DEFENSE BILLION FOR President Wants Bigger Navy . . . Budget Message Reveals Larger Deficit, Less Revenue

Silk to feed anti-Japanese bonfire flames is being gathered from the shapely limbs of girls at Vassar college, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., where the delegates to the third annual convention of the American Student Union staged a demonstration for a boycott against Japanese goods. Silk stockings, shirts and neckties were burned.

Budget Message Summary

MORE vitally important than his annual message on the state of the nation was President Roosevelt's budget message to congress. In it he forecast a deficit of $1,088,-129,600 for the current fiscal year which ends on June 30, and a deficit of $949,606,000 for the 1939 fiscal year.

There was no promise that the budget would be balanced in the near future, the national revenue estimates being reduced because of the business depression.

Nearly a billion dollars was asked by the President for national defense because of "world conditions over which this nation has no con-trol," and more may be called for soon for the same purpose. Summarized, the President's budget statement said: Revenues for the next fiscal year will total $5,919,400,000, a decrease of $401,076,000 from the present fiscal year.

Expenditures, exclusive of debt retirements, will total $6,869,000,000, a decrease of $539,600,000 from the present fiscal year.

National defense appropriations will total $991,300,000, an increase of $34,300,000. Later the President may ask for additional funds to construct several extra naval vessels.

Relief expenditures for the next fiscal year will total roughly $1,138,-304,000, a decrease of $841,356,000 from the present fiscal year.

The deficit will be financed through Social Security and other trust funds and not through public borrowing.

Employment averaged 517,000, largest ever and 16 per cent above 1929. The automobile industry was the only one having an increase in labor cost per unit of output since 1929. Weekly earnings of workers averaged $32.04 for first eight months of 1937.

At present dealers have on hand about 400,000 new cars, highest since 1930; manufacturers have very large inventories of parts and sub-assemblies.

Hourly wage rates are 30 per cent above 1929, all direct manufacturing costs equal to 1929, but auto prices per pound are still 13 per cent below 1929.

Hill to Be Alabama Senator REP. LISTER HILL, administration adherent, is to be the new senator from Alabama. In the Dem-ocratic primaries he defeated former Senator Tom Heflin, and that is equivalent to election. The seat he will have, formerly filled by Hugo Black, has been occupied since Black's elevation to the Supreme court by Dixie Bibb Graves, wife of Governor Graves, but it was agreed that she would resign as soon as an election was held. Mr. Hill, who is forty-three years old, will be one of the youngest members of the senate. He has been serving as chairman of the house military affairs committee.

No New Deal Retreat R EADING his annual message on the state of the nation before the senate and house at the opening of congress, President Roosevelt declared his purpose to advance upon the same fundamentals of the New Deal that have hitherto been proposed. He said: 'I do not propose to let the people down. I am sure the congress of the United States will not let the people down. We hold our principles and our objectives President to be sound. We will Roosevelt never go back on them. The President again urged congress to enact legislation for control of wages and hours of work. He asked that all segments of the nation co-operate with the government to achieve better economic balance. Reasserting his approval of proposed changes in tax laws, he said: "Three things should be kept in mind. First the total sum to be derived by the federal treasury must not be decreased as a result of any changes in schedules. Second, abuses by individuals or corporations designed to escape taxpaying by using various methods of doing business corporate and otherwiseabuses which we have sought, with great success, to end-must not be restored. Third, we should rightly change certain provisions where they are proven to work definite hardship, especially on the small business men of the nation.

"But speculative income should favored over earned innot be come."

Speaking of his attitude toward the nation's business as a whole, Mr. Roosevelt declared:

"The overwhelming majority of business men and bankers intend to be good citizens. Only a small minority have displaced poor citizenship by engaging in practices which are dishonest or definitely harmful to society. This statement is straightforward and true.

"No person in any responsible place in the government of the United States has ever taken any position contrary to it."

He called for prompt agreements on a farm program-now in conference between the house and senate-and asked specifically that congress "keep the cost of its administration within the figure of current government expenditures in aid of agriculture.'

"Death Fog" By FLOYD GIBBONS Famous Headline Hunter

ELLO EVERYBODY:

Well, sir, the Vikings of old used to sail the seas in oared galleys that were hardly bigger than the motor cruisers in which we plough through our lakes and rivers today. I'll give them a lot of credit for their nerve. But they had oars to row with and sails to carry them along. They knew where they were going and they had a pretty good chance of getting there. I'm betting a lot that there wasn't a Viking in any age who would have put himself in the spot Pete Gear of Sunnyside, L. I., found himself in. Not for any amount of money.

It happened in September, 1927—and here's how. Pete got a job on a coal barge. And one of the first trips that barge was sent on after Pete joined the crew, was a tow out to sea with a load of coal for a ship that was to meet them a hundred and ninety-five miles out in the Atlantic.

The rendezvous at which they were to meet was southeast of Block island. A tug was to take the barge out. Five men composed the barge's crew. Four of those fellows-Pete includedhad never been out to sea before. The fifth man was a regular sea-going bargeman.

They Couldn't Find the Boat.

On the afternoon of the day appointed, the tug came along and the barge was hooked on behind it. Pete says the trip up Long Island sound was like a moonlight excursion. But after they passed Montauk point, the sea was mighty rough. The four landlubbers immediately got seasick.

It was a hard night for those lads-but it was going to be a lot harder before they got back. The next day, when they arrived at the appointed spot, there was no sign of the boat they had come to meet. The tugboat captain told the bargeman to drop anchor and he would circle ound and see if he could find the other boat. He cast off the tow line and the tug steamed away. Soon it was out of sight. There was nothing in sight, as a matter of fact, but water and more water. They were nearly two hundred miles from the nearest land. Then, half an hour later, a thick fog settled down over the anchored barge.

Anchored in the Shipping Lane.

Says Pete: "We were lying in our bunks, too sick to move, when the regular bargeman came in and told us about the fog. He explained that we were anchored in the shipping lane, and that was a dangerous position. We would have to keep the fog bell ringing as long as the fog lasted. Otherwise we would most likely be run down by one of the liners which were continually passing through that part of the ocean.'

And that was only the beginning. The troubles crowded thick and fast after that. It was night now, and the bargeman went aloft to hang a riding light. He was hardly up there when he fell to the deck and lay still, his leg broken. "Then," says Pete, "the nightmare began."

Pete picked him up and carried him to his bunk. The other three men were still lying in their bunks, the ghastly pallor of seasickness on their faces. When he had done what little he could for the injured man, Pete went out and started ringing the fog bell.

Roosevelt administration is going to The night wore on, and the fog showed no sign of lifting. Pete yanked away rhythmically on that bell, tolling a monotonous dirge. His arm was getting tired. His hand was chafing from its constant contact with the bell rope. Every minute he expected to see the bow of an ocean liner looming over the barge. Every minute he expected to hear a thud and a crash of splintering timbers as some huge craft cut them in two.

py about the whole thing. But I ain not. The outlook is too gloomy. Developments of the last few weeks have combined to make me a pessimist of the first water. I hope I am wrong; yet, present conditions force the conclusion that this country faces a condition as serious as that through which it passed in 1932 and 1933. There is no reason evident to me why we should not face the facts, discouraging as they appear.

So, let us consider some of the things that have happened lately, and some that are happening these days. Only in that way, I believe, can we get a correct understanding of this new depression which a thousand government propagandists insist upon calling a "recession."

Four months ago, industry began to lay off men and women workers. There was no market for the goods they were manufacturing. The reduction in payrolls was necessary to avoid bankruptcy. Nobody can afford to pay workers if there is no work to do. Dismissal of workers continued in an ever-growing volume until on January 1, the great General Motors corporation laid off something like 60,000 men at one time and placed its remaining 200,-000 workers on a four-day week. That action, while it appears sensational, was illustrative of what had been going on during the four months that I mentioned; it brought public attention and political attention to a focus, but it was sensational only because of the numbers. It made an impression that dismissal of a few or several hundred here and there had failed to make. During this same period, prices were undergoing a natural and normal reaction. Some were up; some were down. Altogether, they were and are in a topsy-turvy condition. Government business analysts smelled the mouse. They were watching all of the trends that were evident during those four months. Those officials in high places and charged with responsibility for national welfare were informed of what was in prospect. But government propaganda continued to show bright and smiling faces in the picture. It won't last, they were saying in the written and spoken words. It is a psychological condition, Pres-ident Roosevelt said—and thereby the new year to become despondent. ment to act as an impartial overseer of our industrial progress, ready to call a halt at all times on monopolistic practices which threaten to throw our economy out of order.

That theory is basic with most of the New Dealers. America must be made responsive to the Washington government. It is that theory to which more and more business men, little as well as big, are objecting. They are fearful of it for the reason that they can not see how this administration or any that may follow will be "impartial" in overseeing industry. It is quite natural for a political group to be intent upon preserving itself in power, and that end never has been accomplished by impartiality.

But the New Dealers wish to avoid blame for the conditions now confronting the na-

Would tion. Conveniently Shift Blame enough, there is no mention being made now of the tremendous pressure that was exerted through four of the last five years to bring about higher prices. Those prices now are held to be the result of monopoly, not the fault of the professors who were saying a few years ago when prices were moving higher that "we planned it that way." So political guns are turned on big business-but my guess is that little business will be hurt more than big business by the refusal of the Wallaces, the Ickes, the Oliphants, the Jerome Franks, the Corcorans and the Cohens to recognize that Hitler's style of business management must fail here as in Germany. The frankest statement about the whole thing has come from Mr. Roosevelt himself. He declared recently that "over-extension of inventories" was responsible for the current depression. That is to say, producers and manufacturers, feeling that business was booming, produced or manufactured too much. They did not recognize that the better business we appeared to have in 1935 and 1936 was highly superficial. Nor were they aware what the Washington government would do in the way of controlling or burdening business of all kinds with new taxation and new restrictive legislation.

It was from those latter two things that a fear was bred and the factories and farms that were being worked full tilt because prices were going higher were left with an overstock. I think it can be fairly said also that few persons expected to see such encouragement from the administration for labor to flout the law and take over control of property as has happened. Whatever else may be said, however, the fact remains the theories constantly be-ing advanced by one or another of Mr. Roosevelt's advisers have frightened millions of persons who still have a few dollars which they would like to put to work. On the whole, I am convinced those dollars will not be put to work unless and until there is assurance from Washington that sanity and not monkeydoodle schemes will be exercised in governmental dealings with the country's business. It is dishonest on the part of government, regardless of political party, to charge that business brings about depressions; any person with a grain of sense must know that no individual desires-to throw away his own money or throw away a chance to make more.

For National Defense

BEFORE the reading of the budget message in congress had been concluded, the President was in conference in the White House with men who will have most to do with putting into effect his plans for strengthening the national defense. These were Assistant Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison and Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations; Chairman Edward T. Taylor of the house appropriations committee, Chairman Carl Vinson of the house naval affairs committee, and Representative William B. Umstead, chairman of the appropriations sub-committee on naval appropriations.

The group considered additions to the navy building program, including recommendations for beginning construction on five battleships to replace all obsolete American capital vessels, ten to fifteen cruisers, and additional submarines, destroyers, and auxiliary craft. -*

Senators Hear About Autos

A FTER listening for two days to government officials, the senate committee studying unemployment and relief turned to industrial leaders for information and advice. It began with the automotive industry, receiving a long and exhaustive statement from the Automobile Manufacturers' association which includes all the most important concerns in the industry except the Ford company.

Major points in the statement were:

Deal. If the appointment goes to the Middle West, Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan seemed to stand a good chance. Except for the fact that New York state already has three men in the court, Senator Robert F. Wagner would be near the top of the list of possibilities. Solicitor General Stanley Reed of Kentucky was the favorite of many, but there are two other southerners on the bench. Others suggested were Judge William Denman of California, Lloyd K. Garrison of the University of Wisconsin, and Donald Richberg, former general counsel and later chairman of the NRA. Remembering the Hugo Black episode, the senate will carefully scrutinize the President's nominee.

Ford Won't Comply

R EFUSED a reopening of its case before the labor relations board, the Ford Motor company served notice it would not comply with the board's order to "cease and desist" from alleged violations of the Wagner labor act, and to reinstate certain discharged workers. The board decided to ask a circuit court of appeals to enforce its decision, and the case probably will be carried up to the Supreme court.

Can't Limit Strikes?

Farley Finds a Surplus

JIM FARLEY, in his annual report as postmaster general, was able to show a surplus of more than 12 millions for his department. To do this, however, he deducted an expense item of about 60 million dollars, calling it a "nonpostal" item. He charged off the air and ocean mail subsidies and all free mail. Dealing with the activities of the postal inspection service, Farley said the traffic in spurious lottery tickets is believed to have been broken up with the arrest and conviction of a band of racketeers in the East who disposed of more than 10 million dollars' worth of such tickets in the last few years.

-*-China Reorganization

INSTEAD of surrendering to the Japanese invaders, the government of China has been reorganized and plans made for continued resistance against the enemy. Chiang Kaishek, as was predicted some time ago in this column, has dropped all his civil duties and will devote himself to building up and leading the army. He is now commander in chief of the land forces and tem-

Pete Had to Keep Ringing the Bell.

Pete began to feel that he couldn't hold his arm up to pull that bell rope any longer. He went into the cabin and tried to rouse one of the seasick men. Not one of them would get up. Pete was seasick himself, but these fellows felt a lot worse. In vain he told them of the dangers of leaving that bell unmanned. They didn't care whether the barge went down or not. In fact, one or two of them hoped it would.

Pete dragged himself back to the bell. He was sick-sleepy-aching. But he couldn't quit. His life depended on it. And so did the lives of those other four men in their bunks. Dawn came, and still he was jerking away on that rope. Still the fog hadn't lifted. All morning long-all afternoon-he stuck to his post. Both his hands were so raw now that he had to hook his elbow through the bell rope and pull it with his arm.

Night came-and still Pete was at it. His whole body was stiff now. He ached in every muscle and joint and bone. His arm was working mechanically now. He scarcely realized that he was pulling that cord.

And for TWO NIGHTS AND A DAY Peter rang that bell. Never will he forget the nightmare of that experience. On the morning of the third day he couldn't take it any longer. He didn't quit. He just fell asleep-right where he was-from sheer exhaustion.

Found by an Airplane.

When Pete awoke again the sun was just disappearing over the western horizon. But the fog had lifted. There was no sign of the tug. When the fog came down it had been unable to find the barge-and it still hadn't found it.

All that third night they waited. On the fourth day Pete sighted a plane. It circled around in the skies and then headed back toward land again. "When it turned around," says Pete, "I thought that pilot hadn't seen us." But the plane had spotted the barge. It had been sent out from New London for that very purpose. And on the fifth day the tug boat came out and reclaimed its lost tow.

It didn't take Pete long to get over the effects of his adventure. Now he looks back on it as quite an exciting experience. There's one thing, though, that makes Pete mad. He worked himself to exhaustion, trying to keep some vessel from sending that barge to the bottom. "But in all that time," he says, "I didn't see a single one of those big liners that I was in such fear of."

More Trust had to say something by way of Busting admitting the existence of the depression "recession." Mr. Roosevelt, it will be recalled, went off on a fishing trip around December 1. He took with him the brilliant and able young Robert Jackson, of the Department of Justice. Now, Mr. Jackson's particular ability lies in the direction of breaking up trusts, monopolies, big business combinations. Those of us whose job it is to watch Washington, thought we foresaw the next move by the administration. We have it now in full flower-a great drive against all of those sinful big business interests who simply must be the folks responsible for the depression. Of course, it should be remembered at the same time that there must be a "goat" when politics gets balled up, and big business again is the "goat" of the administration.

In consequence of the crash in business, the collapse of the theories of the long-haired crew that seeks to remould America under the guise of New Deal plans, and the general running out of Democrats on the New Deal leadership, the country is now to be treated to another trustbusting drive comparable to that conducted by the late Theodore Roosevelt when he was Presient. Yes, big business can always be attacked, cajoled, threatened. It is a proper stunt, nearly always resorted to by politicians and others who find themselves locked within the meshes of their own fishnets. Big business is the red herring that the administration is trying to drag across the trail. It is because the administration is attempting to conceal its mistakes, and make people forget them instead of doing a constructive job that I find myself despondent in the early weeks of 1938. The real tip-off to the drive on big business was in the form of a speech by Mr. Jackson who said by way of the radio that: "The only way to insure a rea-that he would be foolish to disregard the necessity for a strong defense. It will cost money, of course, but preparedness has proved cheaper always than being thrown into war because no other nation is afraid of us.

I have an idea that Mr. Roosevelt will be attacked from a dozen different directions. So-called peace organizations will try to pin his ears back and make him say "uncle," but I have gained the impression that Mr. Roosevelt will adhere to his program. Certainly, nearly all students of international affairs agree that he is 100 per cent right. In a letter to house leaders, Mr. Roosevelt suggested the necessity for construction of two battleships, two light cruisers, eight destroyers and six submarines during the fiscal year beginning next July 1. These craft are in addition to other naval construction already considered for the next fiscal year. It will take two or three years to build some of these boats. Planning and preliminary work ought to be started on them as soon as possible. Mr. Roosevelt believes the work ought to start right away-and after all I think most folks will agree that the President is in a better position than anyone else in the country to know what the dangers are. © Western Newspaper Union.

Government Uses Fences to Shove Atlantic Back

"Graveyard of the Atlantic" Scene of Big Fight.

Hatteras, N. C .- Four hundred years ago some unknown ship broke up upon this "graveyard of the Atlantic" and thereby struck the banks a blow that left them shuddering ever since. Because of that ship, great dunes have rolled over and devoured mighty forests, storms have opened new inlets from ocean to sound, and have closed old inlets to navigation and the natural migration of fish.

The thin line of outer banks which create North Carolina's numerous sounds were built up by the ocean, and engineers think the slow building process would have continued except for that shipwreck and others which followed. Horses from the shipwrecks reached shore, bred into great droves of wild ponies which overran the banks, and pawed up the vegetation. When considerable areas of the land became thus exposed to wind and wa-ter, the erosion now threatening the

At the top of the beach, at the crest of tides, they built fences-some of stakes and brush, some of jute.

Where the fences were, the waves built up ridges of sand—miniature dunes. The ridge became higher and higher, at last covering the fence completely. Another fence was built upon this new dune, forc-ing the beach bulwark on up ing the beach bulwark on up. Forces Atlantic Back.

Now a new fence is built several yards in front of the old one, between the new dune and the water. A second ridge is thus formed, and, as the beach shelf is built higher, the sea is forced back and dry land extended on out into the Atlantic. A particularly successful fence was driven between menaced Hatteras lighthouse and the tides and now a great levee, man-planned but ocean - built, protects the tower from water.

Beach sand fixation was first successful when Kill Devil hill, a great mountain of sand, was anchored down after an expensive and diffi-cult experiment. Constructors of the Wright aviation memorial tower refused to proceed until they had assurance that the errant dune would not be blown completely from under their monument. After using various plants, government experts finally succeeded in covering Kill Devil with a protective mat of grass, shrubs and trees. Kill Devil now is fixed at about a quarter of a mile from its location at the time of the Wrights' flight, while denuded dunes nearby move majestically around it.

College Station, Texas. - Texas rural boys and girls are again looking in increasing numbers toward the bright lights of cities, Dr. C. Horace Hamilton, economist at the Texas A. M. college, has found in a study of rural population trends.

An additional 12,000 Texas farmers sought new pastures in other states. City goers and those moving to other states left a decrease of 26,000 in Texas.

Hunting in Texas.

T WAS raining so hard even the seagulls were trying to get in the clubhouse. So the ducks went away somewhere, out of the weather. So the hunters, who were less intelligent than the ducks, came back from the blinds dripping like so many leaky hot water bottles.

After being bailed out, we sat down to vittles-nothing unusual, just the customary club dinner. All we found on the menu was beef hash, duck stew, liver and onions, country smoked sausage and homemade headcheese, also hot biscuits, corn pones and rice cakes; likewise turnip greens, rice, sweet potatoes, squash, snapbeans and eye hominy; moreover, six kinds of pickles, preserves, jellies and jams; besides stewed pears, apple pie, papershell pecans and various fruits. Then Mrs. Jacob Smothers, the club hostess, came in to say that, if anybody in the future craved anything special, she'd try to fix it up-and wondered why such of her gorged guests as weren't too far gone uttered feeble laughter.

Battle Is Under Way.

For more than 150 miles, upon the stormy side of five thin islands, the battle against the waves and wind is under way, and for the first time engineers see a chance for victory. Great mountains of loose sand which for years have drifted willynilly up and down the banks blotting out forests and freshwater lakes-sanctuaries of waterfowlhave been halted by plantings of beach grass or by sand fences which check short the momentum of windblown sand. Roundups have rid the islands of most of the wild ponies. The battle has been carried right into the teeth of the Atlantic which is so turbulent in the region of dreaded Diamond shoals. For years the storms have wasted the beach, and the ocean has advanced so far that several years ago the government abandoned old Hatteras lighthouse, highest in the East, to the waves. Bordertown, N. J .- Point Breeze, the country estate that was home to Joseph Bonaparte, comte de Survilliers and former king of Naples and of Spain, during 20 years of his exile, has been sold under the auctioneer's hammer.

Little remains on the dilapidated estate to identify it as the American home of Napoleon's brother. A beautiful artificial lake once dotted with swans and pleasure craft is a dry, weed-filled depression, remnants of the lake house crumbling at one edge.

The lake house was built by Joseph for his daughter, Princess Zenaide, and near by is the entrance to a subterranean passage which he built to protect her from bad weather on her frequent visits to her father's home, of which there is no trace. The stone-lined passage now is clogged by debris and earth 20 feet from its entrance. Joseph's first home was destroyed

Corn Shellers are excellent for shelling corn for seed. They produce thoroughly clean, whole kernels, in good condition for planting.

One-Hole All-Steel Hand Gear teeth on the back of the picker wheel and the teeth on the pinion with which it meshes are open at the bottom to protect the kernels. Spaces between the stripper wheel teeth are extra wide to permit shelled corn to fall out readily. Each gear wheel is a separate casting, easy to replace in individual units if necessary.

The McCormick Deering is available in 1 and 2-hole types for either hand or power drive.

CHAPTER VIII-Continued

Joyce heard him but her attention was riveted on something else. The bear-like apparition she had mistaken for Blackadder had undergone a strange transformation. Duffle bag and furs discarded, the slender figure of a young man in riding togs had emerged and was making a dash for the bridge. Joyce gasped, shaken by an insane desire to laugh, but the puffs of dust thrown up by bullets to the right and left of his flying feet quickly sobered her. She scrambled down the spiral stairway, rushed to the outer zaguan and ordered its heavy bar lifted.

None too soon, for as it slammed shut behind the fugitive several spent bullets buried themselves in its solid timbers. He was a young man, at the moment too breathless to speak, but his gray eyes were dancing and even his mussed dark hair gave an illusion of merriment. "So it's you," said Joyce slowly, trying to measure the meaning and consequences of his presence. "Yes," gasped Dirk, "and it's you too. Are-are you all right?" "Yes, thank you," said Joyce unsmilingly.

"You're sure?" he persisted, "I mean quite, quite all right?" He flushed at her frown. "Nothing's happened?"

'Several things have happened," said Joyce dryly. "I hardly know what to do with you, Mr. Van Suttart."

"Why?" he asked flippantly. "Is the house crowded?" "Fairly," she answered, her cheeks coloring. "Unfortunately," she added gravely, "we already have more than a full complement of children.

He was confused, conscious he was being shamed, yet wondering why. He had felt genuine ardor at setting out to make what Arnaldo termed a sentimental gesture. He had come to rescue her from the clutches of Dorado; she had rescued him.

"It appears I'm not welcome. Are you suggesting I get out?'

'That's the trouble," she said, frowning. "I can't ask you to go because you couldn't leave if you tried." "Oh, yes I can," said Dirk; "I'll show you."

He turned quickly, dropped one end of the bar on the great gate, dragged it open only a foot and slipped through. His cheeks burned with anger. He knew she was right, knew it better than she. There was more than the combination of Dorado and the wrecked roadster to keep him from leaving. His jobthe job so carelessly tossed him and so blithely taken on! He hadn't even nicked it; all he had done was to stand around while it swelled from a toy balloon into a blimp. But he was here and so was the

"I came to tell you lunch is ready," she said at last. "While we're eating I'll decide ourselves are our only friends whoever comes from without must be whether to give you the run of the place on parole or have you locked

"Who's the poor devil of a blind man?" asked Dirk, cutting in on her thoughts. "It's Senor Maximiliano, the superintendent," explained Joyce. "Maxie, let me introduce Mr. Dirk Van Suttart, second secretary of the American embassy."

back to the balcony. It was no place for a loafer. Hugging the rail he slipped down the stairs, intending to embark on a tour of discovery. As he passed the half-open door of what had once been Joyce's playroom he heard a low whinny. He entered and a moment later was passing knowing finers over the heads across the bastion, waved his hand and proceeded to drop the bar on the zaguan. A moment later she and Dirk passed through the outer gate and immediately she put her pony into a canter. True to her word they rode only as far as the bridge and turned. The next instant she wondered what had happened. The scrawny pony between her knees had made for the open gate as though shot from a catapult. She did not go with him. She landed, all sitting, with a jar that shook every tooth in her head. While she was still seeing stars Dirk was on his knees at her side.

"Hurt?" he asked. "Don't be silly," she exclaimed

"You have it. I give you my word angrily. "Of course I'm hurt." I won't try to escape until you say 'Where?'' I can go-and perhaps not then." "None of your business," she answered, scrambling to her feet. She stalked before him. In silence they reached the gate, passed through the courts and the patio. She disappeared and he was not to see her again until dinner time. Having bathed and dressed in his one lounge suit he entered the dining room with some trepidation, but his fears were groundless since no woman can change everything she has on without changing her mood. He stared at her as if once more he were discovering the unknown, so different did she look in a fresh summer frock like a splash of flowers. The meal finished, the three of them sat for an our of lazy talk, since on any hacienda time ceases with the setting of the sun. When at last she rose Don Jorge lifted his face toward her. "Shall I make the rounds, chica, or will you?' "I'll do it," said Joyce.

"Don't be a fool," she protested angrily. "This isn't the time or the place to show off."

Dirk stopped and turned on her. "Go back," he ordered. "I'm not trying to show off and I'm not a child. I admit you're right on the rest of it. You can't throw me out and since my car is junk, thanks to your sharp-shooters, I can't possibly get away.'

"Then what are you doing?" asked Joyce, bewildered. "Why are we out here?"

'I'm going to fetch my things," said Dirk sullenly, "but your being out here is just a piece of nonsense."

Abruptly Joyce became aware of silence. She looked up and around. Far to the east she caught sight of the pillar of dust, this time moving away. She led the way toward the bridge.

"I've been in lots of countries." Dirk grumbled as they walked along, "but this is the first where everybody shoots before they ask who you are. By the way, did you know mine isn't the only car parked the other side of the glorified ditch?"

To her amazement she heard herself say: "No. Where?"

Why? Why had that lie sprung ready-made to her lips? Her brain had had nothing to do with it; it hadn't had time. Now she paused in her stride, almost brought to a halt by memory of Pancho's flivver. She had forgotten about it. So there had been a way, after all, to send Van Suttart packing.

I They retrieved Dirk's baggage and presently returned laden with duffle bag, rifle, coonskin coat, cap and gloves. Joyce watched Van Suttart with a curious expression as he replaced the bar on the great gate and then that of the zaguan. Reluctantly she led the way across the court and into the patio. He paused on its threshold and drew a long whistling breath.

Luz came hurrying toward them, her dark eyes hard and questioning. Joyce gave her a rapid order. "You'll have to talk faster than that for me to miss it," said Dirk, "You told her to give me a room as far away from yours as possible."

fine a pair of hunters as he had ever handled. Where there were such horses there must be gear. He went out and walked along slowly, trusting his nose more than his eyes. No sooner did he emerge from the inner patio than the smell of leather led him to the tack room, and what a tack room! Harness, bridles, spare bits and stirrups; saddles of every description, hand - made, home - made and imported. Two English ones promptly caught his eye. He lifted their flaps, flexed the stirrup leathers and groaned. A methodical search unearthed a half gallon of neat's-foot oil and an unopened tin of saddle soap. With a sigh of satisfaction he threw off his jacket, rolled up his sleeves and went to work. Oblivious of the passing hours he remained unaware of Joyce's approach. She stood watching him with unbelieving eyes. Here was no coxcomb but an expert who knew exactly what he was about. "I'm sorry I called you names." "Eh? Oh, it's you. When?" "You know; that first day at the chancellery."

"That was a long time ago," he said with a shake of his head as if to wake himself up. "You've certainly been stepping since then." "It does seem long," admitted Joyce, "but it's only a week. I'm curious. How did you get here and why did you come?" "Official business," said Dirk. "Instructions."

"What instructions?"

He dragged a flimsy from his hip pocket, unfolded it and studied the penciled interlinings with a frown. "I can't read it all because it's marked confidential, but it says I'm instructed to locate you with all possible dispatch, show every attention including provision of funds and guard without annoying you." While he spoke Joyce had drawn near. With a sure movement, a pull rather than a snatch, she possessed herself of the paper and stepped back into the sunlight where she could read it at her ease. "So," she exclaimed, "I thought so! Prospective stepfather! What business is it of his? Why should he be givway," as did the disciples. The writer has just read the letter of a heart-broken man who has refused to answer God's call for four long years, and now comes with a broken body which may hinder his usefulness for life. Such tragedies may be averted by prompt and willing obedience.

III. Healing the Demoniac (vv. 23-28).

Three things stand out in this story. The first is that the Son of God has power over the demons of Satan. Any effort to "fight the Devil" in our own power is foredoomed to failure. But in the name of Jesus Christ we may bid him depart from us. Thank God, it works!

The other thought is also of vital import. The demons recognized Jesus, they knew that he was "the Holy One of God" (v. 24), and they bore public testimony of that fact. And yet they were demons, the enemies of God. Saving faith in the Lord Jesus Christ is more than a knowledge of his claims, a pious repetition of his name even though it be done in public. Let us make sure that we have a living faith in the Son of God.

Our final observation is that our Lord did not permit the demons to testify concerning him. Christ and his church do not need the flattering words or the financial support of unbelievers. Every time we accept them we weaken our testimony and make ourselves ridiculous before the world. If unbelievers think well of Christ let them show their sincerity by seeking him as Saviour and Lord. Then both they and their gifts will be acceptable and to his glory.

Are Star Players the Best Pilots in Big Leagues?

D<sup>O</sup> STAR baseball players make the best managers?

Toss that one at some of your sports expert friends at a hot stove league session one of these cold winter nights and see if the fur flies. You'll probably find the answers are, "Yes," "No" and "Yes and No."

It all depends on whom you pick. The records, however, will probably support the fellow who says that playing ability has nothing whatever to do with managerial ability.

If you were asked to name the greatest ball player of all time, you would undoubtedly well as he had done. Babe Ruth has been trying mightily for a manager's berth ever since he retired. So far he has failed to connect, although half a dozen such jobs have been filled in the majors. That would seem to indicate that there is considerable doubt in the baseball world about his managerial talent.

Study Present Crop

Take the present crop of big league managers. Probably not more than four out of the sixteen would have to be reckoned with when the round-up of all-time stars is made. They are Mickey Cochrane of the Tigers, who was a catcher; Frank Frisch of the St. Louis Cards, who was a second baseman; Bill Terry of the Giants, who was a first baseman, and "Pie" Traynor of the Pittsburgh Pirates, who was a third baseman. And not all four of these could be counted completely successful managers.

Then study the other side of the picture. Joe McCarthy of the New York Yankees would have no trouble in proving he is a successful manager. Yet he was never a good enough player to land a big league job and spent his playing days in the kerosene circuit. Bill McKechnie, now at Cincinnati, who was a success at St. Louis, Pittsburgh and Boston, was just another ball player in his day. Nobody ever called him a star.

Coach Blasts Alumni

MOST of the ten football coaches who lost their jobs at the end of the 1937 season would probably add a hearty "Amen" to the re-marks of L. C. Boles, athletic direcbat, run bases, field, throw and think as tor at Wooster (Ohio) college before the recent meeting of the College Physical Directors society at New Orleans.

He charged that "influential alumni, trustees and curbstone coaches can still bring sufficient pressure" to force the dismissal of athletic instructors simply because they fail drop instructors not producing enough victories, Boles said:

Boles said one was led to believe a sports writer in a recent magazine article had "hit the bull's-eye" when he referred to college football as 'one of the last great strongholds of old-fashioned American hypocrisy.'

Appeals from college presidents to their alumni to come to the support of the athletic team, Boles said, indicate the close tieup with college finances.

Nubbly Wools a Midseason Choice

NEW clothes are a wonderful tonic. For minds that go jaded in mid-winter after the holiday excitement dies down, try the reaction of a smart new frock or coat or, better still, an entire ensemble. To start right, browse about in midseason collections, eye-alert for the stunning outfits that are being made of intriguing woolen, for woolen weaves are gaining favor right featherweight woolens Lovely you'll find, that are caressingly softtextured against the skin and have just enough warmth to be welcome at this time of year. These de-lightful winter dress wools are equally good choices whether you spend the mid-season months in the cold weather or warm weather sections. The slim moulded silhouettes tailored of sheer wool fabric slide under fur coats suavely and they are just as attractive with little fur boleros or jackets, lightweight coats that may be furred or unfurred, or worn with no coats at all under sunny skies.

Speaking of fur boleros, they give you your cue as to what's about the smartest item on the mid-season style program. A dashing bolero of black skunk gleams richly against the dull surfaced mossy texture of the smart frock shown to the right in the picture. The wool weave is the closely woven nubbly kind that is so sought for this season. The dress is trimly tailored with twisted cord detail at the neckline, down the front and at the edges of the self-fabric belt.

You'll like the new nubbly wool ens that are so much in evidence just now. They make up smartly in coats, black with Persian lamb being a leader. The sheer dress nubbly woolens are the "last word" for wear during the temperamental mid-months that lead to spring. A fine woven nubbly woolen in soft blue makes the mid-season costume or outfit for resort wear as pictured to the left. The knee-length coat is luxuriously collared in natural blue fox. Silver lame applique at the front closing and pockets achieve a gleaming accent against the dull richness of the fabric.

As to woolens in general, the vogue for black is reflected in the stunning black frocks in many types of woolen, all of which have in common the knack of fine wool for taking a sooty black aspect that makes a perfect background for the gleaming decorative metal touches and snow-white accents that are used on this year's finest frocks. Very lovely are the alpaca-and-wool mixture fabrics that are lightweight and close woven, therefore tailor beautifully. In high favor also are the very soft rabbit woolens that drape perfectly, lending themselves to dressmaker styling. Sheer worsted crepes and novelty sheer worsteds with small self patternings are equally lovely in the popular black or in rich jewel tones. Fine wool jerseys are also available and are used for shirred and draped afternoon frocks as well as school and sportswear. Fine wool broadcloths are the wanted medium for sleek dinner suits with accents of glittering sequins, metal em-broidery or fur as a sophisticated trimming detail. © Western Newspaper Union.

There is gloom in the other offices when the subject comes up. They just have heard that the Dodgers' 1938 spring training schedule has been made out for them by the Yankees, there being no one in the demoralized Brooklyn headquarters to attend to such chores since General Manager John Gorman got his walking papers some weeks ago.
