BROWN HURLS SPLENDID BALL TO WIN SUNDAY

Local Team Will Resume
League Play Sunday
at Whittemore

Last Sunday being an off day for the Tawas City baseball team in the league, Oscoda played an exhibition game. It was a return game for the one played at Oscoda on Memorial Day. The game was won by Taws City by the score of 4 to 1.

Ferris Brown did the hurling for the Tawas Clan and showed rare form. He held the opposition to six hits and struck out nine of the visiting batters. Although four errors were made by the local team, they played "heads-up" ball when the going got tough. Oscoda scored their lone tally in the ninth after two were out on a double and a single.

The game was scoreless until the fifth when after two were out, Dukowski, a newly acquired player who played third base for Tawas City, walked, he stole second and third, Roach also walked and ran to second unopposed. Quick then singled both runners scoring. Two more were added in the sixth. McCormick, also a new man on the team who played first base, opened with a single. G. Laidlaw laid down a bunt attempting to sacrifice. B. McCoy, the Oscoda pitcher, fielded the ball and in his attempt to force McCormick at second threw too late and both runners were safe. W. Laidlaw sacrificed, and when the first base turned to tag W. Laidlaw rounded third kept on running, scoring the third Tawas run. G. Laidlaw taking third on the play from where he scored a moment later after the catch of Franks' long fly to centerfield.

Steps Taken to Secure High School Gymnasium

The first step toward the building of a gymnasium for the Tawas City public schools was taken Tuesday evening when the Board of Education voted to consult with the Francis Engineering Company relative to the planning and construction of such a building. The gymnasium would be a WPA project.

It was brought out in the discussion Tuesday night that one of the principal motives in considering the project is the lack of space in the school building. With the present enrollment, the various class rooms are overcrowded. A much larger enrollment is anticipated for next year. Extra class rooms could be included in the proposed structure thus providing for the immediate needs of the school. The structure could be made a unit of a building program which would eventually give Tawas City a modern school plant. A gymnasium is an essential part of a school building. Physical education has become an important part of school life. The gym would also provide a suitable place for the other activities of the school such as basketball, dramatics, band concerts debating and social gatherings.

A Communication From Mayor Coyle

To whom it may concern:

It has been called to my attention by some business men on Lake Street that the parking situation is most acute. This situation can only be remedied by the widening of the street and that will be the matter of some time yet. The condition can be helped however if all the business people on Lake Street would keep their cars and trucks in the alleys which were intended for their use. By doing this it would not only be better for business in general, but would give the tourist a chance to do their shopping and help relieve a major traffic problem.

Signed,
John Coyle, Mayor.

Card of Thanks

We wish to thank our friends for their kindness during the illness and death of our wife and mother; we especially thank Rev. Roelcke for his comforting words, Mrs. Westcott for singing, for the beautiful flowers and also the many expressions of sympathy.

Christian Green and family

Two new departures will mark the annual meeting on June 28, in the town hall at Hale, Michigan, says Secretary-Treasurer John Levandoski, who announced the calling of the meeting this week.

The association is one of a group of nine associations in the locality and Mr. Levandoski is joint secretary for each one in the group. The meeting on June 28 is one of nine to be held in his territory in June.

Important to the members will be the annual report of the secretary-treasurer who will give a summary of the activities and analyze the financial condition of the association. In addition to charts, which will set forth the main features of his report, Mr. Levandoski will have available much other information for the answering of any questions that may be asked.

First of the new features at this meeting will be the rule of "one member one vote." Legislation enacted in 1937 provided that hereafter each member will have one vote only, the old rule being that members might have from one to twenty votes according to the number of shares held, with a maximum of 20 votes for any one member. Each member held one share in the association for each $100 of his loan. With the new rule in effect everyone is on an equal footing and keeping of the voting record will be greatly simplified. The change is in line with making the associations as completely cooperative as possible.

The other new features is that directors will not all be elected for one year, but for varying periods overlapping terms so there will always be some old members on the board. At this annual meeting two directors will be chosen for three years and two for two years and one for one year. Hereafter members will elect only directors to succeed those retiring or to fill vacancies.

The meeting is strictly a local cooperative affair. There will be no present from the Federal Land Bank of St. Paul through which members get their loans.

Hull's St. Lawrence Plan

PRESUMABLY by direction of the President, Secretary of State Hull submitted to Canada a new proposal for development of the St. Lawrence seaway, asking that it be considered as a basis for a new treaty which would be a revision and amplification of the treaty of 1934. Under the terms of the Hull plan Canada would obtain without cost a completed St. Lawrence deep waterway, ready for power development, and also other valuable concessions. The United States would obtain the privilege of building the seaway at its own expense, increased power development at Niagara Falls, and the recognition by Canada of American sovereignty over Lake Michigan.

New Food Act Passed

WITHOUT a record vote the house passed the new pure food and drug bill. The senate had passed a similar measure and the differences were to be reconciled in conference. The act brings drugs, therapeutic devices, and foods under regulation of the Department of Agriculture. It prohibits alteration or misbranding of cosmetics, 94 foods and drugs, requires adequate tests of products before they are placed on the market, provides for license restrictions to control bacterial contamination of foods, requires warning labels on habit-forming drugs, and provides for factory inspection.

Reform Bill Shelved

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT accepted the advice of congressional leaders and consented to the shelving of his bill for reorganization of the executive government. This was announced with the approval of the President by Senator Barkley. At the same time it was made known that the administration would attempt to get the measure through congress early in the 1939 session. Sen. Hiram Johnson of California said the opponents of the bill would be ready to resume their battle against it next year.

Tax Bill Unsigned But Law

FOR the first time since he entered the White House, President Roosevelt permitted an act of congress to become law without his signature. He took this course with the tax revision bill in order to emphasize his objection to "those unwise parts of the bill" which removed all but the skeleton of the undistributed profits tax and drastically modified the levies upon capital gains.

Dean Mumford Dies

DEAN HERBERT W. MUMFORD of the University of Illinois is dead, following an automobile accident, and the country loses one of its best agricultural educators and marketing experts. Mumford was a product of Michigan. In 1901 he became professor of animal husbandry in the university at Champaign. Then he was made dean of the college of agriculture and director of the agricultural experiment station and extension service. He was sixty-seven years old at the time of his death.

BOIS ROUSSEL, a French bred horse, won the English Derby at Epsom Downs, and four sweepstakes ticket holders in the United States won $150,000 each. Scottish Union, second, won $75,000 each for 11 United States ticket holders. Pasch, the favorite, finished third, returning $50,000 each to seven ticket holders in the United States.

Defies Harry Hopkins

VICTOR A. Christgau, Minnesota WPA administrator, quarreled continually with Gov. Elmer Benson and the Farmer-Labor party leaders in that state. So Harry Hopkins, national head of the WPA, notified him he was ousted. Christgau refused to quit his position, contending that only President Roosevelt, who appointed him, had power to dismiss him.

War Pensions Boosted

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT signed a bill to increase the pensions of certain soldiers, sailors and nurses who served in the Spanish war, Philippine insurrection or China relief expedition. The act provides a $60 monthly pension for veterans sixty-five years old who served at least 90 days and to those who served less than 90 days and were discharged for disability incurred in service.

LEGISLATION authorizing new federal highway expenditures of $357,400,000 for the fiscal years 1940 and 1941 won final congressional approval when the senate adopted a conference report previously accepted by the house. Another Recovery Plan

ABANDONMENT of experiments by the government and adoption of an industrial program based on experience was advocated by Charles R. Hook, president of the National Association of Manufacturers before a meeting of the Chicago Association of Commerce. "A return to sound economic reasoning and a common sense diagnosis is the sure solution to the problems of America today," Mr. Hook said. "Emphasizing that industry has a definite program for industrial recovery, Mr. Hook, who is president of American Rolling Mill company, outlined three cardinal points, including revision of the Wagner act, revision of the tax structure and banishment of existing and threatened government competition with private enterprise. "Remove these causes of fear and uncertainty," Mr. Hook said, "and private savings will rush back into the channels of private productive enterprise. "We specifically urge amendments to the Wagner act to correct its one-sided character, to enforce responsibility on labor organizations, to separate the functions of fact finding, prosecution and judicial decision, and establish impartial administration by the national labor relations board."

Twenty More Federal Judges

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT signed the bill creating 20 additional federal judges throughout the country. The measure is the largest judgeship bill passed by congress since 1921. Five additional Circuit Court of Appeals judges at $12,500 a year each and 15 additional district judges at $10,000 a year each are authorized by the act.

Speaking of Sports

Softball Led Henrich to Big Leagues

By GEORGE A. BARCLAY
YOUNG Tom Henrich used to knock softballs over the playground fence and be quite a hero to the neighborhood kids.

Now young Tom Henrich knocks hard baseballs over the fence in American league parks and the wise boys predict that future diamond historians will rank him in the same outfield fight as Tris Speaker, Ty Cobb, Babe Ruth and his teammate, Joe Di Maggio. For Henrich is making the fans around the circuit sit up and take notice because of his brilliant work as right fielder of the New York Yankees and as one of the team's sluggers.

It was back in Massillon, Ohio, that Tom began playing softball. It wasn't long before he found this game rather tame and turned to sandlot baseball. He looked so good that his father got interested and gave him encouragement. Townsfolk began talking about Tom's uncanny fielding ability and his knack of hitting baseballs where the fielders weren't.

Soon the Cleveland Indians heard about him and one of their scouts wired the home office that he was one of the finds of the bushes. The Indians signed him and then indulged in a bit of "cover up play" that came to the attention of Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis. The commissioner declared young Henrich a free agent.

Yanks Step In

That all happened in the spring of 1937. As soon as other big league clubs got wind of the fact that Tom was footloose, a deluge of scouts descended on Tom's home, talked with him and then with his father and tried to induce him to sign.

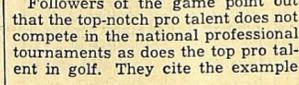

TOM HENRICH

The emissaries of Col. Jake Ruppert's New York Yankees talked most convincingly. Tom was signed with them and given a bonus of $20,000. At the time Joe McCarthy happened to be overloaded with outfielders, so he sent Tom across the river to Newark where the Yankees maintain their main talent farm. At Newark Tom lived up to his advance notices. He got away to a good start, was flashy in the field and soon was slamming the ball all over the International league. Then the Yanks began to encounter some tough going. The outfield powerhouse was crippled by injuries. Roy Johnson, whom McCarthy had secured from Boston, couldn't get going. Desperate for talent, McCarthy sold Johnson to the Boston Bees and recalled young Tom Henrich from Newark. Injuries then played further into Tommy's hands. George Selkirk had to take time out, on account of a bad leg. That put the job of right field squarely up to the rookie Henrich. Tommy fulfilled the story-book tradition by making good in a big way. He proved by hard hitting that he had a right to be included in the Yanks' Murderer's Row. He didn't confine himself to singles or doubles, but began punching the ball into the bleachers. His fielding was sensational and his throw-ins from the outfield on close plays were every bit as good as his phenomenal young colleague, Joe Di Maggio. Now at twenty-one, Tommy Henrich seems to be on the way to a great major league career. He has gone at such a pace that there seems little likelihood that Selkirk will win back his job from him. If the Yanks win the American league pennant this year, Tom Henrich will be one of the reasons. So will a former International leaguer by the name of Joe Gordon who is a second baseman by trade and who succeeded the durable Tony Lazzeri, now a member of the Chicago Cubs. Henrich and Gordon give new coverage to second base and right field. And coming up through the school that developed Gordon and that Henrich attended for a while last year is another young fellow who, the scouts say, will be ready for the big show next year. His name is Charley Keller and he's an outfielder. Coming out of the University of Maryland last year, he led the International league in hitting and is continuing the pace with Newark again this year.

Tennis Dilemma

PROFESSIONAL tennis appears to be at the crossroads. Its future will depend largely on which direction it turns. Small galleries at the national professional tennis championship tournaments this year pre-empt a diminishing of public interest in the pro game unless several remedies are applied. Followers of the game point out that the top-notch pro talent does not compete in the national professional tournaments as does the top pro talent in golf. They cite the example of Fred Perry and Ellsworth Vines probably the greatest players in the world today. Both failed to enter the national professional championship and did not compete in any of the various other tournaments held in the South last winter and this spring. The appearance of either of these stars in the championship events would insure their success and heighten public interest in the tournaments. It is explained that Vines and Perry can make more money playing exhibition matches than they can in tournaments. In tournament play, for example, if Vines won both singles and doubles titles he would make from $500 to $1,000 a week of continuous play. In exhibition play at present his net receipts would far exceed that in a day or two. Still, for the sake of the pro game's future, those on the inside assert that it would be good business for both Vines and Perry to enter the professional tournaments. They might sacrifice some income for a week or two, but in the long run they would probably make more as a result of increased interest in the game among fans everywhere. It has also been suggested that closer co-operation be established between the pro players and the professional association itself.

Here and There—

THE handicap of being a deaf mute doesn't bother John Gray, seventeen-year-old nephew of the late John McGraw, who lives in Mystic, Conn. Baseball is in John's blood the same as it was in the blood of his famous uncle. Young John is a natural ball player, a good hitter and possessed of an agile baseball mind. He is the star of the Mystic Oral school. The Cubs last season whipped every team in the year's series except the Pirates, who took them, 13 games to 9. . . . And it looks as if the Pirates are going to be the jinx again this year, though it appears the Boston Bees and New York Giants may soften up the Pirates so much that the Cubs can catch on to how it's done. . . . Lou Gehrig has taken all the charms, rings, and other trinkets gathered in his baseball wanderings and had them made into a bracelet for Mrs. Gehrig.

Baseball Oldster

WHEN a man reaches the ripe old age of thirty-five in baseball, he has arrived at the patriarch stage and is permitted the privilege of becoming oracular. Such a man is Charley Gehringer, brilliant second baseman of the Detroit Tigers, who seems to have caught his second wind as he romps through his thirteenth season in the big leagues. One of Charley's contentions is that the pitching today is better than when he came into the American league in 1925. "There were some star pitchers when I came up and they were real stars," he recalls, "but the ordinary pitchers were not as good as the ordinary pitchers of today." Charley doesn't have any trouble naming the best pitcher he ever faced. "Lefty Grove," he says without hesitation. And Grove, he says, was much faster in his prime of speedballing than is Cleveland's Bob Feller today.

Spending Fails

Since the pump priming and the other spending ideas failed to accomplish anything in the other trials, there seems to be no reason to expect the new outlay of cash to do more than create a new high record for the national debt. It will do that, beyond question. But I said at the outset that there were others to blame. This fact has been brought to the fore by the condition lately much publicized in Chicago and Cleveland within the month. The cities were out of cash and the relief lines became riotous. There is not much to be done about starving people but to feed them. That is accepted. Yet, how did that happen? Why was the condition allowed to reach that stage? Here is the fact that will make me very popular, I am sure, in the areas where the shoe fits: The states have failed to assume their proper share of the responsibility. Let me repeat that: The states have failed to assume their proper share of responsibility! They have consistently done so, and the reason

Washington.—Congress is packing its duds. It doesn't know exactly what date it will go home, but go home it will, in just a few weeks more. There is nothing more contagious than homesickness among congressmen when primaries are in the air and votes around the grass roots await to be garnered. I suppose that when they go, there will be a certain amount of criticism about the do-nothing congress. Particularly will they hear barks that they have left the nation's most important problem unsolved. They will be told how they should have charted a course to lead the country out of the depression and how they failed to do anything towards restoring unemployed to permanent jobs. The prospect of this condition, it seems to me, warrants a general discussion without pulling punches. Congress is supposed to formulate national policies. It, therefore, must accept some blame for its failure. But it is not alone to blame, and the voters ought to know it. There are some other spots to which attention should be directed—in all fairness to the members of the house and senate. Let us look back a bit. It must be agreed, I believe, that recovery is the foremost problem. Recovery plans must be divided. Attention must be given, first, to relief of the destitute, the unemployed. Secondly, policies must be laid down that will permit business, big and little, to take on workers—or obviously they will remain on the relief rolls. Since last November, there have been pleas, threats, argument—all seeking establishment of policies that would permit business to have confidence. There has been nothing from President Roosevelt in the way of suggestions or proposals along this line, and congress refused, cowardly enough, to lead the way. As the session wore on, unemployment increased until the other day the social security board made public figures showing that about 19,900,000 persons were receiving government assistance of one kind or another—almost 6,300,000 families. And during the same period, the volume of business fell further into new low levels. The whole picture undeniably has grown worse. Then, there came from the President the request for the use of further money, some six billion dollars of it. It was the so-called lending-spending program that has just been enacted and the congress, anxious to avoid conflict with presidential will, rubbed its collective hands and said, in effect, "There! That takes care of the unemployed." So we will have new post offices, new bridges, new roads, new cities and new that—some time. Those things can not be put over on a day's notice. It takes time to get them started where they will employ workers. The portion of the six billions allocated for relief, of course, can be used at once because Mr. Harry Hopkins can have his boys and girls write checks at a rate which is positively amazing. The public construction phase will be valuable, or ought to be, to the candidates because the candidates can say to their political meetings: "Here it is—and from my hands, too." After that money is spent, then what? My conviction is that we will be just where we started. That is to say, we will be just where we were three years ago. Every one recalls, of course, how there was a pump priming of business then. It cost $4,880,000,000. The result was some very nice postoffices and other public buildings and an addition of $4,880,000,000 to the national debt. The administration tried some other pump priming, too, and succeeded in building up the national debt still higher. It is now pushing right up to the forty-billion mark. . . . Since the pump priming and the other spending ideas failed to accomplish anything in the other trials, there seems to be no reason to expect the new outlay of cash to do more than create a new high record for the national debt. It will do that, beyond question. But I said at the outset that there were others to blame. This fact has been brought to the fore by the condition lately much publicized in Chicago and Cleveland within the month. The cities were out of cash and the relief lines became riotous. There is not much to be done about starving people but to feed them. That is accepted. Yet, how did that happen? Why was the condition allowed to reach that stage? Here is the fact that will make me very popular, I am sure, in the areas where the shoe fits: The states have failed to assume their proper share of the responsibility. Let me repeat that: The states have failed to assume their proper share of responsibility! They have consistently done so, and the reason they have been chiseling and pulling at the federal teat is because they have been taught by the Washington government through six or eight years that they could do it and get away with it. The politicians within a state can not be blamed wholly, because they are politicians, seeking election or seeking to hold office or party power or what have you. It was so much easier to bring pressure to bear in Washington, go home with big checks, shout to the folks that they were bringing home the bacon—without adding to the tax of their home folks. That is, they said there was no additional tax because it was a federal tax that had to make up for what the states drew out and the federal taxes are not as easily seen as taxes in a state, a county or a city. It has come to such a pass these days that few state politicians dare to suggest at home that they raise the relief funds locally. It would be political suicide, they feel. So they follow the beaten track to Washington, and the Washington politicians from President Roosevelt down haven't the courage to send them back home without some token of appreciation—something of a minor character like a check for a few millions and a promise of more. If one is really going to trace this thing down to its start, I believe it has to go back to Herbert Hoover's administration. It will be recalled that Mr. Hoover proposed and obtained congressional action on a plan by which the Reconstruction Finance corporation was created. It was to loan money to tide business over until the depression had worn itself out. It was not a sound plan then; it is not sound now. It was opposed by Democrats then but it has been expanded and enlarged and glorified by them since. But the fact that it was created constitutes the tragedy. The fact that there was a spot where government cash could be borrowed started politicians looking to Washington. It was a pretty soft touch for them. The LaFollette type of mind and the group of professors who figured the nation could spend its way out of the depression moved right into the long halls and took over desks in every place they could find chairs. The thing spread like wildfire and it is still going, as witness the latest program involving six billion dollars. . . . It is going to require many years of effort to restore states to their own boundaries. They have got themselves into a debt with the federal government; they have found how easy it is to do that and they will do more, unless the people themselves realize what it means. Unless the states again take control of their own affairs, state lines will mean nothing. The nation will be run from Washington bureaucrats' desks and good government by the people themselves will be a thing of the past. There is a phase of this control from Washington upon which I want to record a few especial observations. I refer to the great waste that occurs when the federal government attempts to handle such a delicate and direct proposition as relief. This phase irks me and it ought to irk every one who hates to see stupid administration use up so much money needlessly. My morning paper a few days ago carried a dispatch from Cleveland announcing that public funds—from Washington—were going to be used to give work to four hundred men for six months. They are going to count the trees in Cleveland. Think of it—counting trees as a means of giving work! Surely, it is possible to create some other kind of work. I believe it would be better to give that money outright for the construction of some homes for fifty families, or any one of a hundred thousand things. Such things as this are bound to happen, however, when the states, counties and cities lean so heavily on Washington. Citizens lose control when they let their politicians dodge responsibility by calling on Washington for everything. And there is no doubt in the mind of any one who has studied the problem but that the citizens will pay more when their relief needs are met from Washington than if they forced their own officials to assume the responsibilities of their offices. I suppose, however, that it is not in the interest of the politicians to bring about recovery in a normal way, whether they are local or state or national politicians. If they can accomplish election the way it is now being done, they may as well continue. Each one has only one political life to give to his country and if he can make that political life a good long one by kidding his constituents—well, why not? I repeat, however, and there can be no denying the fact, that relief is going to cost each citizen more because the money is being chiseled out of Washington rather than the state or local treasuries. . . .

THREE LITTLE MAIDS

By JOSEPH W. LaBINE

When the leaves were turning yellow in the autumn of 1908, three little maids in flowing silken gowns marched up the stairs of a weatherbeaten Victorian building in Macon, Georgia, and breathlessly confronted the registrar of Wesleyan college, oldest chartered woman's college in the world.

Temporarily taken aback, the registrar quickly regained his composure and flipped open the pages of a great ledger. In the great book, the three little maids inscribed, one after the other, these names:

"E-Ling Soong
"Ching-Ling Soong
"May-Ling Soong
"Father: Charles Jones Soong, Shanghai, China."

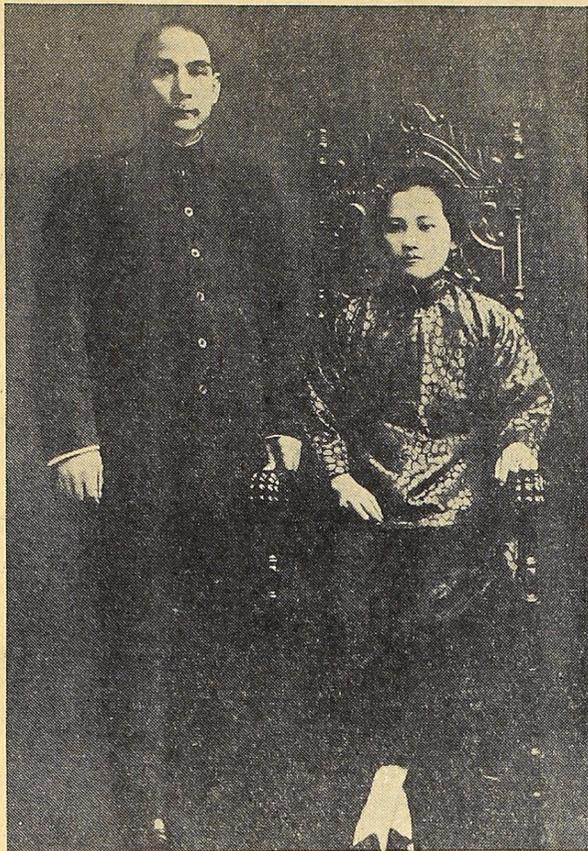

Then, armed with certificates of registration, the three little maids climbed more stairs, marched down a long corridor toward their rooms—and toward a place in history as one of the greatest trios of women in the chronicles of mankind.

Today, with China fighting for her very life as a free and independent democracy, the enrollment of the three Soong sisters at Wesleyan takes on many aspects of a turning point in history. For when the three little Chinese maids registered at an American college, the history of China began re-shaping itself to fit an American pattern.

It was a process which had been heading toward a climax for a full quarter-century.

In the 1880s the father of the three Soong girls, Charles Jones Soong, arrived in the United States as a poor relation, come to serve an apprenticeship with a wealthy uncle in Boston.

Fortunately for China, however, Charles Soong found a way out. Looking about for an American solution to his problem, he found it in the very best tradition of the Bay state. He ran away to sea, be-chair to pull down the old Imperial Dragon from her wall and put in its place the flag of the new Republic of China. Throwing the old banner to the floor, she exclaimed:

"Sun Yat-sen has achieved one of the most glorious deeds in the history of the world."

She Was Right.

Her enthusiasm was almost prophetic, for just four years later little Ching-Ling became the bride of Sun Yat-sen and, as his wife, was able to aid him in his mission of infusing the democratic American spirit into China's 400,000,000 people.

The historic significance of the American education of the Soong sisters became even more profound when the eldest, E-Ling, married Dr. H. H. Kung, himself an American university graduate as well as a descendant of Confucius and today the premier of China.

When her sisters returned to China, May-Ling transferred to Wellesley college in Massachusetts, to be near her brother at Harvard.

That little May-Ling would ever become more famous than her two illustrious sisters seemed almost an impossibility.

But in 1927 at one of the innumerable gatherings at the Soong house, May-Ling met a slim, young leader of the Chinese Republicans, Chiang Kai-shek, who had just concluded a spectacular campaign to unite China solidly behind the principles of Sun Yat-sen.

Chiang Kai-shek fell in love with May-Ling. Their courtship was an impetuous and a strange one. For interspersed with love-making were interminable discussions of economics, of China's history, her future, of great reforms and great plans. During the courtship, May-Ling converted Chiang Kai-shek to Christianity. He quickly became one of the most devout members of the Southern Methodist church. Then May-Ling and Chiang Kai-shek were married—and the most glorious decade in all China's 5,000 years began.

China's New Life.

Her first step was to found the New Life movement, one of the most sensational reforms ever conceived in China. Into this new organization Madame Chiang and her two sisters gathered all the leading scholars and savants of China.

With breath-taking rapidity the New Life movement broke ground for vast housing projects for the long-neglected Chinese working classes. Outside Shanghai's International settlement on Chinese-owned land sprang up a great civic center with museums, libraries, housing projects, theaters and parks, a living symbol of the greatness planned for all of China.

By 1937, the progress of Madam Chiang's New Life movement had assumed the speed of a race—a grim race in which the generalissimo and May-Ling strove to complete their modernization before their envious neighbor struck.

Then came war—a war which students of the Orient believe was begun purely to retard the progress of the awakened China. Much that May-Ling and Generalissimo Chiang and the Soong sisters had done was destroyed. Hospitals, universities, churches, housing projects, all were ruthlessly destroyed. But enough survives to form a new foundation.

When it is over the three little maids who registered at an American college 30 years ago may have a new chance to rebuild China on a sound and enduring plan—an American plan.

In the sleepy, lush civilization of the American deep South, Charles Soong found something kindred to the slow but determined life of the agricultural China which had given him birth. Soon the little Oriental cabin boy took off his white jacket for the last time and enrolled as a student at Duke university.

Back to the Orient.

When Charles Soong returned to China as a publisher of Bibles, one of his first social projects was to found the Chinese Young Men's Christian association.

And as his three daughters and his son grew, Charles Soong resolved to bring them up in the American way which had so profoundly influenced his own life. In the care of a missionary returning to the United States, he sent his four children to college—the boy, T. V. Soong, to Harvard; the three girls to staunch old Methodist Wesleyan.

The three Soong sisters spoke many times of their hope that China might some day become a great republic like the United States. And in 1911, they saw the first of their dreams for China come true when China became a republic under the inspired leadership of one of history's great republicans, Dr. Sun Yat-sen.

The enthusiasm of the second Soong sister, Ching-Ling, at this event is still remembered at Wesleyan. Classmates say that when first news came of Sun Yat-sen's success, Ching-Ling climbed onto a

"Fingers of Flame"

HELLO EVERYBODY:

Arthur A. Guinan of Brooklyn, N. Y., is today's Distinguished Adventurer. Art says that although he is a veteran of the World war and saw plenty of service in France, he had to come back home to get in a mess of trouble.

And that, boys and girls, is the way a lot of these adventure yarns start out. They start with a peaceful family scene like the one Art describes in his own home on an evening early in November, 1923. It was a cold, rainy Friday night outside, but indoors, in the Guinan dining room, it was cheerful and bright.

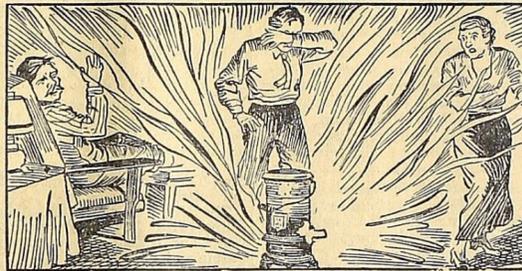

It was a little early to be lighting the furnace. That's why the Guinans were all gathered in the dining room. They had a kerosene oil stove burning in there to—well—to sort of take the edge off the dampness.

Art's mother and dad and brother were there. His dad, who had recently been discharged from the hospital where he'd spent ten months with a badly broken leg, was sitting in an easy chair with his bum leg stretched out stiffly in front of him. He couldn't walk on that leg yet, and was practically an invalid.

Their Oil Stove Exploded.

Mother was peeling potatoes. Art's brother had stirred up a mess of plaster and was patching a crack in the ceiling. Art had gone out to the kitchen to grab a bite to eat. He was just finishing up when his dad said he didn't like the way the oil stove smelled. Mother said she'd noticed it too. It was warm enough in the room by that time, anyway. She looked up and saw Art, who had just finished eating and returned to the dining room, and asked him to put the stove out.

Art says he had a special way of putting out that stove. "We used to turn it down as low as it would go," he says, "and then pick it up by the handle and give it a jerk to put out the last flicker of flame." But nowadays, Art realizes that that's no way to put out an oil stove.

On this particular night, though, he didn't realize it. He turned the wick down to the bottom, picked the stove up and gave it a jerk. It didn't go out, so Art gave it another jerk—harder, this time, than the first. The next thing he knew, he was holding onto something that looked and sounded like Vesuvius on a rampage.

That stove gave out a roar that could be heard a block away. A burst of flame six feet long shot across the room. Art's mother was sitting right in the path of it. In a split second she was flaming like a HUMAN TORCH!

Saved Mother but Forgot About Dad.

Art dropped the stove and ran to her. Her clothes were blazing in a dozen places. With his bare hands, he started tearing at her dress. "I was pulling that flame apart," he says. "Lord only knows how, but I kept pulling handfuls of burning cloth from her body. My brother started coming down from the ladder he was standing on. In the meantime my mother and I had worked our way into the kitchen and my brother joined me there."

Art and his brother were both pulling at those flames now, and they were making headway. At length they had torn away the last bit of burning cloth—beaten out the last spark. Then, suddenly, they thought of their dad!

Art says that right there he got the worst fright of his life. They had forgotten about dad in the rush to take care of mother, but now they realized that he was the one who really needed their assistance most. Dad was helpless—practically an invalid. He couldn't move out of his chair, and back there in the dining room, the whole place was blazing.

Art turned to run into the dining room. The door leading to it was a raging furnace. A curtain of flame covered its whole length and breadth. Art hesitated just a fraction of a second. Then he plunged right through the door, flames and all.

Flames Couldn't Stop Art.

There was a smoke-filled space in the center of the room where the flames had not yet spread. His dad was over at the other side of it. Art plunged across that space in nothing flat and gathered his father in his arms.

"His right shoe," Art says, "was almost burned from his foot. I started to carry him toward the back door, but about half way across the room I stumbled. Dad fell on top of me and knocked the wind out of me. I thought I'd never get it back again. Before I did, the flames had crept up on us."

It was about that time that Art felt a terrible pain in his right leg. When he looked at it he saw that the legs of his trousers were afire. But there was no time to lose. They had to get out of that room right away. Art picked his dad up again and dragged him toward the door with one arm while he was beating out the flames in his pants legs with the other.

It was a hectic five minutes. At last he was through the door. He set his dad down in a chair in the yard back of the house and ran to turn in the fire alarm. "It wasn't until I reached for the alarm box," he says, "that I realized how badly I was burnt. My hands looked like a couple of beefsteaks, and my legs were worse. That peaceful little home of ours looked like a hospital for the next six months."

Everybody Claims It

Members of the three religions regard Adam's peak, near Colombo, Ceylon, with reverence. It is famous for a footprint seven feet long. According to Buddhists the print was made by Buddha. Hindus, on the other hand, maintain that it was left by Siva, and Christians sometimes identify this region with the Garden of Eden, therefore holding that the footprint is that of none other than Adam.

Treasure House Among Marvels

At the Seraglio palace, Istanbul, there is a treasure house of gems that is among the marvels of the modern world. The collection has thousands of priceless diamonds, sapphires, emeralds, pearls of the first water, and the famed golden divan throne of the sixteenth century sultan, Selim the Grim. The throne is made of beaten gold, and studded with rubies, turquoise and emeralds.

Noble Indifference

Beware of ambition for wealth; for there is nothing so characteristic of narrowness and littleness of soul as the love of riches; and there is nothing more honorable and noble than indifference to money.—Cicero.

ARE YOU ONLY A 3/4 WIFE?

Men can never understand a three-quarter wife—a wife who is lovable for 3/4 of the month—but a hell-cat the fourth. No matter how your back aches—no matter how loudly your nerves scream—don't take it out on your husband.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure.

Make a note NOW to get a bottle of Pinkham's today WITHOUT FAIL from your druggist—more than a million women have written in letters reporting benefit. Why not try LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND?

True Nobility

If a man be endowed with a generous mind, this is the best kind of nobility.—Plato.

Unkind Words

An unkind word falls easily from the tongue but a coach with six horses cannot bring it back.

RIGHT THIS VERY MINUTE How Do You Feel?

Tired? Irritable? No ambition? Look at your watch—note the time. The same time tomorrow, compare how you feel then with the way you do right now! In the meantime, stop at your druggist and, tonight, drink a cup of Garfield Tea. Tonight—clean up inside!—Feel Different Tomorrow! Lose that fat-down feeling. Let Garfield Tea clean away undigested wastes, intestinal "left-overs." Acts gently, promptly, thoroughly. Drink like ordinary tea. 10c—25c.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery. Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder may be burning, scanty or too frequent urination. There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

Supervisor Hennigar read the following report of the Judiciary Committee:

Tawas City, Mich., April 13, 1938

Resolution:

To the Honorable Board of Supervisors:

Your Committee on Judiciary, to whom was referred the consideration of equitable assessment of real and personal property in the County of Iosco, in its several townships, respectfully reports its findings:

(1) It is the unanimous opinion of the members of this committee that there has been for a long period of years an inconsistent and unfair deterioration of valuations of real and personal property in certain townships of the county of Iosco.

(2) That the comparative valuations of farm and utility assessments show an unwarranted discrimination in favor of the latter type of assessments, the result of intent or carelessness.

(3) That the United States Gypsum Company, operating in Alabaster township, Iosco County, is rated as a $70,000,000 corporation which claims its deposits and equipment is valued at $50,000,000, a considerable portion of which must be the reason of its availability for water shipments and cheap freight expenditure when cargoes to alien reducing plants outside Iosco County. This corporation made a net profit of $8,400,000 in 1925, according to a review of its status and earnings published in "Forum," February 1937, taking away from Alabaster township and county of Iosco its natural mineral resources, returning to the township and the county on a valuation so low as to be obviously inequitable and incongruous, while of its 4500 employees many of whom are engaged in reducing the products of Alabaster township elsewhere, a mere dozen are listed on a local payroll.

(4) Your Committee further finds that the valuations placed on the real and personal property of the Consumers Power Company, operating in Osceola township has for years been assessed at valuations so low as to be obviously inequitable and incongruous. Your committee calls attention your Board to the press statements during the past week that Consumers Power Company earned last year $12,516,000 and paid in stock dividends the sum of $7,498,000.

Signed: H. C. Hennigar, James MacGillivray, Henry Klenow.

Moved by Hennigar, supported by Sommerfeld that the report of the Judiciary Committee be accepted and adopted. Roll Call: Yeas—Bellville, Black, Brayman, Burgeson, Cross, Hatton, Hennigar, Herriman, Klenow, Leaf, MacGillivray, Nunn, Seifert, Schmalz, Schneider, Sommerfeld—16. No—Anderson—1. Absent—1. Gentlemen:

We, the finance and apportionment committee to whom was referred the claims of W. E. Laidlaw, concerning a County Tax overcharge of seven dollars, we find that this is a just claim, and this mistake occurred on a county tax entry. This excess entry did not correspond with the amount of money in that total column, therefore this amount was collected by the County Treasurer, in delinquent taxes from the tax roll of 1930.

Therefore we recommend that the County Treasurer be authorized to reimburse Mr. Laidlaw for the amount of seven dollars.

Respectfully submitted: H. F. Black, H. C. Hennigar, V. J. Anderson, E. Burgeson, Ferd. Schmalz.

"Offended! How could you possibly offend a Lambert, Martha, after all you've done for us? But there's more to this business than you understand." The man's face darkened. He was recalling a hot June day—a blow that had left his jaw lame for a week. "There are things one can't forgive, or . . ."

He paused, not knowing just how to proceed; and the woman said, in the gentle way she had told him many truths in the years gone by: "Excuse me, Mr. Ned, but there's nothing we can't forgive—if we care enough. Run along up now. Run up and see your father."

"And when I got there," Ned told his wife later that evening, "Dad was sitting in the big wing-chair in Nora's bedroom. There was a fire on the hearth, and the place did look more—well, more cheerful, perhaps, than the rooms downstairs. He was reading a letter, but when he glanced up and saw me he stuffed it into a pocket, which made me wonder if it was from Leonora. I thought—honestly, Corinne, I sort of felt that he didn't like my finding him there. He got right up and said: 'Why didn't you telephone? If I'd known you were coming over I'd have been downstairs.'"

"Did you go down then?"

"No. It was plain he wanted to; but I said: 'Sit still, Dad. I'm only going to stay a minute. Did you know that Nora sailed for Italy this afternoon?' You see, Corinne, I thought it was better to speak right out. I felt, after what Martha'd said, that it might do him good to talk, if he once got started."

"What'd he say?"

"Nothing, for just a minute. I think my question took him a bit off guard. But you know Dad! He can always pull himself together. And after a minute he said quietly: 'Yes, I know.' That's all, Corinne. It made me feel almost uncomfortable—as if he'd said: 'It's none of your business, Ned. Get along home.' You know what I mean?"

"Oh, yes, I know!" Corinne's eyes narrowed unpleasantly. "He made me feel that way just after Nora left, when I was trying to tell him that he'd done exactly right. I'm fond of your father, Ned, but there are times when he irritates me to distraction."

A vision of the faithful Martha slinging teacups, caused Ned Lambert to smile a little. Then his wife asked: "Did you speak of Nora any more?"

"We did because I rather forced the subject—not because I was curious, you know, but I wanted to help him if I could. Dad's had such a lot of trouble through his family, Corinne. I've always—ever since I was old enough to think about it—wanted to feel that I, who've never gone against his wishes, had made it up to him. But tonight, sitting there in Nora's bedroom, it came over me that I was accountable for this last break that's hurt him more than anything since the trouble with my—my mother."

"You accountable!" Corinne closed the most talked-of novel of the month, forgot its 50 unread pages, and gave him her entire attention. "Of all the absurd statements! What would your father have had you do when that fellow hit you? Turn the other cheek?"

"It was a jaw, dear," Ned reminded her in a feeble attempt at humor. He hated his wife to get "worked up."

"If that's supposed to be funny," she retorted, "I don't see the joke. Why, you were black and blue! If your father hadn't stood by you he'd have been a beast, Ned. Well, what else did you say?"

"Not much. I ventured the remark that I wondered how their trip was financed; and Father answered with that uncanny way he has of understanding something you haven't said: 'Well, I didn't finance it, if that's troubling you.' That riled me a little, I'll admit, but I kept my temper. I felt so sorry for him, Corinne. I've never thought of my father as being an old man; but he looked old tonight, old and unhappy. I decided not to say anything further about Nora; and then with the best intention in the world, I put my foot in it!"

"How?"

Ned smiled, regretfully.

"It was this way: As the atmosphere seemed a little strained I got up and began moving about the room. That's such a beautiful room, Corinne."

"Beautiful? That shows your ignorance of such things, Ned." Corinne spoke as one with authority. "I'll admit it has a sort of charm; but it's no special period, so in an artistic way it's not correct. Why, that wing-chair you spoke of is covered with flowered chintz—and there are silk hangings at the windows! Imagine making such an error. And the bed and bureau are early American, while the rug (which must have cost your father a small fortune, too) is Oriental. Besides, so many books are out of place in a bedroom. Any good decorator would tell you that. But Nora refused any advice, you know; and that room's just like her. Awfully pretty if you admire that sort of thing, but—well it's really a hodge-podge."

"A damn fine hodge-podge," retorted Ned. "And it was that early American bed that made the trouble. I've always thought it the handsomest bed I ever saw. I stopped beside it to admire one of the posts. I never expected to stir Dad up when I asked where it came from. He didn't answer right away, so I turned around and—honestly, Corinne, he looked as if someone had struck him. Then he pulled himself up and said: 'It came from a country auction down in Maine. It was a rainy day. Only one antique dealer to compete with and he didn't know his business. I got that bed for forty dollars.'"

"I said: 'You certainly got a bargain, and any time you want to get rid of it . . .'"

"Well?" prodded Corinne as her husband stopped.

"That, it seems, was my mistake. Father said, and his voice was exactly as cold as if I'd been some smart Aleck trying to get the better of him in a business deal,

"What do I care about a son."

"That bed is not mine to get rid of, or as unpleasantly put it. It belongs to my daughter." Just that, Corinne."

Ned's wife sat up so suddenly on the chaise longue that the great American novel dropped unheeded to the floor.

"He has no right to answer you like that, Ned. I hope you told him so."

"Oh, calm down, my dear. I didn't have to. I guess he saw by my face how awfully surprised I was, for he came over and put his arm across my shoulders—said I mustn't pay any attention to him—that he was upset about something. We didn't quarrel. Never have, you know. We sat down again and talked about nothing in particular—the stock market—the weather—anything in fact, except Nora! He promised to go to bed soon as I left."

But James Lambert didn't go to bed just then. He sat quite still in Nora's big wing-chair ("I want one big enough to curl all up in, Daddy!") until he heard the front door close and knew that he would not be interrupted. Then he drew from a pocket the letter he was reading when Ned came in. Not that he didn't know it pretty well by heart, having already perused it a dozen times, as he did all Nora's letters. His eyes lingered on the signature—those childish black crosses below it. James knew instinctively that she had kissed them as she used to in the days of little-girlhood. The same Nora, and yet not the same. . . . Never, never, he vowed with stubborn bitterness, would she be the same to him. . . . Never again would he let her get near enough to hurt him.

And then, softly: "I wonder if she could possibly have seen me, there on the pier. . . . I don't believe so. . . . I kept well back until the very last, and there was such a crowd. . . . But it was strange, too, the way she waved at the last moment. . . . very strange. . . . I could have sworn, even at that distance, that her face brightened. . . ."

CHAPTER IX

It is a wise Providence that blinds our eyes to what lies ahead. Nora little thought as she stood on the deck of the Larino with Don's hand on hers, that she would be twice a mother before she saw her native land again—that she was to descend into the shadow of death herself—that she was to watch fine lines etched by the ruthless hand of Care gather about Don's happy, sea-blue eyes—that she was to fight for the life of a little boy tossing with fever in far off Cape Town.

Her first son was born in England on a May night. The winter had gone well. As Carl Venable promised, Don's "Letters from Capri" were welcomed with enthusiasm by the London editor; and the same letters (supplemented by thumbnail sketches by the great Venable) found a ready market in America.

And living in Italy was inexpensive. Nora soon made a home of the tiny pink villa with its glimpse of sapphire waters and rocky hillsides, which Constance Venable had ready for their arrival.

"This is the most heavenly spot," (she wrote her father) "and I'm fast becoming a thrifty Italian housewife, or should be if I weren't compelled to stop my work every few minutes to drink in the beauties of this twin-humped camel of an island, kneeling so gently in the blue, blue waters of the Mediterranean. It's well worth the effort of climbing the million or so steps that lead to our front door (I can hear you say, 'Don't exaggerate, Nora. It's a bad habit!'), to gaze down on this wealth of flowers and foliage. Nature was in a lavish mood when she fashioned Capri. I wish you could see it, Dad. In fact, the only thing needed to make me supremely happy would be to look out some day and discover that my handsome father had overcome his prejudice against every country not flying the Stars and Stripes, and was climbing that rocky path, though he wouldn't have reached enough to kiss me when he reached the top. . . ."

"The Venables are only five minutes walk (perhaps I should say climb!) away; and if you could look upon the seascape Ven's painting now, you'd mortgage the house to possess it. Incidentally, they have a beautiful piano on which they seem to consider it an honor for me to practice; so my fingers won't grow stiff, as I had feared they might. There are four young Venables ranging from sixteen to six—such jolly youngsters! And their mother is every bit as good a mother to me as she is to them, though she can't be fifteen years my senior. . . ."

This was quite true. Nora had not counted on Constance Venable in vain. "You say it's to be in May?" the older woman questioned thoughtfully. And then: "We must take you to England. Not that babies don't arrive daily in Italy!" she smiled; "but my Phil was born in London and I had a most skillful doctor. The nurse was a wonder, too. I'll write at once and engage her for you, Nora. I'll arrange everything. You'll want a room in a nursing home; and I'll write the doctor. We were planning to sail for New York the first of May. I must tell Carl to put it off another month. . . ."

And no protest on the part of Leonora would make her change. "Of course I shall stay with you!" she said, almost indignantly. "Don't you know that our Alice wouldn't be here if it weren't for Don? He kept on working over her when everybody told him it was useless. Nothing you ever ask of us, Nora, will be too much."

What Don and Nora never knew, was that half the expenses incurred by the arrival of this first son of theirs, were paid by Carl Venable, who would have paid them all had it been possible to do so without arousing Don's suspicions. All the young couple ever knew was that the bills were far, far less than they'd anticipated; for Nora was very sick indeed.

Don sometimes wished he could forget that nightmare time when the firm hand of an English doctor thrust him unceremoniously from the bare, white room which sheltered Nora.

"Get outside and sit down, my dear chap," he commanded briskly. "She won't suffer any more."

He had a very English accent, that doctor, which made Don wonder if the man were quite efficient! There was a bench in the corridor and he sank down on it, very weak as to knees; wondering how long this horrible business would go on; why the universe had to be populated in such a manner; and what for had they sent him out and let Connie Venable stay inside?

And after an interval which seemed hours, there came from beyond that door a cry like nothing he had ever heard before, but Don knew it instantly for the wail of his first-born. It was then that all the remaining strength went out of him, and he wiped the sweat from his forehead and said: "Thank God it's over!" But no one came from Nora's room except a nurse. She had a blanket-wrapped bundle in her arms, and was hurrying so fast she didn't see him; but when she returned a minute later without the bundle, Don caught her skirt, and though his question wouldn't seem to come, the girl appeared to understand and told him hastily: "It's a boy. A splendid little boy, but. . . ."

And with that "but" he was left alone again. The door closed, though during the moment it had opened a strong and sickish scent of ether drifted out to him. It was Constance Venable who came next (after a lifetime, it seemed to Don, with that nurse's ominous "but" still ringing in his ears); and with one look into Connie's face his heart stopped beating. Literally. He told Nora afterwards that he died for a minute. And then Constance sat down and took his hand. She said: "You've a son, Don—a beautiful little boy—and he broke in harshly: 'What do I care about a son? What's happened to Nora?'"

Constance was still stroking his hand as he'd seen her stroke the hands of her children when she wished to calm them. She answered: "Nora will be all right, Don. I don't care what they say, she will be all right! There were complications—something no one had foreseen. Just at the last we very nearly—lost her; but she will be all right."

Then, after another aeon, the door opened. It was the English doctor—the man with the accent. He threw one significant glance at Connie and laid his hand gently on Don's shoulder.

"She needs you, old man," he said—just that—but Don knew, and Constance knew, what he was thinking; and Connie still held Don's hand when he crossed the threshold of that quiet room.

He stood there looking down on Nora, a Nora as white as the bed on which she lay—as white as marble. Her eyes were closed. Don could not see her breathe. He wondered. . . . And then the doctor spoke, softly: "I'd take her hand, my dear fellow, if I were you."

His voice, despite the accent which had sounded so la-de-da an hour before, was very kind. And because no one had thought to bring a chair, Don dropped to his knees beside the bed and took that white, strangely transparent hand into his own. He had forgotten the nurses, the doctors, and Constance Venable. He said (so Connie told him later), "Come back, Nora. I can't go on without you. Come back, dearest."

Procrustean Act Doubles Oil Supply; Research Is Credited for Big Increase

Most boys and girls have read in the old Greek myths about Procrustes, who welcomed travelers at his home in a lonely spot beside the road. Procrustes had only one bed, but he always made his wayfarers fit the bed. If they were too long, he chopped off their feet. If they were too short he stretched them on a rack. Finally, he was slain by Theseus.

Saucer-eyed as are youngsters reading the exploits of Procrustes, even grown-ups blink in amazement at the achievements of chemists in the petroleum industry in stretching, shrinking and reshaping petroleum molecules. Nature has given this country a bountiful supply of crude oil, but some of the oil molecules are too large and some too small to fit the requirements for gasoline in modern high-compression motors.

Petroleum chemists have discovered effective methods to break down the fat molecules into smaller ones. Chemists also are able by other methods to rebuild molecules to a desired size and composition. What this juggling means to the average person is just this: if the petroleum chemists were unable to perform a Procrustean act, an additional 1,000,000,000 barrels of oil would have to be brought to the surface every year to meet the gasoline demand of the 25,000,000 motorists in the United States. Chemical research in the oil industry has had the practical effect, by reducing the amount of crude oil needed, of doubling the oil reserves of the United States. Without these chemical achievements of the petroleum scientists, the price of gasoline would be beyond the means of millions of families.

Yellow-Bellied Sea Snake
Though the yellow-bellied sea snake may not be ferocious-looking, it is nothing to get gay with, according to a writer in the Washington Post. A member of the dreaded cobra clan, it is among the most deadly of poisonous reptiles. In captivity it is particularly dangerous, becoming sullen and striking at everyone. It is the only poisonous sea snake found in the waters around America, although there are 49 other species just as deadly elsewhere. As the name indicates, this slender snake is a brilliant yellow underneath, though its top side is black. It has no gills, must come to the surface to breathe. It is sometimes caught in fishing nets.

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Warns Against Food Fads and Fallacies

Nationally Known Food Authority Explains How They May Endanger Health

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS
6 East 39th St., New York City.

AS SCIENCE and civilization have progressed, painstaking investigators have sought to replace ignorance with knowledge, to substitute truth for superstition. But in spite of their efforts, our eating habits are still influenced by a multitude of food fads and fancies, which should have no place in this enlightened age.

Some of these are harmless; others may endanger health. And the homemaker must learn to distinguish between fact and fancy.

Fish Is Not a Brain Food

One of the most persistent fallacies is the notion that certain kinds of food are especially beneficial for certain parts of the body. Many people believe that fish is a brain food and celery a nerve tonic. Lettuce is thought to be a soporific. None of these things is true.

The idea regarding fish probably arose because fish contains phosphorus and the brain also contains phosphorus. How simple it would be if one could increase brain power merely by eating fish. Unfortunately, there is nothing to it! The brain, like other parts of the body, requires a balanced diet. No case has ever been reported of a man soothing the irritated nerves of his wife by feeding her celery. And as for lettuce, it is a fine source of minerals, vitamins and gentle roughage, but it does not contain any narcotic drug that induces sleep.

Other Fallacies Disproved

Science has exploded many common notions about vegetables which may change your ideas of what is best to buy and eat. Many homemakers prefer lettuce that is light green in color and they believe that string beans which snap are superior in quality. But it has been demonstrated that deep green lettuce is much richer in vitamins and that a snap in string beans merely indicates that the beans have been kept in a cold, moist place.

False Notions About Fruit

A score of superstitions cling to the eating of fruits. There is a false notion that acid-tasting fruits cause or aggravate rheumatism, because they produce "acidity." The truth is that most fruits, regardless of their acid taste, leave an alkaline ash following digestion.

One often hears that fruit should not be taken at the same time as milk because the fruit acids will cause the milk to curdle. But the fact is that milk is always curdled in the stomach by the hydrochloric acid.

Not Necessary to Sip Milk

Another false idea is the widespread notion that milk must be sipped slowly or it will be difficult to digest. This has been refuted by a widely known investigator who made many tests. One day he fed a man a pint of milk in 10 seconds. The next day the same man was fed the same amount of milk in 10 minutes. On both occasions the contents of the stomach were examined a half hour later.

It was discovered that the milk which was drunk in 10 seconds had formed smaller curds than the milk which was sipped in 10 minutes. And in both cases, the curds were of practically the same consistency.

Water With Meals?

It is widely held that water should not be taken with meals, the argument being that it dilutes the gastric juice and thus interferes with digestion. This sounds logical and many people have been fooled. But the truth of the matter is that water stimulates the flow of the digestive juices and careful research has established that normally, water taken with meals in reasonable quantities aids digestion.

Danger of Half Truths

The most insidious food fallacies are those which contain some portion of truth—for example, the belief that cooked fruit is more wholesome than raw fruit. It is true that cooking increases the digestibility of some fruits and also has a sterilizing effect. On the other hand, most fruits are easily digested in the raw state, are more palatable and richer in vitamins.

A widespread belief which has a small portion, but only a small portion of truth, is that whole wheat bread is vastly superior to white bread. Whole wheat bread contains more minerals, vitamins and roughage than white bread. But the minerals and vitamins lacking in white bread can easily be supplied by other common foods, and there is no justification for going to the extreme of omitting white bread entirely from the diet.

Fad Diets Lack Balance

Far more harmful than the fallacies regarding individual foods are the fad diets constantly put forth by those who seek to exploit the homemaker's desire for dietetic knowledge.

Foods Not Incompatible

A fad diet which has gained a large number of adherents in recent years is based on the notion that certain foods—notably starches and proteins—are incompatible and should not be consumed at the same meal because they cannot be digested at the same time. It is interesting to note that this fad has been condemned by the medical profession and that a physician of the highest standing has proved clinically that starches and proteins do not interfere with one another in the stomach.

The fallacy of this theory is further appreciated when one realizes that there are few pure proteins or pure carbohydrates, most foods containing varying proportions of protein, carbohydrate and fat. Such foods as dried peas and beans and whole grain cereals contain a substantial percentage of both starch and protein.

Dangers of Fasting
Fasting is urged by some faddists as a means of "detoxifying" the body. Advocates of this practice claim that it is nature's method of housecleaning. As a matter of fact, fasting for any length of time may be dangerous to health, because it may result in the accumulation of incomplete oxidation products of fat, and the development of acidosis.

Homemakers must put aside superstitions, half-truths and food fallacies if they are to nourish their families properly.

Put your faith only in established food facts. Remember that upon your knowledge and breadth of vision depend, to a great degree, not only the health but the happiness of your family.

Questions Answered

Mrs. A. F. R., Jr.—Light corn syrup yields nothing but energy values, but dark corn syrup is a good source of iron. Pure molasses is rich in calcium and iron.

Miss M. F.—Nut protein is similar to the protein of meat and fish and nuts may be used in place of these foods when desired. They should not replace milk and eggs, however, as with few exceptions, they are low in minerals and cannot compare with eggs or milk as a source of vitamins.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—President Getulio Vargas of Brazil was a far-western frontiersman in his youth, still wearing "bombachos," or gaúcho trousers, for informal dress, and quite in character pumping a six-gun at the palace, and putting down a Graustarkian revolt.

A swarthy, stocky little man, quick on the draw, he has never been gun-shy, and impromptu shooting has been an occasional obligato in his rise to supreme power.

When he established his totalitarian state on November 10 of last year, there were those who said he was dealing in the dark of the moon with the green shirts—that here was where Germany and fascism got a toe-hold on this continent.

The green shirt revolt and its vigorous suppression by Sr. Vargas seems to be an answer to that, even if he had not previously made it clear that his authoritarian state was not of the European model.

Brazil has a complex racial make-up which provides no proscribed group or racial myth, the first requirement in fascist technique, and furthermore, when it comes to strong-arm government, all South American countries have plenty of home talent and indigenous skill.

Sr. Vargas recruited his political following as a liberal. He denounced monopoly and promised the overthrow of the "coffee plantation kings."

He seized power in 1930 by the overthrow of President Washington Luiz, with the aid of his lifetime friend, old General Aurelio Monteiro. Luiz had won the election against him, but Vargas raised a cry of fraud.

From the first he ruled partially by decree, now entirely, since the adoption of the constitution of November 10. His reorganization of the country followed established dictatorial practice in the formation of labor "syndicates," the fixing of maximum and minimum wages, and the denial of all rights of free press and free assemblage.

He is a famous orator, speaking a fluent and flowery Portuguese, using the radio a great deal in national appeals. He is credited with just about the shrewdest political intelligence in South America. In his prairie town, he attended a private college, later enrolled in a military college, but was diverted to the law.

His rise through minor offices to the national congress parallels the standard career chart of our congressional record biographies—district attorney, state legislature and all the rest of it.

Air Forces Defend U. S. in Mock War
The make-believe war in which the eastern seaboard was defended against "black" expeditionary forces from overseas was the first large-scale work-out of our "flying fortresses" under a unified command. Major General Frank M. Andrews, running the show, is one of the few flying generals.

He gathered up the strands of the unified service when the GHQ air force, which he commands, moved into the huge air base at Langley field, March 1, 1935.

Called the "handsomest man in the service," he is quietly effective and the last man in the world to be called a swivel-chair officer. He warns the country against a shortage of fliers and urges civilian training. He was not an A. E. F. fier.

In 1934 he made the unusual jump from lieutenant-colonel to brigadier-general and was made a major-general in 1935. He was graduated from West Point in 1906 and was with the cavalry on the Mexican border, before he found his wings.

The Mayflower Party

The Mayflower brought 41 men and their families—102 in all. The Speedwell, which set out with the Mayflower, proved unseaworthy and turned back. The Mayflower was followed the next year by the Fortune of 55 tons, which arrived at Plymouth in November, 1621, with some 30 additional emigrants. In 1623 the Ann and the James of 140 and 44 tons, respectively, arrived with 60 more members for the colony. The passengers in these vessels completed the list of those who are usually called first-comers.

Her Gown of Airy-Fairy Thin Weave

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

NOW that the season has come to exchange lover's knots for marital ties, the fancy of brides-to-be turns happily to a glamorous picture of billowy tulle and lovely flowers and wedding array for herself and her attendants that shall be fashioned of fabrics which needs must tune to the romance and beauty of the occasion.

A highly important style message for brides-prospective is the wide use being made this season of airy-fairy diaphanous silk sheers for the making of the wedding gown as well as for the bridesmaid frocks and the dresses of the little flower girls. There is an ethereal elusive beauty about the wedding scene that is carried out in terms of these lovely silk transparencies such as silk marquisette, filmy-as-cobweb nets, tulle and chiffons and silk organzas and mousseline de soies that blend ideally into the setting of a perfect day in June or in later summertime.

The bride in the illustration makes an entrancing picture in her gown of lovely summery silk marquisette. Its youthful princess lines, its enhancement of decorative lace appliques and its heart-shaped décolletage are in the quaintly beautiful "Gone With the Wind" tradition. The train is a spectacular part of the dress that reveals through a full length silk filmy net veil with lace coronet to match the gown. The bride carries a seed pearl prayer book.

Silk sheers are also favored for attendant frocks as they are smart for many summer evenings as well as the wedding itself.

Even the little flowergirl's dress, also of silk sheer, is selected so that it can be worn later on for birthday or dancing school parties. The cunning child pictured in the inset is clad in peach silk marquisette, the surplice front of which presents a new line for children's frocks that is both charming and youthful. This forms a ruff that is tied in at the high waistline with a mauve velvet ribbon matching the ribbon on the puffed sleeves.

Traditional white satin is seen in many new versions. In Paris, Molyneux shows a sensational wedding gown in broche silk satin with a lily design. It is of Second Empire crinoline silhouette with posies and sprays of lily-of-the-valley holding the period-draped skirt. In America, many women are choosing the long, fitted bodice for their wedding dress as well as for their street, spectator sports and evening dresses. One smart version in white duchess silk satin features this moxy age waistline with a full gathered skirt and train. Many brides prefer a gown on princess lines for its slim reed-like grace. In silk marquisette as pictured it is really fit for a princess.

Silk net wedding veils are equally smart in the long or hip length versions. Often they have caps to match the dress or the bridal corsage. A simple and out of the ordinary cap worn by a recent bride had a peaked crown, the entire headpiece made of closely allover shirred tulle same as the veil.

A charming suggestion for the bridesmaids is that of cunning little boleros fashioned entirely of flat sewed flowers. These may either match the color of the silk organza gowns they top or they may be in contrasting color. Very effective also is the bolero that is made of pastel colored lace worn with the gown of silk marquisette in matching or contrasting color.

NEW COTTON KNITS
By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Here are two stunning Sea Islander knit sports costumes made of the famous sea island cotton grown on Georgia island plantations reminiscent of the days when Spanish conquistadores took these golden isles. The jacket idea as interpreted in the model shown at top is high fashion. Women are not only wearing the knitted jacket with its companion knitted skirt but they are considered very smart with the cloth tailored skirt.

TWO-PURPOSE GOWN FINDS MUCH FAVOR

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The tendency these days is to have a foundation dress with endless accessory ensembles in reserve so as to change the character of the costume to tune to occasion. The newest entrant into the interchangeable costume realm is the dress of black or navy crepe which is sold with a full length detachable front panel of pleated crepe in white or some contrasting color. For the practical hours of the day the dress is worn without the panel and you can run about town looking trim and tailored. Or in the office you will appear "neat as a pin" dressed appropriately for business hours.

To keep the bridge date or accept an informal dinner engagement, you can don the white or colorful pleated panel in a jiffy. It fastens up over the shoulders and there are ribbon straps and bows to adjust to make it look like an integral part of the dress, for it extends from neck to hem.

Vogue for Pleats Feature of the Current Fashion

The vogue of pleats, which is a feature of the current fashion trend, is not confined to skirts. A frock which has its own matching bolero has a pleated section below a plain square yoke. A skirt-waist dress with an all-around pleated skirt also has a pleated blouse, the sleeves being the only part of the frock to be left severely plain.

The pleated fashion in millinery is reflected by pleated sashes which adorn many of the new broad-brimmed straw models and also the fabric hats which have wide pleated brims.

Leather Fashionable

Leather is used for everything this year from entire dressy afternoon suits in pastel shades to trimming on evening gowns.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for June 12

FACING THE SUPREME TEST OF SERVICE

LESSON TEXT—Mark 14:32-36. GOLDEN TEXT—Not what I will, but what thou wilt. Mark 14:36. PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus in the Garden. JUNIOR TOPIC—In Gethsemane. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Courage in the Face of Danger. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Challenge of God's Will.

No man has ever faced such a crisis as Jesus met in the Garden of Gethsemane, for He was the Son of God incarnate in order to bear the sins of the world. No one can ever fully understand the agony of soul involved when God "made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in him" (II Cor. 5:21). It is, therefore, true that we may never say that we have gone "through Gethsemane." But there is a very real sense in which our Lord's experience is shared by His disciples, in a lesser degree and as ordinary human beings.

Our lesson brings before us the closing scene of Thursday before the crucifixion. The day has been crowded with important events, among them the eating of the Passover, the revelation that there was a traitor among the twelve, the institution of the Lord's supper, the precious words of the upper room, the intercessory prayer in the garden.

I. Exceeding Sorrowful (vv. 32-36).

The text uses many words to convey the depth of His soul's agony, as though it were impossible to express it in the faulty medium of speech. So it is, for our Lord here experienced something far more serious than a dread of physical death. He was not a coward. He was not afraid to die. His soul was about to have put upon its spotless sinlessness the stain and dishonor of the world's sins. Little wonder that He was "sorrowful even unto death" (v. 34).

Since this was the road the Master trod, should not His servants tread it still?

II. Alone with God (vv. 37-41).

Jesus took with Him into the secluded place in the Garden the three who were closest to Him in the circle of disciples. He counted on their fellowship and sympathy in His hour of anguish. Merely to have them near Him, to know that they were there to watch and pray even though they could not share His holy burden, was to be a comfort to Him. We try to do as much for one another in hours of bereavement and disappointment, but how much greater was the opportunity of these three, and how ignominiously they failed. The spirit was willing (v. 38), but the flesh took the upper hand, and they slept! He was alone with His Father, when He prayed that if it were possible the hour might pass from Him, but in true and beautiful submission said, "not what I will, but what thou wilt."

The follower of Jesus will know this experience, too. While he will ever find it to be true that there is nothing more precious than the friends God gives him, he should prepare himself to expect the arm of flesh to fail him. There is no more bitter experience in human relationships than to count on those who should stand by, come what may, and to find that they have slept through our hour of soul-struggle.

III. Betrayed by a Kiss (vv. 42-46).

To betray the one who had done nothing but good, who had loved him and served him even in the washing of his feet, this would have been far more than one could have expected of even the sin-blackened heart of a Judas. But he fills the measure of his ignominy to overflowing by betraying his Lord with the sign of affection—a kiss.

We know full well that we may not stand on the same ground as our Lord even here, for, whereas He had done nothing to merit betrayal, we at our best are not able to stand forth without fault. Nevertheless, great is the hurt when we face the betrayals of life. It may be one whom we have befriended, who has been the object of our loving thought and care, and who in the hour when he thinks to gain himself some advantage or avenge some fancied wrong strikes us in the back, even as he smilingly professes to be a friend. Shall we be embittered in soul and give like for like? God forbid! Let us rather say as Jesus did to Judas, "Friend, wherefore art thou come?" (Matt. 26:50.)

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

Rag Rug Crocheted in Squares.

THE diagram shows how the contrasting squares are arranged to give the rug its interesting design. Whatever color scheme you use, black will be most effective for joining the squares and for an edging of single crochet around the outside of the rug. If the materials you have are not the colors you want, don't forget there is always the dye pot. Producing your own colors may be the most exciting part of rug making.

A crocheted rag rug like the one shown here uses odds and ends. Wool rags make a nicer rug than cotton, or rug yarn may be substituted if desired. Either a wood or large steel crochet hook is used. The rug shown here measures 36 by 21 inches. The 5-inch squares are made separately in single crochet stitch and then joined with crochet slip-stitch. If rags are used, tear or cut the strips not more than 1 1/4 inches wide, and work with the raw edges turned in as shown here at A. Measure each square carefully so they will all be exactly the same size. Full instructions for slip covers for side chairs like the one shown are in the book offered below.

NOTE: Every Homemaker should have a copy of Mrs. Spears' book SEWING, for the Home Decorator. Forty-eight pages of illustrated directions for making slipcovers and curtains; also dressing tables; lampshades and other useful articles for the home. Price 25 cents postpaid (coin preferred). The following people were neither absent nor tardy this semester: Vernon Hill, Elsie Rollin, Katherine Westcott, Evelyn Colby, Rosalie Groff, Lou Libka, Richard Clark, Willard Musolf, John Smith and Hugo Wegner.

A few people in our room have the measles.

We are planning to have our annual picnic Thursday, June 16 in the city park. Parents are invited.

Notable for Royal Tombs

Hue, Indo-China, is notable for its royal tombs where rest the former emperors of the province of Annam. One of the principal tombs, that of Emperor Khai Dinh, took ten years to build. Like other royal burial plots this one rises in a series of terraces flanked by gardens, moats and patterned retreats. Inside a great temple, that tops a hill, is a figure of the emperor seated on a gold replica of his throne in the imperial palace. The walls are decorated with hunting scenes made of bits of inlaid colored glass.
