The Charge of the Light Brigade" at Family Theatre

The thundering hoofs that dashed across the pages of history to be immortalized by the unforgettable poem of Alfred, Lord Tennysonsound again through Warner Bros.' stupendous screen version of "The Charge of the Light Brigade," which comes to the Family Theatre, East Tawas, on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, December 6, 7 and 8, with Errol Flynn and Olivia de Havilland in the featured roles.

Tennyson's verse deals only with the famous charge of the Light Brigade against the Russian artillery on the heights of the Balaclava during the Crimean war—an action 9:00 which forms only the terrific climax of the film story that is replete with thrills from start to finish, and presents a glamorous romance in which two brothers are rivals for the love of a beautiful girl.

Errol Flynn and Olivia de Havilland are starred. The support in-cludes Patric Knowles, Henry Stephenson, Nigel Bruce, Donald Crisp, David Niven besides a score of other important players and thousands of extras.

Wyoming, Nebraska and North and South Dakota heard O. W. Roberts, federal meteorologist, give the encouraging promise that "greater than normal precipitation is anticipated in those states next spring on the basis of light precipitation this fall."

Reports of existing conditions, however, showed that the situation is serious. Gov. Walter Welford, of North Dakota, told the conference that water levels throughout his state are seriously diminished, constituting a major problem for the state and federal governments. Another official declared that

North Dakota's live stock situation is "most deplorable," that virtually no live stock is left on ranges in western sections of the state and that feed is seriously scarce in all sections.

"There is no magic wand at the disposal of the government to make drouth areas bloom," Mr. Cooke said. "We came here to hear your suggestions and we hope to gain from this and similar meetings data which will guide future, helpful legislation.

THE Mississippi Valley association, meeting in St. Louis, adopted a resolution calling for rejection of the St. Lawrence seaway treaty unless the crown colony of Newfoundland and Anticosta island are ceded to the United States by Great Britain. Of course no one thinks for a minute that Britain ever would do that.

"The position of Newfoundland, astride the mouth of the St. Lawrence, is an insuperable obstacle to the treaty in its present form," the resolution said, "inasmuch as Newfoundland is a crown colony of Great Britain and is entirely separate from Canada.

"This crown colony as well as the St. Lawrence plug of Anticosta Island should both be ceded to the by a general increase in the use of child labor, with "appalling conditions" in some industries. Detroit-Thirty-two county WPA offices are being closed, their duties to be consolidated in district offices. The action was taken in conformance with orders from Washington to reduce administrative costs.

Jackson-The number of farms receiving electric service was brought to 25,317 on November 1st, more than a third of the 73,000 farms located within territory covered by Consumers Powers Company franchise.

Manistique-The largest haul of fish brought to Manistique docks in more than 40 years arrived recently on John Goudreau's fishing boat Anabell II. The cargo included more than seven tons of lake trout, valued at $2,000.

Lansing-The attorney general's office will fight a court order which restrains the conservation department from interfering with chub fishing in the great lakes. A state statute provides Michigan shall enforce the closed season if Wisconsin adopts a similar season for great lakes waters.

Lansing-Lansing became headquarters for a new-day "traction trust" with the perfection of a consolidation of five municipal bus systems. New and augmented equipment, result of combined purchasing power, will improve service in the five communities in the merger, which includes the cities of Saginaw, Pontiac, Kalamazoo and Jackson.

Detroit-Total state bank deposits, which is termed the third and conclusive sign of recovery, increased about 38 per cent in the state over a period of 18 months, according to a report by the state banking commissioner. In June public speeches, presented to his 1935, deposits totaled $444,800,000 It is expected that by the end of the year, the total sum will be $612,- > Lansing-The State has begun to make use of the Costigan Amendment to the Federal income tax law. Traverse City-Grand Traverse county recently had a mouse census. The number of mice per acre in major orchards were estimated and reported to fruit growners.

Lansing - Unemployment insurance, civil service, governmental reorganization-these and a host of other issues await Michigan's 59th Legislature which will convene on January 6. Governor-elect Frank Murphy has described unemployment insurance as the chief and immediate issue.

Coldwater - Eight aged women, who signed over their property to an old people's home in return for security for the rest of their lives, faces the prospect of being homeless. The founder of the home recently disappeared, taking with him the assets of the organization, which was estimated at $25,000.

Byron-Byron is the oldest city in Shiawassee county and one of the oldest in Michigan. In a territorial map of 1828, Byron was one of the 10 towns recorded in the 21 counties of the State. Newtown, now Grand Haven, Scotts, Byron, Fontiac, Detroit, Battle Creek, Jackson, Ann Arbor, and Tecumseh were the only cities recorded.

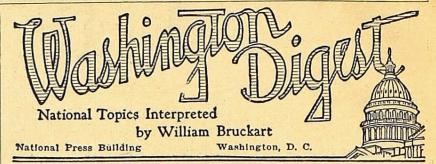

Crystal-The Shaver farm, section 4, New Haven township, Montcalm county, has the record of having 16 wells on one section, more gas wells than any section of land in the state. The fourteenth well was drilled into the pay sands with a flow of 14,770,000 cubic feet daily. The Shaver farm consists of 543 acres and is completely drilled up for gas.

Detroit-With the greatest Auto Show of all time a matter of record, automobile manufacturers and distributors estimate there are 10,000,-000 passenger cars and trucks now in use that are more than 7 years old. The expectation of eliminating at least 3,000,000 of these obsolete vehicles during the coming year is paramount in the plans of both manufacturers and dealers.

East Lansing-The 4,627 students at Michigan State College represent every Michigan county but one. In addition, all but 10 of the United States and seven foreign countries have sent students to East Lansing. There are 3,986 Michigan students, 626 from other states and 16 from other countries. Michigan State this year enrolled the largest freshman class in its history, 1,733 students.

Lansing-The State has decided to employ the latest scientific apparatus to aid its oil and gas prospectors. A fund of $2,500 was allocated to finance application of the electrical resistance method of determining the whereabouts of gas and oil deposits. The Federal Government, through the United States Geological Survey, is to supply an amount equal to that provided by the State.

ticed something of Change in a change in Presi-Roosevelt dent Roosevelt's attitude since the election which so overwhelmingly returned him to office. From most any standpoint you assume, you will note, I believe, a more critical attitude on the part of the President concerning the schemes advanced by his advisers. He is apparently examining the suggestions, the proposals and programs laid before him much more cautiously and carefully than was his record during the past three years.

It is yet too early to catalog this attitude as a change on Mr. Roosevelt's part but surely it is noticeable. If he continues it, it is all to the good for the country. If he continues it, it cannot fail to mean better administration, better legislation, sounder national policies. It necessarily must mean as well, that there will be fewer of the halfbaked ideas, plans which the President had not considered fully, programs he had not thought through. One of the important indicators of this changed attitude on the part of Mr. Roosevelt comes in the form of an announcement in which Mr. Roosevelt named a committee of outstanding agricultural authorities and citizens whose job is to prepare a long-term program for alleviation of the farm tenant problem, if not its complete eradication. Secretary Wallace will head this committee which is to report early in February and the appointment of Mr. Wallace to this job incidentally seems to assure his retention as head of the Department of Agriculture-and there had been some question whether he would re-

Of course, the farm tenant problem long has been a cancerous growth on American agriculture. It has been spreading. Previously, I have reported in these columns how official figures disclosed an increasing number of farms operated by tenants and owned by absentee landlords. It has been a problem for some years and seems to be growing more acute. Hence, the President's move would seem to mean that the federal government is going to put its hand to the oar and try, at least, to do something about it.

Now, it may mean that the federal government will create another billion dollar gov-certainly the President is to be commended in approaching the problem in a sensible way, namely, the cre-

It is highly important that it be done. I think everyone agrees with that statement. Mr. Roosevelt is in a position to do it. He is one of the few Presidents of recent years who has been in a position to do it. He is in that position because of the tremendous majority his party possesses in house and senate and I think it can be said unequivocably, if Mr. Roosevelt cannot do it or does not do it, it never will be done. It goes without saying that there are scores of unnecessary agencies now in existence, most of them the children of the New Deal. There is overlapping; there is conflict of jurisdiction and there is a superabundance of ideas from every source that affect or influence operations of other agencies. It is a tangled skein and the untangling is going to be a difficult job. The whole setup is shot through with politics and politicians and to decapitate political patronage is a man-sized job. The job now may be made even worse in this regard by the fact that never in history have there been so many shades of opinion in congress. The natural result of this sort of thing is that the various groups of blocs insist on carrying out particular pet schemes and those pet schemes nearly always mean a new governmental bureau, commission or what have you. As far as present conditions have developed, none can foretell exactly what Mr. Roosevelt has in mind concerning the new government structure. It goes without saying. of course, that the major departments, each headed by a cabinet officer, will constitute the basic framework of whatever co-ordination or consolidation Mr. Roosevelt eventually proposes. But it is outside of this framework where the real co-ordination is needed. It is among the countless alphabetical soup agencies that the pruning knife and the axe must be wielded with utter abandon. A lot of needless and, in many cases, irresponsible government policies are worked out here. It is among these agencies as well where waste in the form of reckless spending and badly conceived programs has taken place to the greatest extent under the Roosevelt administration.

Such co-ordination and consolidation as the President attempts, therefore, can ac-Relief for complish a very great deal in the Taxpayers way of budgetary reforms and relief for the taxpayers if the job is undertaken seriously. Indeed, as the situation now shapes up, elimination of about 50 per cent of these so-called emergency agencies and complete eradication of their parasitic policies constitute an mportant approach to a balancing of the Treasury budget. Since this is a fact, it must be recognized that the proposed consolidation movement has obstacles outside of political patronage. Politicians enjoy spending money and when they see various of their pet bureaus or commissions going the way of all flesh, they naturally will be frightened and it will take all of the strength Mr. Roosevelt possesses to keep them in line when they realize that money is being taken out from under their very noses. Nevertheless, Mr. Roosevelt can reorganize the government. He has 329 Democratic representatives in the house and 75 Democratic senators. Against this legislative strength of the party in power are 89 Republican representatives and 17 Republican senators, minus three or four senators who wear the Republican label but who are New Dealers at heart. If Mr. Roosevelt is serious about this government reorganization and if he wants to force it through, I have no doubt at all that he can gain public support for his program. I have no doubt at all that if he were to go on the radio and deliver an address about the plan, there would be such a deluge of mail to representatives and senators from their constituents that they would not dare oppose the scheme. There would be more than one reason for support of the President in this activity. Next to the fact that people out through the country generally hate bureaucrats and red tape in their government, the important reason for the support which Mr. Roosevelt surely could have would come from the taxpayers who are beginning to realize what the federal government is costing them. That is one job that the Republicans did in their campaign to elect Governor Landon of Kansas. They, made the country tax conscious and it is an influence that is going to rise up and haunt the New Deal administration and members of congress for some months to come. As a conclusion, then, it seems to me that Mr. Roosevelt has prepared a test for himself whether he conceived it on that basis or otherwise. Unless he drives through a serious consolidation and elimination of needless agencies, many doubts are going to arise as to his sincerity C Western Newspaper Union.

That is what makes it so significant. A year or two or three ago, some braintruster sitting in a cobwebby office would have suddenly had a thought about the "renters" and other types of farm tenants; he would have felt very sorry for them and would have determined in his own mind that they must be made the beneficiaries of "the more abundant life" right quickly. He would have sought and obtained an appointment with the President; would have related the beautiful picture he had conceived in his own limited mentality and, in all probability, Mr. Roosevelt would have shouted, "fine, fine." The next thing that would have happened would have been the drafting of a piece of legislation for submission to congress. It would have gone to Capitol Hill with the and all of the automatons of the house and senate who owed their positions to Roosevelt blessings, would have voted for it. It would have become law without serious debate and, as in most cases, without most of the representatives and senators having understood what it was all about. The results of such legislation are beginning to show and it is going to be necessary to remake a great deal of it. The trouble was that these theorists and impractical men never were able to see more than one narrow phase of the problem with which they were dealing and Mr. Roosevelt did not take the time to find out for himself what all of the factors were. It is guite evident, therefore, that one thing the New Deal sadly needs is more co-ordination among its

III. The Fight of Faith (vv. 12-16). Christianity is not only an inward grace which reflects in "godliness with contentment" and in fleeing the snare of riches, but it is a daily fighting of the good fight of faith. It is imperative that there be "a good confession" (v. 12), coupled with a keeping of God's "command-ment without spot, without re-proach, until the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ."

The servant of Christ, in view of the coming of the One who is "the King of Kings and Lord of Lords," is to live a consistent, clean, and irreproachable life.

IV. A Divine Deliverance (II Tim. 4:16-18)

"All forsook me," says Paul. How tragic! How weak and undependable is the arm of flesh! "But the Lord stood by me." How glorious! How mighty and gracious is our God!

The follower of Christ may find himself without a human friend or supporter. Those who stood by in younger and more successful days may have disappeared. But let us remember that our trust is in God who has never failed any one of his children. "He abideth faithful, he cannot deny himself." (II Tim. 2:13).

Worship and Prayers

It is for the sake of man, not of God, that worship and prayers are required; that man may be made better - that he may be confirmed in a proper sense of his dependent state, and acquire those pious and virtuous dispositions in which his highest improvement consists.

Nature provides your body with certain "vital forces" to help you properly digest food, eliminate body wastes and purify the blood stream. Improper diet and over-indugence gradually weaken and destroy these "vital friendly forces" and usually cause arthritis, neuritis, severe headaches, anaema, chronic indigestion and other all-ments traceable to the condition of the digestive tract.

SYNOPSIS Dr. Greeding, a wealthy and talented middle aged surgeon, is possessed of seem-ingly supernatural powers. He is able to anticipate what people say before they ut-ter a word; occasionally he can wish for something extraordinary to happen and have the wish fulfilled. Greeding meets Ira Jerrell, a wealthy business friend of his own age, who tells him he loves his daughter Nancy and would like to marry her. Dr. Greeding is pleased and tells Jerrell he has a clear field. Nancy, how-ever, is in love with Dan Carlisle, an as-sistant professor at the University who has little means. They discuss marriage, but his arm. "Hush," she protested. Some one knocked at the door, and she opened it. Ruth was there.

"Thomas wants to know will you want him to drive," she said in a resentful tone. Doctor Greeding shook his head. 'No. I'll take Mrs. Greeding's car," he answered shortly. And Mrs. Greeding, before Ruth could turn away, keeping the servant near as a shield between them, touched his arm. "Come, Ned," she said. "We'll have to hurry." So they went downstairs togethly enraged. Stepping into his wife's room, his eye falls on a marble statuette which

The other car was no more than a hundred yards ahead of them. Doctor Greeding heard like an echo of his words a loud explosion, and saw the other automobile lurch drunkenly to the right against the curb. It tilted up and over, and came down crashing. He was trembling and shaken with a vast and perilous Greeding responded, stimulated by excitement, like one who stands before a closed door, long locked, in which now the key is fixed, waiting only for him to turn it, and open the door, and enter in.

Suddenly his hands wavered on the wheel, so that Mrs. Greeding caught and steadied it; and she cried sharply: "Ned!"

"It's all right," he said huskily. 'I'm upset, that's all." And he added: "I've a mind to turn around and go home. I don't feel like seeing people." "Nonsense!" she insisted. "It's what you need."

"Oh, I suppose so," he assented. But she watched him thereafter with an alert attention, till they came to their destination, where other cars were already parked, and alighted and went in. On the way up the walk to the door, she held his arm, her eyes full of solicitude, till he smiled at her reassur-

"I need a cocktail," he said. "That will pick me up."

And in fact, once in the house, greeting a dozen people in succession, he was swept out of his own distracting thoughts. He gulped a cocktail and another, and felt new strength flow into him. In the drawing-room he recognized, standing with Mrs. Jordan and two or three others by the hearth, Professor Carlisle, who was young Dan's father. The professor was a small, lean, gray old man with clear blue eyes; and Doctor Greeding, with an impulse to cultivate the other as a possible ally against Dan and Nancy, crossed to speak to him. As he did so, a young woman by the professor's elbow turned to watch him approach; and Doctor Greeding unconsciously paused as he saw her countenance. She was tall, her glance serene and steady. As though she marked his hesitation, there was a faint amusement in her eyes; but after that momentary pause, Doctor Greeding went on, and Mrs. Jordan welcomed him into the group and made introductions.

"You know Professor Carlisle Doctor Greeding? And Mary Ann? I've put Miss Carlisle beside you at dinner, Doctor, so you can talk shop as much as you please!"

He shook hands with Professor Carlisle and with the girl. Mary Ann's hand in his had a strength which pleased him. He found her deeply, stirringly beautiful. At Mrs. Jordan's word, she smiled again; and Doctor Greeding echoed: "Talk

She continued to talk to him, in a pleasant and diverting fashion, of sequent and maddeningly logical a variety of matters; and Doctor stubbornness: "And of course I her beauty and her wit. "Professor Carlisle was explaining to me about poltergeists," she volunteered in a sprightly tone. "I had told him of the statuette in my

"Of course not!" she cried. "I didn't mean you. I meant—any-one." And she added: "Professor Carlisle says there are so many things which couldn't happen, and didn't happen-and yet they did happen!"

"Tosh!" he protested. "Well, anyway," she declared, "I wish this poltergeist, or whatever it was, would put my statuette back together again."

Doctor Greeding did not like this conversation. It struck too close home. He turned into their own drive with deep relief.

At the door of her dressing-room Mrs. Greeding kissed him goodnight. "Now, don't worry about that poor man who was killed, Ned,' she insisted.

He smiled ruefully, and he said: 'I know it's absurd, but-I do feel responsible. I think I'll check up, find out whether his family is left in straits."

She said fondly: "You'd carry all the world's burdens on your shoulders if you could. Good night."

Till she slept she could hear him moving about in his room next to hers. He had, in fact, no inclination for sleep. In pajamas and dressing-gown, he sat for a while trying to read, but the book failed to hold him . . . It was of course absurd to suppose that his own wish could have caused that man's death; and yet Doctor Greeding was disturbed. There were emotions which poisoned a man's soul and his body too; could it be possible that hate and anger might sometimes be like deadly shafts projected into the world? He himself was almost immune to these passions; he prided himself on this fact, and he thought regretfully of his anger of a while ago. So, seeing the cause of it, he remembered Nancy, and the prob-lem she presented. There was a new kindliness in Doctor Greeding tonight. Of course, he decided, if Nancy truly loved Dan, he would not want her to marry Jerrell; yet she might be led to weigh the one man against the other, might make for

"Oh, Ned," she protested. "In twenty years he will be an old man; and she-' "He won't live twenty years."

Doctor Greeding said explicitly. "I operated on him, you remember. He comes of a short-lived family, and he himself has a heart weakness, latent now, but bound to develop. He won't live twenty years; and when he dies, he will leave Nancy still a young woman, and wealthy enough to-"

Her cheek was pale. "Oh Ned, that's horrible!"

"It's sensible!" he insisted. She stared at him in amazement. 'Ned, sometimes I can't understand you," she confessed. "There's a hard, ruthless streak in you. Most of the time you're gentle and loyal and fine; but-I'm afraid of you myself, sometimes."

His lips were tight with rage. "I'm finding out a lot of things bout myself," he exclaimed, and he laughed unpleasantly. "It's queer you never noticed them be-middle-aged man, a little shabby. His was an inexpensive car. It was crushed and battered, now, fit only to be junked. The man, fortunately, had been alone. Doctor Greeding, looking down at him, felt terror and contrition-and a dizzying sense of power!

The policeman asked at large: 'Anyone see what happened?" Doctor Greeding cleared his throat, steadied his voice. There was no more anger in him; but rather a quick caution. "He was driving very rapidly,"

he explained to the officer. "He passed us at the last traffic-light, and cut in on me pretty sharply. Drunk, do you .hink?"

"No smell of booze on him," the policeman replied. "His front tire blew out when he hit the turn. I guess that's the answer." He produced his notebook and took Doctor Greeding's name and address, then turned to the others who had pressed around.

Doctor Greeding, at the first opportunity, returned to his car, took the wheel and moved away. He said nothing; but Mrs. Greeding watched him, saw his deep distress. "Was he killed?" she asked.

The Doctor nodded. His brow was moist, his tones shaken. "Myra, his neck was broken!" he said unsteadily, and tried to laugh. "That makes me feel-curiously

 "'I feel as though I'd wished it

"You're perfectly ridiculous," she urged loyally. "He was driving like an idiot. It just happened to-happen right before our eyes." "Poor devil!" Doctor Greeding muttered; and she looked at him in a secret astonishment. It was not like her husband to be thus senselessly disturbed; and she sought to turn his thoughts into another channel. "You'd better hurry, Ned," she reminded him. "We're late already!"

So he drove on in silence; but he could not so easily dismiss this tragedy from his mind. Common sense told him that this was no more than one of those incredibly apt coincidences which occur in the

But before Mary Ann could reply, Mrs. Jordan swept her away. Doctor Greeding and Professor Car-lisle were left together. Doctor Greeding said casually:

"I've met your son, of course, Professor; but I didn't know you had a daughter too."

Professor Carlisle smiled fondly. "She doesn't-circulate as much as Dan does," he assented. "She's a registered nurse-takes her profession rather seriously."

"That is apt to be a-sporadic occupation," Doctor Greeding suggested.

"She was Doctor Homans' surgical nurse until he died," Professor Carlisle explained. "But since then

The exodus toward the diningroom began. Doctor Greeding found himself placed at Mrs. Jordan's right, Mary Ann on his other side. Mrs. Greeding was at the other end of the table, beside Professor Carlisle.

The effect of the cocktails the Doctor had taken began to pass, and memory of the tragedy he had witnessed so short a time ago returned to disturb him. By and by he heard Professor Carlisle at the other end of the table utter a word at once strange and vaguely familiar. The word was poltergeist. It touched some chord of memory in him, and he tried to hear what the other was saying; but Mary Ann just then released herself from the man beyond her, and smiled and suggested:

"We don't actually have to talk shop, I suppose, Doctor Greeding; but we ought to say something to each other!"

He forgot his interest in Professor Carlisle. "Mrs. Jordan contrives these things so carefully," he assented in an amused undertone. "Gives us our cue. You worked with Doctor Homans, your father says?"

"For three years," she assented. He chuckled, curiously stimulated, forgetting for the present that

"Oh, yes," she agreed.

room being broken so mysteriously; and he said we probably had a poltergeist in the house!"

Doctor Greeding remembered. "I've heard the word, somewhere. "It comes from the German," she explained quickly, grateful for his attention. "It means 'a racketing spirit'; and when there is one in a house, it throws stones, crockery, furniture-all sorts of things-all around everywhere."

And she went on hurriedly: "Professor Carlisle said usually these things happen where there is a young girl who is sick, or half crazy, or something." She laughed. "So I told him Nancy certainly wasn't either sick or crazy; and Ruth may not be so awfully well, but she's over forty and perfectly sane, and cook's fifty if she's a day!"

Doctor Greeding, in a sudden startled interest, asked in a careful tone: "Did Professor Carlisle offer any explanation of these phenomena?" His pulse, absurdly, pounded.

"Oh, he says there isn't any," she assured him. "He says such things probably don't really happen; that they're imagined, or faked, or something. Pictures can't just fall off walls, of course; and fires don't start by themselves."

He nodded vigorously. "Of course not," he agreed. "All nonsense!" But he had a sudden, vivid memory of a sultry summer day, a day in haytime. Himself a small boy in the mow, stowing away the hay as it was tossed up to him, his nostrils full of choking dust, stifled, miserable. He hated the work, the barn, the hay; he wished furiously for any manner of rescue from this toil. And suddenly there was smoke in the air, and flames about his feet, and he leaped down out of the mow -and had need to work no more that day, but only to watch the barn burn merrily.

Mrs. Greeding's voice went on, an undercurrent to his thoughts: "Things don't just fly around for no reason.

And he said, surprisingly uneasy: "Of course not! All those yarns "See him around the "See him around the "See him around the trade of professional mediums; but

Magna Charta Signed by

King John's Royal Mark Every schoolboy knows that Magna Charta was signed by King John at Runnymede on June 15th. 1215, observes a writer in London Answers Magazine.

But every schoolboy happens to be wrong! Magna Charta was never signed at all-for the very good reason that King John was quite unable to write even his own name. In this he was not alone. Most of the British rulers of that time-and those on the Continent, for that matter-were ignorant of the use of a pen. And so Magna Charta bore at the foot an apparently meaningless mark which was called, perhaps to the secret delight of his Majesty, 'the royal signature." However, the barons made sure

"Heroes of the Sea" By FLOYD GIBBONS, Famous Headline Hunter

FROM William M. Thom of Brooklyn, N. Y., comes another swell story of the sea-a heart-breaking tale of a sinking ship, and a fine epic of true sea-going courage. Bill tells this tale of the wreck of the steamer Sibiria in 1916, and it's one that I wouldn't have missed for a lot of money. Bravery and hardihood aren't such common qualities these days that you can afford to pass them up, and this yarn will bring to light a certain feat of the Landsdowne volunteer crew of the English coast guard that well deserves to be recorded in print.

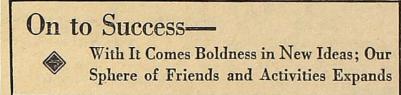

Bill Thom was chief engineer on the Sibiria, and in November, 1916, she was carrying munitions from Halifax to London. She crossed the Atlantic without incident, but the night of the nineteenth was black and wild, with a high sea running.

A few miles off to port lay the Kent coast, with no lights showing, due to the danger of air raids. All hands were looking forward to tying up at the Tilsbury docks the next morning, BUT THE SIBIRIA WAS NEVER TO MAKE FAST TO A PIER AGAIN.

The Sibiria Was in Serious Trouble.

Sometime in the black stormy night a mistake was made. The lookout had missed the North Foreland lighthouse beacon, and now the Sibiria was in serious trouble. Practically at the mouth of the River Thames lie the treacherous Goodwin Sands, graveyard of many a ship. In the same locality was a mine-field, set to trap German submarines. The Sibiria had blundered in between the two. Lost-wallowing through rough seas in inky blackness-her captain was faced with a difficult choice. He could either run her into the mine field, and probably be blown to bits, or take his chances with the dreaded quicksands.

'What an alternative." says Bill. "But on the Goodwin Sands we had at least a slim chance of being rescued by the English coast guard.

of your tastes, abilities, desires and hopes which will astonish you. Take an inventory of yourself, paying special attention to the things you like but which you have little of in your daily life. Then start putting them into it.

Often we have to begin slowly -reading, or finding courses of instruction within our means, or working out a program for ourselves in solitude; but every day something can be done toward the new way of living. It can grow from an interest into a hobby, from a hobby into a side line, from a side line into a specialty. Then comes the day when the unsatisfactory work can be given up (to someone who will find it as satisfying and as absorbing as we find our own new field) and success is at last really and noticeably on its way to us-or we are on our way to it. Then living begins to be fun. We meet people with the same tastes, Another Lifeboat Battling Its Way Toward Us.

So Captain Swift steered away from the mine field and gray dawn saw the Sibiria on the sands, held fast, pounded by the waves and SLOWLY SINKING.

Rockets and wireless messages were sent out all through the night. Finally, in the light of the gray dawn, they saw an open lifeboat headed toward them from Deal. Huddled on the bridge and the boat deck the Sibiria's crew watched the boat's crew make a terrific fight against the sea. Imagine the disappointment those fellows must have felt, when, after hours of battling, the lifeboat was forced to return to shore.

Couldn't Launch the Boats.

As a last resort the captain ordered one of the Sibiria's own boats baseball contract which bars the for-mer L. I. U. star launched. It was battered to pieces against the side of the ship almost deck was awash and on the staircase of the dining salon we could see the water slowly rising, one step every hour. Fifty-two of us huddled on the bridge and the boat deck, waiting, waiting. Our hopes rose as, from Ramsgate, on the north, our straining eyes picked out another lifeboat battling its way toward us. But it was the same story. The high seas broke their oars and almost swamped them. They, too, returned to shore."

It was getting dark by then. The masts, funnel and bridge and boat deck were all that remained above water. "We were being drenched by every wave," says Bill. "The end was in sight—but we hadn't reckoned with the determination of English seamen. They hadn't given up. Again from the direction of Deal came a boat, making a bitter struggle. This time a British destroyer, at the risk of being torpedoed by lurking U-boats, stood by and illuminated the scene with her searchlights. For more weary hours the crew of that lifeboat fought the mountainous seas. Nearer and nearer they came while we held our breaths ever time a big roller hit them. It was a life and death matter to us—but it looked this time as if they were going to make it."

Then Came the Coast Guardsmen.

They did make it! And what a scene that was. The lifeboat couldn't come alongside the ship, for it would have been dashed to pieces. But they came up on the lee side, and, at the shouted instructions of the boat's coxswain, one man jumped into it each time it swept past on the trough of a wave.

ONE MAN AT A TIME—that's all they could take. Then, to get in position again, they had to row clear around the ship. Around they went, and a second man leaped into the boat. Around they went again—and again. There were 16 men in that boat. They were the Lansdowne volunteer crew, and most of them were fishermen. Their names deserve to go down into history, for, after a heart-breaking battle with the waves getting out to a spot two other boats had failed to reach, they rowed around that ship time and again, saving a life at each trip.

Every Man Was Rescued.

And they didn't stop until every last man had been rescued. FIFTY-TWO TIMES they circled the Sibiria. Then, with 68 people in their badly overloaded boat, they started a precarious journey back to the shore.

If it was hard going out, it was worse going back. The rowers were tired. The load was more than three times as great as it had been on the trip to the sinking ship. Of that struggle Bill Thom doesn't say much. "But we made it all right," is the way he describes it. Yet, I can read between the lines of that simple statement, and I guess you can, too. The Sibiria was under charter to the Canadian government, but her crew was American. So it came about that our own President, Woodrow Wilson, was the man who took official recognition of the Lansdowne crew's brave act. He awarded the coxswain a gold medal and a silver one to each of the oarsmen. "And, believe me," says Bill Thom, "they deserved at least that.'
