REPUBLICAN GAINS IN NOVEMBER ELECTION

States shown in black showed definite swing away from Democratic party by giving victory to Republicans in two out of three divisions (governor, senate, house); states shaded gave Republicans minor victory in house or gubernatorial election; states shown in white failed to record substantial change in political status or (Maryland, California, North Dakota) showed Democratic gains.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK
By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—Much sought after these days is Col. Fulgencio Batista, chief of staff of the Cuban army, who, in addition to accepting an invitation to attend Armistice day ceremonies in Washington, has replied favorably to the suggestion of Gen. Manuel Avila Comacho, secretary of Mexico's national defense that he visit that country next January.

In both instances the underlying diplomatic motif, viz., "a gesture of co-operation between factors responsible for the development of democracies in our hemisphere," is officially set forth in Mexico and in Washington, tacitly, while, incidentally, the interests of reciprocal trade relations in sugar and tobacco have not been overlooked.

Commanding an army of 25,000 men, Colonel Batista is not only a soldier, but an economist and politician so dynamically and efficiently engaged in Cuba's rehabilitation in both spheres as to have gained for himself the sobriquet, "Cuba's Strong Man." And, also, "The Napoleon of the Caribbean."

First barber, then tailor, carpenter, sugar cane worker, railroad hand, army buck private, stenographer—and now dictator, his course was written in the stars and so predestined; so he says and believes. Now, at the age of 37, he has been responsible for the rise and fall of seven Cuban presidents, controls the Cuban congress and dictates the policies of President Federico Laredo Bru. Of his army, a nippy body of men, he says it is committed to peace; but is ever at the service of the United States in whatever armed issue the great northerly republic may ever enter.

Bettors Weed; Humans Next, Aim of Doctor

THE jimson weed and the vinegar fly figure heavily in hopes for civilizing human beings. That seems a round-about approach, but Dr. A. F. Blakelee, in the news as he hops up tiny flowers to cabbage size by a chemical shot, has found through experiments with the above that we may yet remold humanity to a pattern of decent behavior.

A West Virginia poet called the jimson weed "a mean, stubborn weed of a low, poisonous breed." Relating it to human-kind may have been just a non-sequitur, but Dr. Blakelee found it excellent for gene shuffling and juggling and he worked strange wizardry in turning it into something else again. He thinks he might do the same for the rest of us.

He and Dr. Thomas Hunt Morgan, a biological miracle team, have, in this country, taken the lead in research in genes, as determining the pattern of individual heredity.

Profoundly believing that civilization is conditioned by biological limitations, Dr. Blakelee thinks the way to get rid of congenital killers, war-mongers, dolts and other laggards in the life-parade is to work over the basic stuff of life—mainly genes. He has plenty of jimson weed and reports progress.

A native of Oswego, N. Y., now 64 years old, he was educated at Wesleyan and Harvard. His experiments in biological regimentation have given him high standing in his profession.

Bold Prophet Predicts Safe Family Plane

DR. ALEXANDER KLEMIN, authority on flying and airplanes, hails the approach of the foolproof rotary-winged family airplane, safe as a baby carriage and handy for a trip down to the delicatessen or the post office. It won't be here just this minute, but it is coming, says Dr. Klemmin, as "windmill" flight offers stability which the present mode never can hope to attain. His prediction is made at the first world conference on rotating wing flight at Philadelphia.

Dr. Klemmin, 50 years old, is a native of London, here in 1913, a former student at M. I. T., naturalized in 1917, with the research department of the army air service and thereafter chairman of the Guggenheim School of Economics. He has been one of aviation's boldest prophets. Two years ago, he visioned the next war fought with rocket planes, with jet propulsion, killing at 200 miles. He has prophesied stratosphere flight of 1,200 miles per hour, at a height of 65,000 feet. He rides high in his own stratosphere of higher mathematics, and nobody disputes him.

Like all natural phenomena and many not so natural, U. S. political fortunes run in cycles of liberalism and conservatism. Thus every lengthy Republican administration has been succeeded by a shorter Democratic one, attesting to the American people's inherent conservatism. Since the Republican party reached its latest low ebb under Candidate Alfred Landon in 1936, none but the most optimistic expected anything but a minor gain so early as 1938. But it has proved otherwise, thanks to (1) a growing belief that the Roosevelt administration's expensive recovery efforts have been unsuccessful, and (2) a fear that New Deal policies were encouraging the growth of radicalism.

Moreover, it has been apparent that the public must eventually protest against the political corruption which unavoidably gathers around so large a financial project as WPA. Though the Roosevelt administration may be blameless in this respect, such political machines as that of Pennsylvania's Gov. George H. Earle have unsavory reputations.

Another consideration, one that received less attention than eventually proved justified, was dissatisfaction among America's numerically important farmers. Since the agricultural vote can control congress, it looked bad for the administration when this year's highly touted farm program failed. Despite Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace's sincere efforts, New Deal farm legislation has left producers in northern states without permanent relief.

Almost without exception the November general election has therefore made the U. S. return to its most normal political alignment in 15 years. (See Map). Always Democratic, the "solid South" has clung tenaciously to tradition. But this tradition does not mean the South will line up 100 per cent behind President Roosevelt, for South Carolina, Georgia and Maryland elected senators partially unsympathetic with the New Deal. Several other southern senators and congressmen, not up for re-election this year, are also unsympathetic.

Though in many cases the Republican trend is not so great as the above map might indicate, practically all northern states have shown a surge back to conservatism. This was especially marked in Minnesota and Wisconsin, where Farmer-Labor and Progressive partisans were ousted after long incumbencies. Michigan swung away from Democratic Gov. Frank Murphy largely because he sympathized with the radically tinged Committee for Industrial Organization. In all northwestern states the swing to Republicanism was due partly to agricultural dissatisfaction. New England's industrial population rebelled against allegedly oppressive taxation and the C. I. O., while this territory's traditional conservatism also played an important role. Substantially the same explanation can be made for votes in Ohio and Pennsylvania.

The only important New Deal gains have come in California, where a rock-ribbed Republican governor was ousted; in North Dakota, whose notoriously unsettled political situation has freakishly placed a Democrat in the governor's chair, and in Maryland.

But such a resume does not tell the entire story, for even those states which remained Democratic have shown an amazingly strong Republican upsurge. New York's Gov. Herbert H. Lehman won by only 70,000 votes over his Republican opponent, youthful Thomas E. Dewey, whereas two years ago Mr. Lehman had a 500,000 margin. Illinois, which remains predominantly New Deal, increased its Republican house representation and returned a much larger conservative vote than in 1936.

Having gained at least 8 senators, 75 house members and 11 governors, the Republican party once more has a vocal minority in congress. Moreover its 1940 presidential hopes are better, despite the defeat in New York of Tom Dewey, once considered a likely candidate. If the 1938 election has created any new presidential possibilities, they are Ohio's Republican Sen. Robert Taft and Missouri's Democratic Sen. Bennett Champ Clark.

What the Republican upsurge will do for the U. S. remains conjectural, but post-election stock market activity has been encouraging. To aid industry, the American Federation of Labor is already banking on G. O. P. congressional aid in amending the Wagner labor relations act. The outstanding fact is that 1938's Republican party has emerged a liberal entity, well-spanked for its former ultra-conservatism.

Foreign

That a state visit can hold much international importance is sometimes hard to believe, since state visitors make a studied effort to avoid shop talk with their hosts. But diplomatic Great Britain refuses to minimize the significance of King George's visit to the U. S. next summer, and every sign indicates the English reasoning is correct.

Coupled with the U. S. visit is an invitation for French President Albert Lebrun to drink tea in Buckingham palace next spring, thereby returning the honor accorded by George's visit to Paris this past summer. While all this sounds like social pother, it really means that France and England are desperately trying to give the world a spectacle of democratic solidarity, offsetting the trumpeting of Premier Benito Mussolini and Chancellor Adolf Hitler. Though King George's visit will not result in a U. S.-British pact, it will certainly tighten the bonds between England and America.

This means that next spring and summer Italy and Germany will go into eclipse, while world democracy stages its show. There is every reason to believe the Fascist-Nazi nations appreciate this and realize they must gain their concessions from France and Britain within the next six months. That is why Hitler is pressing his demands for a return of British-mandated colonies, and why Mussolini is urging internationalization of the Suez canal.

People

The death of Turkey's dictator, President Kemal Ataturk, removes the most colorful totalitarianist of our era. A man whose passion was violation of every accepted rule of human behavior, he customarily stayed up all night, ate every food that disagreed with him, had an amazingly large capacity for raki liquor and champagne, was Turkey's champion cigarette smoker and drank gallons of coffee every day. He detested exercise. More benevolent and less anxious for self-aggrandizement than most dictators, Mustapha Kemal established a model nation out of the post-war debris of Turkey. At his death, the nation he founded looks in bewilderment for a successor, while Europe fears southeastern-bound Adolf Hitler may seize the opportunity to establish his economic strength in the Dardanelles.

Business

Government prosecution of combinations in alleged restraint of trade was known as "trust-busting" in the days of President Benjamin Harrison. In 1890 the Sherman anti-trust law began hacking at financial octopi in what was shown to be a legitimate campaign to keep American industry from killing itself by mushroomed growth.

Modern trust-busting is an outgrowth of the New Deal. Its intended victim is not the monopolistic trust of bygone days, but usually a group of powerful corporations which dominate an industry. But though the 1938 model trust buster can be credited with success (17 victories, 12 cases still pending, out of 42 filed since March 4, 1933) he might also be charged with making political capital of his job.

Thus it has been hinted that Solicitor General Robert H. Jackson, once an assistant attorney general, joined the anti-trust crusade last year largely in the hope of winning New York's Democratic gubernatorial nomination. If politics was the inspiration for some anti-trust suits, these same suits have now become such hot potatoes that a vanished political purpose does not justify the justice department's dropping them.

One possible example may be the trust case against the Aluminum Company of America.

To date this year-old investigation has failed to uncover much except a re-hash of testimony and evidence from the 1935 federal trade commission's probe, and a private litigation of a decade ago from which the company emerged with a clean bill of health.

Today's anti-trust division of the justice department has 90 lawyers compared with 15 in 1933, handling monopoly cases and proceedings connected with 31 other major acts of congress. Trust-busting boss is Thurman Arnold, whose fetish is investigating the price policies of industry. Says Mr. Arnold: "We are being forced to take control of inflexible price structures and coercions in restraint of trade today just as in 1933 we were forced to take control of the financing and marketing of securities."

Much interest now centers in the justice department's newly inaugurated suit against Delaware's Columbia Gas & Electric corporation for allegedly "conspiring to monopolize" the natural gas industry of Kentucky, Ohio, West Virginia and Michigan. But in accordance with his probe of price policies, Thurman Arnold is probably more interested in oil. Since crude oil prices recently plummeted in the wake of alleged over-production by refineries, both the President and Mr. Arnold favor a program for state control over oil production and refining.

Harking back to the trust-busting days when Standard Oil's case first made the U. S. monopoly-conscious, the new probe will examine every phase of the oil industry from production to marketing. Though oil men will welcome an intelligent government program to stabilize crude oil prices, observers fail to see great consistency between this program to raise prices, and other monopoly quizzes which prosecute men for allegedly raising prices.

Religion

After 31 months of strife, four months of which cost 1,317 lives and left 1,150 wounded, Palestine's "holy war" is still not ended. The British-mandated territory has been Arabic for centuries but was set aside as a homeland for Jews following the World war, only to arouse Moslem fears that Hebrews would soon dominate the land. Using terrorism as their weapon, Arabs have attempted to force an immediate settlement on slow-moving Great Britain, but London has just announced its refusal to make an immediate decision. Great Britain proposes to call a conference of Jewish and Arab leaders whose compromise agreement would wash Great Britain's hands of all responsibility for the Holy Land. This would be fine except that Arabs refuse to arbitrate in this fashion, which leaves Palestine's problem still a hopeless muddle.

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Describes the Body's Vital Need for Vitamin C; Names Most Significant Sources of This Substance

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

OF ALL the vitamins that should be included in the diet every day, none, perhaps, is more important, nor more frequently provided inadequately, than vitamin C.

There are, I believe, two reasons for this. First, unlike some of the other vitamins, vitamin C is not stored by the body, so that it is impossible to build up a reserve supply.

In order to maintain top health, it therefore must be furnished in the diet every day. Second, the C vitamin is more easily destroyed than some of the others, for it is oxidized upon exposure to the air, and is usually partially destroyed in cooking. That accounts for the well-known rule that it is usually desirable to include in the daily diet some raw foods, such as cabbage or citrus fruits. The rule may be waived, however, when tomato juice or cranberry sauce are included in the menu. For careful experiments have determined that, because of their high acid content, these two foods retain their vitamin C to a remarkable degree; when commercially canned or when cooked quickly in the home.

Functions of Vitamin C

The full importance of including an adequate supply of vitamin C-rich foods in the diet can only be fully appreciated when the amazing functions of this anti-scorbutic vitamin are fully understood.

Long years before the first vitamin had been discovered, and when the science of nutrition was still in its infancy, English physicians observed that the use of orange juice would help to cure children of a serious disease characterized by a sallow, pale complexion, flabby muscles, and a painful inflammation of the membrane surrounding the bones of the legs. And as early as 1795 it was also discovered that British sailors could be prevented from developing the painful and serious disease of scurvy if they were given a regular ration of lemon juice which had been evaporated to a syrup. It was because lemon, then called lime, juice was invariably prescribed for the navy that British sailors came to be known as "limies," a term which is still in use today.

Scurvy a Controllable Disease

Scurvy was thus prevented or cured in both children and adults, long before scientists learned that precious vitamin C is the controlling factor in this disease. And shortly after the turn of the century a systematic study was begun by scientists in both Europe and America to discover all the foods that possessed the almost magical power to prevent and cure this former scourge of mankind.

In the course of many painstaking investigations and brilliant discoveries, we have gradually increased our knowledge of scurvy until today we know that the substance which prevents the disease is vitamin C.

May Retard Growth in Children

It has also been noted that many cases of latent scurvy can be found among children and adults in all walks of life. It has been determined, for example, that many children who are restless, irritable, or retarded in growth are in reality suffering from a deficiency of vitamin C.

When deprived of this vitamin, experimental animals develop swollen, tender joints, sore jaws and spongy, bleeding gums, while the teeth become loosened and assume irregular positions. Hemorrhages may occur almost anywhere in the body, due to capillary weakness, and are particularly common in the kidneys, intestines, bone marrow, under the skin, in the muscles and adrenal glands. Indeed, one of the most interesting of all the discoveries concerning vitamin C was made with guinea pigs. It was observed that in a healthy animal, the adrenal glands are rich in vitamin C, while in a scorbutic animal, they contain practically none.

Pyorrhoea and Vitamin C

Many investigators have discovered that a deficiency of vitamin C causes profound changes, not only in the gums, but also in the enamel and dentine of the teeth. It has been suggested that pyorrhoea may be associated directly with a vitamin C deficiency.

Certainly, there is enough convincing evidence, as a result of work with both children and adults, to indicate the importance of an adequate supply of vitamin C in maintaining healthy teeth.

Sources of This Body Regulator

Vitamin C is produced by plants during their growth. It is found in juicy stems, bulbs, roots, tubers and fruits.

Outstanding among the fruits are the citrus family, including oranges, lemons and grapefruit; tomatoes and cranberries. Raw cabbage is a good source as is watercress.

So important is vitamin C that one or more generous portions of a vitamin C-rich food should be consumed daily, preferably at every meal.

Orange and tomato juice have been used interchangeably for quite some time as a convenient and easily available source of vitamin C. In recent years, some experiments performed at a leading university have given a high ranking to cranberries on this score, so that they, too, may be

Horse Sense About Winter Oil Change

Cold weather creates new problems in lubrication. To overcome damaging wear, the motor oil must possess three essential characteristics: (1) low cold test to assure quick easy starts (2) ability to lubricate at all driving speeds (3) durability to stand up for reasonable mileage. Curiously enough these requirements are contradictory in that to assure one factor it is very easy to unbalance another.

The only safe rule to follow in preparing your car for Winter is to buy the very best motor oil, Acid-Free Quaker State.

The refiners of Quaker State were pioneers in developing motor oils for Winter use. Today in four great modern refineries the most modern equipment and methods transform the finest Pennsylvania grade crude into motor oils which make automobiles, trucks and tractors run better, last longer, the year 'round.

The low cold test of Quaker State Winter Oil assures smooth easy starts. Its purity frees you of worry about sludge, carbon and corrosion. Its ability to stand up is unequalled . . . you go farther before you need to add a quart.

It is merely commonsense to practice economy. And the accumulated experience of car manufacturers, engineers, and most car owners proves that the use of high quality motor oil is genuine economy. It is conservatively estimated by authorities that 80 to 90 per cent of all repairs to an automobile are caused by faulty or incorrect lubrication.

A wise man once said: "It takes 12 months and sometimes longer to correct a mistake on a farm." Just so, five minutes running with the wrong oil in the engine of your car the first cold morning this Winter can cause more wear and damage than all the miles you drove this past Summer.

Play safe with your motor investment. Ask your dealer to prepare your car for Winter with Acid-Free Quaker State Winter Oil of the proper grade for your community.—Adv.

Talking Selves Down

When the famous English Dr. Johnson courted Mrs. Porter, whom he later married, he informed the lady at the outset that he was a man of mean family, that he had no money, and that an uncle of his had been hanged! But the good lady, instead of taking it all amiss, and in order to reduce herself to his level, replied that she had no more money than he, and that, although none of her relations had been hanged, she had 50 who deserved hanging.

ranked as a significant source of vitamin C.

These brilliant little red berries come into market in the fall—the very time when it is important to eat generously of fruits to fortify the body against fall and winter ills. Their tart flavor helps to stimulate appetite and their fruit acids promote intestinal tone.

Neither the maturity nor variety of the fruit appears to have any influence on the vitamin content, and even when cooked, as whole fruit sauce, they retain from 75 to 80 per cent of the original vitamin C content of the fruit. Cranberries are also a fair source of vitamin A which is not impaired by cooking, and they contain iodine, iron, copper and manganese.

Because they are such a versatile fruit, cranberries can be utilized throughout the menu and at any meal. Thus orange and tomato juice may be varied at breakfast by serving a cranberry conserve, jelly or sauce, or a cranberry juice cocktail. For lunch or dinner, this same fruit may be served as an appetizer; with the meat course; or used to make a variety of attractive desserts.

If vitamin C-containing foods are included generously in the daily diet, the homemaker may well feel that she has provided her family with an important form of health insurance.

Questions Answered

A. F. G. Jr.—Green salads do play several important roles in the diet. They furnish bulk or cellulose, minerals, vitamins and water, and therefore help to balance a meal.

Mrs. F. C. L.—Most authorities now advise giving semi-solid foods to infants before the end of the first year. Usually the cereals, vegetables, and fruit pulps are carefully strained so that they are finely divided and free from harsh particles which would irritate a baby's delicate digestive tract.

The Story of Thanksgiving Day Told in Pictures and Documents

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON
© Western Newspaper Union.

THANKSGIVING Day—One of the four distinctively American holidays has had a long and interesting history.

It was started by English colonists in America as a feast day to enjoy a bounteous harvest after a year of hardship and famine.

Later it became a day of public thanksgiving and prayer by the citizens of the United States after they realized that their new nation had passed safely through a great crisis.

Again it was celebrated in that spirit when they saw that their country had been preserved from disunion and destruction.

Pictured here, in portraits and authentic reproductions of documents, is a part of the story of Thanksgiving Day.

By L. L. STEVENSON
Subway trains and stations are lodging houses for hundreds of New York's homeless. The number is greater in winter, of course, since during the cold season park benches are impossible as beds. But all through the year there are many subway sleepers. Late passengers encounter or see them stretched out on hard benches in draughty stations, with trains arriving or departing noisily every few minutes. Other passengers see them propped up in corners of cars getting their rest, if such it may be called, as the train clatters underground. Train crews and station men are supposed to evict the lodgers. But they are human and pity those forced to such bedsteads. So the sleepers remain until day comes. Then they wash up and disappear only to return at night. Nowhere else is it possible to obtain shelter, such as it is, for a nickel.

Periodically there are drives on the part of the police department to rid the subways of sleepers. Those caught are taken into court on a charge of disorderly conduct. Last spring, the number of such arrests ran up to 500 a month. One magistrate dismissed all brought before him on the ground that sleeping in the subway was no crime. On the other hand, there have been many complaints that not all the subway sleepers are merely down and outers. Women have been molested and annoyed and in a number of instances, subway sleepers have turned out to be pickpockets. In fact, conditions reached such a state in the city's own subway system that a number of washrooms had to be closed at night.

On my way home early one morning, I noticed what looked like a huge pile of old newspapers on the platform of a downtown station. As I was looking at it, the pile started to move. A hand came out and then another. Finally, three men crawled from beneath the waste that had served not only as a bed but as a covering. Then too on cold winter nights, I have seen men sleeping on the bridge that leads from the uptown to the downtown tracks at 181st street.

The greater number of subway sleepers are men, of course. But occasionally there are women and even girls. At 168th street I saw a woman and two girls sleeping on a bench in the station. Evidently a mother and her daughters with no home. For quite some time after that, New York didn't have the same glitter.

While shack dwellers have disappeared from Central park—the old reservoir that was once their home has been filled in and turned into a playground—the city's great midtown breathing space still has a number of permanent dwellers. For them, clumps of bushes are a bedroom. Or they sleep among the rocks as did cave-dwelling ancestors. Drinking fountains furnish water for washing and shaving. An odd job now and then, or panhandling, brings money for food. Police on duty in the park are supposed to chase or arrest such vagrants. But the cops are few and hiding places many.

The water front is a refuge for many derelicts. To them rotting piers are homes. Some are fortunate enough to find straw-filled packing cases. Others stretch out on stringpieces. Broken by the buffeting of misfortune or sodden through liquor, they slumber wherever they lie. On occasions, caught perhaps by nightmare, a derelict rolls in his sleep. And days later, the tide gives up a body.

Average Man of 70 Years Spends 5 of Them Eating

LONDON.—The average man spends five years of his life eating. A group of expert investigators who have just concluded a detailed examination of the lives of ordinary people in Great Britain found that the ordinary man could eat all the food required for good health in half an hour, but he takes more than two hours at the table. Most of the waste is caused by waiting for meals to be served.

A man who lives to the age of 70, therefore, spends some 450,000 hours eating, or about five years.

The investigators also found that the average woman wastes 10 years of her life doing unnecessary labor in housework and answering the doorbell.

The First Thanksgiving—From the painting by J. L. G. Ferris famous painter of American historical scenes, in Independence Hall, Philadelphia.

Among those who enjoyed the Pilgrims' first Thanksgiving celebration was Chief Massasoit of the Wampanoag Indians, who remained a firm friend of the colonists until his death in 1662. This statue of the chief by Cyrus Dalin stands in Plymouth, not far from the scene where "King Massasoit with some ninety men" were "entertained and feasted for three dayes."

a Proclamation
Whereas it is the duty of all nations to acknowledge the providence of Almighty God, to obey his will, to be grateful for his benefits, to keep his precepts and from time to time to declare their gratitude to his bounty and for his good gifts to the people of the United States:
In testimony whereof, I have caused this Proclamation to be published, and I have directed that it should be read in every city, town, and village of this United States, on the first day of October next.
Given under my hand at the City of New York, the third day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twenty-one, and of the Independence of the United States the forty-fifth.

The first Presidential Thanksgiving proclamation (which was also the first Presidential proclamation of any kind) in the history of the United States was issued in 1789. It was written by William Jackson, President Washington's secretary, and signed by Washington. After a mysterious disappearance of more than 100 years, the original draft of this proclamation was found by Dr. J. C. Fitzpatrick, chief of the manuscript division of the Library of Congress, in a New York auction room. It was purchased for $300 and is now treasured in the national archives.

Edward Winslow wrote the first (and possibly the only) contemporary account of the first Thanksgiving celebration by the Pilgrims. It was published in "Mourt's Relation" in London in 1622. It described the celebration thus: "Our harvest being gotten in, our Gouvenour sent foure men on fowling, that so we might after a more special manner rejoice together, after we had gathered the fruit of our labours; they foure in one day killed as much fowle, as with a little helpe besides, served the Company almost a weeke, at which time amongst other Recreations, we exercised our Armes, many of the Indians coming amongst us, and amongst the rest their greatest King Massasoit, with some ninetie men, whom for three dayes we entertained and feasted, and they went out and killed five Deere, which they brought to the Plantation and bestowed on our Governour, and upon the Captaine, and others." (This portrait of Winslow is from a miniature painted in 1651 and attributed to Robert Walker. It is said to be the only Pilgrim portrait that is authentic.)

A page from the book "A Relation or Journall of the Beginning and Proceedings of the English Plantation Settled at Plymouth in New England," containing the only known contemporary description of the first Thanksgiving, celebrated by the Pilgrims in 1621. This book, known to scholars as "Mourt's Relation," was printed for John Bellamie "at the sign of the Two Greyhounds in Cornhill near the Royall Exchange" in London, in 1622. The "G. Mourt," who received the correspondence from the Pilgrims and published them in this book, is supposed to have been a certain George Morton and the letter which describes the first Thanksgiving is usually credited to Edward Winslow. His journal of the experiences of the Pilgrims during their first years in the New World has been called "one of the most charming of the early colonial records." States May Aid Nomad Toilers Committee Finds Drifters Are Useful to Industry and Agriculture.

NEW ORLEANS.—The job-seeking nomads who pick California oranges in January and Louisiana strawberries three months later soon may find a greeting other than a cold "move on" in this state.

The newly created Louisiana committee on homeless and transients has made a study of the "floater" and found him essential to agriculture and industry.

Myron Falk, field representative of the committee, found neither labor nor industry apparently has taken any recognition of the floater's rightful place.

Nuisance, Say Police. Police authorities consider the floater a nuisance, Falk discovered. For years the wanderer has been disposed of in one of two ways—(1) showing him from town to town and (2) anchoring him at points along the way.

Neither of these two methods ever will prove satisfactory in settling the problem, Falk argues. In the first place, the floater wanders, not because he wants to but because he has to travel to get a job.

Falk found that floaters, as a general rule, were far from being "bums." Although they live in hovels, most of them have been to school and some have college educations. Their work ranges from picking moss to installing air-conditioning systems.

They follow definite cycles of migration and the largest group of men are between 25 and 35. Many have families and most family men travel in old motorcars. Single men, Falk discovered, prefer traveling by freight trains.

Would Help Him. The committee, working on the basis of the study, believes that the best way to handle the drifter is to aid him in getting the elusive job that sometimes lies just the next town away.

It proposes to set up an information service to provide floaters with more accurate information on work than they get via the "grapevine."

It hopes to work out reciprocal agreements with neighboring states to provide aid for guidance for the drifter.

Particular attention will be paid to children of the floating family. The committee looks forward to interstate agreements to permit the aid of education facilities for children of one state in return for similar aid to those of the corresponding state.

Even Eskimos Succumb To the Jitterbug Craze

PITTSBURGH.—The jitterbug craze which has prompted the most sedate to let down their hair and "truck on down," has even the Eskimo tapping his feet to the beat of a hot swing tune.

Radio is responsible for the spread of the jitterbug influence to the Arctic circle, says J. Kenneth Douth, 35, and Dr. Arthur C. Twomey, Pittsburgh scientists who have just returned from a trip to the frozen North to gather specimens for Carnegie museum here.

Although the average Eskimo cannot understand a word of English, he is affected just like swing enthusiasts everywhere, the scientist declared. Usually, they said, the Eskimo gather at the Great Hudson Bay trading post to listen to such tunes as "Flat Foot Floogie With a Floy Floy" and "A Tisket, a Tasket."

But that was just one of the incidental things the two explorers learned on a visit to Belcher island and Ungava Land, where they studied animal and plant life on the shores of Hudson bay. The eight-month trip took them 1,750 miles north.

Prize trophies of the trip were two fresh water seals—the first such specimens to be brought to Carnegie museum, and possibly the first for any museum in the United States. The two seals were shot. One is a male and the other a female.

Cats Have Housekeeper; Live in Lap of Luxury

LONDON.—In a nine-room house overlooking the sea at Barton, 10 miles from Bournemouth, six cats live in the lap of luxury.

Each has its own room, bed and dishes, and a housekeeper is employed to look after their every want. Four times a week a taxi from Bournemouth brings their food—the best steak, fish, rabbits, milk and cream.

The cats are the property of Mrs. Agnes Burrell of Bournemouth.

Several Jobs Offered To 'Lazy Young Man'

KENDALLVILLE, IND.—The classified advertisement column of a local newspaper recently carried this notice:

"Lazy young man with ability desires easy job, but prefers one with wages. Not a clock watcher, owns a wrist watch. Will tolerate social security deductions." The advertiser reported several offers of jobs.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

Smart cushions from odds and ends.

THERE comes a letter from a reader ordering both of the sewing books offered below. She says, "I have to smile when people tell me it does not pay to sew. Recently I had a regular spree of doing over the living room. I spent $10.35 for materials. The sewing machine and I did the rest. Here is what the ten thirty-five bought. New slipcovers for the davenport and two chairs, chintz curtains for three windows, a new ottoman and a lamp shade. The slipcover for the davenport alone would have cost fifteen dollars if made outside."

It now seems that there is a need for more color in the newly decorated living room. The curtains are very gay but the new slipcovers rather neutral. Why not repeat some of the curtain colors with bright cushions? A clever girl I know saves the good parts of old silk dresses and blouses and buys remnants of bright silks and ribbons for this purpose. Her pillows are always most professional looking. If contrasting pieces are joined, she uses covered cords in the seams and contrasting cordings and neat little frills around the edges to repeat the strongest tones in the room. In this way many different kinds of material may be brought into harmony.

NOTE: You also may have smart slipcovers, curtains and dozens of things you have been wanting. Mrs. Spears' books have helped thousands of women. She tells you quickly with pictures the things it would take years to learn by old-fashioned methods. Her sewing sketches clear away all uncertainties both for the beginner and the experienced sewer. Every page is packed with new ideas—all illustrated. Book 1—SEWING, for the Home Decorator. Book 2—Gifts, Novelties and Embroidery. Books are 25 cents each. Order both books and get fascinating quilt leaflet free. Address Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

Still Coughing?

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your common cough, chest cold, or bronchial irritation, you may get relief now with Creomulsion. Serious trouble may be brewing and you cannot afford to take a chance with any remedy less potent than Creomulsion, which goes right to the seat of the trouble and aids nature to soothe and heal the inflamed mucous membranes and to loosen and expel germ-laden phlegm. Even if other remedies have failed, don't be discouraged, try Creomulsion. Your druggist is authorized to refund your money if you are not thoroughly satisfied with the benefits obtained. Creomulsion is one word, ask for it plainly, see that the name on the bottle is Creomulsion, and you'll get the genuine product and the relief you want. (Adv.)

REPORT OF COUNTY ROAD COMMISSIONERS
East Tawas, Mich., Octobr 1, 1938
To the Honorable Board of Supervisors of Iosco County, Michigan.
Gentlemen:
Complying with the statute relative thereto, we take pleasure in submitting to the Board of Supervisors and the people of Iosco County, our annual report showing moneys received and disbursed and the work done thereon.
Board of County Road Commissioners.
ERNEST CREGO, Chairman.
FRANK BROWN, Member.
ELMER BRITT, Member.

The addition of all streets and alleys in recorded plats of the Road Commission's responsibilities this year has added another unexpected burden. We anticipated that the Legislature would follow the original intention of the Holbeck McNitt law and provide funds for this work, but, instead of giving us additional funds about two thousand dollars have been taken away from Iosco, due to the proportionally larger mileage of streets and alleys in those plats and a total of about $2,000.00 less for all of those roads.
We have not been able to maintain the Holbeck McNitt roads in the condition we would like to have this year. It was necessary to take from the $48.00 per mile about $20,000 for urgent improvement on mail and bus routes, leaving only about $6.00 per mile for all maintenance on these roads. At least $60.00 per mile is required to plow snow one winter when the snow fall is fairly heavy. Even this would not be enough for snow removal where it is fairly heavy as it was the winter of 1935 and '36.
Approximately 21,000 cubic yards of crushed limestone surface has been put on the Holbeck McNitt roads from our Whittemore Limestone pit during this period. While several times this amount is still needed to get all of us out of the mud, we feel we are making good progress in that direction.
If during the past season you have driven over poorly maintained side roads we hope you will share with us the satisfaction we get from the knowledge that if these roads were maintained as we would like to see them it would be necessary to cut out most of the improvement we have succeeded in putting on this year. This year we have constructed about 22 miles of new grade and much of the same has been surfaced with stone. We were however, not able to do anything on bridge construction this year.
As authorized by the Board of Supervisors, the new floor and strengthening of the Oscoda river bridge, bringing it up to standard state load ing, will be an added inducement to the state toward taking over the River road as a Trunk Line. The State Highway Commissioner promised two or three years ago that this road would probably be taken over when the grade was improved to the same standard as the first five miles out of Oscoda was being improved at that time.

Each year the number of school bus routes increase along with the demand for roads that are safe and passable at all times. We do not need to tell you that the demand is far in excess of that which available funds will take care of, but we feel that we should call your attention to the proposed amendment No. 3 which is to be voted on this fall. While this will not provide any additional funds and does not change the gas and weight tax in any way, the approval of this Proposal by the voters will prevent any future diversion and thereby eliminate the ever present danger that of still further shortage of funds for road work. Since we know of no sane argument against this proposal and since its approval will prevent politicians from using gas and weight tax as they see fit, there by creating further hardships for northern Michigan counties. We therefore, ask that your Honorable Board go on record as favoring the approval of the Proposal No. 3, and we hope each Supervisor will do all he can to enlighten the voters that their approval of this measure is to the best interests of our county.
It is our hope that some law may be passed at the next session of the Legislature that will provide more money for roads for northern Michigan counties. Even if this cannot be done by redistribution of funds and an additional gas tax is found necessary, we believe the saving obtained by traveling smooth dustless roads will more than compensate any reasonable increase. Even though the public demands for road improvement are growing constantly the counties of the state now have $14,000,000 less to take care of construction and maintenance than was available to take care of the same road mileage in 1929, and the distribution of the gas and weight tax is such that the thinly populated counties of Michigan, such as Iosco, suffer in proportion much more than those more thickly populated.

We are deeply grateful for the spirit of co-operation that exists between our Board and the Board of Supervisors, and feel that your sympathetic understanding of our financial difficulties has enabled us to go ahead with confidence in our belief that we have given the public the best we could give for the money.

Sentinel of Health
Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designs the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure. When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feet tired, nervous, all worn out. Frequent, scanty or burning passages may be further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance. The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. SYNOPSIS

Barbara Sentry, seeking to sober up her escort, Johnny Boyd, on the way home from a party, slaps him, and attracts the attention of a policeman, whom the boy knocks down. As he arrests him, Professor Brace of Harvard comes to the rescue and drives Barbara home. On the way they see Barbara's father driving from the direction of his office at 12:45, but when he gets home he tells his wife it is 11:15 and that he's been playing bridge at the club. Next day Sentry reports his office has been robbed and a Miss Wines, former temporary employee, killed. The evening papers luridly confirm the story, and Sentry takes it hard. Mary, elder daughter, in love with Neil Ray, young interne at the hospital where she works, goes off to dinner at Gus Loran's, Sentry's partner, with Mrs. Loran's son, Jimmy Endie, and Mr. and Mrs. Sentry call on old Mrs. Sentry, and Barbara, alone, receives Dan Fisher, reporter, who advises her not to talk. Phil Sentry, son of Yale, is disturbed at the possible implications of the suspicion of Miss Wines' absence from her rooms for three days during August. He goes home to help. Sentry is arrested and booked for murder. Dan Fisher explains the suspicion of Miss Wines—that the robbery was a fake, the safe opened by one who knew the combination, changed since Miss Wines' employment there—that a back door key, a duplicate of Sentry's, was found in the girl's purse, and that Sentry, too, had been away those three days in August. Brace calls, and backs up Barbara in her denial that Sentry could have done it, because of the discrepancy of time between the slaying and their seeing Sentry on the road. Phil, showing the police over the house, finds his strong box open and his gun, which only his father knew of, gone. Meanwhile, the police find the stolen money burned in the furnace. Mrs. Sentry sees her husband, who swears his innocence, and tells her he had known of the robbery and murder the night before, but failed to call the police, and came home at 12:30. Mary quarrels with Neil Ray, and runs away with Jimmy Endie to the Caribbean. Linda Dane, friend of Barbara and Phil, tries to comfort Phil. Falkran, noted criminal lawyer retained, inspires hope but not admiration. Dan Fisher, whom Barbara has been meeting at her grandmother's, tries to use influence to keep the family out of the papers, and everyone shields Barbara, on the verge of a breakdown.

One day when Brace was to meet Barbara at her grandmother's for tea, and arrived before the girl, the old woman spoke to him of Barbara's condition, said stoutly: "I wish someone would marry her and take her away from here! She can't stand much more. She hasn't the strength to go through all this. She shouldn't have to do it!" He dissented gently. "People can't shirk such things. Barbara's sister did, I know; but she will always regret it. We have to accept our burdens, our responsibilities. Face them squarely." She said grimly: "Maybe No doubt you are a level-headed young man, but I suspect you're too level-headed for your own good!"

He smiled tolerantly. "I'm sorry," he said. "But—dear as Barbara has come to be to me—I can't advise her to dodge or to evade." "Dear to you, is she?" "Very!" "Then marry her," the old woman counseled. "Sweep her off her feet. Marry her and take care of her." He said gravely: "I hope to, some day. But if I asked her now, she might come to me just to escape. I want her to come to me because she wants me."

"Fiddlesticks! If you want her, take her, on any terms at all." He shook his head. "I shall have to be a witness at the trial, you know," he confessed. "The District Attorney has warned me to be ready. Barbara need not know, yet; but if we were married, and then I testified, she would blame me, never forgive me." "Get out of the reach of a subpoena while you can." "I can't do that. I've given my word!" "Pah! If you've the courage of a—"

But Barbara arrived, putting a period to their words; and after that Mrs. Sentry did not attempt him again. She found Dan Fisher more to her taste. Between these two something strong and binding had developed. He came to her often, even when Barbara was not there. Once he came dispirited, and she saw this and demanded, "What are you so down in the mouth about?" He grinned. "Been barking down a rat hole," he confessed, "and the rat wasn't at home."

"Talk sense!" He hesitated. "Well, Linda Dane and I have been putting our heads together, trying to see some way out of this. I thought we had a lead. Old Mr. Wines, the dead girl's father, told me that in her letters home the girl spoke of a man's having asked her to dinner. I started to check on him." "Who was it?" "I can't very well—" away. But that blew up. Two ways. It turned out that Loran was in Maine. I've talked with his guide. He has a camp on a lake up there. Flies up, flies his own plane. He was there." He added: "And just to make sure, I checked on him for the night she was killed. We know what time she went to Mr. Sentry's office. Mr. Loran boarded a New York train about the same time, went right to bed. The porter saw him in his pajamas a little after eleven; and the porter's sure Loran didn't get off the train after that." She demanded, "Why couldn't Miss Wines have been in Maine too?" "Guide says, No." "Maybe he's lying." "Didn't seem like a liar." "Maybe she was near there. Maybe he flew over to where she was." He hesitated, and she said sharply, "Speak up, man!" "Miss Wines wasn't in Maine," he said reluctantly. "They've found where Miss Wines was. She was at a hotel in New Jersey." The old woman's fingers twitched, her eyes closed, then opened again, shrewd and keen. She said in a low tone: "You're not looking at me. I suppose Arthur was with her?" He nodded. He said miserably: "But it's Barbara that gets me! She'll have to go through it all, the trial, everything. She may even have to testify! I wish I could—marry her, get her out of this." "In love with her, are you?" "Yes!" She demanded, "Then why don't you?" Dan looked at her quickly, and he colored, and then he chuckled. "You're a girl after my own heart!" he declared. "I'd do it in a minute—if she'd have me—but I can't!" "Why not?" "Money," he confessed. "And—this is the only job I've got. If I could land a promise of a job somewhere else—But these are tough times in the newspaper game."

"Why Couldn't Miss Wines Have Been in Maine Too?"

"I'll finance you." He grinned, shook his head. "Easy come, easy go," he reminded her. "I've never been able to hold on to money unless I earned it myself." He added: "But I'd like to find some way to keep her out of this. Keep her out of the trial, anyway. Why don't you take her away yourself, to Europe or somewhere?" The old woman said quietly, "The next trip I take, I shall have to go alone, Dan."

He met her eyes honestly, without denial. "This must have—hit you hard," he assented. "The shock, the worry, the uncertainty." She said, half to herself: "There's no uncertainty. I've accepted that. It's more Ellen's fault than his, perhaps. She shut him out of her life long ago. He had to turn somewhere. Yet I don't mean to blame her. At least she went on living with him. This is hard on her; but—it may change her, soften her." She added: "Yet he is my son! Whatever he has done!"

Dan's eyes filled. He gripped her hand. She said with a sudden faint smile: "Professor Brace thinks it's Barbara's duty to—see it through. I judge you don't agree?" He shook his head. "Lord love you, no!" And his eyes began to blaze. "Sometimes Brace—" Then he checked himself. "I wish I could take her away!" So in these days all their solicitude came more and more to center upon Barbara. Phil sought in every way to cheer her; and as Christmas approached he tried to enlist her interest in planning some holiday observance that could be endured. They were in her room one night, Barbara abed, Phil sitting beside her while they groped for some device, when with no warning she interrupted their discussion to say: "Phil, tell me truly, do you think father killed her?" He was shocked into silence for a moment; countered then, "Gosh, Barb, what do you take me for?" "Do you?" she insisted. "No, of course not." "I read all the newspapers," she said. "If he didn't, how could all the things they say be true?" He said: "But you haven't read father's side of it, Barb. Wait till he tells his story." "What is his story, Phil?" "Why, he doesn't know anything about it at all." She looked away from him. "Phil, shall we all have to testify?" "Not mother," Phil replied. "Probably not any of us." He added: "Mother can testify if she wants to, though. She probably will if he wants her to." "I won't!" "Well, if he wants us to—" "I won't!" she repeated tensely, eyes still averted. "No matter who wants me to. I won't! I'll—cut out my tongue first."

Her voice shook, and he said: "Whoa, Barb! You're scared. He suggested at last, "You haven't been to see Mr. Sentry." "No." "He asks often for you," Falkran told her. "I shall be glad to tell him I have seen you so hale and well." She eyed him shrewdly. "You want me to go see him?" "I know it would—help him," he admitted. "Then I will," she promised, in a curiously submissive tone. "The first fine day." "Splendid!" he said, beaming. "If you do, Mrs. Sentry, I guarantee everything else."

Old Mrs. Sentry tried to carry out her promise to see her son. "But I shall want to be with Arthur alone," she said, then added: "Yet I'd like for you—for all of you—to ride down with me, wait for me outside. My courage is good, but I'm not as strong as I used to be." They waited for a fair day, but that winter in Boston was a bitter one. Not till the first week of February, on the eve of the approaching trial, did the season serve. Then came a day when spring seemed just around the corner, and the sun shone warm. Old Eli brought the ancient limousine. Barbara and the nurse helped Mrs. Sentry dress; Phil and Barbara steadied her to the elevator and down and into the car. She sat between Barbara and Mrs. Sentry, Phil on the small tip-up seat in front of them. They drove through scant mid-afternoon traffic to the jail; and the old woman's cheeks shone bright and brighter, flushed and hot, and Barbara saw a pulse pound in her thin throat.

But she could not, when the time came, go in. As the car stopped, she collapsed suddenly, not falling, not even toppling sideways, but just shrinking down into herself so that she was small. Even their untrained eyes saw that she was ill; that this was not faint-heartedness. In a sudden terror, uncertain what to do, Phil and Barbara stammered and fumbled; but Mrs. Sentry said steadily: "We'll have to take her home. It was too much for her." They all stayed in town that night with her; for the doctor had forewarned them. Once the old woman spoke, in a surprisingly strong voice. She said: "Tell Arthur I loved him." And she added, with no irony in her tones, "And tell Mr. Falkran I hope he can use—this—just as well."

Her death, toward dawn, made headlines. "Sentry's Mother Stricken at Jail," said the morning paper. "Mrs. Sentry Dead on Eve of Trial," said the afternoon editions. Her funeral occurred on Saturday, two days before the trial was to begin. The brief and premature warm spell had ended in a blizzard that clogged traffic. ever tells me anything, and I have to know what's going on." And she cried desperately: "Phil, I won't tell! They can't make me, can they?" He evaded answering. "Say, you're doing a great job on grandmother, Barb," he said. "You surely take a load off mother and me. Of course, we miss you at home, but someone has to be with her. Is she all right? Is there anything she wants?" And the shot at random was successful. "Yes, there is," Barbara remembered. "She told me to tell you, she wants to see Mr. Falkran!" Phil seized on this. "Sure!" he cried. "I'll get in touch with him; we'll take him in to see her this afternoon. Right away."

And the enterprise at once engaged them. Barbara went in town to make her grandmother ready; and when at half-past two Phil appeared with the lawyer, the old woman received him in state, sitting very erect in her great chair. But at once she sent Phil and Barbara out of the room, and when they were alone she asked Falkran questions, watched him, studied him.

He suggested at last, "You haven't been to see Mr. Sentry." "No." "He asks often for you," Falkran told her. "I shall be glad to tell him I have seen you so hale and well." She eyed him shrewdly. GOLDEN TEXT—Keep thyself pure.—1 Timothy 5:22.

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education; used by permission.

The importance of the home as the divinely appointed center of all human life has always made it a special target of Satan. That onslaught of the power of hell is apparently redoubled in our day. Books, plays, movies, magazines, all contribute their filthy efforts to break down all sense of moral responsibility. Sex is magnified, and not in any useful or normal sense, but rather for the stimulating of unhealthy desires and purposes, the breaking down of Christian standards of living and the ultimate prostitution of the most sacred of all human relationships to a level of which animals might well be ashamed. The lesson of today should be taught with care and tact, but also with a holy boldness and a plainness that will make it effective for God and for our homes. We begin with a word which is little spoken, while far too often the sin for which it stands is practiced and tolerated.

I. Adultery—a Grievous Sin (Exod. 20:14; Matt. 5:27, 28). First, let us note that any violation of the divine plan for the marriage of one man and one woman, in loving communion for the founding and maintenance of the home, is a direct violation of the law of God. It is also a violation of the law of man. It brings serious results in the destruction of the home, and in the ruin of individual life—physical, moral, and spiritual.

The words of Jesus broaden the interpretation of the commandment to cover all sexual impurity in thought, word, or deed. While we recognize that the outward act of immorality carries with it consequences both in the life of the individual and those with and against whom he sins, which do not follow upon the thought of evil without the act, yet it is true that essentially he is guilty who had it in his heart to do the wicked thing even though a sense of prudence or circumstances hindered its execution. We need clean hearts and minds if there are to be clean lives.

II. Marriage—a Divine Institution (Mark 10:6-8). As the proper background for a discussion of divorce our Lord makes clear that marriage was ordained by God, and that it involves a holy union of two individuals which makes them one. All those who look forward to marriage should realize that it is not a casual thing, or a merely temporary legal contract. It is a union for life—be it for better or worse, in sickness or health, in prosperity or adversity. All who are married should therefore highly regard their sacred vows.

III. Divorce Limited and Remarriage Forbidden (Mark 10:2-4, 10-12). This passage, and other scriptures, teach that divorce is not permitted except on the ground of adultery (Matt. 5:32), and that any remarriage involves the parties in the guilt of adultery. Aware as we are of the laxness of some branches of the church in such matters, and the almost entire lack of standards in the world, we cannot but present the plain teachings of our Lord and urge every reader to follow the commandment of God's Word.

There can be no question that divorce is a major evil in our day. The writer has been astonished to find one family after another in his own respectable neighborhood where the children bear one name and their mothers another, or there are two "sets" of children in one family with different surnames because of divorce and remarriage. In some cases he knows of the fathers of children coming to see their offspring at the home of the second husband. What utter confusion such situations must create in the minds and hearts of the boys and girls!

IV. Children—the Gift of God to the Home (Mark 10:13-16). How relieved we are to leave the consideration of such sordid, even though vitally important, matters as moral impurity and divorce, and turn to the beautiful picture of Christ blessing the little children. It would appear that Jesus desired to turn the thought of His hearers from the negative "thou shalt not" to the positive solution of the home problem. Children make the home. They are God's benediction upon the marriage of man and woman. Sad and disillusioned will be the men and women who make themselves childless, hoping thus for more comfort and pleasure. The road to happiness does not go that way. The soft and tender baby hand has led many a couple to full happiness, and the joy of watching our children grow into manhood and womanhood cannot be evaluated in the mint of gold or earthly pleasures.

Boys and Girls of 4-H Clubs Protect Animals and Birds of Rural Districts

Few persons realize the important contributions the members of the 4-H clubs are making to the cause of conservation, writes Albert Stoll, Jr., in the Detroit News. These clubs, operating throughout the nation and composed principally of rural boys and girls with the motto, Head, Heart, Hand and Health, have been in a particularly fortunate position to become intimately acquainted with their native plant and animal life and realize just what these resources mean to their communities. In many instances the groups are responsible for reforestation projects and the conservation of farm woodlots. They have encouraged, through protection and refuges, the maintenance of a crop of fur-bearing animals in their communities. Through winter feeding operations they helped carry quail, pheasants and winter song birds through severe periods. In Michigan alone the clubs have been given thousands of pheasant eggs for incubation and after rearing them made liberations when the birds were able to shift for themselves. They have taken an active interest in the preservation of rare wildflowers. They have discouraged the indiscriminate killing of beneficial hawks and owls, a practice which their forefathers considered good preservation. In the more remote districts they have rendered valuable services in the prevention and control of forest and brush fires. In short, they have given a splendid demonstration of what youth can accomplish if it becomes interested in a subject and applies head, heart and hands to the task.

● Progress made in perfecting new scientific aids for hard-of-hearing.

—By Dr. James W. Barton

WHEN glasses were first used the main thought was to magnify or enlarge print or other objects so that they could be more readily seen. Gradually glasses were improved so that shortsightedness or longsightedness was corrected, then astigmatism (where rays of light do not focus to a single point due to a defect in the curvature of the lens of the eye), then weakness of any of the muscles controlling the eyeball; finally double vision lenses, one for reading and one for distance, were produced, and finally contact lenses, which are fitted beneath the eyelids and do away with the need of frames.

It would seem that there is the same process of development of progress giving aid to those who are hard of hearing. We all remember the large horn that the hard of hearing carried not so many years ago, which was held toward anyone trying to speak to them. Just as the first glasses magnified, or increased the ability to see an object, so the horn increased or gathered the sound so that it could be more readily heard. Then followed various types of hearing aids, electrical and mechanical, some of which helped certain cases but were unsatisfactory in others. And just as glasses for the eyes were made to correct more than poor or weak vision, so the new aids for hearing are now manufactured to correct different "types" of hard of hearing.

New Electric Device.
An editorial in Laryngoscope states: "Great improvements in electric hearing aids are being made with surprising rapidity. Among recent advances in this field the most important is the development of 'selective' amplification (increase in the hearing) by which the units of a portable carbon microphone hearing device of variable amplifying power at different pitches are assembled in such combination as will best meet the special requirements of the individual as shown by his audiogram."

The audiogram is the chart on which the audiometer (the hearing test machine) has marked the hearing ability of the individual at different ranges of sound. The day has now arrived when ear specialists are able to advise the patient as to his needs and these needs can, to a great extent, be met by these new hearing devices.

'Imbalance' of Muscles Causes Eyestrain

Eye specialists (oculists) tell us that what is commonly called eyestrain may be due to other conditions than overuse of the eyes or reading in a poor light. Thus Dr. John V. V. Nicholls, Montreal, states in the Canadian Medical Association Journal that eyestrain proper means manifestations in the eyeball itself, in the ability to see, and in the body as a whole. Disturbances due to reading too much or reading in a poor light are relieved by removing these irritating conditions, whereas symptoms affecting the eyeball, seeing ability, and the general health give rise to much more disturbance.

The ocular or eyeball symptoms are dull heaviness over the eyes, itchy and burning sensations in the margins of the lids, and sometimes redness of the eyeball. The visual or "seeing" symptoms are more or less prolonged attacks of blurred vision. There may be periods of double vision.

Among the systemic symptoms, due to a disturbance which interferes with the eyes working together properly, are faintness and dizziness.

Treatment Takes Time.

Dr. Nicholls states that all these systemic symptoms are due to an "imbalance" of the muscles which control or move the eyeball and can be corrected if treatment of this muscle imbalance is properly carried out. This treatment may require considerable time and perhaps much home work on the part of the patient, but the results are very satisfactory.

Further, just as the oculist advises the patient to rid himself of any infection present—teeth, tonsils, sinuses—before having the eyes tested for glasses, so it is suggested that as "temporary" muscle imbalances are not uncommon after influenza or other depressing ailments, a reasonable time should be allowed for the condition to correct itself before beginning treatment. "Treatment, based on the above principles, carried out with patience and persistence, will be found very successful."

"My bill for improving your hearing comes to $25," said the ear specialist.
"Did you speak?" asked the patient, cupping his hand to his ear.
"Perhaps I'd better make it $10."
"That's better, doctor," said the patient quickly.

HIGH SCHOOL

In the first game of the Typing II tournaments, Violt Carroll, William Koepke, Norma Musolf and David Sims were winners. Fidalis Groff and John Katterman were tied. David Sims was high point man. Team I had the highest score. In the race between the two rival newspaper staffs in Typing I class, the Class Leader to date has the highest ranking reporters. However, the Independent students are gaining a little on their opponents being now just one tenth of a point behind. Last week Dorothy Blust and Arnold Rollin both had two perfect reports to their credit. However, this week Dorothy slipped from By-Line rating to an ace Reporter. The Independent Student could boast of only one perfect report and one ace reporter. The object of the race is to see which newspaper can get all ace reporters. To qualify as an ace reporter the student must type two speed or accuracy tests with no more than one error. A perfect report gives the student a byline rating. Two consecutive reports with an increase of errors earns a demotion.

The Juniors are holding a Thanksgiving bake sale at Bing's Hardware Wednesday afternoon, November 23. They will deliver. Plan to buy from them.

English I class has been studying the principal parts of verbs, plural and singular verbs, and correct usage of adjectives and adverbs. In English II we are studying the subject of synonyms, antonyms and homonyms. In our readings in literature we have dramatized parts of the plays "Enter the Hero" and "Sham." The class decided that Anne, the main character in "Enter the Hero," was a silly sentimental girl.

The Latin I pupils learned various facts about the Roman schools. Their studies, their writing materials, and their methods of discipline among other facts were interesting to note.

The English IV class has been studying Swift's "Gulliver's Travels," the size of the Lilliputians, their customs with the underlying satire of English life caused varied comments.

Friday night, November 11, the Freshmen entertained the Sophomores at a school party. Games such as King's Commands and Blarney were enjoyed. For lunch the Freshmen served cocoa, sandwiches, cookies and cake.

The name of Ruth Herriman was accidentally omitted last week from the list of the names of the high school students who were on the honor roll for the second month of the school year.

Delegates to the annual meeting of the Michigan State Farm Bureau, which was recently held in Lansing, authorized their Board of Directors to join with the school districts of the state in starting a case in the Ingham county circuit court to halt the diversion of $8,500,000 from the school funds of the state. This diversion was directed by Governor Murphy in a recent order. This order resulted in approximately $3,193.25 of the funds of the Tawas City district being taken for other purposes.

MUSIC
The band resumed rehearsals yesterday after a few days of inactivity. The rest did much good, because our intonation and balance was much better than it has been. We have quite a few girls who are learning to play clarinet, and they are coming along very well. They are Nona Rapp, Leona Ziehl, Irene Toms, Ethel Rembert and June Hill. Virginia Rapp has just started. We hope to have these girls play with us next week.

The music class has begun a study of music form and we hope to study the great classics before long. We have already learned that all music has some definite form or pattern which is followed just as in painting, architecture, drawing, etc.

SEVENTH and EIGHTH GRADES
Our motto for the week: "Do not squander time. Time is the stuff life is made of."

We have a new pupil in the seventh grade, Hazel Galliker, formerly from Whittemore.

George Westcott has been absent from school because of illness.

Vera Rapp, who is attending the Vine school, visited our school Tuesday.

Willard Musolf was absent three days last week. He went deer hunting.

Leland Briting has returned to school after a trip to New York. He reports a very pleasant time.

FIFTH and SIXTH GRADES
Billy Galliker, of Whittemore, entered the fifth grade on Monday.

Jerry Ogden, of Bay City, and Leo Burch, of Detroit, visited our room on Tuesday.

Charles Luce has returned to school after being absent for six weeks with the whooping cough.

The fifth grade hygiene class is working on health plays.

PRIMARY
The pupils in grades one and two plan to go to the club room to sing Wednesday afternoon. They have chosen "The Gobbler", "Over the River", and "Cartloads of Pumpkins" for their songs.

The Fairies have finished their Mother Goose poem books and have begun reading about Peek from Busy Brownies.

We are enjoying making our Thanksgiving pictures and posters. Barry McGuire's mother and grandmother visited our room today.
