giver and Benefactor. So we are bidden to return thanks to Almighty God as "the Giver of every good and perfect gift." When there seems to be a scarcity of gifts one is tempted to ask the question, why be thankful? And that is a question which every one must answer for himself, and it will be answered as it always has been, in different ways. It is futile to catalogue what we know to be blessings and what we believe to be anything but blessings, and set off one list against the other, and be thankful in proportion as the good exceeds the evil.

Carlyle long ago showed us the folly of the bookkeeping method as applied to things spiritual. Probably most people get out of life about what they deserve and in proportion to what they put into it. It seems to be true that the most thankful people are those who have the least. On the other hand, those who are surfeited with good things take them as matters of course, as their due, and so calling for no gratitude. The question seems to be whether one has a thankful spirit, which surely is something to be greatly desired. Without it, man is less than man. Even beasts are grateful. Practically, the question suggested by the day touches character. There is nothing mechanical or formal about it. One can not pump up thankfulness, and the setting apart of a day does not suggest that there should be such an attempt. The day is rather a recognition, less of a duty than of an opportunity which it would be or might be fatal to neglect. "Be ye thankful" is an apostolic command. It ought to be as easy to obey. Those men are nearest the truth who feel that in this life nothing is due them, and that whatever they get is in a very true sense a gift, and one which may be far beyond their deserts. So we are called to keep another Thanksgiving day, which should bring an outpouring of not only thankful but kindly hearts. Appropriate to the day is Pope's well-known verse:

Teach me to feel another's woe,
To hide the fault I see;
That mercy I to others show,
That mercy show to me.

The rescue of Paul from the Jewish mob by the Roman authorities resulted in consideration of his case on their part to determine what manner of man he was, and why his words and actions provoked such violent reactions among the Jewish subjects of Rome in Judea. When it appeared that Festus, who was procurator, was inclined to turn him over to the Jews at Jerusalem, Paul, knowing of their hatred, makes

I. An Appeal to Caesar (Acts 28:16-19).

It was an act of great significance, and largely determined the course of Paul's life and ministry until his death. It is a question upon which there is no little difference of opinion whether Paul was right in making this appeal. Perhaps Dr. G. Campbell Morgan has best gathered up the truth of the matter in saying, "His way was that of an attitude revealing for all time what the duty of the Christian man is—to be true to his Lord, to be true to his conscience, to be loyal to the powers that be, and to make his appeal to them where necessary, for protection, in order that he may continue his work in accordance with the will of his Lord." Paul made no appeal to save his own life, but he did want to continue his ministry. And this he was permitted to do, for after he had come to Rome we find him to be

II. A Prisoner Preacher (vv. 20-24, 30, 31).

He was chained, but not silenced. He was anxious that those in Rome should "see" and "speak with" him (v. 20). They knew of the Christian "sect" only by rumor as one "which everywhere is spoken against" (v. 22). He now proclaimed the truth to them, and with what results? "Some believed... and some disbelieved" (v. 23). Again, we see that the greatest of all preachers met just the same encouragement and discouragement that we face. The witness and messenger is not judged by the success that crowns his efforts, but by the faithfulness with which he discharges his duty. Let us not condone our own carelessness or inefficiency by saying that even Paul was unsuccessful; but if we have been faithful and diligent, let us be encouraged even though some disbelieve.

Verse 30 indicates that Paul either had a large measure of liberty, being permitted even as a prisoner to dwell in a private house, or that he was tried and acquitted and continued to work in Rome for a period of years. Whichever may be true we cannot but admire the faithful testimony of this man upon whose body time and trials had borne heavily, but whose spirit was as young and as powerful as the message he presented. And what was his message? We find it in his epistle to the Roman church. It was

III. Justification by Faith (Rom. 5:6-11).

Christian men and women are those who were weak (v. 6), ungodly (v. 6), unrighteous sinners (v. 7, 8), and enemies of God (v. 10). But having been justified by his blood (v. 9), they are "saved" (v. 9). What a beautiful word—"saved!" Brought back to God, "reconciled to God through the death of his Son" (v. 10), we are indeed saved if we have accepted him as our Saviour.

This was Paul's message, and it is our message to a lost world.

Count Your Mercies

Be on the lookout for mercies. The more we look for them the more of them will we see. Blessings brighten when we count them. Out of the determination of the heart the eyes see. If you want to be gloomy, there's gloom enough to keep you glum; if you want to be glad, there's gleam enough to keep you glad. Say, "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits." Better lose count in his enumerating your blessings than lose your blessings in telling over your troubles. "Be thankful unto him and bless his name."—Maltbie D. Babcock, D. D.

A True Life

One truly Christian life will do more to prove the divine origin of Christianity than many lectures. It is of much greater importance to develop Christian character, than to exhibit Christian evidences.—J. M. Gibson.

Power of the Spirit

The spirit of a person's life is ever shedding some power, just as a flower is steadily bestowing fragrance upon the air.—T. Starr King.

Then It Became a Heated Argument

"Twelve tons. I knew it."
"What?"
"I said I knew it."
"You knew what?"
"You'll burn only eight."
"Why, that's so. I never buy over eight. How did you guess?"
"I didn't. It's a foregone conclusion. I knew it."
"What?"
"You're going to tell me how to run my furnace."
"You ought to be glad to save a few tons. Here's what I do. At bedtime I shut all the drafts and..."—Kansas City Star.

CHAPTER I

The events to be related began upon a certain afternoon and early evening when Doctor Greeding became for almost the first time in his life furiously angry. Call these events coincidence; yet it is permissible to suggest that if human passions be supposed sometimes to have a force of their own, so that a violent emotion in one individual may without any physical action on his part project itself and impact upon other individuals, then these occurrences will fall into an ordered pattern.

Doctor Greeding's own experience had persuaded him that incidents do occur, and conditions do arise, for which there can be no natural explanation. Certain episodes in his life, certain unique traits which he recognized in himself had long since convinced him of this.

Thus his sense of smell was far more acute than normal. If he came into an empty room, he knew instantly who had last passed through that room. In the same way, perhaps from a peculiarity of structure which his oculist early remarked, he could see with some precision in the dark. Incidentally, his eyes sometimes shone like those of an animal; and Mrs. Greeding might be startled, when they both awoke at night, to see her husband's eyes thus gleaming.

Doctor Greeding cultivated these unusual capacities—taking care, for instance, not to smoke, lest he blur his sense of smell; but this was a matter as much of inclination as of choice, for he had a dog's distaste for tobacco. Mrs. Greeding, and his daughter Nancy, respected this feeling on his part. Mrs. Greeding never smoked at all, Nancy never when she was near him.

But he had other gifts not so definitely physical. For instance, he sometimes knew what a person was about to say before the word was uttered. Or when he approached a street-corner, or a closed door, he might find himself perfectly sure that when he turned the corner, or opened the door, he would discover a certain person or scene.

Also, he had had occasionally the experience of wishing very much that something entirely out of the ordinary run of expectation would happen—and having the wished-for event occur. But this he attributed to his luck. Doctor Greeding was in fact a child of good fortune. Life ran well for him. He had married, with the deliberate intention of furthering his career, the girl he chose; and their life together had been all that he had hoped. He had desired one child, a daughter; Nancy was their only child. He had sought material and professional success, and found it.

And in other ways, in the small incidents of daily life, luck was likely to break in his direction. His mother—she was a simple woman—once told him that he had been born under a caul. "So you'll always be lucky," she explained.

The thing began with Ira Jerrell, a wealthy business man near Doctor Greeding's own age, whose life the Doctor had saved by a difficult operation. From that day, as a not unnatural consequence, their friendship had steadily deepened.

Today Jerrell had telephoned Dr. Greeding and made an appointment to lunch with him, at their club. During the luncheon they spoke of casual matters. Afterward, Jerrell started to light a cigar, then hesitated.

"Light it, Ira," the Doctor bade him, smiling. "The window's open; and if any tobacco can be tolerated to a sensitive nose, it is yours."

So Jerrell scratched a match. He was a man physically fit, lean and hard. His thick hair contributed to the youthfulness of his appearance; but there were betraying lines at the corners of his mouth. He said, after a moment, quietly:

"I want to have a talk with you, Ned—about Nancy." There was a slow color in his cheeks.

The Doctor nodded. "Yes, I know."

Jerrell looked at him curiously. "How can you know?" he asked. Doctor Greeding only smiled, and Jerrell said: "Ned, I always have a feeling, in talking with you, that you know what I'm going to say. You're a curiously understanding man." He chuckled. "I should not like to try to keep a business secret from you."

"If I could read your mind, I'd have been able to retire long ago," Doctor Greeding remarked.

"You don't—speculate, do you?" Jerrell inquired. He had never invited the other to participate in any business affair.

Greeding shook his head. "No. At least, I never have. I'm naturally cautious, and—it hasn't been necessary. I've been lucky in my investments. I was born under a caul, you know." His tone suggested that he was laughing at his own words.

Jerrell finally spoke again. "Well, you're right, Ned," he said. "It is about Nancy. . . . She's a beautiful, a lovely girl."

"Why, yes," Doctor Greeding smilingly assented, rather amused at the other's indirection. "I think so."

After a moment Jerrell came to the point.

"Ned," he said, "here it is, in words of one syllable: If—well, I should like to marry Nancy."

Doctor Greeding's heart quickened its beat; but he held his tongue. Jerrell went on, hurriedly.

"Of course, I haven't spoken to her," Jerrell explained. "It seemed to me that under the circumstances I ought first to come to you—my old friend, and Nancy's father."

And he continued: "I see quite clearly the difficulties in the way. I am twenty years older than she is, twenty-two or three years older. That is an obstacle. Then I have known her, as a child and as a young woman, for years; but she has thought of me as an old man—who grew older—for as long. That is another obstacle. There may be still others. It may be that she is—in love with some one her own age; and it may be that even if she were not, you and Mrs. Greeding would object to her marrying me, either because I'm so much older, or for some other reason."

He hesitated, and when Doctor Greeding still held silent, he went on:

"I don't want to—disturb her, if she—already loves some one else, some youngster her own age. And I don't want to embarrass you or Mrs. Greeding, by putting you in the position of opposing her marriage to me."

He hesitated, said then: "That's the situation, Ned. What do you think?"

After a moment Doctor Greeding chuckled. "Well, Ira," he said, "I can't pretend to be—surprised. I've not been blind to your new interest in Nancy in these recent months. Mrs. Greeding has told me some things about your visit with them in Georgia." He added calmly: "And Nancy's fine. I should have been more surprised if you had failed to discover the fact."

He went on, thoughtfully: "Nancy has friends, of course—boys her own age. A girl of twenty-two is very much a young woman, but a boy of that age is still a boy. She has a troop of these youngsters at her heels most of the time; but no one of them more often than the others." He smiled. "I feel sure the field is open," he said.

"How about you? And Mrs. Greeding?" Jerrell asked bluntly.

The Doctor hesitated, then went on: "The difference in your ages may seem to her an obstacle, as you say. She may feel it a barrier too great to be surmounted. On that point, I cannot speak. That is for Nancy to decide."

Jerrell said simply:

"Of course, in the last analysis. But would you and Mrs. Greeding—"

The Doctor met the other man's eyes straightforwardly. "I know you pretty well, Ira," he replied. "If Nancy loved you and wished to marry you, Mrs. Greeding and I would be—gratified."

Jerrell chuckled with a quick, youthful pleasure; but he sobered then, and he said gratefully:

"Thanks, Ned. I appreciate your attitude." And after a moment he added: "I—love Nancy, Ned. And I'm not as old as my years. I've lived decently, taken care of myself. I believe—if she came to love me—I could make her happy."

Doctor Greeding nodded. "I know as much about you—physically—as you know yourself." He was proud of his tone. It was dispassionate and calm, with no hint in it of the excitement he felt.

Jerrell colored. There was always in him something deeply likable. He said awkwardly:

"I know that this is—an old-fashioned proceeding, my speaking first to you. . . . And I don't want to be rebuffed. Are you sure she is—free?"

"Perfectly sure," Doctor Greeding promised. "I have her confidence. If there were anyone, I would surely know."

Jerrell smiled, and his eyes lighted. "Thanks, Ned," he said. "I shall bank on what you say."

Doctor Greeding drove back up town in a complacent triumph. He had no least misgiving of what was to come.

Edward Greeding was the only son of a Maine farmer. Even as a boy on the farm, he revealed some unique and unusual quality; and his mother's pride furnished a driving motive force. By his own labors he put himself through Bowdoin and afterward through Harvard Medical school, where he ranked second in his class.

By the time he had finished his hospital work, both his father and mother were dead. In Cambridge he had learned to value the atmosphere of dignity and pride which surrounded some of the fine old houses there. In one of them —that of Doctor Bendon—was a welcomed visitor; and he shrewdly decided that if Myra Bendon were his wife, his career would begin under good auspices. He wooed the girl—she was a little taller than he, plain and awkward, not beset by suitors—and won her. Later, when Doctor Bendon died, Doctor and Mrs. Greeding came to live in the old house that had been built by her great-grandfather, a hundred years before.

Mrs. Greeding would have preferred more modern surroundings; but her husband insisted. There were in the old house many things—furniture, silverware and the like—which had been old and fine when the house was new; and Doctor Greeding had a keen appreciation of these possessions. He took pride in them, took pride in having achieved them. But Mrs. Greeding kept the old things from a sense of duty. There were a few things—a vase, a modern painting or the like—which she had bought and against the Doctor's protests insisted on keeping; and her own dressing-room, her particular domain, was decorated and furnished in a modernistic vein.

The house stood on half an acre of well-landscaped grounds, with a fine bay hedge in front, and flowers, and a pool where goldfish swam, and a tennis court. The tennis court was at one side, and the wire screen designed to catch stray balls was itself overgrown by vines, so that the court was hidden from the eye of anyone not actually within the enclosure.

This afternoon—it was a day in May, when spring was already full blown, and the sun was warm—and only a little while after Doctor Greeding had assured Jerrell that Nancy was heart-free, the girl was playing tennis with Dan Carlisle. This young man was an assistant professor of economics in the university, and his book on the business cycle had already won respectful notice and was used as a text in the business school. He telephoned Nancy soon after lunch; asked whether she were free. She told him, eagerly, to come; and at a little before three he arrived, to find her driving balls against the batter-board at the end of the court.

"Thanks, Ned," He Said. "I Shall Bank on What You Say."

Doctor Greeding did not suspect that those great plans he had for Nancy were guessed by half the world; but they were not as secret as he supposed. Thus when Dan arrived, he peered through the gate in the screen around the court, and hissed sharply. Nancy heard, and called, "Oh, hello!" and she came swiftly toward him.

"Sh-h-h!" he warned her, finger on his lips; and he looked right and left, cautiously. "Are we alone?" he whispered.

"Idiot!" she laughed. "Yes, of course. Mother's gone to play bridge—won't be home till late."

"Ah!" Dan sighed contentedly. "And your father won't, either. So it's perfectly safe for me to show myself!"

"Don't be silly, Dan," Nancy indignantly protested. "You're not exactly an outcast, you know."

He insisted with mock gravity: "Indigent instructor plays clandestine tennis with daughter of wealth and beauty." He shook his head. "That's bad," he said.

Nancy cried, half-irritated: "Just for that, I shall beat you!" She spun her racket. "Rough or smooth?"

"Rough," said Dan; and the racket fell.

"Sorry," she announced triumphantly. "I'll take the serve!"

So Dan stripped off his sweater and crossed to the farther court, and Nancy's racket rose and swung in a free full circle. The ball clipped the line, went untouched into the backstop. Dan had not moved, had made no effort to return it.

"Weren't you ready?" she called. "Sorry," he confessed with a grin. "You ought to wear a veil or something, Nancy, or black your teeth! How can a man keep his eye on the ball?"

"You'd better watch this one!" she retorted, her cheeks bright, and served again. But the ball came back, low and fast on her backhand, and at her very feet; and thereafter Dan managed to keep his attention on the game.

Yet—inattention might have been forgiven him. Nancy was slender, with loose dark hair; and she wore one of those scant tennis costumes calculated to permit the greatest possible freedom of movement, with no sleeves, and a skirt which even in repose scarce reached the knee. Her bare legs were golden brown from three months of southern sun, and her arms and throat were the color of honey. Dan thought her like that classic figure of Diana with the stag. Her movements were liquid and effortless; her body flowed through a succession of postures, each beautifully composed, like a fine work of art, which the eye recorded and remembered.

Dan himself was no work of art. He was taller than Nancy, but so broad of shoulder and heavy of leg that he seemed short and almost chunky. He moved about the court with a robust zest and a reckless waste of energy. His stroke seemed awkward, but had a surprising efficiency and power. Nancy had learned her tennis in a good school, and played easily and well; and she did in fact win that first set from him, though by sheer stubborn persistence he carried it thrice to deuce.

But in the second set his superior pace began to tell; the balls he hit had a steam behind them which when they struck her racket communicated the shock to her hand, to her wrist and arm. Little by little, her returns began to drift faintly to the right of the spot where she aimed them; she made errors. He broke her serve.

"Golly, Nancy," he protested, "you're blazing! Too hot?"

"Of course not!" She laughed at him. "You're no iceberg, yourself," she retorted. "You're red as beef! It makes me hot just to look at you."

"Want to call it off?" he urged. "No sense killing ourselves."

"Of course not. We'll play two sets out of three," she insisted stubbornly, and they came back to the court again.

She coasted through the remaining games of that set, husbanding her strength, making him run when she could, placing the ball rather than driving it. He took the set at six-four.

"There," he suggested. "That makes it even-Stephen. Let's call it a draw!"

"Of course, if you're tired," she said derisively.

He grinned. "You're a glutton for punishment."

"I've just begun to fight," she warned him.

"All right, have it your way," he assented. "It's my serve. Let's go."

And without pause, they began again; but Dan's game now had softened. She won his serve, then her own, and the first three points of the next game. On the third point he served a double fault; and she picked up the balls and walked toward the net.

"Dan, you beast, you're letting up," she said in angry accusation. "Not a bit of it," he insisted. "Liar," she retorted, and her eyes were hot. "Don't you suppose I know? And if there's anything I hate, it's to be babied."

"Why, listen, Nance," he protested. "I—Well, as a matter of fact," he confessed honestly, "I thought you were pretty hot and tired. We're not playing for blood, you know!"

"I'm going to beat you if I can," she said furiously. "And you're to beat me if you can. Is that clear?"

He hesitated, himself angry now. "Perfectly," he retorted then. "You asked for it. I'll give it to you!"

And he turned and stalked back to the service-line. She took her place to receive. "Ready?" he barked.

She nodded, and the ball came blazing at her. Her whole arm tingled from the shock of it. Her return caught the net cord, dropped for an error.

His jaw was set, his face bleak. "Ready?" He took the game. The next. The next. He won five games in a row; and with the score two-five against her, she prepared to serve.

Driving herself to the limit, she served and came in. His return was hot; she met it weakly, could not more than pop the ball feebly into the air. She saw his body bend backward for the smash, saw the sweeping curve of his racket, heard the explosion of the shot; and then something struck her bare leg just above the right knee.

She felt a pang like flame, a sickening agony. She heard his low cry of dismay, and heard her own voice in a keen fine wail of pain; and the world swam and dissolved, and she was on hands and knees, on the ground, dizzy, almost fainting.

Then he was holding her in his arms, and crying out regrets and self-reproaches, and trying to lift her; and the sandy surface of the court abraded her bare knees; and then she was being carried, and abruptly she was being kissed, and so forgot her hurts. Chaos resolved itself into order again, glorious and beautiful. She lay on turf, cradled in his arms, clinging to him.

"I didn't mean to, Nance?" he cried desperately.

"Please mean to, Dan," she whispered, drawing him nearer.

"I don't mean this—this," he confessed confusedly. "Oh, I've meant this, always, I think. Only I never had the nerve. But—hitting you. . . . Was it awful? I'd rather break my arm."

Palindrome Reads Same Backwards as Forwards

Whenever you find a word, verse, or sentence that reads the same backwards as forwards, there you have a palindrome. Single-word examples of this peculiarity are "re-pa-per" and "deified." The touch of wit in many classic palindromic sentences is unmistakable. Thus Napoleon, mourning over his exile, might well exclaim, "Able was I ere I saw Elba," and Adam could hardly have found more appropriate words to introduce himself to Eve than simply, "Madam, I'm Adam!"

A shrewd take-off of the tooth-extracting frenzy of Sir Richard Paget and old Irish pathologist, is contained in the palindrome, "Paget saw an Irish tooth sir, in a waste gap." Other long palindromes are "dog as a devil deified lived as a god" and "lewd I did live and evil did I dwell;" while every Etonian can trip out a further example in "now note Eton won."

The ancient Greeks and Romans went so far as to coin sentences with a different and sometimes more sinister meaning when interpreted backwards.—Tit-Bits Magazine.

Fudge Brownies

4 eggs
2 cups sugar
1 cup butter
4 squares chocolate
2 cups flour
1 cup chopped nuts
2 teaspoons vanilla

Beat the eggs and add the sugar. Melt the butter and chocolate together. Combine the mixtures, beating them thoroughly. Add the flour, nuts and flavoring. Bake in a shallow pan for about twenty minutes in a moderate oven. Cut in squares or novel bridge-card shapes before removing from the pan.

It is important not to bake brownies too long. Their delightful quality depends on their being a bit "crusty" on the outside and moist in the center. Any kind of nuts may be used, although English walnuts are usually preferred.

HOW ARE YOU TODAY

DR. JAMES W. BARTON
Talks About

Food and Weight.
ONE of the things a little difficult for some to understand is why cutting down on food reduces weight in every overweight individual but the amount of food eaten does not increase weight in every one who is underweight.

Some underweights have no control of the situation and others could increase weight if thought were used.

One of the reasons why some individuals cannot increase weight is because of an overactive thyroid gland. An excess of the juice of this gland in the blood is just like having the draft on the furnace wide open all the time and so all the fuel (food and fat tissue in the body) gets burned up.

These individuals are very active in mind and body—no chance for any fat to accumulate.

If a part of this thyroid gland were removed less of this juice would be made, and so as less food would be burned there would be some increase in weight. Also as the individual would be less nervous he would have a better appetite, be less excitable, do less work and sleep better—all of which would also increase weight.

And still another condition that interferes with putting on weight despite increased food is insufficient sleep or rest. And by rest is meant mental as well as physical rest.

And what is quite naturally never considered by some underweights is the fact that they may have some low or slow infection in the body which the body must fight with food in addition to what is used as heat and energy. Infected teeth, tonsils, gall bladder or sinuses and absorption of wastes from the large intestine all use up food and energy and prevent gain in weight.

The point then about increasing weight is to make sure that there is no underlying condition—overactive thyroid gland, not enough sleep, some infection—that is interfering with the building up processes of the body.

Rest Is a Big Help.
While food is the biggest factor in increasing weight, rest of mind and body, and getting out into the fresh air to develop a natural appetite is of great help.

The foods to be eaten must be high in food values (the high caloric diet) and contain also body building elements, vitamins and minerals which are so necessary to proper chemical actions in the body.

Just as protein foods — meat, eggs, milk and cheese — must be eaten by overweights to maintain the body structure and replace worn out cells so also must these foods be eaten daily by underweights for the same purpose.

The necessary minerals and vitamins are supplied by fruits and vegetables and whole grains; the fats are supplied by butter, cream, egg yolks; and the starches by sugar, bread, potatoes and also cereals.

In addition to eating the three regular meals daily, the use of a banana, orange, candy or chocolate bar, bread and butter might well be taken half way between breakfast and lunch and half way between lunch and dinner.

These underweights often feel weak about four o'clock in the afternoon but think that if they eat any food they will spoil their appetite for the evening meal. As a matter of fact it has been found that eating something about 4 o'clock buoys them up, enables them to do a little more work without being tired, and they do not feel too weak or tired to enjoy the evening meal and digest it properly.

While the average adult man may require about 3,000 calories a day and a woman 2,500 calories, if weight is to be gained this should be increased to not less than 4,000 calories and 3,300 calories respectively.

Without trying to "count the calories," sample meals for the day might be as follows: Breakfast: prunes or marmalade, or orange or grapefruit; cereal with milk, cream and sugar; 1 egg or 2 slices of bacon; 2 slices of toast with 3 squares of butter; tea, coffee, water, 10:30 a. m.: Glass of milk. Lunch—Vegetable soup, helping of meat or egg or fish; fruit or vegetable salad; bread and butter; light milk or custard pudding; water or milk. 3:30 or 4 p. m.: Milk, candy or egg-nog, or banana or orange. Dinner or supper: Light soup; good helping of meat; potatoes, one green and one other vegetable; 2 slices of bread, 3 squares of butter, dessert, tea, coffee or milk. Bedtime: Warm milk or cocoa.

"Missing Link" Chemicals
So vital to life are the "missing link" chemicals known as amino acids, that all animals, man included, would quickly perish if deprived of a constant supply. Plants alone, of all nature, have the power of manufacturing them from the simple materials they draw from the soil.

HOW OFTEN CAN YOU KISS AND MAKE UP?

FEW husbands can understand why a wife should turn from a pleasant companion into a shrew for one whole week in every month. You can say "I'm sorry" and kiss and make up easier before marriage than after. If you're wise and if you want to hold your husband, you won't be a three-quarter wife.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."

Don't be a three-quarter wife, take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and Go "Smiling Through."

Household Questions

To prevent that hard crust forming on left-over cooked cereal pour a cup of cold water over it before placing in the refrigerator.

Cooked prunes stuffed with celery and nuts make a tempting salad. Stuffed prunes can also be used as a garnish for chops, roasts or steaks.

A little salt added to pumpkin sauce will greatly improve the flavor.

To clean fireplace bricks, cover them with a paste made of powdered pumice and household ammonia. Let it dry for an hour, then scrub with warm soapy water.

After removing the tough portion of the center of a grapefruit and separating the pulp, place an after-dinner mint in the center of each half and chill. The mint gives the grapefruit a delicious flavor.

Baking soda is excellent for cleaning fish aquariums. Rub the inside with a wet cloth dipped in the soda, rinse and dry. It will remove all traces of scum and evaporation marks, as well as deodorize.

To braise roasts, steaks or chops first brown the meat, then put in a tightly covered utensil with very little water either on the top of stove or in oven and continue cooking slowly until meat is tender.

School Notes

High School

The Juniors have started a project of selling candy in the hall every Wednesday. The profit from these sales will help to fill the treasury to cover necessary expenses of the year. They have also decided to pay class dues of ten cents per month.

The debate squad of nine members, accompanied by Miss Crosby, Mr. Giddings, Miss Worden, and Miss Boone, attended a debate tournament in Flint on Saturday, November 14. We wish to thank the teachers for giving their time and transportation. We feel that the trip was very worth while as it gave the debaters more experience than they could have received from three separate debates. The competition and contact with other debaters of the state proved to be very stimulating. We hope to have a successful season. Even though we do not win all the debates we will have built a foundation for another year. We will appreciate your attendance on November 23 and December 11.

The Seniors will hold a bake sale at Moeller's store Saturday afternoon. The proceeds will be used to defray class expenses of the year. The Seniors also voted Wednesday to have class dues of ten cents per month in order to add to the amount in the class treasury.

The members of the American history class have been reading portions of the "Journal of the Constitutional Convention" by James Madison. Madison took hurried notes of the debates and other proceedings during the day, and then carefully wrote them each evening. At the time of his death, the last survivor of the convention, his widow sold the manuscript to the United States government for $30,000. It was published first in 1840. A later edition, published by Albert Scott and Company, is now in the high school library.

The early heavy frosts have made the field work of the members of the botany class of less duration than usual. Even the few weeks put in at this work, however, have undoubtedly caused the students to realize that the plant kingdom is composed of groups of plants, and that the members of each group have certain ways in which they are alike, the same as groups within the animal kingdom.

A Thanksgiving program has been planned to be given on Wednesday of next week; that is, on the last day of school previous to the Thanksgiving recess.
