Council Will Vote on Sewer Rentals May 2

Mayor John Coyle presided over his first meeting of the common council last Monday night. In addition to routine business, such as auditing bills and the hearing of reports of the various committees, various phases of the work of the past year were reviewed and a tentative program was discussed.

Included in the discussion was the sewer rental proposal which was to have been voted on at this meeting. The matter was deferred until the next regular meeting, Monday, May 2.

This matter has been discussed by the council from time to time during the past year, and it has been about decided that collecting rentals for the use of the sewer would be an equitable means of handling the matter. It is estimated that the average charge would be in the neighborhood of $3.50 per year to the domestic users.

The average monthly cost of operating the sewer system at the present time is about $30.00 per month and with the addition in the northeastern part of the city put in operation the average cost will increase to nearly $50.00 per month.

The council would like to hear the opinions of the citizens of Tawas City concerning this step and on Monday evening, May 2nd all citizens interested should be present at the council meeting.

Detroit Man Buys

H. E. Friedman Store

Harry Koblin of Detroit, has purchased H. E. Friedman's dry goods store. The business will be opened in about ten days.

For more than 60 years the Friedman family has been in this city and their stores have been widely known throughout this section of Michigan. The original store was founded here in 1878 by the late M. E. Friedman. On his retirement and sale of the business to C. L. McLean and Company, his son, H. E. Friedman, man opened the present business. Born in the business here, Mr. Friedman has acquired a wide friendship and many of these friends have expressed their regret at his decision to retire from the mercantile business.

"Poor health during the past year has made it impossible for me to do justice to the business and so I am disposing of it," said Mr. Friedman today. "I am not leaving the city. I have traveled pretty well around the world, but I have found no place that suits me as well as Tawas City. I am building an office here on Lake street and plan to operate in real estate. For the present I am continuing my office at the store."

FEDERAL AID MAKES PROJECT PRACTICAL

Would Cost Whittemore Only $400.00 Per Year

Next Monday Whittemore will vote on a proposal to build a community building. For many years that city has been handicapped with the lack of a community center and it has been the aim of many of its citizens for a long time that such an advantage should be provided. This ambition is quite certain to be realized now for Federal aid brings it within reach of the city.

The government will provide a fund of $10,000, the balance necessary for constructing the building, should the proposal carry, will be paid at the rate of $400.00 per year for a period of 20 years. The tax rate on the assessed valuation of the city, which is about $140,000.00, will be very small.

Members of the Whittemore Business Men's association said yesterday that without a community building the schools alone would suffer a loss of more than $1000.00 a year in revenue from tuitions. They said that students go where they can enjoy basketball and other activities of the kind. The only available place for such activity is the Roll Inn hall. This will be used for other purposes after May 1. Because of the lack of a suitable building it will be necessary to hold the graduation exercises out of doors this year. This will be pleasant if the weather is fine, but who can tell what the weatherman may say. "This is our opportunity to do something for our community," they said. "The cost is small, but the benefit to our people will be great. Vote yes, Monday if you are interested in making our city a better place in which to live and a better community for all. To realize our hopes, it is necessary to raise $8,000.00. This will be payable at $400.00 per year, with a low rate of interest. Whittemore will vote yes."

Would Organize Boy Scout Troup Here

Every boy who has reached the age of 12 years is invited to the lobby of the Masonic Temple next Monday night at 7:30 o'clock to talk over the formation of a boy scout troop. Norman McLennan connected with the Government Forestry work and an Eagle Scout, has been secured as Scoutmaster, and John R. Forsten, Arthur Nelson and J. F. Mark as committee.

There is no limit to the age of a scout and men are invited as well as boys. The fathers of the boys are especially invited to attend the organization meeting since no boy can join a troop unless a parent or guardian approves.

It is hoped that the troop can be formed and be ready to function at once.

Plainfield Will Build New Township Hall

Wednesday's election at Hale will make it possible for Plainfield township to build a new hall and community building. The election authorized the sale of the old building and site. A more suitable location will be secured and a modern hall better filling the requirements of the community will be built.

SEVEN BILLION PLAN

President Proposes Huge Spending and Loans Program . . . Demands United Recovery Action

Because a federal statute prohibits taking of a foreman vote in the United States or its territorial waters, the crew of the German liner Hansa voted on the question of Austrian "anschluss" with Germany while the ship was in mid-ocean en route to New York. Here is the scene in the public room of the liner during the balloting. Seated is Purser Karl Zeplein, who registered the voters. Of the crew, 330 voted "jah"; six voted "nein," and one vote was voided.

Lend and Spend Plan

CONGRESS was asked by President Roosevelt to authorize the spending and lending of a grand total of seven billion dollars in a special message in which he set forth his new program for recovery and relief. Ignoring the expressions of various leaders in opposition to such vast expenditures, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"Our capacity is limited only by our ability to work together. What is needed is the will.

"The time has come to bring that will into action with every driving force at our command. And I am determined to do my share."

The President declared that the will to co-operate places "on all of us the duty of self-restraint," and that "there can be no dictatorship by an individual, or by a group in this nation save through division fostered by hate. Such division there must never be."

Three groups of measures were proposed. The first involves mainly additional appropriations for the coming fiscal year, as follows:

One billion two hundred and fifty million dollars for the Works Progress Administration; $175,000,000 for the Farm Security Administration; $75,000,000 for the National Youth Administration; $50,000,000 for the Civilian Conservation Corps, and the $1,500,000,000 already made available to the Reconstruction Corporation for lending to business enterprises.

In a second group of measures Mr. Roosevelt asked:

Three hundred million dollars for immediate expansion of the housing and slum-clearance work of the United States Housing Authority; $1,450,000,000 for public works loans and grants; an additional $100,000,000 for public roads; an additional $77,000,000 for flood control and reclamation projects already authorized and an additional $25,000,000 for federal buildings.

A third group listed by the Chief Executive referred to private credit. It involved destititization of $1,400,000,000 of gold and a reduction by the Federal Reserve Board of member bank reserve requirements which would add another $750,000,000 to the credit resources of the nation's banks. With these actions Mr. Roosevelt coupled a simplification of Security Commission regulations to expedite small-business financing.

Congressmen Vexed

WHILE committees of the senate and house were still trying to reconcile the widely differing versions of the tax bill passed by the two houses, President Roosevelt sent to the chairmen a long letter urging retention of the tax on undistributed profits, which had been eliminated by the senate. Many members of congress thought the Chief Executive was intimating that he would veto the bill if this feature were omitted. That would leave in effect the present law carrying a severe tax which has been widely attacked as one of the causes of the prevailing business depression.

The intervention by Mr. Roosevelt at this time and in this manner was considered unprecedented and aroused many expressions of amazement and indignation, especially among the senate conferees. Senator Pat Harrison, their leader and the chairman of the senate finance committee, obviously displeased, said:

"The President is entitled to his views. Of course, he accords to every one else the same right to theirs.

"The views expressed in his letter do not coincide with the sentiment expressed by the overwhelming majority of the senate. My views are well known and need not be repeated again in detail.

"The senate conferees will insist in conference on the amendments adopted in the senate.

"I believe that the repealing of the undistributed profits tax and the modifications of the capital gains tax, as adopted by the senate, will help business."

At the close of his letter the President said:

"The repeal of the undistributed profits tax and the reduction of the tax on capital gains to a fraction of the tax on other forms of income strike at the root of fundamental principles of taxation.

"Business will be helped, not hurt, by these suggestions."

New French Government

FRANCE has a new government headed by Edouard Daladier who succeeded Leon Blum as premier after the fall of Blum's Popular Front. Daladier's cabinet is the first wholly nonrevolutionary one since the leftist landslide of 1936. Not one of his ministers is even pink, and there are several outright conservatives. Most significant of his selections is Georges Bonnet, former ambassador to the United States, as foreign minister. His choice for this key post means synchronization of French foreign policy with that of Great Britain, the opening of negotiations with Mussolini and complete abandonment of the Spanish republic in its war with Franco's insurgents.

Blum was thrown out because he asked broad powers to rule by decree, but the parliament acceded to a similar demand by Daladier, and then adjourned until May 1, leaving Daladier with practically dictatorial powers to deal with the nation's financial and economic problems.

The new premier started immediately on efforts to end the wave of strikes, which were really based on political motives. First he obtained a settlement of the strikes in the nationalized aviation factories, offering a pay increase in exchange for longer hours. He then promulgated by decree a law making a secret ballot obligatory in every factory where conflicts arise. If a majority of the workers decide for a strike, they must evacuate the factory, which then would be "neutralized" pending arbitration. If, however, the strike is rejected by a majority, the armed forces of the nation will be at the disposal of the employers to keep the plant operating.

Horner Is Winner

GOV. HENRY HORNER won his second great victory over the Chicago Kelly-Nash machine in the Illinois Democratic primaries. Almost all his candidates were nominated, and the governor appears to be now in complete control of the party in his state. His co-boss is State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney of Chicago.

The triumph of Horner attracted nation-wide attention. It even led to a proposal that he be the Democratic party for President in 1940. This boomlet was launched in congress by Representative L. F. Arnold, Democrat, of Illinois.

Hitler's Big Victory

FEWER than 465,000 Germans and Austrians had the courage to vote "no" in the plebiscite on Germany's annexation of Austria. Nearly 49,000,000 qualified voters went to the polls and gave their approval of the "anschluss," and thus Adolf Hitler scored a tremendous victory, greater than even his lieutenants had expected.

"This is the proudest hour of my life," said the Fuehrer when told of the vote, and the Nazi leaders all were jubilant, and with reason. They said the demonstration of German unity showed it was time to liberate "our Sudeten German friends in Czechoslovakia," and that they were ready to obey Hitler's orders blindly.

It was forecast in Berlin that Hitler would proceed at once to expand and modernize the Austrian army and strengthen Austria's frontier defenses. And Vienna believed the anti-Jewish program would be intensified.

Jones Ready to Loan

JESSE JONES, chairman of the RFC, now has $1,500,000,000 to lend to business men, states and cities, and he asked the bankers of the nation to turn over to his corporation the loan applications they cannot meet.

"The security put up by borrowers must be reasonable," he declared, "but naturally we expect to make loans which the banks consider slow, frozen or unliquid."

Jones said he expected the loans would make capital investments more attractive and would also forestall sacrifice disposals of surplus stocks. In his insistence on "reasonable" security, however, he warned that "we're not going to lend all the money in the country."

No Peace for Labor

ANY lingering hopes that the American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization would end their civil war were dispelled by John L. Lewis' announcement that the C. I. O. was to be made a permanent organization, probably under another name. To bring this about a convention of the 39 Lewis unions will be held in the fall. The time and place were left to a committee consisting of Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman, newly elected vice chairman of C. I. O.

The heads of the C. I. O. unions, hearing congress might adjourn by May 14, adopted a resolution declaring "that our 4,000,000 members will necessarily have to consider it a dereliction of duty and betrayal of labor for congress to agree to adjourn prior to enactment of a complete legislative recovery program."

Wheat Allotments

THE agricultural adjustment administration announced it had allotted 62,500,000 acres to 42 wheat producing states under the 1938 farm program.

Individual acreage allotments will be based on planting and diversion during the past ten years.

Farmers who comply with acreage allotments will receive benefit payments of 12 cents a bushel for the average yield on the allotted acreage. A penalty tax of 90 cents a bushel on acreage in excess of allotments will be deducted from any benefit payments due farmers.

This year, the AAA said, no deductions will be made for exceeding wheat allotments if co-operating farmers reduce other soil depleting crops so as not to exceed the total soil-depleting allotment for his farm.

Acreage allotments for principal wheat producing states included: Iowa, 456,037; Kansas, 12,519,879; Minnesota, 1,609,218; Nebraska, 3,446,075; North Dakota, 9,431,355; South Dakota, 3,345,403.

1938 May See Comeback of Sports Flops

By GEORGE A. BARCLAY

WHILE Lloyds of London wouldn't give you any odds on it, there is a good chance that 1938 may be the year of the big comebacks in sports—a sort of retribution time, when the lads who stumbled last year or the year before will pick up their feet and overtake those who passed them in the stretch.

Take a fast inventory and you'll find that most of the lads on the comeback trail are making a fairly good showing up to the present.

For instance, Max Baer whipped Tommy Farr decisively and an-

Cage Game Brakes

BASKETBALL's racehorse speed that some authorities regarded as detrimental to the athletes' health will be slowed down a bit next season by two brakes applied recently by the rules committee of the National Association of Basketball Coaches meeting in Chicago.

The coaches increased the permissible number of time-outs for the college game to five and provided for optional use of four ten-minute periods, instead of the usual twenty-minute halves.

For high school games a new rule on ties will make the first overtime a "sudden death" period, for the first score made will decide the game. This will eliminate possibly harmful long-drawn out overtime games. While no extra time-outs were added to the high school game, officials were instructed to take an official timeout in the second and fourth quarters, provided no time has been called during the first four minutes of play by either team.

Among additional rule changes approved for the college game were: optional use of a four-foot instead of a two-foot out of bounds margin behind the face of backboards and the barring of substitutions after a goal is made until the ball is back in play.

The outer half of the foul circle was exempted from present provisions of the "three second" rule in the case of a player who does not have possession of the ball. The change eliminates last year's penalty for lingering in the area by players without the ball. The rule remains unchanged in regard to players having the ball.

He Threw 'Em Fast

WHO was the speediest pitcher you ever watched throw a baseball?

Was it "Smoky Joe" Wood, Bob Feller or "Fireball" Mungo? Or was it Lefty Grove, Dazzy Vance or Ed Walsh?

All these lads have or had plenty of "swift," but take it from Al Schacht, the baseball clown who is really serious in this instance, he still hasn't spotted a pitcher, rookie or veteran who can throw a baseball as fast as Walter Johnson used to.

For years Al has been making the rounds every spring working out with different teams and he has been watching the young pitchers, searching for the easy, flowing mo-

They May Be Right

Schoolboy Rowe vows he will pitch the Detroit Tigers to the American league pennant if he can get some help from the rest of the pitching staff. Dizzy Dean says he will show Branch Rickey that he is still the greatest pitcher in baseball. Max Schmeling declares he will regain the heavyweight title now held by Joe Louis.

If you've been following Dizzy this spring you will note that he has made a real start. Above all he is serious for perhaps the first time in his life, and regardless of his quirks, 80 per cent of the managers in either league would like to have him on the payroll. He's about as handy with a baseball as anybody in the big time and if he really settles down to business he can be the most valuable pitcher in the National league.

As for the Cubs, they really may make it this time. Tony Lazzeri, who has played against the Giants in the last two world series will tell you that the Cubs have a better team today, man for man, than Bill Terry's outfit and he can see no reason why they shouldn't come through. A lot of people wonder why they didn't win the last two pennants.

With Max Baer, as with Dizzy Dean, the thing that will really count in the comeback effort is taking his game seriously. From all reports he has cut out the night clubs and the clowning.

Baer Can Punch

Max can really punch and take it. His best chance at regaining the championship is via Max Schmeling. If Schmeling should knock Joe Louis out, then Baer might be able to club the German into a count of ten once more, because he can beat anyone he thinks he can whip and he is fully convinced that Schmeling is his meat.

A lot of fight fans are convinced that Schmeling can repeat his former win over Joe Louis by means of that right cross and that's pretty good logic, since the best way to gauge the future is by means of the past. These fans will back their beliefs to the extent of even money. As far as Louis is concerned, he hasn't looked any too impressive lately.

To be sure, he has only had to dispose of set-ups like Nathan Mann and Harry Thomas and maybe he hasn't taken these tune-up bouts any too seriously. But when he gets in the ring with Schmeling again he will have to show considerably more than he did in their 1936 engagement if he wants to remain boss of the heavyweight division.

Here and There

THE consensus of opinion is that "Slingin' Sammy" Baugh, recently transferred to Columbus by the St. Louis Cardinals will eventually stick to football. Training camp verdict was that he'll never be a big league hitter, a difficulty which has beset other gridiron immortals like Jim Thorpe who tried baseball. But Sammy should worry. He's certain of at least $15,000 a year from the Washington Redskins for throwing forward passes in the fall . . . Joe Louis, whose Horatio Alger career led from an Alabama cotton field to the world's heavyweight championship, has earned almost $1,000,000 in the prize ring since 1934 . . . New York's three major league ball clubs, the Yankees, Giants and Brooklyn Dodgers, will advertise the 1939 world's fair with blue and orange emblems attached to the sleeve of each player's uniform.

When "Goose" Goslin signed a contract with Washington, it marked the third time the former Detroit outfielder has been a member of the Senators.

Money and Patronage

Earlier, I mentioned some dangerous phases of the bill. Those phases concern federal money and federal patronage. Patronage, pap projects, as the thing is now broadcast.

At the outset, the bill contained provisions for placing the interstate commerce commission under political control. That would provide political control of the railroads—and railroad rates. Politicians have wanted to get fingers in that pie for half a century. Outbursts against that were terrific and it was eliminated. Provisions which would have permitted political control of the securities and exchange commission also were sidetracked. But there remained provisions which would have destroyed the general accounting office and the civil service commission. The first named agency decides whether congressional appropriations have been spent or are being spent according to law. The second has been the defender of the merit system in government. It has fought off political spoilsmen successfully until recent years.

Had these two provisions remained in the bill and if it had passed congress, Mr. Roosevelt, or any succeeding President, would have had direct control of spending billions of dollars, ordinary government expenses, relief, public works, grants to cities and states—all of the money. And reference must be made to political appointments for the spending of this money because they go hand in hand. There you have executive control that could perpetuate any kind of a political machine; Pendergast, in Kansas City, or the Kelly-Nash machine in Chicago, or Guffey in Pennsylvania, had to be in league with the White House in Washington or sink, if the President had the control that was proposed.

In summation, then, it seems proper to say that Democrats are breaking away from the New Deal faction in a more definite manner than ever before. I firmly believe we shall see reprisals against many of them; I believe, too, we will see some who voted against the reorganization bill come crawling back for presidential favors in order to gain re-election, and I think we saw in the reorganization bill defeat, the beginning of the end of the New Deal in control of American national policies.

Rebuke for Roosevelt

THE greatest political defeat President Roosevelt has had since he entered the White House. Perhaps, indeed, by killing the government reorganization bill, the house of representatives administered to Mr. Roosevelt the most stern rebuke he ever has had since he entered politics. That licking has been given now and we are, or ought to be, concerned with its meaning because the story contains valuable information.

First, I think it ought to be said that Mr. Roosevelt was made a victim of his own brand of politics. It is quite absurd to say that the bill to reorganize the federal government would have given him dictatorial powers. It did add to his powers, but he has powers now which would let him be a dictator if he felt that he dared to use them. So we can dismiss that dictatorship phase of the controversy insofar as its merit is concerned. We can dismiss it, however, as a factor, indeed, the factor, that brought about the President's crushing defeat.

There is no use in hemming and hawing about the real issue that was decided in the house vote, which was by the narrow margin of 204 to 196. That issue was the combined fear and dislike of Mr. Roosevelt against confidence in and blind following of Mr. Roosevelt. In other words, it was the climax of a fight that has been going on since Mr. Roosevelt attempted to force legislation granting him six additional appointments to the Supreme Court of the United States, an accumulation of undercurrent bitterness.

The real importance of the reorganization bill, therefore, lay in the fact that it was a political football, a vehicle. It was being carried by Mr. Roosevelt's faction in congress—and eventually was booted off of the field by those who dislike or distrust him.

The reason I feel so certain about the real issue in the case is that a Democratic congress only a few short years ago almost gave the then President, Herbert Hoover, the same powers sought by Mr. Roosevelt now. Further, an overwhelmingly Democratic - New Deal congress did give Mr. Roosevelt virtually the same powers in 1933, and he neglected to use them. The question, therefore, strikes me as being clear cut. In fact, it is made to appear that there is no question. A majority of congress—representatives and senators—were looking for a chance to show the President they again want to be congress and not a rubber stamp.

The strangest thing about this battle was that a mistake by the President provided the basis for a new courage on the part of congress. I said above that it was absurd for anyone to believe the reorganization bill would make Mr. Roosevelt dictator. It would have done some dangerous things which I shall discuss later in this article, but the dictator phase was rather silly. Yet, it was the conviction of hundreds of thousands of persons that the legislation would make Mr. Roosevelt dictator that licked the bill. And paradoxically, Mr. Roosevelt caused them to believe that. His own act was responsible for that conviction.

It will be remembered that Mr. Roosevelt was in Warm Springs, Ga., on vacation when the bill was passed by the senate. It was obvious from the close call it had in the senate, even after certain concessions had been made, that it was confronted with trouble in the house. Mr. Roosevelt told newspaper correspondents at Warm Springs of his gratification that the "senate could not be purchased by misrepresentation." That provoked a row in the senate. Sen. Hiram Johnson of California told the senate he would be "wanting in courage if he did not resent" such statements. Others spoke as frankly.

The congressional record for that day contains several emphatic observations to the effect that Mr. Roosevelt was a treachering closely to the edge of constitutional rights. The Constitution, it will be recalled, assures the right of petition. It says that congress must make no law that will interfere with the right of petitioning the government.

That was just a flurry, however, when compared with that storm which was to break next day. According to authenticated reports, Mr. Roosevelt informed the correspondents in his party at Warm Springs that he would have an important announcement to make very late that night. They were enjoined to say nothing; they were not to let their home offices know that an important announcement was coming. In the middle of the night—between midnight and one o'clock—the correspondents were given the impor-tion that made Johnson his idol. He has just about decided that he'll never find it.

Schacht, who was a team-mate of Johnson for years on the Washington club, gets vehement on the subject. He asks:

"Why do people keep talking about who was the greatest pitcher when anybody with any sense knows there was never one even close to Walter? Ask any man who ever tried to hit that fast ball of his."

"When I look at some of these guys they call fast-ball pitchers these days it hands me a laugh. Why, Johnson threw a ball harder when he was loafing along behind a one-run lead than anybody else ever has."

Cage Game Brakes

BASKETBALL's racehorse speed that some authorities regarded as detrimental to the athletes' health will be slowed down a bit next season by two brakes applied recently by the rules committee of the National Association of Basketball Coaches meeting in Chicago.

The coaches increased the permissible number of time-outs for the college game to five and provided for optional use of four ten-minute periods, instead of the usual twenty-minute halves.

For high school games a new rule on ties will make the first overtime a "sudden death" period, for the first score made will decide the game. This will eliminate possibly harmful long-drawn out overtime games. While no extra time-outs were added to the high school game, officials were instructed to take an official timeout in the second and fourth quarters, provided no time has been called during the first four minutes of play by either team.

Among additional rule changes approved for the college game were: optional use of a four-foot instead of a two-foot out of bounds margin behind the face of backboards and the barring of substitutions after a goal is made until the ball is back in play.

The outer half of the foul circle was exempted from present provisions of the "three second" rule in the case of a player who does not have possession of the ball. The change eliminates last year's penalty for lingering in the area by players without the ball. The rule remains unchanged in regard to players having the ball.

WHO was the speediest pitcher you ever watched throw a baseball?

Was it "Smoky Joe" Wood, Bob Feller or "Fireball" Mungo? Or was it Lefty Grove, Dazzy Vance or Ed Walsh?

All these lads have or had plenty of "swift," but take it from Al Schacht, the baseball clown who is really serious in this instance, he still hasn't spotted a pitcher, rookie or veteran who can throw a baseball as fast as Walter Johnson used to.

For years Al has been making the rounds every spring working out with different teams and he has been watching the young pitchers, searching for the easy, flowing mo-

"Death in the Grandstand"

By FLOYD GIBBONS
Famous Headline Hunter

HELLO EVERYBODY:

Here's Harold T. Leach of Newark, N. J., with a story for us—the story of how he went out looking for thrills, and got one he never expected. The sort of thrill Hal was looking for was the kind you watch from the grandstand. He didn't expect to participate in any of the doggone things himself. But—well—before he knew it, Old Lady Adventure was climbing right up into that grandstand after him.

A dirty trick on the part of Old Lady Adventure, sez you? Well, let's not be too hasty in judging the old dame that packs the thrill bag.

As a matter of fact, she played not one trick, but two, on Hal Leach on that bright Sunday morning in 1912 and Hal swears that one of those tricks saved his life.

Now let's look over the first trick the old girl played on Hal. Hal set out that Sunday morning to go to the motorcycle races which were being run on a wooden track on South Orange avenue. And right from the beginning it looked to Hal as if the whole trip were hoodooed. He wanted to get to the track early and get a certain seat that was a favorite of his, right down in the front row and just above the tent where the riders rested, but one thing and another turned up to delay him.

Couldn't Get His Favorite Seat.

He started from home late, and just missed a trolley. He had to wait ten minutes for another one, and then, at the point where he had to transfer to the old South Orange avenue line, doggoned if he didn't just miss another car. He got to the track before the races started, but too late to get his favorite seat in the front row. He had to be content with one right back of it in the second row.

And maybe he didn't cuss his luck over that. He didn't know then that it was Old Gal Adventure that was putting the jinx on him.

There was a great crowd at the track that day. Every seat in the stands was filled before the races started, and the overflow of the mob was jamming the bull pen. Excitement was running high, for there were some doggone good races being run, and there was one particular event that everybody was interested in.

That was a race between Eddie Hasha and Johnnie Albright. A great rivalry had sprung up between these two. They were the fastest riders on the track, and this race was to decide which of them was the champ. There were three other riders in the race—just to make it more spectacular. But nobody was paying much attention to those other three gypsies. Every pair of eyes in the place were focused on Hasha and Albright.

Last Ride for These Racers.

It was a big day for Eddie Hasha and Johnnie Albright—and well it might be. For those two fellows were setting out on their last ride.

The race was a corker, right from the start. Hasha took the lead and held it. Johnnie Albright was right behind him. The other three riders trailed along in the rear. Eddie had run up a lead of a hundred yards or so on Albright, when suddenly things began to happen.

There was a four-inch black line circling the track, above which the racers were not allowed to go. Beyond that line the track banked up to a perpendicular wall four feet high. Above that was a fence of heavy wire behind which the spectators sat. That was for their protection in case of accident. But there are times when even the best of protections fail to protect.

Hasha, still in the lead, was clipping it off at eight-five miles an hour, when suddenly he hit the deadline—that four-inch black line that went around the entire track. Immediately, the referee fired a gun, signalling a foul and ordering Eddie Hasha out of the race.

Hal Was in the Midst of Death.

But Eddie didn't stop. To the consternation of the crowd he kept right on going. His motorcycle whizzed right up that four feet of straight wall—right up the heavy mesh wire in front of the spectators—shot over the top of the fence and toppled into the grandstand, RIGHT WHERE HAL LEACH HAD WANTED TO SIT.

There followed the wildest ten seconds that Hal ever saw in his life. Hasha dived headlong into a timber upright that supported the grandstand roof, and was killed. His machine landed in the midst of a shrieking mob of race fans in the front row, and right in front of Hal. Its motor still going at top speed, it hopped crazily along that front row, killing and maiming as it went. Then it leaped high in the air, hurdled the wire fence again, and fell on top of Johnnie Albright as he sped on down the track in the lead of the other three riders.

Johnnie Albright was thrown from his motorcycle, and he was dead when they picked him up. Seven other men died in the grandstand from injuries they sustained when the motorcycle landed among them.

Says Hal Leach: "I helped lower the bodies down to the track, and then passed out of the picture—just from the shock—and was lowered down in my turn. Do you wonder why I get the shivers, even now, whenever a motorcycle dashes past me?"

Brides Sold by Weight

In some gypsy villages in Yugoslavia a gypsy brides are sold by weight, the sale being held when the girls reach a marriageable age, says Pearson's London Weekly. The average price is between 2 pence and 3 pence a pound, the higher price being paid for girls who can dance and sing as well as cook. To prevent cheating, the gypsy chief keeps the weighing scales under lock and key. The sale of girl brides is a recognized practice in Yugoslavia, but only in gypsy villages are their values assessed by weight.

Source of the Waltz

Three countries, France, Italy and Bavaria, want credit for the waltz. But it is from Germany the modern form comes. "Ach! du lieber Augustine" was the first German waltz tune.

Indian Pudding Ingredients

The ingredients in Indian pudding are corn meal, milk, eggs, spice, and usually molasses. This pudding can be boiled or baked. American pioneers used it, and it is a popular dessert.

First Act of Congress

Owing to the lack of a quorum, and the delay in organizing the new federal government, no bills were passed by the house and senate for nearly three months. The first law enacted was "an act to regulate the time and manner of administering certain oaths," and it was approved by President Washington on June 1, 1789. The second bill passed by both houses was "an act for laying a duty on goods, ware, and merchandise imported into the United States." This bill was approved by Washington on July 4 of the same year.

Kept Sacred Fires Burning

Fire was looked upon with awe by the early religious sects. In Rome, for example, there were vestal virgins charged with the duty of keeping the sacred fires burning in the temple of Vesta.

Emperor Is Sacred

Sovereignty, in the Japanese constitution, is the sacred manifestation of the emperor's political rights, as combined in the emperor "himself," who is "sacred" and "inviolable."

-WHAT WOULD GRANDPA SAY?

Granddaughters of American Millionaires Run Away With Titled Europeans, Taking Money With Them!

By JOSEPH W. LaBINE

Last December Countess Barbara Haugwitz Reventlow walked into a United States court at New York and renounced her citizenship. A few days later employees walked out of the F. W. Woolworth stores her grandfather founded, carrying signs which read:

"We like the United States, but want more pay . . . Babs with our money runs away!"

Meanwhile Uncle Sam's bookkeepers in Washington discovered that the former Barbara Hutton was depriving John Public of $30,000,000 in estate taxes. And citizens generally became aware that their nation places no restriction on export of American capital.

The late Frank Woolworth, who once went barefoot because he could afford no shoes, would probably snort at his granddaughter's behavior these past few years. On each of her two titled husbands she has settled $1,000,000 in cold cash. The first was Prince Alexis Mdivani, who also demanded $350,000 a year when she divorced him in 1935. The current choice, once-impoorished Count Haugwitz Reventlow, is more conservative.

Frank Woolworth is not the only self-made American who would snort. Another is the late Charley Manville, a Milwaukee tailor and Black Hills gold prospector who made millions from roofing and asbestos.

Only a few weeks after Countess Barbara renounced her citizenship, Mrs. Lorraine Manville Dresselhuys of Holland returned to New York for a brief visit, just long enough to take a similar step. The former Lorraine Manville is old Charley's granddaughter, and a sister of the notorious Tommy Manville whose blonde wives get him in the headlines periodically. And her cousin, the former Estelle Manville, is married to Count Folke Bernadotte of Sweden.

It's an Old Habit.

But Lorraine Manville and Barbara Hutton are not the first rich Americans to renounce their citizenship. It's a habit of social aspirants that dates back to the nineties, when Anna Gould, headstrong daughter of old Jay Gould and heir to $18,000,000 of his railroad holdings, automatically renounced her citizenship to marry Count Boni de Castellane in Paris.

The count spent $3,000,000 in American gold in five years and Anna divorced him. But a short time later her brother, Frank Jay Gould, formally abandoned his native flag for France.

Probably the most famous ex-Americans are the Astors, descendants of the German butcher's son who left New York for the great Northwest and made a fortune in fur trade. The Astors began going British in 1899 when William Waldorf Astor shipped for London and took his money with him. A few years later came his sons, Waldorf and John Jacob. The former married romantic Nancy Langhorne of Virginia in 1903, necessitating her renunciation of American citizenship. Today she is Lady Astor, a member of parliament!

It was in 1916 that old William Waldorf Astor went through an imposing ceremony that made him a baron, a title he'd been coveting for years. It meant that approximately $50,000,000 in New York land were controlled by a member of the English aristocracy.

John D.'s Grandchildren.

The late John D. Rockefeller was another self-made American magnate whose grandchildren married foreigners. Mrs. Max Oser, a Swiss citizen, received millions by way of her mother, Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick. Margaret Strong de Cuevas, daughter of the late

ABOVE: The late Frank W. Woolworth, who made the dime store millions now being taken abroad by his granddaughter, the former Barbara Hutton. LEFT: Barbara, herself, now the Countess Haugwitz Reventlow, shown with her husband on a recent visit to New York.

Mrs. Margaret Strong de Cuevas was John D. Rockefeller's favorite grandchild and she received $25,000,000 in his will. This was because Mrs. de Cuevas' mother, Bessie, was not living at the time old Rockefeller bestowed large sums on each of his children. In addition to this huge sum, Mrs. de Cuevas received more than $2,000,000 from her grandfather in 1919, and $100,000 when her grandmother died.

Married "Poorest Duke."

The list of Americans abroad is quite a bit longer. Close on the heels of William Waldorf Astor was Helena Zimmerman, daughter of the late Eugene Zimmerman, Cincinnati railroad magnate. She married the duke of Manchester in Paris in 1900. Known as the "poorest duke in England," he shared her $15,000,000 until she divorced him in 1931 to marry the earl of Kintore.

Mrs. Harry Simes Lehr, a native of Philadelphia, formally renounced her citizenship by marrying Lord Decies of London. Two months ago she informally repeated her renunciation by boasting in London that she would not live in New York on a bet.

Through all the romantic episodes of Huttons, Astors, Whitneys and Manvilles, the American government has sat stolidly, watching money pour swiftly into pockets across the sea.

The only satisfactory explanation of this exodus of the wealthy is that of social aspiration. Some maintain they live abroad to spare themselves from American taxes. The truth is that most European nations make greater assessments than the United States. Others claim they have flown to Europe to avoid publicity. In the former Barbara Hutton's case this may be true, but an equally wealthy and comely American girl—Doris Duke Cromwell—lives in her native land quite happily.

As for John Public, he doesn't care where the Manvilles, Huttons or Astors live. But he does like to see American dollars stay in American pockets.

are easy to follow and each includes a complete and detailed sew chart. So start right in, now, to discover how pleasant and economical it is to be your own dress-maker.

Dress With Jacket-Blouse.

Exactly the style you want for street wear, shopping trips and business. The jacket blouse is so attractive, with its puff sleeves, fitted waistline and saucy little plume. It can be worn with your spring suit skirt, too. Make it up in flat crepe for immediate wear and later in linen or pique, using all one color or a printed blouse and plain skirt, as pictured.

For Large Women.

A very graceful dress with slenderizing lines, thanks to the smooth shoulders, the cape sleeves, always flattering to plump arms, and the skirt that's narrow round the hips and slightly wide at the hem. Gathers beneath the raglan shoulders make the blouse soft and becoming. In georgette, flat crepe or polka dot silk, this will be your spring favorite. Later, during hot weather, it will be a cool joy in dotted Swiss or voile.

The Patterns.

1477 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 2 yards of 39-inch material for the jacket and 2 yards of 39-inch material for the skirt.

1499 is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. Size 36 requires 5 1/4 yards of 39-inch material. If contrasting collar is wanted, it requires 3/4 yard.

TIPS to Gardeners

General Garden Care

MOST flowers should have little or no artificial watering until they are at least half grown.

To get better and larger flower blossoms, cease watering when buds have formed.

For a continuous bloom, pick flowers regularly. This is most important with sweet peas and pansies, less so with petunias.

Avoid the common mistake of letting vegetables grow too large before picking.

Root crops—radishes, carrots, beets—are at their best when hardly half grown.

Pick peas just before pods fill out completely. Pick corn just at the "milk" stage, when the kernel, gouged with the finger nail, yields a milky juice. Use summer squash when they are small, just after the blossom has dropped off.

Certain other vegetables, of course, must be allowed to mature. Tomatoes should be ripened well on the vine, as should winter squash.

How the "Well-Dressed" Furniture Should Appear

This season—and every season—furniture should be kept fresh and gleaming! The home-maker owes it to her furniture—and the appearance of her home. Before it leaves the shop of the furniture dealer, before it is sold—good furniture is kept polished! The dealer continually gives it a "polish service," to maintain its rich appearance—keep the wood "alive!" He, who is an authority, regularly uses a good oil polish (the best is non-greasy, because it has a fine, light-oil base). He knows the importance of this—for selling furniture is his business—and on his shop floor, every piece of fine wood must be kept at its lustrous best! He knows, too, how vital it is to the finish, the very pores of the wood, to frequently apply a quality oil polish on the various suites and fine pieces! The effect of its frequent use on furniture is two-fold: It prevents drying-out and cracking—and it brings to the furniture a deep, lasting high-tone—that softens the wood, brings out all the natural beauty of the grain. All woodwork and furniture will remain "well-dressed," decorative, sparkling—if cared for periodically with a reputable light-oil polish!

HELP KIDNEYS

To Get Rid of Acid and Poisonous Waste
Your kidneys help to keep you well by constantly filtering waste matter from the blood. If your kidneys get functionally disordered and fail to remove excess impurities, there may be poisoning of the whole system and body-wide distress.
Burning, scanty or too frequent urination may be a warning of some kidney or bladder disturbance.
You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous; all played out.
In such cases it is better to rely on a medicine that has won country-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Use Doan's Pills. A multitude of grateful people recommend Doan's. Ask your neighbor!

How Sharks Are Trapped

In Torres sound, south of Papua, the natives trap sharks. The trap consists of a pile of empty, air-tight coconut shells joined together with a rope and attached to a canoe by a lengthy line. The native takes the shells in his canoe to the fishing ground and places them in the water after baiting them with a dead fish on a fire-hardened wooden hook. When the shark grabs the bait it attempts to dive, but the buoy-like action of the empty shells prevents it from doing so. The fish then dashes madly about, dragging trap and canoe along, until it becomes exhausted. Then, if the line is still holding, it is hauled in, speared and taken ashore.

Mafficking, Making Whoopee
Mafficking means to make whoopee, as the people of England did after Colonel Baden-Powell relieved Maffeking in South Africa, May 17, 1900, during the Boer war. The verb is derived from the name of the town and is pronounced the same way.

A "Frankenstein"

In a popular book, Frankenstein, was the name of the young student in chemistry and anatomy who created the monster. Frankenstein is a synonym for a man whose own works bring him to disaster or destruction. The monster of the romance bears no name, but the name of his creator has often been transferred to him, so that a "Frankenstein" has come also to signify, in popular usage, a being of the most appalling ugliness and brutality, having no trace of the moral sense whatever.

Hue, Indo-China, is notable for its royal tombs where rest the former emperors of the province of Annam. One of the principal tombs, that of Emperor Khai Dinh, took ten years to build. Like other royal burial plots this one rises in a series of terraces flanked by gardens, moats and patterned retreats. Inside a great temple, that tops a hill, is a figure of the emperor seated on a gold replica of his throne in the imperial palace. The walls are decorated with hunting scenes made of bits of inlaid colored glass.

300,000 new owners acclaimed the "thrifty 60" last year. Hundreds a day are buying it in 1938. Why?

Because it is priced low—includes essential equipment without extra charge—and goes farther between filling stations than any Ford car ever built. Owners all over the country report averages of 22 to 27 miles on a single gallon of gasoline.

But economy isn't all the story by any means. The Standard "60" is built with the same precision as the De Luxe "85," and has the same 112-inch wheelbase chassis. It is easy to look at and ride in

No Originals of the Bible

There are no actual original copies of the Bible, either the Hebrew Scriptures of the Old Testament or the New Testament. The American Bible society says that while the three most important and complete copies of manuscripts of the Bible are the Vaticanus (Fourth century), Sinaiticus (Fourth century), and the Alexandrinus (Fifth century), there have been since these were discovered numberless fragments of early copies of the Bible brought to light until there are several thousand fragments of the Greek, the Hebrew, or the two combined, which are worthy of serious consideration in a study of the original language.

Third Largest Island

The third largest island in the world is Baffin island, bowing only to Australia and Greenland. On it are four lakes, one as big as Lake Ontario. In winter, Eskimos build igloos on these lakes, fish for dinner through holes cut in their "parlor floors." Baffin bay, hardly ever free of ice, is navigable only between June and September. Hence the bay and island are a refuge for, and abound in whales, seals, polar bears, wolves, white and blue foxes. Though it was discovered in 1576, little more is known of the region than William Baffin recorded when he named it in 1616.

Crossing the Equator

The unwritten sea law that no one shall cross the Equator without being ducked is of ancient origin. Capt. Cook, H. M. Bark Endeavour, wrote in the log of his voyage of October, 1768: "Ceremony on this occasion practiced by all nations not omitted. Every one that could not prove upon the sea chart that he had crossed the line before was either to pay a bottle of rum or be ducked in the sea. The former case was the fate by far the greatest part on board. Several men chose to be ducked, and the weather was favorable for that purpose. That ceremony was performed on about 20 to 30, to the no small diversion of the rest."

SYNOPSIS

James Lambert tries in vain to dissuade his beautiful foster-daughter, Leonora, from marrying Don Mason, young "rolling stone." He tells her, "Unless a house is founded upon a rock, it will not survive." Leonora suspects the influence of her half-brother, Ned, always jealous of the girl since the day his father brought her home from the death of her mother, abandoned by her Italian baritone lover. Don arrives in the midst of the argument, and Lambert realizes the frank understanding between the two. Sitting up late into the night, Lambert reviews the whole story of Nora as a child, at boarding school, studying music abroad, meeting Don on the return trip. In the morning he delivers his ultimatum, to give Don a job with Ned for a year's show-down. When Nora suggests the possibility of running away with Don, Lambert threatens disinheritance. Don agrees to the job, but before a month is over, his nerves are jumpy, he cannot sleep at night, he is too tired to go out much with Don. Nora soothes him with her music. Nora grows quieter, and broods over Don, complains to her father of Ned's spying on him, and decides that rather than see Don's spirit broken, she will run away. She urges her father to put an end to the futile experiment. James Lambert is obstinate and angry. Lambert tells her that if Don and Nora will quit with him; that he will be through with her. He adds that if she tries of her bargain it will be useless to come to him for help. Later Don and Nora discuss the situation.

"For you, Nora! For you, of course, sweetheart. For me—Well, without you there would be nothing left, nothing at all. Don't cry, Nora. I've never made you cry before. It hurts me. Things will go better after this. I promise to buck up—take life more calmly—try to remember that nothing really matters if you don't despise me. The biggest part of the year is over now. We'll stick it out, as I said before. We must, you know."

Nora looked up, winking away the tears as she said gently: "We must try, of course. It would be so terrible to hurt Father. But it's the last small straw that breaks the camel's back, Don. Don't forget that."

CHAPTER IV

It seemed to Nora that things did go better for a time. Don appeared less tired. He even accompanied her to one or two informal parties with some show of enthusiasm; and was, according to their hostess, "a perfect life-saver" at a dinner given in honor of a renowned explorer, recently returned from the Arctic.

"The affair would have been a complete washout if your young man hadn't been here, Nora," she said with gratitude. "No one else present could talk intelligently with our lion on the subjects nearest his heart, you know."

That evening was something of a triumph to the girl. As she watched her lover conversing so easily and naturally with the guest of honor, comparing experiences, putting questions, answering others which the great man put to him, her eyes shone with happy pride. Even Ned, sitting across the table, was obviously impressed though he essayed to hide the fact. And Corinne, observing that others appeared to be listening with interest to "that queer boy Nora has taken up with," listened herself, and wondered if her ears deceived her when she heard the distinguished guest invite Don to dine with him next night.

"And can you tell me," she asked Ned petulantly as they rode toward home, "what a man like that can have in common with Don Mason?" Indeed, she had to repeat the question before her husband, who was deep in thought, roused himself to reply:

"Possibly he wants to book him for his next expedition."

Corinne brightened.

"I wish to goodness he would! Don could never resist such an opportunity; and an absence of that sort would settle Nora! Did you see that Kemp Corless acted extremely struck with her tonight? They say he's worth ten million."

Ned shrugged.

"I can't see our fastidious sister falling for a bald head and fifty years, my dear."

"She'd be a fool not to, with all that money into the bargain," Corinne retorted.

"Nora is a fool more ways than one," observed Ned with brotherly candor, "but she's perfectly aware that Dad'll never let her suffer from want of cash. And there's more to Don Mason than I supposed, Corinne. He's got uncommonly good manners, too. Did you notice—"

"Oh, yes, I noticed," broke in Corinne impatiently. "He simply monopolized the guest of honor, if you call that manners."

"It appeared to me," maintained her husband with honesty which would have astonished Leonora, "that the guest of honor was monopolizing Don!"

For a while there was silence, a thoughtful silence on the part of Corinne before she ventured: "I wonder if the man would dine with us if he understood that Don would be there."

Being not utterly blind to his wife's social ambitions, Ned threw her an ironic glance.

"Better not try, my dear," was his advice, "and save yourself a disappointment. I've heard he turns down almost everyone."

So things went better for a time. What Nora did not suspect was the heroic effort Don was making to conceal his unhappy state of mind. He was bitterly ashamed to have her know how let-down he really was—how intolerable the situation had become to him. Often he felt that could he talk freely—get the sense of rebellion at this way of living out of his system, it would ease the strain; but Nora was worried enough as it was, he argued. Why add to her troubles? Let her think, if she could, that he was at last becoming inured to this hectic existence which his fellow men regarded as the natural thing.

To Don, filled with spring wanderlust, the long days seemed interminable, and the office little better than a prison cell. There came an evening when he could not go to Nora for fear she would suspect the terrible unrest that had possession of him. Instead he tramped for miles into the country, trying to find peace from the stars—the cool of evening—the wild, sweet scent of growing things.

It was late when he turned his steps toward town. Peace had eluded him. He could not find it. Reaching a bridge he paused to rest a moment, gazing down into the infinite blackness of moving water. Peace must be there, he mused. Peace and coolness; release from this ghastly treadmill that men called Life. After all, did the cowards have the best of it? Or in that somewhere beyond did they look back regretfully, sorrowfully, wishing they'd played the game—wishing—

"Thinkin' about ending it all?" came a voice close at his side.

Don started guiltily, having been too lost in thought to hear approaching footsteps. Now the bright starlight showed him that a girl had spoken, her small, thin, pointed face looking up at him without fear, yet without boldness.

"Not seriously," he answered, as if there were nothing unusual in her question. "Is that what you were considering, this time of night?"

The girl shrugged, the cynical shrug of a bored flapper; an imitation, possibly, of some cheap actress of the screen.

"I tried it once," she confessed quite simply. "Honest I did; but a cop got in the way."

Don turned to look at her more closely, his interest rising.

"So you find life as desperate as that?" he questioned.

"Sometimes I do. Some days I don't care nothin' about livin'. Say!" she broke off suddenly, "have you got a girl—I mean a steady?"

He nodded, thinking how Nora would appreciate the appellation.

"But you ain't married. Anyone with half an eye could see it. You don't look tied."

"Don't I?" Don smiled at this description. "The truth is, I'm tied to a ledger—an immense and horrible black book chock full of figures that persist in dancing before my eyes when I want to sleep, and getting into the wrong columns day-times, just to be spiteful."

"You better be thankful they don't smell bad," the girl retorted. "I work in a dye house. Some days I can't hardly eat my lunch. How long you been goin' with your sweetie, anyhow?"

Don was beginning to enjoy himself. To be revealing his life history to an utter stranger, with no thought of the conventions, brought back the days of easy vagabondage that had once been his. Besides, this encounter would be something to tell Nora—something amusing. He answered, dropping with ease into the vernacular of his companion, a habit which endeared him to chance acquaintances: "We've been going together more'n a year now, suster."

"And you ain't tired of her?"

"Not so's you'd notice it!" grinned Don.

The girl drew in a breath which seemed, somehow, laden with discouragement.

"I bet she's got a lot o' swell clothes then, boy."

Not moving his head, Don turned his eyes a little. The moon had come from behind a bank of clouds, and he saw distinctly the much-washed, sleazy frock the girl was wearing. Even a patch under one arm was visible as she raised her elbows to the parapet, and, looking down into the dark water, repeated the statement she had just made: "I bet she's got a lot o' clothes."

Don said, a vision of Nora's silver slippers and gay chignons rising before him: "I'll say she has! But believe me, girl, I'd think as much of her without 'em."

"A lot you would!"

She laughed, a dreary, yet somehow brave attempt at mirth that hurt Don strangely.

"Maybe you think you would. Maybe you never seen her till she was all dolled up. I bet she don't work in no dye house anyway. What's her job?"

"She—" Don paused, then finished with sudden inspiration, "She plays—the piano, and—"

"The piano! Say, are you tryin' to kid me? The piano went out when the talkies come in, boy. Didn't you know that? I had a chum that could pound the ivories to beat the band. Played in a movie theater and dressed like she was Gloria Swanson. Why that girl had her nails fixed up in a beauty parlor every Saturday. Honest, I ain't kiddin'." (Don saw with pity the dyestained fingers clutching the rail.)

"And then the talkies come in and she lost her job. Tough luck, wasn't it? She worked in a bakery for a while after, but I guess she hated it most as much as I hate the dye house. I never see no one so crazy about playin' the piano. Used to play to herself nights after she come from work. But she lost her job again and had to sell the piano to pay room rent; and after that I guess she thought there was no use tryin' and . . ."

The girl's voice trailed off, her eyes seeking the water, and Don said: "What happened? What happened to her after that?"

"What would ha' happened to a girl like her?" Hopelessness deep as the water below them was in the answer. "She ain't respectable any more, that's all. My mother says she'll turn me out if ever she catches me talkin' to her again; but I ask you, honest, what could the girl do? Sometimes I donno as it pays to be respectable anyhow. I met Cora (she's the one I'm tellin' about) a day last winter when I was freezin', and b'lieve it or not, she was wearin' a fur coat!"

Don advised soberly: "I'd stay respectable just the same, sister, if I were you."

"And see my boy friend goin' with another girl because I ain't got a decent rag to wear when he takes me out?" she retorted furiously. "It ain't as if I could spend what I make on clothes, like some girls can. My old man don't work steady and I have to help my mother. Once last winter I saved ten dollars for a new dress. Thought it was safe under the newspaper in my bureau drawer; but—my old man smelt it out and took it. Ain't that a dirty trick to play on yer own kid?"

"I'll say it was!"

Don felt a consuming desire to lay violent hands on the "old man."

Stirred by a sudden, compelling impulse, he moved nearer, and

Science Finds That Aches in Bones Are Not True Index to the Weather

Science has cast serious doubt on the old belief that persons can forecast the weather by the aches in their bones.

The popular theory that pains are associated with certain kinds of weather is disputed by Dr. W. P. Elhardt of the department of physiology at the University of Illinois.

Dr. Elhardt collected data for a six-month period and set it down on one long graph chart, chronologically arranged.

And across this long, correlated chart of meteorological conditions Dr. Elhardt plotted a record of pain.

The pain records, finally transferred to the chart, were kept by a veteran severely wounded in the World war, who, until he was shown the result of the experiment, believed he could feel bad weather coming by a recurrence of pain.

The soldier had suffered a gunshot wound in his hand; another in his shoulder. He had lost a little and a ring finger of one hand, and numerous other injuries.

His pain, after the war, struck him at all-too-frequent, irregular intervals. He blamed the weather. From grasping the girl's thin shoulders turned her about so that the moonlight fell on her bitter, upturned face.

"Look at me, girl," he said. "Are you on the level? Not kidding me? No, don't get mad" (as she shook his hands off roughly). "I'm going to help. Honest-to-goodness, I'm going to help you, kid."

For he had read the answer to his question in those indignant, angry, tear-stained eyes, and knew that the girl had talked so freely only because she was lonely to the point of heartbreak. He reached in a pocket, thankful that his eccentric landlady (who was once the unfortunate recipient of a forged check) insisted on receiving her monthly stipend in cold cash. Don had intended paying her that night.

A roll of bills met his expectant fingers. After all, he was thinking, it didn't matter whether the fickle Joe of the girl's story was worthy of her or not. She loved him, poor child! She wanted to be beautiful for him; and—thank God!—he could make her dream come true. His hand slid from the pocket, and lifting those dye-stained, work-worn young fingers, he closed them gently round the roll of greenbacks.

"That's yours, sister."

"Mine!" The girl stared down in stupefaction at the money, her breath coming in quick gasps. She said, her voice breaking on a shaky laugh: "Say!—who are you, anyhow John D., or—Santa Claus?"

Don grinned and answered: "I'm just a friend. You put it that way your old man can't find it, and—"

"But—but you've savin' up to get married, ain't you?" she protested. "I can't take your whole roll this way—honest I can't. I ain't got a right to take any of it; but—but if you'd spare me five bucks maybe I'd get to save somethin' next week."

She extended the money as if to give it back to him, and Don, taking her hand in both of his, said gently: "No! It's yours, sister, every darn cent of it. My girl would want you to have it. See? She likes to look swell too, you know. She'll understand. Why, you poor kid! Don't cry. It's nothing—nothing at all to cry about . . ."

Don ceased, ducking his head against the blinding glare of headlights as a big car moved slowly across the bridge. Not until later did he recall the fact that as those powerful lights picked him out of the darkness, the car had wavered for a moment, almost stopped, before it went on into the night.

A week dragged by, one of those first hot weeks that sap the energy. Even Nora wilted, and writing, thought compassionately of Don, sentenced to spend those enervating days in the correct attire of a business man. How, she asked herself, could he ever stick it out until October? And if he didn't . . .

She came in early one afternoon to find her father at home, minus his collar and seated by an electric fan. He said, smiling an apology: "It's so blasted hot down town I couldn't stand it. Don't think I've ever known it so warm this time of year. What do you say to getting into the country earlier than usual, my dear? You look—"

"Don't say how I look!" begged Nora, slumping down limply beside the fan. "I was hoping there was something wrong with the hall mirror! Such early heat is downright wicked, isn't it? I—I'm not going to the country, Father."

"What do you mean?"

In his amazement James was oblivious of a bead of perspiration that trickled persistently down his nose.

RECEIVING VISION FOR SERVICE

LESSON TEXT—Mark 9:2-10. GOLDEN TEXT—This is my beloved Son: hear him.—Mark 9:7. PRIMARY TOPIC—On a Mountain with Jesus. JUNIOR TOPIC—With Jesus on a Mountain Top. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How Worship Prepares Us for Service. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Place and Purpose of Vision.

"Where there is no vision the people perish" said the wise man of old (Prov. 29:18). For want of a true vision of God, a knowledge of His truth, and the God-given constraint which makes men give themselves in sacrificial service, the people will perish in their sins. But let men come to know the truth as it is in Christ, learn to know Him as the Son of God glorious and powerful, and then let them translate their knowledge of Christian truth and their personal spiritual experiences into the daily ministry to the needs of their fellow-men, and there will be songs of salvation and joy.

The transfiguration of our Lord meant much to Him as it brought new assurance of His divine Sonship, His acceptance with the Father, and His resurrection to follow the death of the cross. We do well to recognize its testimony to Him, but we think today especially of the experience of the disciples and their preparation for service. We, like them, must

I. Know Christian Truth.

Fundamental in both Christian life and service is a clear understanding of the person and work of Christ. One may come to Christ knowing little more than that He is the divine Saviour, and one may enter into Christian living with a meager knowledge of the doctrines of the Bible. But the Christian who fails to grow in knowledge will not grow in grace as he should.

The disciples came to a fuller conviction that He was the Son of God as they saw Him transfigured and heard the Father say, "This is my beloved Son." They learned more plainly the truth of His coming death for the sins of all mankind. They saw in the indescribable beauty of that moment the foregleam of His coming glory. What important truths these are—His deity—His redemption—His coming kingship. Do we have a clear grasp of these truths?

II. Experience Spiritual Power.

Great experiences of spiritual renewal and power are necessary to effective life and testimony. They may not be in outward manifestation, in fact they are more often in the inner recesses of the soul, but they transform men and send them forth to magnificent living for God.

The disciples had an unforgettable mountain-top experience. Even so have many others found the secret of power. It came to D. L. Moody as he walked down a New York street, praying in agony, "Deliver me from myself. Take absolute sway." The story of what happened to him and through him as a surrendered instrument in God's hand is written large on the pages of history. Others had similar experiences. Let us remember that such privileges are not reserved for a few, they are the birthright of every Christian. Power without knowledge is a dangerous and destructive thing, but knowledge without power is a dead thing, resulting in a stale and unfruitful orthodoxy that in turn produces a dreadful and unchristian religious system. It is not enough to know the truth, to be able to discuss it, to divide it, and possibly to fight about it. Let us study God's Word, but let the truth be baptized in the overflowing spiritual power of a personal experience with God.

III. Serve Needy Humanity.

Dr. Moore beautifully suggests that Jesus and the disciples went up to the place of prayer, into the place of glory, and down to the place of service. How fitting is that sequence. Much confusion exists in the church because those who have foolishly abandoned their interest in the truth of God's Word and have substituted the energy of the flesh for spiritual power, have been most diligent in service to humanity, while those who know and accept the truth about Christ, and who profess to believe in the power of the Spirit-filled life have failed to serve their needy neighbors. How delightful and useful is the normal, well-rounded life of the true Christian, one equipped with an understanding of Christian doctrine, endowed with Holy Ghost power, and humbly serving others.

Hook an Old Fashioned Rag Rug

OF ALL rag rugs the hooked type is the most fascinating and economical. A rug hook, such as may be purchased in notion and fancywork departments, and burlap a little larger than your finished rug are the essentials. Most rug hookers also use a frame of slats bolted together at the corners. They stretch the burlap over the frame and tack it. Some like a rather large stationary frame. Others use a small one and many hooked rugs are made without any frame at all.

Here is a quaint old rug pattern that you may mark off on your burlap with a yardstick and pencil. The numbers indicate the colors used for the original rug—now more than a hundred years old. The finished rug measures 26 by 34 inches. Allow two inches at all edges for hems. Overcast the edges, then mark the solid one-inch border just inside the hem allowance; then the large eight-inch squares; then the small two-inch squares; then draw the diagonal lines across the large squares as shown. Use wool rags if possible and cut the strips not

Spray Roses Frequently

"I find that there is one simple point in aphid control that is overlooked by a majority of rose growers," says Melvin E. Wyandt, rose specialist of Painesville, Ohio. "It is simply that they should spray often. Now don't misunderstand me. Practically all rose growers know that they must spray with a good insecticide to control aphids, but they do not realize that aphids multiply rapidly."

An effective spray for aphid control is made by mixing one to two teaspoonfuls of nicotine sulphate in a gallon of water and adding a little dissolved laundry soap. Nicotine sulphate is a poison which kills by contact—the method necessary with sucking insects such as aphids—and in addition, being volatile, it gives off fumes which also kill, making it doubly effective.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—This summer's session of the Institute of Pacific Relations will have many new factors and policies to consider, as new power formulas and equations are being drawn. The Philippines have changed their mind about cutting their United States towline. Japan and Germany make a joint survey of a 50-mile, low-lying canal route across the upper neck of Siam, which will bring Japan four days nearer Australia and perhaps five days nearer India. England's Singapore naval base isn't what it used to be. Australia announces a big new rearmament program.

Ian Mackenzie, Canada's handsome and versatile defense minister, breaks the news that Canada will rely on the United States fleet, voicing "reasonable assumption," rather than definite "commitments."

And Paul V. McNutt, commissioner of the Philippines, says we should carry "liberty and peace" to the Far East.

Mr. Mackenzie, a Vancouver lawyer, is one of Canada's most famous scholars who writes fluently and publishes articles in Gaelic. In his native Scotland, he was the most illustrious prize scholar of his generation, virtually monopolizing all the medals and garlands of the University of Edinburgh, for attainment in the classics.

He later won a Carnegie research fellowship, gathering more honors in his work on old Irish manuscripts. He later attended the Royal academy at Dublin, wrote songs and stories in the ancient Celtic language and picked up a law degree as a sort of afterthought.

He returned to Vancouver in 1914, went for the war, and romped through grades to the rank of captain, fighting in all the major engagements.

He kept his stride in his later success in law and politics in Vancouver, becoming national defense minister in 1935. He is regarded as Canada's most eligible bachelor. He says his favorite recreation is study.

JOSEPH A. LYONS, Australian prime minister who announces a rearmament program of approximately $215,000,000, has no such gift of tongues and reached eminence by a longer and harder road.

He rose to power in the labor movement and, in 1931, like the late Ramsay MacDonald, broke with his party and entered a coalition government. His shift to the right brought him under vigorous assault, but he was re-elected by a large majority last October.

He is sixty years old, gray and tousle-haired, the father of 11 children, and walks with a limp as the result of a railroad accident 13 years ago.

He began his working career as a country school teacher in Tasmania. Insularity and "home rule" marked his attitude a few years ago. Now he recommends as a commonwealth slogan, "Keep in tune with England."

Everywhere, the little nations are calling, "Wait for baby."

TAKING arms against this sea of troubles is the Countess Alain Dedons de Pierrefeu, formerly Elsa Tudor of the Boston social register.

World Tour of Youth Is Peace Move

Under impressive patronage, which includes faculty members of leading universities, scholars, diplomats and sociologists, she organizes a "world youth tour," with a fervor comparable to that of Peter the Hermit leading the children's crusade.

She is recruiting young persons from all nations, including Germany, Italy and Russia, on a world tour to flux animosities and foster good will and understanding. "World peace through world trade" is their slogan.

Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd is among those who give warm endorsement to the plan. Headquarters for the tour are in New York.

The French husband of the countess was killed in the World war. Since then she has been vigorously active in social movements in Europe, Chicago, Boston and New York. For nearly four years she has been traveling around the world, recruiting support for her youth organization among diplomats, economists and business men.

Young Coats Styled to Perfection

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WHETHER she has attained the ripe old age of four years or is tottering on the verge of her teens, this year's smart members of the younger set will find that their new wool coats for spring reflect the same interesting fashion trends as those of their chic mamas. With the new vogue for soft tailoring which is important throughout the whole spring picture, fine lightweight wools—notably the lustrous chevets, smooth tailor-minded worsteds and fine men's-wear flannels in the very popular navy blue, also the now-modish neutral shades—were designed on cunning flattering lines such as you see here pictured.

In tune with the dressmaker styling which prevails in this season's tailored wear, the newer wool coats are cut on lines that are anything but severe. Smart princess silhouettes, so charmingly adaptable to childish figures, are to be found in double-breasted models with lapels of boyish cut or in high-necked single-breasted types with snug round collars.

Important for trimming detail is the use of pliable colored leather which may be either in suede or smooth finish. The adorable youngster centered in the foreground of the illustration has on as fetching a leather-trimmed coat as you will see anywhere in the spring style parade. For this attractive double-breasted model stitched leather at the neck and pockets provides a smart red accent to red-flecked neutral wool tweed.

A leather trimmed coat is also shown to the right in the group. The leather, smooth in finish and allover stitched, is charming in a deep wine tone, as it gives accent to this new double-breasted coat for the eight-year-old. Smooth fitted lines with chic back flare are smartly highlighted by the leather facing on pockets and high rounded collar, with small matching wine colored composition buttons at the double-breasted front closing.

The use of velvetene facing in contrast shades is noted as an important style detail appearing not only on collar and cuffs but as decorative finishings on flap pockets and other interesting designful features. Winsome for the six year old is a fitted princess coat as shown in the inset below to left. It is in a flattering shade of pink lightweight wool with new velvetene collar facing, matched to navy composition flower buttons at the front closing. Double V-shaped flaps on the high breast pockets are decorative and fashionable.

Bright plaid taffeta and other gay silk facings are used to enliven dark coats for the very young. Fitted and flared is the attractively tailored town coat in navy wool flannel pictured above to the left in the group. Plaid taffeta trims the collar and pocket flaps. The matching hat has a plaid taffeta bow at the front.

If it is a whole spring wardrobe in one, you would like to be purchasing for little daughter this spring, keep your eyes open for the fashionably cut four-piece suits now showing in children's apparel collections.

They have a long cape with box shoulders (too cunning for words) a collarless jacket and all-round pleated skirt and a matching hat. The little five-year-olds who wear them look like fashion plate youngsters. As to being practical little or no comment need be made. With a variation of pretty blouses such an outfit offers endless changes and possibilities.

PLAY OUTFITS

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The peasant scarf is being tied on the heads of even the youngest in the fashion parade, as a highly entertained audience learned that attended one of the series of breakfast clinics presented in the Merchandise Mart of Chicago. The style show given at this mecca for juvenile fashions was unique in that forty or more youngsters served as mannequins, ranging from a babe in arms to the teen age. The toddler here pictured wears a very practical and playful overall in pottery shades. There is a clever use of decorative applique, a cactus motif. The fabric is cotton and easy for laundering. This cunning practical play outfit is to be had in various colors.

VELVET TRIMMINGS SPRING FAVORITE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Marie Antoinette and Madame Pompadour are the inspiration for the new velvet accents. It is from them that the bows, the ribbons and the velvet trimmings of all types that are so popular this spring, stem. The tercentenary of the birth of Louis XVI will be recalled in France this spring, and unless all plans go awry, many of the famous fetes of his reign will be re-enacted. Maria Theresa entered Paris in 1760. This will probably have its effect on fall fashions and we will see a perpetuation of a fad that will then become a fashion.

Certainly a velvet collar on a suit, velvet bows or velvet bodices, velvet ribbon trimmed flounces, make interesting details.

Millinery is again millinery, and velvet ribbons, flowers, crowns, brims, as well as bonnets, cloches, tiny berets and turbans always flourish when women are wearing "hats as hats."

Reds and Corals Lead in Colors in New Fashions

The gamut of geranium reds and coral tones, shading into pale blotting paper pink, take first place in colors shown in one French collection recently. The prominence of pink is even noticeable in tartans, in which soft tones of pink are combined with vivid green or yellow.

Purples, fuchsia red and soft "flax" blues are given importance, and the burnt tones from ochre yellow to brick red are emphasized. New greens are confined to turquoise shades.

Color Enlivens Hat

Color rises as colorful hats become more and more popular. A pill-box of deep ruby velvet has its cuff trimmed with tiny humming birds in green and blue.

BOOKS IN BRIEF

English Lord's Romance Told In 'Patrician'

By ELIZABETH C. JAMES

LORD MILTOUN, main character of John Galsworthy's "The Patrician," was born into the titled class of England. His family owned and controlled vast properties and the lives of countless people.

Amid the varied interests of his family, in which three generations lived in close contact, and against a background of town houses and country houses, Lord Miltoun grew to maturity with an ascetic soul and a highly cultivated mind. World travel had added breadth to his university training so that he now felt himself somewhat qualified to take his place in parliament.

Elizabeth James

It was at this time, just when his parents, Lord and Lady Valleys, were satisfied with the trend of things, he met Mrs. Noel.

Mrs. Noel lived alone in a little house not far from Lord Miltoun's country place. Through music and over the tea cups before a warm fire, she grew into the barren heart of the young nobleman, who loved her warm, soft coloring and her artistic insight. As soon as Lord Miltoun's family heard of this situation, they had much to say about it to each other. As usual Lady Casterly was first to do something.

Using her walking cane and holding the arm of Lady Barbara, her beautiful granddaughter, the seventy-eight-year-old grandmother went down to the little house to see this person who dared intrude into the well-arranged life of Lord Miltoun. The conversation was such that Mrs. Noel decided to give up seeing Lord Miltoun.

Family Discovers Marriage.

In the family a sort of crisis arose after Lady Casterly's call. There was much talk and it was discovered that Mrs. Noel was already married. Lord Miltoun was shocked. He had interpreted her situation to mean divorce.

Lord Miltoun went to see her. She told him now she had been married very young to a much older person, a clergyman of the Church of England. How life had grown intolerable and how she had lived alone for this long time. He told her good-by and left at once for London and his affairs in parliament.

THE GREATEST NOVELIST

Into a family of wealth and prestige, John Galsworthy was born in 1867. His education included the best preparatory schools and then Oxford, where he studied to be a lawyer. The practice of law, wide travel, and a well-balanced life passed the years until Galsworthy was forty. In that year he published his first novel, and from then until his death in 1933, his fame continued to grow. In 1932 he was awarded the Nobel prize for his novel, "The Forsyte Saga."

His first speech brought acclaim to the name of Lord Miltoun and honor to the family. Lady Barbara went into London to congratulate her brother. Going to his suite of rooms, she found him raving with a brain fever. His ravings were to Audrey Noel and he spoke beautifully of his love for her.

Immediately Lady Barbara went to a telephone and made communication with Mrs. Noel, asking her to come at once to take care of Lord Miltoun. Of all this, Lady Barbara said nothing to her family. Mrs. Noel came at once and remained for days with Lord Miltoun, bringing him out of his delirium and giving him peace of mind.

Confronts Indecision.

Convalescence brought no peace of mind to Lord Miltoun. He had not the strength to fight the solid wall of his family, yet his mind and body were ill with longing for his loved one. As soon as he was strong enough, he went to London to see her.

Wishing to settle the dangling ends of the affair as quickly as possible, Lord Miltoun sought out his mother and father at their country place. The son stated that he would resign from parliament because his life was already joined with that of Mrs. Noel.

Sought Advice of Others.

But Lord Miltoun did not have what it takes to face a strongly united family. He did not rely upon himself, but instead he turned to others whose opinions he had been taught to follow instead of his own.

When Lord Miltoun went again to see Mrs. Noel, he found only a letter that said little. She was gone. Rushing into the home of Lady Casterly, he spoke with fury to her, rushing out into the night again like a madman. Lady Barbara followed him into the automobile and drove all night with him.

Again Lord Miltoun entered the affairs of parliament, intent on becoming a successful statesman.

C. Houston Goudiss Discusses

TEETH--Your Passport to Good Health--and Tells How You Can Avoid the Tragedy of Dental Decay

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

6 East 39th Street, New York.

A SCIENTIST, who was also a wit, once remarked that you must be true to your teeth or they will be false to you. That most people do not heed this advice is evidenced by the fact that almost 100 per cent of the adult population is affected by some form of oral disease, and from 90 to 97 per cent of all school children have decayed teeth.

As there is a close relationship between healthy teeth and healthy bodies, and conversely, between decayed teeth and sickly bodies, it is easy to understand why science views this appalling situation with the greatest alarm—and why such an eminent authority as Professor Ernest A. Hooton of Harvard University warns that "unless steps are taken to discover preventives of tooth infection, and correctives of dental deformation, the course of human evolution will lead downward to extinction."

Health and Happiness Depend on Sound Teeth

That is a strong statement, but it is not an exaggeration, for it would be difficult to over-estimate the influence of the teeth upon human health and happiness.

Do you wonder how teeth can affect happiness? Consider, then, that a pretty face depends, first upon the position of the mouth when the lips are closed, and second, upon the appearance of the teeth when the lips are parted. You cannot have a lovely mouth when the lips close over crooked front teeth; you cannot have an attractive smile if the teeth are dull.

And when gums recede, and loosened teeth are forced out of their natural position, the position of the lips is likewise changed—with the result that the lower part of the face is disfigured. Surely this is tragedy enough. But the effect of decayed teeth upon health is of far greater significance.

Dental Decay Does Extensive Damage

A decayed tooth is a poison factory, distributing its noxious product to every part of the body. In the body, that poison attacks and centers in the weakest spot.

It may lead to neuritis, rheumatic ailments, dyspepsia, or even duodenal ulcers. It may be a contributing cause of heart disease.

In view of such extensive damage, it is easy to understand why a prominent medical authority has declared that if the teeth were given proper care, so that dental decay became rare, instead of al-phosphorus and vitamins A, C and D.

Second, frequent and thorough brushing of the teeth, to remove all food particles. The use of an efficient dentifrice encourages efficient brushing and helps to keep the teeth looking attractive.

Third, the inclusion in the diet of foods that require the chewing, tearing, gnawing and biting for which our teeth were designed, such as raw cabbage, celery, apples and other fibrous foods.

Fourth, a visit to the dentist at least twice a year, so that he can check the condition of the teeth.

Questions Answered

Mrs. E. T. D.—Answering your question as to the effect of cooking on vitamin D, this is no problem in the kitchen. Natural vitamin D is virtually absent from most foods, but in irradiated foods, or those to which vitamin D concentrate has been added, the vitamin D is stable and ordinary cooking has little destructive effect on it.

Mrs. J. B. McK.—It is incorrect to say that rye bread is more, or less, fattening than white bread. A slice of rye bread supplies the same number of calories as a slice of white bread.

Miss F. S. P.—The sulphur dioxide used to bleach a good grade of dried fruit is present in a chemical combination that is entirely harmless.

Terence Shea Tells of His Bulging Barrels

A social worker with more enthusiasm than tact went to call upon Terence Shea, night watchman, at his home.

"I hope, Mr. Shea," she said, "that you do not squander your money in riotous living. May I ask what you do with your wages?"

"I'd just as soon tell you as not," replied Mr. Shea. "Tis $15 a week I make. When I've paid the rent, the provisions, and the milkman, and bought what's needed for Maggie and me five children, I deposit the rest of my money in barrels. Mostly, ma'am, sugar barrels. They're bigger an' hold more. But when I can't get them I use plain flour barrels."

Introduced Gunpowder
Gunpowder was introduced into Europe by the Saracen invasions.

You Can't Beat This Compact Quick-Attachable Farmall Plow

THE McCormick-Deering No. 86 Two-Way Plow attaches directly to the Farmall 12 tractor, making an ideal combination for work in irrigated fields, on hilly land, or in fields of irregular shape. It plows real man-size furrows using the same 14 or 16-inch steel or chilled bottoms that are used on the McCormick-Deering Plows built for use with big tractors.

Whether you grow corn, cotton, potatoes, or truck, you'll find this full-size, deep-plowing outfit is a great help toward good yields and good crop quality.

The No. 86 can be supplied with chain lift or equipped for use with the Farmall 12 hydraulic power lift. The extra long beams are carried on a parallel link arrangement which holds the bottoms steady and provides a simple leveling device.

Ask us to quote you on one of these McCormick-Deering Plows, equipped for your work.
