"She did not die," she simply laid the soul's frail vesture by and gently passed away. As melts the morning star in golden day. For life, commencing here. Is just a prelude to its full career. Love, hope, faith, assurance give. We do not live to die, but die to live.

NOTED SCIENTIFIC WRITER PRAISES NEW FILM

"A New Day," the unusual short subject now playing at the FAMILY Theatre, was shown privately to a number of the medical and scientific authorities before national release. Although this is an entertainment film produced for the general public the picture is of especial concern to doctors since it was produced in the interest of the control of pneumonia.

One of the most interesting comments on the picture is that which was made by Paul de Kruif, famed author of "Microbe Hunters," who said: "A New Day" is without exception the finest scientific story telling I have ever seen on the screen. As a combination of human drama and scientific accuracy it is amazing. That's what's always been wrong with the so called scientific movies for the general public. When they are dramatic they are phoney. When they are really scientific they are dull. 'A New Day' combines sound science with human interest."

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

For Graceful Lines.—To make the hips look smaller wear dull finished fabrics. To look more slender wear one-piece dresses. A contrasting blouse and skirt will make you look shorter. The use of jabots or long scarfs will make the bust line appear smaller. Patch pockets make the hip line look larger. A contrasting belt will make the figure look shorter.

Delicious Peppers.—Green peppers are delicious when stuffed with minced chicken and chopped mushrooms.

Sugaring Doughnuts.—To dust doughnuts with sugar place the sugar in a paper sack and put in six or doughnuts at a time. Hold the top of the sack together and shake it. The doughnuts will then be quickly coated with sugar.

Lemon Slices in Punch.—Lemon halves and slices are apt to give a bitter taste to punch if they are left in it. It is best to wait until serving time to add them.

When Cooking Cheese.—In cooking anything with cheese use a low temperature, because intense heat makes cheese tough and stringy.

Brightening the Closet.—If the walls and woodwork of the dark clothes closet are painted white it will make it much lighter and easier to find things.

Measuring Flour.—Wheat flour is one of the easiest ingredients in baking to measure. For best results always sift flour and measure by spoonfuls into a cup, being careful not to shake the filled cup.

Setting Gelatine.—Gelatine salads and desserts will set faster in metal molds than in enamel, earthenware or glass molds.

Stuffed Cabbage.—Far-boil the prepared cabbage for five minutes. Boil about one tablespoonful rice, add to it about one cup cold chopped ham or bacon. Flavor with ketchup, season and add a little gravy. Stuff the cabbage with this mixture and bind round with tape. Put in a saucepan with a little boiling salty water. Cook steadily about three-quarters of an hour.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets made of May Apple are effective in removing accumulated body waste.—Adv.

Shallow Act.—A kiss of the mouth often does not touch the heart.

NERVOUS?

Do you feel so nervous you want to scream? Are you cross and irritable? Do you scold those dearest to you? If your nerves are on edge, try LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND. It often helps Nature calm quivering nerves. For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. HELP KIDNEYS

To Get Rid of Acid and Poisonous Waste Your kidneys help to keep you well by constantly filtering waste matter from the blood. If your kidneys get functionally disordered and fail to remove excess impurities, there may be poisoning of the whole system and body-wide distress. Burning, scanty or too frequent urination may be a warning of some kidney or bladder disturbance. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out. In such cases it is better to rely on a medicine that has won country-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Use Doan's Pills. A multitude of grateful people recommend Doan's. DOAN'S PILLS

UNDER PRESSURE

By George Agnew Chamberlain

During 20 minutes they listened spellbound while she talked. At first Margarida Fonseca seemed a volcano on the verge of eruption; while occasionally she protested with a snort of startling volume, to no statement did she deign to voice actual denial. But gradually—very gradually—the scowl began to clear from her brow, her clenched fists relaxed, a gleam of admiration dawned in her eyes and at last the smile Joyce had seen only once before transfigured her expression.

"Ah!" cried the ex-minister of war, and it sounded like a groan of understanding mixed with rage. "It is clear what happened—too clear! Licenciada Fonseca baited the hook, Onelia gladly swallowed it. By abandoning you to your fate in La Barranca without killing Dorado they created an unparalleled international situation which made me totter. One more push would send me over with a crash, and Onelia herself supplied the impulse by facilitating the theft of the howitzers and casting the blame on me. Ah, senorita, you did well by yourself to bring me here today. Ai! Ai!"

Without bothering to take his leave, he rushed from the room.

A shadow swept across Margarida's face, but promptly cleared. "Well, chica," she rumbled, "what wouldn't I give to have you for a partner!"

"No more than I'd give to have you for a friend," said Joyce from her heart. "Oh, Margarida, please be my friend."

"No," said Margarida, tossing her iron-gray mane of hair. "Impossible. I detest you gringos—all of you and all you stand for. Your insufferable pride in dynamics as the true and only end of man! Your price labels on everything pertaining to the soul! You jeer at our thieves' market; what about your juries, weighing gold against bushels of injured hearts? I could go on for an hour, but enough is enough. At the end we'd have to arrive at the truth. I love you, chica, my little one, and I've always wished I might have a tiger just your size for a pet. You're adorable."

Dirk's telephoning from the embassy now bore fruit. Pablo entered and whispered to him, withdrew and a minute later came back accompanied by a respectable though threadbare individual. The newcomer seemed nervous, at odds with his surroundings and the company in which he found himself. He had the look of a man whose world has been yanked from under him, leaving him floating in air out of reach of help from heaven or hell. He regarded the ambassador, Joyce and even Margarida Fonseca's arresting presence with lackluster eyes, then turned to Dirk.

"I'm the Reverend Ellerton Jones," he announced in the ghost of a voice. "I understand you sent for me, Mr. Van Suttart, but I'm not at all sure—not at all sure—"

"Sit down, sir," said Dirk, "and let's talk the thing over. This is more or less a family gathering. The ambassador isn't an ambassador this afternoon; he's acting as my father. As for Licenciada Margarida Fonseca, one of the highlights of the Mexican bar, she's a very dear friend of the girl whom I wish to marry, Miss Joyce Sewell. Surely you'll help us out."

"That's the trouble," said the lost soul doubtfully. "I don't have to tell you, do I? My charge is gone. I have no rights, civil or otherwise—scarcely the right to live. I'm here on sufferance. That's what I meant. I'm not at all sure—"

"Are you in good standing with your church at home?" broke in the ambassador.

"Yes, oh, yes. I'm awaiting my recall; no—that's not quite true, I await the means with which to return."

"As long as you're a regularly ordained minister," said the ambassador, "that's all that the home states of these two young people require."

"Please, sir," said Dirk earnestly, "please, Mr. Jones, do let's be cheerful on this loveliest of all afternoons. You can make Joyce and myself very happy in about five minutes, if you will, and we'll try to do the same by you. Say I send you back home in style—drawing room, airplane, or if you like to drive I'll give you a car. What about it, sir? I don't want to rush you but there are two more clergymen waiting on your decision out in the patio."

Abruptly the lackluster eyes came to life; never dreaming how readily some men can lie Mr. Jones tugged a small worn book from his hip pocket and murmured, "Let us proceed with the ceremony."

A strange wedding if there ever was one. It started on a note of haste and levity, but so moving and powerful are the words hallowed by time and usage to Anglo-Saxon ears that a spirit of reverence swept into the room on wings unseen yet surely felt. What though the voice of the preacher was the voice of habit, precise in intonation, humdrum in intent; it could not lessen the surge of emotion which took possession of the hearts of his hearers, choked their throats and turned dry eyes luminous. To the sight of the man and the woman present and in the sight of God no longer were Joyce and Dirk arrayed in whipcord and saddle-stained moleskin, nor yet in silk or broadcloth. They were clothed in light, their faces bathed in a glory from within which presaged a devotion beyond any that lips alone can pledge.

The ambassador put his arm around Joyce, kissed her and stood looking down into her eyes. "My dear, I've never given away a sweeter bride to a more lovable boy." He turned his head to look at Dirk. "What now?" he asked. "When do you intend to return to your job?"

"That's up to Joyce, sir," said Dirk. "I've married her. I mean the whole of me has married her. I've just heard some words I've never heard before in my life—though I and you and everybody else know them by heart. I take them as they stand."

"He means it!" murmured the ambassador and returned his attention to Joyce. "What about it, my dear? I understand you have no use for embassies and all their works. What do you want Dirk to do—shake his job and become a drone?"

"A drone?" gasped Joyce, and caught her lip lest she laugh. She left his side, walked toward a window, and turned. "You're a great

"I don't follow you," said the ambassador testily.

"Send a battalion to keep her in," continued the general with slow emphasis. "In short, the president suggests that the government support the Mexican-born senorita Joyce Sewell in the lawful possession of her property, subject only to such restrictions as the national law provides, by every means in the power of the republic. As a first step he has directed me to dispatch at once a sufficient force for the capture of General Dorado—bandit, bootlegger of illicit gold, and purloiner of a battery of howitzers."

"Directed you?" asked the ambassador with emphasis on the pronoun. "Why not General Onelia?"

"Ah, Onelia. The president ordered his instant arrest, simultaneously with my reappointment as minister of war. Incidentally, the traitor is no more."

"You mean Onelia's dead?" cried the ambassador.

"Through his own fault," asserted General Sebastian sorrowfully, "and only in the last half-hour." Then he added in explanation, "Our regrettable national habit of ley de fuga—shot while attempting to escape from his guards."

Margarida advanced with hand extended. "Mr. Minister," she rumbled, "let me be the first to congratulate you on the resumption of the portfolio you know so well how to administer to your own honor and the honor of our country." She marched onward and turned in the door. "I trust both your excellencies will keep me in mind as a good lawyer though an honest woman."

Dirk went out with the clergyman; the ambassador withdrew, arm in arm with the minister of war, each aglow with plans for a rapprochement that would bring glory to both. Joyce, the small cause of weighty matters, was left alone. Standing at a high window she watched their excellencies depart but turned at the sound of a footstep. She and Dirk hung poised for a breathless moment with the room between them. Slowly they moved forward. The days they had spent together seemed to lengthen into years, reaching back into a common childhood and knitting the innermost fibers of their being. Their hands touched, clung, and as they looked deep in each other's eyes the same fear was born in them, the same silent cry: "This is I; if I lose you I'm lost, torn, maimed." Then his arms opened and she crushed herself against him.

"Oh, Dirk! Darling! Dirk!" "Don't worry," he whispered thickly. "I feel it too, Joyce. We won't lose each other, we can't. I love you—all of me loves all of you. Nothing ever can happen to one of us again."

She raised her face, blinding with its incandescence. Their kisses opened the floodgates of the heart and swept their veins with fire. Life with its inevitable pitfalls stretched far and wide before them, but one thing they knew: this was the topmost pinnacle of surrender. Never could they give again what now they gave, never step back out of that world of love to which all other loves are but an echo. (THE END)

"That's Up to Joyce, Sir," Said Dirk.

ambassador," she stated gravely. "I've known you only an hour and already you stir in me something I'll have to call love—one of the sweeter kinds of love—because there's no other word that comes near it. I can imagine that sort of power doing good no matter where a man walks. If Dirk, like you, is headed toward awaking the love of his fellow man—not of his nationals, his fellow man—what difference does it make where we live, what path he and I take together?"

The ambassador stared at her, then turned very slowly to look at Dirk. "That's your release, Dirk, and I don't mind saying you've cut out a full-sized job for yourself whether you stay under me or go. Want more time to think it over?"

"Yes, sir."

"How long?"

Dirk looked at Joyce and she answered for him. "Long enough to settle with Dorado."

There was a disturbance in the hallway; General Sebastian, fuming with impatience, opened the door for himself and hastened toward the ambassador. "Excellency," he cried, "I have accomplished much since I left here. I have been closeted with the president himself and return with a budget of news. For your relief let me say at once that our troubles are over."

"Which trouble?" asked the ambassador feelingly.

"All, all," said the general. "Our countries can be at peace as never before and we may yet look upon the incident of La Barranca as a godsend."

"That would be good news with a vengeance," murmured the ambassador. "So it's the president himself who found the solution?"

"A perfect one and so simple it cuts the Gordian knot at a single stroke. What was the situation? A young girl, with the eyes of the world upon her, battling to hold her own property—international dynamite as you yourself admitted. Had my government followed your suggestion of sending a battalion to fetch her out we would have become ridiculous; but reverse the objective and you have a stroke of genius."

Historians Given Unpublished Letters

Written by Explorer Meriwether Lewis

Hitherto unknown—or unconfirmed—sidelights on the life of Meriwether Lewis, co-explorer with William Clark of the Northwest, have been revealed with the request to the Missouri Historical society of unpublished letters written by the great explorer and scout, according to a St. Louis United Press correspondent in the Detroit Free Press.

Scholars have been working on the letters and documents, which were given to the society by the late Dr. Meriwether Lewis Anderson, a descendant of Lewis. Anderson died at Richmond, Va.

Included in the group are numerous letters written by the explorer to his mother. One, written in 1795, when he was twenty, was in a semi-apologetic tone for his seeming inability to stay home. He had enlisted with some Virginia troops at the time, and wrote:

"So violently opposed is my governing passion for rambling to the wishes of all my friends, that I am led intentionally to err and then have vanity enough to hope for forgiveness."

"I do not know how to account for this Quixotic disposition of mine in any other manner or its being inflicted by any other cause than that of having inherited it in right of the Meriwether family."

He asked his mother to forgive him on that basis; then promised to let her know of his whereabouts "by every opportunity."

"Home-Wrecking" Qualities of Poor Furniture Polish

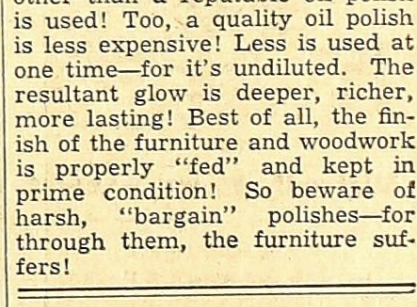

How often a houseful of fine furniture and handsome woodwork is spoiled by the use of a poor furniture polish! There are many polishes on the market today—some fair, some good, others excellent for luster and long life of the finish! The best is non-greasy, because made with a fine, light-oil base! In time, furniture and woodwork can be ruined by the persistent application of a cheap, poor polish! Such polish will contain kerosene, harsh abrasives and harmful acids—destructive elements, that are unseen and unsuspected! The housewife may use one of these polishes, feeling that she is economically keeping her furniture polished—but this is poorest economy, if she values her furniture (and what housewife does not?). The furniture in a home constitutes the largest part of the furnishings—and will show up like "sore thumbs" when dried out, cracked or checked. This is just what occurs, when other than a reputable oil polish is used! Too, a quality oil polish is less expensive! Less is used at one time—for it's undiluted. The resultant glow is deeper, richer, more lasting! Best of all, the finish of the furniture and woodwork is properly "fed" and kept in prime condition! So beware of harsh, "bargain" polishes—for through them, the furniture suffers!

He points out the vast influence which food wields over one's life. Swing Skirt and Contrast Jacket

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

THE sports costumes here shown are just about as swank as they make 'em. The feature emphasized by each and which, let us assure you, is a first and foremost trend in the styling of spring suits and sports outfits is that of the jacket that contrasts the skirt. This idea of contrast jacket and skirt is carrying on so successfully, leading specialty shops and sportswear departments are selling one skirt plus several jackets. With different "sets" of accessories the costume may be tuned to intriguing and varied color moods.

A copper, brown and beige striped tweed jacket topped a light brown tweed skirt makes a smart spectator sports costume for spring as worn by the young woman seated above in the illustration. It is voguishly ensembled with a pale beige felt sports hat, matching doekin gloves, deep copper brown calf spectator sports shoes with built-up leather heels and fine lisle mesh copper color stockings. The tailoring of the jacket shows superb workmanship and the presence of useful as well as decorative pockets declares that fashions are muchly pocketed. The girl in the foreground is wearing a favorite campus costume—a swing pleated skirt in colorful plaid wool (a "must have" in every chic wardrobe) and twin sweaters in natural beige cashmere. Fine self stripes add to the fashion interest of her new durable lisle stockings which are now so voguish.

If there is one lesson more than another that the new spring fashions impress upon us it is that a costume is only as smart and correct as the accessories worn with it. There is absolutely no hit-and-miss selection tolerated when it comes to headwear, footwear, the gloves, belts, bags, even the handkerchiefs we carry, that correlate a modern costume into a perfect unit.

Especially in the realm of sportswear is the theory of the right accessories for the right costume being worked out to a nicety. In fact we have gone quite English when it comes to perfection of detail that has to do with our town and country tweeds, our spectator and active sports clothes and our campus outfits. Consider the matter of shoes and hosiery that should be worn with the sturdy outdoor costume. British women have long established as correct accessory to their smart tweeds, brogues that spell comfort and a fitness of things. With these they wear sensible fine lisle hosiery. We, the American women, are coming to just that. Indeed, the most exciting news about stockings is the recent introduction of smartly styled full-fashioned sports stockings of domestic cotton lisle.

This spring nearly all the leading hosiery manufacturers are bringing out home-grown durable lisle hose that are sleek, bulky and flattering, tuned to the taste of the most fastidious. If the mention of lisle hosiery makes you think of the drab regulation stockings of boarding school days, you will be astonished at the beautiful styling of the new-patterned sports lises, and in designs that simply cry for co-ordination with spectator tweeds and active sport costumes. Important style news in connection with the new durable lises is that they revive clocks, smart in either self or contrast embroidery. These stockings also are to be had in spaced or close dropstitch ribs. The mesh constructions are particularly good looking and are adaptable to tailored street costumes as well as to classic sports clothes.

SELF-STYLED SUEDE HATS ARE POPULAR

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The new drape-it-yourself suede hats are selling about as fast as the sales checks can be made out. They are in the most beguiling colors for suede, as we all know, takes dyes most beautifully and these hats are worth the price for their color alone. It is a joy to behold their exquisite pastel colorings that include such lovely soft gray blues, pretty "dusty" pinks, mint green, lilac shades, the new golds and coppers and the voguish cereal shades. You can get any of the darker colors, navy, brown, dunobnet red, raspberry—any color you want. Before you put one of these suede fantasies on, they look shapeless, but with a deft pat here, and a cunning twist there, presto! you have a most becoming chapeau tuned to your individuality and hairdress, and with a little more coaxing these hats can be manipulated to wear in a dozen or more different ways. They are smart as can be to wear at the immediate moment and they give the costume just the touch of color that is needed to lead on to spring. Best of it is they are reasonably priced, and it's lots of fun being one's own milliner.

A Smart Hat

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for March 27

CORRECTING WRONG IDEAS OF RELIGION

LESSON TEXT—Mark 7:1-13. GOLDEN TEXT—This people honoreth me with their lips, but their heart is far from me. Mark 7:6. PRIMARY TOPIC—At Dinner-Time. JUNIOR TOPIC—What Is Real Religion? INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Counts with God? YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Sidestepping Responsibilities.

The never-ending struggle of Christianity is to keep the simple gospel of the grace of God in Christ Jesus free to operate in all its glory and power, unencumbered by the traditions and formulas of men. It has been my privilege to read a recent book by a brilliant young man who, while serving as a professor of philosophy in a large university, is also versed in the related fields of theology, psychology, psychiatry, and psychotherapy. He has had first-hand experience in dealing with the problems of men and women. With this background of both study and experience he gives it as his absolute conviction that we must get "back to the original simplicity of the Christian gospel." He suggests that we need to "dust off the additions and superstructures" that have been added since Christ came to seek and to save the lost.

Our lesson for today finds Jesus meeting that very issue with the traditionalists of His day.

I. Washed Hands and Unwashed Hearts (vv. 1-6).

In the process of interpreting the law of Moses and applying it to the affairs of daily life the religious authorities of Israel had developed a mass of intricate and onerous rules which had literally buried the law itself and had substituted ritualistic formalism for spiritual life. So fond had the scribes and the Pharisees become of these traditions that they became bold enough to declare that they were far superior to the law itself.

Their attack on Jesus because His disciples ate with unwashed hands did not refer to the proper cleansing of one's hands before eating, but to the ceremonial washings which were said to be necessary if one had accidentally touched a Gentile, or something that a Gentile had touched in the market place.

Jesus skillfully and finally disposes of that question by reminding the objectors that they were serving God with their lips only, but their hearts were far from Him. Washed hands are not a thing to be condemned, and Jesus says nothing about that point. When the washing of hands becomes of more importance than the cleansing of the heart, however, the soul is in real danger.

II. Traditions of Man Versus the Commandment of God (vv. 7-13).

Here is the heart of the entire matter, for while we may not always be aware of it the fact is that our anxiety to maintain human tradition which is contrary to the law and Spirit of God is fundamentally for the purpose of evading our full and true responsibility.

The Jew who was so avaricious that he did not wish to support his aged and needy parents could entirely evade that God-given responsibility by declaring that his property was "Corban," dedicated to God. Thereafter no matter how great was the need of his parents they could receive nothing. The execution of this oath was carried out to such a fine point that a son who had declared his property to be "Corban" could visit a sick father or mother for only a brief period lest he might stay long enough to perform some duties of a nurse and so contribute to his parents by saving them some expense.

Thus do men even in our day make "the word of God of none effect" (v. 13), through their traditions. No right minded person objects to the worthy traditions of worship and service which are such a precious heritage of the Christian church. Rightfully apprehended and properly used they are both desirable and helpful. But we must never permit the grace and power of God in Jesus Christ "to be brought under the trammels of human teachers or the arrangements of human office-bearers. The first movement toward the mastery of the soul by tradition is the movement of that soul away from immediate, direct, first-hand fellowship with God" (Morgan).

The crying need of our day, as it was of the time when Jesus was on earth, is that we should clear away hindering encumbrances.

Goodness

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Discusses CARBOHYDRATES and FATS

Foods That Provide Motive Power For the Body Machinery

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS 6 East 39th St., New York.

THE human body might be compared to a framework filled with machinery. It takes food to build the framework, food to run the machinery and food to keep it working efficiently and this food must be of the proper type.

Last week, I discussed the body building proteins and explained how to distinguish between those which build and repair body tissue, and those that are adequate for maintenance, but not for growth. It is equally important that you should learn something of the fuel foods which are necessary to fire the body engine and furnish motive power to propel the body machinery.

Fuel Foods Keep Us Alive

The body could not function in the absence of fuel foods any more than a machine could run without power, or a car without gas. Every breath requires an expenditure of energy, and so does every movement—from the beating of the heart to the winking of an eye.

Even in repose, the body machinery is kept functioning only by an ever-present supply of fuel. For, as long as life continues—even when you are lying perfectly still—you need fuel to carry on the internal work of the body.

Activity Demands Energy Foods

Every type of daily activity, including work and exercise, requires additional fuel. If you walk slowly, you expend twice as much energy as when you sit still. And when you walk fast, you may use up four, five or six times as much energy.

The chief fuel, or energy producing foods, are the carbohydrates—that is, the starches and sugars; and fats. Protein also has some fuel value, but its primary function is to build and repair tissue.

Carbohydrates are quick burning. Fat, on the other hand, burns slowly, like a lamp whose wick is turned low.

Danger of Inadequate Fuel Supply

Recently there has been a tendency to minimize the importance of the fats and carbohydrates, due to the craze for dieting. Some of the results of disregarding the absolute necessity for these foods are extreme irritability, and a greater susceptibility to fatigue, nervous diseases, tuberculosis and other infections.

Too Much Fuel Causes Overweight

It is true, however, that an excess of fuel foods will tend to produce overweight. For if we assimilate them, and do not utilize their potential energy in muscular effort, they will be stored—as fat—usually in most inconvenient locations! On the other hand, an excess of any food is a detriment. Therefore the goal should be enough, but not too much, of all necessary foods.

Since both carbohydrates and fats are energy foods, one might expect them to play an interchangeable role in the diet. To a certain extent, they do, although fat, being more concentrated, provides two and one-fourth times as much fuel value as an equal weight of carbohydrate.

But because of the variation in the way these materials are handled by the body, it is generally considered that health is best served when 40 to 50 per cent of the total energy value of foods is provided in the form of carbohydrate and 30 to 35 per cent in the form of fats.

Carbohydrates Are Quickest Fuel

Carbohydrates, which originate chiefly in plant life, are readily converted into heat and muscle energy. Foods rich in carbohydrates include bread, potatoes, macaroni, rice, cooked and ready-to-eat cereals, peanuts, dried and preserved fruits, sugars and syrup.

life in its higher forms, is impossible. The noted Arctic explorer, Stefansson, found that he could exist satisfactorily on an all-meat diet, provided he ate liberally of fat. On a diet of all lean meat, he became violently ill within a week.

Besides furnishing concentrated energy values, fats help to create the fatty tissue which cushions the nerves and abdominal organs, and forms the pleasing contours of face and figure.

Because it leaves the stomach more slowly than proteins and carbohydrates, fat retards the digestion of these food groups somewhat, and thus gives staying power to a meal. At the same time it promotes the flow of pancreatic juice and bile, thus helping in the assimilation of other foods. Foods rich in fat include butter, cheese, egg yolk, cooking fats and oils, margarine, olives, pastry, peanut butter, most nuts except chestnuts and lichi nuts, various kinds of sausage and fried foods.

Anger Destroys Fat Reserves

Experiments have demonstrated why nervous, irritable individuals are usually thin, while those with a serene temperament often accumulate weight. It has been proven that anger and fright increase the amount of fat in the blood and remove a corresponding amount of fat from its usual storage place beneath the skin. A fit of anger may take off more fat than an hour's exercise, or two or three days of enforced diet.

But whether the members of your family are good natured, or irritable, young or old, they need a constant supply of fuel foods—at every meal, every day. Fuel foods produce energy—and energy is the motive power of life and work and thought.

Night Chant Halts Disease
A Navaho Indian who's unlucky enough to have a bad dream or to spit accidentally on an ant hill is running the risk of a serious illness, the Field Museum Bulletin relates. So he gets the medicine man to hold a "night chant," a nine days' ceremony and feast, which blocks the disease-on-the-way.

City of Jeanne d'Arc
Rouen, France, a busy center for weaving, spinning and the manufacture of handkerchiefs, is the city of Jeanne d'Arc. There is the old castle in which she was imprisoned while she awaited trial; a tablet on the archbishop's palace states that she was tried there, and a slab in the marketplace marks the site of the stake where she was burned.

Never a Last Drink
Spanish tipplers, gathered together for an evening of light elbow-bending, never break the rules of etiquette by ordering a "last" drink. A round ordered at the close of the evening may be the "penultima" (the next to the last), but courtesy requires that no mention be made of a "last drink."

Trout Favored by Fishermen

Great strength and a fighting heart in a small body make the trout a favorite of fishermen. No fish as small fights so long when hooked. It protects itself by changing color to blend with that of the bottom of a stream. It is something of a weather prophet, too. Eight or nine hours before a freshet, caused by rains miles away, floods its home stream, a trout stops feeding.

WE MUST ARM FOR PEACE

Secretary Hull States America's Foreign Policy . . . Flays World Anarchy and the Rule of Force

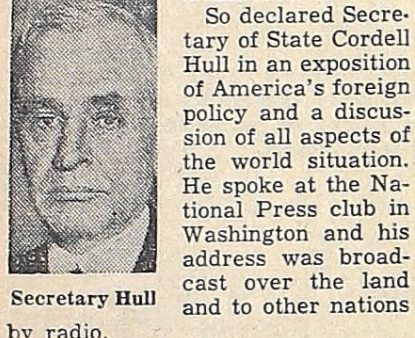

This picture, made in an Austrian border town and transmitted by radio photo, shows a contingent of Hitler's troops marching toward Vienna after being landed from airplanes in the country that has now been made a state of the German reich.

Edward W. Pickard SUMMARIZES THE WORLD'S WEEK

Armed Peace; No Alliances

AMERICA must pursue its quest for world peace, but must follow a policy of arming for protection of its rights against "international lawlessness."

Secretary Hull

by radio. In brief, he set forth a policy of peace, no alliances, collaboration with peaceful nations, military preparedness, and opposition to the "seclusionist" viewpoint.

"It is my considered judgment that, in the present state of world affairs, to do less than is now proposed would lay our country open to unpredictable hazards," he said, referring to the naval expansion program.

"The momentous question," he said, "is whether the doctrine of force shall become enthroned once more and bring in its wake, inexorably, international anarchy and a relapse into barbarism."

Hull expressed "our deep concern over the rising tide of lawlessness, the growing disregard of treaties, the increasing reversion to the use of force, and the numerous other ominous tendencies which are emerging in the sphere of international relations."

His speech abounded with such sharp phrases as "methods of violence," "another dark night of international anarchy," "rule of force," "violators of international treaties," "medieval chaos" and "blind extremism."

He did not refer to any nation by name, but his implication with regard to legal recognition of Austria's absorption by Germany and Japan's expansion in China was clear when he said:

"The catastrophic developments of recent years, the startling events of the past weeks, offer a tragic demonstration of how quickly the contagious scourge of treaty-breaking and armed violence spreads from one region to another."

The secretary came out strongly for an adequate armed force for this country:

"In a world in which the rule of force has not as yet been firmly and surely supplanted by the rule of law, it is the manifest duty of a great nation to maintain armed forces adequate for its national defense."

"No policy would prove more disastrous than for an important nation to fail to arm adequately when international lawlessness is on the rampage."

In the Far East crisis, Hull said, the United States has "consistently collaborated with other peace-seeking nations."

"But there is not a trace of alliance or involvement of any sort." He disclaimed "the slightest intention to entertain any such notion as the use of American armed forces for 'policing the world.'"

He specifically opposed the proposal of the United States to retire from the Far East.

The triumph of the "seclusionist viewpoint," he said, "would inescapably carry the whole world back to the conditions of medieval chaos, conditions toward which some parts of both the eastern and the western worlds are already moving."

Mars in the Ascendant

WAR clouds over Europe were growing dense and alarm increased throughout the world. Secularities experienced sharp breaks on the exchanges in America, London, Paris and elsewhere because of the disquieting reports. Cabinets and diplomats everywhere were trying desperately to find a way to peace. The danger seemed to involve at the moment chiefly Czechoslovakia, the civil war in Spain and the renewed quarrel between Poland and Lithuania.

Maxim Litvinoff

Maxim Litvinoff, wise commissar for foreign affairs of Soviet Russia, put forth an invitation to the great powers other than Germany, Italy and Japan to confer on joint action aimed at "checking further development of aggression and eliminating increased danger of a new world massacre." The United States was asked to participate in this action.

France and Russia formally notified Czechoslovakia that they would give that nation armed support against any aggressive action by Germany. Great Britain, while not going so far as this, warned Hitler that it expected him to observe the assurances he had given that he would not attack the Czechs.

Dispatches from Warsaw said more than 100,000 of Russia's paratrooper soldiers had been mobilized and were ready to be flown to Czechoslovakia in case of emergency. Several Russian and French generals hastened to Prague to confer with the Czech military chiefs.

Nazi leaders of the Sudeten Germans in Czechoslovakia boldly warned the Czech parliament that the country had better yield to Hitler, and this demand was strengthened when other large groups of Germans in that country decided to merge with the Sudeten party.

France stood ready to pour troops and armament into Spain to aid the loyalists because of reports that Germany and Italy were sending large reinforcements to Franco, whose insurgent forces were pressing rapidly on toward the east coast. Madrid had sent word to Paris that the government could not hold out much longer unless it received help.

France called on Britain to join her in an effort to bring about an armistice in Spain during which all foreign troops could be withdrawn, and the British ambassador to Rome was instructed to tell Mussolini that unless he called home his "volunteers" in Spain, Britain would be unable to restrain France from sending troops and munitions across the Pyrenees border to aid the loyalists.

The British government has promised naval help to France to keep open her communications in the Mediterranean as if she becomes involved with Italy, but the British will keep out of Spain.

Lithuania Alarmed

LITHUANIA and Poland have been in an unofficial state of war for 18 years because of Poland's seizure of Vilna, and a trifling border incident has brought them near to open conflict.

Warsaw was on the point of sending an ultimatum to Kaunas, but delayed this on appeal from France and Britain.

The Lithuanians also were afraid that Germany, taking advantage of the general ferment in Europe, would undertake to recover the once German city of Memel, which also is coveted by Poland.

HELLO EVERYBODY: Here's a mystery. Why was Sam Wolff kidnaped? That question puzzled Sam himself. It puzzled me, too. Maybe it will make you wonder a bit. We all know why most kidnapers commit their dirty crimes. They do it for money—for ransom. Once in a while a man is kidnaped for revenge, or to keep him from telling what he knows. But Sam didn't fit into any of these pictures. He wasn't rich. There wasn't anybody he knew of who was looking for revenge. And he didn't know anything that anyone would be interested in keeping quiet.

But just the same Sam was kidnaped. Sam lives in Brooklyn, N. Y. One August day in 1934, something went wrong with his lucky star.

Sam is a truckman, and on that August day he was working as usual. It was about 1 o'clock in the afternoon, and his truck was parked at the curb in mid-town Manhattan. As he sat there in the driver's seat a young man came over to him.

The young fellow was in his early twenties and neatly dressed. He said he had a job that he wanted Sam to do. That job was to pick up three trunks at a house on West Eighteenth street and deliver them to the Pennsylvania station.

Just a Job of Trucking.

The young fellow looked all right to Sam, and there was no reason why he should suspect anything. Sam didn't have any large amount of money on him, and there was no other reason he could think of why anyone should want to harm him. In fact, Sam didn't think about the matter at all. It was just another job and he went about it as he'd go about any other.

The young lad asked Sam his price and Sam told him it would be three bucks. The young fellow said, "All right," and they started off. They got to the Eighteenth street address, which proved to be a furnished house, and both of them went inside. As they entered Sam went first and the young fellow followed. They climbed a flight of stairs and turned into one of the rooms on the second floor. As Sam went in—the door closed behind him. Then, out from behind that door stepped a masked man, a slouch but pulled down over the upper part of his face, pointing an automatic pistol.

Tied Him Up but Wouldn't Explain.

The man pressed the gun against Sam's side. He told Sam to keep quiet. The pair of them—the masked man and the young fellow who had hired him to move trunks—began tying him up. They bound his hands and feet with wire—put a towel over his mouth. Then the masked man went out, leaving the young fellow to stand guard over their prisoner.

It was all too much for Sam. What did these birds want? Did they expect to get any money out of him? Then they were going to be disappointed. Sam didn't have any great amount of money—not enough, anyway, to pay a gang of kidnapers for the terrible risk they were taking. Did they have the wrong man? Well, that might be a possibility.

He tried to talk to his captor. The young fellow wasn't very communicative. When Sam suggested they had the wrong man he smiled in a way that suggested that he knew what he was doing. Sam discarded that "wrong man" theory. An hour dragged by, and Sam began to wonder again.

All sorts of questions filled his mind. It wasn't alone the problem of why they wanted him. There was also the question of what they might do with him. He began to wonder if his family would next hear of him when he was dragged out of the river, or his body found, stuffed in a trunk, on a dump somewhere on the outskirts of the city. Such things have happened. Sam had never thought of them happening to him. But now he was beginning to.

Wanted His Truck for a Robbery.

Another hour passed. The young lad who was guarding him was decent enough. He kept his gun out and pointed at Sam, but he didn't harm him. Once he even lit a cigarette and held it to Sam's lips so he could have a smoke. Sam felt a little better after that.

A third hour passed. Then the other man came back. The two of them began to untie Sam. When they had taken the wire from his hands and feet they told him to lie down on the bed for ten minutes. After that they went out, locking the door behind them.

As soon as their footsteps had died away Sam was on his feet, banging on the door. After a few minutes the landlady came and let him out. He left that house and walked down the street, still puzzled about the strange adventure that had befallen him. He went to the police station to report the loss of his truck—and there he got the answer to his mystery.

It was the simplest thing in the world. That pair of crooks just wanted to rob a dress goods house down on Bleeker street. And they had held Sam a prisoner so he wouldn't report its loss until after they had finished the job. The cops found his truck the next morning, abandoned down on Delancey street.

Basilisk Lizards Are Jumpers

Four species of basilisk lizards abound in and near Central America, but are nowhere else. They range in length from a few inches to three feet. Most of their lives are spent in trees along rivers. Great climbers and jumpers, they do not hesitate to dive from a lofty tree into the water. So swiftly do they run on their hind legs that they can "run" across streams. And they can stop so abruptly human eyes cannot follow them.

The great pyramid at Gizeh is 481½ feet high, with a width of each side at the base of 755½ feet. The sloping sides rise at an angle of 51 degrees 50 minutes and have a slant height of 588 feet.

Since the ancient Egyptians, centuries before Christ, wove, pounded and polished reeds to make sheets of papyrus, paper has been made of vegetable substances. From about 1880, the most prolific source of paper for printing has been the American forests of conifers, the spruce being the most important tree for this purpose. Virtually all newspapers are printed on paper made from a mixture of ground and chemically digested wood.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted By WILLIAM BRUCKART NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—There is a strange similarity between certain things that are going on in Russia at this time and phases of events right here in the United States. So much alike are these things, indeed, that one hears a great deal of comment on the circumstance.

Most persons are familiar, of course, with the fact that the dictator, Stalin, and the clique at present, and for the moment only, that is in his favor, are engaged in "liquidation" of traitors. Now, "liquidation" of opposition in Russia means death at the hands of a firing squad. It means putting that opposition under the ground for eternity. This is accomplished in Russia under Stalin by the simple expedient of a so-called military trial. The farce that is called a trial is nothing more nor less than an exposition of charges against the accused who are, without exception, tortured until they "confess." That is to say, a torture in jail, a physical maltreatment, is administered until the accused would rather have death than a continuation of the physical suffering.

This thing is resorted to in Russia wherever and whenever Stalin or the clique then holding his favor believes it advisable to instill some more fear into the millions which fate placed in Russia. That is to say, if, as always is the case with human beings, Stalin makes a mistake or his plans go awry, somebody must be the goat. In a land where the government has absolute power over life and death, the easiest, simplest way of solving the problem is by shooting off a few extra "counter revolutionists." Lately the purge in Russia has been directed at "counter revolutionaries" amongst the army officers. A few newspaper correspondents and government officials have been included just to make the propaganda effective on the proletariat.

The mock trials and the "liquidation" in Russia are being carried on at this time because it is charged, there are elements in Russia that are seeking to bring back Leon Trotsky. Trotsky has a different type of dictatorship by the proletariat in mind. He has to hide out in Mexico, or get shot himself. Anyway, the Stalin group announces boldly that Russia is going forward (whatever that means) and will brook no interference with its plans—even if it has to shoot off all of its army officers and most of its government officials.

So much for the Russian system.

Now, in calling attention to the similarity of conditions here, I have no notions of comparing them on the basis of the actual results. I want to deal with fundamentals, with principles. It seems to me this can be done without animosity. We will start, therefore, with one small and rather insignificant matter.

And in the United States

A few weeks ago, President Roosevelt named Stanley Reed to be an associate justice of the Supreme court of the United States. Mr. Reed had been solicitor general of the United States. The appointment cannot be criticized in any way, because Mr. Reed will lend dignity to any job he undertakes. I think the country is fortunate in that appointment.

But when Mr. Reed was promoted, the President named Robert H. Jackson to fill the vacant place. Well, most people were rather glad to see Mr. Jackson placed in a job where he has to do legal work instead of being a political mouthpiece. Their satisfaction was short-lived, however, because who should be named to succeed Mr. Jackson but Professor Thurman Arnold of Yale university. It is an appointment that is worse, if that is possible, than that which placed Mr. Jackson in the job originally. For Professor Arnold is not a man to breed confidence at any time. Particularly is this true when it is considered that he manages a job that has to do with governmental relations with business. Which is to say that if business could have no certainty or assurance or guidance from Mr. Jackson, it will be like looking for needles in haystacks to learn what Mr. Arnold's ideas are on business practices. Maybe I should say, it will be like chasing a very small insect that has a habit of biting and is equipped with a voracious appetite.

Thus we are come to the point of comparison. What does it mean that Messrs. Jackson and Arnold should be given those posts? The answer is comparatively simple, albeit quite significant. It means that President Roosevelt has taken control of the Department of Justice out of the hands of Attorney General Cummings. It means that he has yielded again to the left wing, the radical, advisers who have managed time after time to get the presidential ear and whisper convincingly into it. It means, as well, that Attorney General Cummings who was at first one of the great admirers of President Roosevelt is no longer among the presidential insiders and that he must be classed again as a Democrat as distinguished from the New Dealers.

But, you ask, what has that got to do with Russia, with Stalin, with liquidation of "counter revolutionaries," etc? Again, it seems to me that the analogy is plain. President Roosevelt has been convinced by the radicals and long-hairs that he has no great need any longer for the breed of simple, sound, sane thinkers, or the practical politicians. The advisors who are clinging to him like ivy to a wall have seen their plans go down in the crash of the depression and have to blame somebody. They argue that if their plans had not had interference from such as Mr. Cummings, or Secretary Roper or the Department of Commerce, or "Jim" Farley's practical politics, surely, the wishful thinkers would have succeeded. They could not line up the "counter revolutionaries" to be shot in this country, but they can destroy their political influence.

To carry the fundamental thought to its ultimate and logical conclusion, therefore, it is necessary only to explain that the great liberal group (which boasts by mouth or by print) has yet ever to agree among its own numbers. They seldom agree to start with, and they never agree at the finish. It is always the "other fellow" that is to blame. "If my plan had been followed we would have succeeded," etc. and so on. There is that counterpart in Russia, I insist. It proves beyond a shadow of a doubt that no one can define "liberalism."

I mentioned Postmaster General Farley as being on the outs with President Roosevelt. It would not be surprising if Mr. Farley quit his job. Observers in Washington know that he is pretty much disgusted by the refusal of the President to be guided by advice from the party's national chairman. It is possible, of course, that Mr. Farley will prefer to continue in the job as postmaster general and be quiet rather than expose the rupture. I understand he is giving that matter considerable thought these days, because, first of all, Mr. Farley believes in playing practical politics up to the hilt.

There is another rumor running around Washington about Mr. Farley. It is said in many places that Mr. Farley may decide to remain on the job so that he can be more effective in helping to restore control of the Democratic party machinery to the Democrats. That is to say, Mr. Farley knows, as every one else who understands politics knows, that the New Deal theories will fall of their own weight in due time. They will fall because so many of them are contrary to human nature and to American traditions. Being immensely practical, Mr. Farley holds that the Democratic party is a party which is a natural opposition group to the Republicans. It will live, as it ought to live, and will continue to be a factor in American government long after the New Deal has burned itself out. Mr. Farley, therefore, is anxious to lend a hand in rebuilding the Democratic party for the Democrats.

To that end, it is understood by many observers, there is a likely alignment between Mr. Farley and the canny, politically wise, "Cactus Jack" Garner, the Vice President. Undoubtedly, there is a strong and growing group in the house and senate which has turned away from the President. Recent votes have shown an increasing number of Democrats that are willing to stand on their own bottom. A very recent illustration of this was the vote on the New Deal scheme to tax corporations owned by a small number of persons at a higher rate than those whose shares are widely owned. There are thousands of these, all small corporations. To have kept that provision in the new tax bill would have saved the face of a small coterie of presidential advisers and even the President, himself. But half of the Democrats joined with the Republicans to kill off the plan.

From this and other circumstances, it is plain to see how the rumored Farley-Garner alignment would be backed up by such political powers as Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi. Senator Harrison, it will be remembered, was rewarded for carrying New Deal buckets by having the President urge selection of Senator "Dear Alben" Barkley, of Kentucky, to be Democratic leader of the senate. Senator Barkley since has run into a fight for renomination in his own state. Senator Harrison is said to have a following of thirty-odd or more senators.

But, you ask, what has that got to do with Russia, with Stalin, with liquidation of "counter revolutionaries," etc? Again, it seems to me that the analogy is plain. President Roosevelt has been convinced by the radicals and long-hairs that he has no great need any longer for the breed of simple, sound, sane thinkers, or the practical politicians. The advisors who are clinging to him like ivy to a wall have seen their plans go down in the crash of the depression and have to blame somebody. They argue that if their plans had not had interference from such as Mr. Cummings, or Secretary Roper or the Department of Commerce, or "Jim" Farley's practical politics, surely, the wishful thinkers would have succeeded. They could not line up the "counter revolutionaries" to be shot in this country, but they can destroy their political influence.

Several weeks ago, a sagacious traveler of this writer's acquaintance, back from Rome, reported Lady Chamberlain as adroitly fostering an understanding with Britain which would bring recognition of Ethiopia and a two-way split on Spain and the Mediterranean. She has been in Rome since November, in intimate social intercourse with the more important Fascist moguls.

For many years, she has been known as the "most perfect political hostess" in London and has been subtly influential in many big deals in continental diplomacy. It was she who cooked up the Locarno conference, at Lake Maggiore, in Switzerland, in 1925.

How Picnic at Locarno Made Peace

When the delegates were haggling, she packed some hampers and invited Sir Austen, Briand and Stresemann to the most important picnic in all history. In her handsome little yacht, they disappeared around a bend in the lake, landed in a secluded spot, and, with the aid of three jurists, re-rigged Europe.

Whatever came out of the conference, for good or ill, is traced to that picnic. When she returned to England, she was made Dame of the Grand Cross of the British Empire.

She is a comely matron of sixty-two, married to Sir Austen in 1906. He was fourteen years older. She was Ivy Dundas of one of the leading political families of England.

In the earlier years of their marriage, she was credited with having coached her husband in the ultra-English mannerisms which all of the great Birmingham family found it expedient to master when they moved to London. She is said to have been his political as well as his social mentor, and frequently electioneered in his campaigns.

Lady Pulls Strings in Duce Deal

Enter Lady Chamberlain, the cleverest woman politician in England, widow of Sir Austen, obscurely noted in the news as mysteriously busy for the last few months in the British-Italian rapprochement.

Several weeks ago, a sagacious traveler of this writer's acquaintance, back from Rome, reported Lady Chamberlain as adroitly fostering an understanding with Britain which would bring recognition of Ethiopia and a two-way split on Spain and the Mediterranean. G-Men On Front Page in Spy Hunt

THE New York spy round-up by the federal bureau of investigation marks the first front-page workout of the G-men as an ally of the secret service.

An attache of the latter told me in Washington last summer that J. Edgar Hoover's organization, developed in post-war years, would be an invaluable aid to this country's defenses against foreign espionage, and that, in the event of trouble, actual or impending, no foreign country could hope to duplicate Germany's exploit in sabotage, propaganda and spying before our entry into the World war.

Reed Vetterli, in short pants when the World war started, heads the New York office of the F. B. I. and deploys his 75 agents in a red-hot spy scenario, in which they score as usual, with indications today that this is just the overture.

Six feet tall, blond, reticent, Mr. Vetterli is a veteran of the F. B. I. war against thugs and kidnapers, in the bureau since 1926, in charge of 18 offices in his 11 years of service.

He was born in Salt Lake City in 1903, and took his law degree at the University of Washington in 1925. In 1933, he was wounded in the Kansas City massacre, trading shots with Pretty Boy Floyd's gangsters.

He has participated in most of the bureau's famous kidnaping, vice and bank robbery cases. He succeeded Rhea Whitley as head of the New York office on September 11, 1937. He has a reputation in the bureau for always having an airtight case against anyone he arrests.

BOSTON YANKEE GOES TO COURT

'Joe' Kennedy, Red-Headed Irishman, Will Be New Type Ambassador to England's Austere Court of St. James

By JOSEPH W. LABINE

A red-headed American business man, the blood of old Erin coursing through his veins, is creating a sensation at Great Britain's austere Court of St. James.

His name is Joe Kennedy, the son of a one time Boston politician and saloon keeper, new United States ambassador to England.

Joe Kennedy is placing his sturdy business shoes in the footsteps where formerly walked philosophers, poets, historians and members of the social elect. He is not America's first business man ambassador, but he is the first business man to get the job without first showing his listing in society's "Who's Who."

Joe Kennedy, who made a million dollars before he was 35, who organized the successful Securities Exchange commission and served as chairman of the Maritime commission, may be ushering in a new type of diplomacy. Others claim this right-hand man of the Roosevelt administration is being exiled by his appointment to St. James. Still others say the ambassadorship is a springboard to the Presidency.

More likely is the answer that President Roosevelt recognizes the need for a British ambassador of exceptional business ability, a man who can maneuver the proposed reciprocal trade treaty to a successful conclusion. Joe Kennedy, more than any other New Dealer, is the man who can do it.

Red Tape Bothers Him. This dynamic American is apt to shock St. James. As SEC chairman and head of the Maritime commission he showed his distaste for official red tape and soft-couched procedure. In diplomacy as nowhere else, he will find just such conditions.

The Kennedy career reads like an unbroken success story, in which love and family life have played an important part. At forty-nine he is the father of nine good looking children. His wife, the former Rose Fitzgerald of Boston, is so attractive and slim at forty-seven that John Boettiger, Roosevelt son-in-law, blurted out when he first met her:

"At last I believe in the stork!" Kennedy started as a Boston newsboy in a career that stretches from New England to Hollywood and back again. At Harvard, where he finished in 1912, he was a star baseball player and made $5,000 driving a sight-seeing bus during summer vacations. By the time he graduated he decided on a banking career, became a state examiner for 18 months and—when only twenty-five—was actually a bank president!

He Fought With Roosevelt. Kennedy's first meeting with President Roosevelt came during the war when the Irish Bostonian was assistant general manager of the Fore River shipyards and the President was assistant secretary of the navy. It is recalled that the angry navy official dispatched troops to take over a ship which Kennedy refused to release.

Next came three years as manager of the stock department at Hayden, Stone company, a Boston banking house. It was there that Kennedy got the bright idea of buying American option rights on foreign motion pictures. That started his movie career.

Kennedy was new blood in Hollywood, one of the first young business men to approach the movie industry from the banking end. From 1926 to 1930 he was in the center of mammoth mergers and shifts in the big companies. By 1929, just before the crash, he decided to get out of the movie business. But during his brief Hollywood career he had been president of the Film Booking Offices of limited film companies in need of overhauling. He settled $73,000,000 of mail contract claims of 23 shipping companies against the government for $750,000 and laid down the rule that future government subsidies to shipping should be made only where there was a chance of accomplishing something by it.

Then last November, he released a sensational report listing the needs of American shipping, a report that will probably go down in history as another example of Kennedy foresight and common sense. When every other nation was building huge liners, Joe Kennedy predicted the day when fast aircraft would make liners impractical. Therefore he recommended emphasis on trans-Atlantic airplanes, together with construction of small and sensible ocean vessels.

He's 'Pep' Personified.

To staid Britishers Joe Kennedy may be the perfect example of American "pep." Big and tall, he likes to work in his shirt sleeves, make instantaneous decisions and ride airplanes instead of trains. He is a go-getter, equally at home with any kind of an audience.

It is significant that Joe Kennedy is one of the few New Dealers who still retain the respect of business at large. President Roosevelt is sacrificing an important window dresser on the home front when he sends this Irishman to St. James.

Built originally for Pierpont Morgan, the new United States embassy at London should be large enough for the Kennedy family—mother, father and nine smart youngsters.

first to board President Roosevelt's bandwagon, while the present Chief Executive was still governor of New York and Jim Farley was still a small time politician.

Reformed Wall Street.

Kennedy money backed the 1932 campaign and the dynamic Kennedy personality gladdened many a vote-getting tour. When it was all over he spent two and a half months reorganizing Radio Corporation of America and hobnobbing with his Wall street friends, trying to convince them that the world was changing. They wouldn't listen.

Few people have forgotten the turbulent days when the Securities Exchange commission was established with Kennedy at its head. Almost to a man, Wall street brokers protested it would wreck their profession. But the measure went through and today you'll find that a majority of SEC's old opponents are its staunchest supporters.

After SEC was established he left the government and returned to making money again, only to be recalled when President Roosevelt needed leadership for the Maritime commission. He handled American shipping interests as he had han-

Speaking of Sports Former Greats Will Coach in International

By GEORGE A. BARCLAY

OLD faces will be seen in new places when the International league opens its 1938 season. Names that made sports' headlines a decade ago in the baseball big show will be on the team rosters.

You'll recognize a good many diamond heroes of yesteryear among the managers and coaches. Restoration of an old league rule permitting each manager to enlist a coach has opened jobs for some. Vacancies in the managerial ranks have spelled opportunity for others.

There's Jim Bottomley, for instance, who will manage the Syracuse team. A standout when he played first for the St. Louis Cardinals in the world's championship days of the twenties, he finished his major league career as a coach for the St. Louis Browns. Now he's getting his chance as a manager. Bottomley has signed old Hank Severid as coach.

Vets Get Chance

Over at Newark, Johnny Neun, old-time Boston Red Sox first baseman, is getting his managerial try-out. He succeeds Oscar Vitt, who moved up to the job of piloting the Cleveland Indians after producing a pennant winner. Neun will be aided by Benny Bengough. Travis Jackson's first assistant at Jersey City will be Alex Gaston. Steve O'Neill will have George Uhle with him at Buffalo.

The International league, holder of the "little world's championship" and the next step down the flight from the majors, symbolizes the way up or the way back for baseball people. It's the way up for flashy young players speeding toward the American or National league. It's the way back for old-time major leaguers.

Old names revive memories. When you think of Benny Bengough, you recall the Yankee stadium and the late Miller Huggins. Benny was a handy man behind the plate on the Yankees' mighty machine of 1926-'27 and '28.

Then there's Hank Severid, a name synonymous with the greatest team the St. Louis Browns ever produced, that of 1922. He was the battery mate of Urban Shocker.

Immortals of '22

The pair not only made history in St. Louis that year, along with George Sisler, Ken Williams, Baby Doll Jacobson, Wally Gerber and others, but they were reunited with the Yankees of 1926 and worked in the world series.

Steve O'Neill and Travis Jackson bring to mind old baseball history. When O'Neill, one of the all-time greats among catchers, was forced to resign from his manager's post for the Cleveland Indians last year, he caught on with Buffalo, not only as manager, but business manager as well. When Travis Jackson's legs went back on him the year before last, the Giants placed him with their farm at Jersey City.

Both O'Neill and Jackson will have old teammates with them. Once he was secure as business manager, Steve signed Uhle as his assistant. The pair have been buddies for years. When Uhle came up from the Cleveland sandlots to the Indians in 1919, O'Neill was an established catcher on the team.

Jackson will have Freddie Lindstrom with him as a player at Jersey City. A veteran in point of baseball service, but relatively young in years, Lindstrom was a buddy of Jackson's on the Giants when John McGraw was manager.

Toughest Sports Job

TAKE it from a man who has refereed almost 5,000 prize fights in the past 12 years—Art Donovan of New York—the toughest official job in any sport is that of third man in the ring.

Umpiring a ball game, officiating on the gridiron or being an arbiter in a basketball or tennis championship is a soft touch compared with refereeing a contest in the squared circle in Mr. Donovan's opinion.

"In any other sport," he says, "the fans never have any doubt about the result because the score tells the story. But in a fight there is no score and every fan no matter where he is sitting thinks his eyesight, judgment, knowledge of boxing and experience are keener than those of the man in the ring with the fighters.

"No two people look at a fight in the same way. Suppose some Fancy Dan lands six light taps that wouldn't muss a baby's hair on the other fellow's face and the other fellow—a rough, tough guy—lands a terrific right hook under the heart. How would you score the result? In my book the fellow who does the most damage is the fellow who wins.

"What I mean is that a man like Jack Dempsey might almost kill an opponent with three solid punches. He might take a dozen feather duster taps just to get a chance to land one solid wallop and with that punch he'd do more damage than he'd receive from a hundred jabs."

Dodgers' Renaissance

ON THE strength of the high priced purchase of First Baseman Dolph Camilli from the Phillies recently, Larry McPhail may yet make something out of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

The acquisition of a left-hand pull-hitter like Camilli who should be a "natural" for the Ebbets Field right field target may rouse the daffiness boys to a new and amazing habit of winning some ball games. But the most astonishing thing about the whole transaction is the fact that the Dodgers are said to have parted with $60,000 in cash to get Camilli—an unheard of sum in Flatbush history.

Whether McPhail made a wise move or not will be apparent in the turnstiles after the season gets well under way. The factional battle in the Brooklyn management disgusted the fans and made them stay away. Now with McPhail making gestures of reconstruction, the fans may be lured back again.

Brooklyn has always been one of the best franchises in the major leagues. The fans are rabid and loyal. They do not demand a pennant winner. They want a fighting ball club. They also like a club that can go out and twist the noses of Bill Terry's Giants once in a while. If they get that they'll be more than satisfied.

MacPhail will try to give them that even if he does make a mistake or two.

Here and There—

JOE GORDON, the young man the Yankees have stationed at second base to replace Tony Lazzeri, has no doubts about his fielding ability. He says he doesn't know how well he'll hit, but believes he'll field the position acceptably. . . . Tommy Henrich, rookie outfielder of the Yanks, collected $30,000 for his 1937 services. He pocketed a $20,000 bonus for signing with Ruppert, received a contract estimated to pay between $5,000 and $6,000 for the 1937 season and got a cut of $5,836 from the World's series. . . . Approximately $2,000,000 in prizes have been paid in ABC tournaments. . . . Bill Clemensen, Pittsburgh's rookie pitcher, is a cousin of Larry Doyle, former Giant second baseman. . . . Barney Ross is a billiard enthusiast and a better than average cue welder. . . . Jim Tipton, Alabama guard, will be graduated from the school of aeronautical engineering in June and contemplates a career in the flying corps. . . . The Yankees' scouting system is said to cost Jake Ruppert $100,000 a year. . . . HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

Why Not Fix Those Sagging Springs?

SPRINGS in furniture seldom break. The twine that holds them does break and webbing wears out throwing the springs out of position.

To set the springs you will need a ball of twine and a needle such as used by the upholsterer, enough webbing to replace the old, tacks 5/8-inch long with large heads, a block of wood for stretching the webbing, a tack hammer and a tack lifter. Remove the cover from the seat carefully so that it may either be used again or serve as a pattern. Most of the padding may also be used. Observe how each layer of material is fastened in place, so that you may put it back the same way.

Remove the springs and all old tacks. Tack the first strip of webbing to one edge of the bottom of the frame, letting the end extend 1/2 inch beyond the edge, then fold the end over the first tacks and tack again as at A. Draw the webbing across the frame using the block of wood as a lever to stretch webbing taut as at B. When all the strips have been stretched and tacked across the frame one way, stretch strips of webbing across the other way weaving these over and under the first ones as at C. Now, sew the bottom of each spring to the webbing with the upholsterer's twine and curved needle as shown in this diagram.

Next, turn the frame right side up, drive tacks part way in along the edges; then tie the springs across each way with upholsterer's twine as shown in diagram C. The twine is tied to the tacks and to each spring and regulates the height of the springs—the outside edges usually being lower than the center to make a rounded top. When the springs are regulated evenly, drive the tacks in; then replace burlap or muslin coverings and padding.

Muscular Rheumatic Pains

It takes more than "just a salve" to draw them out. It takes a "counter-irritant" like good old Mustrale—soothing, warming, penetrating and helpful in drawing out the local congestion and pain when rubbed on the aching spots.

Muscular lumbago, soreness and stiffness generally yield promptly. Better than the old-fashioned mustard plaster, Mustrale has been used by millions for 30 years. Recommended by many doctors and nurses. All druggists'. In three strengths: Regular Strength, Children's (mild), and Extra Strong.

TIPS to Gardeners

Plant With Care

EXERCISE care in planting and also in preparing to plant.

Though soil may be rich, it will not produce as it should unless it is prepared thoroughly.

A primary consideration in planting is to have the soil favorably moist; damp, but not wet. If circumstances demand that you plant when the ground is dry, moisten trenches or drills before dropping the seed.

To retain moisture after planting, cover seeds immediately with fine earth and press down firmly.

Harold Coulter, vegetable expert of the Ferry Seed Institute, advises that temperature be considered at the time of planting. Too high a temperature is often as detrimental to seed germination as one too low. A temperature between 65 and 75 degrees is most favorable.

Soil must be loose so seedling sprouts can push through, and roots develop. Where the soil forms a heavy crust, it may sometimes be broken sufficiently to let seedlings through by gently pricking the soil with a rake.

Soil Conservation Notes

The members of the Iosco County Agriculture Conservation Committee, including Agricultural Agent, received an explanation of the program of the 1938 Farm Act at the district meeting at Bay City on March 18, 1938.

The new program has these aims:
1. Maintaining farm income.
2. Consumer protection through plentiful but not wasteful production of food and fiber.
3. Soil conservation.

Acres allotted to each farm will be made in the immediate future so that each farm will have an acreage of crops that will result in ample production plus a reasonable reserve under normal conditions. Provisions are made in the new Farm Program, that for years of unusually large yields resulting in a surplus of basic farm crops, that this surplus may be stored on farms until needed by increased consumption, export or crop failure.

Holding this surplus on farms in years of large yields should result in prices, received by the farmer and paid by the consumer, that will be more constant and fair.

Each farm will have a soil building goal encouraging the carrying out of good soil management practices designed to maintain and rebuild the nation's wealth of productive soil.

School Notes

High School

The local contest for public speaking was held at the school building on Friday, March 18. The contestants spoke in the following order: Orations, Norma Musolf, "What the American Youth Must Conquer"; Frieda Ross, "Aftermath"; Marguerite McLean, "The United States and Peace"; John Katterman, "The United States' Problem." Declamations, Dorothy Blust, "Liberty of Man, Woman, and Child"; Kathleen Davis, "The Task of Youth"; Richard Zollweg, "The Call to Arms." Extemporaneous speaking, Lucille DePott, "Preparedness"; Joy Smith, "The Cost of War"; Jo Ann Tinker, "Youths Movement Toward World Peace." The judges of the contest were: Misses Turnbull and Harwood of the East Tawas High School, and Superintendent Laughlin of the Alabaster Schools. The winners all received two first places. They were: Norma Musolf in orations, Dorothy Blust in declamations, and Lucille DePott in extemporaneous speaking. The winners will compete in the sub-district contest at Harrisville. We all wish to extend them congratulations and good luck in the coming contest.

April sixth and seventh are the dates set by Mr. Ives for a benefit show to be sponsored by the Tawas City High School. The picture was to have been "Judge Hardy's Children" with Lewis Stone and Mickey Rooney, but word was received Monday that this picture had been cancelled for that date. Mr. Ives informs us, however, that he will obtain the best picture available for the above dates. Let's boost this show in order that there will be a full house each night. Mr. Ives has promised a very liberal commission and so the students should show how much they appreciate his generosity.

The Seniors cleared $9.76 on their cake sale Saturday. This money will be used to help defray Commencement expenses and to make the Class Trip to Niagara Falls.

A representative of the Business Institute of Saginaw called at the building Monday afternoon and permitted the seniors to have the pleasure of seeing three moving pictures. The pictures were: "The Private Secretary," "Your Tomorrow," and "This Changing World."

The scholastic averages of the seniors for the past three and one-half years were released Tuesday and the figures showed Marguerite McLean leading. Second place went to Myrton Leslie, followed by Frieda Witzke and Lucille DePott. In winning the honor of being Valedictorian of her class, Marguerite earned an average 3.60. Myrton became Salutatorian with an academic record of 3.51 for his average of three and one-half years. Frieda Witzke had an average of 3.37 and Lucille DePott was fourth with 3.33.

Leland Britting brought some copies of the "National Geographic Magazine" for our library. We were especially interested in the copy that shows so many pictures of Michigan.

Katheryn Westcott brought a bouquet of pussy willows.

The fifth grade geography class has been interested in a project of the possessors of U. S. Maps and outlines of the most important possessions were made.

Health Notes

The one greatest factor in the eradication of water-borne disease has been the successful effort put forth by cities to supply pure, wholesome water to its inhabitants. Where surface water from lakes or streams has been utilized for municipal supplies, we usually find mechanical filtration aided by chlorination employed to purify it for domestic use. This method of rendering water eliminated typhoid and cholera in large cities.

These diseases are now more apt to be found in rural communities as far as water supplies are concerned. We sometimes find that public or semi-public pumps contribute to the incidence of typhoid. Where such is the case, extremely shallow wells, open dug wells, undrained frost-pits, and pumps that require priming are usually at fault. In lime stone areas deeper wells may frequently become contaminated.

The best method of protecting the public or private handpump well is to allow the casing to protrude above the surface of the ground and fit the drop pipe to the pump and inside the casing. The pump and casing then make a water tight connection by bolting the pump and casing together or by screwing them tight.
