TAWAS CITY

Sewer Bond Approved By 115 City Taxpayers

WILL RESUME CONSTRUCTION WORK SOON

Mayor John A. Brugger Is Pleased at Outcome Of Bond Vote

Mayor John A. Brugger was pleased at the outcome of Tuesday's election. He gave his view on the matter Wednesday morning by saying, "I am indeed pleased to find that the bond issue is definitely in favor. I wish to thank all of those taxpayers who, by coming out to vote, showed their interest in this civic proposition. I also wish to take this opportunity to thank those who so willingly and efficiently gave their services on the election board.

It will now be possible to go ahead with the plans for the intended extensions. The Francis Engineering company has already drawn up plans, and everything is ready.

The application for WPA aid is now in Washington for approval and should be returned in a short time. As soon as it is approved, work will be started in the first ward.

"When completed, there will be no section of the city that is not furnished with means for sanitary sewage disposal."

The vote at Tuesday's election left no doubt that the bond issue was very much in favor. Of the 126 votes cast, only 11 were marked "No." One hundred fifteen were marked "yes." This emphatically indicates that the taxpayers want to better the city's living conditions.

In a comparatively short period of time Tawas City will be completely furnished with sewer facilities. This system combined with the water works, will be a big boost to the city. The system of sewage disposal and water supply has heretofore been one of the chief reasons why small industries have hunted for a different place in which to locate. With these completely modern facilities the way is open, and conditions will be very favorable for any such industry.

School Notes

High School

There is nothing which keeps a school lively and progressive more than genuine school spirit—a school spirit which is shared and built up, not only by class officers and faculty, but every student in the school.

A group in any organization which achieves worth while results, and enjoys many good times is the group in which every individual member is willing to contribute ideas and willingly contributes co-operates to carry out the wishes of the majority.

Let each student in Tawas City high school resolve for the year 1937 to be a cheerful "doer" and loyal "booster."

A debate team from Tawas City will go to Rogers City to participate in the third preliminary debate which will be held on January 15. In this contest Tawas City will support the negative side. Our team will be made up of Isabelle Dease, Otto Ross, Madelle Brugger and John King acting as alternate.

At the Parent-Teachers meeting to be held at the school house Thursday evening, January 14, four members of the high school debating team will present a discussion on the subject, "Resolved, that the local school district should furnish text books for all students in the district." Laurie and Laurine Frank will uphold the affirmative side and they will be opposed by Betty Holland and Evelyn Latham. Dorothy Blust will act as chairman. It is (Turn to No. 1, Back Page)

SUPERVISORS MEET IN 2-DAY SESSION

The Board of Supervisors completed its work at the January session in two days. The meeting was held Monday and Tuesday.

The Board of County Road Commissioners asked for and received permission to borrow $10,000.00 to be used for winter work on the roads. An appropriation of $10.00 per month was voted for the District Re-employment Office located at West Branch for Isosco's share of the office expenses.

The board asked for an increased quota of WPA workers for the county. It was voted to lease 40 acres of the county farm to the Pabst Petroleum company for oil exploration.

Animal claims allowed by the board at this session amounted to $359.30. At the October session these claims amounted to $143.65.

The bride was lovely in a gown of green crepe with green accessories. Her corsage was of green roses. Miss Doris Webb, sister of the bridegroom, was bridesmaid and wore a gown of wine colored crepe, with a corsage of cream colored roses. William Williamson, Jr., brother of the bride, acted as best man.

A wedding supper was served at the home of the bridegroom's parents, at 94 Leroy street. Sixteen guests were present.

Mr. Webb is employed at the Murray Body Corporation. The couple will make their home at Ecorse.

After a short business session the meeting was turned over to the program committee and all enjoyed the following:

Vocal solos, "Silent Night" and "Joy to the World," Earl Davis, accompanist, Mrs. Giddings; "The Bible in Song" prepared by Mrs. Nyda Campbell Leslie and read by Ruth Giddings, accompanied by Mrs. Giddings.

Following the distribution of gifts by the program committee, luncheon was served by the special committee.

RIVER MOUTH IS DEEPENED

A 200-foot channel was dredged last week opening the mouth of Tawas river up to a depth of five feet. The mouth of the river had silted up to such an extent during the past few years that perch were unable to go up to spawn and it was impractical to enter even with a small row boat. The dredging work was done by L. W. Wells, who has the contract for laying the water mains in the city. The new channel is about 50 feet in width.

The work was sponsored by the Perch Festival Committee and the City Council with hopes that it will better the fishing in the river. The past few years the river has been so shallow that the fish practically ceased running up the river in the spring. Last year's Perch Festival was marred by the fact that very few perch were running in the river.

It is expected that the Festival this year will see plenty of fishing for everyone.

Second Gusher Struck In Arenac County

Clayton township in Arenac county was again thrown into a state of excitement by the bringing in of a second outstanding oil well. Helen No. 1 came in late Tuesday afternoon with a rated flow of 35 barrels of "black gold" per hour. This exceeds the record flow of the famed Seignious No. 1 by about 15 barrels per hour.

The well was drilled only 2,499 feet when the strike was made. This is about 30 feet deeper than the Seignious. The Weber Drilling company did the drilling.

The Weber company also has drilled to a depth of 2,450 feet in the Whiting well, which is expected to be brought in tomorrow. It is expected to be as good as the Helen.

Various oil producers and promoters have leased a large amount of land in Isosco county and test wells will be drilled in the near future, according to good authority. It is said that the outlook is very promising and some lucky section of Isosco county may become another scene of much activity.

Mrs. John Bulley

Mrs. John Bulley passed away last Sunday afternoon at the home of her brother, Enos Scott, where she had been since last September. She had been ill for some time with heart trouble.

Margaret Lorine Scott was born April 18, 1867, at South Middleton, Canada. With her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Scott, she came to Sanilac county, Michigan, about 1872, and to Isosco county in 1875, going to Wilber in 1877. She was married to John Bulley in 1893 at Houghton, Michigan. Mr. Bulley passed away August 21, 1922.

She is survived by one son, John Bulley, of Flint and one daughter, Mrs. Helen Askey, of Grand Rapids, one sister, Mrs. Mary McMullen of Calzburg, Illinois, two brothers, Will and Enos Scott of Wilber, besides many other relatives and friends.

Funeral services were held from the Wilber Methodist Episcopal church Thursday afternoon. Rev. S. A. Carey officiated. Burial was made in the Tawas City cemetery.

Ladies Literary Club

"Love, Sacrifice and Service" was the subject of a talk by Mrs. W. C. Davidson of Tawas City at the literary club meeting.

The program was in charge of Mrs. Elmer Kunze, who sang three hymns. Mrs. Frank Dease spoke on "The Bible and Mrs. Little gave a report on narcotics.

Plans were completed for the benefit bridge to be held in the club rooms on Thursday.

The next meeting of the literary club will be the anniversary dinner at the hotel at which the gentlemen are invited to be present.

In Memoriam

The midnight stars are gleaming,
On a lone and silent grave,
Beneath sleeps one we love,
But one we could not save.
His weary hours, his days of pain,
His weary nights are passed,
His ever patient, worn out frame,
Has found sweet rest at last.

"The council solicits the co-operation of the parents, educators and church leaders in furthering the attendance of the young people at these conferences."

Pure Water Necessary For Disease Control

By L. M. Lamont, Sanitary Inspector
Dist. Health Dept. No. 2

The one greatest factor in the eradication of water-borne diseases has been the successful efforts of cities to provide pure water for their inhabitants. Efforts of health workers began thirty or forty years ago. At that time incidence of typhoid, cholera and dysenteries was very high, especially in the cities. The successful operation of rapid and slow filtration processes combined with chlorination eliminated specific diseases to a large extent.

The efforts of smaller communities to provide a pure water furthered the work. At the present time typhoid is largely a rural or semi-rural disease. This is largely due to two causes.

In the first place farm homes are frequently not supplied with safe water due to faulty construction of wells. Engineering Bulletin No. 14 may be had on request to the Michigan Department of Health or to the District Health Unit.

The foothold of typhoid and other water-borne diseases is maintained to some extent by the pollution of the streams and lakes. Cities and rural homes often find it convenient to discharge sewage and household wastes into a nearby stream. This always renders water unsafe for bathing within a long distance. Subsequent use of the lake or stream for drinking and domestic purposes entails great expense to make the water again safe. Sewage disposal systems for private homes, institutions and cities can render sewage harmless.

Carrying the "Coals"

Newcastle is a center of the British coal trade and a great port for the shipping of it. To "carry coals to Newcastle" is a waste of labor, a futile, unnecessary effort, an effort to supply a need already well supplied. The phrase is of seventeenth century origin or perhaps older. But similar proverbs exist in many languages. There is one in French about "carrying water to the river." Ancient Greece has one about taking owls to Athens—Athenian owls being stamped with the owl; and an Oriental poet speaks of "importing pepper to Hindustan."—Cleveland Plain Dealer

Bru Plans Settlement of Cuban Debts to Americans—Roosevelt Says Federal Government Should End Child Labor and Starvation Wages.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© Western Newspaper Union.

FEDERICO LAREDO BRU, the new president of Cuba, proposes to settle all Cuban obligations in the United States and is expected soon to invite the bankers and bondholders concerned to enter negotiations to that end. Credit for inducing Bru to do this is given to Col. Fulgencio Batista, who appears to be largely in control of affairs in the island.

President Laredo Bru

The obligations include about $75,000,000 owed to many Americans who invested in public work gold bonds which were issued during the administration of President Gerardo Machado.

The new constitution which the Cuban congress recently voted originally prohibited any such negotiations as those contemplated before 1940, but when it appeared in the official gazette that article had been radically altered. It now orders the government to find a satisfactory way to settle all debts to the United States before 1940 and authorizes the president to open negotiations immediately.

This "error" in the gazette's composing room is supposed to have been ordered by Colonel Batista, and though congress has the power to correct it, a majority of congressmen, after reading the article in the gazette, gave it their approval. So President Bru, it seems, is free to go ahead with the negotiations.

ELIMINATION of child labor, long working hours and starvation wages is a necessity, and must be carried out by the federal government since it cannot be done by state action. So declared President Roosevelt in his press conference. He warned the correspondents not to say he was planning to revive the NRA and insisted all he could say at present was that something should be done to fix maximum hours and minimum wages.

Since the day of the NRA, said Mr. Roosevelt, there has been a steady decline in child labor, grueling hours and starvation wages by 90 per cent of American business. As for the other 10 per cent, he said, they were still failing to live up to the best standards since the death of the NRA.

Attorneys for the American Federation of Labor were reported to be about ready to submit to the President a bill designed to restore labor protective features lost in the death of NRA. It provides that congress catalogue unfair "conduct" which would be forbidden to employers and assure workers a adequate protection. Violations would be punishable by a fine. The federation is expected also to back federal licensing of interstate corporations as provided by the O'Mahoney bill.

TOM BERRY, before retiring from the governorship of South Dakota, appointed Herbert Hitchcock of Mitchell, S. D., to fill out the term of the late Senator Peter Norbeck. The new senator is Democratic state chairman and his appointment brings the Democratic membership in the senate to 76, the highest party total in history. The Republicans now number 16.

Mr. Hitchcock was born in Maquoketa, Ia., in 1867 and was educated at Anamosa, Davenport and Chicago. He went to Mitchell in 1894 and was admitted to the bar two years later. He was president of the school board in his home town for ten years and state's attorney four years. He served as state senator in 1909, 1911, and 1929.

AS NEBRASKA'S unicameral legislature, unique in the United States, was about to begin its first session, Gov. R. L. Cochran declared politics was out. He discouraged party caucuses among the members and said he would have no spokesman in the legislature.

The governor pointed out that the constitution provides that the one-house chamber shall be non-partisan and that the voters had done their part by electing, on a nonpolitical ticket, 22 Democrats and 21 Republicans. He said he would continue personally and as governor, all measures for new forms of taxation.

FINANCIAL status of American farmers may be much improved, as reports of governmental agencies say, but some of them still appear to need a lot of help. Senator F. Ryan Duffy of Wisconsin asked federal officials to allot $10,000,000 to aid the Wisconsin farmers who are suffering from the effects of the drought.

"This would be $200 per farm," he said, "and considering the high price of hay and other items of feed, it would be difficult to make a smaller sum cover the needs which would develop during the winter season."

Duffy estimated 40,000 to 50,000 Wisconsin farmers would need assistance in purchasing live stock this winter. He said at least 35,000 farmers in the drought area and from 10,000 to 15,000 outside the drought districts were in need of aid. In addition, he said, between 30,000 and 40,000 farmers would need government aid in purchasing seed for the 1937 crop.

GOVERNMENT officials, from the President down, were anxious to prevent the export of American airplanes to Spain, license for which was given perforce by the State department to Robert Cuse, a Jersey City airplane broker. Cuse proposes to send $2,777,000 worth of planes to the Spanish loyalists, and his action was criticized in Washington as "legal but unpatriotic." Senator Key Pittman of Nevada, chairman of the foreign relations committee, assailed the Cuse deal as improper and dangerous and said it might embarrass not only the United States but also other nations in their efforts to enforce the hands off policy toward the Spanish war. Congress may be able to rush through prohibitive legislation before the planes are shipped. Meantime pressure was being brought to bear on Cuse to cancel the deal.

WHEN the German steamer Palos was captured by Spanish loyalists at Bilbao because it carried war munitions supposedly destined for the Franco forces, the Berlin government demanded its release under threat of reprisal. The Basque authorities, when the German cruiser, Koenigsberg, arrived at Bilbao, let the Palos go, but held on to the cargo and to one Spanish citizen who was a passenger. This did not satisfy the commander of the cruiser who insisted the cargo and the Spaniard must be released. The authorities defiantly refused this, and several more German warships were ordered to the Bilbao sector.

There was a report in Berlin that Hitler had been advised by Mussolini to withdraw as gracefully as possible from the Spanish embroglio, and that Il Duce himself had decided to cease supporting Franco and the insurgents.

It was believed Hitler would avoid war measures in this crisis, and both Great Britain and France were hopeful that he would preserve peace because they have offered to help his economic and colonial needs in return for nonintervention in the Spanish conflict. However, informed German sources said the Anglo-French note sent Christmas, urging a cessation of German volunteer enlistments for Spain had come too late, and that Germany will permit and even encourage a continuance of such enlistments.

CHIANG KAI-SHEK, generalissimo of China and its dictator, is back in Nanking, Marshal Chang, who held him prisoner in Sianfu for two weeks, also is in the Nationalist capital, avowedly repentant and ready to submit to any punishment. The danger of civil war has passed for the time. The terms on which Chang released Chiang have not been made public. The dictator issued a statement, directed to his kidnaper, commending his change of heart and promising to use his influence to obtain leniency for him; and Chang also gave out a statement admitting his grievous fault.

These developments would seem to have quieted down the Oriental situation, but there is another matter that threatens continued trouble. This is the prospect that Chiang may decide to confine his attention largely to military affairs and to make Dr. T. V. Soong, his brother-in-law, premier. Soong, who used to be minister of finance, stands high among those who favor a strong foreign policy, including resistance to further encroachments by Japan. Therefore it is easy to see that his elevation to the premiership would greatly annoy Tokio and might easily bring about an open break between the two nations.

Since Marshal Chang is one of those demanding war with Japan, it is rumored that the appointment of Soong was the specified reward for his release of Chiang and submission to discipline.

FRANCE took a census in 1930, and the figures, just given out, show the population of the republic on August 3 was 41,905,988. This was an increase of 71,045 over the last previous census, taken in 1931. Of the total, 2,453,507 are foreigners, their number having decreased by 437,416.

SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE WALLACE has just apportioned $200,000,000 to the states for road improvement. Of this sum $125,800,000 will go toward improvement of the federal-aid highway system, $25,000,000 for improving secondary or farm-to-market roads, and $50,000,000 for grade crossing elimination.

The fund is for use during the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1937, and funds for improvement of roads must be matched by the states. Grade crossing elimination funds need not be matched. Highway projects selected, contracts and specifications are subject to federal approval after designation by state commissions.

ARTHUR BRISBANE, one of the foremost newspaper editors and writers of the time, and the highest paid, died in his New York residence of coronary thrombosis at the age of seventy-two. The millions of Americans who have read faithfully his columns, "Today" and "This Week," mourn his passing. An indefatigable, able and often brilliant worker, he continued his journalistic labors almost to the hour of his death.

Born in Buffalo, N. Y., Mr. Brisbane at eighteen joined the staff of the New York Sun as a reporter. Shortly after he went to Europe for five years to complete his education and became the London correspondent of the Sun. From that time he advanced steadily in the profession. For the last 39 years he was employed by William R. Hearst. He had been ill for some time but characteristically concealed his condition from all but members of his family and died in the harness, as he would have wished to do.

SILENT for two years, Mahatma Gandhi once more comes into public notice with a speech tending to increase the opposition to British rule in India. He spoke at an industrial exposition held in connection with the annual session of the All-India National congress, the members of which were already agitating in favor of independence. Said the "holy man":

"Show me the way, I am prepared to go back to jail again. I am prepared to be hanged."

"If you do all I want you to do, Lord Linlithgow (British high commissioner for India) will say, 'I am wrong. I thought you people were terrorists, and, if you like, we Britishers will go back on the next steamer.' We would then say to Linlithgow and the British, 'India is big enough to hold you and more like you.'"

"That is my swaraj (self-government under native influence)."

Jawaharlal Nehru, in his presidential address to the congress, warned the British his countrymen would not be "parties to an imperialist war."

ANOTHER big air liner, the third to meet disaster in a month, crashed against the top of Oak mountain, twenty miles from Burbank, Calif., and hurtled down into a ravine, a mass of tangled wreckage. The twelve persons aboard were all killed. Three of the nine passengers were women. The plane, a twin motored Boeing, was operated by the United Air Lines and was on its way from San Francisco to Burbank.

PROGRESS of the illness of Pope Pius was followed with great anxiety, for it was admitted at the Vatican that he was steadily growing worse and was suffering intense pain. The paralysis was spreading along the left side and arm, and one report said his physicians declared science could do nothing further for him.

GEN. HANS VON SEECKT, who died in Berlin at the age of seventy, was one of the really capable commanders in the World war. While acting as chief of staff to Field Marshal Von Mackensen he was responsible for the great defeat of the Russians at Gorlice, and he planned the campaigns that resulted in the collapse of Serbia and Rumania. After the Von Kapp putsch of 1920 Von Seeckt was made commander-in-chief of the German army which he built into an efficient force. Later he helped to train the Chinese National army.

AMONG the numerous governmental reports at the year's close that of M. I. Myers, head of the farm credit administration, is interesting and encouraging, showing that the outlook for the financial status of farmers for 1937 is bright. During 1936 the total loans to farmers by the various FCA agencies were $670,000,000 compared to $1,060,000,000 in 1935.

The decline reflected a decrease in the "emergency demand" by farmers for assistance from federal agencies, because they "had no other source of credit after the depression," Myers said.

"In the country as a whole, farmers apparently had more money for equipment, machinery, farm buildings and repairs in 1936 than in any year since the depression," Myers said.

He added that this should continue next year because of increased purchasing power and the opportunity to get short term cash loans at the present reasonable rates.

Lapeer—A widow whose life savings went up in smoke hopes that the federal government will pay her cash value for the ashes—$1,100. A bottle containing the ashes was sent to the treasury by the local bank. The woman hid the money in a chimney. Her son started a fire in a stove, unaware that he was sending $1,100 up in smoke.

Ishpeming—Miners on the Marquette iron range carried out a 16 year tradition when they descended to gather around a Christmas tree on the seventh level—1600 feet below the surface—to sing Christmas carols. Started as a joke 16 years ago when a Christmas tree accidentally fell down the shaft, the ceremony has come to mean much to the miners.

Lansing—Conservation in Michigan registered many permanent gains during 1936. Perhaps the most noteworthy of long-time values was the acquisition of the Tahquamenon Falls and the Federal projects of Waterloo and Yankee Springs in Allegan. In the upper peninsula development of the Seney Waterfowl Refuge was started by the Federal Biological Survey.

Lansing—The increase in savings in banks in the east central group of states including Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa and Missouri, amounted to $362,378,000 in the year ended June 30, 1936. The greatest percentage gain in the increase of savings was in Michigan amounting to 17.3 per cent and Ohio led with the greatest dollar gain amounting to $80,218,000.

Flint—Although this city's transportation was tied up by a strike among its bus drivers, business leaders reported the largest volume of retail sales in history, during the recent holiday season. The bus system, recently installed, had been in service only a short time when the strike left the city without transportation facilities. The bus drivers demanded an increase of 20 cents per hour in their pay schedule.

New Era—Local residents feel that scientists may rave on and the press get excited over a meteor shower, if they will. In Oceana County, meteors are as common as dandelions. It seems that long ago there was a meteor shower in this area which made them plentiful in sizes from a marble to a bushel basket. University of Michigan scientists often write to this community for specimens, as do schools from all over the country and Europe.

Detroit—A syndicate to recover valuable sunken cargoes buried in the silt at the bottom of the Great Lakes, with Simon Lake, veteran submarine inventor and treasure hunter, as the prime mover, is being formed here. Lake is famous the world over for the undersea craft he has built and for his adventurous excursions to the bottom of the sea. The 70-year-old naval architect and engineer built the first Russian, Austrian and Italian submarines in pre-war days.

Detroit—A year-end survey of home building in Michigan, conducted by the FFA, showed gains of 100 to 500 per cent during 1935. The largest comparative gain was 500 per cent at Muskegon Heights, others being: Flint, 400 per cent; Battle Creek, nearly doubled; Port Huron, Holland, Monroe and Escanaba "more than 100 per cent"; Lansing, Grand Rapids, Saginaw, Pontiac and Kalamazoo "all more than double last year's number"; Detroit, 250 per cent gain.

Rockford—A movement to shift to Lowell in 1937 one of the Jersey cattle parish shows held in Michigan each year has been started by the Kent County Jersey Cattle Breeders Association. A committee is planning to attend shows at Fremont and Wayland to submit proposals asking the return of one of them to the county where the event originated 11 years ago. The parish show offers regional prizes to breeders. Winners later compete at the State Fair in Detroit.

Lansing—Michigan's unemployment insurance act adopted in the special session of the Legislature as a means of saving some $18,000,000 or $19,000,000 for Michigan, requires employers to pay a tax of .9 per cent on their 1936 payrolls. The tax rises to 2 per cent in 1937 and to 3 in 1938. Unemployed workers will begin drawing benefits ranging from $7 to $16 a week in 1938. Benefits are limited to 16 weeks in one year. The 1937 Legislature is expected to revise the act.

Mason—Old St. Nick paid a welcome visit to Ingham County's 87 school districts, when the first installment of the year's sales tax revenue was paid. Allotments ranged from $124,688 for Lansing to $1,570 at Webberville.

Lansing—Michigan led 44 other states in increased enrollments in its colleges during 1936, a recent report reveals. Its increase was 11.9 per cent. The only states showing as great gains were Wyoming with 14.1 per cent, Louisiana with 13.78 and Texas with 11.9.

Marquette—A fragment of glass from a windshield, shattered when a partridge flew against it, cost Everett Perkins, of Ishpeming, the sight of his left eye. Perkins was driving toward Marquette when the partridge flew up from the brush and struck the windshield.

Grayling—At the urgent request of local sheep breeders, the 1937 Legislature will be asked for funds with which to double the bounty on coyotes. Breeders complain that sheep losses caused by coyotes and dogs, have driven many out of business and others have suffered the loss of half of their herds.

Camden—Many persons would not look twice if they saw a stick of wood in coal they were about to put into a fire, but George Shinabarger is a careful man. He couldn't remember putting a ny wood in his coal so he picked up the stick to examine. The stick was of dynamite, apparently unexploded when the coal was mined.

Ypsilanti—Thirty cups and trophies, won by George W. Slaughter, widely known as a horse breeder and racer, were destroyed when fire razed the Slaughter home at the Deep Run Stock Farm, near here. The fire is believed to have been started by hot ashes removed from the furnace. A farm employe was overcome by smoke when he attempted to save the trophies.

Battle Creek—A pet parrot is credited with saving the lives of the four children of Mr. and Mrs. A. Miller, of suburban Lakeview. Attracted by the screeching of the parrot in an upstairs bedroom, the children's grandfather, who was alone with the children, discovered the roof of the house was afire. In a few minutes the residence was in flames. The children's ages range from five months to eight years.

East Lansing—The State Board of Agriculture has appointed a trustee to handle the refinancing of a bond issue and the financing of a new dormitory for women at Michigan State College. The refinancing of the bonds on Mary Mayo Hall, a dormitory now standing on the college campus, would involve $365,000. It is being refinanced to effect a saving in interest, now 6 per cent. The new dormitory is to cost not more than $500,000.

Lawton—Michigan has its great grape belt because two nurserymen were curious about some cuttings which came to them from New York in the '50s. Their experimental planting proved to be the start of a huge project which spread through portions of Van Buren and Berrien Counties, until now 66,000 tons of grapes are produced yearly by 2,500 growers. The cuttings eventually produced the first Concord grapes grown in Michigan.

Lansing—The Federal agriculture department reports that Michigan's 1936 farm crops were valued at $173,506,000, compared with $141,206,000 for 1935 crops. Comparative 1935 and 1936 figures respectively for the value of various crops included: Corn, $38,333,000 and $36,382,000; wheat, $15,099,000 and $16,702,000; oats, $12,211,000 and $14,160,000; tame hay, $21,948,000 and $30,292,000. No estimate was made of the value of this year's sugar beet crop.

Fremont—Local farmers will cooperate in a woodlot management demonstration with the agricultural extension office and CCC camp officials. The work will consist of thinning out areas too thick for profitable growth and planting trees where necessary. The owners agree to protect the plot for a period of five years by keeping livestock out and preventing fire. At the end of five years it is figured the value of proper woodlot management will be evident.

Lansing—Detroit, claiming to operate the only psychopathic "traffic clinic" in the country, has embarked on the project of reducing automobile accidents. The clinic, opened in October, reported that among the first 100 cases examined there were 14 crippled persons, seven insane and 10 feeble-minded who were driving cars. With the death rate from accidents at a new high over the holidays, the next few weeks are expected to be the busiest on record for the clinic.

Cheboygan—A cargo of 80,000 feet of lumber consigned from St. Joseph Island, Canada, to Bay City will lie on a Cheboygan dock all winter because ice conditions prevent delivery by the steam barge M. H. Stuart, of Cheboygan. Under command of Capt. Edward Laway, the barge started for Bay City but encountered a storm south of Rogers City which forced it to turn back. Rather than a risk being caught in the ice of Saginaw Bay, Laway said he would unload and wait until spring.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted By WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—The Capital city has returned to normalcy. It is not the normalcy of January, 1935, or the years immediately preceding, but the normalcy of the year in which that quadrennial spectacle, an inauguration of a President, takes place.

Back to Normalcy

But Washington's normalcy is a condition that comes in cycles and it matters not how the wheel of life turns, those who are resident here get used to it and of necessity they take the condition in regular stride.

That sounds like Washington residents are blasé. And they are to a greater extent than residents of most cities. But paradoxical as it may seem, native Washingtonians and a certain percentage of those in the political field become so excited that they lose all sense of proportion on occasions such as an inauguration ceremony. The answer seems to be personal vanity—a desire to be "out in front" and to "show off" by having important places in parades and having their names and pictures in the newspapers.

But there is another side of this Washington normalcy. It is the side of the political powers who have little concern about the District of Columbia as such or what goes on therein unless those affairs strengthen the position these political powers hold among their constituencies "back home."

Hence, under the dome of the great Capitol building, there is all the activity of a bee hive. The old timers among the legislators have learned to proceed with caution and to develop their plans slowly, but the newer members of the house and senate are all agog, each one with his own pet idea for saving the nation; each one with a varying conviction about his own importance as a member of the national legislature, and each one determined not to overlook a single opportunity to show the folks back home that their representative or their senator has become a national figure.

Then through the corridors, the halls, committee rooms and offices there are the hurrying feet of newspaper correspondents, representatives of this interest or that, messengers and lowly members of the Capitol's vast staff of carpenters, cleaners and chore workers. They are, of course, important only as they make the Capitol habitable but they are an inescapable part of the picture—of Washington normalcy.

"Downtown" Washington has another picture. In the executive departments, in the bureaus, commissions and agencies of which scores have come into being under the Roosevelt New Deal, there is intense activity. Policy makers of these various units make plans, study, confer, propose or reject ideas for consideration of the new congress and the administration heads. These fellows are less concerned about the folks back home than are the legislators. Their chief concern usually is perpetuation of their jobs, development of their units or agencies into places of such importance that the country cannot do without them. There is a personal interest hardly less to be condemned than that of the self-seeking politician.

All Is Activity

On top of all of these—the governmental activities of the government—there is still another normalcy in Washington. It is the social side. Of course, all Washington society springs and has its being in White House reflection. From the great mansion at 1600 Pennsylvania avenue, there radiates every kind and condition of a social engagement. Outstanding among these obviously after the inauguration of a President is the Chief Executive's dinner to his cabinet. A reception to the Supreme Court of the United States and the other members of the judiciary follows. In rapid order come receptions to the legislators, to the army, navy and marine corps, to the foreign diplomats resident here and all of these are interspersed with smaller official dinners in the great state dining room at the White House.

In various sections of the city and in the hotels, receptions, cocktail parties continue in ceaseless chains. And if the brutal statement must be made, the truth is that nearly every one of them has a purpose above and beyond personal enjoyment, but the selfish interest is quite frequently so deeply concealed that those who are being "cultivated" may not realize what the objective is.

These random observations have been presented chiefly to show the gloss and glamor that is self-imposed upon the hundreds of persons who combine to make up what we know as government. They play, as they have a right to play,

They must have diversion. Frequently this diversion serves useful purposes for the country as a whole because through personal contact those charged with responsibility many times gain information, understanding, of the problems with which they must deal in official positions.

And so it is that, as Washington returns to normalcy, we have a congress—the seventy-fifth—beginning its labors with perhaps a confusion as great as any in recent years with the exception of that which opened the first term of the Roosevelt administration. In my own mind, I doubt that the confusion of 1933 was as great as it is now because in that period of emergency, the important wheelhorses of government were concerned with only one thing, namely, quick enactment of policies that would help in bringing order out of the economic chaos in which we found ourselves.

The current congress gets down to work, however, in a different atmosphere. Agencies of the government time after time have held lately that the emergency is over; that policies considered now must be considered on a permanent basis and that if there is to be a new order, the make-up, the consistency, of that new order must be examined with the idea of fitting the various pieces into a compact and workable whole.

It is in this atmosphere, therefore, and under the circumstances of an overwhelming landslide votes by which President Roosevelt was returned to office that the administration must take stock of what has happened in the last four years and must analyze the prospects as far as the future discloses them.

Probably the most serious long range problem confronting the country involves the relationship of government and business. For weeks, I have sought information and views of individuals concerning the real crux of this problem because it has so many different phases. From all of this research I am inclined to the opinion that the fundamental question to be answered is that peril that faces the portion of our people that have passed the age of forty-five.

It may seem like a broad statement to pin down the relationship of government to business to that one question of what to do with workers above forty-five but I verily believe that is the crux.

It will have to be treated briefly in these columns but nevertheless it seems to me that all of the growing howl about "social security" centers on this one point. It centers there because politicians and starry-eyed wishers have made so much noise about the government looking after the aged that a natural reaction has taken place in industry and, in consequence, there is a growing disinclination among employers to take on workers past forty-five.

Under the whip of competition and in an effort to offset the costs of the present social security program, manufacturers everywhere have been looking for methods by which they can substitute machines for human workers. Where that was impossible, they have turned to younger workers so that the increase in protection per worker, according to the best calculations, is not all due to the use of machinery. Greater efficiency has come from the employment of people able to go at high speed throughout the working period.

This development has been in progress in the manufacturing industries for at least 20 years but it has received its greatest impetus in the last three or four years since it became evident that the federal government was going to force upon commerce and industry protection for the older employees.

Federal Reserve board figures reveal that 16 years ago, nearly 70 per cent of all gainfully employed workers were in the basic industries while 30 per cent were employed in the professions and service groups mentioned above. Five years ago, 60 per cent were in the basic industries and 40 per cent in the professions and service industries while at the beginning of 1936, about 57 per cent were in basic industries and the professions and service groups embraced about 43 per cent.

From this it will be seen that an enormous transformation has been taking place in the type of work that people do. It represents, of course, changes in our national life, practices and traditions but who is there to say when and where this trend will halt. Equally, what government authority can be able to say that social security laws enacted now will be applicable and workable by the time the Roosevelt administration ends?

Remember When Sloan Got $40,000 Without Ridin' Nag

DO YOU remember 'way back when— A jockey received $40,000 because of a race in which he did not ride, own, officially train, or bet on the winner?

That was in 1902 when the French filly, Rose di Mai, won the Prix de Diane at Chantilly. Tod Sloane, perhaps the greatest jockey of all time, had been barred for two years by the English Jockey club because he had committed the heinous offense of betting on his own mounts.

This annoyed the French Jockey club, which then had a tight working agreement with the British lords of the turf. The stewards contended that Tod had been refused a jockey's license and consequently was not in good standing.

Tod sued and the case excited comment over all the racing world while it dragged on into the highest court of appeals. Finally when the high-stepping jockey, who had arrived in Europe several years previously with a $250,000 bankroll, was down to his last pound the verdict arrived.

It created a legal precedent for the turf but probably Tod never concerned himself about that. Starting with the $40,000 received in damages he soon was happily engaged in winning (and losing) a new fortune almost as large as the one he previously had accumulated.

A group of American Olympic athletes were forced to replace their drinking water with light wines? That was when the U. S. team was on the way to Athens for the 1906 games. A stop was made at an Italian port and customs inspectors noted the huge jars of mineral water.

Such a new-fangled aid to the well-conditioned athletes was beyond the comprehension of the inspectors. Visitors always were trying to work new smuggling tricks on them and they thought they knew gin when they saw it. So they confiscated this contraband "gin."

But even though they were weak on Yankee notions, the Italians were as strong on international gallantry as they were on red tape. Even now there are members of that team who smack their lips as they recall the gallons of vino which replaced, at the inspectors' expense, each drop of "gin" water.

Bill Tilden turned down a $60,000 offer to turn pro? That wasn't so terribly long ago at that—a matter of about a dozen years. But since the lion of the tennis courts did make the switch he has harvested a crop of dollars that is not to be sneezed at.

NOT IN THE BOX SCORE: BIG-TIME baseball men who for years have conducted their business with scant regard for the rights of customers probably will behave for a while now.

That pass interference rule will not be changed in spite of the clamor of the losers and the siller reporters. So far only one sane remedy has been proposed although dozens were discussed and laughed down during a meeting of the Eastern Association of Football Officials.

British statesman W. E. Gladstone coined the expression: "The camera cannot lie" in August, 1896, during a speech at Liverpool. Yet photographs showed many heaps of slain Armenians lying in the streets. "Exaggerated atrocity stories?" "No," retorted Gladstone "The camera never lies."

Studying an Eclipse

Astronomers go to the ends of the earth to study the sun during an eclipse because two layers of the sun can be studied only at that time. At other times these two layers, called the chromosphere and the corona, are hidden by the fierce flood of light from the radiating surface of the sun. Just outside the sun's surface is the chromosphere, a boiling ocean of red hydrogen flames, which sometimes shoot to a height of 100,000 miles. Outside of the chromosphere is the corona, a wide circle of beautiful, pearly light, composed mostly of helium and hydrogen, the two gases used on earth to inflate airships.

Ring as Love Token

The ring as a love token commences its recorded history when the ancient Greeks sent rings of iron to their betrothed as evidence of an agreement. The ring being placed on the third finger of the left hand during the marriage service, for it was believed that a nerve led from this finger directly to the heart. But most of the men wore their rings upon the right hand as a mark of power and independence.

An American Parade of Progress

IN THE parade of American progress, there can be no resting on yesterday's laurels. To stand still is to fall behind, to drop out of the parade.

The automobile or radio of a few years ago, for example, would find no market today. Refrigerators, clothing, cameras, office equipment—in all industries the old models are constantly being rendered obsolete by improvements in style, value or performance.

Michigan's telephone service has kept pace with this great march of progress. There is little resemblance between the original service and that of today—as little as there is between the first "horseless carriages" and the splendid, efficient automobiles that Michigan is now supplying to the modern world.

The tremendous advance in telephone service was achieved by years of research in the famous Bell Laboratories; by the engineering skill of the Western Electric Company in producing dependable, standardized equipment; by the efficiency and loyalty of operating and administrative personnel. Thus, America's world supremacy in telephonic communication was won by tireless effort coordinated under this unchanging policy: To supply the best service, and the most, at the least possible cost.

That policy has stood behind your telephone for more than half a century. Year by year it has made the service swifter, more convenient, freer from error. It has brought the telephone within the reach of all—has made it a valuable factor in the domestic and industrial life of modern Michigan.

Sincere and thorough, the search for improvement must continue in order that the telephone shall maintain its well-deserved place in America's parade of progress.

"On My Left"

Here is a Bret Harte story—told by Hamlin Garland in "Companions on the Trail," who heard it from the lips of William Dean Howells:

"Bret Harte was a careless vagabond," said Howells, "improvident, but highly amusing, and we all liked him. He was always in debt. It fell to me on one occasion to present him as a lecturer in Tremont temple (Boston) and when I called at his house I found him in the custody of a constable. Harte explained without apparent concern, that his tailor had sent the officer to collect payment for a suit of clothes, and the constable said to me, 'This man shall not give his lecture without handing over his fee!' Thereupon, Harte invited him to ride with us to the hall and sit on the platform. This he did," continued Howells, "and so, as I rose to present the speaker, I had on my right a hand a distinguished novelist, and on my left the constable—Harte being the least perturbed of the trio."

ARE YOU ONLY A THREE-QUARTER WIFE?

THERE are certain things a woman has to put up with and be a good sport. Men, because they are men, can never understand a three-quarter wife—a wife who is all love and kindness three weeks in a month and a hell cat the rest of the time. No matter how your back aches—no matter how loudly your nerves scream—don't take it out on your husband. For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three or four years of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age." Don't be a three-quarter wife! Take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and go "Smiling Through."

It was hours after his wife's death before Doctor Greeding at last realized that he was free. Terror had ridden him hard, till he put on grief like a seemly garment. But at the end he came to sudden comprehension that he was loosed from the fetters that had bound him. His bonds were broken! He was untrammelled, free!

In a high exultation the man came back to the house at last. He came straight across the island through the shadowed woods. Yet if he had looked up, he might even then have seen, through the foliage above him, the unwinking stars.

Mrs. Greeding was buried in Cambridge, on Tuesday, in the afternoon. It was a hot, sunny July day, with no breeze to stir the heavy foliage of the trees that shaded the scene. Nancy would always remember, at some distance, the hiss and murmur of cars passing along the nearest street; the far whisper of the heedless world.

Dan and Mary Ann and Professor Carlisle and others were there. Among them, Ira Jerrell. Nancy did not at first discover him; not till they all turned away, and her eyes cleared, and she could look around. Then she saw him near her father, saw him clasp Doctor Greeding's hand. When presently she and her father were in the car again, Doctor Greeding said:

"I asked Mr. Jerrell to drop in for a while, Nancy."

She nodded indifferently. They came home together, and she went for a moment to her room. Doctor Greeding stayed downstairs.

When she heard Jerrell arrive, heard their voices in the library, she descended and appeared in the open door, hatted and ready to depart. Doctor Greeding looked up in surprise.

"Going out, Nancy? Best stay with us."

She met Jerrell's eyes straightforwardly and frankly. "I won't be gone long," she said. "You've Mr. Jerrell for company."

She took the little roadster and drove rapidly, as though anxious to make her escape before something happened to detain her.

She was strongly drawn toward Dan—she felt this deep attraction more keenly than ever before; but also she was thrust toward him by some force behind her, by something intangible which her instinct had discovered in her father's mind. In his grief and loss she should have been drawn toward him to comfort him; but she recognized, honestly, that there was in her no genuine solicitude for him. Rather, her instinct bade her avoid him, avoid the neighborhood of his influence and control.

She found Mary Ann and Dan together, and Dan kissed her, and Mary Ann too. But Mary Ann, with a wise understanding, said smilingly:

"Take him away somewhere, Nancy. You don't want me around, you two; and I've nowhere to go, and people may come in. Go along with you."

Nancy nodded. "Yes, I do want to be with Dan," she said.

Once they were alone, she was for the moment content; and without speaking, she drove out through Watertown and Waltham toward Lincoln.

He said, later: "I suppose you and your father will go back to the Lake soon."

"Not right away," she told him. "I won't go till he can. I wouldn't want to be there alone. Not with Mother—down here." Her tones were husky; she said: "Father starts his vacation next week-end. He may want me to go away somewhere with him; or he may want just to go to the Lake. He loves it there. I'll do whatever he wants."

Dan nodded. "It's a grand place," he assented.

"If we go up there, Dan," she decided, suddenly near panic at the thought of being alone with her father, "you must come up. I can't be alone with him. I'll miss Mother so."

He said doubtfully: "I've had about all the vacation I ought to take."

"I'll need you dreadfully, Dan," she said, and he cried:

"God knows I'll need you, Nancy! Always!"

She turned off the highroad into a byway; the road degenerated till there were only wheel-ruts in the sand. They passed through an oak wood which closed like a screen behind them, and she stopped the car at last on a turfed slope, fragrant in the slanting sun. Below lay the marshes and the meandering river, and far away the wooded hills rose gently.

Nancy stopped the engine, and looked at Dan; and he leaned toward her, held her for a moment close and tenderly.

They descended from the car. On the firm turf, she lay at length, her arms across her eyes, in the full beat of the sun.

He sat down beside her. After a moment she looked up at him, and her eyes drew him down. He said, huskily: "Your lips are trembling."

"I'm not—trembling, or afraid, or doubtful any more, Dan," she whispered. "I know what I want."

His eyes were troubled. She covered her eyes with her arm again, and spoke slowly and carefully.

"I won't argue with you, Dan, my dear," she said. "I've made up our minds." Her lips smiled faintly. "No need of going over the same ground again and again and again. Of course, we will wait—a little while, for Mother's sake. But waiting will be hard, and it mustn't be long, because the world is settled, for us. No matter what you think, you're going to marry me."

"We'll be deadly poor," he confessed. "I've nothing but my salary—never will have."

"Dan, my dear, you're so commercial," she reproached him whimsically. "A body'd think you were bent on marrying money."

He said laughing with a deep delight: "You're as obstinate as—"

"I'm not," she protested. "I'm not obstinate. It's only obstinate when you insist on doing the wrong thing; so you're the obstinate one!" Her arm reached up and drew him nearer. "Don't be so strong and stubborn, Dan."

He whispered, stammering and breathless: "Nancy, you'll have me—drunk with your sweetness, in a minute. Let me keep my head."

"I want you drunk and quite mad, and wholly irresponsible," she insisted. "I don't want you to keep your head." Her arms were tight around him. "Dan, Dan, I want you with me, to fight with me, to stand with me, to hold me."

"I am holding you, Nancy."

"Never let me go," she whispered. "Never let me go."

And she said: "I want it settled, finally, and absolutely, and always and forever, between us, Dan. Do you hear?" And she cried, a half sob in her tones: "Oh, it's only so that nothing can happen, so that I can stand up to Father, and so that I can cling fast to you, Dan. No matter what he says, or does." Her eyes questioned him. "Dan, you mustn't argue, and find reasons, and think of obstacles, ever any more. Promise?"

He agreed helplessly: "Anything, Nancy. Yes. If you're sure."

"I want to count on you always."

"You can."

She said soberly: "This is as binding as anything any minister can ever say over us, Dan."

The sun was low, sinking swiftly now; and a light breeze began to blow, as though approaching dusk shepherded the hot afternoon air away before it. They stayed awhile, watching the purple flood that flowed across the marsh; and it grew cooler, and Nancy said at last, in a tone of surprise:

"Dan, my dear, I'm hungry!"

"It's dinner-time," he assented, laughing at her. "Why shouldn't

He smiled. "If Dan were not before me," he confessed, "I might have dreamed some absurd dreams myself, despite my age."

"I've never thought of you as old," she told him gently.

The intervening days till their departure for the Lake passed like leaves on the wind. Nancy noticed once or twice that her father read with a frowning attention the financial pages of the newspapers. She herself had no interest in such matters, but she spoke of it to him. "I thought you seemed worried," she remarked; but he answered irritably:

"I'm not. Please allow me to attend to my own affairs."

Yet as a matter of fact, Doctor Greeding, though he denied it to Nancy, was worried, and with cause. His reckless venturing had involved him more deeply than he could bear to contemplate; and in the end, in a sort of desperation, he went to Jerrell, telephoning for an appointment. "I want to discuss some investments with you," he explained.

When he came to the other's office, Jerrell greeted him with a smile. "Surprised me to have you phone," he confessed. "I didn't know you were interested in stocks."

Doctor Greeding hesitated. "Well, I'm not, seriously," he declared. "But I did take a flyer in Cottons, as a result of some of our conversations. I notice they're not doing well, and I'm wondering whether to take my losses, or hang on."

He tried to laugh. "Matter of fact, I went in pretty deep."

Jerrell said gravely: "The whole market has been weak, and it's never wise to fight the market; so we've let Cottons sag, waiting for the turn." He tapped his desk with the end of his pen. "What is the extent of your commitments, Ned?"

Greeding hesitated; but in the end, with a sort of shame, he named the actual figure. Jerrell's astonishment showed in his eyes.

"Why?" she asked curiously. "I will, of course, if you think so, Dan. But why?"

"No man likes to find himself in the position of making love to—an engaged girl," he explained. "It makes him ridiculous; and Jerrell's too much of a man for that."

"If he doesn't want to be ridiculous, he shouldn't make love to a girl half his age," she protested mischievously.

Dan insisted: "I like him, and respect him. Nancy, you do it."

She said demurely: "Who am I to oppose you, Dan, my dear? I'll do exactly as you say." She urged then, happily: "But let's not tell anyone else, till we're ready to be married the very next day!"

He nodded. "All right. But I'd like to shout it."

"I'd like to sing it, darling," she whispered. "Kiss me now." He did. "And good night. Tomorrow night, Dan?"

"All the tomorrows," he promised.

CHAPTER VII

Doctor Greeding decided that he would go to the Lake for his vacation, just as he had planned. He said to Nancy, "I think your mother would want us to," and he explained: "I shall do some work. I've papers to prepare. Miss Carlisle can get the data together and bring the material up to me."

Nancy nodded, and he added: "She's a very capable girl, Nancy."

"Oh yes," she agreed. "Yes, Mary Ann's fine."

"I've never worked so well as since I took her on," he said. "She—" He spoke of details, till it occurred to Nancy, incredibly, that he protested overmuch. She said at last, faintly disquieted by his reiterations:

"You don't need to praise Mary Ann to me, Father."

He flushed, but then he laughed. "Fine," he said. "I'm glad you won't mind her being up there with us."

"I'll ask Dan too," she said. "So that I'll have some one to play with while you and she are working."

He hesitated. "I don't know whether that's wise, Nancy. So soon after your mother's death."

She did not urge the point, assuming that when the time came, Doctor Greeding would be more complaisant.

She was, during these days, and despite the steady undercurrent of her aching grief, quietly happy and content, with a sense of security and peace in the certainty that she and Dan would never be parted. Her interview with Jerrell had been easier than she feared. He heard what she had to say without surprise.

"I guessed that long ago," he said smilingly. "Young lovers are—transparent. I knew it, perhaps, before you did." He said gravely: "I think you know how much I wish happiness for you."

"Yes," she assented. "I think I do."

He smiled. "If Dan were not before me," he confessed, "I might have dreamed some absurd dreams myself, despite my age."

"I've never thought of you as old," she told him gently.

The intervening days till their departure for the Lake passed like leaves on the wind. Nancy noticed once or twice that her father read with a frowning attention the financial pages of the newspapers. She herself had no interest in such matters, but she spoke of it to him. "I thought you seemed worried," she remarked; but he answered irritably:

"I'm not. Please allow me to attend to my own affairs."

Yet as a matter of fact, Doctor Greeding, though he denied it to Nancy, was worried, and with cause. His reckless venturing had involved him more deeply than he could bear to contemplate; and in the end, in a sort of desperation, he went to Jerrell, telephoning for an appointment. He flushed, but then he laughed. "Fine," he said. "I'm glad you won't mind her being up there with us."

"I'll ask Dan too," she said. "So that I'll have some one to play with while you and she are working."

He hesitated. "I don't know whether that's wise, Nancy. So soon after your mother's death."

"You should have asked my advice," he said irritably, "before this. What do your holdings average?" he asked; and when the other told him, he sat in silence for a while. Then he smiled, as though in decision, and relaxed in his chair.

"Well," he said, "as a matter of fact, I expect Cottons will touch that figure this week, Ned. When it does, you'd better unload." He hesitated, then thrust the telephone toward Doctor Greeding. "Put in an order to sell at your price, G. T. C.," he directed.

Doctor Greeding took the phone; but he looked his doubts. "You're sure it won't go higher?" he asked.

The pen tapped more sharply. "Ned, man get out with a whole skin and consider yourself lucky," Jerrell bade; and there was something like scorn in his tones.

So Doctor Greeding called Paul Master and gave the order, then turned to Jerrell.

"You have put me heavily in your debt, Ira," he said slowly. "If I can ever repay you—if there's anything you want of mine—" And he suggested, not looking at the other man: "Why don't you come up to the Lake sometime in August? Nancy and I will be there. I have medical work to do with Miss Carlisle."

Jerrell smiled, shook his head. "You don't owe me anything, Ned," he said patiently. "And—neither does Nancy. But I may come."

That evening Doctor Greeding left the house after dinner. Mary Ann was at the office when he got there; and for two or three hours they worked together. Afterward he insisted on taking her home; and on the way, he said:

"I'm going to drop everything and head for the Lake as soon as possible. I'll want you to finish analyzing these cases, and bring the figures up to me. After I've had a few days' rest. Say next Friday?"

He saw hesitation in her, and he added swiftly: "I'll want you there for a few days; and perhaps Nancy can persuade you to stay on for a while, even after our job is done." She wished to demur; but before she could do so, he said hurriedly: "I'll need to work, this year, to keep from—thinking!"

She said, in quick comprehension: "Of course. I understand."

He thought, after he left her, that she had seemed almost ill at ease in his presence. Yet not unfriendly—rather, deeply sympathetic for the grief she thought he must be suffering.

But Doctor Greeding felt in fact no grief. That first wave of sorrow had come like a healing flood and passed, leaving him healed—and free!

Their first days at the Lake passed quietly. It had been decided between Dan and Nancy that he would come on Friday afternoon, with Mary Ann. Nancy had not told her father this arrangement. Without admitting it even to herself, she feared some objection on Doctor Greeding's part, and avoided the possibility by her silence.

Doctor Greeding expected Mary Ann's arrival by the evening train on Friday; and he spoke of it to Nancy at dinner Thursday night in such tones that she looked at him doubtfully, discovering something incredible and startling in his eyes.

She tried to put the thought aside. It could not be. And yet this unbelievable possibility suggested by her father's tone when he spoke of Mary Ann remained in her mind disturbingly, and her sleep that night was uneasy, shaken by shadows of formless dreams. She was awake to welcome dawn; and went early for a swim.

When she was dressed and downstairs again, her father still had not appeared, so she breakfasted alone.

Seeing Thomas, she asked him where her father was. Thomas said: "He had his breakfast and took his pistol up to the tennis-court, ma'am."

She went to join her father there and found him in a smiling humor. "Hullo, Nancy!" he called, as she approached. He was at the farther end of the court, affixing a paper target to the frame in that shuttered window in the batter-board. "Sleep well?" And before she could reply, he said: "I slept like a log. Feel better than I've felt for months. This is a great place to rest, up here."

She caught his mood. "Then if you feel so well, I'll shoot you a match; and if I beat you, you'll have no alibis!"

He chuckled, returned toward her. "You never saw the day, Nancy," he retorted. His pistol, a long-barreled automatic of an European design, lay on the iron roller in a corner of the court. She picked it up, saw that it was loaded, and began to shoot.

Her shots, when she finished, were well grouped; and Doctor Greeding applauded her. "Good enough," he said. "But watch me now."

He set up another target, filled the magazine. He fired somewhat more rapidly than she had; and when he finished, went to fetch the target. They examined it together, and she had to concede defeat. Of her shots, three were scattered outside a six-inch circle; but his were all closely grouped.

They stayed there, thus engaged, until the luncheon-bell rang; and he beat her consistently, so that his good humor grew. At lunch he was as amiable as possible; and she pretended chagrin at her defeat, and challenged him to tennis in the afternoon. Her father accepted.

They did not begin immediately after lunch; but they were on the court when in midafternoon the phone rang. The telephone itself was in a closet behind the dining-room, but there was a clanging bell on the side veranda which could be heard for half the length of the island; and Nancy cried:

"I'll have to go answer. There's probably no one in the house." She went running down the path.

But when she came back up the path, it was slowly, disappointment shadowing her eyes; she said:

"That was Dan. He and Mary Ann can't come till tomorrow. He's got to work tonight. They'll be here on the noon train."

She was engrossed in her own disappointment, but not too much so to see his sudden frown. "Dan?" he echoed. "Is he coming?"

"Yes," she said.

"I didn't know that!" he protested.

This, she recognized, was true; but she pretended a defensive surprise. "Why, we've talked about their both coming, right along," she urged.

He said slowly: "I told you, when you spoke of it, that I thought it best—furthermore, I'm sorry he is coming, just now. It's most inconvenient."

"Why?" she demanded.

"Mr. Jerrell is coming tomorrow," he explained. "He called up this morning to ask if he might, and I told him yes, by all means, and I counted on you to entertain him. Mary Ann and I will be busy. You'd better tell Dan not to come, so that you'll be free for Mr. Jerrell."

She sought to make him smile. "But I'd much rather be with Dan," she pointed out, with a grimace.

"Government of, By and for the People" Traced

According to Rev. H. Barker's "English Bible Versions," the first appearance of this phrase "government of the people, by the people and for the people," found in Lincoln's Gettysburg speech was in the preface of the old Wickliffe Bible, translated before 1384, in which it is declared that "this Bible is for the government of the people, by the people and for the people." The Home Book of Quotations states that a careful examination has failed to disclose this passage in the Wickliffe Bibles available.

Theodore Parker used the phrase in three different addresses, delivered in 1850, 1854 and 1858, to illustrate what he called the American idea of democracy. Daniel Webster used almost the same words in a speech in 1830. John Adams in an address in 1798 employed the phrase "a government made by themselves (the people), for themselves and conducted by themselves." Thomas Cooper in 1793 published a pamphlet in London entitled "Some Information respecting America" in which he stated "The government is a government of the people and for the people."

Lesson for January 10

NEW LIFE IN CHRIST

LESSON TEXT—John 3:1-17.
GOLDEN TEXT—Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God.—John 3:3.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Answering a Man's Question.
JUNIOR TOPIC—The Most Important Question.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How the Christian Life Begins.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—New Life in Christ.

The only entrance into the Christian life is by the door of the new birth. Regeneration is the act of God whereby the divine nature is imparted to the believing sinner and he becomes the child of God. He who has not entered by this way has not entered at all. He is still dead in trespasses and sins, without God and without hope (Eph. 2:1, 12).

Men are seeking to enter the household of God by almost any other means—culture, reform, character building—and are neglecting God's way. This lesson should therefore be studied and taught with earnest prayer that this foundation truth may lay hold upon the hearts of the hearers of the Word. Let no one who is not born again attempt to teach it to others, lest the blind attempt to lead the blind, and both fall into the ditch (Luke 6:39).

The coming of Nicodemus to our Lord took place at the time when he was in Jerusalem for the Passover. Jesus had chosen six of his disciples, had been at Cana of Galilee, where he performed his first miracle, and had made a brief visit to Capernaum, after which he came to Jerusalem for the feast. In high and holy indignation he had driven the money changers out of the temple. The Pharisees who looked for the coming of the Messiah as a secular conqueror wondered at this new spiritual leader. It was probably as much on their behalf as his own that Nicodemus came to inquire of Jesus. In answering his questions Jesus reveals the necessity, the nature, and the method of regeneration—in other words, the Why, What, and How of the New Birth.

I. Why? (vv. 1-7.)

Jesus was not unduly impressed by the dignity and high station of his visitor, nor by the visitor's courteous acknowledgment of his own position as a great teacher. With decisive boldness Jesus declares that this man, a cultured and distinguished ruler of the Jews, must be born again, if he is to see the kingdom of God.

God is no respecter of persons. This "doctor of divinity" must be born again, just as was the illiterate fisherman. D. L. Moody once said that he was thankful it was to such a man as Nicodemus that Jesus presented the necessity of the new birth—or men would have said that only the down-and-outer needed to be saved.

Two reasons are given by our Lord for the "must" of verse 7: (1) The Kingdom of God is a spiritual kingdom, and cannot be entered by way of our human nature; and (2) "That which is born of the flesh is flesh" and is radically and essentially bad. To learn why the flesh is bad read Jeremiah 13:23, and Galatians 5:19-21.

II. What? (vv. 8-13.)

The new birth is a divine mystery, not fathomable by human reason. Those who insist that all spiritual truth be put through the little norm of their intelligence will never understand it or receive its blessing. The striking illustration of the life-giving and energizing wind used by our Lord is most illuminating. Wind is unseen, but the results of its movement are evident.

III. How? (vv. 14-17.)

Just as there was healing and life in a look at the uplifted serpent (Num. 21:8), so there is life for a look at the Crucified One. Faith receives God's perfect provision for sin.

Verse 16 may well be regarded as the greatest sentence in the world. It presents the whole plan of salvation—its source, its ground, its recipients, its condition, and its result.

This glorious salvation is for all men—"whosoever"—but some reject it. Notice that God does not condemn them. Their own evil works and desires condemn them (vv. 17-20). God in his grace is ready and willing to save, but men love "darkness rather than light"; for their works are evil.

God's Mercy

O God, the whole world is as a drop of morning dew. But Thou hast mercy upon all. . . . For Thou lovest all things that are, and abhorrest nothing that Thou hast made. . . . But Thou sparest all, for they are Thine, O Lord, Thou lover of souls.

Doing Well

He doeth much that doth a thing well. He doeth well that rather serveth the commonwealth, than his own will.—Thomas a Kempis.

A Trio for the Younger Set

Pattern 1996—This is the season for smocks, although not the 'hunting season,' thanks to today's new model, pictured here. Imagine the fun of having a smock that reflects one's own taste in its every detail—yes, even to the size and color of the scarf and buttons. Designed in sizes: 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44. Size 34 requires 4 3/4 yards of 39 inch material. The bow requires 1 1/2 yards of ribbon.

Pattern 1996—This excellently styled jumper dress is one the tot of six and the lass of fourteen will sing long and loud over. It is a guaranteed delight for both mother and daughter because it's the simplest thing to sew and the most intriguing frock a child ever had. The puff of the sleeves and the flare of the skirt place a pretty accent on youth. Available for sizes: 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Size 8 requires 1 1/4 yards of 35 inch material for the jumper and 1 3/8 yards for the blouse.

Pattern 1202—There's subtle loveliness about this new dress for all occasions. It makes a grand thing of simplicity—a brilliant success of the new silhouette. Buttons, bold shiny ones, add classic chic to the back. And in the matter of sleeves there's an opportunity to choose for oneself. Sheer wool, challis, taffeta or silk crepe will be a likely material for this dress. Designed for sizes: 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. (30 to 38 bust). Size 14 requires 2 3/4 yards of 54 inch fabric. With long sleeves 2 7/8 yards.

DON'T RUB YOUR EYES

Rubbing your eyes grinds invisible particles of dust and dirt right into the delicate tissues—making the irritation just that much worse. A much better way, as thousands have discovered, is to use a little Murine in each eye—night and morning. Murine may be depended on to relieve eye irritation because it is a reliable eye preparation containing 7 active ingredients of known value in caring for the eyes. In use for 40 years. Ask for Murine at your drug store.

Samoa's Climate
Samoa, besides being exactly in the center of Polynesia, has a natural scenery and a salubrious climate, varying only three degrees throughout the year.

Arctic Night Babies Weak
Russian medical experts who have surveyed health conditions within the Arctic circle, found that children born within the months of the Arctic night have weak constitutions.

Naming Michigan
Michigan's first families gave the state its name, according to the Ottawa Indians of the region, and at the same time expressed their high regard for the state as a garden spot. Mish-a-gon, the Ottawa word for "place of clearings in the forests for gardens," is the word from whence Michigan got its name, they say. Contracted to Mish-a-gon it means simply clearing or garden. The Indians have used this region for their farms since prehistoric times, many of them wintering in the Kankakee river valley in Illinois.

Donkeys Seldom Shy
It is explained that the reason horses shy at unexpected sounds or at sight of strange objects while their relative, the donkey, doesn't is chiefly hereditary, says Pathfinder Magazine. Horses are descended from ancestors that roamed the plains where clumps of grass or bushes perhaps concealed danger. On the other hand, donkeys are descendants of hill animals to whom surefootedness and slowness were a necessity in traveling steep paths and precipices. Natural enemies were fewer and a sudden start of alarm might have been fatal.

Lobo Wolf
The name lobo wolf is applied to the gray wolf or timber wolf. It is really a formidable animal, but in its dealings with men it has learned to fear the deadly rifle, the poison pot and the trap. Storms, cold and fatigue affect it but little and its powerful teeth, strong jaws and wide gape enable it to bite with great cutting power. In fighting with dogs, every well timed snap means either a deep wound or a piece of flesh bitten out.

Owl's Mating Song
The mating song of the great horned owl is a succession of resonant bellows in a single key—"Who, whoo, hoo-hoo, who"—quite variable as to length and form. Besides this the bird occasionally indulges in a sepulchral laughter, hoo, hoo, hoo, hoo, hoo, hoo—which arouses anything but mirthful feeling in the listener.

Small Evergreen Important
Arnotto (Bixa orellana) is a small tropical American evergreen tree of the bixa, or Indian plum, family. The seed coverings yield the well-known yellowish red dye arnotto, used for coloring butter, cheese, lacquers, varnishes, ointments and plasters. The tree is also called arnatto, annatto and anatto.

Carrying the Bride
In olden times it was considered an ill omen for a bride to stumble over the threshold of her new home as she was entering it for the first time. To prevent this calamity some thoughtful bridegrooms carried his bride into their home. Bridegrooms have been totting their new wives across the thresholds ever since.

hoped that we can start the new year right with a record attendance at this meeting.

Junior canoy sales will be resumed again on January 13. The music department is planning a concert to be given in about two weeks. The band, orchestra, glee club, trio and several soloists and ensembles will present numbers. We plan to charge admission in order to start a fund for the purchase of band uniforms. The band expects to participate in a festival to be held this spring at Gladwin and is hoping to be all "dressed up" for the occasion.

The members of the high school music class have been setting poems to music. Many of the tunes are quite original and interesting and show that many of the students have creative talent in music.

Great Dane, Boarhound
The fact that the Great Dane was called the boarhound gives a clew to its early use in Europe. It is generally conceded that this big dog was at one time employed to hunt wild boars, wolves, and bears. The breed survived the longest in Germany because there wild game was preserved after it had disappeared from the forests of England. And after the Danes were no longer used for hunting purposes German royalty kept Danes as companion dogs.

Arctic Climatic Changes
The evidence that climatic conditions have changed in the Arctic and Antarctic zones is mainly geologic. It is believed that tropical conditions existed as far north as Greenland between the glacial epochs. Remains of animal and vegetable life have been found in these regions which indicate that once the climate was warm enough to permit of their growth and existence.

"Circus Graveyard"
The name "Circus Graveyard" is applied to grounds at Lancaster, Mo. A number of shows are reported to have gone bankrupt there and disbanded, leaving their wagons and equipment behind.

Loud Voice
Stentor was one of the Greeks before Troy, whose "stentorian" voice was as loud as that of 50 men.

Sports Around the Calendar

Hugh Bradley Writes of Your Favorites

Follow Them All in This Newspaper

The sports of the various seasons, as they swing around the calendar, all receive attention from Hugh Bradley, ace sports writer, whose column of entertaining comment is a regular feature of this paper. From the time when the first warm breezes send millions of fans to the baseball parks to that same time the next year, each popular sport in turn is subject for his comments.

and later... all of them through many years of critical observation.

All set to be a lawyer, Bradley was wooed away from his first love by an invitation to cover sports for the Baltimore American. He has been at it ever since and is now head of the sports department of the New York Post. His wide acquaintance among the stars of the present day and his intimate knowledge of sports history, his free and easy narrative style and the unswerving justice of his criticism have made him popular with readers of all ages.

And Hugh Bradley knows all these sports... many through active participation in them during his college days

Watch for Bradley's Column... You Will Find It Always Interesting and Informative!
