Tawas City Wins From Miner's Grove

The Tawas City base ball team won from Miner's Grove in last Sunday's game by a score of 4-3. A small crowd of fans turned out to witness the event and was amply paid for their trouble. It was one of the best games played on the local athletic field this season. H. Kusro, Jr., turned in a splendid bit of hurling for the visitors, good fielding on the part of his teammates would have been a different score. He allowed but four hits, "Lefty" Quick getting two of these, struck out six, and walked three, four errors were made by his defense. Bill Mallon and Earl Slosser shared the pitching for the locals. Bill pitching the first three frames and went back in again in the ninth with one away, in the 3-2-3 innings he worked, he allowed one hit, struck out five and walked two. Slosser, in 1-3 innings, allowed six hits, walked five and struck out four. E. Franks, who replaced Fox in centerfield for Miner's Grove had a perfect day at bat, getting three hits out of three times up. H. Kusro, Sr. got two for four and also displayed some neat baserunning by pilfering three sacks. The Tawas boys grabbed a few of these honors themselves and got a collection of nine stolen bases, three by Staudcher and Slosser's steal home was included in the collection.

Next Sunday the Wilber team will be guests of the Tawas team on the local athletic field, another good game is expected. The season is rapidly drawing to a close why not come out Sunday and see what may be the last game of the season? The game is scheduled to start at 3:00 sharp.

Mrs. Jack Soules

Mrs. Jack Soules (nee Amy Butler) was born September 30, 1909, and passed away September 19 at University hospital, Ann Arbor. She was the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Butler.

Funeral services for Mrs. Soules were held Wednesday afternoon from the McCormick & Conkle funeral home with interment in the Woodland cemetery, Clio, Rev. C. E. Edinger of East Tawas officiated.

Life long friends of the deceased served as pallbearers were Fred Lomas, Basil Quick, Clyde Evil, Wade Lomas, Milton Barkman and Elmer Carpenter, all of East Tawas.

The beautiful flower offerings testified to the high esteem in which Mrs. Soules was held in our community.

In attendance at the funeral was the entire group of young ladies with whom Mrs. Soules attended to school. Among others who went to Clio to attend the funeral were the following: Mr. and Mrs. John Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Elliott, Mrs. H. C. Hennigan, Mrs. V. Marzinski, Mrs. Elmer Carpenter and Mrs. B. J. Moss.

Besides her husband and parents, Mrs. Soules leaves two little children, Gary, age six years, and Joan, age three years, two sisters, Mrs. Harlan Maaske of Washington, D. C., and Mrs. Carl Acton of Detroit, and a brother, Forrest, of Detroit. Also a grandmother, Mrs. N. Butler, of Clio.

School Notes

Junior Musolf gave an interesting talk Tuesday to the Citizenship class concerning his experience as a 4-H club representative to the second annual conservative to the Pigeon river state forest last week. The camp was believed to be the largest of its kind in the country and was sponsored by the department of conservation in co-operation with the Michigan State College. The boys were given instruction in forestry, fish and game management and other like subjects. Field trips were taken through nearby conservation projects. Junior was selected as representative of the Forestry 4-H club of Iosco county.

The salary of State Budget Director Harold D. Smith was increased from $5,000 to $7,000 per year. To show his appreciation for the training Michigan schools gave him, he slashed $2,800,000 off the amount appropriated by the legislature for the support of the public schools. It is claimed that salaries of state and other employees have been increased yet teachers are expected to meet the added responsibility of building young manhood and womanhood under the worst conditions the country has experienced at less than the wage of common laborers, even though scholastic requirement is being constantly increased for teachers. Seems to us to be a bad policy to cut down the miserly support of the schools and at the same time increase the number of employees in such state departments as Pardons and Paroles—Current School Topics, Lansing.

High School

The following people have been chosen for the library committee this year, Otto Ross, Norma Musolf, Lucille DePotty, Kathleen Davis, Hazel Herman, Norma Burtzloff, Marguerite McLean and Kenneth Smith.

In the weekly speed test in typing II, Marguerite McLean achieved the best average for both accuracy and speed.

The debate subject this for year is "Resolved: That the Several States Should Adopt a Unicameral System of Legislation." A unicameral system is one in which there is one assembly in the state legislature instead of two, senate and house of representatives. In 1934 Nebraska voted to adopt such a plan and since that time 15 states have introduced bills to establish a similar system. This movement has been growing in the interest of better state laws. Would you improve our law making? Follow the debates this year and you will learn both sides of the question. The first debate will be held November 5.

The Sophomore European class are making note books to exemplify the work of the course. These are judged on neatness, completeness, accuracy and originality. Mary Cuniff deserves much praise for her note book which is both original and artistic.

The Senior class recently held an election. The following officers were elected: President, Mildred Cholery; vice president, Kenneth Smith; secretary, William Prescott; treasurer, Frieda Witzke.

All pupils of the grades and high school had their pictures taken Tuesday. Proofs will soon be returned and orders may then be given the respective teachers.

Tuesday afternoon, September 22, a program was given in the high school. The program, commemorating the signing of the Constitution, was to have been given September 17th. H. Read Smith, who was to be the speaker, was unable to come. (Turn to No. 1, Back Page)

St. Joseph Presents Patriotic Program

On Friday afternoon, September 17, 1937, in keeping with the proclamation of President Roosevelt, the American History Class of St. Joseph High School presented a patriotic program for the junior and senior high students.

"One hundred and fifty years ago today," said chairman, Jack Coyle, "a group of men in Independence Hall, Philadelphia, signed a document which was the result of four months of work in convention. This document was the Constitution of the United States, which is said to be the most perfect and satisfactory form of government the world has ever seen. Therefore," he continued, "it is proper that we should pause today to honor these men who have given us such a government, practically the only government in existence today which assures its people of full liberty—liberty of speech, liberty of the press, and liberty to worship God as one chooses."

The entire assembly sang the national anthem, "The Star Spangled Banner," after which the chairman introduced the two-act dramatization of the Constitutional Convention. Act I presented the scene of the Convention May 25, 1787, and showed how under the guidance of the unanimously elected chairmen of the Convention, George Washington, and the Secretary, William Jackson, the many difficulties and differences which arose between the States were smoothed out through a series of compromises. The part of George Washington was taken by Luke Mac Murray, while Louis Dubovsky took the part of William Jackson. Act II was the same scene in Independence Hall four months later, and presented the work accomplished by the Convention and showed the members attaching their signatures to the document before adjourning.

After the dramatization the Reverend E. A. Kirchoff, Pastor of St. Joseph church, gave a short talk on "The Importance of the Constitution Today," citing its various advantages and reminding the audience that it is the wise and judicious interpretation by the Supreme Court that has made the Constitution stand the test of time. He further stated that Chief Justice, John Marshall by his judgments and decisions set the precedent for all future interpretations of our Constitution. Concluding his talk, Father Kirchoff commended the far-sightedness of the makers of the Constitution in their ability to look down the centuries and see the need for the clause in that document providing for liberty of speech, press and religious worship.

The program closed with the singing of "America" by the assembly.

IOSCO 4-H'ERS HOLD FINE FAIR IN RENO

45 Boys and Girls Exhibit Results of Summer Program

The summer 4-H club work of Iosco county was brought to a close when 45 young men and women exhibited their fine displays of garden crops, beans, potatoes, poultry, sheep, calves and forestry work at the Reno township hall Monday and Tuesday of this week.

Some 200 interested friends and neighbors of these young people visited the hall during the two day fair and observed not only more exhibits than were shown at the 4-H club one year ago, but saw exhibits which indicated much more care during the summer and exhibits which were set up of more carefully selected materials than the ones of 1936.

The well prepared displays came from seven different 4-H clubs which are known as the Taft Junior Farmer's club lead by Norman Sibley of Whittemore, the Wilber Grubbers lead by Arthur Nelson of Tawas City, the North school garden club lead by Elmer Byce of Hale the Cottage Junior Farmers lead by Will Waters and Fred Latter of Reno, the Juicy Fruit Canning club lead by Mrs. Ray Bannister of Hale, the Happy Workers Garden club lead by George Webb of Hale and the Iosco 4-H Forest Rangers lead by Donald Grey of East Tawas.

The garden clubs of the various schools had wonderful exhibits of vegetables. There were also fine exhibits from the canning clubs. A live stock exhibit was made by the Taft Junior Farmers club and the Cottage Junior Farmers had a poultry exhibit.

About 50 people, mostly from Reno, were in attendance at the evening meeting. County Agricultural Agent W. L. Finley, chairman, introduced the speakers. L. H. Rhodes, district club leader, praised the children for their good work and the local leaders for their co-operation. Paul I. Rood, soil specialist, Michigan State College, called their attention to soil building, explaining the fertilizers and the growing of alfalfa. George Mundson, agricultural engineer, Michigan State College described model farm buildings which were demonstrated in blue prints and in miniature, all of which was very interesting. Our 4-H'ers will soon be taking the reins and we are glad that they have the opportunity of better fitting themselves for their work.

A list of the exhibits and winners will be published next week.

Heath Notes

Have You Heard?

1. Do you know with what counties Iosco was joined to form Consolidated Health Department No. 2?
2. Do you know what agencies co-operated to form this?
3. Do you know what your Health Department is ready to do for your community?
4. Do you know what represent active Iosco county has on the District Board of Health?
5. Do you know who comprises the Health Department?
6. Do you know who is the Chairman of your Child Health Committee?

Here Are The Answers

1. In 1930 the counties of Alpena, Oscoda, Ogemaw joined with Iosco county to form the second district health department in Michigan.
2. The Children's Fund of Michigan, financed and planned by the late Senator Cousin, is largely responsible for this health service in these counties. There is co-operation with the United States Public Health Service and the Michigan Department of Health, and of course, (Turn to No. 2, back page)

KLAN ISSUE DOGS BLACK

Newspapers Claim Proof He's Life Member . . . Fleet Stalks Submarine Pirates . . . Japs' Big Push Starts

Fiery Cross Haunts Justice

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT suffered what was probably the most embarrassing period of his entire political career as the whole country stormed over the publication of what was claimed as documentary proof that Hugo L. Black, recently appointed a justice of the Supreme court, was and is a member of the Ku Klux Klan.

The series of articles, copyrighted by the North American Newspaper alliance and printed in the newspapers which subscribe to its service, included reproduction of Black's resignation from the hooded brotherhood, allegedly turned in to the organization in 1925 but never made known to the public or to the Klansmen in general. It also contained reproduction of the minutes of a Klan meeting in the following year at which Black was said to have become a life member and was given a gold "passport," one of the highest honors conferred by the order.

Implications of the revelations, if they are true, are manifold. President Roosevelt asserted that he had no knowledge that Black was a member of the Klan when the appointment was made. He refused to comment further until Black returned from Europe, where he was vacationing. Black, hounded for a statement by the press, went into seclusion in London and refused to confirm or deny the accusations.

Opposition to the administration lost no time in making political capital of the situation. Senators who had been marked for political extinction because they had dared to oppose the administration on the plan to add six new justices to the highest tribunal found it the finest kind of defense ammunition. They pointed out that the President, in his opportunity to appoint one new justice of the liberal character he desired, had appointed a man who, if it were true he belonged to the Klan, was incapable of administering impartial justice to Catholics, Jews and negroes. Other senators declared they never would have voted for his confirmation had they known he was a Klansman.

It was admitted that since Black had already taken his oath of office there might be no means of correcting the appointment other than by influencing him to resign. This the President might do, it was believed, if Black did not deny the charges upon his return to the United States.

Showdown on 'Sub' Piracy

GREAT BRITAIN and France were massing the greatest destroyer fleet ever operated in the Mediterranean sea, to police it and safeguard neutral shipping from attacks by "pirate" submarines, as a result of the agreement signed by nine powers at Nyon, near Geneva. The powers signatory to the pact also included Greece, Jugoslavia, Turkey, Rumania, Bulgaria, Egypt and Russia.

Italy and Germany had refused to attend the conference when Russia publicly accused Italy of operating the "pirate" submarines which sank two Russian ships, and threatened reprisals if Italy did not pay indemnity.

The principal provisions of the agreement, which Germany and Italy were invited to join, were:

1. Mediterranean shipping will be restricted to the regular ship lanes, which will be patrolled by French and British warships, in both the eastern and western stretches. If Italy agreed, she was to be allowed to patrol the Tyrrhenian sea.
 2. Patrolling navies will attack and attempt to destroy any submarine which attacks merchant ships other than Spanish, without first giving passengers and crew opportunity to leave in lifeboats, as outlined in the 1936 London naval treaty.
 3. Signatories expressly declare that they do not concede belligerent rights to either party in Spain.
 4. Patrol ships arriving on the scene of an attack too late to prevent it will be authorized to attack any submarine in the vicinity, provided they are satisfied it is the guilty one.
 5. These measures will be executed by the British and French fleets anywhere in the Mediterranean with the exception of the Adriatic. Eastern powers will protect neutral shipping in their territorial waters.
 6. Signatories agree not to let any of their own submarines put to sea in the Mediterranean unless accompanied by a surface vessel, except in certain "exercise" zones.
 7. Signatories will not permit foreign submarines in their waters unless in urgent distress or on the surface and accompanied.
- It was plain that delegates knew that explosions might occur in half a dozen European capitals if their pact did not get into operation before there were any further attacks on shipping. They were embarrassed in conference by the Russian foreign commissar, Maxim Litvinoff, who insisted on naming Italy as the "pirate." Russia at first refused to sign, on the grounds that the second provision was no protection at all, merely requiring submarine commanders to be "gentlemanly" before sinking ships, and that it implied recognition of both Spanish parties as belligerents. Britain's Anthony Eden was reported to have convinced the signatory powers that it would be impossible for a submarine to sink a ship under those conditions.

China's German Strategy

JAPAN'S long-awaited "big push" in China was believed definitely "on" as the Japanese assumed virtual control of North Hopei, and made important thrusts into the Chinese lines at Shanghai, after the most terrible fighting of a month of undeclared warfare.

At about the same time, the Chinese, heeding at last the advice of German officers generally conceded the "brains" of the central army, began a strategic retreat to the "third area of defense" mapped out by these same officers after the Shanghai conflict of 1932, which was conducted under identical conditions.

Apparently the Chinese plan of retreat was to withdraw defending troops from the range of Japanese naval guns in the Whangpoo and Yangtze rivers. The Chinese were reluctant to leave positions which they claimed had been held against the Japanese invasion, but the German advisers finally won them over to the theory that these positions had been held at a cost far out of proportion to their importance.

The first strategic stage of the Chinese fighting in Shanghai—as planned by the German officers—was to slow down and harass the landing of Japanese reinforcements; the second, to divide the Japanese lines, and the third, to deprive the Japanese of the use of their naval guns.

Realizing what is going on, the Japanese command has ordered rapid advance no matter what the cost, in an effort to change an orderly retreat into a complete rout. As a result, the Japanese for the time being are the heavy losers in men, rather than the Chinese.

No Help for Munitions Ships

ANY American merchant vessels which carry arms or other implements of war to China or Japan will do so at their own risk, President Roosevelt warned shipping concerns. This policy applies to all of the articles listed in his proclamation of May 1, 1937, when he invoked the neutrality act against both parties in the Spanish civil war.

The President's order also forbade any government-owned vessel from carrying war materials to China or Japan. Unless war is declared he has no control over other American shipping, but he warned shippers that if ships carrying such cargo are bombed or attacked they need expect no action on the part of the United States.

Copeland Loses in Primary

TWENTY-ONE arrests were made as violence dogged the polls in New York city's most spirited mayoral primary in years. Senator Royal S. Copeland, who ran for the Republican nomination although he was supported by Tammany Hall, lost the honor to Mayor Fiorello H. La Guardia, fusion candidate for reelection. Copeland made his bid for the G. O. P. nod by bitterly opposing President Roosevelt, but the nomination was captured by Jeremiah T. Mahoney, who had the backing of Democratic national chairman James A. Farley.

'Keep Us Out of War'

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, anxious over conditions in Europe and the Far East, cut his vacation short and returned to Washington to discuss developments with his cabinet. After discussing the situation with Norman H. Davis, his European ambassador-at-large, and Bernard M. Baruch, and getting reports from the State department, he was said to be convinced that there was a real possibility of implication of the United States in a foreign war. Baruch called Europe a tinder box, ready to explode at any time.

In an address before an outdoor meeting of Dutchess county (N. Y.) citizens President Roosevelt had said, "World conditions are pretty serious. I am glad to say . . . that we are going to do everything we can in the United States—not only the people of the United States but the government of the United States—to keep us out of war."

Headache for the League

AT GENEVA, the Chinese delegation framed an appeal against Japanese invasion, to be presented to the League of Nations. The appeal, which urged peace-loving members and non-members to join in action against the "aggression," invoked Article 17 of the League covenant, which would invite Japan to sit in on the council of reply.

The Chinese statement charged that since mid-August Japan has thrown 60,000 troops into the Woosung-Shanghai area. "The intention of Japan . . . cannot otherwise be interpreted than to dominate Shanghai . . . and to attack Nanking, the capital," the statement said. It also declared that the Japanese blockade of the entire Chinese coast was illegal.

Eiji Amau, Japanese minister to Switzerland, made it plain that Japan had no intention of returning to Geneva to sit at any council board that discussed the Far Eastern hostilities. Nippon resigned from the League after it had judged her the aggressor in the invasion of Manchuria in 1933.

$300,000,000 in New Money

SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY MORGENTHAU has agreed to issue $300,000,000 in cash against an equal amount of the treasury's "sterilized" gold. The move was believed to have been made because of recent weakness in the market for government bonds and a 16 per cent decline in the stock market over a period of about four weeks.

In addition, the open market committee of the federal reserve board announced that it had authorized the twelve federal reserve banks to buy additional amounts of short term government securities.

In some quarters, the treasury's move was interpreted as an about face by the administration, reversing its year-old policy of trying to prevent an untimely inflation.

Loyalists Ready to Pay Up

IT WAS reported in Geneva that the Spanish loyalist government and the American government had agreed upon $30,000,000 as a settlement for American claims arising out of the Spanish civil war. This, it was understood, would cover every kind of damage suffered by American business in Spain since the beginning of the war, including confiscation and appropriation of private property for military purposes, as well as material damages.

In voluntarily offering a settlement while the war is still going on, the Valencia government shattered revolutionary traditions. It was believed that the loyalists were anxious to emphasize the fact that they are not the revolutionary government, but the real government of Spain, and consider prompt payment of claims one of the best ways of keeping the respect of other nations.

Czechoslovakia Loses a Saint

THE "little father of Czechoslovakia," Dr. Thomas G. Masaryk, founder of the republic, died in Praha. He was eighty-seven years old. It was the efforts of Dr. Masaryk in the great capitals of Europe during the World war which made possible the creation of his country. Its people revered him as the symbol of their liberty, the patron saint of freedom. He was their first president, serving first in 1918, and being three times re-elected. In 1935, with old age coming upon him, he resigned his office to Eduard Benes, his colleague, who was at his bed when he lost the battle against the death he philosophically considered "the common enemy of mankind."

He once said: "If it must come I shall at least know I died fighting it."

Nazis Too Busy to Fight

A DOLF HITLER, German dictator, struck what might have been a cheerful note, in conference with foreign government representatives at the Nazi rally in Nuremberg, when he declared that Germany is too busy to become involved in any war. He said that the plans which he and other Nazi leaders have for the country would take from 20 to 40 years to complete, and that war might be disastrous.

"Hospital Horror"

By FLOYD GIBBONS Famous Headline Hunter

HELLO EVERYBODY:

You know, lots of adventures have happened because someone did the wrong thing somewhere along the line, but here's one that resulted from saying the wrong thing. It's the story of George T. Parker of Brooklyn, N. Y., and it's as fine an example of a horrible experience as I've come across in many a day.

It isn't that George talked out of turn, or tried to start an argument. No—there's nothing like that in this yarn. What little George did say, he said with the best and most peaceful intentions in the world. As a matter of fact, George was just out of the operating room and lying on a hospital bed when he said it. Birds in that fix don't go around looking for fights, and you and I know it.

But just the same, George sure talked himself into a sizable lot of trouble. Trouble that probably caused one death and came mighty near causing George's.

It was April of 1917. The United States had just entered the World war, and maybe you remember how we used to guard our bridges and railroad yards in those days. Well, that's what George was doing. He was a private in the Seventy-first regiment, and his company was sent to Kingston, N. Y., to guard a bridge over the Rondout creek. They had put a couple of freight cars on a siding and built bunks in them to house the men, and it is in one of those freight cars that George's story starts.

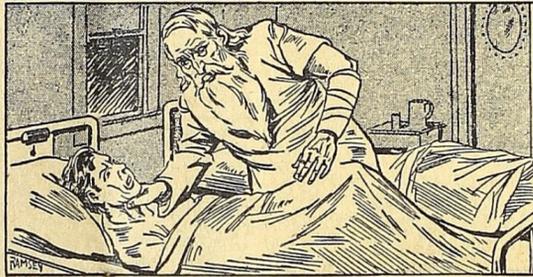

It was twelve midnight, and George was just leaving to take his turn at guard duty when he began to feel terrific pains. The doctor said it was appendicitis, and he flagged a train, loaded George on the baggage car and took him into the Kingston city hospital.

Bearded Old Man in Next Bed.

They held him in a ward for a day for observation. There were some twenty other patients in the room, and one of them was a bed-ridden fellow named Tony. He had been there fifteen years, poor devil, with a broken spine. But helpless as he was, Tony is the hero of this yarn. It was he who saved George's life.

While George was still under observation they brought in another patient—a bearded old man with a case of blood poisoning in his left arm. They put him in a bed right in front of George's and—well—somehow or other that old fellow gave George the creeps every time he looked at him.

In the morning they took George out to the operating room and the sawbones took out his appendix. They brought him back and put him in the same bed he had had before—right next to the old fellow with the beard who gave him the willies.

"Where Is That Fifteen Cents?" He Hissed.

For two days after his operation, George was a pretty sick man, what with the ether he had swallowed and the shock of being cut up by the surgeon. On the second day, the old fellow with the beard became delirious and started to rave, and that didn't help George's frame of mind any.

George Pretended to Be "Lenny."

"He was talking about some one named Lenny," George says, "and he kept it up until everyone started to complain. I thought it would be all right to try and pacify him, so when he called for Lenny again I answered him."

The trick seemed to work. The old fellow actually thought he was talking to Lenny. "What did you do with that junk in the attic?" he asked. And George answered, "I sold it." "How much did you get for it?" the old fellow wanted to know. And George told him, "Fifteen cents." After that the old fellow was quiet. At ten o'clock the lights were put out and George dozed off.

And then, suddenly, George woke up at the sound of a foot-step beside his bed. "I looked up," he says, "and there, staring down at me, was the old fellow. His eyes seemed to be popping out of his head and his good hand was reaching down for my throat. And in a low voice he hissed, 'Where is the fifteen cents.' It might have been funny—that situation—if it hadn't been so pathetic, too. But to George there was neither humor nor pathos in it—nor anything else but just plain terror. There he lay helpless, two days out of the operating room, and hardly able to lift a finger in his own defense, and over him stood a man out of his mind and plainly bent on violence.

Strangling Him to Death.

"I was petrified with fright," says George. "Perspiration began running off me like water from a faucet. The old man was in a long white nightgown, with his long hair hanging down over his shoulders and his white beard flowing over his chest. The moonlight was shining full on him and the very picture of him was enough to scare a man to death."

"I couldn't find my voice—couldn't utter a word. I put up my hand to protect myself, but it was weak and shaking. The old man grasped me by the throat and began to squeeze. His hand was strong, and it's lucky for me he didn't have two of them—that the other one was crippled with blood poisoning—or he might have strangled me then and there."

As it was that one hand wasn't any too gentle. George wondered if anyone in the room was awake. If he could only scream! But with the old man's fingers tightening on his throat, it was too late for that now. He wondered if he was going to die there, in the apparent safety of a hospital bed. And then, suddenly, the lights came on. Nurses and attendants came running to the rescue. Tony, the poor fellow with the broken spine, had brought help. He had awakened, seen what was happening, and pushed the buzzer that summoned the nurse.

The old man was taken away to a padded cell, and on the following morning he was dead. The exertion had been too much for him.

Where the Okapi Lives

The okapi lives placidly in the depths of the Belgian Congo and is highly esteemed by the pygmies of the region for his succulent meat, but also greatly feared because he can repel even a lion's attack with his battering-ram skull and his rib-crushing hoofs. Possessed of four stomachs, and eyes which operate independently of each other, allowing him to look two ways at once, he lives a solitary life behind the camouflage of his striped red and purplish markings. He is fastidiously clean. Every morning and night he bathes himself thoroughly, with the result that he is the most nearly odorless animal in all Africa. He is never bothered by ticks or flies. But this bathing enthusiasm of the okapi is also his Achilles' heel. He is usually caught in traps planted at his favorite watering hole.

Paramnesia

The word used when, although you are doing something for the first time, you have an odd feeling that you have done the exact thing before is paramnesia. It is a common experience, and, briefly explained, the reaction depends upon a little trick of the mind manifested by a momentary loss of a sense of time and space. The individual enters into an experience or a situation, obtains a fleeting impression of this situation, then the attention is momentarily attracted to something else. The period of time may be almost infinitesimal. Then upon the return of the attention to the original situation this lapse of time is lost to the individual and the period between the two experiences seems occasionally to expand into a long period, even into the remote past.

Washington Digest
National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—It always comes about that when a nation or an individual acts without thinking a problem through all of its angles, there is a fine mess at the end. There can be no surprise, therefore, in the mess confronting this nation over the policies and laws affecting the relations between labor and capital. The condition probably constitutes the worst mess of any we have seen in the last five years—and the end is not yet.

At the present time we find not only bitter strife between the old established American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization headed by John L. Lewis; a national labor relations board that cannot be described by any stretch of the imagination as being unbiased, and political leaders from President Roosevelt down the line are quite unable to determine what their position should be between the warring factions of labor. Meanwhile, we find employers wholly unable to deal with either faction successfully because of the interference of the labor relations board and the instability of responsible officials.

The case in point and the incident that brings the situation immediately before the American people involves a comparatively small number of workers but it exposes all of the fallacies that have been allowed to become part of the law of the land through the labor relations act which was forced through congress by Senator Wagner, New York New Dealer, with Presidential support. Let us review the picture:

Late in August, the United States district court in Pennsylvania issued a decree that the National Electric Products corporation of Ambridge, Pa., must sign a wage contract with the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, an organization affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. The court ordered the action as a result of difficulties between the American Federation of Labor and the United Electrical Workers which is connected with the Committee for Industrial Organization. The manufacturing corporation had no alternative but to comply with the court order. If it did not do so, its officials faced jail sentences for contempt.

Within a week thereafter, along comes the national labor relations board with a ruling that the manufacturing corporation must sign a wage contract with the Committee for Industrial Organization union or be subjected to the penalties and punishment provided in the Wagner labor relations act. The board took this position with full knowledge of the federal court decree. It went so far, even, as to say that "the decree (of the court) is no bar to the instant proceeding under the national labor relations act or to the making of an order by the board under the terms of that act, that the respondent shall cease and desist from discriminating against the employees because they decline to join the brotherhood." In other words, the board took the position that the Wagner labor relations act was the supreme law of the land and the board, therefore, was the sole arbiter regardless of the court action.

I do not know anything about the merits of the workers' claim that the manufacturing company had mistreated workers, had fired men for union activities or had engaged in attempts to break up union organization. Those claims may be fully justified; indeed, the chances are that there was anti-union activity on the part of the corporation and that it should receive a legal kick in the pants for these things. But whatever that situation is, the fact remains that the national labor relations board consistently has horned into every controversy and, whether it means to be that way or not, its actions have been favorable to the Lewis Committee for Industrial Organization.

Further, among the most extreme of the New Dealers themselves, one frequently hears the observation that the labor relations board has given no consideration at all to the rights of the employer. Of course, the board claims it is acting under strict construction of the law. Then it holds that congress intended it to take the place of the courts in deciding as between labor groups. It is to be remembered, however, that all members of the board are appointees of President Roosevelt and the presumption naturally follows that Mr. Roosevelt must approve of the board's policies. It is too much to suppose that the board would act against the wishes of the man who named its individual members.

All of these facts make it appear that instead of having a labor policy, we have on the statute books a law that has led us straight into the mess that I described at the beginning of this discussion. I am wondering when it can be or will be corrected. Superficially, the facts of the labor relations board history thus far make it appear that the members of that board are aligned with John L. Lewis and the tactics he has employed. If they are, and if President Roosevelt wants to protect trade unionism in this country, it seems to me he ought to get rid of the members of that board and name commissioners who can be fair between the two labor groups whether they want to consider the rights of those who pay the wages or not.

Lewis' Outburst

On top of the situation I have described comes a fresh outburst from John L. Lewis in the shape of a threat against those officially responsible for administration of federal affairs. In fact, few persons could have heard the Lewis Labor day radio speech without realizing that the shaggy haired C. I. O. leader was telling Mr. Roosevelt to refrain from placing any obstacle in the C. I. O. pathway. Some commentators went so far as to say that Mr. Lewis had slapped the President's face in that speech.

It will be recalled how some time ago the President told the newspaper correspondent in a press conference that he was taking no sides between the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. The expression he used was a line from Shakespeare: "A plague on both your houses." I quote Mr. Lewis' reply to that remark:

"It ill behooves one who has sipped at labor's table and who has been sheltered in labor's house to curse with equal fervor and fine impartiality both labor and its adversaries when they become locked in deadly embrace."

Thus it becomes plain, I believe, that Mr. Lewis is determined to go forward with his labor problems into the depths of politics. From his $25,000 home in Alexandria, Va., Labor Leader Lewis directs the hundreds of subordinates, the reds and pinks, the whites and blacks, from which he apparently expects to develop a political organization strong enough to control this nation.

President Roosevelt is on another "inspection trip" of the nation. Before he left, he told the press that he wanted to see for himself what the New Deal had accomplished, explaining that there would be a few speeches, but that there would be more "intake than outgo" on the trip.

Washington political observers almost unanimously agreed, however, that the inspection trip had a much deeper purpose. They noted that the President was visiting various states from which there were members of the United States senate who had opposed the President's plan to increase the Supreme court by six appointees of his own choosing. Among these senators were Wheeler of Montana, Burke of Nebraska, Clark of Missouri, and O'Mahoney of Wyoming. They noted further that some representatives who had been outspoken in opposition to the court bill were privileged to have the President visit their home districts.

These political students arrived at the conclusion I have mentioned despite the declaration of Postmaster General Farley who, as chairman of the Democratic National committee, said that there would be no reprisals against senators and representatives who had opposed the court bill. Mr. Farley's promise of no reprisals came, however, after the now famous radio speech by Senator Guffey of Pennsylvania. Mr. Guffey is chairman of the Democratic senatorial committee which has the job of promoting election of Democratic candidates for the senate. When he said, therefore, that opponents of the court bill ought to be defeated and listed the names of a number of senators who should not be re-elected, it does seem that there may be a connection between the Guffey speech and Mr. Roosevelt's inspection trip. Some commentators have been uncouth enough to assert that the inspection trip by the President was for the purpose of determining whether it would be possible for the New Deal to obtain destruction of those Democrats who had disagreed with the White House.

Aside from the court bill, it seems entirely reasonable to suppose that Mr. Roosevelt desires to gain knowledge of the country's general temper. He has refrained from announcing whether he will call a special session of congress this fall to take up agricultural legislation, saying only that he will decide later. Secretary Wallace is very anxious that this shall happen. Officials of his department have been traveling by plane, train and motor through the country during the last two months in an effort to build up sentiment for the secretary's kind of farm legislation. They have been making these trips at taxpayers' expense, too.

what Irvin S. Cobb thinks about:

The Big Book Craze.

SANTA MONICA, CALIF.—We're promised a historical novel longer than any yet—say half a million words or so. Of course, the author probably uses some words at least twice, but that won't reduce the gross tonnage unless they're very short words.

I can't take it. While still convalescent from "Anthony Adverse," I was stricken down by "Gone With the Wind" and had such a relapse that even now I barely can hold on my stomach such comparatively light and trifling stuff as volume VET to ZYM of the encyclopedia.

When reading this modern bulk literature, it upsets me to find my legs going to sleep before I do. And the constant pressure makes callouses on my second mezzanine landing.

I admit these mass production books serve nicely as door stoppers and for pressing wild flowers. I also heard of a chap who detected a prowler under his window and dropped a frothy little work of fiction weighing slightly less than nine pounds on the back of the fellow's neck, dislocating three vertebrae. At last accounts, the surgeons were still picking long jagged chapters out of his spine.

In my present mood, what I crave is the romantic stuff of old days, in which our sainted Aunt Sophie was wont to inscribe "Alas, how sad!" or "Only too true!" in pale violet ink on the margins. What happened to all the Aunt Sophies, anyhow?

An Actor's Temperament. WE'VE all been waiting for something to top it, but the best wheeze of the month remains the one that was emitted, not by a paid gagster, but by a simple stagehand at one of the studios when Mr. Leslie Howard refused to go on making a picture until a group of distinguished visitors, including Mr. Charles Norris, the novelist, had been shooed off the set.

"He ain't sore at you gents," stated the stagehand to the ousted parties, "but he's been playin' 'Hamlet' on the regular stage and he ain't used to havin' a crowd watchin' him while he's actin'."

If Mr. Norris and his friends wanted to see some really great acting they should have patronized the professional wrestling matches. That's where they put on the heavy dramatic stuff—beautifully rehearsed, perfectly done.

Children's Education I LIKE the way the wealthy classes in England rear their children. Little Rosemary doesn't recite for the company after dinner, and if Master Jones-Terwilliger Minor gets uppity at school, he gets thrashed.

Many a rich American has known how sharper than a serpent's tooth it is to see his daughter grow up a wanton and his boy turn out a wastrel. Yet, with few exceptions—so few that the newspapers comment on them—it never seems to occur to these fond fathers that less of coddling and pampering and spoiling in adolescence and more of wholesome discipline might produce a higher average grade of heirs.

What set me to thinking along this line was being 't'other night at a party where a poor little four-year-old, having already the pitiable assurance of a veteran prima donna, was fetched in to give impersonations. She never again could impersonate natural babyhood though, more's the pity! And her pert small brother was encouraged to dominate the talk.

Mark my word for it, that kid is going to come to no good end—not even a well-spanked end, which would help.

Mr. Pincus' Coup. IN THESE topsy-turvy times liberal-minded patriots who are striving to steer a middle course between ultraenthusiastic left-wingers and ultraconservative rightists might do well, methinks, to follow the example set by Mr. Pincus.

Mr. Pincus had opened a clothing store. Immediately on one side of him was the clothing store of Mr. Ginsberg and immediately on the other side was the clothing store of Mr. Dreifus; and three clothing stores in a row were too many even for Essex street.

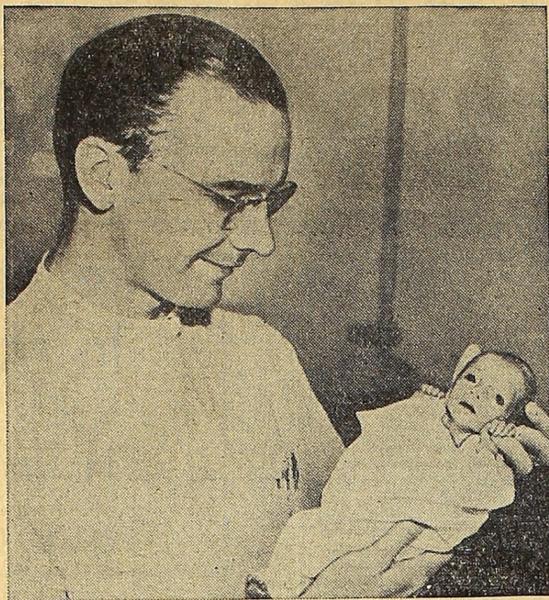

So the adjacent competitors framed a plot to put the newcomer out of business. Next morning their rival, coming down to open up, found over Mr. Dreifus' establishment a flaming legend, to wit:

BANKRUPT SALE And above Mr. Ginsberg's door was this equally prominent announcement:

CLOSING OUT SALE Within an hour, smeared across the entire front of Mr. Pincus' store, exactly in between the other two, appeared a huge sign reading as follows:

Scientists Blame River for Land "Sink" in Idaho

Disturbance What Geologists Call a Landslip.

Washington.—On the basis of reports and photographs received recently from its field office in Idaho, the geological survey, Department of the Interior, announces that the land disturbance near the Salmon Falls river, in the vicinity of Buhl, is a landslide of the gradual, modified type known to geologists as a landslip. The reports refute the theory that a "sink" had developed in the region.

The performance is neither supernatural nor mystical, nor is it without precedent, the geologists declare. Land will continue to settle by either the landslide or "sink" methods until the underlayers of the earth are definitely located, set in place, and established, maybe 5,000,000 years from now, maybe 20,000,000; even geologists are uncertain.

River's Performance Explained. Idaho's performance is explained in detail. The Salmon Falls river, southern tributary of the Snake river, has cut a rather steep-walled canyon into the silty beds of the Snake river plains. The river undercuts the canyon walls from time to time and large masses of earth break away, some of them settling in the bottom of the canyon and others on the sides. The blocks that break off are of various sizes, and as they begin to break cracks appear at the landward edges. In the case of large blocks, these cracks may sometimes be several hundred feet from the edge of the canyon. This appears to be the case in the phenomena at Buhl.

Sometimes a great block may slide suddenly in one avalanche to its final resting place; more frequently it moves a little at a time, settling gradually into its new position. Movements of this kind may result directly from undercutting of the base of cliffs by streams or from irrigation which soaks the soil.

Citing other land demonstrations within the memory of this generation, the geologists recall an occurrence near Sharon Springs, Kan., on March 9, 1926, when a tract of good farm land 350 feet long and 250 feet wide suddenly collapsed and sank to a depth estimated by early visitors to be 200 feet or more. The cause was assigned to a cavern developed in the underlying chalk beds.

House Swallowed in Virginia.

Some years earlier, August 10 to 12, 1910, a series of three "sinks" developed in the streets on the outskirts of Staunton, Va. One small frame house was engulfed, a neighboring brick house was partly destroyed, and a fire house was partly undermined. This, as well as the Kansas catastrophe, was attributed to "sinks."

Also the "landslide" has produced some memorable and outstanding disasters, the repeated slides during construction and early operations of the Panama canal being most familiar. In that instance the Culebra cut was bordered by rocks of volcanic derivation, rendered unstable by frequent wetting and by the steep sides of the cut.

Similar slides occurred in the valley of the Gros Ventre river, 35 miles south of Yellowstone National park, on June 23, 1925. Heavy rains and melting snows in the mountains had saturated clay layers and a mass of rock estimated at 50,000,000 cubic yards slid suddenly down the valley with such force that it piled up 350 feet against the cliffs on the opposite side and partly slumped back again. The slide dammed the river and produced a lake several miles long. The dam partly gave way in May, 1927, and caused a flood which swept down Snake river, carrying away bridges and causing loss of six or seven lives. This disaster occurred in the Snake river plain, the same region as the present Idaho disturbance.

Town Plans to Restore Early Names of Streets

Lewes, Del.—Modern names of local streets are to be replaced by the quaint designations used by Colonial residents.

The board of town commissioners has ordered the changes following a petition presented by the Rotary club. The movement for the change in street names was started six years ago by Mrs. Kenneth E. Stewart, of Biltmore, a descendant of an old Lewes family.

Renaming the streets is part of a civic program to restore the town, as has been done on Cape Cod and in parts of Virginia.

Some of the names to be changed are Park avenue to Ship Carpenter street, and Kings street to Kings highway. The only street whose name will not be altered is Pilot Town road.

BOULDER-LAKE ENDS ANCIENT INDUSTRY

Salt Mine Isolated by Rising Waters Behind Dam.

Las Vegas, Nev.—Waters of Lake Mead, slowly piling up behind Boulder dam, are wiping out an industry which thrived as far back as 500 A. D.

The old St. Thomas salt mine, with its mountain of salt 300 feet high, said by scientists to have been worked by Pueblo Indians as early as the start of the Fifth century, is beginning to disappear. Eaten away by the man-made lake, residents are wondering if the great pile of salt will contaminate the waters to any extent.

Several years ago the ancient salt mine attracted scientists from afar when evidences were discovered that man, in the dawn of history, had engaged in industry there. Digging tools, fashioned from rocks tied together with leather thongs, were dug up. They proved, said archeologists, that the mine was the base of one of the principal workings of the Pueblo Indians who inhabited the territory about 500 A. D. until about 1200 A. D.

The more modern history of the mine started in our own early western days when the first of the Bonelli family, emigrating from Switzerland, settled in the St. Thomas section and became influential in its development.

There the Bonellis, according to old timers, organized the Virgin River Salt company and operated the mine and a salt mill for many years. Finally, the Virgin River company died and the mine was worked intermittently by various residents of the area. During the last few years thousands of tons of salt have been taken out.

The old mine lies at the base of the salt mountain, but already the rising waters of Lake Mead have covered the road over which millions of tons have been hauled through 14 centuries, and today the ancient workings are isolated, approachable only by boat.

Unwanted Effect

Sometimes a soft answer can be so utterly soft as to loose one's wrath instead of turning it away. Yes, tolerance can be mere laziness.

People do not loosen up on the purse-strings until you reach their heart-strings.

How many have discretion enough not to disagree with others when it doesn't matter?

For You Make an Enemy

In an argument with a fellow-being when you win, you lose.

"Youth is a blunder," said Disraeli. But there's where men get their wisdom.

Peace of mind and approximate happiness might perhaps be any man's who will live a well-nigh hermit life; but the poor chap hasn't the fortitude to do it.

A man goes back for a second thrill after experiencing the first one and finds that the kick is diminished.

Unbearable Suffering

I HAVE suffered much, but I am now fully convinced that no man has any right to grumble if he can be ill without experiencing the torture of feeling that if his illness continues for any length of time there will be poverty and inadequate education for the ones that he loves.

Be understanding with those who in their illness are haunted by fears for the future; seek to understand what it is that lies behind their complaining, and ask God to prevent you from being clumsy when you try to give them a message of hope.

Household Questions

Cleaning Brass.—Never use vinegar to clean brass. Though it cleans at first, it soon causes tarnish. The proper materials for cleaning brass are oil and rottenstone.

Removing Tobacco Stains.—Tobacco stains may be removed from washable materials by moistening with lemon juice and bleaching in the sun.

Egg as Cleanser.—The yolk of egg may be used for removing mud, chocolate or coffee stains from any kind of material except velvet. Rub into the stain, wash off with warm soapy water, and rinse thoroughly.

Treating Dry Glue.—Vinegar added to dry glue will make the glue fit for use again.

Cheese and Tomato Salad.—Three ounces of cheese, two medium-sized tomatoes, seasoning, salad cream, lettuce leaves. Grate the cheese fine, then skin and chop up the tomatoes and mix to a paste with the cheese, adding seasoning to taste. Serve the mixture on individual plates, surrounding with lettuce leaves. Sprinkle the salads with a little finely grated cheese and decorate with small pieces of tomato. WNU Service.

"If you really feel I'm all right, I'll go back, of course." She was glad of the interruption of the telephone bell. Mr. Terriss grabbed his hat. "I'm going along," he said. "You keep right on doing like you've been doing and you'll turn up something before long that'll give us the right steer. I'm certain of it. Let me hear from you as often as you can."

Curt had a suggestion. "We'll go see a news reel and then stop in at a nice little club I know about and have a sandwich and listen to the music, there's a wench there who sings 'Stormy Weather' like nobody's business. I'll be down for you presently."

CHAPTER X

"But I tell you, Elinor, that if he doesn't enter in February he'll have to wait until next fall." Mr. Cayne had invaded his wife's room and stood, the picture of exasperated powerlessness, reflected by her mirrors in every direction. She was there, too, the indomitable piece of fluff, which does not combat but slips away untouched from strength and force, her peach velvet negligee lay around her shoulders carelessly and she adjusted it into a more becoming line. Rachel, every curl banished, neat as a nun in her gray afternoon taffeta, concentrated on the tiny darn she was placing over a cigarette burn in one of Mrs. Cayne's lace slippers, tried to look as blank as Mr. Terriss and not miss a syllable.

"Do you like this color on me, Peter?" Elinor Cayne asked at last. "We weren't talking about that. Listen, I want Holbrook to enroll in the spring term of the university."

"But I thought this year's classes were all arranged, or enrolled, or whatever they do."

"He can take special work. Better for him than loafing and running around to parties with all these crazy kids."

Rachel wondered if Elinor's indifference could be as complete as it seemed. She stitched more slowly, she must know what Mr. Cayne and his wife had to say about Holbrook's friends, for so far she had been able to discover nothing significant about them.

"They're really very sweet, Peter. Of course they're young and thoughtless." Her tone implied: "And you're old and set."

Mr. Cayne caught the implication fully. "Oh, I know you think I'm in my dotage, but that's beside the point. Holbrook must have an education, this is the time of his life when he ought to be studying hard."

"Holbrook would study hard if you'd let him go to art school."

"Now, Elinor, look here, I've gone into this art racket thoroughly. What'll it get the boy? He can be an illustrator of stories for magazines, or he can draw pictures to go with advertisements or into catalogues, and unless he's a top-notch artist neither one will give him anything but a poor living. If he paints portraits and landscapes and murals—well, my God, think of the square miles of canvases that are covered every year and what per cent of 'em sells? Be practical about it! An artist has got to be mighty good, in the first rank, and then he's got a long hard struggle and mayn't land anywhere."

"We Weren't Talking About That."

Elinor's face twisted in rage, her voice shrilled. "You never cared anything about Holbrook, ever since he was born you've wanted to make him into a hard miserly money-grubber like you are yourself! You think that's all there is in life! There's everything you don't see—beauty—and pleasure—and—"

"O Lord, hysterics again! If you'd just talk things over reasonably,"

"You don't want reason—you only want your own stupid way. But I'll fight for my child—he's not going to be ruined by your loathsome materialism."

Mr. Cayne went out of the room, banging the door; his wife burst into tears of temper.

"I'm the most miserable woman in the world," she sobbed, "I don't know why I ever married him. I was nothing but a child. I was so young—and so ignorant—and now I'll have to do my face all over again! It's maddening to cry!" She turned sharply to Rachel, who was still working over her long-finished darn. "Don't sit there like a dummy. Bring me my special cream out of the bathroom—no, bring me a towel wrung out of hot water—and get some ice from Lena—hurry, hurry, I'll be as red as a lobster, and puffy—I could kill Peter Cayne when he's mean and obstinate like this."

Rachel, soon standing ready with lumps of ice wrapped in gauze, trying to look impersonal and yet concerned, was thinking in an odd, lost way: "She loves Holbrook, she loves him in that crazy possessive way I missed in Anne. I wonder why she loves him so much and didn't care enough about me even to try to keep me? I wish I could understand her better. Queer, I've almost stopped thinking about her as my mother, it only comes on now and then." Aloud, "Here's the ice, Mrs. Cayne, if you'll hold it on your eyelids—"

"Don't fidget—you're dripping it all over me. You are the most awkward girl; here, give it to me. Now go and see if Mr. Cayne's gone out. If he has, tell Mr. Holbrook I want to see him. If Mr. Cayne's still here, come back and tell me and don't speak to Mr. Holbrook."

Rachel hurried into the library. No sign of Mr. Cayne. Towers was coming from the drawing room where he had drawn the curtains for the evening. He said yes, Mr. Cayne had left just a minute ago, but he wouldn't be gone long, he had said he was going to walk around the block and buy some cigars. Towers nodded knowingly and whispered, "He's sore as a crab."

So Rachel tapped at Holbrook's door.

"Mrs. Cayne wants to speak to you, Mr. Holbrook," she said, primly.

"Is that you, Rachel?" came the boy's voice. "Wait a minute."

She opened the door and he beckoned her inside. The dandified dark green and gold brocade of his lounge suit was a bad contrast for the distress on his too-old, too-weak face. "I say, Rachel," he began, "does father pay you by the week?"

Rachel's first impulse was to say, "It's none of your business," but she reflected that this was her first chance to talk to the boy. "Yes, sir," she said, "he pays me by the week."

"Well, look, I'm in an awful jam, my allowance isn't due till the end of the month, couldn't you lend me something till then?"

"How much do you want, sir?"

"How much have you got?"

Rachel seemed to be calculating. "I could let you have five dollars, I guess," she said haltingly.

"Oh, damn, I've got to have more than that. Haven't you got any savings?"

"No, sir—but Towers and Lena have."

"Yes, I know, the swine! They wouldn't let me have a plugged nickel to save my life. Can't you raise more than five dollars? When do you get paid again—Saturday?"

"I might let you have eight dollars, but I need my Saturday's money."

"I need it worse than you do! The end of the month's next week, can't you let me have the eight dollars and the money you get on Saturday—how much is it, anyway?"

"Fifteen dollars," lied Rachel, "but I need that myself. You ask your father, Mr. Holbrook, he's nice and kind, he'll let you have it. Or your mother would."

"Nice and kind like a steel trap when it comes to money! And mother's as hard up as I am. Look here, you put the eight dollars under my pillow when you fix my bed tonight, will you?"

"What'd you need it so bad for?" asked Rachel. "My gracious, you're rich people, I shouldn't think you'd need to borrow anything."

The door was flung open and Mrs. Cayne stood there. "What are you doing in here?" she said savagely to Rachel. "I sent you to tell Mr. Holbrook to come and see me—"

Holbrook broke in glibly: "I asked her to come in and look at the way that dumbbell Rosie did my new shirts. I wanted her to speak to Rosie, I never see her."

"Oh, was that all? Where are the shirts?"

"She just put 'em back in the drawer and was going. I'm sorry I kept you waiting, beautiful. Don't be cross. It spoils you." He lounged over to his mother, put his arm around her neck and winked at Rachel over her shoulder. "Anyway I'm glad you came—what did father say about the school?"

"That's what I wanted to talk to you about—go ahead, Rachel, attend to your work."

Rachel went out, very straight and tall and angry. Her feelings against these two had darkened and increased. "I don't like them!" she thought with all the ruthlessness of youth. "I don't like them! Mr. Cayne's the only decent person in the family—and he's the only one not any kin to me."

She went back to the kitchen where Lena was preparing dinner. "Can I wash that salad for you?" she asked mechanically.

"I wish you would, I can't see when the stuff's clean any more. My glasses oughta be changed, but I can't seem to get round to it."

Rachel took the salad to the sink, filled a pan with water and turned on the light just above it. "Lena," she said, "I'm going to tell you something because I'd like your advice. Mr. Holbrook just asked me to lend him my wages till he gets his allowance first of the month. D'you think I ought to do it—I mean wouldn't Mr. and Mrs. Cayne be sore if they found it out?"

Lena's hand paused above the roast she was larding. "Oh, he's begun on you, has he, the little devil? Well, I don't now what this world is coming to! No, don't you let him have a nickel. You'll never get it back if you do. He's had—let's see—in the past year or so—he's had over a hundred from me and half as much again from Bert, and he's never paid back a penny."

"But doesn't he get an allowance?"

"He gets a bigger allowance than your wages or mine neither. He gets plenty! No fear of that."

"What does he spend it on, then?"

"The Lord only knows, helling around playing the Crown Prince, I guess. I told him this summer whiles we was in the country that I'd not let him have another cent, and Bert did the same, and he tried it on Yates, then, but Yates was smart, told him he was all tied up in a mortgage and said to Bert and me that he'd lose his job before he'd let that young monster put it over on him. Don't you begin it, for mark my words it'll be a gift and not a loan."

"Why don't you or Mr. Towers speak to Mr. Cayne?"

"How can we, and him so good and kind and trying to do his best for the boy and her all the time hampering him and cutting across his intentions! He's got so much trouble with them both—Bert did threaten the boy he'd tell on him, but we can't do it, we think maybe he'll grow out of it. Lotsa kids get a wild streak about this time, when their bodies've grown up and their wits are still children. See what I mean? I'd cut my hand off for Mr. Cayne, let alone bearing the loss of a hundred dollars. But you stay out of it. Let his ma wheedle the cash for him, she's done it before and she'll do it again."

Rachel dropped the clean wet remains into the salad bag and whirled it blithely around. "Then I'm going to save my eight dollars," she said. "Thank you for telling me. I'll never mention it."

"I know you're not the kind to blab," allowed Lena, handsomely. "I knew that from the first."

It was two days later, in the afternoon, when Lena called Rachel to the laundry where she was doing some of the endless pressing required by Mrs. Cayne. "Look at here," she said, "here's the master's special curry ordered for tonight and bled if I'm not out of curry powder. Skip out and get it for me, will you, that's a good girl. There's just the one shop that carries the kind I use and they'll never get it here if I phone and Bert's not up on her jewelry. I do that every few days now. And the bracelet's gone."

Rachel followed him into Mrs. Cayne's room, watched while he unlocked the safe and took out a worn blue leather box. "There—peridot brooch, pink pearl pendant, topaz and enamel chain, moonstone cameo brooch, carved lapis bracelet and those three rings. The sapphire bracelet was here last Saturday. I haven't looked them over since." He put the colorful trinkets back in the box and closed the safe.

Rachel had never felt less like a detective, but she followed her instructions. "I'll find out who's been in the house since Saturday and—will you notify Terriss, or shall I?" As she said this she recalled Holbrook and his need of money, and the fact that she hadn't put the eight dollars under his pillow as he had asked, nor had he said anything about the omission. She had supposed that he had got the money from his mother, as Lena had said he would. But now—her suspicion came alive.

Mr. Cayne divined her double thought. "What is it, who've you got in mind?" he demanded. "Was anyone here while I was out—any of Mrs. Cayne's friends, or Holbrook's? Quick, think!"

Rachel simulated intense thought. "No, no one came in for bridge, and Holbrook's had no friends except a couple of boys on Monday."

"I'd love to go," said Rachel, "I need some fresh air."

The man on the servants' elevator told her her cheeks were like the pink roses of Killarney as she came in, a compliment which Rachel received with pleasure. He was a jolly soul and Rachel liked him. She unlocked the door of the apartment gaily and found Towers and Lena waiting for her, their faces drawn and doubtful. "The master wants to see you in the library," said Towers, "right off. Don't take off your things."

Still clutching the curry powder, Rachel hurried in to Mr. Cayne. He was pacing the floor. "Well, Miss Vincent," he began, "the thief's been at it again. It's a sapphire bracelet this time."

Rachel's lips parted in amazement. "Are you sure? When did you miss it?"

Too Much Water in Tissues

By
DR. JAMES W. BARTON
© Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

SOMETIMES you see an overweight man or woman, who, instead of having a red or rosy complexion, looks unusually pale, in fact, "pasty" describes their appearance accurately. They are suspected of having heart and kidney trouble, as this pale, podgy appearance is often present in chronic inflammation of the kidneys. However, when the finger is pressed into the flesh, the flesh does not "pit," and this overweight and pasty appearance is simply due to too much water being allowed to remain in the body tissues.

Now this condition is believed to be due to some disturbance in the pituitary gland lying on the floor of the skull. This little gland seems to regulate to a considerable extent both the water and the starch consumption by the body tissues. Unlike the ordinary or usual overweight cases where the excess weight is due to overeating, these pasty podgy individuals are really not large eaters; in fact they are small eaters. Thus many have been known to retain their weight on 700 calories a day, which would be about one-third the amount of food eaten by the average individual of the same weight and height.

"The patients are usually young (twelve to twenty years of age). The output of urine from the kidneys is much below normal, being about one pint a day, whereas the normal output should be more than twice that amount. Such are the characteristics of the 'water retainers' as these individuals are called."

Method of Treatment.

You can thus see that the accumulation of water is a big factor in weight production.

Naturally if the pituitary gland is at fault in these cases it would be thought advisable to give by mouth or injection some extract of pituitary gland.

In outlining the treatment for these "water retainers," Dr. A. H. Douthwaite in the British Medical Journal says:

"Treatment consists of (1) cutting down the fluid intake to about 1½ pints a day; (2) limiting or cutting down on salt by avoiding salt entirely, both at the table and in the cooking; (3) giving a diet of low caloric (fuel or food) value as follows:

Six large bananas
¼ pints of skimmed milk
¼ of medium sized cabbage or lettuce.

"Divide the above into three or four meals. Loss of weight will be about one-half pound daily. After two to three weeks substitute for two bananas two eggs and a little butter and green vegetables. Fish and lean meat a week later.

"(4) The use of small doses of calomel (mercury) beginning with very small doses (one-tenth to one-quarter grain), and gradually increasing it if there is no reaction or symptoms due to the mercury, or if there is not too much purging.

"The above complete treatment may be repeated four times a year if necessary."

Now this looks very simple but in this type of overweight—water retention—as in all types of overweight the reduction of food is bound to affect the whole body, and notwithstanding the benefit to the working processes of the body by the loss of this water weight, the heart may be affected and must always be watched carefully.

Women Fight Cancer.

Because millions of dollars are being spent and hundreds of research physicians are working night and day to try to discover the cause of cancer, many may have the idea that until that cause is found nothing can be done to save the lives of those afflicted with cancer. Yet every day men and women are attending clinics where by the use of the X-ray, radium, and the knife many are saved.

What should prove a powerful force in spreading the idea that cancer is curable is what will be known as "The Women's Field Army," sponsored by the American Society for the Control of Cancer. Without guns, without uniforms, without poison gas, a war is being launched. It is a war of education against one of the greatest menaces of life: cancer. The first drive against cancer is indeed a war to save human life. The soldiers are the women of America and the enemy is cancer.

The leaders of the organization feel that an educational drive, carried on over a period of years, can save perhaps 40 per cent of the 140,000 who die each year. This Women's Field Army will work through the medical societies of the states or provinces.

Lesson for September 26

GOD IN THE MAKING OF A NATION

LESSON TEXT—Deuteronomy 8:11-20.
GOLDEN TEXT—Beware that thou forget not the Lord thy God, in not keeping his commandments, and his judgments, and his statutes, which I command thee this day.—Deuteronomy 8:11.
PRIMARY TOPIC—To Help Us Remember.
JUNIOR TOPIC—The Giver of Gifts.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—God in the Making of a Nation.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—God in the Making of a Nation.

God in the making of the nation of Israel—this has been our general subject for a number of months. In this concluding lesson we meet up with a solemn warning that even though God's mighty works have been revealed on behalf of a people, it is possible for them to become proud and self-confident, forgetting him whose they are and whom they should serve, and perishing in their rebellion and sin.

I. "Beware That Thou Forget Not the Lord" (v. 11).

How could this people who had come up out of slavery and been led "through that great and terrible wilderness" (v. 15), who had been fed by God's hand, who had received "water out of the rock of flint," who had become a great nation by his grace and blessing, now forget God? It would seem unbelievable, did we not know ourselves. We need this warning as badly as Israel. Shout a stirring "Beware" from coast to coast as this lesson is taught, for America is forgetting God. Space does not permit a review of the appalling facts here, but they are enough to make one's heart sick with sorrow and fear for the future of our nation.

II. "Lest . . . Thou Say . . . My Power" (vv. 12-17).

How trenchant and altogether fitting are the words of Scripture. Nothing could describe our times more succinctly and accurately than v. 17. Men are glorying in their ability to do things. Science has made mighty strides forward. Industry has brought forth so many striking developments that a single company is able to present as a reflection of its own work a veritable "House of Magic."

We honor those who by skillful hand and brilliant brain produce excellent and thrilling results. But our question is, "How many are there who say, 'God has done this thing. He gave the strength and the skill. His is the honor?'" Some there are who thus recognize him, but they are few indeed. Their name is legion who say in their heart, "My power and the might of mine hand hath gotten me this wealth" (v. 17). God, forgive us, cleanse us, and give us grace to walk humbly before Thee!

III. "Remember the Lord . . . He . . . Giveth Thee Power." (v. 18).

Joseph Parker points out that a deep conviction of the fact stated in v. 18 "would turn human history into a sacrament." He says, "What a blow this text strikes at one of the most popular and mischievous fallacies in common life—namely, that man is the maker of his own money!" He makes a stirring plea (see People's Bible, Vol. IV, p. 188) for bringing God, who has been "crushed like a rose leaf in the Bible," into the market place, into the office and the warehouse, for if man will make "his warehouse into a church" he will never turn the church into a warehouse.

Would that we could once and for all do away with all "Sunday religion," and bring the gospel of grace and the laws of God into the office, the factory, the school, and the home, for every day and every incident and transaction of life.

IV. "If Thou . . . Forget . . . Ye Shall . . . Perish" (vv. 19, 20).

Reading this passage in the light of our knowledge of what did happen to Israel, we agree that the warning was needed, even though it was not heeded. Shall we then dismiss the matter with perhaps an expression of regret that they so disobeyed God and missed his blessing? If we do we miss the most important point in our lesson, for the fact is that our nation is just as dependent on God, and in just as much danger of forgetting him and perishing.

God punished even his chosen people in the day that they forgot him. Let not America think that she will escape if she goes on her way, forgetting God. We plead again, as we did last Sunday, for a deep going revival among God's people, and a renewed zeal for the salvation of lost men and women.

Every Day

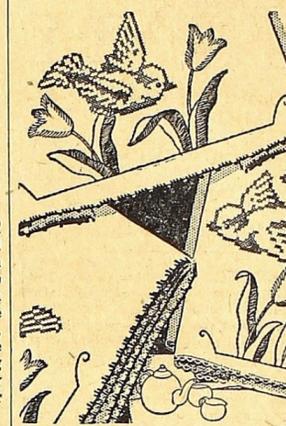

Happy and strong and brave shall we be—able to endure all things, and to do all things—if we believe that every day, every hour, every moment of our life is in His hands.—Van Dyke.

Monuments of the Great

Monuments! what are they? The very pyramids have forgotten their builders, or to whom they were dedicated. Deeds, not stones, are the true monuments of the great.—Moley.

The Subconscious Mind

The expressions, conscious and subconscious mind, are well defined psychological terms. The subconscious mind may be defined as anything that is neither in the focus nor in the margin of the consciousness (that is, that does not receive attention and cannot be regarded as an actual experience of the moment) but which, nevertheless, must be assumed to be influencing the mind in some way.

HOW OFTEN CAN YOU KISS AND MAKE UP?

NEW husbands can understand why a wife should turn from a pleasant companion into a shrew for one whole week in every month. You can say "I'm sorry" and kiss and make up easier before marriage than after. If you're wise and if you want to hold your husband, you won't be a three-quarter wife.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tune up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three ords of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."

Don't be a three-quarter wife; take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and Go "Smiling Through."

HELP KIDNEYS

To Get Rid of Acid and Poisonous Waste

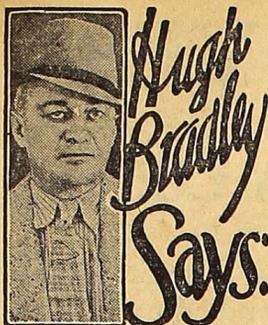

Your kidneys help to keep you well by constantly filtering waste matter from the blood. If your kidneys get functionally disordered and fail to remove excess impurities, there may be poisoning of the whole system and body-wide distress.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination may be a warning of some kidney or bladder disability.

You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.

In such cases it is better to rely on a medicine that has won country-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Use Doan's Pills. A multitude of grateful people recommend Doan's. Ask your neighbor!

Bill Terry Can't Get Away From Managerial Job

THROUGHOUT most of his years in New York John McGraw wanted to be president of the Giants. That most people regarded him as the Giants made little difference. He wanted that particular executive job and he never got it.

Bill Terry, who succeeded McGraw as manager, has few characteristics in common with the late little Mac. But he does have such an amazing flair for winning pennants that most fans have come to regard him as the Giants. That fact, together with his new five-year contract for $40,000 or so a season, should make him very happy.

The probability, though, is that Bill will not be entirely at peace with himself, even if his red hot team comes up with another pennant and a world title this year. Like McGraw, Bill always has wished to get away from the playing end of the game, to distinguish himself in the bigger business departments. Like McGraw, also, it is improbable that his full wishes ever will be realized.

Thereby hangs a strange trend of thought. Players of forty years or so ago were generally reputed to be rough, tough, unlettered men. Yet many of them—Charley Comiskey, Clark Griffith, Jack Dunn are prize examples—have later achieved even more enduring fame and wealth as club owners or top-ranking executives.

Mister Ogden Writes a Letter

Enough of such things, though. What really started this piece was a letter from Jack Ogden. Jack was a star athlete at Swarthmore. He was a shrewd, work horse pitcher worthy of being rated along with Grove and Earnshaw when Jack Dunn's Orioles were winning their seven International league pennants from 1919 through 1925.

After that he pitched more than capably for the St. Louis Browns, Cincinnati, and another big time club or two. Now, for three seasons he has been business manager of the Baltimore Orioles. This year his team was off to a bad start and for a month or two looked worse than Jersey City. Now it is fighting for second place.

First place, of course, is safe, having been won long ago by those Newark Bears. Ogden's letter concerns those Bears, called by many, the greatest of all time minor league teams. From now on you are reading what Ogden has to say about them as compared to the Orioles with whom he played.

"In the first place the pitching staff of Earnshaw, Grove, Thomas and Parnham was much better than the present Newark pitching staff. With reference to myself, you can form your own opinion.

"I talked to Joe McCarthy this summer and he said that any big league club that had our pitching staff could have won the pennant easily. You know the record that Earnshaw, Grove and Thomas made in the big league and also in the World Series. Earnshaw, Grove and Thomas struck out over 300 men a year without the aid of night baseball. Look at the strikeout record of the present Newark staff.

"Richardson does not compare to Boley as a hitter but approaches him as a fielder. Fritz Maisel, our third baseman, was a big league player, playing in minor league company because he chose to live near home. Bentley was the best hitter in baseball while pitching and playing first base for us.

"Our outfield of Lawry, Jacobson and Walsh was better than the present Newark outfield with the possible exception of Keller. Keller, I think, is a natural and will be one of the greatest players in baseball.

"I think Rosar, the Newark catcher, has a bright career ahead of him. He is a very good hitter and very strong, thus being able to do a lot of work. I think you will hear from this young man in the future. "Yours, JACK OGDEN."

NOT IN THE BOX SCORE:

THE best line ever written about prize fighting was one carried for years in a New York afternoon paper. It was, "Don't bet on fights." . . . Teammates insist Joe Di Maggio's hitting is falling off because of that extra dough he is picking up doing commercial movies. Say he spends so much time in the studios that he is getting Kleig eyes . . . Art Rooney, the racetrack plunger who also owns the Pittsburgh pro football club, plans to buy Big Ed Smith's contract from Washington where the former N. Y. U. star is not precisely happy . . . The latest gag on steeplechase favorites is for the rider to lose his stirrup irons. In the good old days the riders just fell and then picked themselves up with the grace of acrobats.

Not all the hold-ups at Saratoga during the racing season reached the headlines. Several (and I am not referring to things happening in the track betting ring or around the town gambling houses) were kept under cover. There is to be stricter supervision next season . . . Incidentally, one of the Spa lake houses cleaned up $80,000 on the season in spite of an expensive overhead . . . Baltimore fans are giving Bucky Crouse an automobile in appreciation of the great job he has done in lifting the Orioles from cellar to first division since he was appointed manager a couple of months ago . . . Canarsie stadium wants the world to know that it has made $6,000 on its prize fight shows this outdoor season.

Bill Terry and one of the nation's sports editors are making faces at one another because they used to live in Memphis when both of them were young and ambitious . . . Mrs. Emil Denmark will race her successful stable in New York instead of her native Chicago because of the difficulty of getting along with the western officials . . . That celebrated sportsman, Buddy Walsh, who sells so many Posts around the upper West Side, is running for business agent in the Newspaper Mailers' Delivery union.

When Jack Curley Became Sports Editor

A bunch of newspaper men were sitting around the other night talking about what a swell guy the late Jack Curley was. One of them came up with this true tale of the time Jack promoted a fight in a western city and began a lifelong friendship.

For some reason the sports editor of the city's most important paper took a terrific dislike to Jack. He panned the fight day by day, letting poison drip into every word he scribbled.

On the day of the fight the sports editor fell off the water wagon. His daily panning and the buildup by the other reporters had created wide interest in the battle. The result was to be front page news.

Curley happened to pass the office at midnight, heard that the sports editor had fallen by the wayside and that soon there would be hell to pay because the story had not been written. Curley went upstairs.

The next day the paper had the city's best written and most complete story. From start to finish it was in the sports editor's best vein, dripping vitriol, panning the whole fight from opening bell to count of ten.

That afternoon the sports editor, sober but somewhat shaky and dim about what had happened, approached Curley, paper in hand.

"Everybody says you're a swell guy," he said. "I guess I did kind of lay it into you. Especially this story. It's terrible. I didn't mean to be so raw in it and call you so many names. I don't know how I came to do it."

"Oh, that's all right," said Curley. "Forget about it. You didn't. I wrote it myself."

The only important money bet on the Louis-Farr affair was on knock-outs and how many rounds the Welshman would last . . . As has been mentioned here frequently, Louis' hands are much smaller than the average heavyweight's and are soft and puffy. Probably they do get hurt easily in spite of the inordinate amount of bandage permitted him . . . A reader suggests Uncle Mike Jacobs should put the Brown Bomber in that elimination tournament, too . . . Another writes in to say that Marcellus must have just come back from a $23 ducat prize fight when he made that crack about Denmark in Act 1, Scene 4, "Hamlet." . . . A third mentions that Bob Pastor had Louis looking much worse than did Farr but, being a local boy, was not aided by maudlin sentiment and a magnificent radio build-up.

A fourth points out that one reason why so many gents are writing for fairness to Schmeling now is that the Nazi is the only gee certain to provide the Twentieth Century S. C. with a million-dollar gate next year . . . A fifth goes into details to show how Braddock, by coming in rearing, fought in the best possible way to lose his title . . . A sixth mentions that Farr and Manager Broadribb, previously known as virulent squawkers, took their defeat most gracefully.

Striking Wools for Town, Campus

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

SMART clothes are alive with fabric interest this fall. The wools that tailor to town and campus needs are especially intriguing and seeing that the first requisite of a perfect autumn wardrobe is a tailored outfit that will prove "first aid" no matter what apparel emergency may arise, here's telling you about the fascinating weaves that lead in fashion this season.

Tweeds especially have a lot of texture interest. They are nubbed and flecked in decorative weavings that capture your fancy at first sight. When you go tweed shopping, and of course you will if you are assembling a school-faring clothes collection, ask to see some of the new-this-season candlewick tweed, the latest herringbone weaves, smart diagonals, the houndstooth, tattersall, rosey plaid and sugar-leaf patternings, and you will feel, having seen these, that you have had a liberal education on the subject of tweeds at the very start.

The next thing is to decide on which tweed is the tweed you want most. To help you out we are suggesting a nubby beige tweed flecked with white such as makes the smart three-piece costume as shown to the left in the picture. Here is an outfit that is ideal for fall wear on campus or in town. It pretty near comes to being a whole wardrobe in itself. A suit that has a topcoat as has this is an economical buy no matter what it costs, for it takes care of the problem of an early fall coat since it can be worn as a separate wrap. Note its button-back revers, also the unpressed pleats running down from the slash pocket lines. The matching suit has a chic high lapel collar, triangular pockets and narrow leather belt. The skirt is cut straight and slim as a fashionable daytime skirt must be this season.

And we are not through talking about tweeds for we just must mention the especially lovely "winter pastels" that belong to the tweed family. More than likely you won't be able to resist them because of the fine shetland and other fine yarns used in the spinning. You can get novelty open weaves if you wish.

DRAPE AND SHIRT

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

A perfect afternoon frock for the young girl is this style in spongy texture lightweight wool. The draped button-over neckline and the shirring at the bodice are very new and attractive. A narrow gold-colored belt accents the fitted waistline. The skirt is softly flared.

Double-Duty Capes

Enter the double-duty shoulder cape, which may be looped up over the wearer's head and used as a hood.

Very youthful and attractive for campus wear is the two-piece frock of sheer rabbit woolen centered in the group. The pleated-all-around skirt bespeaks "last word" vogue. You really must have a pleated wool skirt if you are going away to school to wear with your sweater, with your suede jacket, and with blouses galore. The wide shoulder line, high lapel collar and front-buttoned jacket closing are nice points but we've saved the nicest point to the last—those cunning little bows on the pockets! Now there's an idea that's going to send you right to the head of the class. Made of the very self-same material as the suit itself these bows add infinitely to the chic of this most attractive outfit and make it outstanding.

A luxurious natural wolf tuxedo collar runs the length of the topcoat of this stunning three-piece costume shown to the right. The tout ensemble is made of novelty woolen with a diagonal rib weave in deep brown flecked with beige. This outfit is entirely in line with the vogue this season that calls for lavishness of fur on suits and coats. The tuxedo effects are especially good this season. Handsome furs will be used unsparingly with care taken in achieving color blends that unify the costume.

Citing other fashionable wool weaves, there are the new coating fabrics that have long hair interspersed and tightly embedded in the texture, their sheen contrasting against the soft surface of the fabric. Tightly twisted boucle nubs are also decorative and colorful. Persian lamb cloth is a new fabric this season. For children's coats, a new chinchilla fabric in soft colors is important. Fleeces, both woven and knitted, are in demand. Suedes, velours and duvetynes are outstanding for dressy wear. For formal type costumes broadcloth is a leader.

DAYTIME SKIRTS TO BE SHORT AND SLIM

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Short, slim and pencil-like is the dictum for daytime skirts. The accepted length for the suit skirt is from twelve to fifteen inches from the ground. Depends on how conservative you may be. Of a necessity these narrow skirts often have slashed hemlines. Daytime dresses hover about twelve to fourteen inches from floor.

For evening dresses the newest thing is the short-in-front hemline. In fact uneven hemlines are a most important styling detail. A few designers continue to favor the short full ballerina skirts for dance frocks. There are dinner gowns galore that are ankle length and sheathlike, for the most part in sleek black, many of which are enlivened with glittering touches.

The majority have high necklines with fluttering short sleeves. However, in the practical daytime dresses long sleeves perfectly fitted, also bracelet sleeve lengths are featured.

Slide Fasteners Used

The Schiaparelli type of housecoat developed in flannel and fastened at the front with a patent slide fastener is popular.

Flaring Youth

For college girls and the very young, important collections include gored, flaring skirts and some which are pleated all around.

When King George Received the Big News from America

Samuel Morse, inventor of the electric telegraph, had only one ambition as a young man and that was to become an artist. He studied under Washington Allston, then the greatest painter in the United States, and with Allston went to London in 1811. There he met Benjamin West who, although an American, was president of the Royal academy, and a great favorite with the king, who later made him Sir Benjamin West.

West was actually at work on a portrait of the king when the latter was handed the Declaration of Independence. Morse heard the piquant story from West himself, says Ernest Greenwood in "From Amber to Amperes." Here it is—as related by Morse:

Turning to the picture of the king, Sir Benjamin West said: "Do you see that picture, Mr. Morse? Well, sir, the king was sitting for me when the box containing the American Declaration of Independence was handed to him."

"Indeed!" I answered, "and what appeared to be the emotion of the king? What did he say?" "Well, sir," said West, "he made a reply characteristic of the goodness of his heart," or words to that effect. "Well," he said, "if they can be happier under the government they have chosen, then under mine, I shall be happy!"

Morse stayed four years in England where he achieved considerable success as a portrait painter. Then returning to his native country, he afterwards became president of the national academy and an eminently successful painter, his sitters becoming so numerous that he was unable to meet and fill all of his orders. It was during his return voyage to America in 1832, following a second visit to Europe, that Morse got his conception of the telegraph. Twelve years later—May 24, 1844—he gave a public demonstration of his invention, sending a message from Washington to Baltimore.

The rest is well known history.—Kansas City Star.

The Scales

WHAT goes up must come down. Or if you wish to put it in more scientific language: Action is equal to reaction and in the contrary direction.

This is the law of compensation. It is the one fixed, immutable law of life and it applies to everything, everywhere. It cannot be evaded or avoided. The working of it may be immediate or it may be a matter of centuries, but if we keep ourselves aware of it we may be saved disappointment and disillusion.

The extent to which we try to restrict that law is absurd. We speak of balanced budgets, balanced rations, and the balance of trade; but we quite ignore balanced lives and balanced sociology; so, in the end, Nature takes the job off our hands, with the consequent upheavals and disturbances.

We work or play to excess, we indulge our appetites and our senses to repletion, perhaps to gluttony, and when we suffer during Nature's work of restoring balance, we rail at fate.

In monarchy and republic we allow our thirst for power and for money to overbalance our lives, both individually and socially, then blame God and man for the chaos which attends the restoration of balance.

In all the affairs of life we may evolve philosophies and devise systems; but just so long as they are out of balance, individually, socially, industrially or governmentally, just so long will the scale teeter up and down to our discomfort.

If as individuals our lives are out of balance, the structure as a whole must also be out of balance; and in time that balance must be restored—by us or by THOSE WHO FOLLOW.—Ray S. Ayers in Detroit News.

First Choice OF FARMERS

FARMERS everywhere are saying that the amazing Firestone Ground Grip Tire is FIRST in performance and FIRST in economy. So many thousands of farmers are changing over to this wonderful tire that production has been greatly increased to meet the demand.

FIRST IN DRAWBAR PULL. The greater drawbar pull of this amazing tire accounts for its ability to do more work in a given time.

FIRST IN TRACTION. The patented Ground Grip Tread takes a deeper bite into the soil. Added strength to resist the strain of heavy pulling is provided by Gum-Dipping the cord body. Every fiber of every cotton cord is saturated with liquid rubber by this patented Firestone process. Two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords under the tread bind the tread and cord body so solidly together that we guarantee they will not separate.

FIRST IN ECONOMY. Saves up to 50% in fuel over steel-lugged wheels. Covers more acres per day. Low-cost Firestone cut-down wheel program permits using one set of tires on several different implements.

FIRST IN SALES. Firestone Ground Grip Tires have such outstanding leadership in performance that sales are soaring. Don't wait another day—see the Firestone Ground Grip Tire today at your nearest Firestone Implement Dealer, Tire Dealer or Auto Supply and Service Store.

Peculiar Hallucination

A most peculiar hallucination is the one in which a man constantly imagines that he sees himself or his "double." Not only does he see this apparitional individual peering at him from mirrors but often sitting in a chair as he enters a room or walking in front of him as he goes down the street. — Collier's Weekly.

Meaning of "California"

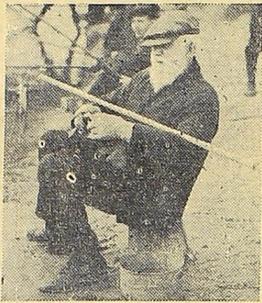

The name of the western State, here reduced to its Spanish interpretation, it is very possible that the aggressive advertising of its climate would be largely nullified for literally "California" is a combination of two Spanish words meaning "sun furnace." writes G. R. Tupper in the Kansas City Times. The Spaniards, who were the first white men to explore the state, gave to it this name because their interest was not in the cool verdant lands of the seacoast, but in the hot arid sections of the interior where it was believed gold was to be found.

Successful Efforts

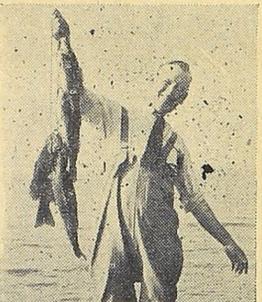

Efforts are always successes. It is a greater thing to try without succeeding than to succeed without trying.

They Want Fishing!

MORE than two-thirds of the inquiries to the East Michigan Tourist association mention fishing. There are all kinds of fishing—and fishermen—in Michigan. Here are a few:

EQUIPMENT is of minor importance to this quaint old gentleman who's having plenty of luck catching one of Michigan's most savory fish—perch. The place: Tawas City.

SOMETHING new in fishing is fly-casting for small-mouth bass along the Lake Huron shore. Location: Port Austin. Another bass fishing paradise is Bob Gillingham's famous Charity Island with headquarters at Caseville.

SPORTIEST of all game fish in Michigan is the brown trout. Sportiest place to catch them is the Au Sable. The successful angler is Kendrick Kimball who shows the same skill with the flyrod as with his typewriter on which he bangs out splendid features for The Detroit News.

LARGEST of all Michigan fish is "the one that gets away." It grows larger with each description. Study this picture and then try to estimate how large it will become some winter evening when it is verbally fought before the fireplace.

MICHIGAN'S famous fishing makes possible famous fishermen. Here's Jack Redhead, noted Au Sable guide and national trout fishing authority. Jack is a typical sportsman of the sportiest of states—MICHIGAN.

Where Mountain Lions Live

Mountain lions, variously called cougar, panther, puma, and catamount, range in the large wilderness areas west of the one hundredth meridian. They are hunted chiefly in the Rocky Mountain states and southward through the desert mountain ranges of Arizona, Texas and New Mexico. Farther westward they are less numerous, except in the coastal ranges of California, Oregon and Washington, where they are somewhat abundant.
