HOWARD BERUBE FATALLY HURT IN AUTO CRASH

Car Hits Tree Near Court House Sunday Afternoon

Howard Berube, age 25 years, of this city was fatally injured late Sunday afternoon when the auto which he was driving crashed into a tree in front of the courthouse. Two friends with him, Alex O'Riley of Flint, owner of the car, and Miss Eleanor Trainor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Trainor of Alabaster Township, were seriously hurt. The three were taken to the hospital at Bay City where Howard Berube died at about 9:45 Monday morning. Miss Trainor recovered sufficiently from the accident to return to her home, but O'Riley is in a serious condition having suffered a ruptured kidney.

The three young people were driving toward East Tawas. They passed a car and their car ran off on the shoulder of the street. While bringing the car back on the pavement it swerved across the street and hit the tree. The occupants were thrown out and the car demolished. Berube suffered broken ribs, one puncturing his lungs, and other injuries; Miss Trainor was badly cut and bruised. In addition to a ruptured kidney, O'Riley was bruised and cut about the face.

Howard Berube, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Berube, was born November 28, 1911, at East Tawas. He is survived by the parents; four sisters, Mrs. Edward Lossing of Flint, Mrs. Raymond Smith, Mrs. Douglas Ferguson and Miss Ruth Berube, and his five year old brother, Richard of this city.

Iosco Farmers Benefit By Rehabilitation Loans

Rural rehabilitation activities under the Resettlement Administration have been a safety net, preventing many farmers in Iosco County from falling into the tenant farmer class, according to E. O. Potter, county supervisor of rural rehabilitation.

Approximately 15 farm families in Iosco County who have title and equity in their lands have been helped to maintain their ownership status by standard rural rehabilitation loans on chattels, by debt adjustment, and by supervised farm operating plans. Without this aid many of them would have lost their equity and become tenants, Mr. Potter said.

Iargo Springs Huron Forest Attraction

One of the points of interest in the Huron National Forest lies along the AuSable River and is called Iargo Springs. The odd name of this place has given use to considerable speculation as to its origin. One possibility was considered that it might be an Indian name and might have some connection with Longfellow's "Ino," the great hoaster.

However, it develops that the true origin of the name was quite prosaic. It appears that originally the name of the spot was Fargo Springs but on the sign put up giving the name the two bars on the letter "F" dropped off leaving an "I" and so a new name was manufactured which no one cared to correct.

A Letter

To the Editor:
Spring elections of state officers are supposed to be nonpartisan. Fitness of a candidate for the office should control, rather than party affiliation. This is especially important as to judicial officers. They should be chosen on a wholly non-political basis. Under our present election laws these officers necessarily run on the ticket of one party or the other. But in spite of that every voter has the opportunity to make his own choice independent of politics and on the basis of the candidate's qualifications.

This spring we are to elect two Justices of the Supreme Court. It takes years to develop the best qualities of a judge. I think Michigan voters have an opportunity this spring to show that they want men of character, ability and experience as Justices of the Supreme Court. They can accomplish this by re-electing Justices Fead and North. Their qualifications have been proven by the good service they have already rendered the State of Michigan in the almost ten years that they have served in the supreme bench.

"Personal Property" First Show at Family Under New Owners

Ashmun Brothers of Caro will take possession of the Family Theatre Sunday, April 4th. The opening attraction will be "Personal Property" with Jean Harlow and Robert Taylor. It is a vivacious and ebullient farce, dealing its innuendo with finesse and punching its comedy home with a genuine gusto. Taylor plays his role with an appropriate pertinency while Miss Harlow gives her part an applaudable touch of genuineness. The supporting roles are outstanding examples of masterful characterization—namely those contributed by Una O'Connor, Forrester Harvey and Reginald Owen. Each is superb. The story deals with the complications which arise when Miss Harlow discovers that her fiancé, Owen, is penniless and that she really love his black sheep brother, Taylor.

Alfred Hewitt will be resident manager of the Family Theatre.

Spanish War Bringing Italy, France and Great Britain Into Conflict—Lewis Ends Chrysler Sitdown Strike—Martin Warns Henry Ford.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© Western Newspaper Union.

SPAIN'S civil war is becoming to a great extent a war between Italy and France fought on Spanish soil, and both those nations are exasperated and enraged, while Great Britain anxiously strives to avert an open breach. Italy, too, is now furious against the British because English newspapers taunted her with the fact that Italian volunteers were defeated by French volunteers in recent victories won by the loyalists northeast of Madrid. Count Dino Grandi, Italian ambassador to London, told the subcommittee of the international committee on non-intervention that he would not discuss the withdrawal of foreign volunteers from Spain and that not a single Italian fighting in the Spanish war would be ordered home until the conflict ended.

France's response was quick and startling. Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos proposed to British Ambassador Sir George Clerk that France and Britain assume a naval blockade of Spain to keep Italian troops from landing to join the fascists. The British and French governments thereupon agreed, with full knowledge of other European powers within the non-intervention committee, on "all points" of a program to make non-intervention completely effective and decided it was imperative to prevent, even by force, any further Italian landings. No decision was reached to send warships at once for this purpose.

In Rome the belief was expressed that if France appealed to the League of Nations against alleged dispatch of Italian troops to Spain, Europe would come near to war. A spokesman for the government angrily repeated the official denial that Italy had sent any volunteers to Spain since February 20, when the international agreement for non-intervention was reached.

The indignant outburst by Grandi followed closely on a speech which Premier Mussolini delivered in Rome. Alluding to the League of Nations' sanctions against Italy during the Ethiopian war, of which England was the chief promoter, he said:

"It has been said that the Italian people forget easily. Error! Error! On the contrary, the Italian people have a tenacious memory and know how to bide their time. We waited 40 years to avenge Adowa, but we succeeded."

Mussolini had just returned from a visit to Libya, Italy's North Africa colony, and on that trip he made a patent bid for Italian leadership of the Moslem world. This, and his intention to build a naval base on the Red sea which would challenge British control of the Indian ocean are irritating Great Britain, which is not yet ready to check Mussolini by a display of armed force. She will be ready, however, before very long, for she is expending vast sums on her fleets and naval establishments.

Germany is not taking active part in these international spats just now, but is awaiting developments. Hitler is absorbed in his domestic difficulties and the threatened break with the Vatican.

DR. HANS LUTHER is soon to be replaced as German ambassador to Washington by Dr. Hans Heinrich Dieckhoff, a veteran diplomat who is now secretary of state for foreign affairs. He was counselor of the embassy in Washington from 1922 to 1926 and has been a staunch friend of Americans. Dieckhoff is described as belonging to the "Ribbentrop group" in German affairs, and is a brother-in-law of Joachim von Ribbentrop, German ambassador to London.

UNDER the persuasion of Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan, John L. Lewis, head of the C. I. O., and Walter P. Chrysler, chairman of the Chrysler motor corporation, were brought together in more or less peaceful conference at the state capitol in Lansing. The immediate result was an agreement that the sit-down strikers should evacuate the eight Chrysler plants in Detroit, and that the corporation should not resume production during the period of negotiations. Six thousand strikers had held possession of the plants since March 8 in defiance of court orders and the governor, as in the case of the General Motors strike, had been extremely reluctant to authorize forceful methods of enforcing the law. He had, however, insisted that the men must obey the law and court orders, and the concession by Lewis was a victory for the governor, as well as for the corporation which had declared it would not negotiate while the men held its plants. Mr. Chrysler also has asserted the company would not enter into any agreement recognizing any one group as sole bargaining agency for all employees.

It seems likely that this Michigan case will put an end to the epidemic of sit-down strikes. Most of the smaller strikes in the Detroit area have been settled, and in Chicago and elsewhere vigorous action by the authorities has brought sit-downers to their senses.

President Roosevelt had steadily refused to take a public stand concerning this new weapon adopted especially by the Lewis labor group, but finally yielded to the pleas of his lieutenants so far as to agree to hold a conference on the matter on his return to Washington from Warm Springs. Secretary of Labor Perkins has shown a partiality for the sit-down strike, and various New Dealers have defended it; but others in the administration, like Secretary of Commerce Roper, have condemned it. And in the senate and the house it has been attacked by Democrats and Republicans alike.

IN THE big mass meeting of workers held in Detroit, Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers, addressed himself to Henry Ford, saying:

"Henry, you can't stop the labor movement. You can't keep your workers from joining the labor movement even if you have a 'fink' (company sympathizer) at every other post in your factory. The best thing for you to do, Henry, is to get ready to do business with your organized workers."

Mr. Ford is on record as saying that his company will continue to make cars as long as a single man will continue to work for it; and in reply to Martin's threat, Harry Bennett, Ford chief of personnel, says:

"What Martin calls 'organized labor' is not going to run the Ford Motor company. For every man in this (the Ford Rouge plant) that might decide he wants to follow Martin and take part in a sit-down strike there are at least five who want their job and don't want a strike."

The Rouge plant employs 37,000 men. The minimum wage is $6 a day, or 75 cents an hour for the eight hour working day. The plant operates five days a week, with the exception of the blast furnaces which must be kept going seven days a week.

AMELIA EARHART'S globe-circling flight ended, for the present, at Honolulu when she cracked up her $80,000 "laboratory plane" at the take-off for Howland island. By quick thinking and action she saved her life and those of Capt. Harry Manning and Fred J. Noonan, her navigators, but the plane was so badly damaged that it had to be shipped back to the Los Angeles factory for repairs.

The daring aviatrix sailed immediately for San Francisco, asserting that she would resume the flight as soon as possible.

As the big plane rushed down the runway for the take-off it swayed badly, the right tire burst and the ship went out of control. The left undercarriage buckled and the left wing slashed into the ground. The ship then spun to the right, crashed down on its right wing, and the right motor snapped off the right wheel. Miss Earhart quickly cut the ignition switches, so there was no fire, and no one was injured.

TEN passengers, two pilots and a stewardess were killed when a big Transcontinental and Western airliner crashed near Pittsburgh. No one survived the disaster. The plane, from New York for Chicago, had been awaiting a chance to land at the Pittsburgh airport, circling around, and suddenly fell from a height of only about 200 feet. Presumably the motor failed.

CONGRESSMAN RALPH E. CHURCH of Illinois raised a storm in the house by making a fierce attack on Adolph J. Sabath, also of Illinois and dean of the house. Sabath is chairman of the committee to investigate real estate bondholders' reorganizations, and Church accused him of "questionable practices," demanding in particular an explanation concerning benefits reaped by the Chicago law firm of Sabath, Perlman, Goodman & Rein as a result of Sabath's activities.

Democratic leaders rushed to the defense of Sabath, and finally stopped Church's attack by forcing adjournment. Sabath was furious and promised a reply at length.

JOHN DRINKWATER, distinguished British poet, novelist and playwright, died suddenly of a heart attack in his sleep at his home in London. He was only fifty-four years old and seemed in normal health.

Drinkwater's historical plays were widely known in the United States, particularly "Abraham Lincoln," and "Robert E. Lee." He had just completed a motion picture for the coronation of King George VI of which he was both author and producer. The film deals with "the king and his people" from the time of Queen Victoria to the present.

NEAR Salem, Ill., a chartered bus carrying a roller skating troupe from St. Louis to Cincinnati crashed into a bridge abutment, overturned and burned. Of the 23 occupants, 19 were killed outright and another died in a hospital. The accident, listed as one of the worst ever occurring on an Illinois highway, was caused by the explosion of a tire.

CHIEF JUSTICE CHARLES E. HUGHES created something of a sensation by sending to the senate judiciary committee a letter declaring that an increase in the number of supreme court justices, as proposed by President Roosevelt, "would not promote the efficiency of the court." He added:

"It is believed that it would impair that efficiency so long as the court acts as a unit.

"There would be more judges to hear, more judges to confer, more judges to discuss, more judges to be convinced and to decide. The present number of justices is thought to be large enough so far as the prompt, adequate and efficient conduct of the work of the court is concerned."

Mr. Hughes said his letter was approved by Justices Van Devanter and Brandeis. He made it clear that he was commenting on an increase from the standpoint of efficiency and "apart from any question of policy," which he said, "I do not discuss."

Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, Democrat, was the first opposition witness called before the committee, and he started in by reading Mr. Hughes' letter. Before entering the committee room he said he believed the administration would eventually accept a compromise plan. He advocates a constitutional amendment, permitting congress, by two-thirds majority, to override Supreme court invalidation of acts of congress, provided a national election had intervened between invalidation and overriding.

"The administration will compromise, don't worry," Wheeler said. "They can't get more than thirty-five senate votes for the President's plan. Public opinion, which swerved toward them for a while, is now swinging heavily against them."

Prominent among the witnesses for the opposition to the President's plan was Raymond Moley, former head of the "brain trust" and now professor of public law at Columbia university. He was outspoken in denouncing some of the Supreme court's decisions and favored the amendment method. He told the committee we might as well not have a constitution at all as to pack the Supreme court for the purpose of securing favorable judicial construction. Carried to its logical conclusion, he said, the President's proposal will mean "destruction of the Constitution."

President H. W. Dodds of Princeton; Dr. Theodore Graebner of St. Louis, prominent Lutheran leader, and representatives of the National Grange, oldest nonpartisan organization of farmers, also appeared before the committee to argue against the bill.

SEVERAL investigations into the terrible explosion that destroyed the fine London Community school in east Texas and killed nearly 500 pupils and teachers were under way, but at this writing the cause of the disaster has not been determined. The most plausible theory was formed when D. L. Clark, field foreman for the near-by Parade Oil company, testified that the school had been using "wet" gas from the pipe lines of the company. This is a residue gas rich in butane, a highly explosive compound of carbon and hydrogen, and it is considered too dangerous for home use. Clark said he first learned the school was using the gas when he was notified that Superintendent W. C. Shaw of the school wanted it shut off. School employees said the change from "dry" to "wet" gas was made only a month ago on order of the school board chairman. That gentleman said the company knew of the use of the gas.

SPANISH government forces were victorious in some heavy fighting on the Guadalquivir front north-east of Madrid, their chief gain being the capture of Brihuega, headquarters of the insurgents. The latter, however, scored in the University City quarter of the capital, and on the southern front were preparing to attack Pozoblanco, the key to mercury, lead, sulphur and coal mining territory.

Paris claimed to have information that Germans had supervised and manned a line of fortifications along the Spanish Moroccan coast that threatens British control of the Strait of Gibraltar.

NEWS from MICHIGAN

Utica—Edwin W. Havel, village president, struck a new note in village finances with the announcement that Utica had paid all of its debts and had a $5,000 balance in the treasury.

Middleville—Local school teachers have been seeing double, and nothing has or can be done about it. There are eight sets of twins enrolled at the school. Three sets of five year olds comprise a large percentage of the first-year class alone.

New Baltimore—Candidate for the title of the state's oldest resident is Mrs. Caroline Yearh, who recently celebrated her 95th birthday. She has lived in this community for 63 years. There are 21 grandchildren, 25 great-grandchildren and three great-great-grandchildren.

South Haven—A fire of undetermined origin destroyed a large combined roller skating rink and warehouse on the shores of Lake Michigan, recently, with estimated $20,000 damage. Thus ends the career of one of the largest dance halls in Michigan, for, as residents will recall, the building was erected 25 years ago for that purpose.

Cadillac—With the coming of spring, some interesting facts have been revealed here. For the first time in 35 years, snow plows were not needed during the winter by either the Pennsylvania or Ann Arbor railroads in this area. The snowfall in this city from October, 1936, through March, 1937, was but 23.3 inches, compared with 56.2 inches from November, 1935, to May 1, 1936.

Lansing—A new Michigan record for quarterly income tax collections was announced recently, upon completion of tabulations of returns on 1936 incomes. Payments up to the March 15 deadline totaled $40,090,711, a 60 per cent increase over the same period last year and the largest percentage of increase in the country. Taxable returns filed this year in Michigan totaled 109,000, as compared with 88,800 filed last year.

Fairfield—Michigan's most novel method of feeding birds are the "free lunch counters" maintained by Mrs. W. E. Colbath at her home. The lunch counters are round or square ledges built around tree trunks and flag poles, with railing around the edges to keep the crumbs from blowing away. About four feet above the ground, the counters are low enough for children to reach but too high for cats and dogs.

Cheboygan—The breaking up of what little ice winter brought to the great lakes heralds the opening of Capt. Sam Barrow's fifty-sixth season of sailing. 77 years old, Capt. Barrow skips the excursion steamer Perry, which plies between this port, Mackinac Island and Les Cheneaux Islands. During his long career, he holds the enviable record of never having lost a man, nor a ship, and has never called on the coast guard for assistance.

Holland—Conscious of first green shoots of spring about them, city fathers here have begun polishing up the "welkom" signs and making other preparations for the ninth annual tulip festival, which will run for nine days beginning May 15. Planned are all the traditional features and many innovations. Local residents are busy polishing up their "klompen" or wooden shoes, as we know them, and colorful costumes of old Amsterdam are being brought forth by the fairer sex.

Grand Rapids—A recent local mix-up is causing wild birds in this vicinity to hang their heads. It seems that Mrs. Jack Lovell ordered some mince pie sent to her hotel room. One taste satisfied, so she tossed the balance of the pie on the porch roof outside her window. Birds ate the pie, then started queer gymnastics, such as backward loops and flying upside down. The hotel chef was called in to solve the situation. The delicacy had been richly seasoned with vintage wine.

Hillsdale—The old-fashioned swapping and trading system which was widely used in grandfather's time has been developed into a community auction here. Saturday is sales day for thousands of farmers within a 200-mile area. Conceived by Andy Adams, the sale has been held every week, regardless of weather or financial conditions, for 27 years. Auto licenses from as many as 18 different states have been noted and goods purchased have been shipped as far as Montana.

Bath—News of the recent New London, Texas, school disaster recalls to local residents this town's "darkest hours" ten years ago. On May 18, 1927, an explosion wrecked the Consolidated school here, taking 45 lives, mostly those of small children. In this explosion, however, the cause was traced to the insane school treasurer, who later committed suicide by setting off a second blast as he sat in his car. The destroyed structure was replaced by the late Senator James Couzens.

Pontiac—If you have seen someone running around carrying a clubhouse, please notify members of the Pontiac Rifle and Revolver Club. It seems that some person or persons, in a playful mood, or otherwise, lifted the missing building intact and took it away. The clubhouse was a frame structure, 14 feet square.

Marine City—In addition to practicing medicine here for the past 40 years, Mayor Thomas A. DeGurse has had a hand in virtually every civic improvement in the community since then. His record indicates that a well-earned title of "doctor of civics and public welfare" could be devised and bestowed upon him.

Vicksburg—L. C. Rapp, 87 years old, former publisher of the Herald and Mrs. Rapp, 80, recently celebrated their fifty-ninth wedding anniversary. A guest of honor was Mrs. Frederica Runner, of Buchanan, a sister of Mrs. Rapp, who with her husband, the late S. W. Runner, were principals with Mr. and Mrs. Rapp in a double wedding ceremony in 1878.

Alma—A double golden wedding anniversary celebration took place here recently. Mr. and Mrs. Hector S. Smith of Alma and Mr. and Mrs. David Geddes of Thomas-ton were married at a double ceremony half a century ago and have lived within 36 miles of each other since. School chums before marriage, the two couples were reunited for the double anniversary.

Jackson—On March 22, Jackson prison passed its 100th birthday. Few outside the institution gave this matter much thought and no gala birthday celebration marked the centennial of what is the largest structure of its kind in the world. Since the first prisoner was received on June 19, 1839, close to 40,000 prisoners have entered its doors. The present "population" is 4,238.

Olivet—How long is the life of a razor is Michigan's latest subject for debate. Orrie Derringer of this community says a century is a modest guess. The one he uses was purchased by his father second hand in 1847, served him during his lifetime. The son has used it every day since his father's death in 1912, says its edge is still keen and does not think a date should be set for its retirement.

Lansing—Attorney-general Raymond W. Starr barred plans of the Grand Rapids board of education, recently, to project sex hygiene discussions and instruction into schools, on the grounds that it is contrary to Michigan statutes. Plans were to show films illustrating lectures on the subject to high school students 15 years of age or older. The films were prepared by the United States health department.

Lansing—The increasing winter market for fresh smelt and the growing supply in the great lakes, is opening the way to commercial net fishing under the ice, according to reports from the conservation department. Fred Westerman, the department's fishing authority, is considering the introduction of legislation this session to give Michigan fishermen a longer season to supply the rising public demand for smelt.

Ionia—One way to silence operatic cats, who indulge in serenades in the night was demonstrated here by Deputy William Gemuend. Awakened recently by a melodious tom cat, Gemuend armed himself with a flashlight, a tear gas gun and went outside. Spotting the cat in a nearby tree, he discharged a gas shell, and kitty left for parts unknown. While this method may be rough, says Bemued, the neighborhood has been a haven of peace and quiet since.

Pontiac—Local officials here place a price of $14,000 on preparedness, with a velvet club thrown in free. Recent investigation divulged a municipally-owned power plant costing that amount. Constructed in 1922, it has yet to generate its first kilowatt of power. It seems that the city installed the steam turbine during a rate controversy with the power company. The utility capitulated, but the turbine has been kept ready for use. As a threat it has more than paid for itself in rate reductions.

Traverse City—The opening of spring ship traffic in the lakes brings back to old-timers the sinking of the schooner Westmoreland off Sleeping Bear Point in Lake Michigan more than 50 years ago. A $3,000,000 cargo of gold and silver was aboard and a reward of $2,000 was offered to anyone who could mark the ship's resting place. An Indian, Joe Rabineau, located it, attached a buoy to the mast. Bickering started as to the accuracy of the buoy. Rabineau became incensed, cut loose the marker.

Dansville—After 140 years of service, an old Bible similar to the one which graced the home of George Washington during the later years of his life, lies unused at the Baptist church here. Printed in 1795, the Bible was given to the church by the late Charles H. Crossman, son of the founder. The church discontinued services several years ago and the few remaining members have been debating as to what to do with this Bible which has seen the growth of a nation and the birth of a state.

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart
National Press Building
Washington, D. C.

Washington—Immediately after the armistice in 1918, the country was suddenly awakened to the fact that living costs were extraordinarily high. It was a condition that struck close home to everyone. It was a condition that developed an unusual emotion. There followed, naturally, a wave that engulfed hundreds of thousands of people who felt that they were being subjected to high prices that were unjustified.

Most people will remember how "H. C. L." became an expression as common and one that figured in as many puns and jokes and wise cracks as the alphabetical agencies common now to the New Deal. It was a type of propaganda that came along spontaneously because the condition affected so many people.

The reason I have recalled that circumstance is because we are again headed straight into another era of "H. C. L." We have not reached the top of living costs by any means. It takes more than a fortune teller or crystal gazer to predict what is going to happen in the way of increased commodity prices. Suffice it to say, however, that a "vicious cycle" has started whirling and in the midst of the situation stands a very confused consumer, representative of all of the people in the United States.

There undoubtedly will be an increase in the propaganda concerning living costs again. Indeed, there already is a rather far-flung propaganda which results from the increased cost of living but it is directed rather on a slant and not pointed accurately into the heart of the condition now confronting us.

Undoubtedly a great many people have not thought of the frequent and recurring attacks on business and business practices as having anything to do with the increased living costs. But the truth is that this type of propaganda springs directly from the sporadic cries that are coming from many localities about the higher prices—complaints that the dollar does not go very far in buying food across the grocery counter.

It seems to me that it is time for some calm thinking about this situation. It seems to me further that public officials everywhere ought to be honest enough to analyze the situation and tell the public what the real causes are. If this is not done, there again will be undoubtedly a perfect deluge of propaganda in protest against high living costs and the bulk of the people who suffer from these increased costs will not know the reason any more than they understood the reasons that brought about a counterpart of the present outlook back in 1918 and 1919.

In any examination of an economic condition, one must dig considerably below the surface to find the factors that have operated to bring about the results visible to the eye. Such is certainly the case in the present situation. One can not fairly say that the present booming prices in food have just happened. In truth, things never happen; they are brought about. They have been brought about in the present circumstance by factors that date back to 1933 and include numerous governmental policies that have been initiated since that time.

The trained economist will describe present conditions as due to inflation—which indeed they are. But inflation is such an all-inclusive term that the real story lies hidden. In an effort to spur and encourage production and aid recovery, President Roosevelt devalued the dollar. He reduced its gold value. During 1933 and 1934 there came numerous pieces of legislation including the NRA and the AAA, each designed to foster increased prices and to build up the level of wages for industrial workers.

Subsequently, President Roosevelt sponsored legislation which had as its end and aim federal control of wages for workers. This legislation sought to give the federal government power to force business interests to recognize labor unions and to accept labor union scales of pay—all to the end that labor should be paid a greater percentage of the returns received by business.

There came also legislation designed to increase the price of siliver and the United States Treasury was directed by this law to buy millions of ounces of silver and to use that silver in our currency. In the meantime and recurring almost constantly the New Deal administration, from President Roosevelt on down, maintained a barrage of attacks on business interests seeking wider employment of labor at increased wages. Coupled with these attacks was violent criticism of banks and bankers. They were charged with being an obstacle to recovery because they were not lending money. It did not matter to the critics that no one wanted to borrow money; the criticisms were continued because loans simply were not being made and no examination of the reason why loans were not being made ever was undertaken.

Next in the chain of events and still continuing came labor troubles. The New Deal avowedly was on the side of labor and against employers. Strikes followed in increasing numbers. The results of this combination of factors and circumstances now are showing. Considered from any angle, one can not fail to see why they constitute a cycle of events that lead to higher prices.

When the dollar was cheaper by devaluation, more dollars were required to feed a family than had been required before. Workers felt this sting. They demanded more dollars in pay for their work. Pressure from the New Deal administration together with labor's use of the strike weapon forced business to pay higher wages.

But, business must live. It can not live unless it gets back its costs of production. Agriculture can not subsist unless it receives a reasonable price for its production. Neither agriculture nor industry will go ahead unless there is a reward in the shape of a profit. Consequently, neither agriculture nor industry is going to absorb these increased costs alone. The natural and the only way it has to get back those expenditures is by charging higher prices to the buyers of those products. Thus, we have the complete cycle—and the consumer, as usual, is the goat. The consumer pays and if that consumer be not in a position to enforce a higher return for the services he renders, he is caught between the upper and nether millstones. It appears that the consumer is fast getting himself into the grip of that vise.

With this increasing price level, and the dangers inherent in the general situation, I think credit ought to be given to President Eccles.

Eccles, of the Federal Reserve board of governors, for the bold statement he made a few days ago. Mr. Eccles warned the country very frankly what the dangers are in a situation where labor continues to clamor for a greater share of the profits of commerce and industry and where labor's leadership seeks to take advantage of the inability of employers to protect themselves.

The Eccles statement took occasion to link labor's position with the general money market and the effect labor's position is having on the country as a whole. He referred to the demands of some labor leaders for a working week of 30 hours and while not completely discarding that theory, he gave the very definite impression that shorter hours do not constitute a solution for our present problem.

"Increased wages and shorter hours," said Mr. Eccles, "when they limit or actually reduce production are not at this time in the interest of the public in general or in the real interest of the workers themselves. When wage increases are passed along to the public, and particularly when industries take advantage of any existing situation to increase prices far beyond increased labor costs, such action is shortsighted and an indefensible policy from every standpoint."

"Wage increases and shorter hours are justified and wholly desirable when they result from increasing production per capita and represent a better distribution of the profits of industry. When they retard and restrict production and cause price inflation, they result in throwing the buying power of the various groups in the entire economy out of balance, working a particular hardship upon agriculture, the unorganized workers, the recipients of fixed incomes and all consumers."

"The upward spiral of wages and prices into inflationary price levels can be as disastrous as the downward spiral of deflation. If such conditions develop, the government should intervene in the public interest by taking such action as is necessary to correct the abuses."

"The remedy for a price inflation when the country has unused man power, natural resources and capital, is through more, not less production, through an orderly, balanced use of these three fundamental factors and not by creating a needless, artificial shortage of any one of them."

Thus we have brought into bold relief a criticism of the final factor entering into the present increasing price level. I refer to the artificial shortage in food products that resulted from the ridiculous crop control program that was accomplished through AAA. We are now paying the price for the destruction of 6,000,000 little pigs.

I said at the beginning of this discussion that a calm examination of the factors involved was necessary now if it ever were necessary in history.

Tops as Trainer Sande Longs for Old Jockey Days

F AINT wrinkles—perhaps come from long afternoons of peering into blazing suns while galloping hell for leather down the home stretch—encroach upon his steady gray blue eyes now. The reddish hair is thinning on the top—perhaps worn away by the billions of pats inevitably, albeit figuratively, bestowed there by adoring bettors. Yet the Earle Sande who rides only saddle horses now—and mounts them only in the cool of the morning when few are present to heed or cheer—still is a slim young man who must be reckoned with around a race track. Examine the list of winners at the recently closed Hialeah meeting if you doubt that.

Sande brought seven horses to the meeting. That was a woefully small number as compared to roles of the mighty stables invited to try their luck at this race emporium. But Sande saddled fourteen winners, most of them triumphing with wide stretches of open daylight to spare. This is a rare success for a man who took up a new job scarcely three years ago. All the fingers of one hand would not be needed to count the veteran trainers, already wise in the ways of their profession when a slim Idaho kid was booting home his first big-time winner in 1918, who can boast of as much good fortune.

How does this once greatest of jockeys like the work to which he now has turned? We sat on a faded old brocade sofa in front of his barn door and talked about it, while thoroughbreds craned their necks out of nearby doors and his two dogs, a police and a red setter, clamored to divide Earle's attention.

"Yes, training was a lot different from riding. You had to pay attention to a lot of new things. Things you might have noted before but never had regarded as really important."

What things, for instance? Sande looked at his visitor, grinned, then fondled the setter's ears. "Well, just things."

The visitor changed the subject.

What would Sande rather do? Prepare horses for some other jockey to win with or boot them home himself? There was a moment's hesitation, then earnest response.

"Why, ride them, of course. There was nothing in life like that. One of the hardest things to get over was not even being able to straddle some colt for a morning gallop on the track. But of course a fellow with so much weight couldn't do that. It wouldn't be fair to the horses."

Sande now weighs 125 as compared to the 115 or so of his best riding years. Was he training any riders to follow in his own renown?

"No, not now. Most of the jocks who rode for him were experienced fellows. Still he would like to do it some day. Real jockeys were born, not made, even though experience and training did smooth them out. What he would like to do was go back home to Idaho some day, find some little kid practically raised in the saddle and see what could be done with him."

Sceneshifter, winner several days previously for the Maxwell Howard stable for which Sande trains, was whinnying from a nearby door. Sande rose, patted the colt on the nose several times, spoke to him and then returned.

Were horses just like people? Did you get to like some of them right away and were some of them almost impossible to understand?

"Surely, they were. There was little Billy Kelly who ran for Commander Ross almost twenty years ago. Billy was a gentle chap, liked to play and loved to be petted. Sir Barton, a far bigger money winner in the same barn and at the same time, also was a great horse, but he was inclined to be a bully."

What was the greatest horse Sande ever rode? The answer came without hesitation.

"Man o' War, of course. Big Red liked to have his own way and was kind of temperamental, but nobody made any mistake by calling him truly great. The others? Well, it was pretty hard to pick them in any kind of order. That Gallant Fox could run all day, Osmand was as good as anybody could wish."

NOT IN THE BOX SCORE:

MEL OTT has replaced the departed Mark Koenig as the best golfer among the Giants. He shoots in the low 80s and, like Carl Hubbell, with whom he plays two or three times a week in Florida, does it right-handed. Joe Moore is fairly good but inconsistent. If he does the outgoing nine in less than par he bobs up with a 50 coming home. By the same token, when he reaches the turn in sad state he usually plays the last nine in fine style. . . . Adolfo Luque is the biggest eater among the Giants. Gus Mancuso tells the sad tale of the time when he invited the coach to dinner and saw him devour six dozen blue points without a letup. . . . Bill Terry always turns to the financial quotations first when he opens his morning paper at breakfast. . . . Long before he became a big-time ball player Sam Leslie, one of the easiest going of the Giants, was ambitious to become a professional prize fighter. . . . Giants were not surprised when the Dodgers handed Freddy Lindstrom his unconditional release. They recalled that Freddy and Manager Grimes never were anything like pals.

The recent deaths of Judge Walter P. Steffen and Johnny O'Brien in Chicago cost intercollegiate football dearly. Steffen in early middle age had achieved a magnificent career as a player and a coach. O'Brien was a young man, just beginning to earn recognition as a coach at Notre Dame. As an athlete "One Play" Johnny O'Brien earned immortality in Notre Dame's football lore. . . . Jack Dempsey continues in a quiet way his philanthropies among old cronies of the prize ring. Dandy Dick Griffin, a bantamweight from Texas who fought on the Dempsey-Carpenter card at Boyle's Thirty Acres, had two operations recently in New York to restore his sight. The old mauler is footing the bill.

Recalls When Schalk Used Six Gloves

When Ray Schalk was achieving fame with the White Sox he always brought at least six gloves into the dugout with him each day. Each of these gloves differed slightly from others in shape or the amount of padding and each of them had been built according to exact directions from Ray. This was because he figured each pitcher—Cicotte, Faber, Kerr and others—threw some particular type of ball which it took a special kind of glove to handle properly. . . . Roy Henshaw, Cub pitcher traded to Brooklyn last winter, carries his own table tennis paddles with him on trips. He began practicing at midnight at the Dodgers' camp and had a visit from the house detective when the ball, bouncing off the wall, annoyed the guest in the next room. The detective was all for throwing him into a dungeon when Roy said Manager Burleigh Grimes could identify him. Grimes was the indignant party in the next room who had lodged the complaint.

Ted Lyons, dean of the White Sox pitchers, says Larry Rosenthal is the best center fielder the team has had since Johnny Mostil, and Mostil, according to Lyons, is the greatest he ever has seen. . . . Emil Levsen, pitcher for the Cleveland Indians under Tris Speaker, is now in charge of a creamery at Springville, Ia., near Cedar Rapids. . . . He has been director of junior baseball for the American Legion the last few years. . . . One of the products of this program is Bob Feller, who had his start in baseball with the Valley Junction American Legion Junior club.

According to Joe Foley, promoter at the Chicago Stadium, reservations already in hand for the Louisville Braddock bout amount to nearly $500,000. . . . Larry Northcott, star wing of the Montreal Maroons, was a bank employee before entering professional hockey. . . . The city fire chief runs the bowling alleys in Beaumont, Tex., and insists on his fire fighters keeping fit by rolling a few games daily. . . . Bob Garbark, Toledo catcher, who is receiving a trial with the Cubs this spring, was mentioned on several all-star football teams for his work with the Gettysburg college eleven in 1932. . . . Joe Savoldi is on a wrestling tour of South America. . . . William H. Lewis of Harvard was placed at center on the teams of 1892 and 1893 and still is named on many all-time all-America teams. He afterwards coached at his alma mater and became an assistant United States attorney general. . . . Gibson White, owner of Rosalind the Hambletonian winner last year, is taking health treatments at Tucson, Ariz. . . . Homer Martin, labor union official, was national hop, skip, and jump champion in 1924.

Baseball umpires in Cuba are at least as good as their semi-pro brethren in the U. S. The best of them is a gentleman named Raul Atan, whose ancestors lived in China. . . . Probably because most of their stars are living examples of that "good field, no hit" crack of Mike Gonzales, Cuban fans applaud fielding feats more vigorously than they do occasional long distance blows. . . . Fans are permitted to keep balls knocked into the stands, but the Cuban spectators are not in a class with Brooklyn fans when it comes to catching them. . . .

Sweet Potato Is Size of Watermelon

S. A. Lawton (right), county agent, U. S. Department of Agriculture, and D. B. Hudson of Jacksonville, Fla., weighing a 23½ pound sweet potato, said to be the largest in the department's history. The potato, which shrunk considerably in size since it was dug, is 16 inches around the belt and 31 inches long.

Supreme Court Now Big Attraction in Capital

Visitors' Interest Aroused by Talk of Changes.

Washington, D. C.—Discussion of possible changes in the number of members of the Supreme court has led more visitors than usual to observe the court in action in its palatial Supreme Court building in Washington.

"This Greek temple to modern Justice stands at the quaint address of No. 1, First Street, N. E., obviously close to the heart of the government," says the National Geographic society. "It is just next door to the original Constitution, on display in a case at the Library of Congress. In use only 18 months, the building is still new and gleaming."

"The white marble exterior of the court building, in its green-and-asphalt setting on Capitol hill, has a startling pearly luster, almost as if illumined from within. Even the tile roof is white; from a distance it has the milky smoothness of white cake icing. Because of the dazzling reflection of light, guards on duty outside in the summer wear colored glasses.

"Closer inspection gives the impression of less confectionery and on the contrary, he is given a 'ticket' while waiting in Memorial hall—an index-card-size diagram of the judicial seating arrangements. The hushed tone of the waiting crowd shows acceptance of the words italicized on the slip: 'Silence is Requested.'

"When the doors of the courtroom swing noiselessly open to admit the visitor, under a uniformed guard's close scrutiny, he finds himself in a twilight space behind heavy red velvet curtains. He is seated, with 200 other spectators, between the curtains and the 'bar' which shuts off a front seating space for about 75 lawyers.

"As hands of the two clocks, suspended from panels front and back, seem on the verge of clapping at twelve, the four page boys busy themselves with turning the chairs a little sideways. Curtains billow with hidden activity. At noon a faint buzzer sounds. The audience comes to its feet. Led by Chief Justice Hughes, the justices emerge through openings in the curtains and stand behind the bench.

"A gavel raps sharply. . . 'Oyez! Oyez!', the crier is intoning in syllables of medieval dignity. . . The Honorable, the Chief Justice and the Associate Justices of the Supreme court. . . God save the United States and this honorable Court.' Pages behind the chairs seat the justices. The supreme tribunal is now in session.

"Visitors need not listen, but they must not read, write, nor photograph.

"For all its stately dimensions of 64 feet square, the courtroom is small enough to be intimate.

"As attorney after attorney places his notes on a desk before the bench and presents his case in muted oratory, the justices listen with bowed heads, or closed eyes, or chins in hand. In the background, the four page boys, on their low-backed seats, play their own little private back-stage drama in discreet whispers, crouched behind the nine august black chairs.

"Bang! The gavel announces that it is two o'clock, and time for the half-hour recess for lunch. As the pages man the openings in the curtains, the justices file out without a word, and the visitor is free to join the crowd in the public lunchroom downstairs or to examine more of the building."

Bronze Entrance Doors. "A monumental stairway of marble ascends from the marble plaza, with its fountains and flagpoles, to the entrance, where eight pairs of twin Corinthian columns support the sculptured triangle of pediment. The entrance doors, shaded by marble columns, are a ton and a half of bronze apiece; yet they roll docilely back into the wall at the touch of a guard's hand.

"The portals open on Memorial hall, where an avenue of marble columns leads up to the closed double doors of the courtroom. Even on Mondays, 'Decision Days,' when judicial opinions attract an average of 1,400 visitors instead of the usual 700, the spacious hall is not crowded. This larger attendance becomes only a longer queue of little people beside lofty columns waiting to get in.

"For admission to the courtroom, no ticket is required of the visitor;

Frogs Get Lodging for War on Flies

New Richmond, Ind.—This village boasts of the only completely organized, self-sustained, fly-catching organization in the world.

It is in the Martin A. Strand ski factory.

Flies, it seems, are a problem in the boiler room of the factory, so the Strand people put in sixteen live bullfrogs. The frogs are being given board and lodging in the boiler room.

They take care of the fly situation in good order.

North Carolina $4 Bill, Printed in 1778, Shown

New Bern, N. C.—A $4 bill, printed in 1778, by the North Carolina state printer, is on exhibition here.

The bill was printed in New Bern by James Davis. It was made of rag paper, three inches long and two and a half inches wide. The currency was purchased a few weeks ago by Frank M. Girton.

On one side of the bill is printed: "Four dollars. North Carolina currency No. 6317. This bill entitles the bearer to receive four Spanish mill'd dollars or the equivalent thereof in gold or silver, agreeable to act of Assembly, passed at Hillsborough the 8th day of August, 1778. "A lesson to arbitrary kings and wicked ministers. "R. Cogden. "I. Colbe. "Death to counterfeit."

On the other side was printed: "Four dollars. Printed by J. Davis 1778."

YOUNGEST WAR VET

Melvin Garrison, thirty-three, of Springfield, Ohio, who is said to be the youngest World war veteran in the United States. At the age of thirteen, he ran away from the Ohio Masonic home and enlisted in the United States army. At fourteen he was corporal of a machine gun squad at the front. He was wounded four times.

Wife Lets Dog Get Away; Husband Drives Her Off

Detroit.—"Love me, love my dog," Joseph Callebaut, in effect, told his wife.

When she let his dog wander out of the yard and was unable to find it again Callebaut told her to leave also, the wife claimed in her suit for divorce.

"We used to quarrel now and then," Mrs. Callebaut said, "but nothing really serious happened until last December 28. He came home that day and discovered his bird dog had got out of the yard." She related:

"If you don't find my bird dog you'll have to go away from here," he told me.

"I spent the rest of the day looking for his dog, but I couldn't find it. So he made me leave." She got the divorce.

"Once in Forty Million Births"

It could happen only "once in 40,000,000 births" was the verdict of Detroit physicians commenting on the twin personalities of the Pauline Taylors, No. 1 and 2 shown above. Although not related the girls have the same name, were born on the same day, Sept. 20, 1920. Pauline Taylor No. 1 was born at St. Ignace, Mich., No. 2 at St. Catherine, Ont. They attended an intermediate school in Detroit three years ago.

Harmonizing With Spring

THIS week's crop of fashions seem fully as sweet and gay and long-awaited as lovely Spring—with which they're meant to harmonize. Mary, Sue and Emily, three charming stondees, know how to have day in day out chic without forfeiting that pretty silver lining in their new Spring purses.

Hints From Mary's Boudoir. "I'm especially fussy about the slip I wear, perhaps that's why I always sew-my-own! I never miss the few hours it takes, and I can spend the difference for a finer, better-wearing fabric. A slip that's well-behaved is a joy to yourself—others as well—and just as easy to have. So take a tip from one who knows; choose this model and a good fabric and you'll have no further slip troubles."

A Lift for M'Lady. "A new frock means more to me than a new fabric and a change of color—it means a lift, a new lease on life!" So says Miss Sue, a snappy sophomore who sews. "I decided 1252 had the kind of newness I want: the clever cut of the waistcoat bodice first caught my fancy and the saucy swing skirt made me sign on the dotted line. I go for simple necklines, and I like lots of buttons too. You should see my version in royal blue silk crepe—really, it's something to be proud of."

Designers Win Praise. "Smart Matron your granny," retorts Emily to an intended bit of flattery regarding her new welcome-to-spring frock. "If I look as young as I feel I'll be mistaken for a Laf-a-Lot! But honestly, this new dress gives me a more dressed-up feeling than any I can remember in Springs gone by. I think Sew-Your-Own designers are smart to give us '40's' some of that swing the youngsters rave about. Do you suppose they sympathize with the poor young men who are urged nowadays to 'Swing, Swing, dear Mother-in-law'?"

The Patterns. Pattern 1909 is for sizes 14 to 20 (32 to 46 bust). Size 16 requires 2¾ yards of 39 inch material. Pattern 1252 is for sizes 12 to 20 (32 to 38 bust). Size 14 requires 3¾ yards of 39 inch material plus ¼ yard contrasting.

Pattern 1233 is for sizes 34 to 52. Size 36 requires 5¾ yards of 39 inch material plus ¾ yard contrasting.

The GARDEN MURDER CASE

by S. S. VAN DINE

Copyright S. S. Van Dine
WNU Service

SYNOPSIS

Philo Vance, famous detective, and John F. X. Markham, district attorney for New York county are dining in Vance's apartment when Vance receives an anonymous telephone message informing him of a "disturbing psychological tension at Professor Ephraim Garden's apartment" advising that he read up on radio-active sodium, consult a passage in the Aeneid and counseling that "Equanimity is essential." Professor Garden is famous in chemical research. The message, decoded by Vance, reminds him that Professor Garden's son Floyd and his puny cousin, Woodie Swift, are addicted to horse-racing. Vance says "Equanimity" is a horse running next day in the Rivermont handicap. Vance is convinced that the message was sent by Dr. Siefert, the Gardens' family physician. He arranges to have lunch next day at the Gardens' penthouse. Vance is greeted by Floyd Garden and meets Lowe Hamble, an elderly follower of horse racing. Floyd expresses concern over Swift's queer actions. Mrs. Garden, supposedly ill, comes downstairs and places a $100 bet on a horse. Gathered around an elaborate loud speaker service, listening to the racing are Cecil Kroon, Madge Weatherby and Zalla Graem, who bet varying amounts on the race. There is tension under the surface gaiety. Zalla and Swift are not on speaking terms. Kroon leaves to keep an appointment before the race starts. Miss Beeton, a nurse, and Vance bet on "Azure Star." Swift recklessly bets $10,000 on "Equanimity" and goes to the roof garden to hear the results. Floyd follows Swift, remaining away several minutes. Zalla Graem answers a phone call in the den. Soon after the announcement that "Azure Star" wins, the guests hear a shot. Vance finds Swift dead, shot dead, through the head with a revolver. After calling the police, he finds the door of a vault ajar. Kroon returns and is sharply questioned by Vance, who finds he had not left the building. Vance orders Miss Beeton to guard the stairway and prevent Mrs. Garden and Zalla from viewing Swift's body. Floyd Garden admits the revolver belongs to his father. Further questioning by Vance reveals that the revolver had been found recently by Zalla in the presence of the other guests. Floyd hints that Swift bet so recklessly because of Zalla.

CHAPTER V—Continued

Garden shrugged carelessly, as if the matter was neither important nor unusual.

"Probably," he suggested, "the pater didn't shut the door tightly when he went out this morning. It has a spring lock."

"And the key?"

"The key is a mere matter of form. It hangs conveniently on a small nail at the side of the door."

"Accordingly," mused Vance, "the vault is readily accessible to anyone in the household who cares to enter it."

Vance went to the door. "Miss Beeton," he called, "will you be good enough to run upstairs and see if the key to the vault door is in its place?"

A few moments later the nurse returned and informed Vance that the key was where it was always kept.

Vance thanked her and, closing the den door, turned again to Garden.

"There's one more rather important matter that you can clear up for me—it may have a definite bearing on the situation. Can the garden be entered from the fire exit opening on the roof?"

"Yes, by George!" The other sat up with alacrity. "There's a gate in the east fence of the garden, just beside the privet hedge, which leads upon the terrace on which the fire exit of the building opens. When we had the fence built we were required to put this gate in because of the fire laws. But it's rarely used, except on hot summer nights. Still, if anyone came up the main stairs to the roof and went out the emergency fire door, he could easily enter our garden by coming through that gate in the fence."

"Don't you keep the gate locked?"

Vance was studying the tip of his cigarette with close attention.

"The fire regulations don't permit that. We merely have an old-fashioned barn-door lift-latch on it."

We could hear the sharp ringing of the entrance bell, and a door opening somewhere. Vance stepped out into the hall. A moment later the butler admitted District Attorney Markham and Sergeant Heath, accompanied by Snitkin and Hennessey.

"Well, what's the trouble, Vance?" Markham demanded brusquely. "I phoned Heath, as you requested, and brought him up with me."

"It's a bad business," Vance returned. "Same like I told you, I'm afraid you're in for some difficulties. It's no ordinary crime. Everything I've been able to learn so far contradicts everything else." He looked past Markham and nodded pleasantly to Heath. "Sorry to make you all this trouble, Sergeant."

"That's all right, Mr. Vance," Heath held out his hand in solemn good-nature. "Glad I was in when the chief called. What's it all about, and where do we go from here?"

Mrs. Garden came bustling energetically down the hallway.

"Are you the district attorney?" she asked, eyeing Markham ferociously. Without waiting for an answer, she went on: "This whole thing is an outrage. My poor nephew shot himself and this gentleman here"—she looked at Vance with supreme contempt—"is trying to make a scandal out of it." Her eyes swept over Heath and the two detectives. "And I suppose you're the police. There's no reason whatever for your being here."

Markham looked steadfastly at the woman and seemed to take in the situation immediately.

"Madam, if things are as you say," he promised in a pacifying, yet grave, tone, "you need have no fear of any scandal."

"I'll leave the matter entirely in your hands, sir," the woman returned with calm dignity. She turned and walked back up the hall.

"A most tryin' and complicated state of affairs, Markham," Vance took the matter up again. "I admit the chap upstairs appears to have killed himself. But that, I think, is what everyone is supposed to believe. Tableau superficially correct. Stage direction and decor fairly good. But the whole far from perfect. I observed several discrepancies."

Garden, who had been standing in the doorway to the den, came forward, and Vance introduced him to Markham and Heath. Then Vance turned to the sergeant.

"I think you'd better have either Snitkin or Hennessey remain down here and see that no one leaves the apartment for a little while." He addressed Garden. "I hope you don't mind."

"Not at all," Garden replied complacently. "I'll join the others in the drawing-room. I feel the need of a highball, anyway." He included us all in a curt bow and moved up the hall.

"We'd better go up to the roof now, Markham," said Vance.

The Nurse Informed Vance That the Key Was Where It Was Always Kept.

"I'll run over the whole matter with you. There are some strange angles to the case. I don't at all like it."

He moved down the hall, and Markham and Heath and I followed him. But before he mounted the stairs he stopped and turned to the nurse.

"You needn't keep watch here any longer, Miss Beeton," he said. "And thanks for your help. But one more favor: when the medical examiner comes, please bring him directly upstairs."

The girl inclined her head in acquiescence and stepped into the bedroom.

We went immediately up to the garden. As we stepped out on the roof, Vance indicated the body of Swift slumped in the chair.

"There's the johnnie," he said. "Just as he was found."

Markham and Heath moved closer to the huddled figure and studied it for a few moments. At length Heath looked up with a perplexed frown.

"Well, Mr. Vance," he announced querulously, "it looks like suicide, all right." He shifted his cigar from one corner of his mouth to the other.

Markham too turned to Vance. He nodded his agreement with the Sergeant's observation.

"It certainly has the appearance of suicide, Vance," he remarked.

"No—oh, no," Vance sighed. "Not suicide. A deuced, brutal crime—and clever no end."

Markham smoked a while, still staring at the dead man skeptically; then he sat down facing Vance.

"Let's have the whole story before Doremus gets here," he requested.

Vance remained standing, his eyes moving aimlessly about the garden. After a moment he recounted succinctly, but carefully, the entire sequence of events of the afternoon, describing the group of people present, with their relationships and temperamental clashes; the various races and wagers; Swift's retirement to the garden for the results of the big Handicap; and, finally, the shot which had aroused us all and brought us upstairs. When he had finished, Markham worried his chin for a moment.

"I still can't see a single fact," he objected, "that does not point logically to suicide."

Vance leaned against the wall beside the study window and lighted a cigarette.

"Of course," he said, "there's nothing in the outline I've given you to indicate murder. Nevertheless,

It was murder; and that outline is exactly the concatenation of events which the murderer wants us to accept. We are supposed to arrive at the obvious conclusion of suicide. Suicide as the result of losing money on horses is by no means a rare occurrence. It is not impossible that the murderer's scheme was influenced by this account. But there are other factors, psychological and actual, which belie this whole superficial and deceptive structure." He drew on his cigarette and watched the thin blue ribbon of smoke disperse in the light breeze from the river. "To begin with," he went on, "Swift was not the suicidal type. In the first place, Swift was a weakling and a highly imaginative one. Moreover, he was too hopeful and ambitious—too sure of his own judgment and good luck—to put himself out of the world simply because he had lost all his money. The fact that Equanimity might not win the race was an eventuality which, as a confirmed gambler, he would have taken into consideration beforehand. In addition, his nature was such that, if he were greatly disappointed the result would be self-pity and hatred of others. He might, in an emergency, have committed a crime—but it would not have been against himself. Like all gamblers, he was trusting and glib; and I think it was these temperamental qualities which probably made him an easy victim for the murderer . . ."

CHAPTER VI

"But see here, Vance," Markham leaned forward protesting. "No amount of mere psychological analysis can make a crime out of a situation as seemingly obvious as this one. I must have more definite reasons than you have given me before I would be justified in discrediting the theory of suicide."

"Oh, I dare say," nodded Vance. "But I have more tangible evidence than the johnnie did not eliminate himself from this life."

"Well, let's have it," Markham fidgeted impatiently in his chair.

"Imprimis, my dear Justinian, a bullet wound in the temple would undoubtedly cause more blood than you see on the brow of the deceased. There are, as you notice, only a few partly coagulated drops, whereas the vessels of the brain cannot be punctured without a considerable flow of blood. And there is no blood either on his clothes or on the tiles beneath his chair. Meantime, that the blood has been, perhaps, spilled elsewhere before I arrived on the scene—which was, let us say, within thirty seconds after we heard the shot—"

"A far-fetched theory," muttered Markham. "All wounds don't bleed the same."

Vance ignored the district attorney's objection.

"And please take a good look at the poor fellow. His legs are stretched forward at an awkward angle. The trousers are twisted out of place and look most uncomfortable. His coat, though buttoned, is riding his shoulder, so that his collar is at least three inches above his exquisite mauve shirt. No man could endure to have his clothes so outrageously askew, even on the point of suicide—he would have straightened them out almost unconsciously. The corpus delicti shows every indication of having been dragged to the chair and placed in it."

Markham's eyes were surveying the limp figure of Swift as Vance talked.

"Even that argument is not entirely convincing," he said dogmatically, though his tone was a bit modified; "especially in view of the fact that he still wears the ear-phone . . ."

"Ah, exactly!" Vance took him up quickly. "That's another item to which I would call your attention. The murderer went a bit too far—there was a trifle too much thoroughness in the setting of the stage. Had Swift shot himself in that chair, I believe his first impulsive movement would have been to remove the head-phone, as it very easily could have interfered with his purpose. And it certainly would have been of no use to him after he had heard the report of the race. Furthermore, I seriously doubt if he would have come upstairs to listen in advance that he was going to commit suicide in case his horse didn't come in. And, as I have explained to you, the revolver is one belonging to Professor Garden and was always kept in the desk in the study. Consequently, if Swift had decided, after the race had been run, to shoot himself, he would hardly have gone into the study, procured the gun, then come back to his chair on the roof and put the head-phone on again before ending his life. Undoubtedly he would have shot himself right there in the study—at the desk from which he had obtained the revolver."

Vance moved forward a little as if for emphasis.

"Another point about that head-phone—the point that gave me the first hint of murder—is the fact that the receiver at present is over Swift's right ear. Earlier today I saw Swift put the head-phone on for a minute, and he was careful to place the receiver over his left ear—the customary way. But now the head-phone is on in reversed position, and therefore unnatural. I'm certain, Markham, that head-phone was placed on Swift after he was dead."

Lesson for April 4

GOD THE CREATOR

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 1:1-5, 26-31. GOLDEN TEXT—In the beginning God created the heavens, and the earth. Gen. 1:1.

PRIMARY TOPIC—When God Made the World.

JUNIOR TOPIC—In the Beginning—God.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—God the Maker of All.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—God in Creation.

From the completion of the great Gospel of John, which took us back to that time "in the beginning" when the Living Word "was" and "was with God and was God," we turn to the first book of the Bible, which is, as indicated by its title, a book of "beginnings." We find in it not only the record of the creation of the heavens and earth, but of man, and the beginnings of his history, the entrance of sin into the world, the beginning of God's revelation of redemption. It is indeed a most important book, fundamental to an understanding of the rest of the Bible.

Genesis has been the special object of attack on the part of critics, and especially by those who saw in its account of the creation statements which apparently did not square with the announced findings of science. Fortunately, as men make advances in scientific discovery, as well as in the understanding of God's Word, they are beginning to realize that there is no real conflict between the established facts of science and a proper interpretation of Scripture. When there is an apparent clash it will be found that either the Bible has been misinterpreted by men or they have mistaken a hypothesis of science for a fact.

We are in error when we talk about the Bible's being confirmed by archaeology or by science. If the United States naval observatory should find that its master clock does not agree with the observation of the stars, it would not assume that the universe had gotten out of order. It would know that the clock is wrong, and would make correction. Science does not confirm the Bible; the Bible confirms true science.

The account of creation may be considered in two great divisions. I. The Creation of Heaven and Earth (1:1-5). "In the beginning God"—what awe-inspiring words! How fully and satisfactorily they state the origin of all things.

Men ask us to believe their theories, but there is no cosmogony offered which does not call for a measure of credulity. Man cannot explain the origin of matter, the origin of life, the origin of rational life. These three great gaps and many smaller ones his theories cannot bridge. Man asks us to take his word for them. But we prefer to take God's Word.

Study the entire account of creation. Space here forbids more than the briefest reference to its perfect order and symmetry, its completeness, the self-evident fact that it is a true account of the working of God. It is so received by thoughtful men and women of our day. Even scoffers have long since ceased to speak foolish words about "the mistakes of Moses."

II. The Creation of Man (vv. 16-23). "Let us" is an indication that the Holy Trinity was active in creation. God the Father is mentioned (v. 1), the Holy Spirit (v. 2), and without the Son was nothing made (John 1:3).

Man was created in "the likeness and image of God." This undoubtedly refers to a moral and spiritual likeness. Man is a moral being, possessed of all the characteristics of true personality. He is a living spirit, with intelligence, feeling, will-power. This image, no matter how it may have been defaced by sin, is that in man which makes it possible for us to seek him in his sin and beseech him "to be reconciled to God." "Down in the human heart, crushed by the tempter, feelings lie buried that grace can restore."

Notice that God gave man "a helpmeet unto him," that he established the family as the center of life on this earth. He gave man dominion over the entire creation, and his restless pioneering spirit still carries him on to the complete realization of that promise. He provided not only for man's spiritual and social needs, but also for his every physical need. Surely we may say with Moses that "everything that he (God) had made . . . was very good" (v. 31).

A Man of Sorrow
One reason why Jesus was a man of sorrow was that He saw as none other the pain and sin and woe of the world.

A Hard Road
The hard road of sin is always so crowded that it gives little room for turning around and going back.

Determination
He only is a well-made man who has a good determination.—Emerson.

HOW ARE YOU TODAY

DR. JAMES W. BARTON Talks About

Treatment of Overweight. WHEN insurance figures definitely show that in North America about two in every five of the adult population are overweight and that overweight is a handicap to good health, it is only natural that trying to prevent and reduce the overweight condition should be a matter of importance to a great many people.

Dr. Barton

Practically every overweight knows that the proper or scientific way to reduce weight is to eat less food and do more work. This simple method gives in return for the fat lost real healthy or vigorous muscle tissue which not only gives strength of body but actually invites work or exercise, thus giving further strength.

However, those of normal weight cannot grasp what cutting down on food and performing more work means to the overweight individual. He has been given this great desire for food and up to a certain point he has been given this dislike for work or exercise. Further, every time he performs a simple action like walking or running he is doing perhaps 50 per cent more work than when this walking or running is done by one of normal weight.

Thus to those of us of normal weight, if we wish to eat an extra slice of bread, an extra square of butter or a second dessert, we don't give this extra food a second thought. To those who are overweight it means just that much extra fat added to their weight.

Time to Try Other Methods.

However, food can only be reduced to a certain point, and only for a certain length of time. When the time arrives when no more weight is being lost, and the individual is eating just the amount of food that should be eaten if he were of normal weight for his build, then if he is still a number of pounds overweight he would be justified in asking his physician about the use of thyroid, pituitary or other gland extract, or perhaps the new drug dinitrophenol.

Drs. Leona M. Bayer and H. Gray, in the American Journal of Medical Science, report the methods used in 106 unselected overweight patients treated in an out-patient clinic. "One hundred were treated by diet alone at first. Then 51 were given thyroid treatment and 23 dinitrophenol. Better weight losses would have been achieved if the patients had cut down more conscientiously on their food, but of course when the patients only report once a week or once a month this is to be expected. The results accomplished show that diet alone will take off an average of 15 pounds in less than three and one-half months. When dieting fails to get results, either thyroid extract or dinitrophenol appears to be effective in causing a further loss in weight."

When there was no loss shown for a whole month, the patient continued for one more month on the reduced diet. If at the end of this time (two whole months) there had been no loss of weight then thyroid extract was given as long as the patient continued to lose weight. When the weight remained the same then dinitrophenol was used until there was no further loss; at which time it was felt that the limit of the reduction in weight had been reached.

It was found that when 20 pounds had been lost by diet alone, another 5 or 6 pounds could be taken off by the use of thyroid extract or dinitrophenol.

Itching Pruritis.
It has been truly said that "all the world itches, but for different reasons in different persons." Thus the very cleanest and the very dirtiest individuals itch; those who perspire too much or not enough, itch; those who are big eaters, and those who are small eaters, itch. Itching, or pruritis as it is called by physicians, when it exists for any length of time has usually been referred to a skin specialist. However itching can be a symptom of so many ailments that it is really the work of the family physician, according to an article by Lord Horder in the British Lancet.

He mentions among other causes of itching such ailments as diabetes, jaundice, leukemia (great increase in the white corpuscles in the blood) and uremia (waste products left in the blood that should have been removed by the kidneys).

One of the commonest causes of itching is gout.

That food and other substances to which individuals are sensitive can cause itching is very clearly shown in those cases where hives (urticaria) and eczema appear after eating foods or coming in contact with certain substances.

Some organic ailments of the nervous system have itching as a symptom.

FLOYD GIBBONS

ADVENTURERS CLUB

Hello Everybody

"The Burning Tomb" By FLOYD GIBBONS

HERE'S Jack Farrell of Bronx, N. Y., to tell us a tale and to win for himself the degree of Distinguished Adventurer. Jack is bringing us a fine description of what Hell looks like. He's been all through it, and he knows all about it. A fellow came and pumped it right under him one day—gallons and gallons of it. And then, all of a sudden something went WHOOSH! And there Jack was, right in the middle of an adventure.

This happened on the tenth of June, 1932. Jack thought he knew all about Hell then—what with the depression in full swing, and work scarce, and a fellow always worrying where his next job and his next meal ticket was coming from. And then Old Lady Adventure came along and tapped him on the coco, and right there, Jack began wishing he had nothing worse than the depression to worry about.

He Got "Five"—and Then It Happened.

Jack had been out of work two or three months when, early in June, he got a job driving a truck up in Brockton, Mass. He had been working for just three days when, on the tenth, about three o'clock in the afternoon, he drove up to a filling station to get a tankful of gas.

The gas tank on Jack's truck was under the cowl. You filled it through a spout that came out of the dashboard. Jack sat in his seat behind the wheel while the filling station attendant came out and thrust the nozzle of the gas hose in through the window of the truck's cab. "Give me five," said Jack. "Right," said the attendant, and he started pumping gas into the tank.

What happened next is something that Jack doesn't remember very well. He doesn't know HOW it happened either. But suddenly there was a noise that sounded sort of half way between a hiss and a roar. Flame shot out of the tank in a long, angry streak. Flame was pouring from the end of the gas hose too. A terrific explosion rocked the truck, then, and then, in another second, the whole front end of it was a MASS OF FLAME.

For an instant, Jack held his breath, lest any of that flame get into his lungs. A lungful of flames, he knew, was almost certain death. Frantically, he tugged at the doors of the cab. The one beside him was stuck fast. Evidently the steel door, swollen by the heat of the fire within the car, had expanded against the jambs. And there it stuck, defying Jack's best efforts to open it.

There was no time to be fooling with that door. Jack could be roasted alive before he got it open. He tried the other one. That was stuck, too!

Stuck in the Small Window.

All that took place in a tenth of the time it takes to tell it. All that time Jack was holding his breath. He had to get air soon, or he'd smother even before he burned to death. There was only one way out. There was a small window in the truck's door, and through that he'd have to go.

Jack made a dive for it. By that time his clothing had begun to burn briskly. He could feel the flame eating its way up his back. He got half way through the window—and there he stuck. He couldn't go any farther. The window was too small.

By that time the fire had him in agony. His whole body seemed to be nothing but one great mass of throbbing, pulsating pain. Desperately he tried to wriggle out of the window—back into that blazing hell in the truck's cab.

It was a struggle. In his panic-stricken effort to get out he had wedged himself in that window much tighter than he realized. By the time he wriggled free and got back into the seat again, the burning sensation on his back and arms and legs was leaving him. He was numb—stupid—beyond feeling pain any more.

He Just Wanted to Go to Sleep.

He was tired—too tired to fight any longer. He wanted to go to sleep. He knew that if he gave way to that desire he'd never wake up again. He fought it for a few seconds, and then, suddenly, he didn't care. Let the fire have him if it wanted him. The game just wasn't worth the candle. He lay down in the seat.

His head seemed to be spinning around in circles. Lights were dancing before his eyes. He was going to sleep. That is, he wanted to go to sleep—he was TRYING to go to sleep. But that fellow out there wouldn't let him.

Somebody was reaching in and tugging him by the arm. Why didn't he go away and leave him alone. What was he doing around there bothering Jack when he wanted to die? Why was he pulling at him and tugging at him, trying to get Jack to go some place he didn't even WANT to go to?

Jack struggled and tried to pull his arm away. Then even that became too much trouble. He relaxed—let go. He was asleep.

Jack doesn't know to this day whose hand that was that was pulling and tugging at his arm. He doesn't know how he was dragged out of that burning cab. When he came to again he was in a clean, white bed, in a room with a lot of other beds in it, and a nurse hovering about among them. There were doctors there too—doctors who shook their heads, said they never expected to see Jack wake up again, and still didn't know whether he would pull through his ordeal alive.

"But here I am," says Jack, "through the fire and out of the hospital. Now I'm trying to pull through what's left of the depression. That's bad enough—but I don't mind it so much any more, since I've had a taste of what Hell really is like."

Sirens First Attracted People to Capri Island

There may really have been a race of sirens, or at least beautiful women, living here in prehistoric times, scientists say, writes a Capri, Italy, correspondent in the New York World-Telegram. Explorers have found that women once lived in the caves along the shore of Capri and that the island also had its cave-men. The men were cannibals, and in Capri it is jokingly said that the sirens lured sailors from ships not to see the men destroyed on the rocks but to provide hungry husbands with a meal. For decades the people of Capri had another strange superstition.

They believed that the famous Blue Grotto was the home of the devil himself, and fishermen who had to pass near its entrance used to hurry by in fear, crossing themselves to save their lives from harm.

One famous resident of other times was the Roman Emperor Tiberius, who spent the last years of his life here. He built twelve villas to honor the twelve Roman gods, and was supposed to have cast his victims over a cliff into the sea. This story has long been discredited, but the place, the Leap of Tiberius, is shown to visitors.

We are indebted to Mr. Fehsel for making it.

First to Play Juliet
In the first Shakespearean productions it was the custom to use boy actors for feminine roles. The part of Romeo was played by Burbage and an unidentified boy played Juliet in the earliest performances. Between the time of Burbage's death and the Restoration there are no records of Romeo and Juliet on the stage. From 1642 to 1660 parliament prohibited public stage plays. After the lifting of this prohibition, Sir William D'Avenant received from the king exclusive stage rights for the play. His original Juliet was Mary Saunderson afterward Mrs. Thomas Beterton, who is apparently the first woman ever to have played the part of Juliet.

Right to "Rent the Sea"
The only country in the world which allows individuals to collect a private toll from deep-sea fishermen is Denmark. For many centuries it has held steadfast to a law which gives the owner of shore land the right to "rent the sea" in front of his property for eel fishing. In some years this total rent has amounted to as much as $250,000.—Collier's Weekly.

The Largest Whale

Reindeer Are Useful
Reindeer are the domesticated descendants of the caribou of the Arctic regions of the Old world. Under domestication, they give milk and meat, serve as beasts of burden, and provide means of transportation by drawing sleds. The natives take excellent care of their herds, moving from place to place with them to provide food.

The Turnspit Dog
Up to about 1800 in England and France, the hardest working member of large households was the turnspit dog. In a revolving, treadmill-like cage, hung from the ceiling and attached by pulleys to the spit before the open fire, these dogs would run from two to three hours at a time turning the meat while it roasted.—Collier's Weekly.
