WILL MAKE FINAL PAYMENT NEXT MONDAY

Iosco County State Bank Finishes With 20 P. Dividend

The Iosco County State bank of Tawas City, closed at the time of the "bank holiday" will make its final payment to depositors and creditors next Monday. Depositors should mail or present their receipts to George Mundy, receiver, at Lincoln.

NOTICE

A 20% dividend will be paid to depositors of Iosco County State Bank, commencing Monday, October 11, 1937. Receiver's receipts should be mailed or presented to receiver at Lincoln, Michigan.

George Mundy, Receiver.

During the period of unrest previous to the "bank holiday" there had been a gradual withdrawal of accounts from the bank. When the banks were closed, depositors claims in it amounted to about $69,000.00. After the receivership was set up these were regularly reduced until now, when the final payment will be paid next Monday. The Peoples State Bank is one of the few banks permanently closed that has paid out 100 per cent without government aid. The results shown by the receivership would indicate that the Peoples State Bank was in an excellent condition at the time of the holiday.

He Returns Pension Preferring to Work

Declaring that he preferred to work at a newly acquired job rather than accept an old-age pension, John Samuelson said that he had obtained his first check back to the state. Samuelson said that he had obtained the job after applying for the pension and wanted to earn his own living as long as possible.

Supervisors Will Meet October 18

The board of supervisors for the county of Iosco will meet Monday, October 18, at the court house for the fall session, considered the most important meeting of the year. At this session the various appropriations are made and the taxes apportioned on the rolls in addition to the regular routine business of the county. The meeting was postponed from October 11 on account of the session of circuit court.

School Notes

As a device for studying the question of unicameralism the debate squad has been transformed into a senatorial assembly. The meeting Tuesday night took form of a legislative committee which had met to hear the appeals of contending lobbyists on the question of unicameralism. The debaters showed much originality and imagination as well as speech ability. Thursday night the senators will meet for a rousing discussion of the bill. We have material for two good teams this year and we hope they will win honor for good old Tawas High.

On Saturday, October 30, a debate tournament will be held at Flint Central High School. This is held to give the teams in this section a preliminary work out before the regular schedule begins. Each team is allowed to debate three times during the day, thus meeting three different schools. Our school can enter three teams. This, we feel, is a golden opportunity, for, in one trip our school can participate in nine debates, whereas, in the regular schedule of the season we only met four teams. This tournament gives them experience without counting against their league record. You can see that the trip is well worth its cost. Let's hope we can go.

Bar for Free Courts

CONVINCED that the independence of the federal judiciary is still threatened, despite the defeat of the plan to enlarge the Supreme court, the American Bar association, in session in Kansas City, voted unanimously to authorize a committee to keep up the fight to preserve the freedom of the courts, as recommended by a special committee. That committee said: "There appears to be no likelihood that efforts to re-make the courts of the United States will not be renewed. Your special committee is of the opinion that the association ought to maintain itself in readiness to meet such issues as they may recur, rather than to rely upon imprudent organization for the purpose."

The lawyers listened to many speeches, both attacking and defending President Roosevelt's court program and his appointment of Hugo Black to the Supreme court. The climax to all this came when Hatton W. Sumners of Texas, chairman of the house judiciary committee, arose to talk. He had a prepared address, but shifted to an extemporaneous talk in which he declared the people have lost control of the government of the United States and it has passed into the hands of a million people in its executive department, in which only one man was elected, and which the people could not control.

"What are we going to do about it?" Sumners cried. "Are you willing to join a battalion of death to save the Constitution and the government?"

"As we look to the future, we are rapidly approaching a crisis when it will be decided whether our economic system and our government will stand or fall. A very serious situation is before the people. It means we have got to do something soon. We have got to balance the budget. We have got to decentralize government responsibility."

Cummins Hasn't Quit Fight

ATORNEY GENERAL CUMMINGS in his press conference intimated strongly that the administration intends to push for the court reforms the President has demanded. To support this position he produced the annual report of the judicial conference composed of the chief justice and senior circuit judges. It recommended appointment of 16 additional federal judges. "In this report" said Mr. Cummings, "the judiciary has capitulated. They admit now there is congestion and delay in the judicial system. They ask for additional judges to provide relief. This is a complete capitulation and a welcome one."

O'Mahoney Butts In

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, on the way to Seattle, first entered the "enemy's" country when he crossed the border of Wyoming, the state of Senator Joseph O'Mahoney, leader of the anti-Supreme court enlargement forces. Mr. Roosevelt's train reached Cheyenne in the early morning, and there, among the welcomers, was Joseph, though he had pointedly not been invited to board the train. He walked alongside the President's car and Mrs. Roosevelt emerged, shook his hand and asked after Mrs. O'Mahoney.

Senator O'Mahoney

The senator then entered the private car and he and Mr. Roosevelt shook hands and said "Hello," but the atmosphere was decidedly chilling; he took leave of the party at Casper, Wyo., after accompanying the President and his group on a drive about that city.

The Chief Executive spent two days in Yellowstone National park, and then went on to Boise, Idaho; to the Bonneville dam near Portland, and thence to Seattle.

After a pleasant visit with his grandchildren, Mr. Roosevelt boarded the destroyer Phelps and went to Victoria, B. C., for a "good neighbor" call on Lieutenant Governor Hamber.

His schedule thereafter included a night at Lake Crescent, Wash., a drive around the Olympic peninsula ending at Tacoma, and then the eastward trip with stops at Grand Coulee and Fort Peck dams, Grand Forks, N. D., and St. Paul, and a few hours in Chicago to dedicate the new Boulevard bridge over the mouth of the Chicago river.

Soviet Helping China?

JAPANESE officials in Shanghai asserted they had learned that Marshal Galents-Bluecher, commander of the Russian Far East armies, was directing the Chinese campaign against Japan by telephone from his Siberian headquarters.

According to Domei, the Japanese news agency, munitions and other military supplies are being transported by trucks into China across the province of Sinkiang from Soviet Siberia. If these reports are true it may be Stalin has decided the time has come for Russia to take sides with China openly, and that would make things tough for the Japanese invaders.

Russia Warns Japan

TOKYO officials notified Moscow that the Chinese were plotting to attack the Russian embassy in Nanking with planes disguised as Japanese aircraft, for the purpose of involving the Soviet government in the Sino-Japanese conflict. With the equivalent of "Oh, yeah?," Russia retorted with a stern warning that it would hold Japan responsible for any bombing of the embassy, intentional or accidental. The Soviet officials said they considered the reported plot a "pure prevarication showing the intention of some Japanese military powers to bombard the Soviet embassy intentionally and then try to escape responsibility."

With callous brutality Japan continued the air raids on Nanking, Canton and other large Chinese cities, the bombs slaughtering thousands of helpless civilians. The utter contempt for protests of western nations shown by Japan seemed warranted by the failure to insist on respect for the nine-power treaty guaranteeing the territorial integrity of China. For this failure generallyissimo Chiang Kai-shek blames especially the United States. "This war," said he, "will last as long as Japanese aggression lasts in China."

The League of Nations adopted a resolution severely condemning Japan for the aerial bombardment of defenseless Chinese cities, and Tokyo, indignant, charged the league of acting without verifying the facts. To the protests of five great powers, previously filed, the Japanese government replied with the assertion that the bombing of Nanking was "necessary for our purpose."

The British public is becoming increasingly aroused against Japan and there is a general demand for a boycott of Japanese goods. The government has permitted an aircraft company to take a big order for fighting planes that will soon be shipped to China, and they may be manned by independent British pilots.

Yarnell's Policy Wins

ADMIRAL HARRY YARNELL was decidedly opposed to the policy of Washington to withdraw American warships from Chinese waters in the face of danger. His protests have been considered by the general board of the Navy department and his program approved. Consequently our naval vessels will remain there to protect our nationals "as long as the present controversy between China and Japan exists."

Auto Union Shake-Up

SEVERAL times Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers of America, has intimated that there were too many radicals among the leaders of that union. Now, allegedly for reasons of economy, he has got rid of some of them. These organizers have been let out: Victor Reuther, one of the leaders in the General Motors strike at Flint, Mich., last winter; Robert Kanter, Stanley Novak, Melvin Bishop and William Tonn of Detroit; R. D. Richter of Saginaw; Charles Rigby, Ohio; Frank McMillan, Kansas City; Eugene Stauder, Frank Bartee and Frank Schutz, Indiana.

Martin also announced he had promoted Loren Houser to be organizational director for Detroit. Elmer Dowell was made director of all General Motors locals in the nation. R. J. Thomas, international vice president, has been appointed director of all Chrysler locals, and Richard T. Frankenstein, director of the organization program among Ford Motor company employees.

Lester Washburn of Lansing, Mich., leader of the "labor holiday" last spring, was made director of the U. A. W. for western Michigan, and Charles Madden, Pontiac, director of eastern Michigan outside of Detroit.

Italy Wins "Parity"

GREAT BRITAIN and France yielded to the demands of Mussolini and granted "parity" to Italy in the anti-piracy patrol of the Mediterranean. That sea was divided into three zones. The Italian zone includes the extensive Italian coast line, the Tyrrhenian sea around Sardinia and, in the east, the coast of the Libyan colony. The Aegean sea is assigned to Britain; and France will guard the Syrian coast and the sea lane between Marseilles and Algiers.

All three zones extend east to the Suez canal since all three powers are interested in keeping open that gateway to the East.

War Dance for Duce

BENITO MUSSOLINI, visiting Adolf Hitler for the purpose of composing and presenting to the world a statement of the intentions and demands of the Italian and German governments, was received by the Nazis with great enthusiasm. Il Duce, on the way to Berlin, stood on a hill in Mecklenburg with Hitler and witnessed a big war dance staged by the reichsfuehrer that displayed the regained military might of Germany most impressively. Hitler's best officers and troops, armed with the latest weapons of death, put on a sham battle participated in by all land and air forces. In the nearby Baltic the German warships showed how they chase "Red" submarines; and at Wustrow the anti-aircraft batteries gave a demonstration of their effectiveness.

The huge munitions plants in the Ruhr district were visited, and the throngs of workers, given a holiday with pay, cheered the two dictators heartily. Every city and village was decorated. In Berlin there were tremendous demonstrations and elaborate festivities in honor of the visitor from Rome.

In the midst of the display of war strength and preparedness, Hitler and Mussolini made speeches declaring their devotion to the cause of peace. At the same time they insisted the world must grant to Germany and Italy the recognition and the rights they feel are their due.

After a grand review of the Nazi army, the two dictators conferred privately. Details of the conversation were kept secret, but officials said Il Duce and Der Fuehrer not only discussed German-Italian cooperation but also talked about an understanding in southeastern Europe—the inclusion of Austria, Hungary, Jugoslavia, Bulgaria, and possibly Rumania in a general European realignment.

Noted Merchant Dies

EDWARD A. FILENE, best known of all Boston's merchants, died of pneumonia in the American hospital in Paris. He was seventy-seven years old. Besides being a business man, Mr. Filene was a noted social economist. He was sometimes called the apostle of mass production and distribution.

Only ten days after he took charge of the American legation in Vienna, Grenville T. Emmet died of double pneumonia. He was sixty years old and was a former law partner of President Roosevelt. He was minister to the Netherlands in 1933 and was given the Austrian post last July.

More Woe in Palestine

GREAT BRITAIN'S contested plan to divide Palestine between the Jews and the Arabs, with a slice for herself, came to the front again when Lewis Andrews, British commissioner of Galilee, was assassinated by a group of terrorists in Nazareth. Three men, two in European garb and one in peasant clothing, ambushed Andrews and shot him and his bodyguard to death.

Andrews had gained the enmity of extremists because of the strictness of his rule as district commissioner.

"Death Was Confused"

By FLOYD GIBBONS
Famous Headline Hunter

HELLO, EVERYBODY:

As a rule, it doesn't pay to look too much like someone else. You know how embarrassing it is to have some dizzy dame rush up to you gushing, "Why, Tom Waters, where on earth have you been? I haven't seen you for ages; how's your dear mother?" etc.

Your name has always been Henry Jones and you don't know the gal from Adam's off ox, but you stand there like an oaf wondering how you can correct the mistake without hurting her feelings.

Some have been pointed out as robbers and murderers, served terms in prisons and even paid with their lives for looking like someone else. It never happens that someone walks up to you and says, "Well, if it ain't old Joe Doakes himself. Here's that five hundred bucks you loaned me twelve years ago."

But, luckier, very much luckier, things than that have come to a very few men because they were thought to be other persons. One of them is William H. D. Bence, of Laurelton, L. I., who sent me today's adventure.

In 1917 Bill was where most Canadians were—in the Canadian army, and on December 6 of that year he was at Wellington barracks, Halifax, Nova Scotia. At 9 o'clock in the morning on that awful day in Halifax Bill was standing inspection in the barracks yard. The commanding officer was just in front of Bill, looking over his equipment with an eagle eye, when all at once the air seemed to quiver, there was a dreadful, deep sigh, followed by a TERRIFIC EXPLOSION. The officer was hurled violently against Bill and they both went down together.

The officer, swearing a blue streak, got to his feet. Bill sat up and saw that every man in the battalion on parade had been blown flat like a pack of cards, instruments of the band were scattered and the bass drum was bowling across the yard like a thing possessed.

The air became thick and yellow as a London fog and carrying through it was the rumble of falling masonry. Through the murk the soldiers could see the solidly-built barracks building melting away as they settled inward.

Panic in the Wrecked Barracks.

With the cry, "The magazine is going up—run for your lives!" there was a mad rush for the main gate. But above the shouts of the men and the roar of falling masonry came the screams of women and children trapped in the crumbled, married men's barracks. And standing at the gate with outstretched arms and blood dripping from a cut over one eye stood Private McClellan, a rather irresponsible soldier, who, often as not, was in the guard house.

"We can't run away, boys!" he shouted. "There's women and children in there. Let's be Scotsmen!"

Plowing through that mass of men, he led them back on the double. They found that one end of the married quarters had fallen in and rest of it was slowly collapsing. Women and children who had escaped were tearing frantically at the debris to reach those who had been trapped. The soldiers went to work more systematically and soon had a truck filled with children. Bill Bence grabbed a baby from under a pile of rubbish and forced it into the trembling arms of a girl. Then he realized the form was limp and saw the back of the skull was crushed.

Bill says he must have gone a little "off" at that discovery. But he began working his way into the wreckage to reach those whose screams of pain and fear made a nightmare of the morning. From beneath a heap of bricks he saw a pair of men's boots and a hand that moved feebly. As he stepped into the room the whole world seemed to fall on him and everything went black.

Slate Roof Was Coming Down on Him.

When he came to, Bill was on his back, his legs pinned between two beams on which was heaped a ton of bricks. Struggle how he would, Bill could not free his legs. Then, as he lay and looked up, he got the shock of his life.

There, directly over his head, hung half the slate roof that was held only by a thin lath that had become wedged at a key point, but was SLOWLY BUCKLING. The mass was already stirring and dust trickled onto his upturned face. Bill raised up and began tearing like a madman at the top beam that held him prisoner, shouting himself hoarse for help. Soon exhausted, the dust-covered man lay back, waiting for the end.

Perhaps he fainted. Anyway, Bill says, it was as in a dream he heard a woman's voice: "Praise be to the saints, he's here! See the stripes and crown on his sleeve. Here, Katie, get hold of this beam and pull—it's the only thing holding him down."

A tall, strong woman and a husky girl in her teens heaved and pulled until they had that top beam to one side. Then their strong fingers clutched the collar of Bill's coat and pulped him outside. And only in the nick of time, for, with a great roar and a blinding cloud of dust, the roof came down.

They Thought He Was Their Dinny

Bill was unable to stand. The two women supported him, all three coughing from the choking dust, and mother and daughter took turns in kissing him frantically. And then, heaven preserve us, mother and daughter realized the man they had saved from certain death was not their Dinny.

"Who were you looking for?" Bill gasped. The woman screamed at the sound of his voice, the more practical daughter wiped the thick coating of dust from his face. "Company Sergeant-Major O'Hara," she answered. "He was off duty this morning—wasn't he in there?"

Bill only shook his head. He did not have the courage to tell them of those two boots and the feebly moving hand. For, whatever life that was then in the buried Company Sergeant-Major O'Hara had been crushed out by the falling roof. Bill had been pinned down in O'Hara's room. And the crown and stripes were worn by both a company sergeant-major (O'Hara) and a company quartermaster-sergeant (Bill).

Bill was not long in learning what had knocked over the battalion parade like so many toy soldiers. A ship loaded with high explosives had been in a collision in the harbor and had been blown to bits, causing a tidal wave and started fires that destroyed one-third of the city of 80,000 persons. There were 1,226 dead and 400 more were missing. There were, of course, thousands and thousands injured, and Bill was immediately assigned to Dartmouth hospital for duty. Things he saw there

Origination of the Airedale

Legend says the airedale originated in the valleys (dales) of the Ayr river, Scotland. Hence the name. Actually, English poachers, seeking to evade forest wardens, created the breed. They crossed the otterhound with various terriers to obtain a courageous hunting dog that seldom barked.

Ancient Egypt's Writing

Three forms of writing were used in ancient Egypt—the hieroglyphic, or priestly, writing, consisting of pictures to represent ideas; the so-called hieratic, an abbreviated form of the hieroglyphic, used by the priests for writing manuscripts, and the demotic, or popular script, which came into use very late.

Washington
Digest

National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG., WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—Some weeks ago when the Treasury was parading a lot of names of well known individuals before a joint congressional tax committee, I discussed the purposes of the investigation and reached the conclusion that the whole affair was staged. If I remember correctly, I called it a vaudeville stunt, designed by the Treasury to save its face for having made bad guesses as to tax collections. The tax collections, as everyone knows, were much below New Deal estimates and somebody had to be the goat. So, it was natural to make rich men the goat by calling them tax evaders.

At the same time, I reported to you the fact that there was a difference of opinion among Treasury subordinates. Some of them wanted to make a great show of names of individuals who had resorted to practices not prohibited by law in order to reduce their taxes.

I did not know at that time how serious the disagreement was within the Treasury. It has only lately come out into the open. As a result, two important Treasury officials have quit their jobs and have gone back to private life. I refer to Morrison Shafroth and Russell I. Ryan, chief counsel and assistant chief counsel, respectively, of the bureau of internal revenue. These two men know more about tax evaders and tax avoiders than anybody else in the Treasury but they had one grievous fault. They wanted to be honest about the whole situation. That was a fault because being honest did not make possible a flamboyant display of hatred for taxpayers who had employed legitimate means to pay as little tax as the law permitted.

As far as I can ascertain, Messrs. Shafroth and Ryan wanted to cooperate fully with the higherups in the Treasury in so far as a tax investigation by a joint congressional committee would point the way for improvement of the law. They knew, as many others know, that the internal revenue laws have holes in them. The smart lawyers and smart taxpayers naturally have taken advantage of these holes in the law because they are human despite the fact they are rich. So, the chief counsel and his assistant proposed to Secretary Morgenthau and Treasury General Counsel Herman Oliphant that the investigation be made along lines of a scientific character, that close study be given to some of the methods that had been employed to avoid taxes. In other words, Shafroth and Ryan were anxious to develop legislation on the basis of the experiences which they had had and loopholes they had found to be in common use. But their fault was honesty, as government officials would not be denied the vaudeville performance and the columns upon columns of publicity which Mr. Morgenthau and Mr. Oliphant, not to mention President Roosevelt, desired to see.

I stayed through all of the hearings before the joint congressional committee. They ran for fourteen days. Each day the Treasury trotted out another official as the witness before the committee and he was armed with a prepared statement which he read for some two hours to a committee that sat back in easy chairs and smoked cigars in comfort—while newspaper men avidly wrote stories about rich men, some good and some bad, who had committed the heinous sin of paying as little tax as the law permitted.

The resignations of Shafroth and Ryan rather convince me that the Treasury stooped to about the lowest level it has reached in recent years. Of course, it was not the first time in our history that income tax has been used for political intimidation. Reprisal is a strong word to use about government officials but I cannot escape the feeling that the Treasury used that investigation as a method of reprisal against many men who had opposed the New Deal.

I reach that conclusion on the basis of a review of the names which Messrs. Shafroth and Ryan refused to parade before the committee but which the Treasury itself used as the principal actors. Not more than three of the eighty-odd names presented to the committee had contributed to the Democratic national campaign fund a year ago. The tactics were not far from those employed by the late Huey Long in enforcing his will upon the people of Louisiana.

I can add to this a statement of the fact that Under-Secretary Magill, who had charge of presenting the so-called evidence before the committee at the capitol, believed the Treasury was not following an entirely wise course in the methods it employed. But Mr. Magill went along with the scheme and there were many of the correspondents covering that hearing who felt he tried to do the job fairly.

So now Morrison Shafroth and Russell Ryan are back in private life and in their places are men picked by Mr. Oliphant, men who are likely to obey orders regardless of the whims of Mr. Oliphant and Secretary Morgenthau.

Another instance of official action that seems to indicate a bad trend in government lately has occurred. This incident was propagated by the federal power commission, one of the numerous federal agencies that is supposed to be largely judicial in character but which is equipped at the same time with administrative powers.

The facts are these: There was a group of men who served as directors of the Associated Gas and Electric company. These same individuals were directors for numerous corporations that are subsidiaries of that same company.

The federal power act provides that the commission may require directors of one power company to divest themselves of connection with any other power companies—one of the strongest features of the law. The commission is empowered to make its own investigation of these interlocked directorates and then on its own motion may require such directors to appear and give the commission satisfactory reasons why they are holding places on the boards of more than one corporation. This also is a sound provision of law and undoubtedly works to the benefit of all consumers of light and power.

Before I proceed further, let it be definitely understood that I have not a great deal of respect for the Associated Gas and Electric company. Its record does not warrant my respect as an observer. Undoubtedly, however, its management complies with the terms of its corporate charter but as a great public utility it has obligations to the public beyond the terms of its charter and it is my opinion that the moral obligations are such that this age demands full observation of them.

This brings us to the crux of the power commission action. Late in September Vice Chairman Seavey of the commission had ordered the group of directors referred to above to show cause why they should not be compelled to relinquish various positions on other boards of directors. A hearing date was set. A few days before the hearing date, the directors in question resigned the positions to which the commission objected and then their attorney issued a statement which said, in effect, that they had resigned because they were convicted in the minds of the commission before the commissioners had heard the case. He used rather strong language, perhaps too strong in expressing his views.

Upon publication of the attorney's statement, Vice Chairman Seavey promptly ordered him to appear before the commission to give his reasons for the statement and to defend himself against disbarment from practice as a lawyer before the commission.

Now, lest I be misunderstood, I do not know the attorney, Mr. Paxson; I know nothing about the merits of the case in question. But it is significant that an agency of the government suddenly decides that it can prevent a man from earning his living because he criticized members of that agency.

Occasionally, situations develop in national politics that provide a real laugh. One of them is now a hand. It results from the controversy that swirls around the head of Hugo Black of Alabama, newly appointed associate justice of the Supreme court, who is charged with being a member of the Ku Klux Klan.

Terrible as is the charge and worse if it eventuates that Mr. Justice Black still is subject to the oath of the invisible empire, there is humor in the way a lot of senators and other government officials are running to cover. It has been almost a scramble among Democratic senators to let the public know by issuing statements that they would not have voted for Senator Black's confirmation as a member of the court if they had known he was a klansman. It makes one laugh again when one recalls how carefully the majority of the Democrats in the senate refused to hear evidence or hold any sort of a hearing concerning Mr. Black's qualifications. They did this by voting down a motion for hearings.

It is not pleasant to contemplate how the senate so many times passes on judicial appointments with the careless abandon of a boy on his way home from school.

Washington.—The vast Atlantic coastal fishing industry, worth hundreds of millions of dollars, at last is to get a share of the federal government's protective attention.

On the basis of this treaty it was learned, congress probably will be asked to enact some migratory fish control legislation for interstate as well as international application.

Average American Pays $2.50 a Week for Food

Washington.—The average American family spends about $2.50 a week a person for food, according to a survey by the bureau of home economics of the Department of Agriculture. The weekly food bill ranged from 65 cents to $7 a person last year among 20,000 families surveyed in all parts of the United States, the bureau reported.

New England families tend to spend more money for food than families in other regions, the survey showed. Southeastern families, largely because of the number of negroes, spend the least. Pacific coast food budgets are more likely to provide adequate diets than in other regions of the country, largely because of lower food costs, the bureau said.

"The Camera Cannot Lie"
British statesman W. E. Gladstone coined the expression: "The camera cannot lie" in August, 1896, during a speech at Liverpool. The speech tried to rouse indignation of the public over Armenian massacres at Constantinople. Reports of the horrible carnage seemed incredible. Yet photographs showed many heaps of slain Armenians lying in the streets. "Exaggerated atrocity stories?" "No," retorted Gladstone "The camera never lies."

"Fashion" to Hide Defects

The origin of many fashions was in the endeavor to conceal some deformity of the wearer. Patches were invented in England in the reign of Edward VI., by a foreign lady who in this manner ingeniously covered a wen (small growth) on her neck. Charles VII., of France introduced long coats to hide his ill made legs.

"I'll be glad when this is over and I can leave."

"So will I. This one night out of a week business is no help at all to me. I've been thinking that I'd get a job on the back elevator in your house and see you every day."

"Our present back elevator men are very nice. And they need their jobs more than you do."

"Aha, it is a social conscience! I wasn't going to gyp any worthy comrade out of work. I would pay a bonus for the privilege of taking his place a week or so, that's all."

"Curt, you're crazy, but I hope you won't do anything as crazy as that."

"It's not crazy to want to see you every day."

"It would be—unsettling—to have you on the back elevator, Curt. And it might make difficulties—I don't know—"

"I thought maybe you might need me sometime in a hurry. And I'd be there."

"That's your imagination running wild, isn't it? This job isn't dangerous."

"Lord, no, if it had been I'd never have let you take it."

"Oh, phooey! You wouldn't have let me take it, indeed!"

"I couldn't have bent you to my will, I know that, proud beauty, but I could have worked on Vinco and Terriss and—"

"How is Vinco?"

"Mourning your absence. You'll find welcome on the mat when you return, though he'll pretend to be sore at you."

"I'll be very sweet and grateful to be back then."

"Don't be too sweet and grateful. Vinco's dealt with sweet young ladies before. He might give you a wage cut just to keep you disciplined."

"I talk about being back as though it was very near. I hope it is. I'm not going to stay at the Caynes' much longer no matter whether the thief's discovered or not."

"But you're going to search the boy's room. You owe that to Terriss."

"Yes, I suppose I do. Yes, I'll search Holbrook's room. I hope I don't find anything."

"You're still thinking about his parents, but it's far better they should know the truth if he's a bad lot. Every time I go past the library there at Forty-second street I look at that motto: 'But above all things, truth beareth away the victory.' Truth may hurt, but it's curiously satisfactory."

"Write a good book sometime and put that in, Mr. Elton," said Rachel flippantly; but she thought: "That's so, I can see it for myself. If I hadn't gone to the Caynes' and seen and known my own mother, it would have ruined everything between Anne and me. Whereas now—" she went on aloud, "I've got to go back to the apartment and see Pink and write some letters. There's a fast boat sailing tomorrow and I want to send a letter to France."

At the door Curt said, "You don't want me on the back elevator? Sure?"

"It would be silly. After all, I'm not exactly helpless."

"Let me know as soon as you can if you do get anything on the brat, though. You might not need any help, but you might use some moral support, spiritual sustenance, or whatnot."

"Coming in to see Pink? I might give you some moral support and spiritual sustenance for that."

But Curt went on his way and Rachel settled to her letters. It was the first time she had really been eager to write to Anne, the first time she had felt right toward her since she had been gone. But even now she could not tell her about being in the Cayne house; that story must be revealed only when it was over and she was back at Vinco's. Then she would tell the whole thing, the start, the middle and the end. There was no end to tell at present. Perhaps she would wait until Anne came home, written words were so hard to use, their sense changed between the hand of the writer and the eyes of the reader. Moreover, tonight she had no time to write a long letter, but she must tell Anne how dearly she loved her, how little she had appreciated her.

"Mother'll probably think I've gone fearfully soppy," she thought, "or else that I'm trying to get round her to send for me. I'll have to put in that I'm having a marvelous time, lots of dates, lots of dancing and playing around. I'll give Curt a good hand, too."

But when she began to write about Curt an odd shyness fell on her. Maybe she was beginning to depend too much on Curt, maybe he was beginning to mean more than she knew, more than she was sure she wanted. "I wonder if I am falling for him," she thought, "and if he's fallen as hard as he seems to for me. On the back elevator! The idiot! But it's a rather pleasing sort of idocy." She finished her letter with a flourish, put it in the envelope and whacked the stamp tight with her fist.

"Now I must get into my peasant costume," she said to Pink, "and let me back to the mountaintop. Listen, Pink, what do you think about Curt Elton?"

Pink looked up from the page of copy she had been frowning over. "I could go for him in a big way if I could ever get him to look at me. He's tops, that lad. Those carnations, for instance, do they suit you! What do I get from my suitors? Nothing but perfectly obvious corages made up by the florist by the dozen and wholesaled to young men with no imagination or flair for the right thing. I'll bet Curt writes poetry."

"He's never mentioned it if he does."

"If he doesn't write it he reads it and that's all right so long as he doesn't read it aloud. I could murder people who read poetry aloud. These radio musstraps! The quiver of emotion in the voice, the self-conscious elegance of the pronunciation."

"That's just what I want to see you every day."

"I thought maybe you might need me sometime in a hurry. And I'd be there."

"That's your imagination running wild, isn't it? This job isn't dangerous."

"Lord, no, if it had been I'd never have let you take it."

"Oh, phooey! You wouldn't have let me take it, indeed!"

"I couldn't have bent you to my will, I know that, proud beauty, but I could have worked on Vinco and Terriss and—"

cleaning. Towers would be glad to have her take that duty, the old chap wasn't very brisk, he didn't see distinctly but hated to wear his glasses. Mrs. Cayne went to the beauty establishment on Friday for limbering and general massage, a facial, a shampoo and wave set, and usually had a few extras, a pedicure or a change in the color on her nails, or an elbow oil-bath. Those took time and would give Rachel an opportunity provided young Holbrook also went out. No one could predict his vagaries, he liked to lie in bed until noon, with his radio going, or playing his phonograph. On other days he went out early and stayed late. His habits were regular only in irregularity.

The next morning, though he didn't go out very early, Holbrook did leave the apartment about eleven and told Towers that he wasn't coming in for lunch, whereupon Rachel, with Towers' permission, went into the room with a full array of cleaning implements and set to work. She pushed a chair against the door to guard against too sudden interruption and first searched the bed. Under the springs she found the same sort of dust as behind the picture frames, but nothing more.

Now she attacked the dresser, dumping out the contents of each drawer, putting everything back in order. Holbrook's underwear, in color and variety, was something to marvel at. He favored lavender and pastel green, everything was silk, custom-made. Next she went at the desk.

This took longer, but not so long as she had feared, for it held little but writing paper, many sorts, to be sure, with various styles of monograms and addresses, and books of sketches and a few harmless old letters and invitations and lists of art exhibitions. Rachel ran these through and stuck them back. There was no account book, but behind a sheaf of florid correspondence cards she found several unpaid bills. She noted the shops, the date and amount of purchases and put these back too.

"Before I begin on those bookshelves I'll go through his suits," thought Rachel and forthwith entered the deep closet. Holbrook's wardrobe was nearly as comprehensive as his mother's. Rachel took the suits and coats in order, feeling in every pocket. Handkerchiefs, cards, loose change, pencils, packets of gum, pocket combs, a gold knife and gold pencil, a sample bottle of brilliantine, but nothing that looked like a pawn ticket or anything else clandestine, until in the inner pocket of the fur-lined overcoat which he usually wore, she discovered a small folded piece of paper, just a scrap, on which was lightly penciled an address on the lower East Side, followed by a list of dates. Rachel glanced at this and was putting it back when she realized that the last date was the day the sapphire bracelet was stolen. She was about to take the scrap of paper to a better light and copy it when she heard someone at the door. Down on her knees she went and when the door was finally opened she was very busy wiping the baseboard of the closet.

It was only Towers. "Come on and eat your lunch," he said; and then: "You certainly are giving it a turning out. I appreciate this, Rachel. I'll do something for you sometime if I can."

"That's all right," said Rachel, "I'll be along to lunch as soon as I set the furniture straight. He might come in unexpectedly."

"He's in now," said Towers. He's got that friend of his named Bückham in the library and he wants me to mix 'em up a cocktail. I told him his pa had the key to the liquor closet. The nerve!"

"I'd better hurry," said Rachel, "they might come in here. But aren't they going to have lunch?"

"Oh no, they just wanted cocktails! And he's going to put on his fur-lined coat, he ain't warm enough in the camel's hair! I wish he was mine, I'd warm him with the business end of a hickory rod."

It was too late to put the slip of paper back into the overcoat pocket. Holbrook and Roy were outside in the hall. She slipped through the other door that opened into Mr. Cayne's room as they came in, before they could see her. She was troubled, uneasy. Perhaps Holbrook wouldn't miss the paper, perhaps it meant nothing anyway. But at least she would show it to Terriss, it was the only thing she had found that seemed to have the least connection with the theft.

CHAPTER XII

Terriss and Rachel sat in the office of Peter Cayne, facing him as he stood. He was like an oak tree, Rachel thought, that had been undetermined at the root and she could scarcely endure to look at him. He held himself straight with an effort and repeated again and again: "It's impossible, I tell you. I don't believe it."

Terriss looked at the list he held in his hand at the top of which was clipped the scrap of paper Rachel had found in Holbrook's pocket.

"But, Mr. Cayne, the thing's here in black and white. The address is that of one of the slipperiest fences in the city, I recognized it as soon as I saw the piece of paper Miss Vincent brought in. He's operating under the name of Mark Edelweis, but that's only an alias. Just like his jewelry shop's a blind. Jewelry! His stock wouldn't fill a quart measure. I went in and asked to see him private and told him I wanted to know about these things and guaranteed I'd make him no trouble if he'd give me the information. That was just a bluff, we couldn't make him trouble anyway, for everything your son took there was a legitimate sale. I said legitimate sale or not these articles were stolen and he'd better clear it up, for even if he could prove it was legitimate, headquarters was just aching to get something on him and this might lead to an investigation and then where would he be? So he gave me the list. Everything's there—antique gold buckles with rose diamonds, star ruby pendant, gold wrist watch, turquoise and diamond ring, silver cigarette box with silver ashtrays to match, seed pearl and pink topaz earrings, jade and diamond brooch, diamond dinner ring, set of six rose-cut diamond buttons, three dozen antique silver spoons and the sapphire bracelet. He had your son's name and address, he described him to me—"

"Oh, for God's sake!" cried out Cayne in torture, "shut up. Let me think."

"You don't suppose I enjoy doing this, do you?" asked Terriss. "Don't take it so hard, Mr. Cayne, the boy didn't know how serious it was, he didn't realize in a place like yours with so much fancy goods lying around loose why he shouldn't sell something that wasn't needed and wasn't used when he wanted an extra piece of change. Lots of kids do it. You'd be surprised. They just haven't learned the difference between right and wrong."

"But he had a big allowance, I paid his bills, I gave him extra when he asked for it and I thought he ought to have it. And his mother gave him money sometimes, I shut my eyes to that. But to steal her trinkets and things from his own home and sell them! And how did he get in touch with this man Edelweis, how did he find him? That's what I'd like to know."

"Those crooks are always feeling around for suckers," said Terriss. "Well, Mr. Cayne, this case is closed as far as I'm concerned. You know where your stuff has gone. You'll pay Edelweis $250, it's not been touched. I saw it."

Wild Turkey Has Abandoned Michigan;

During the early 30's there existed certain sections in the lower peninsula of Michigan that were considered excellent hunting grounds for wild turkeys. This was particularly true of the hardwood ridges and swamp areas adjacent to the larger watercourses. The turkey disappeared from Michigan in the 90's due to lumbering and the destruction of the necessary type of cover for its protection and propagation.

Since that time, says a writer in the Detroit News, sporadic attempts have been made by game and shooting reserve owners to re-establish this bird, but in every instance the birds disappeared within a few years from the habitats over which they were released. Various individuals and sportsmen's organizations have been endeavoring in the last few years to influence the state conservation administrators to attempt to propagate and re-establish the wild turkey over its former range, but it is doubtful if it can be done.

In commenting on this suggestion William B. Mershon, of Saginaw, an old turkey hunter and recognized authority on this bird and the passenger pigeon, says: "It is all nonsense to talk of bringing back the wild turkey to Michigan. There is no suitable cover left in southern Michigan for them. Naturally they never ranged north of the Kawkawlin river, near Saginaw. You cannot raise them in a little patch of woods. They want a bit of swampy land for winter cover, ridges of beech to scratch for beechnuts; maybe a nearby plot of buckwheat would attract them for their morning's feed. They are great wanderers and I do not know of a single place where conditions would permit them to exist in the wild state in Michigan."

Removal of

By
DR. JAMES W. BARTON
© Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

A PROMINENT lawyer was going down hill physically. He was seventy years of age but had always been able to look after his legal work despite attacks of indigestion and an irritation which caused painful and frequent emptying of the urine.

The indigestion gave him loss of appetite, sour taste in the mouth, a bloated feeling, gas on the stomach and in the intestine, fullness after eating, and either constipation or diarrhoea.

He didn't want to go to a doctor as he was afraid that an operation, perhaps two operations, might be necessary, and at seventy years of age he was "taking no chances."

Dr. Barton

The symptoms however—terrible attacks of indigestion, and the frequent desire to pass urine—made him decide that life wasn't worth the living with this pain and distress so he consulted his physician.

Some months later friends meeting him on the street stopped him and congratulated him on his splendid appearance—good color, brisk walk, calm, serene face.

Don't Put Off Operation.

To the inquiry as to the cause of the change in his appearance, he quite casually remarked, "Oh, they found some gall stones and removed my gall bladder, and then a little later I had them remove the gland at the neck of the bladder, so with these two annoyances removed I'm feeling young again."

The point here is that while operation can never be treated lightly and operation on one past seventy would seem somewhat of a serious risk, nevertheless when gall stones are present it is not the age of the patient that matters from the standpoint of a good recovery after operation, but the length of time the patient has allowed the symptoms to be present before undergoing the operation.

So if your doctor advises removal of the gall bladder, don't put it off too long. If it should come out, the sooner the better.

Dieting Daughters.

One of the unfortunate things about prescribing reducing diets, particularly for women, is that so many young women of normal weight, or even below normal weight, believe that they will have a better appearance, will look "slim," if they follow the general rule of reducing weight, which, after all, is "just to eat less food."

Intelligent young women, college and business girls, who would not think of using a drug such as thyroid extract to reduce weight, will deliberately "starve" themselves to get the slim boyish figure.

"Of all the conditions found on examination of large groups of young women, underweight is about the most universal and likewise the most likely to prove dangerous." I am quoting Jane Foster, R. N., in Hygeia. Miss Foster is assistant director of health, Sarah Lawrence college.

"There is then the problem of the girl of eighteen or nineteen consciously controlling her own weight at a standard below that for good health. Now the greatest cause for death in this age group is tuberculosis, the predisposing factor of which is malnutrition—underweight.

"The greatest cause of illness in college health records is found to be infections of the nose, throat and chest and these, too, go with pronounced underweight. Other companions of underweight may be irritable dispositions and a loss of the natural mental ability or alertness. Those who work with this age group are frequently impressed with the large number who complain of fatigue and general dissatisfaction with life."

Of course the cause of this fatigue, irritability, dissatisfaction with life, is that these young women, who should be eating more food at this age than at any other age in their lifetime, are actually eating less than the body needs just to keep it working, aside from the extra food needed for growth in height and width. And the foods that should be eaten for growth and strength—meat, eggs and milk—are not included to any extent in the diet of these slim-mad girls.

What these girls of normal weight forget is that underweight means undernourishment, and undernourishment means that a reduction of the "energy reserves" of the body occurs when not enough food is eaten and the body is below normal weight.

The energy reserves of the body—the reserves needed to promote health and growth, and prevent or lessen the effects of illnesses—can only be maintained by a generous all round diet at this important age in a woman's life.

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder may be burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

IT'S TIME FOR YOUR RED FLANNELS!

With Old Man Winter Wetting His Chilly Whistle, Americans Get Ready to Spend $2,000,000,000 Keeping Warm.

Keeping warm in winter has its problems for the poor fellow in the cartoon, who, like 12,000 other Americans, wears red flannels in the winter. The airlines have their warmth problem licked, for the same mobile unit (left) which pumps cold air into the planes in summer fills them with warm air in winter; after they take off, a steam heating unit goes into operation. Some scientists predict that one day most of our heat will come from the sun via the solar machine, such as Dr. C. G. Abbot, of the Smithsonian Institution, is demonstrating (right).

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY
SHORTS may come and undershirts may go, but with the first twinge of frosty weather there are still 12,000 men in the United States who are walking up to store counters and demanding red flannel underwear, adding one hundred thousand dollars to the $2,000,000,000 fund which this country spends every year in the business of keeping warm.

Gone, however, are the days when digging ear-muffs out of a trunk in the attic and chopping enough stove wood to fill the back yard constituted the average man's preparations for the winter months. Then he was not troubled with the knowledge that has now come to light through medical research that the temperature of the human body can not drop more than five degrees without causing death in most cases.

"Getting hot"—1937 style—involves not only coal miners and wood choppers, but scientists delving into the mysteries of new kinds of heat, architects poring over blueprints for automatically heated homes, and engineers supervising the operation of huge machines that work with machine-gun rapidity, stamping out the parts for boilers, burners and electric stoves.

In the first place, there is the matter of supplying enough fuel to heat the 12,000,000 homes and 2,000,000 commercial structures that require artificial heat when the mercury slides down towards the freezing point.

$400,000,000 for Coal.
 All during the summer and fall, more than 600,900 men have been working with pick and shovel in mines throughout the country, piling up mountains of coal for protection against the arctic blasts to come. Coal dealers estimate that between 50 and 60 per cent of the coal bought for heating purposes is shoveled into furnaces during the winter months, bringing the United States' coal bill for this season of the year alone to about $400,000,000.

In the oil and gas fields of Oklahoma, Texas, California and Pennsylvania, an army of 100,000 laborers is kept busy extracting gas and fuel oil to aid in the business of keeping warm. So rapidly has the heating of houses and buildings with fuel oil and gas increased in the past few years, that it is estimated 35,000,000 barrels of fuel oil will be needed this winter to keep modern furnaces roaring, and the bill will reach the staggering total of more than $150,000,000.

Shivering house owners will dig down into their pockets for another $350,000,000 for gas, and additional thousands of dollars for electricity to run the most modern of all heating equipment.

Such tremendous expenditures for fuel were unheard of a generation or two ago, and in fact the modern trend towards automatic heating which is now sweeping the country, and piling up huge fuel and equipment bills, did not begin in earnest until after the World war.

The Two Kinds of Heat.
 Almost all the modern improvements in heating equipment which make life not only possible but comfortable in the temperate zone, stem from experiments conducted not by isolated research experts, but by scientists working in the laboratories of one of the country's largest electrical companies that present day Americans are indebted for improvements that have come from the amazing discovery that there are essentially two kinds of heat: radiant and convected.

Convected heat—the kind given off by open fires and hot air furnaces—produces warmth by heating the air. On the other hand, it was found that radiant heat consists of rays which warm the body without necessarily having much effect on the surrounding air.

As the result of this research, and investigations by scientists connected with other industrial concerns, engineers have found the answer to widely-varying problems in heating brought about by changed conditions of modern living. They have conquered the difficulties of installing 65 miles of steam conduits beneath the swarming arteries of traffic in New York to pipe warmth from central heating plants to 2,000 office and residence buildings. On the opposite end of the scale is the successful installation of a separate heating system in a bird house.

Air-Conditioned Bird House.
 The steam-heated bird house, probably the only one in existence, is the property of a California woman. In training canaries to sing, she found it most effective to keep them shut up in large outdoor houses, completely insulated against outside noises so that the birds would hear nothing but the sound of phonograph records being played. This brought on the problem of air-conditioning the bird house, and a complete ventilating and steam heating system was installed, with steam heat pipes enclosed in the walls.

Managers of the nation's trans-continental airways, faced with the difficulties of passenger comfort on winter flights, took their problem to heating engineers, who have developed a unique system for warming the huge passenger planes that now roar across the sky trails.

As the result of scientific research and experiments, cross-country planes this winter will be warmed by "flying steam heat," designed to maintain a temperature in the cabins of at least 70 degrees even during the coldest weather. The flying heaters, which weigh only 140 pounds, produce enough steam to heat a five-room house on the ground. Using only eight quarts of water, the miniature boilers are heated by exhaust gases from the engines, and the temperature is regulated either by thermostats, or by controls in the pilot's compartment. Provision is made for a complete change of air in the transport planes every four minutes, so that the atmosphere does not become "stuffy."

Thawing Out Iron Ore.
 Before the take-off of each flight, and before the exhaust from the engines has had a chance to start the steam heater in operation, the interiors of the huge planes are warmed by special mobile heating units, maintained at the airports. These units, mounted on small trucks, pump warm air into the cabins, thus bringing the temperature to the desired level before passengers enter the ship.

Not only is human comfort in the wintertime dependent on scientific developments, but the business life of the nation as well, for industrial schedules must be maintained despite weather conditions. Here again, research experts in one industry came to the rescue of another when engineers of the B. F. Goodrich company solved a stubborn problem at the root of all industry by making it possible to ship iron ore in zero weather from the Great Lakes district.

On the shores of Lake Superior, where snow and ice close in while the big ore boats are still running, carloads of wet iron ore freeze into solid chunks before they can be unloaded. To meet this emergency, the engineers devised a hose of specially compounded rubber through which super-heated steam is pumped into the cars, effectively thawing out the ore so that it can be handled quickly and efficiently and shipped to the steel mills as the "food" to keep industry humming.

While the ravenous demands of the steel mills are being satisfied, heating engineers have also had the problem of keeping food for the dinner tables moving to the markets in winter.

Tropical fruits, for instance, are brought into this country green, and then ripened in specially constructed heating rooms. Bananas are put in rooms to ripen, with the temperature carefully regulated between 56 and 70 degrees. By controlling the temperature of the ripening rooms, marketers can delay or hasten the ripening process and so adjust the supply of bananas to reach consumers in a steady stream. Grapefruit is ripened in specially-heated rooms at a temperature of 75 degrees and "air-conditioned lemons" are kept at a temperature of from 54 to 59 degrees until they are ready to be sold to the public.

Despite the emphasis on heat for food, industries and homes, the business of keeping warm has as one of the most troublesome problems the difficulty of keeping a nation comfortable during the winter, while reducing fire hazards to the lowest possible point. The extent to which this is being accomplished can be easily seen from the fact that while the volume of business increased 34 per cent in the automatic heating industry from 1935 to 1936, fire losses increased only 11.9 per cent.

Fire Losses Decrease.
 According to statistics compiled by the authoritative Heating and Ventilating magazine, the volume of business in the automatic heating industry has jumped more than 250 per cent in the past five years. In 1932, it is estimated that the sale of automatic heating equipment amounted to only $41,711,000. By 1936 this figure had increased to $108,990,000.

Meanwhile, fire losses in the United States in 1936 totaled $263,259,746, according to estimates of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, showing a decrease of 34 per cent from the 1932 figure of $400,859,000.

Nevertheless, there are still enough defective chimneys and flues left in the country so that it is estimated that about $10,000,000 worth of property will go up in smoke this coming winter, and a similar amount will be lost because of imperfect stoves, furnaces and boilers.

As scientists attack this problem, as well as others, there is a hint that the future might see great changes not only in the type of heaters used, but in the kind of fuel, for recent experiments point to a time when we may get all or most of our heat from the sun.

Dr. C. G. Abbot, head of the Smithsonian Institution, has recently developed a solar heater that is the most efficient yet produced. Utilizing the hot rays of the sun, reflected by a bright metal sheet, he has succeeded in heating a black liquid called aroclor to a temperature at which it can be used for turning water into steam. Experts declare that solar rays available for heat are at least 1,000 times as powerful as all the coal, oil and hydro-electric power now used. Although the conversion of sun rays into heat is still too costly to compete with the cheaper and better known fuels, scientists say the day may come when those are all exhausted, and when we will turn to the sun for heat and power, and the business of keeping warm will literally be done with mirrors.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By REV. HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, Dean of the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, © Western Newspaper Union.

Lesson for October 10

THE CHRISTIAN IN GOD'S KEEPING

LESSON TEXT—Jude 1-4, 17-25. GOLDEN TEXT—Keep yourselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life.—Jude 21.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Why David Sang. JUNIOR TOPIC—In God's Keeping. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Keeping Ourselves Christian. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Safe in God's Keeping.

To be born is only to begin life. The years which stretch out before with their growth, their struggles, their joys, call for courageous living.

So it is with the Christian. He is a "born one," as we saw in our lesson of last Sunday. But when he is born again he is just ready to begin the Christian life.

The Epistle of Jude sheds much light on the dangers which beset the Christian's pathway and exhorts him to holy living and sacrificial service. It opens with a description of the Christian and closes with an ascription of praise to God. It reveals the Christian as one who is

I. Called in Christ (vv. 1, 2). The entire Trinity is seen to be active in our redemption (See Revised Version). Jude writes "to them that are"

1. "Called"—The Holy Spirit calls men unto salvation.

2. "Beloved in God the Father"—for God is love.

3. "Kept for Jesus Christ"—until he appears.

II. Living for Christ (vv. 3, 4, 17-23).

As Jude began to write of the "salvation" which he had in "common" with his readers, the Holy Spirit moved him to deal with a very urgent and vital problem—the hostility of wicked men toward the gospel of Christ, and their efforts to destroy "the faith." The Christian life includes

1. Contending for the faith (vv. 3, 4). "The Faith" is the body of revealed truth, the gospel, the good news of redemption in Jesus Christ.

The world hates the gospel, and attacks upon it are to be expected, but the most insidious assault is that of those within the church (v. 4) who profess to believe in Christ. Against them and their destructive work Christians must "contend earnestly," at the same time praying that they may be delivered from their sin and its terrible judgment (vv. 15-16).

2. Observing the times in which they live (vv. 17-19). Some folk seem to think that being a Christian means entering into a place of security and rest and promptly going sound asleep. Far from it. The Christian, knowing God's Word, is keenly alert to the dangers of this ungodly world.

3. Keeping their own souls (vv. 20, 21). The best defense is a vigorous offense. The way to contend against error is to build up one's own faith by the study of God's Word, by communion with his children, but above all by prayer "in the Holy Ghost." And above all there will be an abiding in the love of God and a looking for the fulfillment of the mercy of Christ at his coming again.

4. Saving the souls of others (vv. 22, 23). Soul-winning is (or should be) the normal expression of the Christian's life. It is his crowning joy. It most effectively counteracts error and worldliness. It builds up the church. Why not do it?

Note that there are two types of sinners to be rescued. Some are "in doubt" (R. V.), needing tender and careful instruction. Others are in grave danger, and must be rescued by drastic reproof and decisive action. Soul-winning is urgent business.

III. Kept by Christ (vv. 24, 25).

The doxology at the close of Jude has been a haven of comfort and assurance for God's children throughout the centuries. Hither have come the strong in faith to rejoice and praise God. Here has been found the strengthening of faith by the fearful and trembling soul who had not yet learned that he may fully trust God. These verses present two truths.

1. Assurance. Our Saviour is able to keep us from falling, yes, ever from "stumbling" (R. V.), and to present us "faultless" "without blemish" (R. V.), with exceeding joy, before the glorious presence of God.

2. Worship. Such a God and Saviour is indeed worthy of the out-going of every Christian heart in adoration and worship.

Weather at South, North Poles
Speaking generally, it is colder at the South Pole and near it than it is in the region around the North Pole. Both the average temperature and the extreme temperatures are lower at the South Pole. While the North Pole is at sea level, there is a great land mass, 10,000 feet high and over, at the other pole, and this elevation makes for lower temperatures.

No. 1

Mrs. Cecil Cox. This is the first of several projects which the Class must carry out in order to finance the annual Junior-Senior banquet. The class wishes to express appreciation to the parents who have so willingly given their support toward making this benefit a success.

We were all disappointed that the changeable fellow called "weather" cheated us out of our scavenger hunt again. Just the same the Juniors did have a grand time at the Senior party last Friday night, even if they did get sleepy waiting for the coffee to boil. Thanks Seniors. We'll try to do as well by you sometime.

We are a grateful bunch, we Juniors, but we have reasons to be. The Class of '37, left us a donation of five dollars. That "five spot" looks dandy to an empty treasury.

The above mentioned Class of 1937 not only "willed and bequeathed" the Junior class some money, but also the Freshmen, the Alumni Association, and the general High School fund. The Juniors, Freshmen, and Alumni received five dollars each and the general fund of the high school received ten dollars.

School will be closed Thursday and Friday of next week to enable the faculty to attend the regional session of the Michigan Education association which will be held at Flint.

Meaning of "Junket"

The word junket as often applied to congress was originally applied to a banquet, or a picnic or excursion with feasting but it has come to mean a trip at public expense by government officials to some distant post, territory or public works for the purpose, they claim, of investigating conduct or for inspection. Congressmen, especially, have been noted in the past for their junkets to distant regions flying the American flag.—Pfeiffer Magazine

Ring as Love Token
The ring as a love token commenced its recorded history when the ancient Greeks sent rings of iron to their betrothed as evidence of an agreement. The ring being placed on the third finger of the left hand during the marriage service, for it was believed that a nerve led from this finger directly to the heart. But most of the men wore their rings upon the right hand as a mark of power and independence.
