JURY BRINGS IN VERDICT OF GUILTY

Theodore Longsdorff Will Be Sentenced July 3

A verdict of guilty was brought in by the jury Wednesday in the case of the People of the State versus Theodore Longsdorff. The case had been brought up for trial before Judge Herman Dehnke at a continuation of the May term of circuit court. Longsdorff had been charged with manslaughter in the careless and negligent use of firearms. On Thursday afternoon Judge Dehnke adjourned the case until July third when Longsdorff will appear before him for sentence.

The case had been awaiting trial since November and the charge came through the death of Clare Frank of Whittemore from a stray rifle bullet. Longsdorff and several companions, hunting deer, were located on a fire line. Deciding to have some target practice Longsdorff fired a number of times at some trees and then at a bottle alongside the roadway in the fire line. The car in which Clare Frank was riding drove by and into the field of fire. It was maintained that a bullet from the rifle which Longsdorff was shooting had accidentally went into the car, killing Frank.

Arnold Tilliston of Boyne City, charged with felonious assault, was found guilty yesterday by Judge Dehnke. He will be sentenced this afternoon.

Auto Industry Will Use Isco Sand

Fish Point, (Sable Point on the map) a strip of lake frontage approximately midway between AuSable and Oscoda and East Tawas, in AuSable township on the Huron shore, acquired, it is stated, by a group of Detroit capitalists from the Gillingham interests which formerly held it for the fishing rights, is to become the sand industry center of the country for the supply of this product. The sand at this place is said to contain the necessary qualities for molding sand.

The principal market will be the automotive industry. The magnitude of the demand for this product is very great. Hydraulic processing and conveying will necessitate installation of extensive building and machinery and equipment, besides dredging. A substantial dock to afford the landing and loading of deep draught boats will be necessary. It is stated that boats will load in 21 feet of water. The power line will be extended in from Wilber, and, it is stated, that eventually a spur from the D. and M. Railroad may be required.—Oscoda Press.

Iosco Baseball League

Miner's Grove continued its winning streak by taking last Sunday's game from Whittemore by a 19-15 score. The game was a long drawn out affair with plenty of errors, hits, runs and arguments. Three hours and fifteen minutes were consumed in playing the game. The Wilber vs. Baldwin game was of the large score variety. It was won by Wilber, the final count being 20-11.

On June 18, 1893, he was united in marriage to Augusta Kobs who preceded him in death by two years ago. He is survived by two sons, Elmer and Arnold, and one daughter, Mrs. Wilfred Youngs, all of Tawas; eight grandchildren; two brothers, Stephen and Henry; one sister, Mrs. Henry Hoshbach, besides other relatives and friends.

Klass-Nelkie

St. Joseph Church, East Tawas, was the scene of a very pretty wedding Saturday morning when Irene Klass, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Klass of Bay City, became the bride of Edward Nelkie, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Nelkie, Hemlock road.

The Rev. Edwin A. Kirchoff officiated at the ceremony read before an altar banked with apple blossoms, tulips and narcissus.

Miss Dorothy Klass of Bay City, Russell Nelkie and Mr. and Mrs. Wilmer Frank of Midland were the bride's and groom's attendants. Following the ceremony a breakfast was served to the immediate families and Rev. Kirchoff. The color scheme of pink and white was carried out in the appointments at the table which was centered with a large wedding cake.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelkie will make their home on the Hemlock road in Tawas township.

Whittemore Will Hold 2-Day Home-Coming

BIG EVENT IS SCHEDULED FOR JULY 3-4

New Formed Businessmen's Association to Sponsor Celebration

Whittemore will observe July 4th with a two-day celebration and home coming, according to Joseph D. Dinn, president of the newly organized Whittemore Business Men's Association. It will be held Saturday and Sunday, July 3 and 4.

Committees are working overtime and elaborate plans are being made to entertain visitors during the two-day celebration. Whittemore has not held a celebration since 1915 and the people there plan to surpass any previous event in the number of fine amusements and entertainment. There will be something doing every minute, say members of the entertainment committee.

There will be band concerts, trotting races, two ball games, athletic events for men, women, boys and girls, rope pulling contests, dancing, street events and a grand display of fireworks Saturday evening—everything that goes to make a real old fashioned Fourth of July celebration. Many will recall the wonderful times had at Whittemore in former years at their street fairs and celebrations and members of the Business Men's Association say that every effort will be made to uphold their reputation for entertaining and hospitality.

The people of Whittemore cordially invite everyone in the surrounding communities to be their guests during the celebration and homecoming. "We shall do everything possible to make your visit here enjoyable," says Charles Bellville, secretary of the Business Men's Association.

The Whittemore Business Men's Association, formed a few weeks ago, has forty members and was organized to promote things for the betterment of that city and the surrounding territory. Even though it has been organized but a short time, it has accomplished much in this direction. The officers of the association are: Joseph Danin, president; Dr. E. A. Hasty, vice president and Charles Bellville, secretary-treasurer.

School Notes

High School

Our baseball team won the North-eastern Michigan Interscholastic Baseball League championship for the second consecutive year when it defeated the West Branch high school team by a score of 2 to 1. The hero of the game was Bill Mallon, who not only gave one of his wonderful pitching exhibitions, but also got our team's only hit and scored both of the runs, one of them counting when he stole home in the sixth inning.

The operetta, "Lady Frances," which was to have been presented this week, has been postponed until Tuesday, June 8. At that time it will be given at the school building at 8:00 o'clock. Admission will be 10 and 20 cents.

The number of students who have been neither absent nor tardy is steadily decreasing, for at the end of the past school month only seven have a perfect attendance record for the present school year. On the list are three freshmen, two sophomores, one junior and one senior. They are: Ruth Clark, Kathleen Davis, John Katterman, Walter Koepke, Grace Long, Frieda Ross and Earl Shover. The attendance records of the high school are the lowest that they have been in several years. The percentage of attendance is below normal and the number of tardiness has increased. It seems that some of the students are out of school much more than is necessary and consequently the averages drop. The following are the averages including the month of May: Grade 10, May, 95.9%; year, 97.4%. Grade 12, May, 94.2%; year, 96.5%. Grade 11, May, 93.3%; year, 95.2%. Grade 9, May, 94.1%; year, 93.9%.

Spring evidently is not the time for studying—at least that is the impression one gets by looking at our May honor roll and at the scholastic averages for the same month. Only eleven students earned marks that entitled them to be placed on the honor roll for the past month. Nine girls and only two boys make up the eleven of which three are seniors, three are juniors, three are freshmen and two are sophomores. All of the names on the May honor roll have appeared on the honor rolls

Build Co-operative Dip Vat at Hale

The second cooperatives sheep dipping vat to be constructed in Isco County was built upon the Robert Greve farm one mile south of Hale Friday, May 28. The first tank was built one year ago at the Wilber town hall and is owned by ten sheep men living in that township. The owners of the new tank are, Robert Greve, Clarence VanWormer, Emil Holzheuer, Edward Tottingham, John Webb and E. O. Putnam all of Hale.

A. J. Bell, extension engineer of Michigan State College, was in charge of the tank construction and explained to some 25 interested neighbors and farmers the advantage of a construction of this kind and gave many favorable suggestions regarding other types on construction work such as building a foundation and the construction of concrete septic tanks which will naturally increase in popularity as rural electrification is made available to provide water supplies of consistent quantity and pressure.

The building of these permanent tanks is an important step toward better sheep management by Isco County flock masters and will lead to the production of more pounds of lamb and wool annually per ewe. The quality of the product these sheep men place on the market will be much improved as well as the quantity and for these reasons may demand a more attractive price when placed upon the market, thereby increasing the farm income for the year.

Film Telephonics "Phony" No More

The complaints of telephone operators, who in the past have objected to the way phone conversations were staged in motion pictures, at last have been answered in "Cafe Metro-pole," the Twentieth Century-Fox romantic comedy starring Loretta Young, Tyrone Power and Adolphe Menjou, which opens Wednesday at the Family Theatre.

Insisting that when film actresses talked into dead phones, they spoke far too rapidly and did not how the natural reactions that most human beings do in phone conversation, the phone experts maintained that the stars were not convincing in such moments.

On the "Cafe Metro-pole" set at Twentieth Century-Fox, director Edward H. Griffith ordered a regular telephone connection made between the phone on the set where Loretta Young was to appear before the camera and another in Tyrone Power's dressing room, where he was to speak lines that are not heard on the screen but which would be the natural response to hers.

Will Play First Home Game Next Sunday

Tawas City Baseball Club will play their first home game of the season next Sunday, June 6 with the hard-hitting Turner aggregation furnishing the opposition. Turner has a perfect record so far, having won her first two starts. The Tawas boys have a record to guard also having won their single game of the season.

It promises to be a genuine thriller as neither team wants to slip out of the top rank in the standings. The Turner boys are boasting a fine batting and defense team but the locals claim that none in the league can beat their own superior brand of play. Tawas has three reliable men who are eligible for mound duty on Sunday, namely Slosser and Shellenbarger, south paws and Bill Mallon, the right handed sensation from the Tawas High School who has just finished pitching his team to another league championship. Bill has been carrying the bulk of the pitching for the last two years and is due for a lot of credit for the success of the team. On the stick list are the well known names of Marvin Mallon, Moeller, Anderson and Quick who need no introduction among the local fans. There are several others on the team who are fairly consistent at the plate and things should be quite merry for opposing mound men.

An all around good ball game is in store so let's be on hand and help the boys along. The team is definitely stronger both defensively and offensively but the help of a stand full of fans is always a great help so why not lend the team your moral and vocal support next Sunday?

The arrangements for the opening day ceremonies are not complete as yet but the main event is scheduled for 3:00 p. m. sharp, Sunday, June 6.

KEY FORMALLY TURNED OVER TO TROOPERS

New Barracks Open With Banquet at Hotel Holland

Captain Joseph Kearney, commanding officer of this district, accepted the key to the new State Police barracks at East Tawas at a banquet held last Thursday at the Hotel Holland in the presence of 165 people. Captain Kearney acted in behalf of Commissioner Oscar G. Olander and the Michigan State Police. George Myles of Tawas City, as representative of the State WPA Administration, presented the key to Captain Kearney.

The banquet was the final event in a day during which the public had been invited to attend an open house at the barracks and a State Police exhibit at the Community Building. Several hundred people inspected the fine new quarters and exhibits and learned much about the work of this department of our state government.

Judge Herman Dehnke of Harrisville gave the principal address at the banquet. R. G. Schreck acted as chairman and C. A. Pinkerton as toastmaster. The program included songs by the Oddfellow Trio and music by the Tawas Band. During the afternoon there were concerts by the Tawas City and East Tawas high school bands.

Included in the 165 people present at the banquet were 15 State policemen, 10 conservation officers and 3 sheriffs. The sheriffs were introduced by Sheriff John Moran.

The East Tawas Chamber of Commerce presented the post with a bouquet of flowers.

Destroyed Indian Population

The prehistoric Indian population of northern Arizona was destroyed by "tenement" conditions nearly 1,000 years ago. Tracing the habits of the Indian population, an authority said that from the time they moved from single-family pit houses to multi-family apartment houses, or pueblos, similar to modern tenements, the population of these tribes dropped from 23,000 to 2,000.

News Review of Current Events the World Over

President Still Insists on Supreme Court Bill, Which Raymond Moley Scores—Disturbing Developments in the Field of Organized Labor.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

VALIDATION of the social security act by the Supreme court was most pleasing to President Roosevelt, but he did not agree with the general opinion that this would put a stop to his program for enlargement of the highest tribunal. He more than intimated in a press conference that the fight for his court bill would be fought to a finish and that he was not satisfied with the apparently slender majority in the court, since a number of important administration policies are still to be passed upon by the Supreme court. He cited four issues raised by the new wages and hours bill, namely, child labor, minimum wages, maximum hours, and the question whether goods produced under unfair practices can be regulated by the government. He also mentioned TVA, the problems of flood control on the Ohio watershed, the right of municipalities to borrow federal funds to construct electric light plants, and whether the government can condemn property for a housing program.

One of those who believe the President's court plan is doomed to defeat is Raymond Moley, former head of the "brain trust." Addressing the Illinois Bankers' convention in Chicago, Dr. Moley scathingly attacked the scheme. "The President," he said, "has spoken of the dangers of a government of men. Well, there is something worse than a government of men; it is a government by a man. Most law and all constitutional government down the ages are really halters and check-reins upon this unlovely tendency in rulers to lose their heads in the intoxication of power. . . .

"There are incidental factors that have contributed to the defeat of the President's proposal to violate in this way the spirit of the constitution. The change in the philosophy dominating the majority opinion of the court has helped. The scattering of the attorney general's insincere, unsubstantial statistics by the chief justice is another. The retirement of Justice Van Devanter has helped, too. . . .

"But behind all this has been a slow and powerful surge of public opinion. The people prefer the stability of constitutional institutions as against the unpredictable will of leaders, even very popular leaders. . . .

FINAL passage of the $1,500,000,000 work relief bill by the house was delayed by rebellion against the practice of "writing blank checks" which give the President and Harry Hopkins power to spend relief funds as they deem fit. The opponents of this policy found in the revolt a chance to obtain a lot of "pork" by the earmarking of more than half a billion from the total appropriation for projects that would get votes. In a day of wild debate these major changes in the bill were voted:

$300,000,000 to be "earmarked" for PWA projects.

$150,000,000 to be spent on highway and grade crossing elimination projects.

Authority to use work-relief money for construction of power lines into rural sections for non-profit and co-operative utility groups.

Unskilled and agricultural workers who refuse private jobs will be ineligible for work-relief as long as a private job is available.

CONTINUING its vigorous campaign to organize the steel industry, the C. I. O. called out on strike the employees of the independent companies that refused to sign contracts for collective bargaining. These companies were Inland Steel, Republic Steel and Youngstown Sheet and Tube. More than 20 plants employing about 85,000 men were involved. Philip Murray, chairman of the organizing committee, said it was the purpose of the committee to conduct the strike peacefully. In the Chicago district police arrested a number of men for violating the rule against mass picketing and for other offenses, and there was some trouble in Buffalo.

Employees of the Sharon Steel corporation followed the example of those of the Jones & Laughlin concern and voted in favor of the S. W. O. C. by a large majority, so the C. I. O. gets contracts from those companies.

Operations in the huge Pittsburgh plant of the H. J. Heinz company were interrupted by a strike of the Canning and Pickle Workers' union. The strikers demanded a 10 per cent wage increase and recognition of the union, an A. F. of L. affiliate, as sole bargaining agency.

FORD employees at the Rouge plant, Detroit, took matters into their own hands and severely pummeled a number of U. A. W. A. men who undertook to distribute at the plant gates handbills designed to offset the "Fordisms" card that had been given Henry's workers. Among the union men beaten up were Walter Reuther, R. T. Frankenstein, J. J. Kennedy and Robert Canter. Frankenstein telegraphed John Brophy, director of the Committee for Industrial Organization, at Washington, asking:

"Will the C. I. O. co-operate in simultaneous nationwide demonstration before Ford salesrooms to protest brutality at Ford's today and establish the right to organize?"

At the same time a strike of C. I. O. men closed the Ford assembly plant at Richmond, Calif., forcing 1,800 workers into idleness. The local union head there predicted strikes might spread rapidly from that beginning, possibly to all the Ford plants.

HEADS of unions affiliated with the A. F. of L., meeting in Cincinnati with President William Green and the executive council, went ahead with the plans to combat Lewis and the C. I. O. One of their first steps, it was indicated, is to be an invasion of Lewis' own union, the United Mine Workers of America, through the granting of a charter to its rival, the Progressive Miners' union in Illinois. Drives are expected in the anthracite fields of Pennsylvania and the soft coal fields of Virginia, where there is considerable opposition to Lewis.

The United Garment Workers also declared war on the Amalgamated Clothing Workers whose chief is Sidney Hillman, first lieutenant of Lewis in the C. I. O.

In the Cincinnati conference John P. Frey, veteran president of the federation's metal trades department, accused the C. I. O. and the communist party of "sleeping in the same bed and under the same tent." Communists had obtained such a grip on the Lewis movement that C. I. O. leaders could not shake them off if they wanted to, Frey said. He contended the C. I. O. had sixty Communist organizers on its pay roll and that C. I. O. tactics were discussed in Moscow long before they were discussed in Lewis' office.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT in a special message asked congress to enact a new law for the benefit of workers in interstate industries, regulating the hours of work, the wages and the employment of children. Immediately after it was read, Chairman Hugo L. Black of the senate labor committee and Chairman William R. Connery of the house labor committee introduced identical bills designed to carry out the proposals of the President. The measure had been agreed upon in conferences at the White House and was promptly referred to committees with prospect of quick action. It had been approved by John L. Lewis, head of the C. I. O., but since laws setting minimum wages for men have always been opposed by leaders of the American Federation of Labor, it was considered probable that organization would not like the bill.

The twin bills originally had proposed a forty hour maximum week and a 40 cents an hour minimum wage. But, at the last moment, these limits were eliminated and spaces in the measures left blank for congress to fill.

STANLEY BALDWIN, prime minister of Great Britain, entertained the king and queen at dinner and then retired from his high office. He is succeeded as head of the government by Neville Chamberlain, who has been chancellor of the exchequer, and a few other changes in the cabinet were made. If another war comes, the British empire will not be caught unprepared. The imperial conference in London turned its attention to this matter and a special committee was formed to organize all the empire's resources for an instant shift to war footing if that becomes necessary. A subcommittee studied the problem of American competition with British shipping in the Pacific. British ship owners charge that the Americans are driving them out of business there because the latter are heavily subsidized.

SAN FRANCISCO put on a wonderfully brilliant festival to celebrate the opening of the Golden Gate bridge, the fulfillment of the city's dream of half a century. The battle fleet of the United States navy was there, and so were representatives of the states, of numerous cities and of many foreign nations. Automobile cavalcades from Oregon, Utah, Wyoming, Mexico and Canada, as well as from parts of California, joined in the great parade, with bands, floats and fiesta units. John Thomas, noted baritone, and a cast of 3,000 presented a pageant depicting the history of California and the West, and a week-long program of sports events was begun.

The Golden Gate bridge is a single deck suspension bridge, the longest single clear span in the world. It is 6,450 feet in length from end to end, and 4,200 feet center to center of piers. It crosses over San Francisco bay at a height of 250 feet and connects San Francisco by highway directly with the redwood empire of Northern California.

THE social security act, which President Roosevelt considers the soul of the New Deal, is constitutional, in the opinion of a majority of the Supreme court. The unemployment insurance provisions of the law were upheld by five of the justices, Van Devanter, Butler, McReynolds and Sutherland dissenting. The old age pension provisions were declared constitutional by all the justices except Sutherland and Van Devanter.

Justice Cardozo wrote the two majority opinions, and, as it chanced, delivered them on his sixty-seventh birthday. Administration leaders declared they completely justified the President's broad interpretation of the general welfare clause of the Constitution and his policy of extending federal power, and it would seem that this is true.

In another 5 to 4 decision the court upheld the Alabama state unemployment insurance act, declaring the relief of unemployment a valid state function.

Yet another opinion was handed down by five of the justices, upholding Wisconsin's law prohibiting injunctions against peaceful picketing in labor disputes.

IN ORDER to determine the performance of co-operating farmers in the soil conservation program, the Agricultural Adjustment administration has employed thirteen aviation firms to make aerial maps of 377 agricultural counties in 22 states, the cost to be $753,909.

From a study of the photographs agricultural experts will be able to tell how much of his acreage each farmer retired from production and put into soil-building legumes. Their reports will be the final test of claims for farm subsidies under the new AAA. Department of Agriculture officials estimate there may be from 200,000 to 300,000 overpayments to farmers.

"I AM very tired," said John D. Rockefeller, Sr., to his secretary as he sat in the garden of his Florida winter home at Ormond Beach. Then he went to bed, soon fell into a coma, and a few hours later passed away, peacefully and painlessly. His wish to live to be one hundred years old was not fulfilled, but he would have been ninety-eight on July 8 next.

Thus died the man who, starting with a $4.50 a week job, fought his way to the very top of the financial world, created the vast Standard Oil trust and built up one of the biggest private fortunes ever recorded.

Disturbed by ill health, John D. retired from active business in 1911. Some time before that he had switched from accumulating wealth to giving it away. The giving was done systematically, and representatives of the family interests estimate that his own benefactions between the years 1885 and 1934, both inclusive, totaled $530,853,632. Mr. Rockefeller's body was taken from Ormond Beach to his estate at Pocantico Hills, Tarrytown, N. Y., and there the funeral rites were conducted by Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick of New York city. Next day the oil king was laid to rest in Lake View cemetery, Cleveland, beside his wife who died 22 years ago. Only two of Mr. Rockefeller's children survive him. They are John D. Rockefeller, Jr., head of the business since the father retired, and Alta, wife of E. Parmelee Prentice. There are eight grandsons and five granddaughters.

SOVIET Russia is planning to establish regular airplane connection with the United States by way of the Arctic ocean, and in pursuance of the plan is building an air base on the ice within a few miles of the North pole. Four scientists have been landed there from a plane which first flew over the pole, and they will remain on the floe for a year, keeping in connection with the world by a powerful radio. They have named the floating ice field "Comrade Stalin's Land." The contemplated air route will be from Moscow to San Francisco.

"Tide of Death"

WHEN Hubert C. Fuller of Brooklyn was eighteen, his dad moved from Missouri to a spot in Oklahoma on the banks of the Canadian river. The nearest town was Konawa, but in the section the Fullers moved to, they and the R. F. D. postmaster were the only settlers within a radius of about fifteen miles. The Fullers' farm was on one side of the river and the postmaster's was on the other.

Hube says the river bed was three quarters of a mile wide, but in the summer of 1913, when they moved there, hot weather and a drought had just about dried the river up. There was nothing but a little stream of water about six feet wide and three feet deep, running zig-zag from one bank to the other.

There was treachery in that sluggish river, too. Its headwaters were up in the Colorado mountains, and sometimes water from melting snow would sweep down the dry river bed in a torrential avalanche, taking everything before it and filling the river bed from bank to bank. "The natives," says Hube, "call these frequent occurrences 'head rises.'"

Couldn't Understand His Alarm.
And though Hube knows all about those "head rises" now, he didn't know a thing about them at the time this story opens.

Hube's dad had gone across the river a few days before to help the postmaster cut some wood on his farm, and he had asked Hube to hitch up the team to the wagon and drive over and get a load. It was a hot day, with thunder clouds up the river to the northwest. Hube drove the horses—Sis and Ned—down into the river bed. He forded what little water there was in the bottom and then let the horses pick their way while he lay down in the wagon with his hat over his eyes.

Several times, he thought he heard strange rumblings up river, but he paid no attention to them. "I must have dozed off to sleep," he says, "for the next thing I knew I heard someone shout my name. I sat bolt upright. On the other side of the river I saw the postmaster and his wife, frantically waving to me and shouting 'Hurry!'"

They were shouting at the top of their voices, but Hube could barely hear them, for the booming and rumbling up the river had suddenly increased to a roar. "I was just about in the middle of the river bed," he says, "going cat-a-corner downstream to where an old sycamore marked the wagon road. I gave the horses the line and they started to trot. I was puzzled. What was wrong with the postmaster?"

Thirty-Foot Wall of Water.
But as Hube watched the postmaster he pointed upstream. Hube looked. "I could see the bed for about a mile, up to where it made a sharp turn," he says. "There was nothing but wind-swept sand. But as I looked, cold terror struck to the marrow of my bones. Around the bend, like a black nightmare, whirled a thirty-foot wall of water. As it turned the bend, the sandy banks on either side caved in with a great splash."

Hube was panic-stricken. He jumped between the horses, unhooked the traces, and riding Ned and leading Sis, he started to ride for his life. Sis wasn't used to being led by the halter and she held back. "I hated to do it," says Hube, "but I let her go. The river bank ahead was too steep for the horse. I had to run him downstream toward the wagon trail. It was a terrible race!"

The roar of the water was fairly deafening now. Hube's horse sensed the danger and ran like mad. Hube says he didn't dare look back, but he could hear that water getting closer and closer as they raced on. He was almost to the bank fifteen feet—ten feet away—when he felt spray on his cheek. And then another fear seized him.

Safe in the Sycamore Tree.
"Ned was doing his best," he says, "but after all, he was just a big, heavy plow horse. The path up the bank was steep, and he could never make the grade at the speed he was going. We were at the foot of the incline when Ned hit the rise with his knees, stumbled and went down. Then, with a last heroic effort, he lurched straight up on his haunches."

And that lurch saved Hube's life. As the horse rose in the air, Hube grabbed wildly for support, and as luck would have it he caught a branch of the old sycamore tree hanging over the bank. Says he: "I scurried like a possum for the highest branch—just in the nick of time. The avalanche was on us. Old Ned bellowed a high, shrill scream. Then he was crushed under the terrific force of the water. I never saw him, Sis or the wagon again. The postmaster and his wife had turned their backs on the awful scene. When I shouted, they stared at me as if they were seeing a ghost. The muddy water was churning and boiling about my feet. The old sycamore tree was all but covered with it."

The postmaster got a rope and threw it to Hube. "I walked hand over hand, up to my waist in water," he says, "until I reached solid ground. I had no more reached safety than I heard a splash. The old sycamore tree had toppled into the muddy water."

Hube says that since that day he has lived an uneventful life. "Buddy man," says he, "I'm satisfied."

Display of the Flag
The flag should be displayed only from sunrise to sunset; it should be displayed on national and state holidays and on historic and special occasions; it should be hoisted briskly and lowered slowly and ceremoniously. In raising and lowering the flag it should never be allowed to touch the ground. When the flags of states or cities or pennants of societies are flown on the same halyard with the flag of the United States, the American flag is always at the peak. When flown from adjacent staffs one flag of the United States should be hoisted first. No flag or pennant should be placed above or to the right of the flag of the United States, except where a number of flags are grouped or displayed from staffs, when the flag of the United States should be in the center.

Longest and Shortest Days
The longest and shortest days of the year are determined by the summer and winter solstices, the exact time being determined by mathematical calculation. The solstices are the times of the year when the sun is at its greatest declination, either north or south. For instance, the summer solstice is the time when the sun reaches its farthest point in its swing northward from the equator, which, accordingly, marks the longest day of the year. The year consists of approximately 365 1/4 days, and it is this fractional day of each year which causes the solstices to fluctuate. This is adjusted by the leap years. However, the longest and shortest days differ in length from the days immediately preceding and following them by only a fraction of a minute.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—I have frequently mentioned in these columns the problems that have confronted and continue to confront the commerce and industry of the United States. However one may regard the ethics of the business interests of the nation, I think everyone must admit that business has its problems that are just as serious as the job of earning a living is to you or me. This has been especially true during the period of the depression and it is equally true at this stage of economic recovery.

Business, moreover, is affected to a greater extent than you or me by any governmental policy that is pursued or any legislation that is enacted by congress or by state legislative bodies. In consequence, it seems to be a fair statement to say that business lives by the will and the whim of the elected representatives whether those representatives be local, state or national.

Those observations should demonstrate fully the importance of one piece of legislation now pending in congress. I refer to the so called permanent sugar bill. Seldom in history, I believe, has a single unit of industry found itself in a position where it is so utterly dependent upon federal policy for its existence as is the case now with those eighteen or twenty plants that refine about seventy-five per cent of all the sugar we use on our tables and otherwise in this nation.

The situation, succinctly, is that President Roosevelt has recommended to congress that it adopt legislation of a permanent character "to protect the interest of each group concerned," and assure meanwhile that the interest of the consumer shall have due consideration. Pursuant to the President's proposal of March 1, last, the house committee on agriculture is working out a piece of legislation which seeks to reconcile the differences of all the various interests and make thereby a permanent policy which this country may follow as regards sugar.

It must be remembered that the United States imports something like seventy-eight per cent of all the sugar it consumes. The other twenty-two per cent is produced by our sugar beet and sugar cane farmers—a consequential industry worthy of protection from its government but still quite unable to satisfy demands for the commodity. Some of the sugar we import comes from Puerto Rico; some comes from Hawaii; some from the Philippines, but the bulk comes from Cuba.

Since Puerto Rico and Hawaii are insular territories of our nation, they must receive consideration as an integral part of our nation. The Philippines are no longer a possession and yet there is something of a fatherly interest, or should be, on our part. With reference to Cuba, the United States long has attempted to help the islands economically and politically in order to insure the independence which our nation helped them to establish.

So it is seen that we have in the sugar problem questions involving

(1) a home industry; (2) an industry in an insular possession; (3) an industry in a nation newly born and which we are trying to lead into a position of complete independence and solvency; and (4) the maintenance of our chief source of sugar supply in a nation for which our government yet feels somewhat responsible.

That summary indicates the complexity of the general problem to be dealt with in the current legislation but the picture omits a most important unit in the industry. I refer again to those plants who must refine the sugar and must make it ready for home use or other consumption.

To make the picture complete, it ought to be recalled that for several years we have had a temporary law which fixed the amount of sugar that could be imported. It was managed through what is called a quota system; that is, the law provided authority for the secretary of agriculture to prescribe how much sugar could come in from each of the regions that I have described. This had the effect of stabilizing sugar prices and guaranteeing to the cane and beet growers of the United States a dependable market. But it had another effect which was shown by the operation of the law, an effect not so painfully evident when the law was enacted. This effect was to encourage the refining of sugar in the areas outside of the United States where the bulk of it was grown. In consequence of that, our own sugar refiners began to suffer and they continued to suffer because refiners operating in Cuba or Hawaii, to mention two examples, were able to employ labor that cost about one-fourth as much as the standard of wages paid in this country. The natural result was that our own workers were thrown out of jobs and the refining industry was running at barely two-thirds of its capacity.

To show by figures what has happened: Imports of sugar, ready for table use came from Cuba to the amount of about one thousand tons in 1925. In 1933, more than five hundred thousand tons of refined sugar was imported. It has grown some since and for every ton imported, naturally the refining plants of this country have had their volume reduced.

The President wants legislation that is fair to all interests but it seems that some of those interests are desirous of using cheap foreign labor in preference to American labor and they are fighting the President's bill. It is too early to forecast what is going to happen but there is every evidence that American owned sugar companies in some of these foreign areas are doing their utmost to kill the legislation which would substantially reduce the importations of this refined sugar.

Now there is a question of foreign policy that is involved and that part of the situation in congress concerns the State department. The home industry, of course, concerns the Department of Agriculture but there is the Department of the Interior also to be considered because of the insular territories over which it has supervision. On the surface, it is made to appear that the secretaries of these three executive departments are at loggerheads over what shall be done and as far as I can see none of the three is paying much attention to protection of the refining people who have been caught between the upper and nether millstones. My conversations with members of the house committee who have studied the problem backward and forward convinces me that congress had better for once do its own reasoning and pay less attention to the three cabinet members, each of whom is seeking to push forward the interests of his own department.

The whole situation can be summed up in one statement; if congress wants to preserve the sugar refining industry in this country (an industry that is more than two hundred years old) it can do so by providing a low limitation on the amount of refined sugar that can be imported and it can protect the cane and beet growers of the United States by establishing a quota of imports of both raw and refined sugar small enough to permit the home market to absorb the complete output of the American cane and beet growers.

I reach that conclusion because I am an American who believes in a self-sufficiency of American industry as far as it is possible to go. I take the position further because no other leading country in the world fails to protect its home industry in the handling of sugar.

Nearly everyone has realized lately that prices are climbing at an alarming rate.

This has gone on over a period of about two years and there is nothing on the horizon to indicate that the top has been reached or that prices are becoming stabilized. You and I feel it, of course, directly in what we pay for the things we buy—shoes or clothing, food, furniture, and essentials for the household.

The situation is a bit disturbing for several reasons. For one thing, if prices continue to skyrocket, sooner or later we are going to be confronted with another condition like that of 1929 and no one can doubt that if prices get too high, a tailspin will follow. If there is another tailspin like that of 1929, I am afraid that this nation as such is likely to go to pieces.

Numerous factors are at work to cause the price increases. New Deal policies were formulated, first of all, with the idea of raising prices to bring us out of the depression. President Roosevelt contended it had to be that way.

His program to force prices higher has been eminently successful. In fact, it has been too successful and in that lies one of the grave dangers. Effective means of control are lacking and there is every possibility that the upward movement may reach the stage where it will fall of its own weight.

Another cause of the price inflation has been the labor movement. Throughout the nation, organized labor has been demanding higher and higher wages. I think there can be no doubt but that labor is entitled to higher wages than obtained during the depression. But in many cases, according to government records, the demands of organized labor have been so great as to constitute a burden on industry which it cannot carry.

Guitar-Strumming Cards Practice Up on Victory Theme

MORNING among the Mudcats: "I wonder," said the reporter, "If any of the Cards are up. I—" "You wonder!" There was infinite scorn mingled with baffled rage in the hotel clerk's voice.

The reporter glanced at the horde of other similarly attired and irate gentlemen galloping through the lobby. Now and then one of them would collapse exhausted on a lounge.

"Okay." The clerk's voice had lapsed into that sad, sweet resignation which comes to men who have encountered the worst and have resolved no longer to combat it.

The reporter did and it was. But even then he was surprised. It scarcely seemed, even judging from the increasing tempo of the advance warnings all the way from the first to the twenty-first floor, that all that noise could be made by a mandolin and three guitars.

Impelled by a blind loyalty to his masters he stumbled in. The swarthy gentleman in cerise pajamas waved one languid hand while continuing to pick energetically at his mandolin with the other paw.

Pepper Martin has difficulty keeping up with the conventions when standing on his head playing a guitar.

Would you mind playing something soothing," asked the reporter.

Frenchy Bordagaray patted his cerise pajamas. "We'll give you our theme song," he offered. They did.

"We are mud cats, tough as wild cats, Our ears are made of leather And they flop in windy weather. Gosh all heckles We're as tough as pine knots. We're from Oklahoma, can't you see."

"Nice song," the reporter interrupted by crashing a bureau to the floor after the forty-ninth repetition of the verse. "Got it all over those things Berlin and Gershwin do. Those birds handicap themselves by sticking to a special tune."

"Shucks," Pepper Martin, who had been trying to introduce a variation by playing his guitar with one hand while hanging from outside the window ledge with the other, chinned himself back into the room. "I can write 'em with one hand tied behind my back. I can— Say, I think that's Frisch rooming below here. You gotta treat the manager right. I'm gonna serenade him." He disappeared over the window ledge again.

"Well," remarked the reporter after a while. "It looks like you've lost a good guitar."

"Tut, don't mention it," said M'sieu Bordagaray. "We can get plenty more of them. There's a music store that feeds 'em to us. This Bob Weiland he's up there now getting a left-handed guitar. That'll get us some place. What I say is there's not a club in the league that couldn't use a good southpaw and—"

The phone rang. Pitcher Bill McGee practiced playing the mandolin with one hand while picking up the receiver with the other. "Zut," he screamed. "Canaille. Bourgeoisie." He slammed down the receiver and began playing the mandolin with both hands so as to catch up with the others.

"Probably the hotel complaining again," said the ever polite M'sieu Bordagaray. "Those travelling salesmen haven't any appreciation of art. They always want to sleep and—"

A hand and then a head reappeared on the window ledge. "Wasn't Frisch at all," announced Pepper Martin.

NOT IN THE BOX SCORE:

YOUNG Lee Handley's hitting and fielding undoubtedly have helped Pittsburgh's Pirates this season, but his most important contribution seems to have been neglected by the public commentators.

Just to prove that there is a common denominator for all of us, Glenn Cunningham, who holds the indoor and outdoor records for the mile, looks like a knock-kneed stenographer when running for a subway train in New York.

When Van Mungo staged his one-man two-day rebellion last summer a Dodger director explained to me why the pitcher just had to quit on his teammates. It was "because Van is a fast ball pitcher and that Stengel makes him keep trying to throw curves when he's never had to throw curves before."

Walter E. O'Hara, who frankly styles himself as a promoter and not as a sportsman, pays all hospital bills for jockeys injured at his Narragansett park. There's no insurance gag either, the money coming right out of his own jeans.

This should give our red brothers cause for worry. Suppose they got so numerous that we gave this country back to them?

Cleaning up the Stage. HAVING lost their licenses, fourteen burlesque houses in New York won't ever get them back if the officials keep their word about it.

With this example to go by, authorities might next try the idea of cleaning up the legitimate stage there—the spawning-place and breeding ground of shows which filthy lines and filthier scenes are freely offered to pop-eyed audiences recruited from what we call our best families.

And then when Miss Cherokee Stripp or Miss Clear View has been hailed as America's prize package of loveliness, she will, if she runs true to form, put her clothes back on and catch the next train for California with the intention of starring in the movies.

On arrival, she will be pained to note that none of the studio heads is waiting at the station to sign her up; also that practically all the starring jobs are being held by young ladies who, in addition to good looks, have that desirable little thing called personality.

International Slickers. RUMORS persist that the United States, Great Britain and France are preparing for eventual agreements on monetary stabilization, tariff and trade adjustments, price-fixing of essential commodities—and, believe it or not, brethren and sistren—a settlement of the defaulted foreign debts owed to us.

I seem to see the big three gathered at the council table for the final session and La Belle France moving that, everything else having been arranged to the satisfaction of the majority present and the hour being late, the detail of those debts be put over to some future date.

A Sense of Humor. DAMON RUNYON, who, being wise, should know better, reopens the issue of whether many people have a sense of humor. This provokes somebody to inquire what is humor, anyhow?

I stand by this definition: Humor is tragedy standing on its head with its pants torn.

That's why few women have a true sense of humor. Usually a woman, even a witty woman, takes herself so seriously, she can never regard herself unseriously.

Old Boundary Squabble Satisfactorily Adjusted

Vermont - New Hampshire Limits Clearly Defined.

Washington, D. C.—In 1912 Vermont and New Hampshire decided to ask the United States Supreme court where one begins and the other ends. Now they know.

Finally approved a few weeks ago was Special Commissioner Samuel S. Gannett's report on the 238-mile boundary line which follows the meanderings of the Connecticut river between the two states.

"This," says the National Geographic society, "is the last word in a boundary squabble which has caused bloodshed, engendered a refusal to admit the free republic of Vermont to the United States until 1791, and inspired Vermont's flirtation with a Canadian union.

Bridges and Taxation. "The result has been to allot Vermont jurisdiction over a few more bucketsful of river in one spot, several tubfuls more to New Hampshire in another. It may now be definitely known at which ripple Vermont regulations govern trout fishing and where New Hampshire game laws apply.

"The true basis for a boundary dispute this late in history is the problem of bridges and taxation. It is a question of which state shall receive the taxes on riverside paper, lumber, and pulp mills, and the huge hydroelectric plants from whose dams on the Connecticut river power lines carry electricity throughout much of New England.

Couple Find Fortune After 25 Years' Work

Cobalt, Ontario.—Two brothers, who worked a claim near here for almost 25 years, found a fortune in a "stone"—which turned out to be a silver nugget weighing approximately a quarter of a ton.

They had regarded the "stone" with detached interest, and once even worked a trench within 20 feet of it. Then one day the sun glistened on the "stone's" frosted surface, and Michael Burke made a closer examination.

The nugget was expected to average more than 5,000 ounces for Burke and his brother, Joseph, when assayed. It was believed to be a "float" torn away from the main body of ore by age-old geological disturbances.

The sacred relics, consisting of three pinches of Buddha's ashes and a fragment of bone, brought from Siam two years ago, are hidden in a small house on Pine street, where they are constantly under the guard of priests of the Buddhist church. Their repository is a miniature duplicate of an Oriental temple, carved in ebony, with gold-studded doors.

Heath Notes

On June 22, from 2:00 p. m. to 4:00 p. m. at the court house, Tawas City, the District Health Unit will conduct a pre-school round-up for physical examination of children who expect to enter school in September. A consultation between doctor and parent regarding the physical condition of each child is granted and the parent is advised regarding the physical needs of the child.

The summer round-up is based on the belief that the home is responsible for the health of the pre-school child and that the home can make no greater contribution to the school than a scholar ready to take advantage of what education has to offer. Since a child's progress in school is influenced to a great extent by his physical condition, he will have a much better chance for normal progress and for happiness in his association with other children if he enters school as free as possible from physical defects.

The clinic will be conducted in East Tawas from 10:00 a. m. to 12:00 noon on June 22 at the Community Building; from 2:00 to 4:00 p. m. on June 22 at the school in Alabaster. On June 24 the morning round-up will be held in Hale and the afternoon round-up in Whittemore.

The Garden Murder Case

by S. S. VAN DINE

Copyright S. S. Van Dine
WNU Service

"For God's sake," Garden burst out, "it's up to you to find out the truth. I'm on the spot—what with my going out of the room with Woody yesterday, my failure to place his bet, then the mater's accusation, and that damned will of hers, and the medicine. You've got to find out who's guilty . . ."

As he was talking the door bell had rung, and Heath came up the hallway.

Vance went to Garden and, putting a hand on the man's shoulder, urged him back into his chair. "Come, buck up," he said; "we'll need your help, and if you work up a case of jitters you'll be useless."

"But don't you see how deeply involved I am?" Garden protested weakly.

"You're not the only one involved," Vance returned calmly. He turned to Siefert. "I think, doctor, we should have a little chat. Possibly we can get the matter of your patient's death straightened out a bit. Suppose we go upstairs to the study, what?"

In the study Vance went directly to the point.

"Doctor, the time has come when we must be perfectly frank with each other. The usual conventional considerations of your profession must be temporarily put aside. I shall be altogether candid with you and trust that you can see your way to being equally candid with me."

Siefert, who had taken a chair near the door, looked at Vance a trifle uneasily.

"I regret that I do not understand what you mean," he said in his suavest manner.

"I merely mean," replied Vance coolly, "that I am fully aware that it was you who sent me the anonymous telephone message Friday night."

Siefert raised his eyebrows slightly.

"Assuming, for the sake of argument," he said with deliberation, "that it was I who phoned you Friday night, what then?"

Vance watched the man with a faint smile.

"It might be, don't you know," he said, "that you were cognizant of the situation here, and that you had a suspicion—or let us say, a fear—that something tragic was impending." Vance took out his cigar case and lighted a cigarette. "I fully understood the import of that message, doctor—as you intended. That is why I happened to be here yesterday afternoon. The significance of your reference to the word 'equanimity' did not escape me. I must say, however, that your advice to investigate radio-active sodium was not entirely clear—although I think I now have a fairly lucid idea as to the implication. However, there were some deeper implications in your message, and this is the time, if you see, when we should face this thing together with complete honesty."

Siefert brought his eyes back to Vance in a long appraising glance, and then shifted them to the window again.

"Yes, I did send you that message. I realize that nothing can be gained now by not being frank with you . . . The situation in this household has bothered me for a long time, and lately I've had a sense of imminent disaster."

"How long have you felt this premonition?" asked Vance.

"For the past three months, I should say. Although I have acted as the Gardens' physician for many years, it was not until last fall that Mrs. Garden's changing condition came to my notice. I thought little of it at first, but, as it grew worse and I found myself unable to diagnose it satisfactorily, a curious suspicion forced itself on me that the change was not entirely natural. I began coming here much more frequently than had been my custom, and during the last couple of months I had felt many subtle undercurrents in the various relationships of the household, which I had never sensed before. Of course, I knew that Floyd and Swift never got along particularly well—that there was some deep animosity and jealousy between them. I also knew the terms of Mrs. Garden's will."

Siefert paused with a frown.

"As I say, it has been only recently that I have felt something deeper and more significant in all this interplay of temperaments; and this feeling grew to such proportions that I actually feared a violent climax of some kind—especially as Floyd told me only a few days ago that his cousin intended to stake his entire remaining funds on Equanimity in the big race yesterday. So overpowering was my feeling in regard to the whole situation here that I decided to do something about it, if I could manage it without divulging any professional confidences. But you saw through my subterfuge."

Vance nodded. "I appreciate your scruples in the matter, doctor. I only regret that I was unable to forestall these tragedies. That, as it happened, was beyond human power." Vance looked up quickly.

"By the by, doctor, did you have any definite suspicions when you phoned me Friday night?"

Siefert shook his head with emphasis. "No. Frankly, I was baffled. I merely felt that some sort of explosion was imminent."

Vance smoked a while in silence.

"And now, doctor, will you be so good as to give us the full details about this morning?"

Siefert drew himself up in his chair.

"There's practically nothing to add to the information I gave you over the phone. Miss Beeton called me a little after eight o'clock and informed me that Mrs. Garden had died some time during the night. She asked for instructions, and I told her that I would come at once. I was here half an hour or so later. I could find no determinable cause for Mrs. Garden's death, and assumed it might have been her heart until Miss Beeton called my attention to the fact that the bottle of medicine sent by the druggist was empty . . ."

"By the by, doctor, what was the prescription you made out for your patient last night?"

"A simple barbitol solution."

"And I believe you told me on the telephone that there was sufficient barbitol in the prescription to have caused death?"

"Yes," Doctor Siefert nodded. "If taken at one time."

"And Mrs. Garden's death was consistent with barbitol poisoning?"

"There was nothing to contradict such a conclusion," Siefert answered. "And there was nothing to indicate any other cause."

"I Saw That She Was Dead."

"When did the nurse discover the empty bottle?"

"Not until after she had phoned me, I believe."

Vance, smoking lazily, was watching Siefert from under speculative eyelids.

"Tell me something of Mrs. Garden's illness, doctor, and why radio-active sodium should have suggested itself to you."

Siefert brought his eyes sharply back to Vance.

"I was afraid you would ask that. But this is no time for squeamishness. I must trust wholly to your discretion. As I've already said, I don't know the exact nature of Mrs. Garden's ailment. The symptoms have been very much like those accompanying radium poisoning. But I have never prescribed any of the radium preparations for her—I am, in fact, profoundly skeptical of their efficacy."

He cleared his throat before continuing.

"One evening while reading the reports of the researches made in California on radioactive sodium, or what might be called artificial radium, which has been heralded as a possible medium of cure for cancer, I suddenly realized that Professor Garden himself was actively interested in this particular line of research and had done some very creditable work in the field. The realization was purely a matter of association, and I gave it little thought at first. But the idea persisted, and before long some very unpleasant possibilities began to force themselves upon me."

Again the doctor paused, a troubled look on his face.

"About two months ago I suggested to Doctor Garden that, if it were at all feasible, he put Miss Beeton on his wife's case. I had already come to the conclusion that Mrs. Garden required more constant attention and supervision than I could afford her, and Miss Beeton, who is a registered nurse, had, for the past year or so, been working with Doctor Garden in his laboratory—in fact, it was I who had sent her to him when he mentioned his need of a laboratory assistant. I was particularly anxious to have her take Mrs. Garden's case, rather than some other nurse, for I felt that from her observations some helpful suggestions might result."

"And have Miss Beeton's subsequent observations been helpful to you, doctor?" asked Vance.

"No, I can't say that they have," Siefert admitted, "despite the fact that Doctor Garden still availed himself of her services occasionally in the laboratory, thereby giving her an added opportunity of keeping an eye on the entire situation."

Vance was studying the tip of his cigarette. Presently he asked:

"Has the nurse's presence in the house resulted in any information regarding the general situation here?"

"Nothing that I had not already known. In fact, her observations have merely substantiated my own conclusions. It's quite possible, too, that she herself may unwittingly have augmented the animosity between young Garden and Swift, for she has intimated to me once or twice a very strong suspicion that she is personally interested in Floyd Garden."

Vance looked up with augmented interest.

"What, specifically, has given you that impression, doctor?"

"Nothing specific," Siefert told him. "I have, however, observed them together on several occasions, and my impression was that some sentiment existed there. Nothing that I can put my finger on, though. But one night when I was walking up Riverside drive I happened to see them together in the park—undoubtedly a stroll together."

The nurse appeared at the door at that moment to announce the arrival of the medical examiner, and Vance asked her to bring Doctor Doremus up to the study.

"I might suggest," said Siefert quickly, "that, with your consent, it would be possible to have the medical examiner accept my verdict of death due to an accidental overdose of barbitol and avoid the additional unpleasantness of an autopsy."

"Oh, quite," Vance nodded. "That was my intention." He turned to the district attorney. "All things considered, Markham," he said "I think that might be best."

Markham nodded in reluctant acquiescence as Doremus was led into the room by Miss Beeton. After a brief interchange of explanations and comments Doremus readily agreed to Markham's suggestion.

Doctor Siefert rose and looked hesitantly at Vance. "You will not need me further, I trust."

"Not at the moment, doctor," Vance rose also and bowed formally. "We may, however, communicate with you later . . . And, Miss Beeton, please sit down."

The girl came forward and seated herself in the nearest chair, as the men went down the passage-way.

"I don't mean to trouble you unduly, Miss Beeton," said Vance; "but we should like to have a first-hand account of the circumstances surrounding the death of Mrs. Garden."

"I wish there was something definite I could tell you," the nurse replied readily in a business-like manner, "but all I know is that when I arose this morning, a little after seven, Mrs. Garden seemed to be sleeping quietly. After dressing I went to the dining-room and had my breakfast; and then I took a tray in to Mrs. Garden. She always had tea and toast at eight o'clock. It wasn't until I had drawn up the shades and closed the windows, that I realized something was wrong. I spoke to her and she didn't answer me; and when I tried to rouse her I got no response. I saw then that she was dead. I called Doctor Siefert at once, and he came over as quickly as he could."

"You sleep, I believe, in Mrs. Garden's room?"

The nurse inclined her head.

"Yes. You see, Mrs. Garden frequently needed some small service in the night."

"Had she required your attention at any time during the night?"

"No. The injection Doctor Siefert gave her before he left her seemed to have quieted her and she was sleeping peacefully when I went out."

"You went out last night? . . . What time did you leave the house?" asked Vance.

"About nine o'clock. Mr. Floyd Garden suggested it, assuring me that he would be here and that he thought I needed a little rest."

"Had you no professional qualms about leaving a sick patient at such a time?"

"Ordinarily I might have had," the girl returned resentfully; "but Mrs. Garden had never shown me any consideration. She was the most selfish person I ever knew. Anyway, I explained to Mr. Floyd Garden about giving his mother a teaspoonful of the medicine if she should wake up and show any signs of restlessness. And then I went out into the park."

"At what time did you return, Miss Beeton?"

"It must have been about eleven," she told him.

"Mrs. Garden was asleep when you came in?"

The girl turned her eyes to Vance before answering.

"I—I thought—she was asleep," she said hesitantly. "Her color was all right. But perhaps—even then—"

"Yes, yes, I know," Vance put in quickly. "By the by, did you notice anything changed—anything, let us say, out of place—in the room, on your return?"

The nurse shook her head slowly.

"No. Everything seemed the same to me. The windows and shades were just as I had left them, and—wait, there was something. The glass I had left on the night-table with drinking water was empty. I refilled it before going to bed."

Vance looked up quickly. "And the bottle of medicine?"

"I didn't particularly notice that; but it must have been just as I had left it, for I remember a fleeting sense of relief because Mrs. Garden hadn't needed a dose of medicine."

"I appreciate your scruples in the matter, doctor. I only regret that I was unable to forestall these tragedies. That, as it happened, was beyond human power."

Fancy Now Turns to Exotic Cottons

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

O, OH, OH! Did you ever see anything in the way of fabric so dazzling to the eye, so daintily designful, so altogether fascinating as the new cotton weaves that are dancing so madly, so merrily, so fashionably into the current style picture?

How perfectly they tune into the costume needs of carefree summertime activities! It is no wild statement to say that an entire wardrobe can be successfully fashioned of cotton materials that will carry smartly through active sports and morning dress hours, that will answer to the call for voguish afternoon costumes, climaxing the around-the-clock program with evening formals that are just too lovely for words.

Cottons for formal wear? Yes, indeed! The next time you go to a dance or nighttime society event, count for your own satisfaction, the dresses fashioned of one type of cotton or another. You will see glamorous printed piques, the flattering and filmy cotton voiles so in demand at the present moment, dotted swisses, shadow printed organdies, superfine seersucker sheers and other entrancing cotton weaves too numerous to mention.

Perhaps after all has been said and done it is the amazing cotton prints that are of outstanding style significance. For excitement at high pitch, watch the procession of exotics in cotton that are that authentically oriental and superbly colorful you feel that they must have hailed direct from ports in far Persia, or East India, perhaps Java or China, or from Hungary or some other central-Europe country, or just as likely the print that holds you spellbound may be of South American origin, for the latter rank high in style prestige this season.

Do these foreign-looking American-made prints make up effectively in dance frocks? Find the answer in the charming dress pictured to the right in the illustration. This sleeveless evening gown with graceful skirt and with halter-type bodice is made of one of the new Hungarian cotton prints which reproduce old-world textiles. The colors are rich and glowing and there is a gypsy flavor about them and the beads and the bracelets worn are in definite keeping with the trend in the summer mode. Needless to say that the colors of the print are fast to both sun and washing.

Take the thought of the perfectly gorgeous new cotton prints and the thought of the stunning new house coats, such as are proving the big sensation in fashion realms, put the two together and the duo-theme is enough to tempt any home-sewing woman into action. Which is exactly what is happening.

She who loves to go nautical will enjoy making up the beach coat to the left in the picture, which may be smartly used later on as an evening coat or as a house coat. The material, patterned with anchors and other seafaring themes, being properly pre-shrunk will not lose its perfect lines or fit from laundering, neither will the colors lose out in tubbing.

A cool competent play outfit of colorful early American print centers the trio. Being dependably pre-shrunk it is able to take its tubbings cheerfully without tendency to lose shape. The shirt and shorts are in one. The skirt whisks on and off at will.

WITH LACE JACKET

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

This lovely lace gown has a matching jacket, which it should have according to all the laws of fashion. The idea of topping each dress with a related cape or jacket runs throughout the entire style program until now it has become a widespread accepted fact. Norman Hartnell, especially prominent for his coronation gowns, designed this very lovely evening ensemble. Both in London and Paris the flair for lace is at a high point of enthusiasm.

Romantic Jewelry

Massive bracelets and clips set with "sentimental stones" such as turquoises, corals, garnets, topazes and seed pearls are going to be worn this summer.

SEPARATE BOLERO IN LACE IS SMART

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

One of the many reasons for the great popularity of the becoming bolero is its ability to dress up a costume, or to vary it for you. You have only to slip one on over a simple crepe dress to achieve the effect that is especially attractive this year. Boleros are particularly prominent in starched cotton lace, in pastel shades and white. Several of these, in different colors, will enable you to get different effects with a single frock.

The simple, brief bolero would probably be most practical, for the lace pattern gives a dressy effect in itself, and the tailored pattern of the bolero makes it adaptable to all types of costumes. One very attractive design has short puff sleeves, and wide revers, with the short jacket slightly flared. If you can sew at all, it is the easiest thing to make, of little more than a yard of lace. Such a bolero shows off to best advantage over a dress that is fairly simple, whether it be an afternoon frock, or a gown for evening.

Renaissance of Interest in the "Polka Dot" Theme

There is a renaissance of interest in the polka dot theme. There are enormous plate-sized dots with smaller dots scattered around them, all sprinkled with tiny confetti dots in contrasting colors. There are zig-zag polka dot arrangements, irregular spacings. The classic polka dot takes on a new look in strange and "dizzy" color combinations for sportswear, such as queer reds combined with strong blues. Silk crepes, silk sheers and silk taffetas are favorite grounds for dot patterns, the companion idea often being carried out in a silk crepe with a silk sheer.

Tassels for Accent

Season Lightly—Be careful when doubling a recipe not to double the seasoning. Use it sparingly at first, then add more if needed.

Rhubarb and Figs—To one pound rhubarb, after peeling and cutting, add half pound good figs, cut into small pieces. Place in a saucepan with a very little water and about a dessertspoon golden syrup or sugar and gently stew till tender. Serve with a rice or sago mold or hot milk pudding.

Keeps Cauliflower White—A tablespoon of sugar in the water in which cauliflower is cooked will keep it white.

Unwrap Food—Food should not be stored in the refrigerator while wrapped in paper because the paper prevents the cold air from circulating freely over it.

Glazing Liquid for Cookies—A mixture of two tablespoons of sugar and one-fourth cup of milk makes a good glazing liquid for cookies. Apply on the surface of the dough with a pastry brush before baking the cookies.

Shaping Knitting Needle—Before using a circular knitting needle, immerse it in hot water for a few minutes to make it pliable. Before it cools, and hardens, hold it in knitting position, and make any desired adjustments such as straightening the ends. This dispenses with a long breaking-in period.

Eggs in Potatoes—Bake potatoes. Cut off tops, scoop out centers and season with butter, salt and a little pepper, mashing thoroughly. Half fill shells with potato mixture and drop a raw egg, salt, pepper, a little grated cheese and one teaspoon butter in each. Put back in hot oven for four minutes to set egg.

To Keep Frosting From Running—A half teaspoonful of baking soda added to boiling frosting will keep it from running.

PETER FORGETS ABOUT THE STRANGE TRACKS

Kick your heels and jump and dance! Hop and skip and gayly prance! Sister South Wind's come to stay, And Mistress Spring is on the way!

EVERYBODY said that Peter Rabbit and Jumper the Hare had gone crazy. Of course, it wasn't true. They weren't really crazy, even if they did act so. People always say that Jumper the Hare is mad at this time of the year, but it isn't so unless trying to show how happy and full of joy you feel is madness. That was the trouble with Jumper and Peter this time. They were so full of joy that they just had to do something, and because they couldn't sing and shout—for you know they have no voices for singing and shouting—they just had to do something to show how glad and happy they were, and so, in the moonlight, when they thought no one saw them, they hopped and skipped and jumped and danced, and did all sorts of foolish things. But other people did see them. Jimmy Skunk saw them and said, "How silly!" Bobby Coon, poking his head out of his hollow tree to see if the last bit of snow had disappeared, yawned sleepily and said, "How foolish!"

But Peter and Jumper didn't know this, and they wouldn't have cared much anyway. They didn't have room for anything but the joy that filled their hearts, and that joy was because they knew that Mistress Spring was on the way, and she always brings the glad time, the happy time, the merry time, when the very air is full of joy and love, and it is, oh, so good to be alive! They knew that she was on the way because Sister South Wind had arrived and told them so, for Sister South Wind had come to prepare the way for her, to melt the snow and ice, and to whisper to all the trees which had slept the long winter through that it was time to wake. So they forgot everything else in the joy of this good news. Peter forgot all his trouble because his friends and neighbors wouldn't believe the story he had told them of the strange great tracks he had found deep in the Green Forest. In fact, he forgot all about those tracks himself. There was too much else to think about. The Green Forest and the Green Meadows, and the Laughing Brook and the Smiling Pool would soon be waking up, and Peter just had to be on hand to greet each of the sleepers, who had spent the long, hard, cold winter warmly tucked in bed, and knowing nothing about Jack Frost, or rough Brother North Wind, or how hard it had been sometimes to get something to eat.

So Peter hopped and skipped and danced in the moonlight with Jumper the Hare, and was happy. "No more days of hunting and hunting to find something to eat!" he cried, as he foolishly tried to jump over his own shadow. "No more racing around to keep from freezing to death!" And then, just because he didn't have to, Peter raced faster and harder than ever. You know, it is a lot easier to do things when you don't have to. It is fun then. "Just the same," added Peter, "I

ODD JOBS ON FURNITURE

THE usual varnish finish of a table top turns white under a hot dish when alcohol or other liquids are spilled on it. These white marks are damage to the varnish. If the varnish is damaged through the wood, the only remedy is to scrape it out and to refinish. But more usually a white mark is only on the surface. The treatment for taking it out depends somewhat on the kind of varnish used in the finish; but one or another of the following will probably succeed—a little of a liquid being applied lightly with a cloth: turpentine; linseed oil; spirits of camphor. Another method is to rub lightly with finely powdered pumicestone and any light oil, applied with the finger-tip. Cigar ash can be used in place of the pumicestone.

A dent in wood is actually the crushing of the wood fibers. To take out a dent, cover with several sheets of blotting paper wet with water, and press with a fairly hot iron; the steam will swell the fibers and bring them back to their original positions. A nick or a break caused by the chipping off or gouging out of some of the wood can be filled with shellac in stick form, which can be had in all of the various wood colors and shades. Stick shellac looks like sealing wax. To apply it, a screwdriver blade is heated hot enough to melt off some of the shellac, which is then pressed into the break in the wood. When it has hardened, it can be cut off and made level with a razor blade or by rubbing with fine sandpaper.

Loose chair rungs can be made tight through the use of thin and small slips of steel made for the purpose, and usually to be had at a hardware store. The loose end of the rung is pulled out, a slip of steel of the right size is placed against it, and the two are forced back into the hole. Having fine teeth, the slip binds the rung tightly into place.

When a chair has loosened all over, due to exposure to dry air, it is best to take it completely apart and to put it together again with plenty of glue. The parts should then be tightly bound with heavy cord until the glue is thoroughly dry. Squeaks in a wood bedstead are due to the loosening of the glued joints. To cure the squeaks, the joints should be taken apart and reglued.

A split in a table top, also caused by drying out, can be brought together by exposure to damp air; sometimes by laying damp cloths on both sides of the split. When a split has closed, small pieces of flat metal, to be had at a hardware store, should be screwed on the under side, to prevent the split from reopening.

The sphere they live in is as far From where we live as star from star. They move in orbits, often we In circles they can never see. They understand the human race, But not the people of a place. They never hear, so far apart, The beating of a single heart.

The great philosophers indeed Are not the ones who write and read But rather those who think and pray, Man near, and God not far away. They stand beside the bier of grief, Have less of learning, more belief, And do not "think" a thing is so— Know what they live, live what they know.

THE LANGUAGE OF YOUR HAND

By Leicester K. Davis

MOST of us have "the blues" at times. But the normal mind soon clears them away. This is not true, however, of some unfortunate, who seem always and quite unaccountably depressed. In a world that is filled with so much about which to be cheerful and happy, these mournful souls see only that which should not be.

Destiny, for some unfathomable reason, seems to have singled them out for unhappiness, brooding and gloom which they hardly deserve. And destiny has marked them with the finger of Saturn now to be described.

The Melancholy Finger of Saturn.

Fortunately you will not come upon many second fingers of this type. But when you do, you will recognize its peculiarities at a glance. The outstanding characteristic is the twisted and distorted appearance of the finger from root to nail tip. This and excessive length and leanness, which add emphasis to the large and knotty knuckles.

The first joint usually inclines sharply toward the forefinger, the second joint just as sharply away from it, while the nail tip turns again toward the forefinger. The nail is long, narrow, often convex and deeply ridged and rather deeply set.

Individuals with this unusual type of second finger are rarely understood, even by those with whom they are most closely associated. They crave sympathy, which they deserve but which is too often withheld. If encouraged, the real abilities so often lying latent within them may be loosed in surprising accomplishments despite the handicap which destiny has imposed.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for June 6

JOSEPH'S READINESS FOR SERVICE

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 41:33-44. GOLDEN TEXT—Seest thou a man diligent in his business? he shall stand before kings. Proverbs 22:29.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Joseph's Errand. JUNIOR TOPIC—Joseph Goes Before the King.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Ready to Serve. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Preparation for Public Service.

Public service—that position of opportunity and responsibility—merits far better treatment than is commonly accorded to it, for we know only too well how often it is nothing but a political football carried hither and yon as the dictates of partisan purposes may indicate.

Scripture holds a very exalted view of the public servant. Paul tells us to "be subject unto the higher powers. For there is no power but of God; the powers that be are ordained of God" (Rom. 13:1). The Bible clearly teaches that every governmental agency and every public servant from the policeman on the beat to the President in the White House, is only permitted to exercise authority over his fellowmen because God has ordained that there should be such government. Clear it is that every right-thinking official of state and nation should be humble, teachable, discreet, and wise in the exercise of his power, and God-fearing in the discharge of his responsibility.

Joseph, the one in the procession of the patriarchs of Genesis who passes before us in the lesson today is interesting from many angles. His personal history is charmingly written and a model of appealing biography. He is a marvelous type of Christ, and one could devote hours to such a study of his life. But our lesson subject presents him as one ready for public service, and we may well profit by the lesson. He is an example of what men who serve their country should be.

I. Before God—Humble and Teachable (vv. 33-36).

The background of our lesson is found in the four preceding chapters. Joseph, the boy with dreams and aspirations, has learned obedience, humility, purity, and many other useful lessons in the hard school of experience. It has well been said that the tuition of that school is high, but the lessons are well learned.

Now he stands before the king to interpret a double dream, sent as a warning to the nation. The wise men who knew not the true God had vainly sought to answer the king's questions. Joseph sets them and us an example—he receives instructions and guidance from God, and speaks wise words because taught of him. Would that all those who stand as counselors before kings and presidents in our day would listen for the voice of God before they speak.

II. Before Men—Spiritual, Discreet, and Wise (vv. 37-39).

Pharaoh recognized that the Spirit of God was in Joseph. That is a great testimony for Joseph, and at the same time it reflects credit upon the king. Who can say what would be the result if our government officials were chosen for their spirituality?

Spirituality is not the only qualification, however, for such service. The Christian who expects men to favor him because he is a Christian, even though he be careless and incompetent, finds no comfort in the study of Joseph. He was discreet and wise. The follower of Christ should distinguish himself by diligent and intelligent application of all his powers to his work. Then men will honor both him and his God.

III. In Service—Responsible and Powerful (vv. 40-44).

He who had humbled himself under the mighty hand of God was exalted in due time. (See I Peter 5:6.) Joseph was willing to abide God's time, and did not run ahead of him as did his father, Jacob.

The record shows that he used his place of honor and privilege to perform a difficult and arduous task and to do it well. Right-spirited men do not glory in position or power, but use the opportunity to give themselves in sacrificial service to God and their fellow-men. Someone has aptly said that a politician is one who has his eye on the next election while a statesman has his eye on the next generation and its welfare. God give us more statesmen!

Never Despair

Let no man despair of himself. We may be sepulchres full of dead powers; but Christ is the resurrection and the life, to make us shrines full of living, seeing, soaring, rejoicing thoughts and passions.—Dr. W. L. Watkinson.

Advantages of Tact

Without tact you can learn nothing. Tact teaches you when to be silent. Inquirers who are always inquiring never learn anything.—Disraeli.

Dressed for the Occasion

"HI THERE, Mrs. Astorbilt, where are you going in that lovely summer gown?"

"Not very far, Miss Junior Deb, just down to the store to buy material for a play suit like yours."

"Well, Ma-mah, if you must copy my style, you couldn't find a better model because these shorts really fit, and the whole thing is a tailored job."

A Stylist Speaks.

"May I as Susie Sew-Your-Own interrupt you two with the latest word from my class in dress design? You, Sis, are a pre-vee of Miss America in proper sports wear while Ma-mah is modern to the minute with her raised waistline and filled bodice. I, in this morning frock, have what the book calls classic simplicity. Be that as it may, I couldn't get along without it, because it's so cool and comfortable."

"Thanks for the approval, Susie. Your clever dress would be a bright spot in anybody's kitchen, and now that you've got the swing of this sewing business there will be no stopping you. But even so, I must admit I'm a proud mother. You can go just as far as you like with this new hobby."

"Gee, Ma-mah, isn't it swell to be on such friendly terms with Fashion? I think good old Sew-Your-Own deserves most of the credit for arranging the introduction. Spring means so much more when one's clothes look the part."

Fire-Fighters

The first professional fire-fighters in the United States took up their duties in Cincinnati, Ohio, in 1853. They were members of the first paid municipal fire department to be organized. Previously Cincinnati like every other town in the country, had only volunteer fire-fighters, usually unorganized.

Saliva

Saliva is a clear, tasteless, odorless, slightly alkaline viscid fluid consisting of the secretion from the three pairs of salivary glands and the mucous glands of the oral cavity. Saliva aids in converting starch into maltose. This function is aided by the presence of a diastatic enzyme called ptyalin.

of other months, and most of them have been on all the lists for the present school year. The following students are the eleven who received no mark lower than a "B" for the month of May: Madge Bruggler, Kathleen Davis, Isabelle Dease, Lucille DePotty, Hazel Herman, Myrtle Leslie, Norma Malcolm, Marguerite McLean, Norma Musolf, Erma Lou Pfahl and Ernest Ross.

The scholastic averages of the various grades took a decided tumble for the month of May. At no time during the present school year have the averages been as low as they were for the past month. The sophomores again had the highest average but the freshmen replaced the seniors for second place, while the juniors again had the lowest average. The averages for the four grades are as follows: sophomores, 2.243; freshmen, 2.000; seniors, 1.934; and juniors, 1.451.

The seniors have received a complimentary pass from Walter O. Briggs, owner of the Detroit Baseball Club, to the game between the Tigers and Washington, June 4.

The tenth grade botany class recently took the Michigan Botany Test which has been standardized by the Bureau of Educational Research, School of Education, University of Michigan. The median of the class was 45; the same as the author's median. Norma Musolf led with a score of 55 out of a possible 60. Otis Smith and John Katterman were close seconds—each with a score of 54.

The ninth grade citizenship class has been making a study of the history and etiquette of the flag. We note that some members checked up on some of the flag etiquette which they observed on Memorial Day.

Having won the doubles at the regional match at East Tawas, Bill Prescott and Tom McEalff participated in the state-wide tennis tournament which was held at Ann Arbor. They won their first six matches but were defeated in the semi-finals by the University of Detroit high school. We believe that Bill and Tom made a splendid showing at Ann Arbor and we hear that they had a good time.

The two boys also defeated a team from West Branch high school on Tuesday afternoon at both doubles and singles. The doubles score was 6-2, 6-3. In the singles Tom defeated his opponent by the score of 6-2, 4-6, 6-2. William then proceeded to win from his man in straight sets 6-2, 9-7.

The girl's team, composed of Effie Prescott and Isabelle Dease, not to be outrated by the boys, also defeated the West Branch girls in the doubles by a score of 6-0, 6-4. They were preparing to sally forth and try for a repeat in singles when the matches were ended for the day because of darkness.

The latest addition to the high school library is two volumes of "Forward March." These consist of a photographic record of America in the World War and the post war social upheaval. These books are put out by the Disabled American Veterans of the World War, Department of Rehabilitation, in the interest of peace.

Reverend Sommerfield and Reverend D. T. Williams visited the high school Tuesday morning. Reverend Williams gave the high school students a talk concerning the peace situation in the United States and Europe. He has an excellent message which he gives in an interesting and instructive style. It is evident that Reverend Williams desires peace for America but that he believes that sinking the navy and doing away with the army will not bring peace.

The white rat, which is an albino mutation from the ordinary Norway rat, has a life span of about three years, and this corresponds to the human life span of ninety years, comparative physiological studies of the rat and man show. The longest life span observed in the rat is the equivalent of 112 years in man.
