TURNER WINS PENNANT IN "AMERICANS"

Tawas Loses to White City In Last Sunday's Game

Tawas City dropped last Sunday's game to Alabaster and thereby lost all chances of representing the American Division in the fall play-off with the winners of the National Division. The honor goes to Turner who won their game with Presrott the score being 9 to 7. Turner winds up the current season with 10 victories against two defeats in winning the American championship. They displayed a lineup of powerful hitting along with good fielding and pitching, also played heads-up ball. They had what it takes to win and justly earned the right to meet the winners of the National division, let's join with the rest of the American division and wish them the best of luck.

Tawas City's loss to Alabaster was another one of those heartbreakers where everything goes wrong. It was a pitching duel between Bill Mallon of Tawas and Elmer Franks of Alabaster. Bill allowed five hits and struck out 10, while Franks allowed six hits and fanned 14 of the local swatsmen. Tawas was the first to score. Laidlaw led off the first inning by drawing a base on balls. Mattias sacrificed him to second. Quick was called out on strikes. Slosser drove a sharp grounder to short. The ball took a bad bound and went over Gackstetter's shoulder into left field, Laidlaw scoring on a very close play at the plate. In fact it was so close that Slosser went all the way to third while the Alabaster boys were telling Halligan that Laidlaw was out. Bu. Slosser tried to stretch his luck too far and attempted to score on the jangle. L. Franks, the Alabaster catcher, woke up to the fact, in time to tag him out at the plate.

Alabaster tied up the count in the 5th. Gackstetter, who had been easy meat for a fast ball was served a change of pace ball or floater. He took advantage of it and floated it into right center for two bags. E. Franks went out second to first and J. Roiter singled Gackstetter home.

Alabaster took the lead in the 6th. With one out, Baker doubled and came home on Frell's single. Tawas evened it up in the 8th. Johnson hit a grounder to third and went to second when Rollin threw past the first baseman. He took third while Rollin tossed out Shellenberger, and scored on Laidlaw's infield hit.

Alabaster scored the winning run in the 9th. Rollin singled. L. Franks and Gackstetter walked to fill the bases. E. Franks struck out J. Roiter hit to third. Staudacher threw to Laidlaw to force Rollin at the plate. Franks moved to third and Gackstetter to second. Roiter being safe at first, on a fielder's choice. At this point W. Roiter was put on to run for L. Franks. J. Roiter got cornered off first, in the attempted run down, W. Roiter scored the winning run.

Tawas lost an opportunity to score in the eighth through the breaks of the game. Laidlaw in an attempt to steal third, caught the third baseman playing in for a bunt. Franks's throw to third got by Rollin and Laidlaw was in line and the ball hit him on the leg, and dropped at Rollin's (Turn to No. 1, Back Page)

Alfalfa Must Rest During September

Iosco County farmers, with their more than 9,000 acres of alfalfa, have helped Michigan win a "National Crown" in producing one and one-quarter million acres of the valuable crop. It gives our state the distinction of producing more acres of alfalfa each year than does any other state in the United States.

If the crop is to do its best for its master in 1938 it must have a complete rest during the month of September according to tests which have recently been conducted in this and other parts of the state by Iosco State College.

Alfalfa is one plant that needs the opportunity to prepare for winter and September is evidently the critical month in the life of an Iosco County alfalfa stand. A time when it is storing root reserves in the form of starch and sugar for the winter. In order to store these reserves, according to S. T. Dexter alfalfa specialist from the college, and reduce winter killing to a minimum and at the same time insure a good first cutting in the spring of 1938 the plants must have plenty of top growth during September. This same time and seed harvesting should be done with a binder so as to leave all of the tops growth that is possible, while a second cutting for hay, if taken at all should be off the field by the middle of August or else wait until early October to make the harvest. If these practices are observed the plants have a chance to build up new growth and store food in the roots to defy our sub-zero temperatures which often occur in Iosco County.

TAWAS CITY SCHOOLS OPEN NEXT TUESDAY

No Change In High School Faculty; Two Changes In Grades

Tuesday, September 7th, has been set by the board of Education as the date for the opening of the Tawas City Public Schools. School will open at nine o'clock, to give the students a chance to arrange their schedules and to secure assignments. There will be a faculty meeting in the afternoon in order to form a tentative organization for the year.

The district handles new books at a slight percent above cost. As a result, all who desire to secure books are urged to come prepared Tuesday to secure them at once. Students often lose much time by waiting to secure the necessary supplies promptly.

The high school faculty is composed of the same members as last year. The grade faculty has two new members; that is, Mr. Nelson in the seventh-eighth grade room, and Miss Hall in the first-second grade room. Mr. Nelson holds a life certificate from the Western State Teachers College of Kalamazoo, and has nearly completed the work for a bachelor's degree from the Central State Teachers College of Mt. Pleasant. He has taught for the past five years in district, number one of Wilber Township. Miss Hall holds a life certificate and a bachelor's degree from Albion College. She did her practice teaching in the first and second grades of the Albion schools, and is otherwise prepared for primary work. She has taught for two years in the schools of Jackson county.

High school courses will be offered in mathematics, science, English language, social science, commercial and music. One period of the regular school day will be set aside for extra-curricular in music, as band, orchestra, glee club, and other group activities pertaining to music. Extra-curricular work will also be offered in speech, as oratory, declamation, extempore and debating. The work of our music and speech departments has been very successful during the past few years. All who desire to learn the game of baseball will be given an opportunity to do so this fall and next spring. The baseball team has won the championship of the Northeastern Michigan Interscholastic Baseball League, consisting of the high schools of Tawas City, East Tawas, West Branch, Whittemore, Sterling, Prescott and Standish, during the past two years. Credit toward graduation is allowed in all of the extra-curricular work mentioned above.

The condition of the school building has been somewhat improved during the summer. In addition to general cleaning and renovating, the floors of all the rooms have been waxed and new desks have been placed in the seventh-eighth grade room.

Royal Arch Banquet At Hotel Iosco, Sept. 13

Because of the disastrous fire in the Tawas City Masonic temple, it became necessary to find another place to hold the Royal Arch banquet on September 13. Arrangements were made with the Hotel Iosco in Tawas City to serve dinner at the same time and for the same price as originally set for the meal.

It is hoped that every Mason in this vicinity will attend, and will notify the member who asked him to attend, not later than September 10, that he will be there. It is hoped to have a large gathering of Masons to honor the Grand High Priest of the state of Michigan at that time.

Final arrangements will be made at the next regular meeting of Iosco Chapter, R. A. M. on Friday September 10, in their chapter rooms at East Tawas. Every Royal Arch member is urged to be present.

ENJOYABLE WEEK SPENT BY LEAGUERS

Ninth Annual Institute Comes to Successful Close Saturday

The Ninth Annual Epworth League Institute of the Saginaw district of the Methodist Episcopal Church at East Tawas came to a close Saturday morning. There seemed to be general agreement among the visiting delegates that this was one of the best Institutes ever held here. There were 155 paid registrations and the young people present represented about 30 churches in the district, from the far north, represented by the Cheboygan Leaguers, to Saginaw in the south and the tip of the thumb in the east.

It is always a happy time for the young people, and their leaders, and this year was no exception. The weather was fine all through the week, the spirit of the gathering was very friendly, and the classes and services were of a very high order.

The Institute got off to a good start on Sunday morning, August 22, with the East Tawas Methodist church filled almost to capacity. A fine sermon by the District Superintendent Rev. S. D. Eva, followed by the administration of the Lord's Supper to the gathered host of young struck a high spiritual note for the work of the week. The morning watch services directed by Rev. E. K. Seymore, of Saginaw, with Rev. Owen Geer of Dearborn as speaker were very much appreciated and set a high tone for each day. The Gailson service, held facing the lake each evening with Rev. Glen Frye, Dist. Supt. of the Grand Traverse District, bringing a deeply moving and inspiring message, were always well attended.

The evening programs, which were always open to the public, had a variety of interests and were all well received. The young people from the Madison Ave. Church of Bay City presented a religious drama on Sunday evening August 22, entitled "His Cross". It was a very fine presentation. The play by the Alpena group, "The Rival Masqueraders" was finely given and produced volumes of laughter. The "Seavenger Hunt" on Wednesday was a time of excitement and good fun which was enjoyed by the leaders as well as the young folks. It was followed by an interesting presentation of Indian relics by Rev. Mr. Silas, the Indian pastor of the mission at Oscoda.

On Thursday we were taken through the medium of the movies, by Dr. Eva, on a very interesting tour of historic places in England, made famous by Tennyson, Oliver Cromwell, Shakespeare and John Wesley. Also we saw the actual ceremony of the crowning of King George the Sixth and His Royal Consort Queen Elizabeth. Then we took a flying trip around the churches and parsonage homes of the district.

The Friday evening service was a spiritual high point of the week. Under the splendid direction of Mr. Frye and Dr. Eva, a large number of the Leaguers took a stand in definite consecration to the Christian Way of Life. Life decisions were made which we are sure will bear rich fruit in the years to come. The classes, which were held each morning from 9 A. M. to noon, were periods of real study with the various groups under different leaders studying the Christian way to meet the present conditions of life with which we are all familiar. That the young folks were in earnest is evident.

Iosco Baseball League

The Iosco County League has dwindled down to a very close two team race with one-half game separating Miner's Grove in first place and Wilber in second. Miner's Grove won from Whittemore in last Sunday's game, by a score of 20 to 5, while Wilber was taking Baldwin 11 to 9.

Next Sunday Wilber plays Minor's Grove on the East Tawas diamond. This game will be the big factor in deciding the champs for 1937. Should Minor's Grove win, their standings would read 14 won and 3 lost with one game left to play, and Wilber's standings would be 12 won and 4 lost with 2 games to play on a postponed game from earlier in the season, but if Wilber wins Sunday's game they will be out in front by half a game and would have to drop a game to either Whittemore or Baldwin, and Minor's Grove win their last game it would end up tie. With the brand of ball these teams have been playing this summer it is a safe bet that the winner of Sunday's tilt will be the winners of 1937. This game will be a hard fought game as one or the other will be put out of the running. Baldwin plays at Whittemore in the other contest scheduled for the day.

STANDINGS

Team	W	L	Pct.
Minor's Grove	13	3	.813
Wilber	12	3	.800
Whittemore	2	11	.154
Baldwin	2	12	.143

ATTACKS BRITISH ENVOY

Jap Aviator Shoots Ambassador to China . . . Congress Adjourns . . . Fails to Pass Most of 'Must' Legislation

A breathing spell! Members of the 75th congress, happy in adjournment, at last, file out of the Capitol in Washington.

Edward W. Pickard
SUMMARIZES THE WORLD'S WEEK

Jap Airman Courts Fate

A JAPANESE army aviator precipitated the gravest international Far East crisis since the fighting began in Shanghai, and perhaps indeed since the Boxer rebellion, when he swooped down upon a Chinese road to pour machine gun bullets into an automobile flying the British Union Jack from its radiator.

One of the bullets pierced the body of Sir Hughie Natchbull-Hughes, Great Britain's ambassador to China, as he sped in the car to attend a conference with British foreign service officials. The ambassador, a veteran of 30 years in the service, was rushed 50 miles to Country hospital where an operation was performed.

Sir Hughie was the highest ranking British official in China, where Great Britain has enormous interests at stake. He was attacked by a Japanese airplane which did not even have the right of a belligerent—since no war had been declared—while his conveyance was flying the British colors. The last comparable incident in China was the Boxer rebellion of 1900, when the German Ambassador von Kettler was shot and killed in Peiping.

Hooray! School Is Out!

EVEN if there were more than a few threats of "Wait'll I get you after school," the nation's lawmakers were happy as schoolboys at the end of the term, as the first session of the Seventy-fifth congress came to a close at last. The senators and representatives, fairly bogged down with months of wrangling, much of it futile, through the intolerable Washington summer, were glad of release, even if such release carried the implication that there might be a special session in October.

But the legislators left the Capitol in the realization that the session just ended will probably become known less for what it did than what it did not do.

Four out of five of President Roosevelt's major "must" measures it did not pass; the fifth it passed only with reservations which put a new complexion upon it.

Congress did not pass the wages and hours bill. After being passed by the senate in unacceptable form, with the understanding that it would be improved in the house, the bill was still buried with the house rules committee when the bell rang.

Congress did not pass the new crop control bill which includes Secretary Wallace's "ever-normal granary" project. It was agreed that this legislation be brought up during the first week of the January session or the special session.

It did not pass the President's desired legislation for re-organization of the executive department. It did vote the White House six new secretaries, though.

It did not pass the proposal to increase the membership of the Supreme court by six justices, who would apparently be selected with a view to insuring the constitutionality of New Deal measures. By a vote of 70 to 20 it permitted a substitute measure, which would have added the justices one at a time, to die a natural death in committee.

In addition to failing to enact this legislation demanded by the chief executive, congress defeated the Norris bill to create seven "little TVA's," and the crop insurance bill, proposing a revolving fund of $100,000,000. The senate failed to ratify the sanitary convention with Argentina, modifying the restrictions on imports of meat and live stock.

However, congress did:

Pass the Wagner low-cost housing bill, but with restrictions on the unit cost which will, it is charged, make the program virtually unavailable for New York and other large cities which constitute the principal slum problems. The $526,000,000 measure was on the President's "must" list.

Pass a sugar quota which may be vetoed by the President. He threatened to veto such a bill if it limited the output of Puerto Rico and Hawaii to 126,000 and 29,000 short tons annually, and it does just that.

Extend the neutrality law to prohibit the shipment of arms, ammunition and implements of war to belligerents or extension of credit to them.

Pass the Guffey act, creating a commission to fix prices and control the marketing of bituminous coal.

Appropriate $1,500,000,000 for work relief in the current fiscal year.

Pass a bill to outlaw personal holding companies and other alleged means of tax evasion.

Passed a reform bill for the lower courts, designed to speed appeals to the Supreme court and permit the Department of Justice to intervene in cases involving the constitutionality of a statute.

Ratified the Buenos Aires "peace treaties," which include a consultative pact for common course of action when war anywhere threatens the American republics.

Extended the CCC three years. The President had asked that it be made permanent.

Passed a farm tenancy bill to help share croppers buy their own farms. This provides for the expenditure of $10,000,000 the first year, $25,000,000 the second year and $50,000,000 in succeeding years.

Railroad Strike Threatens

ONLY successful mediation by the United States government appeared as a chance to prevent a nation-wide strike of 350,000 railroad workers as railroad representatives flatly refused the 20 per cent pay increase demanded by the "big five" railroad brotherhoods in Chicago conference. The unions said their only recourse was to call out conductors, engineers, firemen, switchmen and trainmen.

Federal mediation would automatically postpone the strike 30 days. The national mediation board named Dr. William M. Leiserson, one of its members, to conduct hearings.

Railroads' financial condition precluded the granting of wage increases, said H. A. Enochs, chairman of the carriers' committee. The increase requested would add $116,000,000 a year to operating costs, of which $2,000,000 would be for extra social security taxes and $4,000,000 for extra retirement fund taxes, he said.

Planes Land Without Eyes

AT OAKLAND, CALIF., civilian and army fliers proved that air transport planes can now be landed under conditions which prevent the pilot from gaining the slightest glimpse of the ground. Using only a radio beam for "eyes," pilots made 100 perfect "blind" landings at the airport there with a Boeing 247-D plane, of the type now used on several of the nation's commercial air lines.

The cockpit windows were covered with metal screens to prevent their sneaking so much as a peek at the field. Many pilots flew the ship and, although some of them had never operated that type of plane before, not a single landing was made outside the 200-foot runway.

So successful were the tests, the bureau of air commerce, army, navy and commercial airlines representatives present agreed that the system would be adopted for the country as a whole. The system, which makes it possible to bring a ship safely to earth, even through snow, rain, fog or dust, was called by authorities the most dramatic thing of its kind since the first flight of the Wright brothers.

Andrew W. Mellon Is Dead

ANDREW W. MELLON, reputedly one of the four richest men in the United States and secretary of the treasury in three cabinets, died of uremia and bronchial pneumonia at the home of his son-in-law at Southampton, N. Y. He was eighty-two years old.

Shortly before his death he had fulfilled the ambition of his life by giving to the nation what he termed the "nucleus" of one of the finest art collections in the world. The collection he gave was valued at $50,000,000. Excavation is now under way for a $15,000,000 building to house the collection in Washington.

Japanese Turn Tide

SUCCESS in landing thousands of reinforcements from its transport ships, the Japanese appeared ready to turn the tide of ground battle in the undeclared war in China, while their navy threw a blockade around 800 miles of the Chinese seacoast from Shanghai nearly to Canton, in South China.

Only at terrific cost were the reinforcements getting ashore. Many entire landing parties were blown to bits as they attempted to take shore positions under a blaze of machine gun fire and in the face of artillery shells and land mine explosions.

More than a quarter of a million men were reported engaged in the fighting along a front stretching from Shanghai northwestward to Tientsin, Peiping, Nankow and Changpei, deep in Chahar province and north to the Great Wall.

At the northern end of the front the pro-Japanese Mongol troops of Prince Teh battled combined Chinese regular and communist armies. Japanese reported the capture of Kalgan, capital of Chahar, shutting off Chinese communication with Mongolia, while the routed Chinese troops fled to the south. Japanese forces broke through the stubborn Chinese defenses at Nankow pass and penetrated the Great Wall. They were reported to have succeeded in escaping narrowly a strategic Chinese maneuver which would have trapped 30,000 Japanese troops south and west of Peiping. Chinese positions south of Peiping were dominated by the well-equipped, well-trained and mechanized Japanese army, which captured the commanding high land.

But despite all this activity to the north it was upon Shanghai that the full horror of the war descended. The international settlement was little safer than any of the rest of the great port, except, perhaps, the native district of Chapei, which was gutted by flames and torn by bombs and shells. After two weeks of fighting in Shanghai, there were reported to be 5,160 casualties in the international settlement and the French concession, including 1,760 fatalities.

Guffey's Unholy Three

SINCE the fight on the President's court plan began in the senate, it has become more and more obvious that a serious split impends in the Democratic party ranks. It was not a secret that certain of the senators and representatives were marked for extinction, fish fries and harmony dinners notwithstanding.

But few expected the bombshell that broke when Sen. Joseph F. Guffey of Pennsylvania, in a radio speech just before the end of the session, openly named Senators O'Mahoney of Texas, Burke of Nebraska and Wheeler of Montana as senators who would not return to Washington after the next elections.

Burke summed up reply of the three men attacked when he said that if Guffey's statement were true "we might just as well forget about Jefferson Island and harmony dinners and get ready for a real battle."

Wheeler, on the senate floor, said that if the "Democratic bosses . . . want to drive us out of the Democratic party they will not have any difficulty in doing so. I say to you (Guffey) that if you nominate your governor of Pennsylvania or yourself for President of the United States, you will not have to drive us out."

Admiral Yarnell Protests

UNCLE SAM was brought nearer than ever to the unofficial war in North China when a shell exploded on the deck of the Augusta, flagship of the United States Asiatic fleet, killing Freddie John Falgout, a seaman, and wounding 18 others of the crew. The ship was lying at anchor in the Whangpoo river in the heart of the International Settlement of Shanghai. It was impossible to determine whether the shell had been fired by the Chinese or Japanese.

Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, commander of the fleet, warned the governments of both nations against shellfire over American and foreign warships. The President and the State department were inclined to leave diplomatic overtures to the military, naval and diplomatic officers in China. The President declared that under the circumstances accidents such as the one which beset the Augusta were bound to occur.

Santander Falls to Franco

SPAIN'S thirteen-month-old civil war drew one step nearer to a close as Gen. Francisco Franco's army captured the city of Santander, last important government outpost on the northern coast. As the insurgent troops filed in to occupy the city, it was apparent that the remaining government army of 50,000 men was trapped in the hills southeast of the city in an area 15 miles square. Probably they were not even aware that Santander's "iron ring" had broken.

During the last of the twelve days of Franco's furious thrusts, the city's streets had run red with the blood of anarchists' victims, as thirst, hunger and terrorism crazed the populace. By the thousands, civilians were fleeing by sea—the only way—to France. Every available craft was put into service; hundreths even attempted a getaway in rowboats, canoes, dories and other small craft, some of them using improvised sails made from sheets.

"What's in a Name?"

By FLOYD GIBBONS
Famous Headline Hunter

YOU know, boys and girls, when old Bill Shakespeare asked, "What's in a name?" he didn't seem to think that names made very much difference. But I guess Bill could find plenty of people to give him an argument on that subject. One of them is John T. Smith of Ozone Park, N. Y.

John Smith isn't such an unusual name, when you come to think of it. Nor was John such an unusual sort of a fellow. At the time this story opens—around April 1, 1935—he was working as a plumber's helper for a large concern that kept its own medical staff.

One day, while threading a piece of pipe, John cut his finger. That isn't an unusual occurrence, either. But add those things all up together, and they'll give you the strangest doggone predicament that ever a man got into.

John paid no attention to his cut finger, but two or three days later it had begun to swell up a bit. His foreman took a look at it and told him he'd better report it to the company doctor.

The doctor was pretty busy. He looked at John's finger, asked him his name, and told him to get the necessary papers from his boss and report at the hospital. "I'll notify the hospital you're coming," he told John. "Be there at eleven o'clock."

Sent to Hospital for Small Operation.

John got the necessary papers from his boss and showed up at the hospital on the dot of eleven. He had had an infected finger before, and knew pretty well what was done about it. They froze the finger, slit it open with a lance, banded it and sent you on home. But it seemed to John that this hospital took a lot more trouble over a sore finger.

A nurse took John's name and said, "Oh yes, we're expecting you." She told him to take a seat in the waiting room, and there John waited for an hour. Then the nurse came back and took him upstairs, opened a door and led him into a room. A few minutes later another nurse came in with a bed jacket. "Take your clothes off and get into bed," she told him.

Well sir, it began to look to John as if someone had made a mistake. "Do you know what's the matter with me?" he asked the nurse. "Of course we do," the nurse replied. "Well then what's all this fuss about?" John wanted to know. "Oh, we do things right in this hospital," she said. And with that she left the room.

John was ready to agree with the nurse. Here was a big, luxurious private room, a swell looking nurse, and all kinds of service, over nothing but a sore finger. Do things right in that hospital? You're doggone tootin' they did. John undressed and got into bed. By that time it was three o'clock, and the boss would be wondering where he was. When the nurse came in again he asked her how long he'd be kept there. "Why," said the nurse, "YOU'RE GOING TO STAY HERE OVER NIGHT."

They Wouldn't Listen to John.

"I thought she was kidding me," says John, "but I found out different. In a few minutes in came a doctor with a third nurse. The nurse jabbed a needle into one of John's fingers, but it wasn't the sore finger. John tried to tell her she had the wrong one, but she snapped, 'I know what I'm doing,' and John shut up. After a while he said, 'Say, do you know what's the matter with me?' The doctor said yes. The nurse paid no attention at all. She thrust another needle into his arm and shot in some sort of drug. The drug made John feel tired. He wanted to go to sleep, but by that time he was pretty sure something was wrong. He was beginning to get scared.

The drug dulled John's brain, but he fought off the drowsiness that was coming over him. Two more nurses came in with an orderly who was pushing a table on wheels. They put John on the table and wheeled him off to an operating room. John roused himself from the stupor the drug had put him in and once more he asked, "Are you sure you know what's the matter with me?"

"But my voice was weak," John says, "and they paid no attention to me. I began to feel sick as well as weak. I could see all sorts of instruments laid out on the tables around me. The orderly wheeled my table under a big flood light. The nurses began getting ready a lot of bandages. Then I knew something was wrong. They were going to perform some sort of a BIG OPERATION."

And Did the Doctor Laugh Then!

"I looked for the doctors. There were three of them, talking together in a corner. That was where I made my last desperate effort. I was almost passing out from the effect of the drugs I had been given, but I managed to raise one arm and motion one of the doctors over.

"That doctor was the only one who would listen to me, and thank God he did, for another nurse was coming over with the ether and in another minute I would have been unconscious. I said, 'Doctor, are you sure you know what's the matter with me? Are you sure you've got the right man? What's all this fuss about Anyway? All I've got is an infected finger.'"

Well sir, the doctor lifted the sheet that they'd thrown over John and took a good look at him. Then he started to laugh. But it wasn't any laughing matter to John. He had almost gone through an operation he didn't need!

John never did find out what they were going to do to him. Maybe they were only going to take an arm or a leg off. Then, on the other hand, they might have been going to do something really serious. But what he does know is that his name got him into that jam. There are just too doggone many John Smiths in the world, and our John Smith had almost got himself cut open on account of another John Smith's ailment.

When the doctors got through laughing they told one of the nurses to dress John's finger. Then they put him back to bed. They told him he'd have to stay there all night because of the drug they'd shot into his arm. But as soon as the nurse was out of the room, John put on his clothes and beat it out of the hospital.

There were too many John Smiths in the world to take any chances. Any minute they might bring another one in, and then they were liable to have John down in the operating room again, sharpening up the knives and breaking out the ether.

God's Gift to Haydn.

The famous composer, Haydn, once asked how it happened that his church music was almost always of an animating, cheerful, and even gay description, answered, "I can't have it otherwise; I write according to the thoughts which I feel. When I think upon God, my heart is so full of joy that the notes leap and dance as it were from my pen; and since God has given me a cheerful heart, it will be easily forgiven me that I seek Him with a cheerful spirit."

Much Dust in the Lungs

There is precipitated in the lungs of the average man during the course of a single year more than 1.2 pounds of various dusts. The average dust fall in a large city is approximately 230 tons per square mile per month, according to an investigation. An adult takes into his lungs more than 500 cubic feet of air each day. This air, in passing through the respiratory organs, which are constructed as a perfect filter, precipitates practically all of its dust with the incidental germs.

Court Now Liberal

Washington.—The Supreme court of the United States has a new member, and to that extent, President Roosevelt has succeeded in reorganizing the highest court in the land. With the nomination by the President of Sen. Hugo L. Black, Alabama Democrat, and confirmation of that nomination by the senate, we find a Supreme court that stands for liberal interpretations of the Constitution by a vote of six to three on most questions.

While it is important, of course, to know that Senator Black, the new justice, is nearly 100 per cent New Dealer, it is much more important to the country as a whole to think of Mr. Black hereafter as being fully aware of the reasons why he was selected to the lifetime job at $20,000 per year. It is likewise important to remember the reasons why Mr. Black was selected when one examines the so-called balance of power in the Supreme court.

It seems to me that Mr. Black will enter upon his duties next October under one of the gravest handicaps that ever was set upon the shoulders of a Supreme court justice. Because of this handicap, and because of the reasons lying back of his appointment, I greatly fear that Senator Black can never be a great member of a great tribunal.

In the first instance, his record in the senate, covering a period of ten years, has demonstrated to most everyone that he has a keen mind, but the fact remains, and I think it cannot be disputed, the new justice lacks the poise which always has been an attribute of outstanding judges. I hope he has the qualities that will enable him to grow and become a good justice from the legal standpoint; I hope this for the sake of the country as a whole and for the sake of the judicial structure of our government. But after observing him as an independent writer over the last ten years I think I would be unfair to those who read these lines if I did not characterize Mr. Black's as a decidedly mediocre appointment.

Again, the fact that nearly all Washington observers and a very great number of officials do not expect much legal wisdom from the new justice is traceable more to the conditions under which Mr. Black received the honor than to Mr. Black himself.

Let us examine the reasons that lie back of Mr. Roosevelt's selection of Mr. Black. In this case, as in the case of many lesser appointments, the motives, the politics, the underlying objectives have not been stressed anywhere. In order to understand the situation, it is necessary to review several years of history on one line and it is likewise necessary to examine various incidents marking Mr. Black's career in the senate. Out of this maze of detail, certain significant and more or less definite conclusions appear.

Along the one side of the examination we find Senator Black consistently supporting President Roosevelt's New Deal programs wherever and whenever he found them. We note as well intolerance on his part for those persons and those arguments running counter to New Deal policies. Thirdly, we cannot overlook various senate investigations conducted by Senator Black for we know that in most of these he was carrying out orders from the White House. That is, Senator Black was engaged in expeditions of smear, of muckraking, and in needless exposure by way of senate investigations, in order that if there were flashbacks someone other than the President would be in the white light of criticism.

Casting aside many of the assaults on Mr. Black's personal record, and turning to the other phase of the situation that culminated in his selection for the court, it must be plain to anyone knowing all the facts that President Roosevelt had a definite purpose in selecting the Alabamian. This phase also requires a bit of review.

When the President suddenly demanded that congress reorganize the Supreme court and make provision for the appointment of six new justices of his own choosing, he created an enormous split in the Democratic party. He alienated many sections of the South and at the same time provided many old-line southern Democrats with ammunition which they could use to justify their positions in opposing Mr. Roosevelt on many other phases of legislation.

Court Split Party

I do not mean to say that all of the southern Democrats turned against the President because that is untrue. There were possibly a half dozen senators from the South and an equal proportion of representatives who are sticking by the President and will continue to support him. That fact, however, does not alleviate the condition. Senator Black was among those who stayed with the President through thick and thin. He never was an exceedingly popular man among his colleagues. Add to this the capacity of using harsh language in the extreme and one finds that he was not the most popular choice among the senators for the job to which he has been elevated. From various quarters, therefore, I have heard observations to the effect that Mr. Roosevelt appointed Senator Black with full knowledge of the facts I have related. He could and did slap at some members of his own party for failing to go along with him on the court packing plan and some other New Deal legislation like the wages and hours program. He showed certain groups and cliques in the senate and house that he is boss.

Then, in selecting a man from the deep South undoubtedly the President figured it would be influential in pulling back to him some of the support which he certainly has lost among local politicians in the southern states. Views of this test of political strategy differ greatly, but whether he gains or whether he loses on that score, there certainly is ground for belief that the reasons were as I have given them.

There is also another reason for the appointment of Mr. Black. Of course, everyone realized that Mr. Roosevelt would name a man of New Deal leaning. Moreover, everyone recognized that it would be strictly a personal appointment as far as the President was concerned. So the stage was set for appointment of a man of more or less radical tendencies—but no one expected the choice that was made.

Now, the senate long has operated almost as a high class group. Every senator considers his colleagues with great deference and respect. This is senatorial courtesy. Does it not seem quite reasonable then, to consider that Mr. Roosevelt went into the senate to pick a new justice with the full realization that the nomination would be debated in gentlemanly fashion; that senatorial courtesy would tone down the barbs and the darks and the personal attacks that would probably obtain if the name of a private citizen were submitted? I cannot know the President's mind, obviously, yet I have heard these conclusions stated so many times that they cannot be wholly disregarded. New Dealers consider the appointment clever from the standpoint of senate debate, and those opposed to the New Deal called it a smart trick. So there is very little disagreement.

May Solidify Court

I called attention earlier to the effect of the conditions under which Mr. Black enters the court. I think examination of them is vital. They are important for the reasons I have set down and they are important from another standpoint.

It is pure conjecture, of course, but I am going to mention the possibility that Senator Black's entry into the court membership may possibly create resentment among the other justices. Each of them will certainly know about all of the various undercurrents, the gossip, and the more or less obvious facts involved in the appointment.

I have been wondering then whether the other members of the court, even liberal members like Justices Stone, Brandeis, and Cardozo, may not feel that Mr. Roosevelt has subjected them to unjustified terms. I mean by that, is there not a possibility of them feeling that the President is seeking to gain decisions along his own line of reasoning rather than on the basis of justice and law?

As I said, this is pure conjecture. Nevertheless, I think it will be agreed that it is a logical thought, because the Supreme court justices, after all, are just as human as you and anyone else.

Carrying this thought a little further, what will be the effect upon the old conservative members of the court like Justices McReynolds and Butler and Sutherland? Will they regard the Black appointment as a direct thrust at them personally? If they do, it seems to me the logical result would be to make them more conservative than they now are.

I do not mean to imply dishonesty or unfairness to any member of the court. I know some of them personally and I respect every one of them. I merely call attention to these things as among the possible results in the appointment of a man to the Supreme court who may have been not the worst appointment possible but surely, all conditions considered, it was far from the best.

Politically, the Black appointment is likely to enter into the 1938 congressional elections. There seems no way by which the matter can be avoided as an issue. It is only through those elections of senators and representatives that the people can express themselves, and nearly everyone agrees now that the name of Justice Black will enter into numerous state and district political battles.

Let Bill Farnsworth Pass on Blackburn's View of Joe Louis

(Wilton "Slim" Farnsworth, who devoted 30 years to journalism before deciding to turn to the crasser fields of endeavor, sits in as guest columnist for Hugh Bradley this week. He was a former New York sports editor and is now general manager of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club.)

BY BILL FARNSWORTH

ASKED Jack Blackburn, a great fighter in his day and now boxing instructor and trainer of Joe Louis, just how he figured the Brown Embalmers would have done against former heavyweight champions. His replies are mighty interesting. Here they are:

AGAINST JOHN L. SULLIVAN—"I never saw John L., but I understand he was a stand-still fighter who relied on one punch to win. I am sure that Joe's speed and punching power would have been too much for Sullivan."

AGAINST JIM CORBETT—"Corbett was foxy and Louis would have to tag him. They fought 25-round battles in Corbett's day, and I think Joe would have finally connected in the later rounds. If it went the limit then Joe would have lost the decision."

AGAINST FITZSIMMONS—"Louis would be too strong for Fitz—just as Jeffries was—and strength would have decided this one. Fitz wasn't fast, but crafty, and Louis couldn't have eased up for a second. But he could stop an opponent cold with either hand."

AGAINST JEFFRIES—"Jeff was big but slow. He was a powerful puncher, but Joe punches just as hard and he would have speed on his side. It would be a great fight until one or the other landed. In this bout Louis' speed would be his ace in the hole."

AGAINST TOMMY BURNS—"Burns was too small. He couldn't punch a lick. I think Louis could name the round in this fight."

AGAINST JOHNSON—"Jack was a great defensive boxer. I have boxed with both Johnson and Louis. Joe throws much more leather and hits much harder. Johnson might stand him off for a while with his great defensive skill but would witter finally under Louis' terrific punching."

AGAINST WILLARD—"This would be just another Dempsey-Willard affair. Barring size, Louis has everything to make him the winner."

AGAINST DEMPSEY—"This would be a FIGHT. How I'd love to see this one. Two men evenly matched in strength—plenty of it—speed and punching ability. If Joe got the least bit careless it would be all over. And the same would go for Dempsey if he slipped up for a second. Either could win by a kayo. Purely a matter of who landed first. If it went the limit I think Louis would get the nod on points."

AGAINST TUNNEY—"Gene would be tough to tag and might stand off Louis until the final bell. I don't think Tunney could flatten Joe as he did Dempsey. With the bout going the limit Joe's harder punching and boxing ability would give him a slight edge."

AGAINST SCHMELING—"Joe has no alibi to offer for their fight last summer—and I will let their next bout give the answer."

AGAINST SHARKEY, CARNERA, BAER AND BRADDOCK—"The records speak for themselves."

When Lefty Gomez steps out of the dugout to go to the box he always puts one foot in the tray that holds the bats. Does it even if he has to push a bat or two out of the way to make room for his dogs. Also it is his proud boast that he never has so dared fate as to step on the third base foul line.

Ty Cobb is just beginning to show interest in reading about baseball. . . . During his playing days he said he was too busy. . . . Myril Hoag, Yankee outfielder, has the smallest feet in the major leagues. . . . He wears a size four shoe on one and a four and a half on the other. . . . The Detroit Tigers are the only team in the big leagues run entirely by catchers, Mickey Cochrane, Del Baker and Cy Perkins.

NOT IN THE BOX SCORE:

FIVE fillies and six colts have won the Hambletonian, the rich trotting stake decided at Goshen, N. Y., every year. Only one filly, Regret, has won the Kentucky Derby, the running race to which the Hambletonian most closely compares in the matter of general interest. . . . Tommy Blodeau, catcher and captain of the 1937 Harvard baseball team, may sign a Red Sox contract any day now. . . . The St. Louis Cards have signed Max Surkout, fifteen-year-old Pawtucket, R. I., pitcher. The cradle snatchers will send him to Rochester. . . . For some reason or other the St. Nicholas Palace, probably the best known of smaller fight arenas, has changed its name to the Royal Windsor.

Mike Jacobs, the man who drove Madison Square Garden's 600 millionaires out of the boxing business, is proud of the fact insurance companies rate him as a half-million-dollar risk. . . . It continues difficult for the average citizen to understand the brainwork of racing officials.

It pays to referee prize fights. Chicagoans report that the cocktail bar of Tommy Thomas, the former featherweight, has improved 50 per cent since he handled the Louis-Braddock championship changing. . . . Jack Dempsey is predicting that the son of the late Billy Miske may some day disprove that myth which says sons never follow in the footsteps of first-class fighting fathers.

Terry Denies Rumors He'll Head Farm System

Bill Terry still denies those rumors that he is to become general manager of the Giants' farm system next year. When pressed he ends the conversation by remarking that his contract as manager runs through 1938. . . . Those rumors that Pie Traynor is through at Pittsburgh are becoming stronger. . . . Glenn Wright still is hitting home runs with the bases full while managing the Wenatchee club in the Western International league. Also does some relief pitching when regular hurlers falter. . . . In spite of frantic hot weather pleas of the players nearly all American league managers ban swimming in the pool in that swank Washington hotel at which they stay. The theory, also held by various football coaches, is that swimming tires and softens athletes engaged in other sports.

Bill Terry

Gabby Hartnett's most valuable souvenir is the catcher's mitt he used in his first major league game. . . . Napoleon Lajoie, one of the greatest of all-time batters and second basemen, took such good care of his eyes that when he rode on trains he refused to look out of the window. Said the telegraph poles flashing past the window were bad for his vision.

New York Racing commissioners get sore when dog track operators charge they are being discriminated against. The officials say dog tracks can operate with as much freedom as the race courses if they employ the same bookmaking system of betting. The trouble is that it does not work out very well at the dog tracks, which need the certificate or pari-mutuel form of wagering to rake in heavy dough from small customers. . . . George Lamaze has added a new gag at his fancy Arrowhead Inn by refusing to have menus printed.

Casual question from a gentleman who long has noted how well that nation builds and operates other ships. . . . "Do the British really want to win those international yacht races or do they think the favorable and sympathetic advertising which goes to their perennial losers helps with the national propaganda?"

Hal Schumacher considers it unlucky to sit on the left side of the bench. . . . Johnny Evers, the famous Cubs' infielder, always wore his stockings inside out when luck was needed to settle a tough series. A heavy woolen sweater, worn in all kinds of weather, seemed to satisfy Hans Wagner that he was wooing fortune properly. For years Walter Johnson used to stand on the same spot each day when he warmed up in the home park. . . .

Elephants with trunks turned up are the good luck charms of athletes as well as of celebrated financiers and eminent publishers. Auto race drivers still tell of Hughie Hughes, who had dozens of ivory elephants and almost always wore one of them suspended from his neck by a chain.

One day at Uniontown he was standing beside the track listening to friends congratulating him on winning a race where he had driven superbly and escaped death by inches at least a dozen times.

"Funny part about it," laughed Hughes, turning his back to the track for a moment. "I guess I've been overplaying this luck thing all along. Fact is, I forgot my elephant this morning and haven't had it on all day."

A car with a driver anxious to finish with some portion of the prize money, came speeding down the track. It hit Hughes and tossed him a hundred feet through the air before he landed—dead.

Celebrates 27th Birthday in Iron Lung

Frederick D. Snite, Jr., of Chicago who recently celebrated his twenty-seventh birthday lying in an iron lung—the machine that does his breathing for him. It is his second year in the machine since he was stricken with infantile paralysis in China and he expects to spend several more in it before he is able to do his own breathing and walking. His girl friend Rosemary O'Farrell, left, and his sister Mary, right, visit him.

U. S. Conducts Campaign to Preserve Wild Game

Safety Areas in Country Are Being Enlarged.

Washington.—The government is spending millions of dollars to protect and propagate big game which pioneers of the West almost wiped out in the last century.

Scores of big-game preserves have already been established and state and national laws have been passed for the protection of the relatively small number of big game left.

This campaign to prevent the extinction of big game from the United States was begun on a large scale only a few years ago. Already it has more than doubled the number of many animals and birds.

Workers under the Works Progress administration are improving five federal big-game preserves in North Dakota, Nebraska, Wyoming, Montana and Oklahoma. The work is being supervised by the United States biological survey.

Eastern Waterfowl Protected. Hundreds of other projects for improving wildlife habitat already have been completed, are under construction or are planned. These

The largest of the five preserves is the Wichita mountains wildlife refuge, comprising 61,480 acres devoted to the perpetuation of buffalo, elk, deer, Texas longhorn steers, as well as turkey, quail, prairie chickens, wild ducks and geese.

Another federal big-game refuge is being established near Moiese, Mont. Known as the national bison range, it comprises 18,521 acres devoted primarily to bison, although it also offers sanctuary for elk, deer, mountain sheep, beaver, blue grouse and wild ducks.

Cure of Leprosy Claimed by African Witch Doctor

Buluwayo, Rhodesia.—Witch doctors in Rhodesia say they can cure leprosy, even when it is so far advanced that the white man's medicine is of no avail.

A native, crippled by the disease, was carried into a native commissioner's office. The local witch doctor came with him.

"Incurable," said the medical officer who examined the patient. "I guarantee to cure him," reported the African practitioner.

Three months later doctor and patient were back. The medical officer examined the patient and pronounced him completely cured.

The witch doctor refused to explain how he did it, but hinted that the treatment was a drastic one, on the principle of "kill or cure."

YOUNGEST EVANGELIST

Charles Jaynes, Jr., seven years old, of Peoria, Ill., who was ordained recently in Peoria Trinity tabernacle before 1,500 men and women. The young minister is on a tour of the country conducting church meetings and is accompanied by a nurse and tutor. The boy is the son of revivalists.

include 17 waterfowl refuges along the Atlantic coast from Canada to the gulf where ducks may stop on their southward and northward flight without fear of guns.

Virtually every state has from two to ten wildlife refuges which protect animals and birds native to that region. The total of these is in excess of 5,000,000 acres.

The new western preserves, however, are the most extensive projects for preserving big game which once roved the great plains in large numbers. The five preserves comprise more than 120,000 acres.

The smallest is Sully's hill game preserve, near Devil's lake, N. D., containing approximately 1,000 acres where buffalo, elk, white-tailed deer, as well as ring-necked pheasants, wild geese and ducks and other species of birds, find sanctuary.

Elk Refuge in Wyoming. The federal elk refuge at Jackson, Wyo., contains 18,737 acres originally established for winter feeding of elk. It also provides sanctuary for deer, as well as for sage grouse, wild ducks and geese.

Near Valentine, Neb., is 20,000-acre Fort Niebara game preserve, where buffalo, elk, deer, beaver, as well as sharp-tailed grouse and prairie chickens, are protected. The project is 90 per cent completed.

Colonel Once Made King Get Hair-Cut

Edmonton, Alta.—Colonel Louis Scott, Edmonton army officer, says he is probably the only man in the world who ordered King George VI to get a hair-cut and was obeyed. Colonel Scott said the king, then the duke of York, was attending a Royal Air Force training school under his command in 1918 when he appeared one day in ranks with his hair shaggy. "I told him to get a hair-cut before next parade, and he did," Colonel Scott recalled.

Skeletons Are Baffling Paris Taxation Experts

Paris.—Taxation experts of the French republic are baffled by M. Jean Lavalette, who keeps a little shop in the Rue de L'Ecole de Medicine in Paris.

"Skeletons, half skeletons, skulls, all sections," reads the sign outside the shop. A real skull hanging outside makes it plainer.

Is M. Lavalette a producer? This is important, for on January 1 the turnover tax on retail sales was abolished and replaced by a 6 per cent tax on manufactured articles in the last stage of their production.

M. Lavalette mounts skeletons, building them up out of parts. Does that make him a producer?

One way out would be for the customs to collect the tax, as most of the skeletons come from abroad. But there is no fixed scale of charges for skeletons, so how much is 6 per cent?

M. Lavalette thinks that the tax collectors might as well give it up. His total earnings for last month were 15 francs—about 93 cents.

MISS PARIS, 1937

Only seventeen years of age, with curly blonde hair and a naive smile, Lily Lamb, who has been designated "Miss Paris, 1937," shows a divergent trend from the frail beauty of former winners. Miss Lamb was elected as beauty queen at the Casino de Trouville from a multitude of candidates at the Paris International exposition.

Birds Select Odd Places to Build Their Nests

Robin Makes Home in Buffalo Skull in Park Museum.

Yellowstone Park, Wyo.—With more than 2,000,000 acres of woodland from which to choose, birds in Yellowstone National park are selecting strange places to nest, park ranger naturalists report.

A robin in the Old Faithful area disdainfully passed up the thick sand of lodgepole pines and decided to make its home in a buffalo skull hanging in the museum.

A white-crowned sparrow in the same vicinity decided that the ground in the museum amphitheater would be the ideal location for her offspring. She reared one brood there, decided that the location was too public and moved into a tree for her second family.

Desiring complete privacy in a one-family cottage another robin chose a convenient location behind a transom in the home of the assistant to the park superintendent, for her two families of four each while still another robin has chosen the superintendent's home as being suitable environment for raising a family.

At the Old Faithful museum the housing problem was reported as being acute, all apartments in the many bird houses being full. Mountain chickadees, bluebirds, tree swallows, white-crowned sparrows, and robins all live in the same block of houses.

Two hundred sixteen species of birds make their homes in the park, coming from the Gulf of Mexico, the south Pacific coast, and the north Pacific coast. Among the rarer species in Yellowstone are trumpeter swans, which are nearing extinction, and sand hill cranes. Ranger naturalists are able to point out dozens of species on nature walks which they conduct for the benefit of park visitors.

LESSON TEXT—Leviticus 19:11-18, 32-37. GOLDEN TEXT—As ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise. Luke 6:31.

PRIMARY TOPIC—At Harvest Time. JUNIOR TOPIC—At Harvest Time. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Championing the Rights of Others. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—My Responsibility for Social Justice.

Labor Day—in this year of our Lord 1937—looks out upon a world deeply divided in opinions of what is right and what is wrong in the relationship between capital and labor. Political and economic leaders are talking much of social justice, of a planned economy in which all shall have a full share of the products of labor. Surely, we would all agree that there should be only kindness and justice in all such dealings of man with man. But how to accomplish that result in a world of selfishness and sin, that indeed is the question.

Unfortunately, many of those in the church who have greatly stressed social relationships have forgotten that the true foundation for such teaching and living is the preaching of the gospel of redemption. In reaction to their impassioned position, others who have faithfully preached the necessity of regeneration have forgotten to stress the need of the expression of regenerated life in the social relationships of man. We need God-given balance, with a proper reflection of gospel truth in honest and helpful living. God wants his people to show that they belong to him by

I. Providing for the Poor and Needy (vv. 9, 10, 14, 15).

When Jesus said, "Ye have the poor always with you" (Matt. 26:11), he referred to one of the responsibilities which thoughtful and considerate men have always gladly borne, but which has been a constant problem to both individuals and nations. We have dealt with it in our day on a broad and supposedly scientific basis, but those who are closest to it are quick to admit that we have even now an imperfect solution. In the days of Israel the poor were fed by the purposeful leaving of gleanings in the field—which the needy were free to gather as their own. Thus they had the joy of helping themselves even as they were being helped by others, and, in the final analysis, by God himself.

II. Guarding Another's Reputation (vv. 16-18).

Gossip is a destructive means of breaking down the good standing of another. It is a sin all too common in our day, even within the circle of God's own people. Tale-bearing and evil-speaking are a blight on our social and religious life. We should put them away.

Akin to this common and awful sin is the bearing of grudges and the seeking for revenge, neither of which serves any good purpose.

III. Honoring the Aged (v. 32). Old-age pensions undoubtedly have their place in our complicated social life, but it is evident that they would be entirely unnecessary if men and women had in the fear of God honored "the hoary head" and "the face of the old man," even as God gave command to Israel.

IV. Loving the Stranger (vv. 33, 34).

The man who knows what it is to have been a stranger, and to meet with love and protecting care, should never forget to go and do likewise. Living, as many of us do, in great cities makes this somewhat of a problem, and yet one sometimes wonders whether the bustling city is not often kinder to the stranger than the little community, which makes him feel like an "outsider."

V. Being Honest in Business (vv. 11-13, 35, 36).

No stealing, no false swearing, no defrauding, no withholding of wages, for all these things dishonor or "profane the name of thy God."

A good motto to hang up behind the counter or over the desk in a business house is found in the words of verses 35 and 36. False bottoms, trick scales, short measure—oh, yes, they are against the city ordinance, and you will be fined if you are caught. But remember, they are also an abomination in the sight of the Lord.

The closing verse of our lesson reiterates that important truth. In carrying out the tenets of social justice we are not simply being humane and kind. We are observing the statutes and ordinances of the Eternal One, him who says, "I am Jehovah."

Being One in Faith

It is good to know that in whatever country we are found, and under whatever sky, we are, through faith in the divine Saviour, members in the same body, sheep in the same fold, children of one home.

Pay Up Our Debts

Debt comes under the eighth commandment. It hangs a millstone round the neck of the man or woman who incurs it. It corrodes honesty.

Cayne broke through her thoughts. "I suppose you don't make a hundred a week as a model, do you?" "I average between forty and sixty dollars, depending on engagements. It's paid by the hour."

"I told Terriss I'd pay a hundred a week, but I don't want you to take on this job for the money alone. I want some interest—and I've got to have results."

Rachel got up and stood before him, straight and tall and earnest. "You can pay me only what I make at Vinco's; that would be fair, I think, and if I do 'get results' you can make up the difference. As I told you, I'll do my best."

"You've got spunk. Very well, Miss Vincent, it's a go. You say you average between forty and sixty a week. I'll pay you fifty, of course you're getting your room and board, too—"

Rachel felt that he would enjoy a little bargaining. "I'm obliged to pay half the rent of the apartment where I'm living whether I'm there or not. So you can't count my room as part of my pay."

"That's right, that's good business sense."

CHAPTER VIII

She was, then, accepted, but she could not quite believe it. She said to Terriss as they went downstairs, "But he didn't ask me any really sensible questions, and he told me nothing about what I'd have to do. I don't understand it."

"Well, Miss Vincent, I figure it out this way: Mr. Cayne's one of those men who prides himself on the way he can read character and you made a hit with him by being offhand and quiet. Besides, he was pretty well worn out seeing people before you and there's always a point where folks who're mixing into stuff they don't know about give right up. See what I mean? Your making him that sporting offer pleased him, too. I'll tell you the honest truth I didn't expect he'd take you, and I'm leery about it myself—"

"You are! Then why did you ever let me go talk to him? Why did you tell him you were satisfied with me?"

"I didn't know what else to do. We might as well understand one another, you seem a very nice young lady to me, a little smarter than the average, but whether you've got any sense at all about catching a very slick thief is something I can't figure."

Rachel had been wanting to ask a question and now she did it.

"Mr. Terriss, have you any idea who the thief is?"

"It'd be irregular for me to suggest anybody—but then this whole proceeding's irregular, to my mind. I'm convinced it's an inside job. This assignment is going to be no cinch for you, it's going to be tough work and plenty of it."

"I don't mind that," said Rachel, truthfully, "I'd rather do this than anything in the world."

Terriss favored her with a long appraising stare and she knew she had been overreager. "It's terribly exciting!" she added.

The youthful phrase quieted Terriss's latent suspicion. "Hm—that's one way to look at it," he said, dryly. "Now, if you obey orders and take it easy and cautious, we'll get along."

"This is another world," thought Rachel, "another world and I must be careful. I can't believe that I'm going to see my own mother—my own mother—go into her house as a servant, wait on her, be her maid. It's perfectly wild, all of it. I must pretend I'm a servant and be a good servant and at the same time watch all the other servants. I mustn't let them know I'm working for Terriss, I mustn't let Terriss know why I wanted to do this work. I know he suspects there's something special in my mind about it. And then—Anne! What will she say?"

All the way back to Vinco's she fought the problem of whether to tell Anne and how to tell her and when, but she worked out no satisfactory answer. It was a relief to see Curt Elton standing at the door waiting for her as he had promised, friendly, easy, somehow he gave her confidence.

"I know it's all arranged," he said. "Terriss phoned Vinco. I thought you'd come in carrying banners and singing songs of victory. What's the matter?"

"It seems so queer now I'm really in it. Maybe I've lost my nerve."

"Oh no, you haven't. Stop thinking about how you feel and concentrate on what you've got to do. There's plenty of that around. Vinco's been yelling his head off to get you started on an appointment. Now I'm not going to bother you, but I do want to see you when you're all set to go into this Cayne house. Call me up if you haven't time for anything else, will you? I got you into this and I'm going to see you through it. And take it easy. It's not so very important, you know, just a stunt, and you can pull it off."

Which was all he knew about what it meant to her, Rachel thought. Even so, she found his point of view steady. "I'll call you up," she promised, and went on to placate Vinco.

That was not hard to do, for below his fussiness Vinco was highly pleased that one of his young ladies had qualified for a difficult and unusual task.

When she came home that night there were letters waiting for her, letters from Anne, two of them, brought in on one of the slow winter ships, and a letter from Bob Eddis. Pink was waiting, too, an amiable agreeable Pink who had seemingly forgotten all about their late stiffness. It came to Rachel suddenly that she'd have to tell Pink what she was going to do, yes, and she'd have to tell her about Genie Moore snatching her white beret. Pink would never be so litting and gay if she knew of that. Evidently Genie hadn't brought it back. She put the letters aside unopened.

"Pink," she began cannily, "I'm going to take you out to dinner, we'll go some place where it's exoffered equal thrills. But at last Rachel had to go to her room and face the three unread letters.

She began with Bob's, written in his small clear script which was almost like print. It was all gossip, the winter fishing, the eerie whiteness and silence of the beach in the snow, the new kittens of Mrs. Duffy's cat Jerusha, the books Bob had read—mostly trash, he confessed—the progress of the carved room, the breakdown of the furnace in the Congregational church.

Rachel put the letter down with relief that he hadn't asked her again to marry him or even made love to her. She didn't want to feel anything more. And Anne's letters were waiting. She opened them reluctantly, arranged them according to date and began to read the first one. It was not very long. Tante Helene, it seemed, had a persistent bronchitis and Anne was busy nursing her and running the house and property as well. Rachel could feel Anne's fatigue and her patience. "The servants have been here a long time and they don't want to make the least change in their ways and I'm sure they believe I'm only here to get hold of Tante Helene's money. The man on the farm is amiable because he's due to make a new lease and he thinks I'm going to be easy. They all have to be treated like difficult children. Tante Helene herself is difficult enough, she lies in her huge bed swathed in woolen shawls and blankets of every color of the rainbow and her sharp little voice clacks all day long except when she is coughing or when the doctor has the thermometer under her tongue. She considers illness a cruel and unjust penalty for sins she never committed. She won't have a nurse, so Marie, her maid, and I wait on her, I try to carry out the doctor's orders and Marie paying no attention to them or to anything but the old lady's whims. It will be a miracle if she gets well."

Rachel felt a moment of panic. If Tante Helene should die and Anne came sailing back to America while she was at the Caynes', what a mess that would be! She opened the other letter in haste, it had been written nearly a week later. And at once she breathed more easily, for Tante Helene was better, Anne had the household more in hand, even the dreary winter rain of the valley had given way to cold but bright sunshine. As she read Rachel could see Anne gently, expertly managing one person after another, placating but passing over no faults, running her own white line of order and system and justice through petty obstacles and slipshod customs. And for the first time she had a sense of Anne's spirit transferred to her in her own struggle to see her own mother. "We're alike," she thought, "Anne and I, we want something and we work to get it. But Anne's the best, she only wants what's right. I'm not sure that what I want is right but I want it just the same."

It was all right now, she could go ahead and not worry about being disloyal to Anne. Anne would understand, Anne would know what had pushed her on so urgently. But—she wouldn't tell Anne just yet, she'd write tomorrow, before she started in at the Caynes', and say nothing about it, she'd write a long letter and tell about Pink and Genie Moore and the Steeles and Curt Elton. Anne would like Curt Elton. It was strange, she thought, how these letters communicated the very essence of Anne, the calmness, the steadiness, the power to resolve chaos into clarity. It was exactly what she needed. She dropped off to sleep thinking gratefully and lovingly of Anne.

The next day she went to see Terriss, who offered practical counsel. "You've got some sort of plain dress to wear up there, I suppose, and plain clothes to take," he said. "Mrs. Cayne will go through the motions of engaging you herself, but pensive and snooty. I've got an elegant new job, so we'll celebrate."

"Oh, grand! I feel like a proud party. What's the job?"

"I'll tell you at dinner. How about asking Tom and Rhoda Steele too, we've done nothing for them recently."

"All right by me, but we can't go any place very smart, if we take them. Rhoda's gets up as too weird."

"Then we'll go to Lori's. The food's good and they're accustomed to funnies of every description."

While Rachel was changing her dress she heard a wail from Pink's room! "My white beret's gone! Have you got it?"

"Oh, I forgot to tell you, Genie borrowed it last night, she came in here and grabbed it, literally. I told her you'd not like it, but she went right in and took it."

As Rachel finished her toilet, there was an ominous silence, then the outer door slammed and Rachel heard Pink in the hall hammering at Genie's door. Presently she heard the door again but she didn't look out. When she was ready Rachel came into the living room and a moment later Pink entered too, scarlet spots on her cheeks, her lips compressed and not wearing the white beret. "She stretched it, her head's bigger than mine," she said shortly, "I hate lending hats, they always get spoiled."

Rachel said nothing. As they walked down the stairs Pink added: "You're right, Rachel, she's a little grafter. I'm sorry about your dress. We won't either of us lend her anything again, even if she has to go out like a fan dancer."

"I'm sorry about the hat," Rachel said. "She really did grab it. We had quite an argument about it."

"Yes, she told me," Pink looked up and laughed. "We're a pair of nuts," she said, and the reconciliation was complete.

The dinner at Lori's was great fun, Rhoda was amazing in a red upholstery plush and earrings of three-inch copper discs, but at Lori's this was not conspicuous. She was sweet and kind, as always, and so was Tom, and delighted to hear that Rachel had a new job.

Back at the apartment Rachel was more frank with Pink about her work, there was no difficulty in that for the name of Peter Cayne meant no more to Pink than it had to Rachel six months before, and it was necessary that Pink should know where she was going and what her position there would be. Pink thought it all a great adventure and wished that the advertising business that's all hokey. Mr. Cayne runs the house and has ever since they were married. If she asks you for a reference you tell her it's your first job of this kind."

"But what about uniforms? Ought I to have some?"

"No, the Caynes supply those. The thing is this, Miss Vincent: Mrs. Cayne is going to take you without any questions because her husband really runs that house and he's told her that he's getting her a maid. See? The servants have got to be satisfied with you, that's very important, they've got to think you one of themselves. You'll have to wear plain clothes and take plain clothes with you, and they oughtn't to be too new, either."

He droned on and on, describing the apartment, the servants, the stolen articles and how they had disappeared, detailing methods of observation, time for reports, but Rachel did not hear much of what he said, her thoughts were racing on to her own special hopes and expectations. At last Terriss paused in exasperation and a note of feeling raised his colorless voice. "Damn it all, Miss Vincent, the more I consider this the more I know I'm a sap ever to let an amateur like you go on this job. It was that fellow Cayne pounding at me, he got me to overstep my judgment."

Rachel was abruptly conscious of her inattention, shocked into dismay.

"Mr. Terriss, I'll try awfully hard, indeed I will."

"I don't doubt that. But I do wish you weren't so green. This isn't the way I like to run my business, I tell you. Well, it's all in a lifetime, I suppose. You're to go up there then late tomorrow afternoon. You all set for that?"

"Yes, I'll go up there about four o'clock. I've a morning's work for Mr. Vinco, then I go home and pack."

"Luck go with you," said Mr. Terriss, fervently but hopelessly. "We need it, you and me both."

It was all unreal, what she was doing, all of her thoughts were in a fever of impatience, she had to force herself to the routine of her preparations.

She lunched with Curt and seemed to listen to his advice, but she didn't really hear much of it. She was annoyed with herself that she should be so wildly excited, and was afraid that she would reveal it, so she made a great effort to be casual. Only his last words came through to her distinctly: "When you don't know what to say, keep still, and don't forget I'll be on the first look-out post, ready to come if you whistle."

"When you don't know what to say, keep still," Rachel thought of that while she packed a shabby suitcase with her shabbiest clothes, slicked down her hair, rubbed her nose shiny and wiped off her lip rouge, then dressed in a faded green knitted suit which she had meant to throw away. She had decided against wearing the spectacles Mr. Terriss had suggested, she felt they would only bother her. When she was ready she looked at herself in the glass and thought she made a very good likeness of a neat respectable housemaid.

On her way uptown her excitement changed and cooled and, oddly, she found herself thinking of Anne with a sense of comfort and support. No matter what happened there was Anne in the background, loving, understanding. Then she began to think of the woman she would see in a few moments, her own mother who had brought her into the world, given her life and being, a heart to beat, blood to demand its own blood kinship. And she felt an immense overwhelming certainty that her own mother would somehow recognize this kinship and respond to it. Perhaps not at once, perhaps only vaguely—but yet, surely, unmistakably.

Oak Tombs Reveal "Modern Girl" Was Popular 'Way Back in the Bronze Age

Danish flappers of 4,000 years ago liked to shock their elders as much as their sisters do today.

And one little lady 'way back in the Bronze age even went so far as to wear short skirts. But she caught cold and died as a result.

That is the interpretation that serious-minded archaeologists place upon their latest "find" at Egtved, Jutland's rocky shore used for correspondent in the Philadelphia Record.

The girl's remains, together with her clothing, remarkably preserved, were found in a hollow oak tree trunk of the type Bronze age folk on Jutland's rocky shore used for tombs.

They don't know her name, but they call her Olga, and they say she wasn't over twenty and must have been remarkably beautiful.

Olga, it seems, had an oval face, a determined little chin, pearly teeth and a wealth of flaxen hair which swept back from her broad forehead.

But she was different from all other women of her time. The others, probably because of their pride in the newly discovered craft of weaving, dressed in voluminous garments.

Olga, however, rebelled. On her mother's primitive hand loom she wove a cloth of finely spun wool. Then, with needles of bone and bronze, she knitted a neat sweater.

By plaiting hundreds of woolen cords, she fashioned a brief skirt—so brief, in fact, that it came well above the knee.

With earrings of bronze wire and the traditional plaque on a braided belt, she appeared not unlike the modern outdoor girl.

But her revolutionary costume, it appears, was not suited to Jutland's bitter climate. Scientists think that may have caused her death at such an early age.

Colds Due to Allergy

By
DR. JAMES W. BARTON

SOMETIMES you find yourself sneezing and coughing, with a "running" nose and naturally you believe you have caught a cold and are in for a few days' misery. However, in a very short time, hours at most, the sneezing, coughing, and stuffiness of the nose disappear, much to your surprise.

The truth of the matter is that instead of having the usual "infectious" cold, due to the "cold," flu, or other organisms getting into the system, you really had an "allergic" cold in the head due to some substance you breathed in from the air, or some substance you had eaten.

The usual or common cold in the head is due to overexposure to wet and cold, inhaling dust or irritating substances, infected tonsils, and adenoid growths. All these interfere with the mucous membrane of the nose so that it is unable to fight off the organisms that cause the cold. With the usual or common head cold there is a feeling of tiredness, chilliness, slight headache. The symptoms last from two or three days to several weeks.

Not Like Common Colds.

However, in the "cold" due to allergy—sensitivity to various substances—the history, the onset, the symptoms themselves are considerably different from those of the common cold.

Dr. Norman W. Celin, Seattle, Wash., in Northwest Medicine, says: "Frequent colds at any season or at special seasons of the year are often manifestations or symptoms of allergy. To diagnose the condition is allergic there must be an investigation of (1) a family history of allergy, (2) previous allergic history of the patient (asthma, hay fever, eczema, stomach and intestinal upsets) and (3) a present history of allergic symptoms. All foods, plants, substances handled in industry and other substances should be tested by the scratch method or injection into the skin. The most constant symptom of nasal or nose allergy is a 'stuffy nose which is always worse in the morning; chronic cough occurring especially during the early morning hours is likewise a symptom.' I believe that these simple methods of learning the difference between the usual head cold due to infections, and colds due to allergy (sensitivity to substances) will enable us to treat either type intelligently."

Use of Dinitrophenol.

There are cases where the body processes are working at the normal rate, the individual does not eat much food and yet the body weight is much above normal. It is in these cases that the new drug dinitrophenol has been used with much success.

From San Francisco, where a great amount of research work has been done on dinitrophenol, come some interesting findings. In using thyroid extract to make the body processes work faster and so burn up fat, care must be taken where there is any heart ailment as the thyroid extract throws extra work on the heart.

However when Dr. M. L. Tainter used dinitrophenol in three cases of overweight suffering with angina pectoris, without any heart symptoms occurring, Dr. Harold Rosenblum, San Francisco, determined to find whether the dinitrophenol increased the rate of the heart beat, whether it increased the amount of blood the heart pumped and whether it increased the blood pressure.

Accordingly the rate at which the blood was flowing was observed before, during, and after the use of dinitrophenol in patients who were being treated for overweight.

The blood travels completely around the body in from ten to sixteen seconds. The tests were made in the morning, no food having been taken since the last meal of the previous day—fourteen hours or thereabouts, the patient lying quietly at rest. A record was also kept of the weight, the pulse rate before and during the period during which dinitrophenol was given.

The results showed that although the rate at which the body processes were working was greatly increased, nevertheless the heart did not beat faster and the amount of blood pumped by the heart was not increased. The blood pressure also was not increased by the dinitrophenol.

The reason that dinitrophenol should only be used under a physician's supervision is that so many are "sensitive" to this drug just as so many are sensitive to pollens, furs, hairs and other substances which cause hay fever, asthma, and eczema.

Help Live

"Live and let live," was the call of the old, when men pulled apart and when there was a cold chill in the heart of the race. "Live and help live," is the call of the new, the call when all the race is kin and dreams come true.

HOW LONG CAN A THREE-QUARTER WIFE HOLD HER HUSBAND?

YOU have to work at marriage to make a success of it. Men may be selfish, unsympathetic, but that's the way they're made and you might as well realize it.

When your back aches and your nerves scream, don't take it out on your husband. He can't possibly know how you feel.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."

Don't be a three-quarter wife, take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and Go "Smiling Through."

The American kind of "equality" is the equality of opportunity.

There are men who are loved by their friends simply because they are men through and through and are not particularly brilliant.

There are people who end a conversation with you sooner than you want them to, because they have a sensitive fear they are boring you. Undecieve them at once.

Tailored Charm.

The waistcoat used to be a gentleman's identification, but, alas, like many another smart idea, womankind has copied it. Here you see an attractive example of this modern contraband. Not only does it have suave, but it is entirely feminine, as well. The exquisite waist line, sweet little collar, and puff sleeves, make this a number you can't afford to pass up.

The State of the World.
SANTA MONICA, CALIF.—Up in Montreal a veteran showman says he talks with chimpanzees in their own language. I wish he'd ask one of his chimpanzee pals what he thinks about the present setup of civilization.

Because I can't find any humans who agree as to where we all are going and what the chances are of getting there. In fact, the only two who appear to be certain about it are young Mr. Corcoran and young Mr. Cohen, and they seem to hesitate at times—not much, but just a teeny-weeny bit—which is disconcerting to the lay mind. We are likely to lose confidence even in a comet, once it starts wobbling on us.

I'm also upset by a statement from England's greatest star-gazer—they call him the astronomer royal, which, by coupling it with the royal family, naturally gives astronomy a great social boost in England and admits it to the best circles. He says the moon is clear off its mathematically prescribed course.

Cash Versus I. O. U.'s.
 ONLY a few weeks ago the front pages were carrying dispatches saying the adjustment of Great Britain's defaulted debt was just around the corner. Economists and financiers had discussed terms of settlement. Figures were quoted—mainly figures calling for big reductions on our part, but never mind that. They were figures anyhow.

Lately the papers have been strangely silent on the subject. Perhaps you remember the old story told on the late John Sharp Williams, who frequented a game at Washington where sportive statesmen played poker for heavy stakes—mostly with those quaint little financial products called I. O. U.'s as mediums of exchange.

Early one morning a fellow senator met the famous Mississippian coming from an all-night session. "I certainly mopped up," he proclaimed. "I won $3,000—and what's more, $8.75 of it was in cash."

Autumn Millinery.
 JUST as the poor, bewildered males are becoming reconciled to the prevalent styles in women's hats, up bobs a style creator in New York warning us that what we've thus far endured is merely a fore-taste of what's coming. In other words, we ain't seen nothin'!

For autumn, he predicts a quaint number with a slanted peak fifteen inches high, which, I take it, will make the wearer look like a refugee trying to escape from under a collapsing pagoda.

Another is a turban entirely composed of rooster feathers.

A matching coat of rooster feathers goes with this design. But in the old days they used hot tar.

A third model features for its top-hammer a series of kalsomine brushes sticking straight up. Naturally, the hat itself will imitate a barrel of whitewash.

But the gem of all is a dainty globular structure of Scotch plaid. Can you imagine anything more becoming to your lady wife than an effect suggesting that she's balancing a hot-water bag on her brow?

"McGuffeyisms."
 THE lieutenant-governor of Ohio urges a return to "McGuffeyism" for settling modern problems.

"Twas in a McGuffey reader that I met those prize half-wits of literature—the Spartan boy who let the fox gnaw his vitals; the chuckle-headed youth who stood on the burning deck; the congenial idiot who climbed an alp in midwinter while wearing nothing but a night shirt and carrying a banner labeled "Excelsior" in order to freeze to death; the skipper who, when the ship was sinking, undertook to calm the passengers by—but wait, read the immortal lines:

"We are lost!" the captain shouted, As he staggered down the stair.

And then the champion of all—the Dutch lad who discovered a leak in the dyke so he stuck his wrist in the crevice and all night stayed there. In the morning, when an early riser came along and asked what was the general idea, the heroic urchin said—but let me quote the exact language of the book:

"I am hindering the sea from running in," was the simple reply of the child."

Simple? I'll tell the world! Nothing could be simpler except an authority on hydraulics who figures that, when the Atlantic ocean starts boring through a crack in a mud wall, you can hold it back by using one small Dutch boy's arm for a stopper.

A PEEK AT TOMORROW'S INVENTIONS

National Resources Committee Recommends Careful Planning to Take Fullest Advantage of Scientific Innovations.

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

OUR country might have presented a vastly different scene if, at the turn of the present century, the government had been able to foresee the development of the telephone, the automobile, the airplane, the motion picture, rayon and radio.

Likewise, if we today can foresee the future development of some inventions we already have and some we probably will have, then we will be equipped to build for ourselves and our posterity a fuller existence.

This, according to the federal national resources committee, is the reason for its recent 450,000-word report on the "social implications of new inventions." The report, says President Roosevelt, "holds out hope that we can anticipate some of the effects of major inventions and make plans to meet new situations that will arise as these new inventions come into widespread use."

With this White House benediction, it is expected that the recommendations of the laborious document will become a guidepost for the co-ordinated, long-term planning to prevent or reduce future depressions with their economic maladjustments and social upheavals, that characterizes the New Deal.

Cites Thirteen Inventions.

To apply its theories, the committee recommends that another committee, to be known as the natural resources board, be created. This would be a sort of "technological telescope," which would constantly peer into the future and predict what scientific advances would be made. Its qualified observers would be commissioned to co-ordinate the work of the many special planning boards which exist in 47 states, 400 counties and 1,100 cities.

This board and the many other planning boards throughout the nation ought immediately to concern themselves with the study of 13 inventions, the report declares. These are the mechanical cotton picker, air-conditioning equipment, plastics, the photo-electric cell, artificial cotton and woolen-like fibers made from cellulose, synthetic rubber, prefabricated houses, television, facsimile transmission, the automobile trailer, gasoline produced from coal, steep-flight aircraft planes and tray agriculture.

Dr. William F. Ogburn, director of research for the report, tells a few of the ways in which governments, individuals and industries suffered because they failed to foresee the development of certain industries.

"Highways are too narrow," he contends. "The metropolitan area could have been planned better; much crime could have been prevented. Industries could have been located to better advantage."

Here he injected a little of the political philosophy of the present administration.

"The growing inadequacies of small local governments could have been foreseen," he said, "and the transfer of some of their functions to a more capable centralized government would have been facilitated."

Century's Most Important Invention.

"The question that naturally arises is: Will the second third of the Twentieth century see the rise of such great industries based on new inventions as was seen in the first third? There may very well be equally significant inventions during the next phase of our national growth as in the one just concluded.

"For instance, all are agreed that one such invention is the electron tube, said to be the greatest invention of the Twentieth century. Its most brilliant form is the photo-electric cell, popularly known as the electric eye.

plan and act in time, once the spread of this invention is certain?

"The influence on negroes may be catastrophic. Farm tenancy will be affected. The political system of the southern states may be greatly altered.

"In another field, science has gone far on the road to producing artificial climate in all its aspects, which may have effects on the distribution of population, upon health, upon production and upon the transformation of the night into day.

Talking Books for Blind.

"Then again television may become widely distributed, placing theaters into millions of homes and increasing even more the already astounding possibilities of propaganda to be imposed on a none too critical human race.

"Talking books may come as a boon to the blind, but with revolutionary effects upon libraries and which, together with the talking picture and television, may affect radically schools and the educational process.

"The variety of alloys gives to metals amazing adaptabilities to the purposes of man.

"The use of chemistry in the production of new objects in contrast to the use of mechanical fabrication on the basis of power continues to develop with remarkable rapidity, in the production of oil, of woolen-like fibers, of substitutes for wood, and of agencies of destruction.

"So the immediate future will see the application of new scientific discoveries that will bring not only enticing prospects but uncertainties and difficulties as well."

The report continued: "The air-conditioning developments which lower inside temperatures during hot weather may or may not within the next generation affect Southern cities and stimulate the growth of factories in warmer regions.

"Or again, tray agriculture, which produces a high yield per plant when the roots are suspended in a tray of liquid chemicals instead of in the soil, may or may not be used sufficiently to be of much social significance within the reader's lifetime."

Technological Unemployment.

The report said that while new inventions often save labor and therefore cut down the number of jobs, their developments often require new industries, creating new jobs.

"The question whether there will be a large amount of unemployment during the next period of business prosperity rests only in part on the introduction of new inventions and more efficient industrial techniques," says the report.

"For instance, even if industrial techniques remained the same, the volume of production would have to be greater in the future than in 1929 in order to absorb the increase in the working population and keep unemployment to the level of that date."

One of the greatest necessities for planning in anticipation of the development of inventions arises in the time lag between the birth of an invention and its full application, the report declares. It points out that for the 19 inventions voted most useful and introduced between 1888 and 1913 the following intervals were an average: Between the time the invention was conceived (which may have been centuries before) and the first working model or patent, 176 years; from that point to the first practical use, 24 years; thence to commercial success, 14 years; and to important use, 12 years, making it roughly 50 years from the first real work on the invention.

"The time lag between the first development and the full use of an invention is often a period of great social and economic maladjustment, as, for example, the delay in the adoption of workmen's compensation and the institution of 'safety first' campaigns after the introduction of rapidly moving steel machines," the report said. "This lag emphasized the need for planning in regard to inventions."

feet. He picked it up and tagged Walt, who had rounded third.

In the 9th, with Slosser on second and two out, W. Mallon got his second hit of the day, a line single over short. Slosser set sail for the plate, but somehow or another, the centerfielder made a perfect throw home and caught Slosser by yards. So, all in all, it was a good game. It just wasn't in the books for Tawas to win and they will have to be content for this year.

Next Sunday Tawas will play Hemlock at the local athletic field, which will conclude the schedule for this season. This is a postponed game from the 11th of July.
