Champagne Waltz" and Make Way for Tomorrow' At Rivola Next Week

A scintillating melange of music, wit, dancing, comedy and beauty moves into the Rivola Theatre next Sunday when Paramount's "Champagne Waltz," co-starring Gladys Swarthout and Fred MacMurray, and including Jack Oakie, Veloz and Yol-anda, Herman Bing, Vivienne Os-borne, Frank Forest, Benny Baker and Ernest Cossart, begins its run.

Modern youth's revolt against the conventions of the older generations, and something of the problem created in a typical American household when three generations are forced to live together, form the plot of "Make Way For Tomorrow," the screenplay by Vina Delmar which opens on Wednesday at the Rivola Theatre. deliveries of mail to strike - crippled industrial plants, new incidents among employers, loyal employes and strikers flared up on half a dozen fronts.

When John L. Lewis gave the or-der throwing 70,000 men out of work in the plants of Repub-

In Warren and Niles, Ohio, postal authorities refused to deliver parcel post packages containing food and clothing to workers inside the plants. This action brought from Republic a protest to Postmaster General Farley, requesting that he issue orders to postmasters to see that all legally presented and post paid mail be delivered regardless of picket lines.

'Unless you see fit to comply with this request, which we believe to be entirely within our legal rights," the message said, "we shall feel compelled to take such legal steps as may be available to us in the premises.'

Capitalizing on the action of local postmasters, Ohio pickets issued a printed ultimatum to loyal steel employes. "Four departments of the United States government are fighting on our side," it said, and added:
"Extra precautions will be taken throughout the next 12 hours to guarantee your safety in leaving the plant. After that time your safety will be your own responsibility."

The four departments of the government believed to have been referred to are the post office, labor department, labor relations board and interstate commerce commis-

It was Sen. H. Styles Bridges (Rep., N. H.) who presented the case for an investigation to the senate committee on post offices. He was reported to have enlisted the support of Democratic Sen. Josiah W. Bailey of North Carolina.

R EPUBLIC'S plants continued to be beehives of excitement. At Youngstown there was a pitched battle between pickets and police after a company truck carrying food for the employes in the plant had successfully run through the picket lines, accompanied by a cordon of police. As shots were exchanged one man was wounded. A dozen others received cracked skulls. Fifty strikers, many of them suffering from tear gas, were taken

In Chicago State's Attorney Courtney continued investigations of the recent riot in which C. I. O. strikers attacked police at the Republic Steel plant in South Chicago, resulting in seven deaths. Here, also, the company was housing loyal employes who remained at their work in its plant. Mayor Kelly ordered them removed on the grounds that such housing violated the city sanitation code. Republic countered by having Pullman cars moved into its plant yards and housing the employes in them. The mayor admitted he couldn't see anything wrong in that.

FOUR hundred C. I. O. power company strikers taught the 450,000 inhabitants of the Saginaw valley in Michigan what it is like to feel the power of organized labor when they sat down at their jobs for 15 hours. Electricity was shut off from 200 communities; hospitals as well as factories were without current before an agreement was reached and the strikers went back to work. It was a day's pay lost for 100,000 workers whose employers' plants depended on "juice" for life. General Motors employes alone lost $454,000.

Mayor Daniel A. Knaggs of Monroe, Mich., called for 100 war veterans as volunteer police to aid his force of 20 in preserving the peace as 782 strikers at the Newton Steel company returned to work. The C. I. O. had threatened to send 8,000 to 10,000 members from Detroit to enforce the employes' demands. In Detroit, the Ford Brotherhood attempts of C. I. O.'s United Automobile Workers' Union to unionize Ford. Byrd W. Scott, a Ford machinist, for 20 years, explained: "The F. B. A. was started by myself, John B. McDowell, Benjamin ployees who have worked for the cost and the trouble.

> R EADING the election returns of an overwhelming Democratic landslide last November, Charles Michelson, publicity director of the Democratic national committee, said: "We will regret this." The great party majorities in both houses now show signs of splitting into regional and economic blocs, which is exactly what he was afraid of. Biggest wedge in forcing the split among the party ranks was, of course, the President's bill for the reorganization of the Supreme court. This led a long list of bills, many of them expected to evoke heated controversies in congress, which threatened to postpone adjournment to mid - winter. Indeed, it was believed by some that if part of the program were not postponed, this session would run continuously into the next, beginning in January.

> Besides the Court bill, there are to be acted upon measures for the establishment of wage and hour standards for interstate industries, the curtailment of tax dodging, reorganization of the executive branch of the government, helping farm tenants, conservation of soil, water power resources and housing.

> IS THE Democratic party going Fascist?" asked Samuel B. Pettingill, (Dem., Ind.) on the floor of the house, in upbraiding Gov. Frank B. Murphy of Michigan for his sponsorship of a law in that state which would authorize him to take over industrial plants and operate them when they have been closed by labor troubles.

> "Let the historian note that this is the way Fascism made its start in Italy," he said. "If the state takes over the factories, who will fix wages then, who will fix hours then? After the state takes over a factory, will it permit its workers to strike? The state then has the opportunity of operating the plant at a profit, without running up a deficit for the taxpayers to absorb. Will the state then permit an interruption of operations?"

His voice was never again heard. Now after nearly six months the wreckage of the airplane has been found high in the Wasatch mountains, 25 miles southeast of Salt Lake City and 35 miles off the regular airline course. So shattered was the plane that the largest single piece of debris was a part of a propeller. Bodies of all aboard were buried 25 to 50 feet in the drifts of snow.

With a rich jewelry shipment re-ported to have been aboard the ship, a guard was placed around the wreckage and given orders to "shoot on sight" until the wreck should be recovered; four souvenirhunters were shot at three times. Ronald Dyche, of the national forest service, who aided in the long search, revealed how close the air travelers came to escaping death. "If they had just been flying 25 feet higher," he said, "they might have made it over the peak and possibly reached safety."

CERTAIN British and French newspapers of late have seen fit to "pooh-pooh" the naval strength of Il Duce in the Mediterranean. It is More than 70 submarines were massed as the feature of a mock combat off Naples. The grand fleet of 150 warships summoned for the maneuvers went through their exercises at a minimum speed of 30 miles an hour. The German registered delight continually as Il Duce pointed out to him every phase of the sham battle. Italian officers boasted: "Only Fascist Italy can mobilize so many underwater craft at a moment's notice."

The day before, Galeazzo Ciano, Italy's foreign minister, had informed the British ambassador, Sir Eric Drummond, that Italy accepted in principle all points in the British proposals to assure the safety of international naval patrols off Spain. It was understood that the Nazis had tendered the same approval.

The three main points of the British proposal were: That both Spanish belligerents be required to give formal solemn assurances that they will respect international patrol ships; that safety zones for patrol ships be established at certain specified ports of the two belligerent of dealings with the C. I. O. from parties; and that the four naval powers engaged in patrol duties consult each other on measures to be taken if any of their patrol ships should be attacked. "Death Over Miami" By FLOYD GIBBONS Famous Headline Hunter

TERE'S a tale of the high seas, of "Sparks," as the seamen call the radio operator who sits day and night over his set, picking up messages that may mean life or death to some hapless souls.

In this case, thanks to Ray Hutchens of Long Island City, N. Y., it meant life to the victims of a hurricane which had just swept a path of death and destruction over Florida!

Ray tells me the Ward Line passenger ship Siboney, with him on board as chief wireless operator, and a chap named Milton Kitchen as junior, pulled out of Havana, bound for New York, on September 18, 1926. Just before they left the dock at noon, they received a hurricane warning from a station in New Orleans whose call letters were WNU.

Now Ray says such warnings were a dime a dozen, and most of them came to exactly nothing. So when they ran into a gale with moderate sea on passing Morro Castle, they thought little of it. All unsuspecting they turned toward Key West.

Somebody Called the Siboney.

Ray tells us that at 10 p. m. that night he was on watch. Static was bad, the sea was running a bit more heavily, and the wind at gale force threw clusters of spray against the radio-room ports so forcibly it sounded like hail. The passengers, their vacations over, were asleep or preparing for bed, secure in the thought of the trained men in whose hands they had entrusted their welfare. Ray, watching with anxious eyes the rising storm, could think only of the helplessness of even these trained men when Nature goes on a rampage.

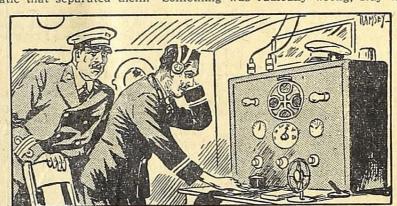

Idly running through the 600-meter band, Ray found things dull, with little traffic. At ten-thirty, against a rasping background of static, some fellow called WRN (the Siboney, Ray's vessel) slowly and repeatedly.

"Shucks," Ray thought to himself. "This'll be some two-byfour tanker about to ask for a relay."

Unable to send their messages the full distance because of lack of power, the smaller ships occasionally asked help from a ship with better equipment. Ray was certainly justified in jumping to this conclusion, for what else would be sending a signal that was not the clear, musical note of the shore stations, but a weak, straggling sputter, "like someone shaking a bucket of pebbles," as Ray puts it.

But when this puny station signed WAX, which was the shore station at Miami, Florida, Ray was shocked into action! Miami, whose high, clear note always rang with ample volume through the thirty miles of static that separated them. Something was radically wrong, Ray was sure of that. Hurriedly he snapped back a brief "Go ahead." Ray knew the shore station must be able to hear the Siboney much better than Ray could catch the thin signal that trickled in from Miami.

"Ham" Told of Miami Hurricane.

And WAX, Miami, came back with the hottest row of dots and dashes Ray ever had directed toward him in his life! A pitiful appeal for food, clothing and medical supplies for the victims of the Miami hurricane, which had just swept a path of death and destruction across Florida! There was not a second to be lost! Out there in those waste stretches, battered and swept clean by the fury of a Nature gone mad, were helpless men, women, yes and little children, their homes destroyed, their last link with the world this little ship's radio room, where a horrified man sat over a delicate instrument and relayed the tale of their disaster to the world.

Ray jumped to his feet, ran into their quarters, slapped his junior, Kitchen, on the stomach. For the next twelve hours, while Kitchen stood by and tended the arc and spark transmitters, Ray alternately received from Miami and sent to WSA, in East Moriches, Long Island. A pal of Ray's, Al Kahn, who was on the Orizaba, near Hatteras, helped to keep other ships' signals off the air while Ray was slowly trying to pound through the thousand miles between the Siboney and WSA.

Static Made It Almost Impossible.

You fellow-adventurers who are "hams," as the radio amateurs call themselves, will know what Ray was up against trying to pick up the faint code of WAX with static buzzing, sputtering, crackling, crashing, drowning out the almost inaudible signal that meant aid and succor to thousands of souls. Ray sat there glued to his chair for twelve hours. straining his ears to catch the pitiful appeal, receiving under almost superhuman conditions. "So bad was the static," Ray tells me, "that each dot was a drop of sweat and each dash a moan.'

Captain F. L. Miller hove the ship to so as to keep the operators within range of WAX's low-power transmitter. He had been asked to bring his ship into the harbor with food and medicine, but the ship's draft would not allow it even in calm weather.

And all the time Ray was racking his brains wondering how the Miami operators, whose big station was obviously out of whack, were getting even this faint signal through. "Those boys certainly deserve credit," Ray says proudly, "all their towers were down; the roof was blown from their quarters, power and telegraph lines were all out; they were sheltering one hundred men, women and children in the controlroom, and even then they rigged up an emergency transmitter, powered with batteries stolen from wrecked cars, to get the first word of even after revision. the hurricane to the outside world! "So far as I know," Ray says, "it was the first time a land station ever sent an SOS to a ship!'

I guess we can sympathize with Ray when we imagine the feelings of that operator at WAX, who called the ship so slowly and prayerfully with that pathetic little sending shebang, knowing that the Siboney was due to pass and had continuous watch. Those boys got very little credit in the papers at the time, but Ray will always remember them | If their skepticism leads to a more with pride in his profession.

What is the difference between paint and varnish? If you get paint on your hands it will be soft and oily-easy to remove with turpentine or gasoline; the varnish will require more scrubbing. Paint is made by grinding pigments (colors) in drying oils. Varnish is made by melting transparent gums and mix-Titicaca, an inland sea, 161 miles ing the melted gums with similar drying oils, after these oils have been raised to a high temperature. Paint is opaque and is intended to hide surfaces. Varnish is usually transparent and is intended to reveal surfaces.

Washington. - It nearly always | Roosevelt does not require a billion President that the Congress congress begins to show signs of as-Balks serting its own will.

This is perfectly natural. Members of the house and senate recognize, or have recognized in the past, that when a President enters onto his second term he has little more in the way of trading to offer them. That is to say, the President has about exhausted political appointments and, except for special pieces of legislation, the Chief Executive cannot compensate house and senate members with political plums.

The New Deal congress in Mr. Roosevelt's first term was subservient, indeed. It gave him everything he asked. But now there are encouraging signs of a more independent attitude on the part of congress. I use the word "independent" to mean that congress has begun to examine legislative proposals from the White House in the light of the viewpoint of individual representatives and senators instead of an examination solely in the light of the argument of the President.

The Supreme court reorganization proposal brought the first sign of independence by congress. This sign broke out in the senate and there are many who believe that the senate will never yield on the President's proposal to pack the court with any additional justices of his own choosing. It is possible that, as we view history from, say ten years hence, the Supreme court reorganization plan will be shown to have been the straw that broke the President's control over a congress in which his party has more than two-thirds of the members.

Several other legislative proposals from the White House have met or are meeting real difficulties. One of them that must be regarded as important is the relief fund proposition. I imagine that, in the end, the President will get the full billion and a half that he has requested for relief purposes but the controversy over relief funds is significant.

For instance, and as an example of the undercurrent of feeling in congress, the house took a nasty slap at Relief Administrator Harry Hopkins. The house did it in a way designed to make Mr. Hopkins peevish. It cut his salary as relief administrator by two-thousand dollars a year. Now, a cut from $12,000 to $10,000 probably is unimportant as far as the monetary affect is concerned, but it was the same thing as if the house had turned Mr. Hopkins across its knees and had given him a couple of good spanks. What it does, actually, is to show Mr. Hopkins that the house is still its own boss and it demonstrates as well the house has some spunk left.

In addition to the relief fund controversy, congress is giving evidence also of more constructive opposition to control from the White House over all national policies. For example, the new farm bill is undergoing very critical analysis by the house agriculture committee. While this measure to establish what Secretary Wallace calls the "ever-normal" granary and to revive control over important farm groups was not sent to congress from the White House, everyone understands it has White House indorsement. House leaders accept it, at least, as representing the principle of AAA and, therefore, as being representative of the President's ideas.

Leaders of the farm bloc in the house are quite skeptical of the plan. Naturally, it is too early to forecast what is going to happen on this piece of legislation but it is important to note that the house is giving close and independent study instead of rushing the legislation through merely because the administration announced it was favorable to the proposition.

There is discontent in the senate also. Mr. Roosevelt's far-flung government reorganization bill has touched so many sensitive spots that some doubt actually exists whether it will get through at all,

The feeling in the seante on this matter is so widespread that Democratic Leader Robinson made a statement the other day to the effect that "failure of the senate to pass the bill will be no public calamity." systematic and thorough scrutiny of this bill and other pieces of legislation, it seems likely in my opinion that some costly blunders may be avoided.

The trouble with congress, however, when it gets into the humor we now observe, is Follow that many times it does things the Bell Cow wrong way. After all, members of the house and senate are human and they flock together behind the bell cow, if that bell cow succeeds in stirring up enough excitement.

Take the controversy over the relief funds, as a case in point. It is plain that the house feels that Mr.

and a half in new money for relief. But the house apparently does not have the courage to take an out and out position in accordance with its conviction. So it is trying to dodge the real issue by holding out for a provision in the bill that would set aside half a billion of the total for use exclusively on permanent public works under Secretary Ickes as public works administrator. (Secretary Ickes and Relief Aministrator Hopkins long have been snarling at each other.)

To get down to cases on this relief fund controversy, it actually happens that the real argument is on the side of Mr. Roosevelt. Either he needs the whole amount for relief or he does not and there is little sense in the house taking a run around the rosebush to cover a feeling of revenge. Thus, the house is shown in a rather bad light. If it has spunk enough to spank Mr. Hopkins and if it does not believe that the President needs the full amount he has requested, then why does not the house approve of only a billion and stick to that position? There is another phase of this house revolt on relief funds that ought to be examined. I mentioned earlier that the members of the house and senate no longer expected political plums from the White House. Now they are trying to get close to the political pie counter in another manner. If they can get part of the relief funds allocated for permanent public works, they have their snouts in the political trough of the old pork barrel.

There is a natural reaction for politicians when money is to be passed out and the house has been displaying that reaction to the fullest on the relief funds. The proposition, simmered down, is, however, that the time has long passed when pork barrel methods can be tolerated in congress. It is not a sound principle of representative govern-ment and it is not economical.

On the other hand, it seems to me that Mr. Roosevelt cannot escape responsibility for revival of the pork barrel custom. Throughout his first term, he allowed congress plenty of pork barrel packages and now that he is attempting to stick through his own ideas without providing the usual sop for congress, the politicians resent it.

While the congress has been fussing and fuming over legislation, in downtown Wash-Treasury ington, the Treasin Trouble ury is finding its job more and more difficult. Last week, Secretary Mor-genthau found himself in a position where he had to go into the money market for an additional eight-hundred-million dollars. He offered new government bonds in that amount and from the proceeds of their sale, he will have in the Treasury sufficient funds to keep the government going. Incidentally, this new loan will put the national debt almost to thirty-six billion, the highest point in all history.

The Treasury's latest borrowing of new money caused some surprise because it had been thought that the June 15 income tax payments would put the Treasury's balance sufficiently high to carry the government for another month or two. Notwithstanding Mr. Roosevelt's declarations that government expenses must be cut, they are continuing to expand and, consequently, it has been necessary to borrow more money in order to keep the machinery of government operating.

It is impossible to discuss the latest Treasury loan without linking to it the question of the administration's gold policy and, it is impossible to mention the gold policy without relating that the United States now has more than twelve billions in gold. The United States thus has approximately one-half of all the gold in the world. This would seem to make our nation the richest in the world, but having all of this gold stock is a very expensive proposition under the administration's gold policy.

No one seems to know how the administration will untangle itself from the gold policy. If the United States continues to maintain the present price of gold, just so long will other nations ship gold to the shores of America. We have seen gold entering the United States at the rate of sixteen million dollars a day for some days. Of course, that is an abnormal rate but the imports have been so high that presently, if the present pace is maintained we will have all of the gold and its value will be questionable as a factor in trade.

From foreign sources come rumors that many of the banking interests abroad are perfectly willing to unload the bulk of their gold on the United States. In so doing, they put themselves in a position to bargain effectively with the United States whenever the time comes for world nations to discuss money stabilization.

It was the decade that began soon after the turn of the century and ended with 1914.

Kings lolled securely on comfy thrones and dictatorships in strong nations were un-

Without shaking the foundations of the financial temple, Teddy Roosevelt was filing the alliga-tor teeth of predatory wealth.

People laughed at the mad suggestion that there could ever be another great war-let alone a world war.

With suffrage in prospect, women were going to purify politics. Taxes were a means unto an end and not the end of our means.

Standards of living climbed faster than did the costs of living. Automobiles were things to ride in at moderate speed, not engines to destroy human life with. Millions actually believed that, if prohibition by law ever became effective, drunkenness would end and crime decrease. Yes, I'm sure those were indeed the happy days—the era when the Twentieth Century limited started running and W. J. Bryan stopped.

"Until the World war, Albania's interior remained isolated, barbaric, chiefly accessible only by horseback. Then suddenly the situation was changed by road construction and the arrival of motor transport. Albanian citizens were given a hand in this transformation, for each plain-dweller was made responsible for taking care of a twenty-foot section of road. By the end of 1933 the country possessed 1,118 miles of motor roads. In mountainous regions, where the roads were continuously interrupted by mountain torrents, bridges were built. The 360 bridges in existence in 1921 were increased to 2,674 by March, 1933.

"A decade ago it took a traveler on horseback at least eleven hours to make the approximately thirty-mile trip from Tirana (Tirane) across the mountains to the great plain of Elbasan. Today the same trip can be made by automobile in less than an hour and a half by a road opened in 1933 which winds in hairpin curves up the steep slopes, crossing many bridges and Kraba pass, 2,625 feet above sea

He sent to the same number of wives a list of questions regarding the queer things about their hus-bands. The replies from the wives were 'profuse and enthusiastic."

He then sent a list to the husbands asking them to write down the queer things about themselves, and received practically no replies. The list sent

Dr. Barton to the wives asking them to put down the queer things about themselves was likewise practically unanswered.

You and I know, as did the psychologist also, that we really mag-nify the "queernesses" or the faults in others, and belittle or even fail to see the queernesses or faults in ourselves.

Look at Ourselves.

Now for most of us it does us good to take a look at ourselves physically. Are we getting too heavy? Are we sitting, standing or walking in the erect position? Are we getting enough sleep? Are we working too hard? Are we playing enough or too much? Are we putting into life and taking out of it all we should if we have good health and a good average mind? Do we get along well with other people?

I believe this little look at and into ourselves-introspection-looking at our very thoughts and why we think and do things, will make us better men and women, better neighbors, and better citizens.

However to the individual who is already looking at and into himself practically all the time, his thoughts should be directed away from himself, to the outside world, to the great life of which we all form a

Thus the individual whose thoughts Thus the individual whose thoughts are busy all day long and much of the night—thinking, planning, worrying—should remember that his body and brain are like the battery in his car. The battery before it gets completely run down is removed from the car at times and recharged. This recharging brings it up again. Similarly the brain-in a sense-should be removed from the body by sleep or rest, so that the brain itself and all the body processes it directs can get renewed or recharged.

Long Fast May Be Dangerous.

There isn't any question but that a fast day-doing without food for an entire 24 hours-would be helpful to a great many individuals whether or not they are overweight.

If you are in good health and wish to try a day of fasting, at regular or irregular intervals, drinking a little water to prevent too much loss of water from the tissues and taking a little baking soda-a half teaspoonful a couple of times during the day-or the juice of an orange, either of which will help prevent acidosis, the fast day should do you no harm; in fact, may be helpful.

And for the overweight a fast day once a week or three times in two weeks should be one simple way of getting rid of some surplus fat, because if no food is eaten the body must have a definite amount of food to keep itself going and so uses some of the surplus fat on the body for this purpose.

Dr. Thomas Addis, L. J. Poo, and W. Lew, in the Journal of Biological Chemistry, tell of their experiments on two large groups of albino rats, of similar age, sex, and body weight; one group was used immediately as a "control" (normal condition, not fasting) and the second group was analyzed after a fast of seven days, during which only water was given.

The total protein of the entire body and most of the organs showed a decrease after this week of fasting. The liver lost 40 per cent of its protein, the stomach and intestines 28 per cent, the kidneys, heart and blood each about 20 per cent, the muscle, skin and skeleton together 8 per cent, and the brain 5 per cent.

This striking loss of protein from the liver due to fasting shows that during fasting, in addition to giving up any sugar and fat stored up within it, the liver gives up a great amount of the material from which it is built or constructed.

The point then for those who are in good health and normal weight is that a fast of a day or two once in a while can do no harm. But a longer period than one or two days may be harmful because of the amount of "structural" materialthe material holding the liver together-that is given up by the liver ter your every move and moment? It's a personal question but one you'll surely want to toy with since Sew-Your-Own makes the answer so easy.

The romantic fashion at the left will make memorable occasions of your summer parties as only a lovely appearance can. Its two pieces are young, cool and streamlined. For the Miss whose interest centers about matinee goings-on, there's a dashing shorter style-it differs only in length, and either will be picturesque in marquisette, dimity, or organdie.

When you're keeping up with the Joneses, wear this stylish all occasion dress. It will do great things for you socially, and, figuratively speaking, it will cut inches from those high spots and make you feel pounds lighter. Think of what that means to chic and comfort when things get hot out your way. Dark sheer crepe is the material that lends top charm to this creation.

Easy to sew and always ready to go is this new spectator frock for young women and those who want to turn back the clock. With this number handy there's no need to pause for reflection about what to wear. And that holds good whether you're bound for sports, ing as a sun tan, as simple to sew as a dress can be, and a cinch to launder. Why not make a car-bon copy for the morning after? Remember summer chic depends upon the company your wardrobe keeps. Be sure it's amply sup-plied with cool convenient Sew-Your-Owns!

Don't Neglect Them! Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—lifatiself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure. When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. Cochrane's Outlook on Baseball Proves Tragic Observation

T HAD been a good interview. We had talked about the pennant race being between the Yankees and the Tigers, two teams very much alike in that sheer power is their reliance rather than pitching cunning. Cleveland, we had decided, was good but not quite good enough because the Indians never had the extra zip which wins games that are needed most. From there the talk turned to the luck which makes or breaks pennant contend-

"We had it for years," Mickey Cochrane said, "and we won two flags. Last year we didn't have it and we lost. This year-well, we've had a lot-of hard luck but we've stuck close. Who knows?" He paused and rapped carefully on the wooden floor of the dugout.

"Who knows," he repeated. "I feel better'n I have for four or five years. It looks like Rowe is ready to go for us and things are shaping up. But-" He paused again. "Well, anything can happen in baseball."

That was two or three minutes before game time. In the fifth inning Bump Hadley threw a fast ball.
Cochrane stepped back. It was not a bean ball, should not have hit him. But when you have been in baseball a long while and have other things on your mind you become careless. The ball struck him on the right temple.

Almost immediately old-timers in the press box were heading towards t h e clubhouse. There was no need to watch Cochrane lay there on his side for a moment and then wilt over on his back. The thud of the ball against flesh, a dull, flat sound. The way the ball dropped to the ground instead of rebounding was enough. You knew Cochrane something serious had happened. You knew that everybody in the stands realized that Mickey might not ever have a bat on his shoulder again.

Things such as that happen in baseball as in all sports. While you wait for X-rays and hope this one will not be serious you-if you have been covering games for longthink about other ones.

There was that Polo Grounds afternoon seventeen years ago when Carl Mays threw his baffling underhand fast ball and Ray Chapman, great Cleveland shortstop, was doomed. There was the afternoon in St. Louis when you heard that sickening thud again and saw Burleigh Grimes standing on the mound while Mel Ott lay silently beside the plate, lucky to be out only for the rest of the season.

Back through the years there are other memories of such moments. Merwin Jacobson ducking into two fast pitches during two years with Jack Dunn's famous pennant-winning Orioles. His life despaired of Chick Fewster, grinning as he stepped to the plate against big Jeff Pfeffer in a Yankee-Dodger training season game. Fewster still around town now, a silver plate in his skull as a memento of the fast ball that struck him down scant seconds later. Roy Corhan, White Sox shortstop, being led off the field, babbling to himself, never to be a real player again after being hit by Russ Ford's high hard one at the Old Hilltop grounds.

Mickey's Mishap Recalls Accident to Earl Combs

Little Pete Walls, a jockey playing in a pickup game against the racing writers at Saratoga last August. Earl Combs running into the fence in St. Louis. Roettger knocked unconscious by a ball that rebounded from the fence in a Brooklyn-Boston contest.

Accidents, all of them. Yet-Well, somehow it is hard to get used to the scene. Even memories of moments when comedy has followed quick upon what might have been disaster does not really help.

There have been such moments. thirty - three games in 1900, and For instance the day when Larry Doyle was skulled at the Polo Grounds. The crowd scarcely dared breathe while Larry sprawled beside home plate. Then some one brought a glass of water, lifted the great second baseman's head. Larry drank the water, arose, rubbed his head, grinned a white grin and stumbled down to first base.

Al Schacht, the baseball comedian, is considering a three-year movie contract. George Burns, the old Giant outfielder, conducts a poolroom in Gloversville.

Don Lash will do the same when he gets his diploma next February. Big Glenn Cunningham, of course, already is there and definitely plans to keep active on the track . . . Baseball players in England are paid off after every game, getting a pound for their labors. Until they saw pictures of their fracas, the Cards thought Mel Ott was the lad who socked young Don Gutteridge. Now they're talking about getting even with Adolf Luque. Only talking, though. THE GARDEN MURDER CASE UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL

CHAPTER XIV

I wandered into the den, the door of which was ajar, and walked aimlessly about the room, looking at the various pictures and etchings. Just then Vance entered. As he came in he threw the door open wider, half pocketing me in the corner behind it, where I was not immediately noticeable. I was about to speak to him, when Zalia Graem

"Philo Vance." She called his name in a low, tremulous voice. He turned and looked at the girl with a quizzical frown. "I've been waiting in the diningroom," she said. "I wanted to see you before you spoke to the others. I realized immediately, from the tone of her voice, that my presence had not been noticed.

Vance continued to look squarely at the girl, but did not speak. She came very close to him now. "Tell me why you have made me suffer so much," she said.

"I know I have hurt you," Vance returned. "But the circumstances made it imperative. Please believe that I understand more of this case than you imagine I do." "I am not sure that I understand." The girl spoke hesitantly. "But I want you to know that I trust you." She looked up at him, and I could see that her eyes were glistening. Slowly she bowed her head. "I have never been interested in any man," she went onand there was a quaver in her voice. "The men I have known have all made me unhappy and seemed always to lead me away from the things I longed for . . . She caught her breath. "You are the one man I have ever known whom I could-care for."

So suddenly had this startling confession come, that I did not have time to make my presence known, and after Miss Graem finished speaking I remained where I was, lest I cause her embarrassment.

Vance placed his hands on the girl's shoulders and held her away from him.

"My dear," he said, with a curiously suppressed quality in his voice, "I am the one man for whom you should not care." There was no mistaking the finality of his words. Vance smiled wistfully at the girl.

"Would you mind waiting in the drawing-room a little while? . . . She gave him a searching look and, without speaking, turned and went from the den.

Vance stood for some time gazing at the floor with a frown of indecision, as if loath to proceed with whatever plans he had formulated. I took this opportunity to come out from my corner, and just as I did so Floyd Garden appeared at the hall door.

"Oh, hello, Vance," he said. "I didn't know you had returned until Zalia just told me you were in here. Anything I can do for you?'

Vance swung around quickly. "I was just going to send for you.

Everyone here?" Garden nodded gravely and they're all frightened to deathall except Hammle. He takes the whole thing as a lark. I wish somebody had shot him instead of Woody."

"Will you send him in here," Vance asked. "I want to talk to him. I'll see the others presently." Garden walked up the hall, and at that moment I heard Burke speaking to Markham at the front door. Markham immediately joined us in the den. "Hope I haven't kept you waiting," he greeted Vance.

"No. Oh, no." Vance leaned against the desk. "Just in time." Markham had barely seated himself when Hammle strutted into the den with a jovial air. Vance nodded to him brusquely.

"Mr. Hammle," he said, "we're wholly familiar with your philosophy of minding your own business and keeping silent in order to avoid all involvements. A defensible attitude-but not in the present circumstances. This is a criminal case, and in the interest of justice to everyone concerned, we must have the whole truth. Yesterday afternoon you were the only one in the drawing-room who had even a partial view down the hallway. And we must know everything you saw, no matter how trivial it may seem to you."

Hammle gave in. "First of all, then," said Vance, without relaxing his stern gaze, "when Miss Graem left the room, ostensibly to answer a telephone call, did you notice exactly where she went?"

"Not exactly," Hammle returned; "but she turned to the left, toward the den. You understand, of course, that it was impossible for me to see very far down the hall, even from where I sat."

"Quite." Vance nodded. "And when she came back to the drawing-room?'

'I saw her first opposite the den door. She went to the hall closet where the hats and wraps are kept, and then came back to stand in the archway until the race was over. After that I didn't notice her either coming or going." "And what about Floyd Garden?" asked Vance. "You remember he followed Swift out of the room. Did study, and forced into the vault you notice which way they went, or what they did?"

by S. S. VAN DINE

"As I remember, Floyd put his arm around Swift and led him into the dining-room. After a few moments they came out. Swift seemed to be pushing Floyd away from him, and then he disappeared down the hall toward the stairs. Floyd stood outside the dining-room door for several minutes, looking after his cousin, and then went down the hall after him; but he must have changed his mind, for he came back into the drawing-room in short or-

"And you saw no one else in the hall?"

"No. No one else."
"Very good." Vance took a deep inhalation on his cigarette. "And now let's go to the roof-garden, figuratively speaking. You were in the garden, waiting for a train, when the nurse was almost suffocated with bromin gas in the vault. The door into the passageway was open, and if you had been looking in the direction you could easily have seen who passed up and down the corridor." Vance looked at the man significantly. "And I have a feelin' you were looking through that door, Mr. Hammle. Your reaction of astonishment when we came out on the roof was a bit overdone. And you couldn't have seen much of the city from where you had been standing, don't y' know.'

Hammle cleared his throat and

"You have me there, Vance," he admitted with familiar good-humor. "Since I couldn't make my train, I thought I'd satisfy my curiosity and stick around for a while to see what happened. I went out on the roof and stood where I could look through the door into the passage-way-I wanted to see who was going to get hell next, and what would come of it all."

"Thanks for your honesty." Vance's face was coldly formal. "Please tell us now exactly what you saw through that doorway while you were waiting, as you've confessed, for something to happen."

Again Hammle cleared his throat. "Well, Vance, to tell you the truth, it wasn't very much. Just people coming and going. First I saw Garden go up the passageway toward the study; and almost immediately he went back downstairs. Then Zalia Graem passed the door on her way to the study. Five or ten minutes later the detective-Heath, I think his name is-went by the door, carrying a coat over his arm.
A little later—two or three minutes,
I should say—Zalia Graem and the nurse passed each other in the passageway, Zalia going toward the stairs, and the nurse toward the study. A couple of minutes after that Floyd Garden passed the door on his way to the study again-"

"Just a minute," Vance interrupted. "You didn't see the nurse return downstairs after she passed Miss Graem in the passageway?" Hammle shook his head emphatically. "No. Absolutely not." Vance took another deep puff on his cigarette. "One more thing, Mr. Hammle: while you were out there in the garden, did anyone come out on the roof from the terrace gate?" "Absolutely not. I didn't see anybody at all on the roof." "And when Garden had returned downstairs, what then?" "I saw you come to the window and look out into the garden. I was afraid I might be seen, and the minute you turned away I went over to the far corner of the garden, by the gate. The next thing I knew, you gentlemen were coming out on the roof with the nurse."

Vance moved forward from the desk against which he had been

"Thank you, Mr. Hammle. You've told me exactly what I wanted to know. It may interest you to learn that the nurse informed us she was struck over the head in the passageway, on leaving the which was full of bromin fumes."

The taut silence was broken by Vance's voice. He spoke casually, but with a curious emphasis.

"I have asked you all to come here this afternoon in the hope that | land. we could clear up the very tragic situation that exists."

He was interrupted by the startling sound of a shot ominously like that of the day before. Everyone in the room stood up quickly, aghast at the sudden detonation. Everyone except Vance. And before anyone could speak, his calm authoritative voice was saying:

"There is no need for alarm. Please sit down. I expressly arranged that shot for all of you to hear-it will have an important bearing on the case . .

Burke appeared at the door. "Was that all right, Mr. Vance?" "Quite all right," Vance told him. 'The same revolver and blanks?' "Sure. Just like you told me.

And from where you said. Wasn't it like you wanted it?" "Yes, precisely," nodded Vance.
"Thanks, Burke."

The detective grinned broadly and moved away down the hall. "That shot, I believe," resumed Vance, sweeping his eyes lazily over those present, "was similar to the one we heard yesterday afternoon—the one that summoned us to Swift's dead body. It may interest God. There may be little else to you to know that the shot just fired share, but "little is much when by Detective Burke was fired from God is in it." Vance returned her gaze square-

"No, it must have sounded much closer to you," he said. "But why didn't you mention that important fact yesterday when I talked with you about the crime?"

"I— don't know," the girl stammered. "When I saw Woody dead wife, son, or daughter? How long up there, I naturally thought I'd been mistaken."

"But you couldn't have been mistaken," returned Vance, half under his breath. "And after the revolver had been fired yesterday from a downstairs window, it was surreptitiously placed in the pocket of Miss Beeton's top-coat in the hall closet. Had it been fired from upstairs it could have been hidden to far better advantage somewhere on the roof or in the study." He turned again to the girl. "By the by, Miss Graem, didn't you go to that closet after answering your telephone call here in the den?"

The girl gasped. "How-how did you know?"

"You were seen there," explained Vance. The girl turned back to Vance with flashing eyes. "I'll tell you why I went to the hall closet. I went to get a handkerchief I had left in my handbag.

Does that make me a murderer?" "No. Oh, no." Vance shook his head and sighed. "Thank you for the explanation . . . And will you be so good as to tell me exactly what you did last night when you answered Mrs. Garden's sum
