In the 20 foot plunge from the bridge to the river the truck turned completely upside down crush-ing the cab when it hit. Charters had no time to escape and he was nined no time to escape and he was pinned in the cab. He was knocked momentarily unconscious but regained con-sciousness in time to extricate himself in some manner and crawl out on the ice. His cries for help were heard by Lester Biggs, who lives near the scene, and he came to his aid. The wounded man was rushed to Dr. E. A. Hasty's office at Whittemore where he was found to be suffering from a loss of blood in addition to the ser-ious head wound and severe body pruises. People who have visited the scene cannot figure out how Charters came out of the accident alive. The highway department removed the wreckage from the river Tuesday.

The defendants were accused of entering into a secret agreement to purchase quantities of oil from independent oil producers at artificially high prices. These prices were then quoted as the market price to jobbers, who had signed contracts with the defendants to purchase the fuel at the spot (or daily) market price. The defense denied having artificially influenced the market and pleaded unsuccessfully that the companies merely bought distress gasoline to save the independent refiners from failure and did so in accordance with a policy approved by President Roosevelt and Interior Secretary Harold L. THE TAWAS HERALD

"When the Volts Broke Loose" By FLOYD GIBBONS Famous Headline Hunter TELLO EVERYBODY:

П You all know what happens when the lions get loose. Here's something that can be just as deadly as a full grown, man-eating lion. It's a doggone sight more common than lions, too. You've got 'em in your own house, and they travel along every street in the city you live in. It's volts I'm talking about -those little electrical sledgehammers that pack such a terrific wallop.

The more of those volts you get together in one place, the more of wallop they pack. A hundred and ten of them-the number in your ighting circuit at home-will knock a man flat on his back if he gets in the way of them. But this story is about a lad who was fooling around with eleven thousand of those ornery things—and that's three or four times as many as they run through the electric chair up at Sing Sing.

Richard Flushing of Jamaica, N. Y., is today's Distinguished Adventurer, and he wins the honor with the story of how it feels to see the volts come hopping out of the cable eleven thousand strong. Dick is an electrician, and he says he's had plenty of close calls of one sort or another, but this one with the galloping lightning was the biggest thrill he ever had or ever expects to have.

The date was February 7, 1933. At that time Dick was working for the Long Island railroad. It takes a lot of current to run those electrified trains that run out of New York on the Long Island, and Dick's job was in the road's key sub-station, where the voltage came through in large quantities.

Thought It Was a Simple Job.

Dick came to work at four o'clock that February day. He and his partner worked the four to midnight shift. They had only been on the job for five minutes when they got an order over the telephone to put into service an eleven thousand volt feeder that had been taken out the day men while some tests were being made.

Both of them started for the cellar of the sub-station where the disconnecting switches are located. They took along their switch sticks, but they didn't bother about rubber gloves, for their job was a simple matter of throwing a switch and letting the juice ride on through.

At least, that's what they thought. But when they reached the cellar they discovered that something was wrong. Ground wires-high tension cables-were dangling in the air when they should have been hanging on brackets. The two men laid aside their switch sticks and proceeded to put those wires where they belonged. The wires were dead, for the switches were still open, and Dick and his partner figured there'd be no need for gloves or any such precautions.

Dick's partner put one set of wires on the brackets and in doing so he passed within a few inches of the open switch. Dick thought he went a little TOO close to it for comfort. He hung his own set of wires on the brackets and, in passing the switch, took care to be farther away from it than usual. The cable in Dick's hand was at least eight inches from the switch when, suddenly, things began to happen.

Eleven Thousand Volts Hit Them.

A back-feed was what did it. An extra load of power was suddenly paign to develop on a national basis her department concerning the shunted back from another station. It hit that switch, but couldn't a "build America" plan started by alien Communist and West Coast get through it because it was open. If there had been no other metal in C. I. O. leader. The resolution of the neighborhood that current would have stayed where it was. But there was that ground wire in Dick's hand-eight inches from the switch. imously, specifically directed That current-eleven thousand volts of it-streaked out toward that wire with all the force of a thunderbolt. Dick felt himself being picked up off his feet and hurled through the air in one direction, while his partner, standing near by, was hurled in the other. Each of them landed twenty feet away, on opposite sides of the switch. Dick's eyes had been seared by the terrific blast of the power. He felt the floor come up and hit him, and then the next thing he remembers is staggering to his feet and seeing his partner, forty feet away, doing the same thing. His face was scorched and burned from the terrific heat. He put his hand to his head-and it was bald! Every bit of hair was burned, not only from his head, but from his arms as well. "That current," he says, "had given me a heat shave, cleaner than any barber could have done it, and all in a fraction of a second.' Dick walked back to the switch from which those deadly volts had broken loose. His partner came over and joined him. The switch was ferences. nothing but a mass of molten metal. Lumps of hot copper lay on the floor. The big insulators were gone. There wasn't so much as a sign of them. They had been blown to dust.

Washington .- The month of Janu- | would. A man's best friends are ary, 1938, has come and it is now gone with the Getting wind. Dozens of Nowhere big business men have been called to the White House for conferences with the President on means of solving the depression problem. And dozens have gone away from the White House after those conferences without any announcement from the head of the government as to what is to be done. Much conversation and much noise-totaling much conversation and much noise. That was January at the White House. A new session of congress started with the opening of January. The house and the senate appear actually to have no definite program; certainly, no program for a constructive course that will lead the country out of the terrific business decline. Instead, the senate has been debating and debating a bill to punish any community where a lynching takes place and the house has been indulging in its annual sport of passing appropriation bills, voting money without knowing too much about the items for which it votes. Southern senators filibustered against the anti-lynching bill because of the problems, the burdens, such legislation would load on them and the northern Democratic senators seemed willing to let business die, unemployment increase, etc., in order to gain a few negro votes. That was January in congress. An analysis of the situation, therefore, would seem to be in order. To do that, we have to go back to 1933 when President Roosevelt took office. The nation was in chaos. There is no need to review those conditions. The new President came in with an overwhelming majority to support him. His majority was so large that he needed only to express his view and it was translated into action. The country liked the aggressiveness thus shown. Members of the house and senate, however, developed a habit-not all of them, but a majority of them. That habit was one of waiting for the word from the White House.

While this habit was growing, business interests were pushed and kicked around and generally given to understand that they did not know what the shooting was all about. Like a country school boy, the business man was sent to his seat and told to stay there. Otherwise the hickory stick would be brought into use. Indeed, the hickory stick in the form of several pieces of legislation was laid onto the business of the country, not as a pat on the back, but much further down toward the end of its spine. So business, too, got the habit of standing in the background. It was afraid to venture forth.

Things began to look up. There business and it looked as if Mr. out long ago, however, that the dan-Roosevelt's policies were correct in every sense. But something happened; the boat struck a snag. For several months last year the not those who crouch at his feet with blandishment, flattery and subservience. His real friends are those who disagree with him when they think him wrong and who give him their utmost in support when they think him right."

There are many others in con-gress who feel as does Mr. Clark about the present situation. They recognize, I think, that Mr. Roosevelt must assume his fair share of responsibility, as President, for the current depression. It is apparent, too, that he must assume responsibility for the failure of some of his policies in that he turned to "yes" men for advice instead of recognizing that there could be honest disagreement with him on the part of many who desired to be helpful. It is, in other words, another result of the type of leadership that he has assumed, a leadership that worked without halt when everything was hunky dory but a type that obvious-ly will fail when the tide runs against you. . . .

Perhaps I was a bit unfair when I said Mr. Roosevelt's conferences with business men Well, That's had yielded noth-Something ing. It is true that he has "persuaded" the automobile manufacturers and finance companies to tighten up the strings somewhat on installment buying. It is likely that hereafter an automobile finance company will grant credit only for 18 months instead of 24 months on the sale of a car where deferred payments are used. I do not know how that will solve the current depression, but that was the reason given for the change in business practice. As a matter of fact, experts in the Department of Commerce said in published reports in May, 1937, that a majority of the finance companies were holding to the 18-month limit even then.

There can be no doubt that installment buying is a dangerous thing because of the abuses that accompany it. My objection to it is the same as I have often stated in these columns respecting other types of debt. Any time debt is made easy, there has been created a fresh danger at the very same time. Installment buying has been generally used and the general result is, as it was bound to be, that hundreds of thousands of people put themselves into debt. When their income from wages or otherwise was reduced, their installment obligations became a burden that had first call on whatever money was available. In the case of the automobile finance companies, it seems clear that there have been abuses. High pressure salesmen, anxious to get commissions, drove

Big Business Scared Again

M EANWHILE big business—and the country generally—was discussing with considerable apprehension the declaration by the President that industry must reduce prices and at the same time keep wages up. An immediate result was the crash of prices on the stock exchanges, the decline reaching as high as 7½ points. Commodities declined in sympathy with stocks.

"If industries reduce wages this winter and spring," the President said at his press conference, "they will be deliberately encouraging the withholding of buying-they will be fostering a downward spiral and they will make it necessary for their government to consider other means of creating purchasing power."

Many congressmen, Democrats as well as Republicans, took issue with Mr. Roosevelt's logic and economics, pointing out that industries lack the resources to keep wages up on a falling market because their funds have been depleted by the undistributed profits tax.

In his statement the President said:

"I am opposed to wage reductions because the markets of American industry depend on the purchasing power of our working population. And if we want to restore prosperity we must increase, not decrease, that purchasing power.

"Those in charge of a well managed and solvent industry should no more consider casting the burden of a temporary business recession upon their workers than upon their bondholders. To cast such burden on the bondholders is financial bankruptcy. To cast such burden on its workers is not only moral bankruptcy, but the bankruptcy of sound business judgment."

Lucky to Escape With Their Lives.

Says Dick: "Even the fireproof barrier had whole bricks burned out of it. Both my partner and I considered ourselves mighty lucky to get out with our lives. I don't believe either one of us had taken much of the voltage through our bodies. I escaped because I was holding the ground wire at a place that was well insulated. Had my hand been in any other place, or had there been a slight leak in the wire, I would unquestionably have gone up in a cloud of smoke."

So, if you were to give Dick a choice between a bunch of loose lions and ten or fifteen thousand loose volts, I have a hunch that he'd take the lions every time. There may not be much left of you when a crowd of lions get through looking you over, but there'd be a darned sight more than the volts would leave.

But the problem is immediate and January has gone into history, as did December and November. something about them. Unfortunately, they are in minority. Blind followers of the President, generally speaking, constitute the majority. So that those who want to take constructive action haven't had an opportunity. Lately, I heard Worth Clark, a Democratic member of the house from Idaho, make a radio speech on this fact; or rather he touched on this fact. Mr. Clark is a pretty hard-boiled Democrat, but he believes he was elected to represent his people and not to throw them down simply because his party leadership wanted to do something else. In the radio speech that I mentioned, Mr. Clark referred to mistakes that had been made in the last five years and asked: "What is the remedy?"

"First," he continued in his answer to that question, "we must squarely face the problem. We must realize that we have done some things wrong. We must retrace our steps where necessary and start anew.

"One of the difficulties involved here is the lack of independence of thought and courage among us in congress. The worst injustice that can be done a great leader is to blindly follow his every suggestion. That frequently causes him to make more mistakes than he otherwise gers existed and they were trimming their commitments accordingly. Since these sales are comparatively small in ratio to the whole country's business, I think the White House announcement will not result in immediate restoration of prosperity.

The heart of the legislation was a provision to permit the construction or the purchase of small homes without much money as a down payment. In fact, only 10 per cent of the total cost of the property is required as a down payment. Private money lenders will finance the other 90 per cent, and the federal housing administration will insure that amount with government bonds to back the insurance. So, it is soon to be provided that I can buy a house with a value up to $6,000 if I have $600 to pay down. Anybody can get himself into deep debt with as much ease as the man on the flying trapeze, and instead of obligating himself for 18 months (as in the case of the automobile) the buyer is hooked for about 15 years. It is definitely unsound and will make not the slightest bit of improvement in general business.

Stewart MacDonald, the federal housing administrator, ought to be a good witness on the soundess of the plan. When hearings were being held in the house appropriations committee, Mr. MacDonald was asked about the idea of government insurance of as much as 90 per cent of a debt.

"Do you think that that is good business-to have a man build a home without any more equity than 10 per cent?" asked Representative Houston, Kansas Democrat.

"I don't think it is good business; no," replied Mr. MacDonald. © Western Newspaper Union.

First Star Was Kitty Clive, English Favorite.

New York .- The first musical comedy star was Kitty Clive, who won theatrical fame over 200 years ago by her vivacious performance of English ballad opera, forerunner of modern revues and musical "talkies," says a study of "Ballad Opera," issued by the Co-lumbia University press.

Mrs. Clive's acting career covered the entire life span of ballad opera, which extended from 1728 to about 1750. Her final stage appearance was in "The School for Rakes" in 1769. "Scarcely a ballad Rakes" in 1769. "Scarcely a ballad opera could appear at Drury Lane during this long and interesting pe-riod without the inevitable presence of Kitty—acting, dancing, and sing-ing with her customary elan," de-clares Edmond McAdoo Gagey, in-structor of English in Columbia, author of the study. "We have evidence that many ballad plays were written with Kitty in mind for the leading musical character. The parts assigned to her were sometimes given the sig-nificant name of 'Miss Kitty,' and in 'The Intriguing Chambermaid,' Henry Fielding, the playwright, altered an originally masculine role in order to present Catherine as the chambermaid.

Writes Her Own.

"In 1750 the Drury Lane company performed 'The Rehearsal, or Bays in Petticoats,' a play by none other than the esteemed Mrs. Clive, the vivac:ous high priestess of ballad opera. Her play may not rank as a masterpiece of dramatic art but it does manage to be witty, airy and attractive. The treatment is chatty and personal, with Mrs. Hazard-played by the author-represented as writing a play and rehearsing it under difficulties.

"Best of all, Mrs. Clive does not take herself too seriously. What other 'Virgin-Authoress' would have shown Witling, one of the spectators, falling asleep at the end of a duet in the rehearsal of her supposed play? The principal top-ics for discussion will be the 1938 North Central Region program bul-letin and listing sheet procedure.

During the week of January 3<sup>1</sup>, 1938 a State Conference was held for all persons concerned with the instructional phases of the 1938 pro-gram. The chairman of each county arrightural conservation committee agricultural conservation committee was invited to attend the conference on February 2. The State Conference was conducted by those who attended the Conference at Chicago.

During the week of February 7 meetings will be held throughout the state to instruct county committee men, county agents, and county office chief clerks on the same subjects presented at the Regional and State Conferences.

County Agents will receive definite information relative to the 1938 Ag-ricultural Conservation Program, in order that they may hold instruc-tional meetings for farmers through-out the state. The County Committeemen and Going home one evening his wife, who had been reading "The Birds' Christmas Carol,'' remarked,

"Well, that's the sweetest story ever!" He immediately supplied the word "told" and in two hours the song was finished.

CHAPTER XI

-12-Dirk went to bed in the grip of a mild elation which made it difficult to distinguish between sleep and dreams. He awoke to a sense of commotion. A messenger was having trouble rousing Leonardo from much-needed sleep and presently the two of them were closeted with Don Jorge. Arnaldo joined Dirk at coffee and told him what was up: Dorado was doing his stuff two hours earlier than usual. The next moment Senor Maximiliano and his companions came out and started for the northeastern bastion. Dirk and Adan hurried to their rooms, Adan to get a pair of binoculars and Dirk to fetch his Springfield. They caught up with Don Jorge and his party while the blind man was still groping his way up the turret stairs. Emerging into the glare of the morning sun Leonardo's glance fell on Dirk's rifle and immediately turned moist with envy. He ca-ressed the blue-black barrel as though he touched a woman's cheek, then looked up pleadingly. Dirk laughed, let him test the gun for balance, but promptly took it back again.

Arrived beside the bastion, Arnaldo leaned against it and focused his field-glasses on a slowly moving pillar of dust. Presently the horsemen strung out along a ledge of rocky soil and he could count them. "Three more than yesterday," he announced.

"And four more yesterday than the day before," muttered Leonardo.

"If that's so," said Don Jorge, "Dorado must have escaped with more cash than I thought. As long as it holds out his troop will continue to grow."

"Do they always ride on the other side of the barranca?" asked Dirk. "Of course," answered two voices at once.

"Why?"

"For the same reason we would be fools not to stay on this side," said Don Jorge. "The barranca is a barrier that runs for 20 miles. A child would have more sense than to lay himself open to getting trapped with an impassable ditch at his back."

"It was a stupid question," said Dirk, "but since we have plenty of time let me ask another. What's the sense of the daily ride? What does Dorado get out of it?" "The tactical idea," said Don Jorge patiently, "is to intercept both reinforcements and escape. Incidentally Pepe wouldn't be averse to plunder in the way of ransom."

"He's holding a package now," murmured Arnaldo. "What package?" asked Don Jorge quickly. "Yesterday I watched him capture a gringo by the name of Black-from far beyond the riders. While amazement still paralyzed his vocal chords he saw every horse sink on its haunches and come to a slithering stop. It was what Dirk had planned. In that instant of suspended movement he drew the foresight down to the vanishing point, stead-ied and fired again. There came the answering thud of a hit. Dorado's big sorrel squatted, rushed from under his rider and fell dead.

"I missed him!" groaned Dirk. "I killed the horse!" Joyce came racing along the esplanade. "Who did that?" she asked angrily. "Who fired that shot?" Already Dorado had been swept up by two of his followers and the whole troop was riding away at a gallop; behind remained the still mound of the sorrel, a dark monument suddenly erected against the shimmering gold of the desert. Dirk rolled over and sat up. "I did."

"You're a butcher!" cried Joyce, her eyes blazing. "You come to my house, an uninvited guest, and amuse yourself by shooting horses!" Dirk's cheeks flushed with anger. 'The man out there shot me up without the slightest provocation: why shouldn't I pay him back in his own coin?"

"But you didn't hit him," cried Joyce, "you shot a horse-you killed a poor horse." "What bunk!" intervened Arnal-

do, lowering his field-glasses. "For leave the rest to Rayo." one thing I'm sure he did hit Dorado

Rayo because he's a shade lighter and not so touchy in the mouth. If you do what I say, you'll be all right; if you don't you may break a neck-the horse's or yours." "I'll be good," said Joyce, impressed by his earnestness. "What are your orders?" "Walk a mannered horse for half a mile," said Dirk, "and you can do anything with him; start him off with a rush and he'll ride your arms out of their sockets. So we're going to take them away slow." As they passed through the great gate there was a bit of prancing and champing on the bit but with soothing words and a light hand Dirk coaxed Tronido back into a walk and a moment later Joyce persuaded Rayo to follow suit. They rode along the faint trail, scarcely used save by ox-carts, which provided the sole access for cars to the hacienda. The road meandered more or less parallel to the barranca which widened by almost imperceptible gradations the farther they went. At last Dirk permitted a trot and turned amused eyes on Joyce. To his amazement she took it quite easily, leaned to it, caught its rhythm and laughed a happy laugh. "Oh, Dirk!" "Joyce!"

On the same impulse they slowed the horses again and stared at each "That was funny," said other. Joyce.

"Wasn't it?" agreed Dirk. He urged Tronido into a trot, then lifted him into an easy canter and held him there. "How are you making it?" he asked.

"Fine," said Joyce, "but you tell me." "Ease your back a bit and sit into the saddle. That's the stuff. Are you game for a gallop while we're still headed away from home?" "Go ahead," said Joyce, and they did. The horse under her seemed to flatten out. No jouncing up and down, no swerving from a straight line-only the feel of mighty muscles rippling rhythmically. They rode back more slowly and as they approached the hacienda she turned on him a face so glowing he felt his heart skip a beat and then do three in one.

"Well?" she asked. "Do you want to know the truth?" "The whole truth." "I thought it would take you a month to learn what you already know." He jumped off, handed her his reins to hold, tore down a high bean pole and laid it like a bar between two maguey plants. "Made to order," he commented as he mounted. "Watch me, then do exactly the same. Just stick on and came back at his astonished eyes | fore we start. You're going to ride | ready with her answers she yet was so distrait as to give an impression of inner stillness. Though she avoided looking directly at Dirk and Adan she was thinking of them, but thinking more of herself. What had come over her last night? Which person was she-the woman of no age who had been kissed and had kissed back, or the girl who had sat shoulder to shoulder on the parapet with a companion to whom she had poured out her heart as though she talked to another self? Were there fibers within her that responded to music alone and others that reverberated solely to the sidereal harmony of moon, planet and star? She wondered.

Dirk was engrossed in a masterly discussion of agrarianism between Don Jorge and Arnaldo. Fresh from the capital, Adan was packed to the gills with theory and regarded the parceling out of all the land in the republic as an ultimate panacea for every ill. Don Jorge, rooted in the soil, aware of its divergence and as close to the peon as he was to his tight-fitting charro breeches, admitted the cure only to damn it with a qualifying phrase—"in a thousand years.'

"You can't overleap education the way you vault a mangy horse," he exploded. "You'd have to have a at the "receipt of custom" sat a mildly educated people, but first Jew named Levi, who was no doubt catch your educated executive-if despised by his neighbors because you can. It isn't enough for a ruler he had joined in this distasteful business. To him came the grato be honest, altruistic and stuffed with beneficent theories. Unless he's greater than God he can't bridge the gulf of ignorance between a peon and a tractor, nor grow enough gramma grass on a hundred hectares to give that peon's babies milk, nor change the sweep of wheat lands into lush bottoms crammed with garden truck. You agrarians run around with a footrule yelling, 'Behold the measure of all things!' You can measure a back yard with a footrule, but not a prairie. Our campesinos, dumb as they are, can see that. Do you know what they're saying?"

"No," said Adan smilingly, for he loved discussion for the talk's sake alone. "Tell me."

"They've heard what happened in the north and they're giving it out they'll do the same here.' "What's that?" asked Dirk.

"Crop the ears off any agrarians who set foot on La Barranca. They'll do it too, for though the peon has no education he has his backlog of fundamental knowledge. He doesn't have to starve to death to see starvation on the way any more than he had to learn to read and write before he could make up his mind the three model houses put up by my master and friend, Cutler Sewell, were no good." Joyce looked up. "Why weren't

"Blackadder!" cried Dirk. "Why, Blackadder--" He stopped and caught his breath. "Blackadder is the name of Miss Sewell's stepfather!" Glancing around he saw a rough table and two rusted iron chairs. He pushed the table so it stood end on against the parapet which was several inches higher. "How far are they?" he asked.

"What are you doing?" said Arnaldo, looking down. "Never mind what I'm doing," said Dirk. "How far off are they?"

"Between one and two kilometers, senor," answered Leonardo mournfully. "Eight kilometers make five miles," calculated Dirk aloud. "Leonardo, when you're sure they're under a thousand meters, sing out. What about it, Adan-can you spot Dorado? Is he riding at the head?"

"I'll tell you in a minute," said Adan, only half interested. "There's a bunch of three in the lead and I think he's on the alazon. Yes, that's Pepe; he's riding the big sorrel."

Dirk gauged the wind, set his sights for a thousand yards, loaded his rifle and stretched out, face down, on the table. Not wishing to scratch the barrel he made a wad of his felt hat and fixed it for a rest in the angle made by the parapet with the bastion.

"Don't forget, Leonardo; the minute you're sure they're under a kilometer."

"What's the use?" said Leonardo gloomily. "They won't come within range."

"Never mind about that," said Dirk sharply. "You do as I say.' Several minutes elapsed before Leonardo murmured, "When they come to the first row of the maguey plantation it will be only 800 meters and they will turn."

"Damn!" muttered Dirk but promptly relaxed all his muscles, drew a long slow breath and held it. His cheek caressed the smooth oiled oak of the stock, his fingers closed on the rough grips. Taking a full bead, he fired. The bullet sang the high song of a bullet that finds no mark. A second can seem long, sometimes it can be divided into sections. An age after Leonardo had given up hope of a possible ricochet which by a miracle might hit Dorado on the bounce a puff of dust though it may have been only through the leg. Add to that he just missed freeing you of all your troubles and has a bomb-proof alibi besides-shooting at a bandit who's holding an American for ransom. Bunk to you and the dead horse!" "What American?" asked Joyce, her attention seized.

"Man named Blackadder," said Dirk. "Ever hear of him?" "Blackadder!" gasped Joyce, "Mr. Helm Blackadder? Why-"

"I've thought of one more for the list!" interrupted Arnaldo excitedly, laying an affectionate hand on Dirk's shoulder. "He's lifted the siege. You, he, and I - for a day or two anyway-we can go anywhere."

He turned to Leonardo. "What's become of Dorado's silver-plated car?'

"It's in Toluca where he always sent it," explained Leonardo, "to save the time it takes to drive had an equal simplicity of line that around the barranca." gave her an almost sculptural ap-"So," said Adan. "We can go pearance. Changing her clothes had

"Tell all the men they can take a six hours' sleep and the women to prepare a big feed for them when they wake. Open the gates and let the children gc out to round up whatever small stock was left outside. As for you, Adan, give a blind man your arm; I want to have a talk with you." Dirk was left alone with Joyce "Fine kettle of fish," he muttered.

'Now that I've fixed things so we could go for a gallop on the hunters-perhaps even jump them-you have to be sore! How long does it take you to snap out of a grouch?"

"I'm out now," said Joyce, cheeks and eyes already alight with anticipation. "Come along."

Ten minutes later, with the help of Tobalito, he had saddled the hunters and was ready to give her a leg up. He faced her and spoke grave-

"Listen, this horse is called Tronido and that one's Rayo. Do those names mean anything to you?" "Thunder and Lightning," said Joyce. "Are you trying to frighten me?'

She jumped the bar-once with a gasp of astonishment at her success, then ten times more with steadily increasing confidence and improving style. She would have been content to keep on for the rest of the day had not Dirk taken his revenge.

"If you don't let up," he remarked dryly, "you're going to find out there are more ways than one of killing a horse.' After an afternoon spent in grooming the horses for sheer love of the work he came to dinner aglow from what he called an earned bath. Already he regretted having brought no change beyond a single lounge suit but tonight Arnaldo, save for shoulders exaggerated beyond nature and a wasp-like waist, was dressed in like manner. Joyce had put on black-not the semievening frock of her first and last appearance at El Tenebroso, but it led him into the belief three rooms are better than one, while the peon's backlog of knowledge has taught him one room is infinitely better than three since the sum of the warmth of his kitchen fire, his milch goat, his wife, six children and a couple of pigs constitutes, at no expense, exactly the sort of central heating system which is slowly making England a livable country." They laughed, rose and separated; it was already late, there was no need tonight to make the rounds.

How does a girl, lacking long social training and apparently innocent of finesse, leave one man in the lurch and walk off with another without either of them knowing how it happened? Dirk paused to ask Don Jorge a single unimportant question, but when he stepped out on the balcony Joyce and Adan were nowhere to be seen. He walked to the right hopefully until turning the angle opened a long empty vista. (TO BE CONTINUED)

IV. Fasting and Feasting-When and Why (vv. 18-20).

God established one fast day for Israel. They established many, especially the Pharisees. Religion that loses its spiritual life and power clings with tenacity to outward observances and symbols.

Should one never fast? Yes, to the true follower of Jesus there come times when the urgency of soul concerning the problems of one's own life, the lives of others, the needs of the world, shuts the door of interest to anything as ordinary as food for the body.

Feasting and rejoicing-are these spiritual and uplifting? Christianity is a joyful faith. It is not to be hidden in damp, dark cloisters; it thrives in the sunshine, in the happy laughter of a child, in the cheerful shout of the saint. The Church is the Bride of Christ. If the friends of the bridegroom were to rejoice (v. 19), should not the Bride shout for joy?

V. New Things versus Old Things (vv. 21, 22).

The Pharisees wanted the gospel of grace to conform to the narrow channels of their interpretation of the law. Was not the law good? Yes. Jesus said he came not to destroy it, but to fulfill it (Matt. 5:17). He bore the curse of the law that we might be free (Gal. 3:13, 14). But he also brought in the new covenant of assurance and grace.

The mixing of grace and law, or the effort to do so, has continued even to our day. Let us be clear on that point-we are saved by grace, not by the works of the law (Eph. 2:8, 9). We work because we are saved, not in order to be saved.

that there might be a time when summer never will come again? We are accustomed to think of our ordinary seasonal variations in earth will either drop far below temperature as being of considerable magnitude. To us 100 degrees

Fahrenheit is unbearably hot; 30 degrees below zero insufferably cold. When either of these temperatures is reached, according to Donald B. Harris, in the Coronet, we feel that nature must be exerting herself strenuously, in order to make us uncomfortable.

In order to get even a faint idea of how critical our temperature adjustment is, we must imagine a very large heat regulator with a dial 14 inches long. One end of this dial is 454 degrees below zero, 1,800,000 de-thread of gravitation which links us to the sun, and holds the earth within the beneficent sphere of its radiation. If this thread should break, or if it should stretch ever so slightly, or contract, even by the smallest amount, temperature conditions would so change on earth that we would all immediately freeze to death, or perish in a horror of suffocation and flame.

Golden days loom ahead for the middleweights, if prophets reading the future by means of the past are correct in their prognostications. Golden days for 160-pound fighters who prove their competence with fists and footwork in the prize ring. The old boom times of the middle-

Fred Apostoli, called the uncrowned king of the middleweights.

San Francisco growing out of their recent non-title battle in New York when the challenger knocked the champion cold is a case in point. It recalls the lusty era when Stanley Ketchel, Billy Papke, Joe Thomas, "Cyclone" Johnny Thompson, Hugo Kelly, Kid McCoy and a lot more of like importance filled ring history with epic battles and their pockets with ready coin.

Steele and Apostoli will fight for the championship in Seattle in the spring. They will probably fight several times more before the books are finally closed. They will have other opponents, too, such as Young Corbett III, Glen Lee, Lou Brouillard, Solly Krieger, Jack McAvoy, Marcel Thil of France and a couple of job lot invaders from England.

"Old Pete," the great pitcher who stood National league batters on their heads for 20 years, joins a select company including Ty Cobb, Babe Ruth, Hans Wagner, Christy Mathewson, Walter Johnson, Napo-leon Lajoi, Tris Speaker and Cy Young, all named in past ballots as the game's outstanding players since 1900.

Alex never pitched a no-hitter, but that was about the only thing he missed. He turned in four one-hit games in 1915, a record which will probably never be equalled. He won 28 games in 1911, his first big league season and for three straight years beginning in 1915 he won 30 or more victories.

When all these tremendous pitching feats are forgotten, Alex will be remembered for a single strikeout he chalked up in the 1926 world series between the St. Louis Cardinals and the New York Yankees.

It was the seventh inning of the final game. The Cards were leading 3 to 2. The Yanks had the bases loaded, two down and Tony Lazzeri at bat. Alex, who had won a nineinning game the day before, was called by Hornsby to relieve Jess Haines. "Old Pete" walked slowly to the pitching mound and set Lazzeri down on three pitches. Then he plodded wearily through the last two innings to win the game and the first world's championship for St.

Perhaps the most interesting era of the middleweights was when a young coal miner named Stanley Ketchel came out of Butte, Mont., back in 1907 and announced that he intended to fight his way through a group of tough battlers to the top. Nobody paid much attention to him until one night in San Francisco he knocked out Joe Thomas.

Ketchel was matched with the Sullivan twins, Mike and Jack, and he flattened them both. He immediately became a sensation. Then a young boilermaker named Billy Papke came out of Kewanee, Ill. People called him the "Thunder-bolt." Ketchel fought him in Milwaukee and won after ten rounds.

Ketchel went back to San Francisco, where he stopped Hugo Kelly, who had claimed the title. He beat Thomas again and then once more took Papke on. This time it was different. Ketchel had not bothered to train and he was badly beaten.

Less than two months later Ketchel did something few fighters had ever done before. He came back and defeated the man who had taken his title from him, Ketch-el went on as king of the middle-weights and even fought Jack Johnson for the heavyweight belt. Outweighed, he lost after a furious battle. Late in 1910 Ketchel was shot and killed on a Missouri ranch.

Papke again claimed the title. He knocked out Willie Lewis to prove his right to the throne. "Cyclone" Johnny Thompson of Sycamore, Ill., beat Papke in Australia. Then in 1912 came a parade of good fighters to keep the middleweight tradition popular. They were Jimmy Clabby, Frank Klaus, Eddie McGoorty, Jack Dillon, and George Chip. Following the reign of these titans came Mike Gibbons, known as the uncrowned king and some fair middleweights. Then the division slipped because of lack of high class competitors, although Mickey Walker and Harry Greb were exceptions. Now it appears there is a splendid chance that there will be an-other era like that in the days of Ketchel and Papke.

Steele and Apostoli probably come nearer being the Ketchel and Papke type of fighters than the ring has seen since their day.

MacPhail's New Job

ARRY MAC PHAIL, who attempted to kidnap Kaiser Wilhelm after the armistice and wound up with the imperial ash tray, ac-cepted an even more hazardous as-signment recently when he became executive vice president of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

MacPhail's appointment repre-sents the most drastic step yet taken by the bankers to untangle the snarl which has gripped the Dodgers for 13 years. Ever since the deaths of Charles H. Ebbets and Edward J. McKeever within ten days of each other in the spring of 1925, the affairs of the Brooklyn club, on and off the field, have been a succession of errors.

McPhail is the third business manager the Dodgers have had in the last four years, but the first with any authority. back collar.

In the midst of the snow and icy blasts, our artist friend took a few days off last week to visit his folks back home in the hill country. While there he participated in the skating party, and made the sketch. We see several bad mistakes, however. Can you find fifteen? Answers will be found above.

House coats, or hostess gowns, have been steadily increasing in importance in the feminine wardrobe, and it is not enough these days to have just a negligee. The idea of the house coat has taken vast hold in the realm of "at home" fashions. The lace itself, which makes this delectable garment, is so luxurious looking it calls for simplest-cut lines sans superfluous trimming. The model pictured is cut on fairly tailored lines, with zipper fastening from neck to hem and little turn-

A meeting of the faculty was held Wednesday after school. A short report was given concerning some of the numbers of the recent institute of the National Public School Busiof the National Public School Busi-ness Officials which was held at Bat-tle Creek, Michigan. It was brought out that M. A. Clark, Manager of the Industrial and Public Relations, U. S. Rubber Com-pany, said that his company consid-ered the factor of character to be the most important one of an em the most important one of an em-ployee. This company puts no one on the pay roll without a careful investigation of his reputation. Mr. Clark said that this corporation never had any trouble with its employees and he believes that this is mainly due to the kind of men who are secured. He stated that in his opinion the development of character was the paramount problem for the public schools of the United States. Another practical part of the tute of Grand Rapids, Michigan, conwere whether one or more kinds of machines should be used by a school, and what repair service should and could be expected of the typewriter companies of whom the machines are purchased. A round table discussion followed this talk, and the administrators present were able to come to a general understanding concerning this matter which has been a problem to many schools. The ninth grade citzenship class will study several topics this semes-ter from supplementary material. The
