Powell's superb timing and Thorp's shrewd direction make this a guaranteed laugh getter for any audience. With a less suave star, cruder direction and less lavish moduction, this would be a polite comedy which ended up as slapstick farce. Powell gets all of the big laughs, since Miss Lov's role has to be played straight all the way. Character comedy from Jessie Ralph, Edgar Kennedy and Sidney Toler assure further laughs. F.D.R.'s Program Wrecked

H AVING accomplished practicaly nothing during five weeks of wrangling, at a cost of about a million and a half dollars, congress ad-

The topic of discussion was what should be done with the debris of the administration program and how much should be demanded of congress in the next session.

As the time for

Just before adjournment the senate passed the housing bill, which the house had already approved. necessary to send the measure to conference, so final enactment was delayed.

Crop control bills were passed by both senate and house, but they differed widely and early final enactment was impossible because the joint conference between committees of the two houses to reconcile the measures could not get into action before January.

Chairman O'Connor of the house rules committee said that a good deal actually was accomplished during the special session in the way of "spade work" which would enable the law makers to get along faster with their work in the regular January session. This was especially true concerning revision of the tax laws.

Wage-Hour Bill Killed

WHEN the bill for regulation of wages and hours, approved by the senate in August, came up for action in the house the President suffered one of his greatest legislative defeats. Southern Democrats and the Republican minority combined to send the measure back to the labor committee, which meant its definite defeat. This bill, which would have set up an administrator with dictatorial powers over labor and business management, was considered only second in importance to the farm bill. It had the support of the C. I. O., so John Lewis shared in the defeat. The A. F. of L. had offered a substitute which was rejected, as President Green had expected it would be.

No action was taken on the President's other "must" measures, which were for revision of antitrust laws, regional planning and federal government reorganization.

Cummings Accuses Judge

CONGRESS was asked by Attorney General Cummings to investigate the conduct of United States District Judge Ferdinand Geiger of Milwaukee in connection with the latter's discharge of a grand jury which was investigating the automobile finance industry.

In a letter to Chairman Sumners of the house judiciary committee Cummings charged that Geiger's conduct was "so obstructive to the administration of justice that I could 1929.

Utilities Conference A FTER a third conference with heads of utility operating companies, the President felt that good progress was being made toward an understanding. In his press conference it was disclosed that he and the men he conferred with all approved of the "prudent investment" theory of valuation of utility properties outlined by Justice Brandeis 13 years ago. That theory is:

'The term prudent investment is not used in a critical sense. There should not be excluded from the findings of the base, investments which, under ordinary circumstances, would be deemed reasonable. The term is applied for the purpose of excluding what might be found to be dishonest or obviously wasteful or imprudent expenditures. Every investment may be assumed to have been made in the exercise of reasonable judgment, unless the contrary is shown.

Mr. Roosevelt suggested at the press conference that the fear, which all agree is responsible for the current depression, is not fear of administration but is a psychology of fear being fostered by newspapers for purposes which are a mystery to him and to the country.

Labor Peace Parley Ends

THERE will be no early peace between the American Federation of Labor and the C. I. O. The negotiations in Washington came to a sudden end when the federation's representatives refused to consider anything but unconditional surrender of the Lewis forces, which the C. I. O. men scornfully rejected.

The strategy of Green and his lieutenants was dictated by information that the C. I. O. was on the verge of bankruptcy, that its ranks were torn by dissension over the communist element and that there were numerous desertions.

Ambassador Bingham Dies

ROBERT WORTH BINGHAM, American ambassador to Great Britain, died in Johns Hopkins hospital, Baltimore, of a rare abdominal ailment. He was sixty-six years of age and already had submitted his resignation because of ill health. Mr. Bingham was one of President Roosevelt's first diplomatic appointees. Previously he had gained considerable fame as a newspaper publisher in Louisville, Ky. His body was taken to that city for burial and lay in state in the Kentucky capitol in Frankfort. King George and Queen Elizabeth of Great Britain cabled a message of condolence.

Another notable death was that of Gen. Erich Von Ludendorff, German commander in the World war, at Munich. He won international fame as Von Hindenburg's chief of staff on both the eastern and western fronts and then was made chief quartermaster general of the German army. Just before the war ended he quarreled with the kaiser and was dismissed from his post. In his later years the embittered old warrior attacked all factions in Germany, though friendly relations with the Hohenzollerns were reestablished on his seventieth birth-

He said he probably would accept this job of formulating the party's policies, and National Chairman Hamilton said the committee would be an absolutely independent agency of the party. Many members of the committee have been named by the executive committee of the national committee.

Spanish Loyalist Victory

SPANISH government forces won a decided victory by capturing Teruel, the key point of the rebel salient into loyalist territory 135 miles east of Madrid. HEADLINES FROM THE LIVES OF PEOPLE LIKE YOURSELF!

> "When Two Spies Meet" By FLOYD GIBBONS Famous Headline Hunter

LIELLO EVERYBODY:

You know, boys and girls, when you stop to think of it, every one of us has had some outstanding adventure, sometime in our lives, that is of interest to other people. Leo Faccone of Jersey City, N. J., writes that he had been reading the adventure column for months before he thought of sending in his own ad-

Leo is twenty-eight and the father of two children, but aside from the great adventure of marriage and fatherhood, Leo says, the greatest thrill in his life came when he was only nine years old.

Let's go back over the years with Leo. The World war was on and Leo was playing soldier with little John Ferara and other Italian-American youngsters of the neighborhood. These boys' forefathers were of a race that once conquered the world, and playing soldier came natural to them. When it was suggested that Leo play the part of a German spy and hide, he agreed.

The shades of night had just fallen and it would soon be time for the boys to go home, but there was time for one last game. Leo, as the spy, slipped away to hide. He knew a swell hiding place behind the blacksmith shop, which backs on the right of way of the Pennsylvania railroad. There were lots of wagons standing in the yard, between the railroad embankment and the building, and Leo slipped in between them like a real German spy and lay, quiet as a mouse, on the ground.

Play Spy Met Up With a Real One.

Leo could picture the other boys looking for him-everywhere but here. The spot was the sort of place that people would avoidunless, of course, they were determined German spies like Leo. Out in the street traffic went by now and then and once a train roared by on the tracks over his head, but otherwise the spot was as quiet as the grave.

Suddenly, however, Leo became aware that he was not the only person hiding out that night. The tall figure of a man rose quietly-only about ten feet away from him-and furtively arranged some sort of box he carried in his hands. The actions of the man frightened Leo. "Perhaps he is really a German spy," Leo thought. Frightened but determined, the boy lay still and watched. He could not see the features of the man, but he could see his outline and hear him tinkering with the box.

Once-frightened apparently by someone passing in the street-the man dropped to the ground and lay still. He hid himself so well that even Leo could not see him. Leo was glad of that because it meant that the man in turn could not see him.

There Was a Ticking in the Box.

Minutes went by during which Leo shivered with excitement. Here he was out playing that he was a spy and suddenly the tables were turned and a real spy was before him. He hoped the other boys wouldn't come hunting for him here and spoil it all. Leo wasn't very old to be a detective, but he knew from the man's actions that he was doing something he shouldn't be doing and Leo wanted a chance to get the police. What a feather in his cap if the man did turn out to be a spy!

As he was thinking these thoughts and listening to his own heart thump, the man's tall figure rose suddenly again right beside him! He was closer, if anything, and Leo was scared stiff that he would be discovered. The boy got ready to make a break for it at the slightest sign of suspicion.

But the man-whoever he was-seemed unaware of Leo's presence. He was intent on the box before him. He handled that box very carefully, Leo noticed, and once when a passing car threw a light in the yard, Leo saw a tense, cruel face under a mop of gray hair. He hugged the ground and waited Finally Leo, listening, heard a strange sound from the box. It sounded like a clock ticking. The man seemed satisfied with the sound and moved with the box in the direction of the railroad embankment. Leo saw him bend over and place it under a culvert beneath the tracks. And just then the other boys nearly spoiled the whole game.

They started calling for Leo to give himself up. Well sir, Leo says he'd seen enough anyway and was pretty glad of a chance to sneak away, if he could do it without being seen. He crawled along on his stomach and then made a run for it.

The other boys were scared when they saw Leo's pale face, but when he told them about the spy he had found they all ran in different directions for a policeman. A policeman was found and he brought with him two other men who didn't laugh when Leo told them his story. Instead they went back on one side of the blacksmith shop while the policeman went on the other. The boys stood on the sidewalk and watched a real spy chasing game.

Yes, It Was a Big Time Bomb.

The policeman went along noisily flashing his light to the spot where Leo had seen the man. Some of the boys thought Leo had just been "seeing things" and started to laugh, but the next minute the laughs froze on their faces as a man, running at top speed, tore out of the darkness away from the policeman and toward them. He didn't get far though, Leo says, before he had run right into the arms of the two men waiting for him. They caught him and held him while the policeman came up.

Leo says he didn't look like a spy at all when they had him in the light. But a good spy never does look like one. The man never said a word, Leo says, while the policeman called the patrol wagon. Leo even began to feel sorry for him and to think he had made a mistake, but in a few minutes he knew differently. He led the policeman back to where he had seen the man place the box. They picked the box up gingerly. And what do you suppose it was? A time bomb! With enough explosives in it to blow up the entire neighborhood! The clock was set for midnight when a train would be passing and, according to experts, the explosion would also have killed Leo and his whole family who lived a few doors

And that, boys and girls, is the story of how Leo caught the German spy. Luck? Perhaps. But luck and adventure are companions. Copyright.-WNU Service.

Description of Humming Bird The earliest account of the hummingbird ever made in English, as written in William Wood's "New England's Prospect," published in 1634, said: "The Hummingbird is no bigger than a hornet, yet hath all the dimensions of a bird, as bill and wings, with quills, spiderlike legges, small clawes; for colour she is as glorious as the raine-bow; as she flies she makes a little humming noise like a Humble-bee, wherefore she is called the Humbird.'

is in the air. It has been increasing in tempo and it War may throw us out of our sense of Hysteria equilibrium as a nation unless we watch our step. It is, indeed, a time for all people to keep their sense of direction and to avoid unnecessary and dangerous acts of an inflammatory character.

The sinking of the American gun-boat, Panay, by the Japanese in the Yangtse river of China apparently has set fire to tinder because there have been outbursts of all sorts since that inexcusable incident of early December. There can be excuse or apology by the Japanese on end, but neither excuse nor apology will satisfy most Americans. They feel properly that Japan is trying to rub our collective noses into the ground and nearly every person wants to do something about a thing of that kind. On the other hand, I am convinced that the answer lies in another direction; it is to be found, I believe, in exacting a promiise from the Japanese that they will cut out those tactics. If their promises mean anything, it will be better to accept them and hope that we may not be confronted with another such incident.

In any event, there is plenty of evidence that the majority of the American people desire to avoid war. They will continue to cherish peace unless elements in our nation lead us in another direction by use of war propaganda. I include in those elements the government itself. I do so because the government, by use of propaganda, can come pretty close to leading the nation by the nose if it so desires. It can build up sentiment against the Japanese until there is a white heat and a demand for vengeance. I believe President Roosevelt is trying to avoid war at this juncture. There is a basis for this belief in the fact that the Department of State has withheld some of the facts about the Panay sinking. These facts, as rumored, are of a character that easily could fan flames of added hatred. On this basis, it appears at least that Mr. Roosevelt is seeking to avoid ill-considered conclusions by the nation.

But as was said by an earlier President: the time to prepare for war is while the nation is at peace. That is to say, the nation must have its defenses solid, substantial; it must take nothing for granted in a world that is fraught with unrest and uncertainty, racked by suspicion, permeated to the very core with chicanery and scheming of alleged statesmen. The smallest boy will not "jump on" another who will hit him on the chin if the attack is unjustified. That is human nature, and human nature is about the same over the whole world.

A year ago I wrote something in these columns in support of the President's program for building up the army, navy and air corps. It seemed then to be wise. It is certainly shown now to have been the proper course. Our nation is at least partially ready to strike back and the progress thus made has been accomplished without the waste that characterized our movements in 1917.

Noting that I said "partially ready," I want to call attention here to one way in which we are not ready, a condition in which we are quite vulnerable. We have a great army structure on paper. From it, the army can be expanded rapidly and successfully. The air corps can be developed quickly. The navy is being built up. The whole program is one of defense. . . .

In taking stock of the situation, however, one must give consideration to "replace-Guns ments." You can and Men have all of the men and all of the ships needed, but if the guns they use can not be replaced when they are worn out, what good are they? I do not mean that we have no reserve. We have a reserve, but war takes its toll of guns as well as men. Guns are made of steel. Steel is made of manganese, as well as iron. Manganese puts the starch in steel, hardens it so that it is usable for such things as guns along with the million and one other items of tools and equipment that we have to have in our everyday life. No substitute ever has been found for it. The Germans learned this to their sorrow back in 1918. They attempted to use a substitute. Their guns soon buckled. Their heavy artillery was useless.

Thus, we must look to our manganese stores - stores which might suddenly become nonexistent because 93 per cent of all that we use is imported. International trade started our trend in the direction of buying ore abroad where cheap labor is employed. Secretary Hull's policies by which reciprocal trade agreements are worked out have finished the job. We find ourselves in a position, therefore, where we could be cut off overnight from our

Washington.—The hysteria of war | supply of a material necessity for defense.

This tragic condition exists even when we have vast untapped stores within our own borders and more in Cuba, 90 miles away from our shores. It is true, the bureau of mines tells me, that our ore is a lower grade than that imported from Russia, or from the gold coast of Africa, or from Brazil. It is true moreover that American ore must be treated by a special process be-fore it can be used. It seems to me nevertheless that our nation ought to be made self-sufficient where that can be done and present policies distinctly do not do that. Political and economic views prevent it.

Let us examine this situation in more detail. The great source of manganese at the moment is Soviet Russia. Fifty per cent of all we use is imported from Russia. It is a fact that this is the finest manganese to be found, and it is a further fact that American steel companies sell vast quantities of steel to Russia because they buy manganese there. On the other hand, I believe it is inevitable that Japan and Russia will have to fight it out sooner or later. If they go to war, there is not a chance that we can buy any manganese from that quarter. It will be the long haul from Africa or Brazil thereafter—and a long haul in wartime means grave dangers. With Brazil under a dictatorship, none can foretell what would confront us in that direction.

Now, I included Cuba as a source of supply. It is only because American capital Cuba has persevered in Shut Out making available the Cuban manganese deposit. The Cuban-American Manganese corporation has expended large sums for establishing the beneficiation process on a permanent basis. The bureau of mines tells me that corporation has succeeded, but due to Secretary Hull's reciprocal trade policies, even that company can hardly get into the American market. You see, Secretary Hull made a trade treaty with Brazil that reduced the tariff duty by 50 per cent. When that was done, the reduction in duty immediately became available to all nations since we must treat all of them alike. The treaty by Secretary Hull which was approved by President Roosevelt, therefore, spelled death for the chances of development of the manganese mines within our own borders.

To show further how these reciprocal trade policies have ruined our own chances, let me call attention to the fact that the government itself has developed an electrolytic process at the great Boulder dam that will make high grade manganese from the ore in this country. So here we have a governmentowned project and a great reserve from Cuba available and nothing can be done about it simply because they can not compete with the cheaper ore from abroadcheaper because of cheap or forced labor and Secretary Hull's unexplainable cut in tariff duties. Our national policy always insisted on an American standard of living for Americans. That means higher wages. It is a correct policy. But why, I ask, does Secretary Hull destroy a home industry on the one hand and provide for profits of foreigners on the other when we cling to a policy of the kind mentioned?

Of immediate urgency, however, is a supply on hand. Congress passed legislation Stock-Pile to provide for a Needed stock - pile, a reserve on hand under ownership of the government itself. That law provided for investment of $40,000,000 which would acquire approximately 1,000,000 tons of manganese. The War department called for bids. Americans, of course, could not compete with foreigners. Even the Cuban company could not make an offer within reach. Something has held up the contract award, however, and there has been delay. I am fearful that some of our steel companies have urged War department specifications that would not permit Americans to participate in the contract because of the low grade ore in this country, but in any event the Hull tariff reduction would hold our mines outside. I am all for that stock-pile idea.

It would be one foundation stone in the wall of defense which I believe the nation ought to have. But that alone would not solve our general problem. We can not continue forever with the present policies. Some time in the future, there will be a war in which this nation will have a part. There can be no doubt of that. So while all of the various planning by the New Deal goes on, why not give thought to development of a defense as well as the more abundant life or protection of the underprivileged.

Last summer, being sure that Miss Mattie was away from home, Miss Addie went in through the rear gate and picked the fruit on Miss Mattie's side of the fence. The jam in the jar before her, which she had taken down from the shelf for her supper that cold New Year's eve was from that fruit. The jar had held candied ginger in Miss Addie's childhood and she recalled how she and little Mattie had eaten the ginger from it. She recalled that she and Mattie had picked gooseberries from a bush which grew near the place where the bush which had caused so much trouble now grew. She recalled the many happy times she and Miss Mattie had spent together—the times when Miss Mattie had been a real friend in need-had helped to ease some hurt or lighten some sorrow. What a pity it seemed that such friendship should ever be broken. Miss Addie's dog had been given away long ago, and Miss Mattie's cat had wandered away from home and never returned. With the two original causes of the trouble gone, wasn't it too bad for one-time friends to remain enemies? Wouldn't it be better to turn over a new leaf this New Year's day and renew their friendship?

It seemed so to Miss Addie and she resolved not to waste another minute, but do it right away! So with a jar of jam in her hand and love in her heart she went to wish Miss Mattie a happy New Year.

On New Year's eve midnight masses and watchnight services are held everywhere, while those less inclined to religious observances make the closing minutes of the year an occasion for jollity.

January Was for Janus, God of New Adventures

HE month of January bears its name because Janus was the god of the opening year. He presided over the undertaking of any new adventure, and was a god known only to the Romans. The Romans adopted January as the first of the year from the reign of their second king, Numa Pompilius, who ruled until 672 B. C.

Not until the Eighteenth century was January universally adopted as the beginning of the year. England took the step in 1752, and Sweden in 1753, but other European countries adopted this New Year's day at an earlier date; France in 1564, Holland, Protestant Germany and Russia in 1700.

New Year's at White House

Since the White House was not completed during our first President's lifetime, the John Adamses were the first presidential family to occupy it. The first drawing room or New Year's reception was held in the "President's palace," as it was then referred to, on New Year's day, 1801.

De Correvont Put in Tough Spot by Press Agenting

BILL De CORREVONT is on the spot.

Bill, as you know, has been headline news throughout the sports pages of the land in recent months at an age when most lads would be thrilled to see their names in the school | the summer of 1936. paper.

As star halfback of the Austin high school team of Chicago, national champions by virtue of their recent victory over Jackson, Tenn., he has been the most publicized prep gridiron star since Red Grange.

Nearly every large university and college in the country hopes Bill De Correvont will enter its classic gates next autumn. But when he does go to col-lege, he'll have to live up to all his advance press-agenting-or else. That's why he's on the spot. Here are a few reasons why most coaches would give their right eye to Bill their right eye to have Bill on their squad:

He scored 210 points for Austin during the 1937 football season. He was the key factor in enabling his team to pile up 364 points.

Drew Crowd of 110,000

He drew more than 110,000 people into Soldier Field, Chicago, to a single game. This was the largest crowd that ever saw a football game anywhere in this country. It was bigger than the one that watched the Dempsey-Tunney fight in 1927. It exceeded by a wide mar-gin the crowds at the Army and Navy game or the all-star games.

He is a phantom-like runner, a rifle passer, a star kicker, a re-sourceful tackler and a sure-fire pass receiver.

He is a star student. When he graduates in February, at the age of nineteen, he will have a fouryear average of 88 in all his studies. In addition to his football prowess, Bill is quite a baseball player. He can round the bases in 13.6 seconds and has had a batting average for the past four years of .400.

Thousands of high school athletes throughout the country would probably like to change places with Bill. But if they knew what he's going to be up against, maybe they'd change their minds. Bill has a tough assignment. He will be a marked man. Like Jim Thorpe, Walter Eckersall and Red Grange, he will have to be a whirlwind to make good.

Knows How to Take It

But Bill has demonstrated that he knows how to take it, and so his spot may not be so tough after all. Every time he played last fall, they expected more of him than the time before. And on every occasion he came through.

The biggest test was the game that decided the championship of Chicago. It was played in Soldier Field between Austin, representing the public high schools, and St. Leo, representing the parochial schools.

Well, Austin won, 26 to 0. Bill was the hero. He made three touchdowns, playing throughout with a painfully bruised knee. He got loose for long runs, threw passes, received them, backed up plays, tackled and blocked.

He was happy after that game, all right. Only one thing bothered him. His mother had to watch the game from behind a pillar high in the stands. She had been invited to sit in a box as the guest of Mayor Kelly. When she got to the stadium, she approached the reserved gate. 'I'm Bill De Correvont's mother,' she announced diffidently, "and I'm to sit in the mayor's box" An usher looked at her and was unimpressed. "I don't care if you're Shirley Temple or Queen Elizabeth," he said. "Seats are all

Somehow she managed to get in another gate and was swirled by the crowd high up into the stands. Eventually she was pushed behind a pillar. Only by craning her neck could she see her son occasionally as he galloped off to a long run.

The next test came with Jackson, Tenn., played at Memphis, which the coaches said, settled the national championship. Against a strong and rugged team he scored the winning touchdown.

Now Bill is receiving feelers from scores of colleges, chances to talk on the radio, go to Hollywood and what not. You can envy Bill De Correvont or not as you please. Remember he's on the spot but remember, also, that he knows how to take it when the going is tough.

Maxie Is Ageless at 32

TUNING up for his forthcoming heavyweight championship fight with Joe Louis, Max Schmeling gave Harry Thomas an artistic licking and demonstrated that he'll be just as hard for Joe as he was before. He knocked the hard-swinging Thomas down seven times and was awarded the decision in the eighth

It can't be denied that Thomas was subnormal competition. He is one of those free swingers who starts a haymaker from the floor and finishes it six inches from his opponent's jaw. But he'd never been knocked out before. Max showed that his right is still lethal despite the long 18month layoff since he stopped Louis in Max seems age-less. At thirty-two, his legs and body are smooth and rippling and as tidy looking as ever. This continued brilliance is a testimonial to his training methods. Like most foreign fighters of recent years, he stresses roadwork and other outdoor conditioning more than gymnasium work. Moreover, he smartly conserves his energy during a fight. By wasting few punches, making every one count to the utmost, he fights less in fifteen rounds than the average battler does in six.

Golf Dream Comes True

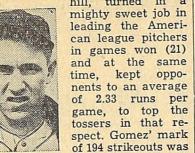

When Johnny Revolta won the Miami Open golf championship recently, and incidentally drew down a check for $2,500, he satisfied a six-year ambition. Back in 1932, Revolta, unheralded in a field of the nation's best money players, finshed second.

He has won many a tournament since, including the 1935 P. G. A. championship, but none gave him greater satisfaction than the 20-foot putt he made on the seventy-second green to give him first place and a total score of 282.

Incidentally, Ralph Guldahl, who won the Biltmore Open last year and went on to become National Open champion, finished far down the list at 292 and collected only S75. And Denny Shute, P. G. A. champion, collected just $25 with a

One of the high spots of the season was White Sox pitcher Bill Dietrich's no-hit game. The castoff righthander whom Manager Jimmy Dykes had faith in, reached the pinnacle of fame on June 1 last season when he set the Browns down with nary a hit or a run. Next best showing from local fans' point of view was Johnny Allen of Cleveland. Johnny, a "Temperamental Tillie" when on the pitching mound, turned in 15 wins in a row and was in the shadow of the hall of fame when Southpaw Jake Wade opposed him the last day of the season and beat him, 1-0.

However, Allen's won and lost percentage set a new record in that respect, the final average being .938, besting Bob Grove's record of .886 made while with the A's in 1930.

Bob Feller, the Cleveland hurler who two years ago came out of Van Meter, Iowa, to make good in a big league in a big way, continued his reputation as a strikeout king, piling up 150 whiffs in 149 innings. Gomez' strikeout record was accomplished in 278 innings of toil. Feller fanned 16 Boston batters on August 25 last year.

Under Pressure

By George Agnew Chamberlain

Joyce Sewell, on the eve of her twentieth birthday, rebels at her lot, dependent on her detested stepmother, Irma, and full of tragic memories of her mother's murder twelve years before and her father's death six months ago. Irma calls in Helm Blackadder, an admirer, to help her persuade Joyce to marry rich, young Michael Kirkpatrick. Mike, sent up to Joyce by Irma and Blackadder, demands a showdown on his proposal and is rejected. Joyce realizes that La Barranca, a Mexican hacienda which her father had owned, legally belongs to her. Later, she receives a letter his proposal and is rejected. Joyce realizes that La Barranca, a Mexican hacienda which her father had owned, legally belongs to her. Later, she receives a letter enclosing a warrant on the United States Treasury for $10,000 compensation for her mother's murder at La Barranca. She confers with Mr. Bradley, a banker and only remaining friend of her father's. She confides that she wants to make a secret journey to Mexico. Bradley arranges all details for her. She departs by plane undetected. Dirk Van Suttart, second secretary of the American embassy in Mexico City, gives Joyce a chilly reception and she loses her temper. She finds a Mexican woman lawyer, Margarida Fonseca, who takes her to General Onelia, right-hand man to the Mexican minister of war. Margarida reminds Onelia that the usurper of La Barranca is his dangerous enemy, General Dorado. The two make plans to send Joyce with a few picked men under Pancho Buenaventura to drive Dorado out. Adan Arnaldo, a young man who runs El Tenebroso, a night club, knows Dorado's present whereabouts, so they take Joyce there that night, where she notices Dirk. General Dorado arrives and in the course of sudden gunplay, the lights go out and Joyce is left alone. Adan Arnaldo whisks her out and takes her home. The following morning Joyce drives off to Toluca with Pancho. Back in Elsinboro, Joyce's disappearance has been discovered. Blackadder upbraids Irma, but succumbs to her helpless charm and plans to marry her. Blackadder gets the secretary of state to wire the embassy at Mexico City to locate Joyce. Dirk is delegated for the search. Dirk, getting no information from the lying Onelia, goes to El Tenebroso and interviews Arnaldo. Arnaldo bids Dirk follow him. Meanwhile Joyce and Pancho reach La Barranca. Pancho and Eusebio, one of his band, leave her and at dawn climb the wall. Suddenly shots ring out.

She sprang through the first zaguan and ran across the second court. She reached the second zaguan, entered the inner patio and plunged through odorous blooms to trip and all but fall over a dead body. Here also everything was silent-not the stillness of peace, the silence of terror and death. Every door on the lower floor was tightly sealed. She dashed up one branch of the double stairway which led to the balcony above. Fury still possessed her to the exclusion of all fear. Murder was being done on her account-murder before her Again shots pierced the silence, but they were rhythmic, punctuated. They came from the formal dining room. She dashed along the balcony and entered upon a scene so astonishing it brought her to an instantaneous halt. Her eyes were riveted on a figure as hideous as a gargoyle which stood as if crucified against the wall beneath one of the sconces.

She recognized the visage of General Dorado, now twitching with terror as the rhythmic shots shattered one by one the lusters dangling over her head. Two other men were in the room, Eusebio and Pancho, both seated. The jumpers were gone, disclosing what had caused the bulges-bandoliers still half full of cartridges. Eusebio was rolling a cigarette, Pancho was doing the shooting and Dorado, wondering why he was being spared, had his glittering eyes fixed on his tormentor. "Pancho!" cut in Joyce's voice between two shots. "You lied. You promised Gen-"

In one movement Pancho sprang up, snatched off his big sombrero and swung it backward at a venture, striking her across the mouth. For an instant Dorado stared at her with unbelieving yet consuming eyes, then his paralysis passed and he made a leap for the nearest door. With a double bloodcurdling yell Eusebio and Pancho were after him. Half knocked off balance by the rush of their passage Joyce was yet able to reach the balcony in time to watch the pursuit through the patio, across the visible section of the great court, through the zaguan at its far side and out by one of the gates into the limitless freedom of the prairie. Joyce turned, went out and descended to the patio with a firm step. She must do something, summon aid. But first she wished to orient herself, revisit the spots she knew best. She glanced toward her one time playroom and saw that the huge key was on the outside of the lock. A moment later she had turned it and thrown open the door. She stood transfixed. It had become a stable—a pig-pen. Two horses turned their heads and stared at her as though startled and three fattening hogs, penned in one corner, grunted low as if only mumbling. She closed the door hurriedly and stepped back against a bush. The bush moved and she thought it was because she had touched it but the next instant her ankle was seized in an unbreakable grip. She

She opened her mouth and screamed but no sound issued from her throat. She dragged back with all her might. Another hand came forward and then appeared the Pepe's shooting parties," said Arshoulders of a man. She tugged naldo, still in a half daze.

more furiously than ever. The other hand added its grip to the first. Now she could see his waist, the whole body, his shattered and bleed-ing thigh. He looked up and instantly she knew he was asking for no aid. The single thought in his eyes was as clear as if he had shouted it. He wished to pull her down, transfer his grip from her ankle to her throat and kill her before he died-all this for mi General Dorado. Then her voice came backnot her familiar grown-up voice but the voice of memory uttering a cry of the past.

"Luz! Luz! Luz!"

CHAPTER VII

Dirk followed Arnaldo around the crowded dancing floor, retrieved his overcoat and hat and a moment later the two men sprang into the same car that had rescued Joyce from the same spot four nights before. Adan barked a direction and the tone of his voice was sufficient to send the chauffeur tearing along through one street after another, skidding around corners and ignoring lights until he drew up with a squeal of brakes at an apartment house shrouded in darkness. "You'd get it all right; the police are downstairs."

"What police?" "Why do you suppose I'm running around, with a gringo secretary of embassy?" countered Arnaldo. 'Don't you know a friend when you see one? Answer my questions and tell the truth or you'll go to jail in a nightgown." "For what?"

> "Abduction of a minor." "What is it you wish to know?"

"Where is the girl?" "She's gone to La Barranca."

"What for?"

"La Barranca is undoubtedly her property; I had to admit that much. Since I explained why the courts can do nothing she has gone there to plead with General Dorado to hand it back to her."

"I don't believe it!" said Arnaldo. "She told me she never wanted to see Pepe's horror of a face again." Margarida smiled pityingly. "I'm the one who's telling the truth. The girl is at La Barranca. I swear it by every hair on the head of my dead mother." "Where is La Barranca?" Dirk asked: "I mean how to you get there—by what road?"

"The road to Toluca," said Arnaldo out of a half daze. "The hacienda is southwest of Toluca. Once you've passed the city all you have to say is La Barranca to the first man you meet and he will point out the trail."

"How do you know so much about La Barranca, Adan?" asked Margarida curiously.

"For my sins I went to one of Dirk rose. "I'm leaving for To- | tear-wet cheeks. "Luz! Oh, Luz! luca in half an hour," he stated. "What about it, Arnaldo? Any chance of your coming with me?'

"No," said Arnaldo, snapping out of his daze. He turned to Van Suttart. "Sit down." Dirk obeyed. 'What do you suppose I'm thinking about? Do you know Dorado? No. Well, I do. We're too late-too late by hours. To make the trip would be a mere sentimental gesture." "Just the same I'm going," said

"To take a fall out of a windmill," asserted Arnaldo impatiently. "Have you any idea what a Mexican hacienda is like?"

"It's a fortress. Don't be a fool. If you insist on making a journey to bring back the remains wait until you can take a hearse and a troop of cavalry along with a battery of seventy-fives to help you. If your ambassador can't get them, come to me and I'll see what I can

"No," said Dirk. "You don't understand. He gave me a job and if I tried passing the buck back to him he'd be through with me for keeps and I wouldn't blame him. Do you mind dropping me at my

Joyce stared down in horror at the wreck of a man at her feet. Reason told her since he was mortally wounded she must be stronger than he, yet she was not-all her strength had turned to water. From the waist up he was terribly alive. His right hand was still clamped on her ankle so tightly that circulation had almost ceased and with his left he had managed to seize her skirt. Rather than have it dragged off her she sank to one knee, straining her head back from the sight of his

"Luz!" she cried in a last despairing wail.

A bar clattered on the far side of the patio, a door opened and the figure of a woman stepped forth. She was ageless as are all peons once the bloom of youth has passed, but strong with the toughness of rawhide. Her leathery face would have been expressionless had it not been for the brilliance of cavernous black eyes. The instant they beheld Joyce their expression underwent a startling transformation. It did not occur to her she was staring at the babe she had nursed at her breast; what she thought she saw was that babe's mother to the very life.

She dashed to the rescue, screaming as she went: "Senor Maximiliano! Julio! Leonardo! Plutarco! Riquieta! Nataniel!"

As the last cry for help left her lips she sprang through the air to pounce like a cat, claws out, on Joyce's assailant. Heedless of the shattered hip which was uppermost she dug knowingly under his other thigh and presently tugged into view a sheath knife with a glittering blade a foot long. Gripping the handle with both hands she raised it on high. The man promptly gave up. He released his hold on Joyce, rolled over and with a sigh of relief exposed his breast to descending death. But he counted without Joyce. She seized Luz's wrists and wrenched them upward.

"No, Luz, no!" At Luz's call doors had opened on every side and people were coming on the run. As the wondering group gathered Luz looked up, her face distorted in bewilderment. An instant later she dropped the knife, threw herself on her knees, bowed her head to the ground and began kissing Joyce's feet with a fervor interrupted only by elucidating wails.

"Joycita! Cita! Ciquita! My baby! At my breast-my own breast!" She looked up at the crowd through streaming eyes. "Our baby has come back to us!"

Joyce lifted her up and kissed her

But we can't talk now; we must get a doctor. 'What for?" asked Luz.

"This poor man-we must try to "He's dead," said several of the crowd in unison. "Wait!" called a sonorous voice. 'Wait for me."

Joyce looked around and memory, not quite sure of itself, stirred in her breast. An imposing figure was approaching along the gallery of the patio with carefully measured steps accompanied by the regular thump of a rubber-tipped staff.

"Who is he?" asked Joyce hurriedly.

"You have forgotten Don Jorge, Senor Maximiliano?" asked Luz. 'Because he became blind," she explained, "they left him life."

"Of course," said Joyce, remembering. "Maxie, the superintendent. Luz stepped forward, caught

Senor Maximiliano's free hand and kissed it with respect. She explained the baby of long ago had returned. He let fall his staff, reached out and laid hands on Joyce's shoulders.

"Maxie," she breathed, "I used to call you Maxie."

He wrapped his arms around her and held her close for a long moment of silence. "The babe is become a woman," he rumbled, "but she will always be a child to me. Welcome back to your home and to our hearts. Leonardo!"
"Senor," answered Leonardo, stepping forward. "Summon the people; let them greet their mistress.

There was no need for Leonardo to issue a call since men, women, and children were already swarm. ing into the precincts of the inner patio. They came from the outer court, the tienda and the scattered houses beyond the gates. Silently, their black eyes staring in wonder, they passed before Joyce, each pausing with bent knee to kiss her hand. A toddling infant closed the long procession, 500 strong. Joyce snatched up the baby and faced the

"As this child is one of you," she called, "so am I. Boundaries divide peoples; they can't divide the human family. Love me and I will serve you; serve me with faith in your hearts and I will love you." She turned to Senor Maximiliano and laid her hand on his arm. "Was that all right, Maxie?"

"Your father might have spoken the words," said Don Jorge, "and I know no greater praise. But I am confused. Let us go inside—you and Luz and I—and talk."

"Let's say farewell to the past," said Don Jorge, "and face the present. What you have told me about Onelia troubles me profoundly. Why did he accede to your request? Why did his men kill Dorado and then abandon you?"

"They didn't," said Joyce quickly. "What!" cried Don Jorge, straightening in his chair. "Are you

"Quite sure, Maxie. Didn't I tell you Onelia told Pancho Buenaventura that Dorado mustn't be killed at any price? They chased him away-I saw them with my own eyes-but they didn't kill him." (TO BE CONTINUED) common usage with us although it is purple and the scales of the pistila misnomer. According to authorities the name is wholly out of place, for the tree is not a foreigner but a native of North America. It is related that the name Norway pine was given the tree by a Spanish captain who first found it here. Its close resemblance to pines he had seen in Norway caused him to suppose it identical with such as he had seen growing there, which undoubtedly were Scottish pines.

Simon B. Elliott, in his work on important timber trees of the United States, said: "Its technical name also is inappropriate. Pinus resinosa, which it is called, means resin pine, and why the red pine should name to the eastern coast of Canbe given that name when its wood ada.

The red pine, next to the white pine, used to be the most important timber tree of the lake states. Today it is planted as extensively as white and jack over state and federal reservations. Name of Labrador A venturesome Portuguese named Labrador discovered and gave his Diet for Slow Reduction

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON

A FEW years ago if a patient asked his or her physician about reducing weight, the physician would simply advise the eating of less food. He might have added that cutting down on fat foods and starch foods would be advisable. In other words all that overweight meant to a physician a few years ago was that fat people ate too much and if they'd eat less they'd lose their weight.

Today physicians know that overweight is a subject of as much in-out Europe. Dr. E. I. Spriggs in Proceedings of the Royal Society of Medicine gives a "Simple Scheme for Slow Reduction of Weight or Keeping Weight Down When Reduced."

At each of three meals-breakfast, lunch and dinner-the allowance is just over one ounce of white bread. This is half of a round of a two-pound loaf one-half inch thick, or this much bread can be split and toasted, which makes it go farther, especially when used with larger pieces of meat, fish, cheese, or egg, than is the case with bread. The split toast is made by taking a fiveinch square of white bread one-half inch thick without crust. Toast each side and then split into two thin pieces. Scrape off all crumbly bread and then toast the untoasted sides. Divide each slice into two, which makes it spread out over a whole

Take no other food made from flour (such as puddings, scones, cakes or biscuits) and no potato, except that at tea-time two pieces of thin bread and butter, with jam if desired, are allowed. The appetite can then be satisfied with other foods, such as egg, fish, meat, cheese, fruit, salads, green and root vegetables. Carrots, turnips, and onions are taken freely in stews, but not potatoes. Fresh well-cooked greens are eaten with gravy, pepper and salt. Butter may be used in moderate amount.

As to Sauces and Drinks.

Flavoring - such as mustard, Worcestershire or tomato sauces, vinegar or catsup-is allowed. Sauces Don Jorge Maximiliano de la Si- made with oil, cream, and flour, and taken only in very small amount not more than a small teaspoonful. Provided that the bread allowance be not exceeded, any other nonflour food may be eaten in modera-Luz standing before them, Joyce tion by an active person, without increase in weight.

> Drink nothing at all till all the solid food has been eaten. Then take fluid.

Now this method seems simple and easy to follow-cutting down on bread and toasting even the small allowance and splitting it in half. avoiding potatoes and sauces made with oil, cream and flour, and drinking only after all the solid food has been eaten which helps satisfy the appetite. The whole point is that the physician is not trying to get the weight reduced to normal within 18 days or even 18 weeks. He is not being stampeded by the patient into prescribing a starvation diet.

"Life Depends Upon the Liver." It would seem that the old expression, "life depends upon the liver." is becoming popular again as there is more written about the liver and gall bladder today than at any previous time. As youngsters we were taught that the work of the liver was to manufacture bile which acted on fat foods in such a way that they could be absorbed into the blood. And while this is still an important job done by the liver, it is but one of the many things the liver does for us to make life worth living. The others, as mentioned before, are: storing sugar for future needs, filtering poisons out of the blood, manufacturing substances to form the blood. A healthy liver, working properly, has much to do also in preventing skin eruptions, stomach and intestinal upsets, and attacks of hay fever, asthma and eczema, due to foods to which the individual is sensitive or allergic. The bile is considered so valuable by the liver that after sending some down into the small intestine to help digest fats, it calls this bile back and uses it over and over again.

Someone has called this bile that goes back the "self starter" of the liver, as it seems to start or increase the activity of the liver. In fact, it has been proven that bile injected into the liver direct has actually built up or repaired worn portions of the liver,

Thinks about

HOUSTON, TEXAS.—Lately, for my sins, I've had to listen to a jag of after-dinner oratory, including plenty of mine. I hope people like to hear me. I do.

Feature writers say professional after-dinner speakers are dying out.

That may be true in New York, where folks are anxious to get the dinner over with so they may hurry to the nightspots and do some sincere and earnest drinking in an effort to forget what the stock market did to them yesterday and what it's going to do to them tomorrow.

Irvin S. Cobb

But out in the hinterlands the new crop of native orators is a bountiful one; and the typical silver tongues of the great open spaces—I'm speaking of their neighborhoods although I might include their mouths-are still convinced that the sweetest music on earth is the sound of one's own voice uplifted in eloquence.

An English preacher had the best formula: Stand up to be seen, speak up to be heard, shutup to be appreciated. If he'd left out all but the last part, 'twould have been a perfect recipe.

Tomorrow's Treasures. ANT to acquire untold wealth Wan't to acquire difference for your latter years, or, anyhow, for your grateful heirs?

Then collect things. Collect cheap things which are both common and commonplace. Then sit down and wait for these objects to become obsolete and therefore priceless. Yesterday's necessity is today's junk, but will be tomorrow's treasured antique.

Assume you'd saved up old circus bills, or Mississippi river steamboat menus, or buggy whips, or those handpainted slop-jars formerly found in all truly refined homes. Henry Ford or some museum would take a lot at any price.

I'm putting aside literary works of a purely imaginative conception. I have one perfect specimen of idyllic creation—a time-table of the old Florida East Coast railroad, also a complete working synopsis of the Townsend plan—just sheer fantasy. But the most fanciful romances are the platform pledges adopted at national conventions of the two great parties during the last twenty years -there's real fiction for you!

Germany's Colonies.

EVERY nation is united in the magnanimous attitude that to Germany should be restored the colonies taken from her by the winning side in the World's war-except the nations that acquired the said colonies in the split-up.

That's the main hitch. It's more than a hitch. It's a hard knot, tied originally with hate and sealed now with greed. In other words, sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander-unless it happens to be our gander, which naturally alters the

Nor seemingly has it occurred to any government that the original owners of Germany's former terri-torial possessions might like to have a say about whom they're going to belong to in future. But then, if ever we started considering the wishes of despoiled native tribes over the world, where would the white man's noble civilization be?

Glory of Salem's Port Days Will Be Enshrined

National Park Will Include Historic Structures.

Washington, D. C .- Salem, Massachusetts, plans a three-acre national park to enshrine to posterity the port's days of maritime glory, when its oriental sea trade rivaled that of Boston.

"Derby wharf will be reconstructed as it appeared about 1785 when Elias Derby, so-called 'King of Salem Merchants' sent his sailing ship, Grand Turk, to China. This was the first New England ship to reach the Far East. In its wake, whole fleets of ships sailed from Salem.

miles southeast of Cannonville. "Among the subjects of the paintings, remarkably vivid and well preserved," he said, "were characteristic square-shouldered men, a woman kneeling, a large red German cross, fourteen human hands in various shades of red, green and yellow, huge butterflies, a number of swastikas, and two human figures -a man and a woman-exercising on a sort of trapeze.

Mark's Gospel: Author, Origin, Theme.

Beginning a New Year is always a thrilling experience. The thought of an unwritten record is a pleasant one and at the same time most solemnizing. We must take heed, you and I, what we write upon that page which lies before us with the inviting caption-"1938."

Next to having New Year's day fall on Sunday, it is most appropri-ate that the Lord's day should come between the holiday of yesterday spent with our family and friends, and the work-day on the morrow, when we begin the year's labors. Today we tarry in God's house to pray and counsel together in the light of his Holy Word regarding the new year of grace and oppor-

We begin today a six-month study of the Gospel of Mark, which presents Christ as the Servant of God. It is the Gospel of the mighty acts of divine power, rather than of words. It is characterized by energy and spontaneity. It moves rapidly. The characteristic words are "straightway," "immediately," and "forthwith," which are used more than forty times.

Before considering our lesson for today, we would undoubtedly like to "meet the author." John Mark was the son of the Mary in Jerusalem in whose home was "the upper room" whose nome was the upper room where so many important events took place. He was a cousin of Barnabas and went with him and
Paul on the first missionary journey.
For some reason he lost heart and went home, much to Paul's distress. Happily we find that the young man redeemed himself in Paul's estimation and was later well spoken of by him (Col. 4:10, Phile. 24, and I Tim. 4:11).

The lesson text chosen for our 'preview" of the Gospel is one which shows the weakness of human ambitions as contrasted with the true spirit of humble service which characterized Christ.

I. Selfish Ambition Rebuked (vv.

Ambition is not in itself wrong, but when it becomes so extreme that it projects self forward at the expense of others it becomes selfish and destructive. The fact that these men were evidently earnest and were, indeed, seeking a place with the Lord in his glory does not change the situation. They were selfish even in dealing with holy

James and John had asked for a great honor in the kingdom, not sought to share in the suffering that preceded it.

Their own ignorance of what was involved, their own weakness, their observation of God's hand in the carrying out of his own plans, should have deterred them. There is such a thing as holy boldness, but there is also such a thing as unholy temerity.

II. Sacrificial Service Defined (vv. 42-45).

Christianity is not organized after the manner of secular government (v. 42). Much of the mischief that has come to pass in the church is the result of "running the church" as an organization, when it should be allowed to develop as a living organism.

Anyone who observes with even a little care knows that the church of Jesus Christ is hindered most seriously by the presence of pride and selfish ambition. Some people will not work unless they can rule. Their money is withheld unless it buys for them a dominating interest. The pastor is persona non grata unless he recognizes the desires of the "right" people. None of these things are done as obviously as our words would suggest. There is much careful "fixing" and "wire-pulling" behind the scenes. But it amounts to exactly the same thing, and it is all entirely foreign to the spirit of Christ.

Are there then no Christians who humbly serve the Lord? Yes, praise his name, there are many, and wherever they are found they are the salt of the earth. God uses and blesses them to his own glory. They may not be (and often are not) in "positions of leadership," but they are actually the leaders of the church in its true work on the earth.

Man Man is by nature weak; he is born in and to a state of dependence; he therefore naturally seeks and looks about for help.

Make Luncheon Sets of Striped Material.

HE napkins and mats are whipping the edge as I have shown fringed and then whipped to here at C. keep them from raveling and to strengthen the edge. This is a very quick and easy finish to use for linens of the coarser weaves and is in harmony with peasant dishes and provincial furniture.

In cutting the material for the mats and napkins it is best to pull a thread to guide you so that the edges will be perfectly straight and fringe easily. Cut right along the little opening made in the material by drawing the thread as shown at A. Plan the size of the mats and napkins good at the material will cut to good aventage and the stripes will arrange themselves in a pleasing way through the center of each piece. Napkins for this purpose may be as small as nine inches square though many people like them a little larger than this. The mats are usually about eleven by eighteen

Pull out the threads to make the fringe at the edge as I have shown here at B. From a half to threequarters of an inch is a good depth for the fringe. Save the threads you pull out and use them for

THERE is no mystery about how to bank a fire for the night. I'd like to give you the easiest, simplest method I know of, so that you will have no trouble getting abundant heat in the morning.

To make room for fresh coal, shake the grates gently until you see the first red glow in the ash-pit! Then pull the live coals toward the front, using a shovel or a hoe, so that the bed slopes downward from the odge of the downward from the edge of the firedoor to the back. Shovel fresh coal into the hollow, being careful to leave a spot of live coals exposed in front to act as a "hot spot" in igniting the gases given off by the fresh coal, preventing

When this is done, close the ashpit damper, open the check damper, leaving the turn damper as nearly closed 5. What birds constitute the only wild life in the Antarctica? as possible.
