FREIGHTERS EDGE LOCALS OUT, 6 TO 4

To Resume League Play at Alabaster Next Sunday

In a July Fourth exhibition game at the local athletic field, the Anchor Motor Freight base ball team, of Flint, edged out the local team by a 6 to 4 score.

The visitors achieved their victory by scoring a brace of runs on each the fourth, fifth and ninth innings.

The locals took a two run lead in the first inning on a pass to Davis, C. Libka's sacrifice and singles by Quick and Laidlaw. They increased this lead with another marker in the third. "Lefty" Quick singled, stole second and third and came home on Woody's bad throw to third.

The Flint Freighters scored their first runs of the game in the fourth on a base on ball, a double by Mangold and a single by McTaggart, and went into a one run lead in their next turn at bat.

Tawas City tied the score at four with a run in the sixth. Quick again opened the attack with a single and stole second and third and scored on Laidlaw's double to left center.

Both pitchers settled down then until the Flint broke loose with four lusty hits in the ninth to win the game.

"Lefty" Quick and "Walt" Laidlaw contributed the heaviest attack for the locals. "Lefty" getting four singles out of four times up, scored three runs and stole five bases, while "Walt" hit two singles and a double.

The team which took the field for Tawas City was made up of players unfamiliar with their new positions. W. Laidlaw, just recovering from a week's illness, started in right field. E. Libka did the catching in the first three innings. Smith arrived late, having taken part in the parade at Oscoda. M. Mallon was out of the line-up due to an infected finger, and some of the other regulars chose that day to leave town on short vacations. So, all in all, the made-up team played a good game of ball and proved to the management that they can be depended on when called for duty.

Bronson-Moeller

In a ceremony distinguished for its simplicity which took place Monday morning at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Moeller, Alma Bronson, daughter of Mrs. Alma Cathaline of Whittemore, became the bride of Harold Charles Moeller, of this city.

The services were read at 11:30 in the morning by Rev. J. J. Roelke before the fire-place in the living room which was beautifully decorated with baskets of mixed summer flowers.

For her simple wedding the bride chose a white silk suit with hat and crepe blouse of navy, and white accessories completing her costume and carried a fan bouquet of feverfew with pink baylis roses. Lucile Bronson, of Detroit, in a brown and white linen suit with white hat and accessories, carrying a colonial bouquet of feverfew with yellow gladiolus roses, was her sister's only attending bridesmaid. Herbert Cholger, cousin of the groom, assisted as best man.

Following the ceremony, dinner was served at the G. H. Q. to the forty guests. The tables were very attractively arranged with bowls of summer flowers and the white bride's cake.

Mr. and Mrs. Moeller left on a motor trip for several days through Northern Michigan and Canada and upon their return will reside in the former Ray Smith residence in this city where Harold is interested in the grocery business.

Among the out of town guests were: Mrs. Alma Cathaline, mother of the bride, of Whittemore; Mr. and Mrs. Jack Wats, of Cleveland, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Kulp, and daughter, Beverly; Mrs. John Hunt, Mrs. John Fiedler, John Wolf, all of Detroit.

Friends of Alma and Harold extend their hearty congratulations.

CROWDS ENJOY WHITTEMORE CELEBRATION

One of the attractions in drawing the several thousands of people to Iosco over the week-end was the Big Celebration and Home-Coming at Whittemore. Excellent weather and the fine hospitality of the people of that city made the day a pleasant one for the large crowd in attendance.

Two former Iosco County residents, Mr. and Mrs. James E. Ballard, of Niles, Michigan, voiced the opinion of the many former residents in attendance when they said "We certainly had a wonderful time. We met many of our old friends and spent Monday afternoon pleasantly recalling the old days."

In the ball games, Twining vs. Whittemore, Sunday, and Sterling vs. Whittemore, Monday, Whittemore was the winner of both games with ample margins.

Hon. Roy O. Woodruff, the principal speaker on the program, was unable to be present, but the audience enjoyed the presence of Senator Miles Callaghan and other prominent men. Carnival, contests, games, fireworks, dancing, races, parades, and other amusements filled every minute of the big three day event and the crowds which jammed the streets went home each night tired but happy.

This year's celebration exceeded all former celebrations held at Whittemore as to number in attendance and amount of entertainment provided.

CREDIT BUREAU ESTABLISHED HERE

A new institution to be known as the "Merchants Credit Bureau" was opened here on July 1, and has set up its office in the Bank Building next door to the post office, Tawas City.

It is intended to serve some 12 or more towns in this trading area and is to be identical in operation with some 65 other bureaus in Michigan, all affiliated together to form the State Association of Credit Bureaus and all belonging to the National Retail Credit Association.

The purpose for which it is formed, as in all these other localities, is for the exchange among its members of credit information and experience, and the collection of accounts.

The local bureau owned and controlled by its members is to be under the supervision of Verne Byrum, of Bay City who has had considerable experience in credits, collections and auditing.

The many merchants, business and professional men, who have cooperated together in the establishment of this bureau, have been largely influenced and guided by the many benefits derived by the members and communities taken as a whole, in the neighboring localities where similar bureaus have been in operation for a number of years.

In years gone by a credit bureau was considered possible only in the large cities, but it has been thoroughly demonstrated in recent years that a number of smaller towns cooperating together, can avail themselves of the many advantages of a credit bureau.

WAGES FOR REAL WORK

President, Opposing Outright Dole, Still Looking for Solution of Unemployment Problem

Speediest ship in our navy, the destroyer McCall, was commissioned at the Mare Island navy yard in California. The McCall, first privately built navy vessel since 1921, has a specified speed of 38½ knots, but in recent tests was reported to have averaged 42 knots. It carries four 5-inch guns and four quadruple torpedo tubes and is especially fitted for quick attacks on capital ships.

Edward W. Pickard

SUMMARIZES THE WORLD'S WEEK

Spending Is a Stop-Gap

DECLARING the New Deal's objective is to give wages for real work and that he is opposed to the outright dole for bare existence, President Roosevelt said in a press conference that he is still looking for a permanent solution of the unemployment problem. He made it clear that he did not believe relief or public works afforded anything more than a stop-gap remedy for a little understood dislocation of the nation's economic and industrial life. In fact, he said, no country in the world had as yet worked out a method for dealing with the most acute unemployment situation in the history of the world.

He noted that public works expenditures had worked better in Sweden than in this country, because the Swedish government had been able in recent prosperous years to put on heavy taxes and pay off its borrowings. He said the Swedish method was being given close study. The President warned that the prosperity which vast outlays for rearmament appeared to have brought to European nations was unsound. When the munitions plants close down, he predicted, the nations of Europe will find themselves weaker in an economic sense than ever before. No nation, he argued, could spend its way back to prosperity by laying out vast sums in unproductive goods like weapons of war.

All federal spending agencies received instructions to launch the big spending push July 1, Mr. Roosevelt said. Funds will pour out through the Works Progress administration, the Public Works administration, the Civilian Conservation corps and the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

Aubrey Williams Scolded

AUBREY WILLIAMS, deputy WPA administrator, aroused the indignation of many citizens, especially of opponents of the administration, when he advised organized relief enrollees at a meeting in New York to keep the Roosevelt administration in power and to elect 100 per cent Roosevelt Democrats to office. He even incurred a mild rebuke from the senate committee created to investigate senatorial campaign fund expenditures and the use of public money to influence voters.

The committee pronounced Williams' speech "unfortunate" because of his position in the relief organization and uttered a warning against attempts by the spenders of the government's relief and pump priming billions to influence the votes of beneficiaries.

Williams sent a letter to the committee claiming there was no political intent in his speech and asserting he had been misquoted.

Farmers Oust a Union

FIVE hundred angry farmers invaded the Richland Co-operative creamery at Richland Center, Wis., to which they sell their milk, and drove out seven employees of a teamsters' union. They then forced the remaining employees to sign statements that they would not join a labor organization, and established a picket line to keep out union members and organizers.

The demonstration was the climax of five months' resistance by the co-operative's directors, members and patrons against the organization of the plant by the American Federation of Labor teamsters' union. At the insistence of the national labor relations board, the creamery had just agreed to accept the union as a bargaining agent and not to oppose recognition further. N. S. Clark, Milwaukee regional director of the labor board, had agreed to withdraw charges of unfair labor practices against the company.

Clark said later that all offers toward a compromise with the creamery had been withdrawn. The farmers who took part in the demonstration had outlawed themselves, he said, and declared he would ask the Washington office of the labor board to prosecute them.

Indiana G.O.P. Picks Willis

RAYMOND E. WILLIS of Angola, Ind., a newspaper publisher and veteran political leader, was nominated for the senate by the state Republican convention in Indianapolis. Willis was named on the third ballot, defeating four rivals among whom was James E. Watson, former senator.

The nominee, who is sixty-two years old, has been the active editor and publisher of his weekly paper, the Angola Republican, since its establishment in 1898. He is president of the Steuben Publishing company, and, with another editor at its head, publishes the Angola Herald, a Democratic organ.

Fish Attacks Hamilton

HEATED discussion over immediate control of campaign funds among members of the Republican national executive committee, meeting in Washington, gave Rep. Hamilton Fish of New York an opportunity to renew his fight on National Chairman John Hamilton, whose removal he demanded.

With Hamilton out of power, Fish said, the Republicans would win 10 senate seats and 100 house seats. With Hamilton at the helm, he warned, Republican gains would be reduced by half.

Rep. Joe Martin of Massachusetts and Sen. John Townsend of Delaware, chairmen, respectively, of the house and senate G. O. P. campaign committees, have demanded allotment of funds from the national committee and exclusive control of their expenditure. Hamilton has resisted these demands.

Representative Bertrand Snell of New York, Republican leader in the house, told the committee that he intended to retire from public life and would not seek re-election this fall.

Italy Checks Franco

VIRGINIO GAYDA, noted editor and spokesman for the Fascist regime in Italy, declared that Italy had advised Franco, leader of the Spanish insurgents, to use "moderation" in his efforts to prevent British and other foreign ships from bringing supplies to government Spain. Gayda said, however, that Italy approved the bombing of vessels carrying contraband, but disclaimed any Italian responsibility therefor.

Representations by the earl of Perth, British ambassador to Rome, had opened the way to an agreement to end the bombings. Mussolini was reported as ready to act only to spare Prime Minister Chamberlain from embarrassment.

London dispatches said Great Britain, France, Italy and Germany had agreed to split the cost of withdrawing foreign troops from Spain. Russia refused to pay a full share of the expense, estimated at 10 million dollars.

Signs of Compromise

THERE are distinct indications of compromise and co-operation in the American picture, and hopes for restored prosperity are somewhat revived. The stock market has become unusually active, and private enterprise is awakening. Unfreezing of three billions in stored-up credit is expected to result from new banking regulations ordered by the President. Thousands of contracts for approved projects to cost almost $500,000,000 have been sent to all parts of the country by the Public Works administration.

Mr. Roosevelt, in his latest radio address to the nation, said: "In simple frankness and in simple honesty, I need all the help I can get," and it seems that the people are ready to give that help if the administration will do its part.

Notable in the President's talk was the admission that mistakes have been made not only by his opponents and by industry and labor, but also by government leaders. He sharply attacked reactionaries in business, blaming them for much of the current depression.

Asserting his continued belief in individual enterprise and the profit motive, he criticized the recent congress for failing to enact his program for government reorganization and legislation to aid the financially depressed railroad industry. At the same time, however, he said the legislators "achieved more for the future good of the country than any congress between the end of the World war and the spring of 1933."

Wants Liberals Elected

MOST of the President's radio speech was frankly political. He declared himself the leader of the liberals and held that, as such, it was his privilege to intervene in state primary and election campaigns for the purpose of insuring the defeat of those whom he characterized as conservatives, the opponents of his policies.

This aroused the indignation of many Democratic statesmen like Senators Burke of Nebraska and King of Utah.

Senator King asserted the President should not use the great advantage he has in controlling the purse strings of the huge spending program. "People who have fought for the Democratic party for a great many years do not like interference in their state affairs by outsiders," he said. "I do not believe the President should meddle in the primary elections of the Democratic party or any other party."

General opinion was that Mr. Roosevelt had widened the split in the Democratic party and by his words had placed the stamp of his approval on the attempted "purge" directed by Corcoran, Cohen and others of his advisers.

For Naval Expansion

IMPETUS was given the naval expansion program with PWA allotments of $27,883,000 for the enlargement, extension and remodeling of existing plants and facilities of the navy department.

With orders for full speed ahead the navy department said that 113 projects, approved by Mr. Roosevelt, will be under way by August 15. Among the projects are power plant improvements, foundry building, high frequency radio station, fleet moorings, turret assembly facilities, improvements to ship building ways, structural assembly, electric and sheet metal shops, water storage, railroad tracks, noncommissioned officers' quarters, storage buildings and other improvements.

Mustn't Seize Hainan

THE British and French envoys in Tokyo warned Japan that any occupation of Hainan, Chinese island off the south coast of China, would be met by joint Franco-British action. The island, which lies near French and British trade routes, was bombed by Japanese flyers.

Germany is recalling the Germans who have been acting as advisers to the Chinese army, and diplomats believe Germany may now give active aid to Japan.

Swedes Celebrate

AMERICANS of Swedish descent by the thousand and many from Sweden gathered at Wilmington, Del., for the celebration of the 300th anniversary of the landing in America of the first Swedes and Finns. From the old country came Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf with a large party, but he was confined to his suite on the liner Kungsholm by illness. His place was taken by his son, Prince Bertil.

The principal event of the opening ceremony was the presentation of a monument erected by Sweden on the landing site. The presentation was made by Prince Bertil and accepted by President Roosevelt. Then the President presented the monument to Gov. Richard McMullen for the state of Delaware.

After the monument ceremony there was a lawn party attended by Crown Princess Louise.

The celebration was continued for four days in Delaware, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, parts of which states were embraced in the New Sweden founded in 1638 by a company of 150 Swedes and Finns sent to America by Gustafus Adolphus.

White Hope Era Forecast With Louis Victory

OLD-TIMERS who saw Joe Louis polish off Max Schmeling in two minutes and fifteen seconds in their recent championship fight in New York are predicting that another open season for White Hopes looms ahead—a season reminiscent of the almost forgotten days of a generation ago when Carl Morris, Jim Flynn, Luther McCarthy, Frank Moran and Jess Willard were crowding their way up for a chance at the heavyweight belt which dusky Jack Johnson had won from Jim Jeffries.

But it's going to take a mighty good man to give Joe any competition, on the basis of his sensational knockout of the crafty Schmeling. From all appearances he is going to be the top-man heavyweight for a number of years to come. There was considerable doubt about that before the fight, particularly in view of his knockout in 1936 by Schmeling and his indifferent showing a while back against the mediocre Tommy Farr.

Joe showed he was a great champion, though, and finally made good the predictions made about his fistie genius two years ago when he was knocking all opposition cold and before he met Schmeling the first time.

Schmeling wasn't in Louis' flight this time. It was a massacre from the start. Louis smothered the puzzled German with fists and had him on the canvas almost as soon as the fight started. He clubbed him down twice more before the fight was stopped. The kidney punch which Max said disabled him and which necessitated his having hospital treatment afterward for a broken vertebra was delivered after Louis had rocked Max with blows to the head.

$200,000 a Minute

Louis had the distinction of being the only champion in history to knock out an opponent before the first round was over. He also set a new world's record for earnings. His share of the gate was $400,000, making his time worth approximately $200,000 per minute, or $3,225.80 per second.

Promoters will probably look in vain for anyone in the present crop of heavyweights sufficiently handy with his fists to relieve Joe of his crown. Only three fighters of today would stand an outside chance: Max Baer, who rehabilitated his reputation as a big-time performer when he fought Tommy Farr recently; Tony Galento, who has been called the "human punching bag"; and Gunnar Barlund, the doughy Swede, who stopped Buddy Baer just when that young man seemed headed toward a ring career.

Max is scheduled to meet Joe in September for a crack at the title. How much of a fight Max would be able to make against the champion is extremely problematical. The Baer who knocked out Schmeling, Carnera and others would make a good showing.

But the Baer who lost to Braddock and Louis wouldn't stand the ghost of a show. Max Baer's chances for future success depend on his physical condition and on his mental state. He can beat fighters he thinks he can beat, if he is in condition. In or out of condition he would be a push-over for Louis unless he conquered the jitters that had him shaking just before his previous fight with Louis.

Night Clubs Out

Baer claims he is in condition and that he will train faithfully and this seems to be borne out by the facts. He has cut out the night club stuff since his marriage and the birth of his son. His decisive victory over Tommy Farr of England, more decisive than Louis scored over Farr, indicates he is telling the truth. He is only twenty-nine years old. When he's right he can hit hard enough to knock anybody out.

If Max can't stop Louis and the odds are that he won't, then Galento and Barlund are all that stand in the way. That is, until a modern crop of White Hopes begins to fight its way up for the chance to meet the Brown Bomber.

Babe Manager?

WHEN the canny Larry McPhail, business manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, signed Babe Ruth as coach recently, he not only added thousands of dollars a year to the pulling power of the Dodgers at the turnstiles, but he aroused one speculation that intrigues sports fans everywhere. Will the Babe be Brooklyn's next manager?

From all indications the popularity of Manager Burleigh Grimes is waning rapidly, not only with the fans but with the management. While the announcement of Ruth's appointment as coach broke as sudden news, those on the inside say negotiations have been under way for weeks and that it was Ruth himself who sold the management on the idea of signing him.

There isn't much chance of a switch until the season is over, if it does occur then. The Babe has been away from the game long enough to be just a bit rusty. Moreover, he will have to acquaint himself with the strength and weaknesses of National league teams and players. But by next year, the insiders say, he will be ready.

What kind of a manager would Ruth make? Baseball men are unanimous on the subject of his ability. They say he has baseball sense—an asset you must be born with. One authority declares there never was an outfielder in the majors who made fewer mistakes than the Babe. This instinct guides a manager as well as a player in making decisions, the results of which will win or lose ball games.

Fans everywhere have wondered why Ruth hasn't been given a manager's job up to now. Colonel Ruppert, owner of the New York Yankees, gave the Babe serious consideration for the job, but decided otherwise because he believed the home-run king was too happy-go-lucky.

Here and There—

JOE LOUIS is the fifteenth holder of the heavyweight championship under Marquis of Queensberry rules. . . . The only other colored fighter to gain the title was Jack Johnson. . . . Fred Fulton, who once had designs on the heavyweight championship, is managing a summer resort at Park Rapids, Minn. . . . Umpire Bill Dinneen of the American league staff nominates Ty Cobb and Hal Chase as the greatest players of all time. . . . Fred Perry, who set his earnings while an amateur at $20,000 a year, made almost $100,000 his first year as a professional. . . . The Baltimore Orioles, who sent 6 foot 5 inch Jim Melton to the Giants, have signed a pitcher named Jim Higgins, who stands 6 feet 7 inches. . . . Duluth, Minn., has offered the Washington Redskins facilities and a $1,500 guarantee to train there for the All-Star game with the College All-Americans, scheduled for Soldiers' field, Chicago, August 31.

Olympic Troubles

THE growing chain of Olympic committee resignations was enlarged by the withdrawal of William J. Bingham, director of athletics at Harvard, who declared he would have nothing further to do with the 1940 games in Tokyo, because he "could not ask the American people to support a team which was going to a country standing for what Japan stands today."

Observers close to the Olympic situation believe that Bingham's resignation will have the effect of increasing the aloofness of American colleges toward the event—an aloofness resulting from the action of the international Olympic committee in changing the dates for various competitions so as to make it almost impossible for American undergraduates to compete in the games.

Original 1940 Olympic dates were set for August 25 to September 21, permitting the collegiate athletes plenty of time to compete and return to America for their autumn school terms. Then a change requested by Japan, and supported by Italy and Germany was made, moving the dates from September 21 to October 6. The United States and England, protesting vigorously, were overruled.

National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

WASHINGTON.—It is entirely possible that many people have failed to piece together several developments of national import lately, and may have missed the significance of an action of congress in its closing days. The two incidents to which I refer are the federal grand jury indictment at South Bend, Ind., of a number of automobile manufacturing executives and the action of congress in adoption of a resolution providing for a broad-gauge inquiry into big business. The two, when pieced together, spell a sensational drive against the "malefactors of great wealth."

Great Wealth On Grill

The result? Well, let's examine the scheme, the pattern and the prospects.

There was a period in 1936, it will be recalled, when business interests felt that President Roosevelt was preparing to follow a middle-of-the-road policy as far as government relations with business was concerned. During that period, there was a considerable improvement in general business. In that interim of time, as far as any observers could reach a conclusion, the President was relying on advice from many men in whom business had confidence. But there came a sudden end. Out of the clear sky, Mr. Roosevelt proposed reorganization of the Supreme court of the United States and the addition of six justices whom he could appoint at once. Through weeks of battle when it became apparent that one guess was as good as another whether the President would win, business men and women again became afraid. That was when the present depression began. It was also the time when Mr. Roosevelt turned away from his previous close advisers and began listening to the new brain trust which has come to be known as the "board of strategy."

As the depression became sharper and the numbers of unemployed increased with startling rapidity, the board of strategy sought means to offset the condition. The group also had to find a goat—which is always done when plans go awry. There followed then the vicious and intemperate attacks on "big business" by the trust-busting Robert H. Jackson, then favored at the White House as the next Democratic candidate for the New York governorship. Secretary Ickes also let loose his vocabulary and none can deny the interior secretary's capacity for speaking biting words. For weeks and weeks, we were treated to a barrage of words in which "big business" was pictured as beyond the pale of good citizenry and ought to be destroyed.

The trust-busting drive was not as successful in gaining public acclaim as had been hoped for. The truth is that it failed to get the country excited at all and the profit to the trust busters did not materialize as had been the case when "Teddy" Roosevelt was swinging a big stick of demagoguery in the same field of political endeavor. Indeed, this drive flopped at the start whereas the drive by the earlier Roosevelt was good politics for several years.

It was here, according to the best information available, that the tactics changed. The change in methods is the real reason for the story. Thus, it can be said that the trust-busting drive is still going on as strong as ever but it is going on in several fields without any apparent connection because the board of strategy has lost none of its determination to convince the nation that it is being ruined by those same malefactors of great wealth toward which Teddy Roosevelt waved his fist and bared his teeth.

Now, to put the pieces of the picture together. The first section comprises the indictment of the automobile moguls, Edsel Ford, Walter P. Chrysler, Alfred P. Sloan and William Knudsen, among some sixty-odd officials of Ford, Chrysler and General Motors and the companies affiliated with them in the financing of motor cars bought on the installment plan. They are charged with violation of the antitrust laws, although how anybody can believe the Ford interests ever could or would play ball with the other two, I have been unable to see. Anyway, big news stories were carried by the press services from South Bend, and the department of justice here had much "background" information which officials were delighted to hand to any inquiring reporter. They did this in order to co-operate with the press inasmuch as the story was so sensational and so vast in scope that none of us writers here could possibly be permitted to miss any phase of it.

The other phase of the continuing drive against "big business" takes the form of a great inquiry, thinly disguised as a general study of business practices. It is a somewhat unusual type of investigation and is to be managed in a very unusual manner. The committee that will do the job is made up of three senators and three representatives, and a representative from each of a number of executive departments and commissions. And the important fact in addition is that the $500,000 which the investigation will cost will be expended under the direction of President Roosevelt.

To bring it own to simple terms, when congress adopted the resolution for the inquiry, the board of strategy was able to turn on enough political steam to force adoption of an amendment placing the funds under the direction of the President, rather than under control of congress, as usually is done when congress participates in an investigation. That action means that investigators for the committee will be able to rely upon laws covering inquiries and searches made by the department of justice, the federal trade commission, the securities and exchange commission and the national labor relations board, among others. The combined powers will be all-comprehensive.

To explain further the full meaning of these broad powers, it is necessary to cite constitutional provisions prohibiting illegal search and seizure. The investigators for the committee must be able to dig deep into private records of any bank or corporation or individual if they are to accomplish fully the desire of the board of strategy for complete exposure of all the secrets of business. When they get all of those records, of course they can analyze them and place their own construction on the business practices. That is today, by inference and innuendo, hint or open charge, the investigators can smear anything or anybody—and the newspapers will spread the information. It being an official investigation, it will be followed closely by the press and, as usual, there will be little chance for the individuals to reply. When they are marked to be smeared, they will be smeared, whether justly or unjustly. It is a deplorable thing that our government stoops to that sort of thing but it has done so in a number of instances.

Now, as to the main objectives. Every indication is that the guiding hands in the projected investigation are determined to destroy two great masses of capital. I mean, they intend to break up the combination of men and money in two instances. The banking house of J. P. Morgan and company, and the huge industrial setup of the DuPonts are marked. Whether they like it or not, those two groups are to be made the goats of the depression of 1937-38, and those on the inside recognize that it is a fight to the finish. There will be other corporations, other individuals, whose business lives will be laid bare, but the Morgans and the DuPonts are the real targets. The board of strategy believes the Morgan bank and the DuPont interests are chiefly responsible for the refusal of business to yield on many of the crackpot ideas of the professors, and so it is inevitable those two groups will be cast as the villains.

There arises, next, the question whether such an investigation and such a prosecution as has been started at South Bend will do the country any good. One ought not to prejudice. It may be that the motor magnates and their corporations are guilty as pups. It may be that the Morgans and the DuPonts and scores of others among families with great fortunes have set about to wreck the New Deal. But the question in my mind is: why has it not been discovered before? It seems to me that if there was so much corruption, so much improper influence being exercised and such illegal use of money power as is represented by those who were pushing the investigation, it should have been several years ago. Mr. Roosevelt has been in office five years and it appears strange that there was no effort to uncover these demons until the business of the country as a whole lost confidence in the policies of the national administration.

These developments have come along as the depression grew worse. They reach their climax of preparation at a time when another federal agency, the board of governors of the federal reserve system, says that the industrial depression in the United States now is the worst in the world. Neither England nor any other industrial country abroad has experienced a depression that has been as precipitous as the United States is experiencing. The board said in an official statement.

The power is not given to me to determine the numerous and varied facts, but the processes of deduction eliminate many possible causes for our nation's condition—most of them, indeed, excepting governmental meddling and the harassing of business, big and little.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—When Charles Maurras came out of the Sante prison last year, he was met by a committee of distinguished Frenchmen, who nominated him for the Nobel peace prize and said they would make him a member of the Academy. They have just fulfilled the latter promise, and M. Maurras becomes an immortal by a majority of one vote. He had spent 250 days in jail on a charge of having urged the assassination of 140 members of the chamber of deputies who had voted for sanctions against Italy; also on a charge of inciting the French people to "sharpen up their kitchen knives" for use against certain proscribed politicians.

In the 250 days he had written five books, swelling his vast collection of books on biography, politics, economics, literary criticism, history and what not to probably well over 100. I talked to him once in the Cafe des Lilas, a fragile, deaf, bearded old man with a contentious, blazing mind which makes one think of a sizzling battery running an automobile without any engine.

In 1923, he was in jail for four months in a somewhat anti-climatic adventure for one who was to be garlanded as an immortal. Three members of the chamber of deputies were kidnaped and fed castor oil—Mussolini is said to have got his broad prospectus of Fascism from Maurras—and the bald head of one of them was painted with violet ink and glue.

In 1925, M. Maurras was sentenced to two years in prison, the charge being that he had threatened to kill the minister of the interior. Among the causes of his incarceration in October, 1936, was conspiracy evidence in the assault on Premier Leon Blum, in which he was severely beaten, while attending the funeral of a friend.

His books and virulent editorials against democracy in the Royalist, paper, translated into many languages, are the fount of Fascist doctrine all over the world. His hatred of democracy is savage and vitriolic. He is witty, learned, brilliant and he has the most excoriating and corrosive vocabulary in France.

FOOTNOTE to the main text of the world discussion on Japan bombing babies is the interchange between Avery Brundage, chairman of the American Olympic committee, and William J. Bingham (Bill the Plugger), Harvard athletic director.

Mr. Brundage says it has nothing to do with sports, and Mr. Bingham says it has—with sportsmanship, at any rate—and he withdraws from the committee and the 1940 games.

The sports writers are becoming almost metaphysical in weighing and appraising the moral values of the argument. Bill the Plugger says, in effect, that he won't play with baby-killers.

He became Bill the Plugger by losing 19 races at Harvard and winning the twentieth. Thereafter, he was Harvard's crack miler.

He started out plugging at the age of fourteen, leaving school to work in a mill and help support his five younger brothers and sisters. He saved $30, went to Exeter and worked his way through Exeter and Harvard.

He came out of the war a captain with appropriate decorations, did a turn in the banking business in Texas and became Harvard graduate supervisor and track coach in 1921. On the side, he is president of a concern which imports rubber goods.

IF GERARD B. LAMBERT builds a house, they're likely to find a center-board and a skys' yard on it. It's hard to see how he can get his mind off his yachting, but, at any rate, he becomes special adviser to Stuart McDonald, federal housing administrator.

The gargles and shaves of the multitudes built his chemical fortune at St. Louis. He was one of the original backers of Lindbergh and the originators of great advertising slogans.

Author of a spirited "Defense of Babbitts" in the American Mercury, commander of the Eastern Yacht club of Marblehead, Mass., he maintains a valhalla for gallant old yachts.

Women Get First Vote In their first vote women of Uruguay recently helped choose a new parliament of 99 delegates and 30 senators.

SPIES OVER AMERICA

Grand Jury Indictment of 18 Foreigners Spurs Federal Investigation of Espionage Activity

By JOSEPH W. LaBINE

It has taken official Washington 10 years to discover what the rank-and-file American has known all along.

The nation—the North American continent in general—is infested with the spies of three powerful Fascist nations.

On the Pacific coast innocent Japanese fishing craft snare a few tuna and whatever American naval secrets happen to be lying around. In the Panama canal zone a guttural German is apparently minding his own business; meanwhile his photographic mind records the geographic layout of this most vulnerable spot in America's defense program.

Men and women have been free to come, look and leave at our greatest military strongholds. They have closed their eyes not to see our army and navy test secret equipment designed to out-fox the enemy. But some haven't closed their eyes, because a foreign government wanted those secrets.

Yet 10 years passed before a New York federal grand jury found occasion to indict 18 suspected Nazi agents, most of whom are now safe back home. It was not until these spies became so bold as to ask the state department for blank passports that we suspected their real intentions. Now, in retrospect, those puzzling incidents of the past few years loom crystal clear: the army pilot who disappeared while testing a sensational new ship; the Japanese tuna clipper which went aground while "fishing" at night where only American naval secrets might be caught.

Behind this invasion of foreign agents is an unimportant sounding document signed by Japan, Germany and Italy last year, the pro-Fascist pact for mutual assistance. That, at least, was the surface reason for this treaty; in truth it was probably a working agreement between three nations with common aim, to combat democracies through an insidious program of espionage and propaganda.

The latest assertion on this matter (not substantiated) is that Germany is handling the propaganda and Italy is furnishing ammunition stores which are constantly being dumped in Nicaragua and Mexico. But substantial proof is already at hand testifying to Japan's leadership in the espionage program. Quiet, unobtrusive, apparently interested only in the work at hand, these visitors from the Orient go about their job with a persistence that is amazing, with a righteous air that is maddening.

San Pedro's Clippers. In Los Angeles' San Pedro harbor, which shelters battleships of the United States fleet, powerful tuna clippers weave their path among the super-dreadnaughts, cognizant of every move the navy makes.

The story is told of one foggy day a few years back when neither battleships nor tuna boats left the snugness of San Pedro harbor; none, that is, except a Japanese captain who put out with his skipper through the milk-gray fog and returned a few hours later with full crew. Was it pure coincidence that a Japanese naval training ship dropped anchor a few miles out that same day?

Tuna clippers are not frail craft, especially the new type Japanese boat which has recently appeared along the Pacific coast. These have a cruising radius up to 10,000 miles and might be turned into mine layers carrying 30 anchors in their holds and twin torpedo tubes aft.

Moving northward, we find the Japanese invasion of Alaskan fishing waters a double menace, not only to national security but to the conservatively operated salmon industry fostered and controlled by the United States government. In Bristol bay, where the red salmon run yearly on their persistent path from mountain stream to the sea, Japanese fishing craft appear annually in increasing numbers, placing their nets ahead of American boats and shifting their huge catch to floating canneries.

Salmon Minus Nationality. You can't paint the Stars and Stripes on every salmon that spawns in Alaskan mountain streams but the American state department has been slow in taking protective measures. Although the Japanese government apologizes and offers assurances, the Oriental craft appear again and again. They fish outside the three-mile limit, but within the 12-mile limit. What many an American fisherman would like to know is why his government can't enforce the 12-mile limit against these invaders.

Jumping south, the seeker after spies lands invariably in the Panama canal zone, justifiably called Government at Work. The federal government has not been completely idle in the face of this menace. Lengthy investigations were made after that storybook incident on July 30, 1935, when Lieut. Arthur H. Skaer took off from Los Angeles municipal airport to test an amazingly fast new plane. His instructions were to stay within sight of the field, but Lieutenant Skaer streaked off to the south, disappeared from sight and was never seen again. The plane was so valuable that army officials had planned to destroy it immediately after the test, saving the designs for production only in a national emergency.

In a dragnet a few days later, agents of the federal bureau of investigation closed in on Harry Thomas Thompson, former navy yeoman, who is now serving a sentence at McNeil island penitentiary for selling naval secrets to Japan. Indicted with him was Lieut. Comdr. Toshio Miyazaki of the Japanese navy, who had been a "language student" at Leland Stanford university. Unfortunately, he had "returned to Japan" before he could be questioned.

This is the background to a story

Huge railway guns with a 12-inch bore and short barrel, are designed to protect the United States coast from foreign invasion. This gun is firing at a target 15 miles at sea.

the Achilles Heel of our national defense. Should the canal be closed by an enemy, an attack on the Pacific coast could not be successfully repulsed until the navy's battlewagons had journeyed 13,135 miles around the tip of South America from New York to San Francisco.

The Japs have long been active in Panama. In 1917 a ragged Oriental fisherman was "piped" over the side of a visiting Japanese man of war. To this day many a seemingly unimportant fisherman or barber is treated with strange deference by prominent Panama Japs. There is only one explanation.

Two hours by air from the canal, at Corinto, Colombia, Jap colonists have been firmly entrenched for years. A short distance north of the canal a group of Japanese "scientists" have leased pancake-flat land for experiments in growing cotton. This land would make a remarkably fine aviation field.

of espionage which may be told publicly within the next few weeks as the government proceeds with its spy investigations. But more than that, it is the handwriting on the wall that America must heed immediately if the nation is to safeguard itself against prying foreigners.

Perhaps there is something undemocratic about the secrecy which must shroud American military operations if our future is to be protected. Maybe it isn't polite to give unauthorized foreign visitors the bum's rush. But it is better than waking up some fine morning to feel a sharp bayonet prying into your ribs!

HEADLINES FROM THE LIVES OF PEOPLE LIKE YOURSELF!

"Vanishing Corpses"

By FLOYD GIBBONS Famous Headline Hunter

HELLO, EVERYBODY:

You know, boys and girls, I've often noticed, in these adventure stories, how in a good many cases, one mishap leads to another. That's probably because the first thing that goes wrong so upsets the fellow it happens to, that—well—he just loses his head and plunges right smack into another danger.

It's bad business when a man loses his head in the face of danger. But at the same time it has produced a lot of red-hot double-barreled and triple-barreled adventures, and the story I'm going to tell you today is a mighty good example.

Paul Moore of Chicago is today's distinguished adventurer. The events this yarn deals with happened to him and two other lads, in September, 1923.

At that time Paul was just a kid of twelve, living in Grand Rapids, Mich. Paul had just been given a .22 caliber rifle for selling perfume, and one Saturday he and his two friends, Art Kohles and Archie Eastman, started out on a hunting trip.

Art and Archie had air rifles. Paul had no cartridges for his .22, but Art said he knew where he could get some. They started out early, taking their lunches with them, and after walking a couple hours, came to a patch of woods four miles from the outskirts of town.

Art Pounded the Cartridge.

There didn't seem to be any game in sight, so they sat down on the bank of a small creek to eat their lunches. Paul had put down his gun and was just starting to untie the package that contained his grub when Art spoke up, saying there was a wild canary on the other side of the creek.

"Let's have your gun," whispered Art. "I can't get it with mine." Paul passed over his rifle. Art had the cartridges in his own pocket. He took one out and tried to put it in the chamber. It wouldn't fit.

Young Art didn't know that the cartridges he had brought from home were the wrong caliber. He thought this one wouldn't go into the chamber because the gun was new. He tried to force it in with his fingers and then, in his haste to get a shot at the bird before it flew away, he picked up a stone that happened to be lying at his feet.

Art hit the bullet two or three times with that stone. And then, suddenly, there was a loud crack. The bullet exploded. Art dropped the gun, crying, "I'm shot!" Then he fell to the ground and lay still.

The other two kids stood speechless. Art had killed himself! Paul had an uncle who lived about a mile away on the other side of the woods, and the first thought that popped into his mind was to run there and get help.

He told Archie to stay behind with Art, but Archie insisted on going along with him. They started off on a short cut through the woods, running as fast as their legs would carry them.

On the other side of the woods they came to the tracks of the interurban line that runs out of Grand Rapids. There was a third rail along the right of way, set up a foot or so above the ground.

Paul knew about it. He was well up ahead of Archie, and he went over it with a flying leap. But he didn't think to warn Archie about that electrified rail. His mind was too full of the thought of Art lying back there by the creek bank.

Archie Stepped on Third Rail.

The next thing Paul knew, Archie was stepping on that rail. He just lit on it for an instant. Then he pitched forward on his face. And he, too, lay still!

Archie's body was lying between the two tracks. "I took one look at him," says Paul, "and decided he was dead. Then I turned and ran as if the devil was after me."

It was a long way to his uncle's house, and by that time Paul was all but out of breath. But he didn't dare stop running. He stumbled on. At last he reached the house and burst in, panting, "Uncle Abe! Quick! Art's killed himself with my gun and Archie's been electrocuted!"

Everyone in the house, including two old ladies who were visiting Paul's aunt, dropped whatever they were doing and started for the tracks. They hurried through brush and corn fields to the spot where Archie had fallen—and when they arrived, there was no sign of Archie.

Uncle Abe turned on Paul. "Young man," he said sternly, "are you sure this isn't a joke of some kind?" But it was no joke to Paul. He thought maybe a passing interurban had stopped to pick Archie up. He crossed the track and started through the woods toward the stream where they had left Art.

Both Bodies Had Disappeared.

The women turned back, but Uncle Abe followed along after him. They ran through the woods in breathless haste—tore up to the spot where Art had shot himself—and then Paul stopped dead in his tracks. Art was gone, too!

It was too much for Paul. His uncle was looking at him suspiciously, and he hardly knew what to say. How could Paul ask him to believe that two dead boys had both disappeared, one right after the other? He stood there silent a minute, and then he heard sounds of splashing water, and of voices coming from some point down the stream. Together they walked toward those voices and there they found—Art and Archie.

It was all explained easily enough. Archie had been knocked out by the shock from the third rail. He had a big bump on his head, but that was all the damage that had been done to him.

When he came to, he went back to where Art had fallen and found him bathing his leg, which had been grazed on the calf by a bit of the exploding shell. Together they had moved down stream a ways, and that's where Paul found them.

And that's all there is to this story, except that a short time after that, Art and Archie and Paul took that .22 rifle and pitched it in the Grand river.

An Impregnable Fortress

The stout stone walls and heavy cannon of the Morro Castle which fascinate visitors at San Juan, Puer Rico, have a record of impregnability both in old and modern warfare. In Queen Elizabeth's time, Sir Francis Drake attempted to sack the city, but was beaten off. In 1898, Admiral William T. Sampson, U. S. N., searching for Cervera's fleet, tried to enter the harbor, but failed when his shelling of the fortress had no effect.

All Streets Up or Down

Among the towns, England's Clovelly is unique. It hangs on the same stretch of Cornish cliff where King Arthur built his castle, and is about 40 miles north of Tintagel. All streets in Tintagel go either up or down, and the grades are so steep that vehicular traffic is stopped one-half mile out of town. From that point one proceeds either afoot or burrow-back. Clovelly begins on the crest of a hill and ends at the ocean's edge.

Quick, Easy Stitches For Summer Frocks

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

A BIT of hand embroidery for the collar and sleeves of a little girl's dress is always the smartest trimming. Quickly made stitches and interesting colors may be combined to give unusual effects.

The dress shown here is pale blue chambray. The collar and sleeves are edged with blanket stitch in a deeper blue as shown at A. Between each blanket stitch a tiny loop stitch is made in white and three larger white loop stitches at the top of every second blanket stitch as shown at B. When used on a fabric of this weight the embroidery should be rather coarse to show up well. All six strands of a six strand embroidery cotton may be used or No. 5 pearl cotton. For a dress of fine sheer material such as dimity or organdie use finer embroidery thread. Other attractive color combinations are pink material with deep rose and French blue embroidery, yellow with brown and orange or green with yellow and white. For a printed fabric, repeat two of the strongest tones in the printed design or use white collar and cuffs embroidered in the background color of the print and one of the brighter tones.

NOTE: If you wish to use these weekly articles for reference paste them in a scrapbook, as they are not included in either Sewing Book No. 1 or 2. Book 1, Sewing for the Home Decorator, covers curtains, slipcovers, dressing tables; 48 pages of fascinating directions. Book 2 illustrates 90 embroidery stitches with numerous applications; doll clothes and gift items. Order by number, enclosing 25 cents for each book desired. If you order both books, leaflet on making crazy quilts, with 36 stitches illustrated, will be included free. Address Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

Consent Lost Upon John In His Great Anxiety

John felt that he could never ask Pamela to be his wife.

True, he loved her as he had never loved anyone else before, but then she was an angel, while he had many little weaknesses of which no angel would ever approve. Pamela, on the other hand, spent her time thinking that it was high time John spoke up!

One night he came to the point. "Pamela, Pamela," he urged, "will you marry me?" "You bet," she replied briskly. "I know, darling," he answered, ashamed. "But if you'll only say, 'Yes,' I'll promise never to back another horse!"

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 62), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells. Get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a good general system tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist in calming jittery nerve, and disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life. WELL WORTH TRYING!

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery. Symptoms may be nagging headache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder may be burning, scanty or too frequent urination. There should be no doubt that prompt Doan's Pills, Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Ask your doctor, or a reliable pharmacist, for the country over. Ask your neighbor!

Earthworm Has Many Feet

The common earthworm has more than 1,185 feet. Charles Darwin estimated that in an acre of garden soil there are more than 50,000 of them. In making studies of their intelligence a German professor definitely ascertained that worms actually do warble.

Some Cannot Be Hypnotized

Many individuals cannot be hypnotized, particularly those who are strong-minded, feeble-minded or insane. On the other hand, says Collier's Weekly, persons who are especially susceptible to hypnotism may be put to sleep at once, even by a command in writing.

Whitemore

The celebration at Whitemore, July 2, 3 and 4, was a huge success. Many old-timers came back to their old home town and spent three happy days with friends. The weather was ideal throughout the three days.

The parade on the 3rd and 4th was very good. Snow White and the seven Dwarfs and the Quintuplets were among the impersonations in the parade.

Many are looking forward toward meeting old friends again in Whitemore next year.

Never a Last Drink

Spanish tipplers, gathered together for an evening of light elbow-bending, never break the rules of etiquette by ordering a "last" drink. A round ordered at the close of the evening may be the "penultima" (the next to the last), but courtesy requires that no mention be made of a "last drink."

Charleston Claims Many "Firsts"
Charleston was settled in 1670. Fort Johnson and Fort Moultrie, near Charleston, played decisive parts in the American Revolution. Fort Sumter, in Charleston harbor, drew the first shot of the Civil War. Charleston claims more "firsts" than any city in the country, among them the first fireproof building in America, the first museum, first prescription drugstore, first regular steam railroad, first fire insurance company, first apartment house and first legitimate theater. The Charleston Chamber of Commerce, organized in 1773, was the first city chamber of commerce.

How Sharks Are Trapped

In Torres sound, south of Papua, the natives trap sharks. The trap consists of a pile of empty, air-tight coconut shells joined together with a rope and attached to a canoe by a lengthy line. The native takes the shells in his canoe to the fishing ground and places them in the water after baiting them with a dead fish on a fire-hardened wooden hook. When the shark grabs the bait it attempts to dive, but the buoy-like action of the empty shells prevents it from doing so. The fish then dashes madly about, dragging trap and canoe along, until it becomes exhausted. Then, if the line is still holding, it is hauled in, speared and taken ashore.

Nora laughed, and Jim Perkins, finding his voice at last, exploded: "Well, I'll tell the world you can play, Mis' Mason! I never heard nothin' like it except over the radio; and if you ask me, you've got that feller named Hoffmann beat to a frazzle!"

Leonora arose from the packing box to acknowledge his honest tribute with a curtsey; while Don suggested: "Give them some more, Nora, before they leave," and for twenty minutes Nora played to an appreciative audience as any artist could desire. Indeed, the Portland men would accept only the minutest payment for their services.

"It wa'n't nothin'," declared the older man as they arose to go. "Nothin' at all; and the music was pay enough anyhow. Wasn't it, Joe?"

"Joe," still dazed, assented with a mute nod. They departed munching Nora's molasses cookies, and Don told her (when Tom Littlefield had returned to the box stall which he was converting into the north end of a "banquet hall"), with "their souls refreshed."

And next morning, as if Fate were really trying to make up for past unkindnesses, Don received a note from the editor of an American weekly, to whom he had sent one of his "Letters from Cape Town." The article, it seemed, had filled a long-felt want. Check for American magazine rights was "herewith enclosed," and they would be glad to run the entire series during the coming year.

The check, compared with those received from England for the same material, was almost dazzling; and they both appeared to go a little mad. Nora rushed to the piano, while Don, to the exceeding joy of his small sons, proceeded to dance the Highland Fling.

When the music ceased and he dropped breathlessly into the red lacquer chair, Tom Littlefield, who had arrived during the commotion, inquired if he should call the doctor, "or are you comin' out o' that conception fit all right alone?"

In answer Don tossed him the incredible check.

"That's yours, Mr. Littlefield. You can blame that innocent strip of paper for this vaudeville act of mine which was put on merely to celebrate the fact that, for the time being, anyhow, the dark cloud of financial worry has vanished from the horizon. We're sane again now, and I'll get back to the shingling if that's what you want."

Not until the last possible moment did they leave the place. Never had they left any place with such regret. The weather had been almost miraculously perfect for that time of year, a fall long remembered by the natives. Tom Littlefield, possessed of minute directions from Leonora, planned to go on with the work when other jobs were scarce.

"It'll be a real life-saver to me, Mis' Mason," he assured her. "There ain't much don't here come wintertime, and I get restless. I'll be more'n glad to keep an eye on the place and do a day's work now and then; and when you come back next spring things'll be ship-shape. I declare, I—I'm downright sorry to see you go."

"And I'd give almost anything to stay, Mr. Littlefield," Nora confessed. "After all, there's no place like home, is there?—and I've never had one of my own before. Not for worlds would I have Mr. Mason suspect it, but I don't mind owning up to you that I dread to leave."

She did; yet a happy winter with Constance Venable (who had sold the ill-fated island where Carl met his death, and for financial reasons was staying abroad indefinitely) lay just ahead. Things were going extremely well when they returned to Maine for another summer; and as a complete surprise Nora discovered not only running water in her box stall kitchen, but a small and shining bathroom, the result of an intrigue between her husband and the old Maine builder.

Not until that summer did she hint to her father of this permanent abiding place. Going to the beautiful antique desk which they had purchased of "our egg lady," as the boys called her ("Because," the woman explained when Don told her honestly that it was worth more than he could give, "them antique dealers is makin' my life miserable anyhow, and Mis' Mason never forgets to ask after my sick boy")—going to that desk Nora constructed the postal card that was to play an important part in her life some three years later. Glancing over her shoulder as she finished it, Don smiled a bit sadly at what he feared was merely another disappointment.

It was, he observed, a fantastic postal. First came the verse from which the old notary had quoted the day they signed the deeds. Below this Nora had written her address, followed by: "If taxi is unavailable, take trolley car to end of line and proceed as follows," after which was a tiny map drawn in red ink.

She said, turning to look up at Don: "That verse about the shining palace is an invitation, and if it arrives when Dad's in a relenting mood, he may accept it."

Don said nothing. It sometimes troubled him that in all these years Nora had never lost hold of the conviction that her father would reach a moment of surrender. Personally, Don didn't believe it, not after the old man's silence when informed of the arrival of his namesake, James Lambert Mason. It was hard for Don to forgive that silence when he recalled how, spent with the hours of fear and anguish, Nora had looked up at him from her narrow berth on that storm-tossed ship, to say: "If—if it's only a boy, dear, so we can name him for Father, I sha'n't mind—anything. It—it will bring us together."

Well, mused Don, turning away from his wife's eyes, it was a boy, and it had not brought them one inch nearer. Jimsy was more than three years old, and his grandfather had not expressed the slightest interest in his existence. It wasn't in Don to comprehend how anyone could be so stubbornly resentful—so unkind. Impatient at the situation he once said as much, and Nora answered:

"It's not just that, Don. You see, I loved my mother above anything on earth, yet she hurt him unspcakably. And, though it wasn't my fault, perhaps, I hurt him, too. I think he doesn't dare let me get near him any more. Don't you understand? He's afraid of being hurt again."

So she mailed her postal, hoped for a time, and then decided that the hour of relenting had not come. But despite this disappointment Nora was very happy that summer. Don was always glad to remember how happy she had been. As the months passed, her new home became almost as perfect as she dreamed it could be; and even Tom Littlefield admitted that the "ball room" was not too big.

"And it's cozy, isn't it?" prodded Leonora, determined to make the old carpenter give in.

"O, it's cozy enough," he assented, albeit grudgingly; "but I still think, if you was to ask me, Mis' Mason, that it's all out o' proportion to the size o' the kitchen."

"But we don't live in the kitchen," Nora retorted.

"And I ain't ever heard o' anybody livin' in a ball room, either," snapped the old man.

He was a frequent caller, as was the notary at the Port. The latter had a standing invitation to Sunday dinner, which was quite as likely to be served on the beach as in the banquet hall. Afterwards he would find his way into the big living room and browse among the books, sometimes reading aloud from his beloved poets to Nora, sometimes reading from "Peter Rabbit" to the boys.

"He's as good as a grandfather," said Don one Sunday afternoon when he found the old man with both children in his lap; and then wished he hadn't spoken because Nora's face clouded at the words.

The summer drifted by. September came, and with it the chance Don was hoping for, something he had kept secret from his wife fearing to cause her disappointment should it not work out. For Nora had hinted to the little boys that Santa Claus might possibly bring them a "baby sister," and Don was determined that their mother should not be dragged to Europe if such a step could be avoided. He knew that the "Letters from Cape Town" had proved even more popular than the American editor expected.

There was no reason to think he would not be amenable to the suggestion that there was a vast amount of interesting material on their own West. Don planned a series of articles called "Seeing America First," submitted the idea, and waited impatiently for the verdict.

Not knowing that the great man was away on a vacation, the letter seemed long in coming; but it brought good news. The editor considered this plan "most interesting," and requested that Don stop off in Chicago on the way West to consult a personal friend of his who had been over the ground recently and might give him some valuable data . . . And would he plan so that the first article could be run in February?

Nora wept with relief when she heard the news—Nora, who so seldom gave way to tears.

"I've been dreading so awfully to start out again," she told him, "but this is different. If, as you say, we can stay at San Diego until after New Year's, everything will be easy. I can settle you somewhere, and then go to a hospital for the event. And next spring we can come home for a long summer. Don't mind my crying, Don. It—it's only the heavenly relief."

"You poor dear nomad!" said Don tenderly. And then added: "If all goes well, darling, we'll install a furnace here next summer so we can stay as late as you want to in the fall."

"I believe," smiled Nora, winking away the last of her foolish tears, "I believe you've discovered the advantages of a home yourself, Don!"

CHAPTER XII

They reached Chicago on a bleak November morning. Wind was blowing across Lake Michigan in wintry gusts, and the weather man predicted snow. It came, a blizzard out of the north. For two days they were storm-bound in a boarding house run by an old nurse of Constance Venable's—one of the many whom Carl's unflinching generosity had helped.

On the third afternoon when the city was digging out of snow drifts and the sun was making a half-hearted effort to show its face, their hostess said: "Why don't you two go for a little walk? I'll look after the children. I'd really like to; and a breath of outdoor air will do you good."

"Come on," said Don, brightening at the prospect of some activity. "If you get tired, Nora, we'll drop in at a movie for an hour."

"That's right," urged the woman, glad to be of service to these friends of her beloved Venables. "You'll find a theater three blocks down. It's a cheap place, opened only a week ago; but it'll do to get warm in."

"Sure!" agreed Don, "and a lurid picture won't hurt old folks like us!" The wind sprang up again as they started out; and the sun, discouraged, retired behind a cloud.

"I guess three blocks'll be about enough!" Don laughed as they ducked their heads against the weather. "Those Italian winters have spoiled us, Nora; but I hear we're liable to fry in Arizona. That's one place I haven't been, my dear, and I'm crazy to see it. There's our theater ahead now. Looks cheap all right. I bet the snow's packed solid behind that false front roof. There's weight to this snow, Nora. I hope—"

What Don hoped was lost in a gust of wind that fairly blew them into the lobby of the theater.

Smart Crow Often Has to Fight Other Birds, but He Always Calls for Help

The natural enemy of the crow is the hawk. Blackbirds, bluebirds, swallows, and at times robins, will fight them viciously. However, the crow is smart—smarter than most of the feathered world—in that he will fight only when backed by a company of his kind. Virtually all other birds and animals hunt alone.

The crow will feed alone, but when trouble arises he begins calling for help and a whole platoon of his companions is soon on the scene to help. Because of these gang methods, however, the crow furnishes excellent sport for the shooter because he is easily decoyed.

Anyone armed with a crow call can have excellent sport calling and shooting the black robbers. There are several ways in which to hunt them, advises a writer in the Chicago Daily News.

A stuffed or live hawk or owl is an excellent decoy. The decoy should be placed in the open and the gunner should hide in near-by woods. Then he should blow his crow call lustily. He soon is rewarded by the approach of crows.

Another method is to locate a roost, where the crows come in by the thousands for the night. This

"Perhaps we'd better go right back," gasped Nora. "The wind is certainly getting worse. It wouldn't surprise me if it stormed again."

"Me, either; but you're completely out of breath, dear. Let's get inside and rest for a few minutes. It'll be easier going home with the wind at our backs, you know. We can sit in the last row, Nora, and slip out any time we're bored. You need to rest after that fight with the elements."

This was sane logic, so they went inside.

"Looks as if all the kiddies of the neighborhood had come in out of the storm," Don whispered as their eyes grew accustomed to the dimness. "Why didn't we think to bring the boys?"

Nora smiled. Don always regretted her sons' absence when other children were in evidence. She said, softly: "They're better off where they are. There's such a crowd, and the air is terrible. Why!—Why what?"

Her voice rose a little. Her head lifted. Later Nora was to remember that she had thought herself ill because the whole building seemed to tremble and the roof looked as if it were crumbling up, slowly. The most curious sensation, a sort of chill, ran over her—all in a second, of course, for Don was already on his feet, holding her wrist in a grip that tortured. Just as they reached the lobby the crash came. And then a cry went up behind them—a cry that was to ring in Nora's ears for months. It sounded, she thought, like an awful and terrifying wave of protest from a single throat . . .

They were in the street . . . Already a throng of morbid onlookers had gathered . . . People (Oh, fortunate people!) were pouring out of the doomed theater . . .

Police, dozens of them, it seemed to Nora, sprang up like magic . . . Firemen were there, trying to rope off space . . . pushing them back.

It was then that Don, who had been stunned into a horrified silence, roused himself with a convulsive shudder. He turned to Nora—looked down into her upturned face—stared into it so curiously that she grasped his arm, crying: "Oh, thank God we are safe, Don!"

And still he looked at her . . . An ambulance gong sounded . . . Somewhere beyond the rope a woman screamed . . . A man pushed by them, wild-eyed, dishevelled . . . Above the tumult a child's terrified voice cried out: "Mother! Where's my mother?" . . .

Don said, still staring down with that extraordinary gravity: "But I must go back, Nora. Those children . . . They might be ours . . . I've got to help . . . You must go home now, darling. Go home to the little boys. They need you . . . Don't you see that—that I have got to help?"

Before she could say one word, he stooped—kissed her—was gone, eluding the quick grasp of a fireman—unheeding the shout of protest from another. Those feet, those buoyant feet which had borne Don so joyously on his adventures, were bearing him now on still another, bearing him swiftly, swiftly, lest they falter . . .

Nora was standing there three hours later when they brought him out. Three hours of horror—three hours of numbing cold—three hours of torment. He was the last to come, his broken body carried tenderly by two firemen. Nora, close to the ropes, cried out at sight of him: "Don! Dearest! I'm waiting for you. I—I am here, Don!"

New Fabrics of Sheer Loveliness

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

A FAVORITE theme this summer is the sheer loveliness of diaphanous, airy-fairy transparent fabrics, either cotton or silk. The new sheers are simply enchanting and they are the sought-for kind to make up into gowns for picturesque garden party wear or for dancing under star-spangled skies or when dining at fashionable roof-garden gatherings where beauty and romance keep rendezvous.

Gowns designed to grace summer-time scenes are fashioned of wispy chiffons either printed or monotone, or of organdies crisp, sheer and intriguing, or of dainty silk marquisette which is an especial favorite. Then there are the soft fine cotton voiles in pretty colors and as for lace every summer wardrobe is expected to include at least one party frock made of it. As a matter of fact lace is playing a stellar role this summer. The lace that captures the heart of enthusiasts is a delicate-as-cobweb type the patternings of which is a mere tracery. Gowns of this fetching lace have all-around pleated skirts, since it yields beautifully to this treatment. To dine and dance in ingenue frocks of simple cottons made up formally is considered quite the swank thing to do. The thrilling note in regard to this season's organdies is that so many new types have been added to the list.

The crinkled organdies either plain or printed sell at sight. They make up charmingly and are easily tubbed, require little or no pressing to keep them crisp and sprightly as new. For week-end trips they are ideal as they do not crush in packing.

You will be delighted with the new lace-printed Swiss chiffon organdies. The entrancing frock centered with outspread skirt in the foreground gives an idea of how effectively the lace-stripe organdie makes up. The charming and picturesque Winterhalter vogue is reflected in the styling of this very tiny-waisted and full-skirted dinner-and-dancing gown (a winsome garden party frock, too) in one of the fashionable printed Swiss chiffon or gandies. A very fine lace patterning in white stands out clearly against a deep navy blue background. There is a full-cut underskirt of white organdie to make the frock stand out almost on ballet skirt lines. The diminutive bolero jacket worn over the drop-shoulder bodice is finished with little ruffles of val lace laid on over the lace print.

The material that fashions the frock to the left is peach silk mousseline. It is prettily styled with vertical ruche-ruffling of self-fabric outlining the skirt gores, the puffed sleeves and there are ruffles about the neck.

Hyacinth blue lace with touches of cerise lace is used for the graceful gown centered in the picture. It was introduced at the Miami fashion show and is one of those pleasing types that carry on into new triumphs for summer party wear. One of its charms is that the lace indicates stripes and striped effects lead in the mode.

The printed chiffon frock to the left gives a delightful interpretation of the slim silhouette for summer. The patterning is spaced tulips in blue, red, green and black on a sheer white background. The gathered bodice suggests the Directoire. Contrasting shades of green and blue silk make the girdle and sash which forms a train. Flower bracelets are worn with it and an enormous poppy on the head instead of a hat, which goes to show the intriguing and unique ways in which flowers now play their important role in costume embellishing.

TWISTED DRAPES ARE NEW STYLE FEATURE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Designers are performing all sorts of interesting tricks with twisted drapes and as time goes on the idea is taking on added interest.

When you see a dress or blouse the drapes of which tie themselves into fanciful knots or twist into clever intricacies be assured that the garment is a "last word" fashion. Be on the lookout for these inter-twisted, inter-coiled effects and choose your new frocks accordingly. This type of styling invites the use of color contrasts. For instance, the bodice top of a navy dress may have drapes coming from the shoulder, say in the new fuchsia shade, the same coiled, twisted and perhaps knotted across the bustline with infinite grace. Or the dress may be in monotone, the artful, twisted designfulness being the only trimming feature. White crepe frocks, with twists done in crepes of vivid contrast or carried out in pastel tones are top-notch fashion this summer.

A new feature in styling is the all-over shirred bodice with skirt of the material simply tailored. The all-over shirred jacket is likewise a fashion highlight. Chiffon and sheer marquisette yield to this treatment most charmingly.

Paquin Favorite

A favorite Paquin model for evening is the long skirt of bias cut topped by a marquisette blouse—the entire thing in white, black or pale rose.

Tailored Dinner Dress

The tailored dinner or evening dress remains a heavy favorite.

HANDSOME SUIT

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

One handsome suit like the model pictured, in your wardrobe and your problem is solved as to looking smartly attired for any occasion. Contrast stitching is a swank accent to the interesting detail of this well-tailored town and country suit in fine lightweight wool shetland. Note the scalloped pockets that repeat the decorative stitching that enhances the seams in the skirt.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D. Dean of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago. © Western Newspaper Union.

Lesson for July 10

CALEB: LIFE-TIME DEVOTION

LESSON TEXT—Joshua 14:6-15. GOLDEN TEXT—Let us go up at once, and possess it; for we are well able to overcome it.—Numbers 13:30. PRIMARY TOPIC—Brave Caleb. JUNIOR TOPIC—Caleb the Brave. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—A Hero's Reward. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Courage for Difficult Tasks.

"We need to know more about good men who are occasionally great, and less about great men who are occasionally good," says the Lesson Commentary, in pointing out that Caleb is one of the characters about whom the Bible does not say much, but in every case the word is one revealing high and noble character. Consider such passages as Numbers 13:6, 30; 14:7-9, 24, 30; 26:65, as well as our lesson for today.

The background for our study of today, and in fact an integral part of the lesson itself, is the story of Caleb's courageous stand with Joshua when the spies returned from their visit to Canaan, which is related in Numbers 13. He was then a comparatively young man, but demonstrated by his every word and deed that he had from his youth learned to know and obey God.

Note first of all Caleb's I. Perfect Obedience (vv. 6-8). "I wholly followed the Lord my God." Such a testimony from a man like Caleb is no idle boast, no effort to parade his faith and piety before others. In saying it he was repeating what God and Moses had both said about him. In his heart he knew it to be true.

It is God's will for each of His children that they should come to such a place of simple trust and complete obedience that in every circumstance of life they need know only one thing—God's will, and then in faith to go and do it. It is a life beautiful in its transparent simplicity and powerful in the strength of God Himself.

II. Promised Inheritance (v. 9). "Surely the land whereon thy feet have trodden shall be thine inheritance." Such was the promise of God through Moses. Forty-five long years had elapsed, but down through this period of wilderness wanderings and the conflict in subduing Canaan the promise had lived in Caleb's heart. He knew it would be fulfilled, and he waited serenely for God's time.

Such also are the promises of God which keep the heart singing in our hours of trial and sorrow, which light up the dark ways, which strengthen the heart of His children. Learn God's promises, cherish them in your heart, expect God to fulfill them. III. Preserved Strength (vv. 10, 11). "The Lord hath kept me alive... and I am... strong." Here was a man kept of God, in full vigor in his eighty-fifth year, "like a rock in a changeless sea, like a snow-capped peak in a change of cloud and storm and sun" (Meyer). No doubt there was what our forefathers liked to call "the longevity of the antediluvians," but even apart from that let us recognize that life and strength come from God, and that those who walk with Him in holy living may count on Him for the renewed strength of Psalm 103:5.

An incidental, but extremely important, lesson, we should learn is that God has no age deadline. The church has frequently sinned against Him and against His faithful servants by "shelving them" for younger men, when they would have brought blessing to themselves and to the church by encouraging and using them. The writer of these lines is a young man, but he would speak here a word of loving admonition regarding his honored brethren who have gone on before to bear the brunt of the battle.

IV. Powerful Assurance (vv. 12-15). "If... the Lord will be with me, then I shall be able." Caleb asked for no easy task. He was ready to go up against the giants of Hebron. Read Deuteronomy 3:11, and you will find that there were men in those days who needed thirteen-foot beds. But Caleb was not afraid. He counted not on his own strength, but on the power of God. It is significant that while the other sections of Canaan were only partially conquered Caleb brought his formidable adversaries entirely under control, so that "the land had rest from war" (v. 15).

The spiritual application to our day is evident and appropriate. There are giants in the land in this year of our Lord 1938. Corruption—social and political—raises its brazen head. Drunkenness and vice leer at us with the impudent suggestion that we cannot control them. There are giants "within us"—greed, selfishness, love of ease, lust, passion, cruelty" (Blakie). Are we to do nothing about them? If we are to meet them in the strength of the flesh we might almost as well do nothing. But in the power of God, we are like Caleb—able. In His name we may take up a slogan of today, "Let's do something about it!" and really do it, for His glory.

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Noted Food Authority Explains What Is Meant by CORRECT NUTRITION

Describes How to Construct a Balanced Diet, So Essential to Maintain Optimal Health

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS 6 East 39th St., New York City.

TO SOME families, a summons to the dinner table means nothing more than a chance to satisfy hunger. To others, it represents an opportunity to gratify the palate, sometimes to the extent of overtaxing the digestive system.

Neither of these extremes fulfills the true function of food, which is to provide adequately but not to excess, for growth, maintenance and repair of the body.

Food May Fail to Feed You can satisfy hunger without providing correct nutrition. You can partake of delicious-tasting foods to the point of over-indulgence—without meeting bodily requirements.

The mere spending of money will not insure good nutrition, for extremely poor diets can be found in households where the income is large and the food budget is ample. What counts is learning to provide the right foods in the correct proportions. The return in health will be more than worth the investment of effort in acquiring this knowledge.

A Balanced Diet Science has discovered what foods are necessary to help build top health and keep us 100 per cent fit. The amount of food required by a man for a day's work can be accurately determined. We know that a specific disease may be produced by one diet and cured by another; that growth can be influenced through changes in the quality of the dietary; that old age may be deferred by choosing the food with care.

We know that the body is a working machine which never stops but may slow down or get out of order unless the daily diet includes every element, every mineral, every vitamin needed to maintain health and avoid the deficiency diseases.

Seven Essentials There are seven factors to be considered in planning a balanced diet. Protein for building body tissue and repairing the millions of cells that are worn out daily. Carbohydrates to produce quick heat and energy. Fats—a more compact form of fuel, which are also essential in a satisfactory diet. Minerals which serve both as builders and regulators of body processes. The six vitamins, A, B, C, D, E and G, that also act as regulators and prevent a number of deficiency diseases. Water—which serves as a vehicle by which food is carried to the tissues. And cellulose or bulk—required for the normal functioning of the intestinal tract.

Danger in Omitting One Food Substance The homemaker who fails to take every one of these factors into consideration is depriving her husband of the opportunity to develop his greatest efficiency. Moreover, she may be robbing her children of their birthright. During every day of childhood, the body is being built, and defects in body structure are likely to arise if the child is improperly nourished. It is then that disease and disability make their appearance as a result of faulty nutrition. How tragic to deprive the young body of substances so necessary to its well being.

How to Check Diet for Balance Perhaps you are like the homemakers who tell me that they do not know a protein from a carbo-

Including Lists of Foods Rich in Iron and Copper READERS are invited to write for a free bulletin containing a list of foods rich in iron and a list of those rich in copper. Houston Goudiss, 6 East 39th Street, New York City.

Free Homemaker's Chart for Checking Nutritional Balance

PLANNING a balanced diet will cease to be a puzzle if you send for the Homemaker's Chart for Checking Nutritional Balance, offered free, by C. Houston Goudiss. It lists the foods and the standard amounts that should be included in the daily diet, and includes skeleton menus for breakfast, dinner and lunch or supper, to guide you in selecting the proper foods in each classification. A postcard is sufficient to bring you this valuable aid to good menu planning. Just ask for the Nutrition Chart. Address: C. Houston Goudiss, 6 East 39th St., New York City.

plemented by the complete protein of milk.

The Protective Foods It is essential that the diet should contain an abundance of minerals and vitamins which are furnished by the protective foods—milk, eggs, fruits and vegetables. Cellulose or bulk is obtained from fruits, vegetables and whole grain cereals. Water comes from juicy fruits, succulent vegetables, milk and other beverages, as well as the water that is consumed as a beverage.

To provide adequate amounts of the seven food essentials at every meal—to avoid the mistake of serving too much of one type of food and too little of another—should be the worthy aim of every homemaker. You will find the task considerably easier if you send for the Homemaker's Chart. Tack it up in your kitchen or in the room where you plan your menus, and use it to check the nutritional balance of every meal you prepare.

If you faithfully follow the food program outlined in the chart, you will help to assure your family of correct nutrition. This is the most priceless gift you could bestow upon them. For nutrition is the architect that draws the plans of human destiny. In providing the right foods, you lay a firm foundation for health on which to rear a life of happiness and success.
