J. E. FRANSON SPEAKS AT C. OF C. MEET

Keiser Names Committee Chairmen and Secretary

John E. Franson, ranger at the Huron National forest, gave an interesting talk Monday evening before the Tawas City Chamber of Commerce at a banquet at the Hotel Isoco. About 30 members were present.

Ranger Franson's talk outlined the history of Isoco County's forests from the early lumbering days until the present time. He described the different phases of reforestation and told of some of the difficulties that had to be met. Among these was our ever present fire menace. He said that while the size of areas destroyed by fire had been held down by newer and more effective methods, that the number of fires had steadily increased. He asked that every citizen co-operate with the forestry service in the prevention of fires.

One of the immediate benefits of our national forests are their recreational possibilities, he said. The department has increased its activities along this line each year and many attractions are available such as suitable camp sites and good highways. He gave as an example the work at Silver Valley where ski jumps and toboggan runs had been constructed. This place became quite popular during the past season and he said that the only limit to expansion in this program would be the degree in which these facilities were used.

A discussion of the coming Perch Festival followed Mr. Franson's talk. H. J. Keiser, chairman of the general committee, reported the progress made and asked for further suggestions. Earl Davis was appointed secretary of the general committee and chairmen of the following committees were named: Queen's Committee, Douglas Ferguson; Decorations and Parade, Albert Buch; Publicity, George Myles.

Everyone enjoyed the fine dinner served by Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Martin of the Hotel Isoco. The next regular meeting of the Chamber of Commerce will be held Monday evening, April 24.

Interesting Institute Held at West Branch

The Annual Four-County Institute held at West Branch last Friday, March 24, proved to be unusually interesting. A new type of institute, which had never before been tried, was well attended by educationally interested from four counties. Estimates placed the number of teachers at approximately 67 from Isoco, 20 from Oscoda, 33 from Roscommon and 73 from Ogemaw county.

In addition, school officers from all schools of the four counties were in attendance and participated actively in the proceedings.

On Thursday, five representatives from the State Board of Education were in these counties, visiting rural and city schools to determine the status of educational conditions and the outstanding needs thereof.

On Friday the institute proper opened at 9:30 in the West Branch high school auditorium. An interesting and complete program was presented, which offered educational matters of interest to all.

Margaret Worden, Commissioner of schools of Isoco county conducted the morning program, which was opened with musical selections by the West Branch High School band. Rev. Walter Fry then pronounced invocation. Following this, John Haitena, of the State Department, gave an inspiring address on "Social Interpretations of Education." Mr. Haitena spoke of the bad general impression the public holds for teachers. He cited as causes the unfavorable flavor given to the profession by a few unreasonable or extreme teachers. The public typically human, uses these as a criteria of the whole profession. Too much attention and application to sometimes uninteresting work can not be expected of school pupils, especially in grade school children. It was also stated that it is impossible for the school to rise above the moral level of the community. A successful democratic school community must have constant contact between teachers and pupils.

Two Amendments

There will be submitted to the voters at the election, April 3, two proposed amendments to the Constitution.

Amendment No. 1 provides that in all primary elections and in elections of Justices of the Supreme Court, Judges of the Circuit Court, Judges of Probate Courts, and all County Judicial offices, provided by the Legislature under Section 21 of Article VII of the Constitution, shall be non-partisan. Nominations for these offices will be made at primary elections. Nominating petitions for candidates shall be filed at least 35 days prior to such primary election. Nominating petitions for Judge of the Circuit Court shall be filed with the Secretary of State and for all other Judicial offices affected by this amendment with the county clerk.

There will be a separate ballot used in the primary election for the election of these Judges. There will be no party designation used by the incumbent or the candidates. This proposal will add a new Section to Article VII of the State Constitution.

Proposal No. 2 provides for the vesting in Circuit Court Commissioners, such powers as exercised by Justices of the Peace. It gives the Legislature power to provide by law for the election of one or more persons in each county with judicial power, not exceeding that of Circuit Judge at chambers with judicial powers of a Justice of the Peace with power to hold court and perform judicial acts anywhere in the county. This proposal would amend Section 21 of Article VII of the State Constitution.

Weekly News Analysis Britain Drops 'Appeasement' But Policy Even Weaker Now

By Joseph W. La Bine

EASTWARD THE MARCH OF EMPIRE GOES
A week's supply of conquests and objectives.

EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst, and not necessarily of the newspaper.

Europe

It is easier to hoot at a boxer from outside the ropes than within. If the average U. S. citizen were an Englishman he would be far less critical of a government which eschews war even if it means loss of prestige. But after eight months of a "foreign policy" which is more concerned with immediate convenience than permanent direction, the most peace-loving Englishmen are now beginning to believe Prime Minister Chamberlain might have achieved greater results with no more risk by holding to a steady course.

From the Czech crisis last September until mid-March, Mr. Chamberlain's "appeasement" cries grew progressively weaker as Britain and France strengthened their defense against possible aggression from Dictators Hitler and Mussolini. By March 1 the two democracies were strong enough to suggest dictating terms to the Reich, whose economic position had grown intolerably weak. Then, overnight, all semblance of "policy" collapsed. The events in sequence:

(1) Hitler grabbed Czechoslovakia, whose frontiers were guaranteed last autumn by France and Britain. Mr. Chamberlain said it was no concern of his.

(2) Two days later Mr. Chamberlain suddenly whipped about-face, accusing Hitler of dishonesty and unwarranted aggression.

(3) Russia, for 15 years unwelcome in British circles, was asked to join London in a pact to "consult" in case of future German aggression.

(4) Britain reversed its course again and made no protest when Hitler occupied Memel, whose ownership by Lithuania was guaranteed by British-French signature of the Memel statute.

(5) Britain backed down on its pact with Russia, refusing any stronger measure than the useless "consultative" treaty.

The substance of these disjointed events is that Britain's "appeasement" policy has given way to no policy at all. It can well be doubted that London sincerely hoped its Russian overtures would have more than a temporary jolting effect on German territorial ambitions. For Britain still wants nothing to do with Moscow; in fact, the fondest Tory hope is that Germany and Russia will eventually lock horns, fighting out the issue of Nazism versus Communism to the ruin of both.

Britain will be happy so long as Hitler drives eastward, confining his ambitions to such objectives as Danzig, the Polish corridor and Rumania, ultimately reaching into the Russian Ukraine to invite war with the Soviet. This conclusion is inevitable because the most concrete result of Mr. Chamberlain's umbrella waving thus far has been a French-British military pact to aid Switzerland, the Netherlands and Belgium against German aggression.

Congress

Europe's Czechoslovak and Memel crises (see EUROPE) have brought quicker, more definite reaction in the U. S. than most people realize. Last January, when President Roosevelt made timid suggestions that the present neutrality law should be changed, a terrific uproar ensued. The same uproar returned when he asked a special $358,000,000 defense appropriation a few weeks later. But the new European situation has brought a remarkable show of inter-party solidarity, admittedly temporary, but strong enough to give France and Britain a strong moral support and warn Reichsfuehrer Hitler that he is not wanted on the western hemisphere.

(1) Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles received both Democratic and Republican praise for his diplomatic protest against Hitler's seizure of Czechoslovakia.

(2) Neutrality legislation expiring May 1 permits "cash and carry" sale to belligerents of anything but war materials. Nevada's Sen. Key Pittman has asked that munitions be placed on the allowed list. Utah's Sen. Elbert Thomas would give the President power to designate an aggressor nation and forbid shipments to it.

(3) Washington's Sen. Homer T. Bone has offered, with bi-partisan support, a bill to tax profit out of war. The plan: Greatly increased tax rates would be imposed in case of conflict, lowering exemptions and imposing surtaxes on highest brackets ranging up to 93 per cent for individuals. Corporations would be taxed 100 per cent on net incomes over 6 per cent of their adjusted declared value.

(4) Within 15 minutes, both senate and house passed the $358,000,000 emergency defense bill, authorizing 6,000 army planes, stronger Panama canal fortifications, bigger sea-coast and inland defenses, better army equipment and more effective hemispherical protection.

White House

How to raise U. S. price levels is one of the administration's biggest problems. Republican laymen, and many Democrats, contend a retrenchment of federal spending would do the trick. But the White House places more faith in Marriner S. Eccles, federal reserve chairman, and Sen. Key Pittman, Nevada silver advocate. Even these two "doctors" find themselves at odds, however. During a recent public debate they outlined these two opposing paths to the coveted price level.

Pittman. Favors currency inflation, "since government billions have completely failed to raise the price level." Believes federal reserve body's periodic increases and decreases in reserve requirements have had a bad effect on business. Eccles. Against currency inflation. Partially agrees it would help raise price levels, but fears new money would not be put to use. "Lack of opportunity to get a profit is the principal impediment to recovery today."

Whether the White House could pull a definite monetary program from such an exchange of theories is doubtful. But there are indications that the ideas of Mr. Eccles, famed advocate of spending, hold favor. President Roosevelt told his press conference that he refuses to cut U. S. spending until private enterprise guarantees jobs. Neither will he favor repeal of "deterrent" taxes, apparently, for he has mildly denounced advocates of a slash in the federal budget. But since Mr. Eccles is on record as favoring government action to "remove impediments to the encouragement of private capital," White House and Eccles do not jibe.

Neither do White House and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace jibe. Defending an unchanged AAA for 1939, Mr. Wallace told the house agriculture committee that industrial recovery was a prerequisite to farm recovery, and that industrial activity should be increased 40 per cent as speedily as possible. Then, he said, farmers will secure their just share of the total national income.

Politics

Smart politicians never count chickens before they hatch. But neither do astute political observers forget that it is a high-well impossible job to bounce a favorite from the saddle. Although more than a year remains before Republican and Democratic parties hold their nominating conventions, New York's Republican District Attorney Tom Dewey and Texas' Democratic Vice President John Nance Garner have emerged definitely as men of the hour.

Garner. Sometimes disgustingly independent to President Roosevelt, the vice president has led a powerful Democratic revolt this session of congress and today controls approximately as many house and senate votes as the White House. Though 70 years old, he holds the favor of Emil Hurja, astute party analyst who has indicated there is little chance Garner can be bounced from favor in 1940. The chief Garner opponent is Postmaster General James Farley, whose vote-seeking efforts have been confined to east and northeast states while Mr. Garner concentrates on the Southwest. Many Democrats can see nothing more natural than a union of these two forces, one for President, the other for vice president.

Unpredictable as his father, Texas' Elliott Roosevelt gave politicians a puzzle by announcing that Mr. Garner is "in the driver's seat, well in the lead as a likely Democratic candidate for the presidency in 1940." That Son Elliott holds White House favor for this remark is seriously doubtful. Franklin Roosevelt prefers not to run again in 1940 but will do so unless the party accepts another man who will and can carry out his New Deal philosophy. John Garner would not be apt to do this.

ELLIOTT ROOSEVELT

Dewey. New York's district attorney lost the governorship to popular Herbert Lehman by less than 1 per cent of the popular vote last fall, but the mere fact that he lost—and that a few weeks earlier his case against James Hines had been tossed from court—cost Mr. Dewey much popularity. But since last November old guard Republicans have dropped from the picture. More over, able men like Michigan's Sen. Arthur H. Vandenberg have shown disinclination to run. Realizing a candidate must be found soon, G. O. P. voters have unofficially settled on Dewey since he "came back" to convict Hines on the rackets conspiracy charge. Whereas a mid-February poll by the American Institute of Public Opinion gave Dewey only 27 per cent of the popular Republican vote, a month later he had jumped to 50 per cent.

Resolved, by Michigan's new Gov. Luren D. Dickinson, that no official business will be transacted on the Sabbath.

COL. VLADIMAR S. HURBAN

Though a Slovak, and although Hitler has made Slovaks independent of Czechs, Col. Hurban has so much dislike for Germany and so much pride in the late Czechoslovak nation, that he refused to surrender the Czech legation in Washington to the German ambassador. Born in the Carpathian mountains, he knew Magyar oppression as a child. Becoming a soldier, he went to Russia 30 years ago to accept a professorship in the czar's war college. When the World war broke out he and 70,000 other Czechs joined the Russian army. During the revolution these Czechs made their historic movement to Vladivostok, where the group collected funds to send Hurban to Washington. There he joined Dr. Thomas Masaryk in founding the Czech nation. After the government was established he returned to Washington as Czech military attaché, later going to Egypt as charge d'affaires, to Sweden as minister, and in 1936 back to Washington as minister. His greatest accomplishment here was consummation of the Czech-U. S. trade treaty last year, now abrogated under Hitler's "protectorate" regime.

Lights of New York

by L. L. STEVENSON

Pitchmen, or street vendors, have always interested me. Of course I have known of some professionals, who by the use of "gimmicks," and other misrepresentations, took the hide off the gullible. But in the main, I have looked on the peddlers of razor blades, cards, wrist watches, etc., merely as men out to make a few honest dollars. The West Side chamber of commerce, however, holds differently. In a letter sent to the city council backing a bill which would prohibit street peddling, the association declared that a 13-year study had brought conviction that street peddlers were a lot of sharpers leading the innocent to slaughter and therefore should be abolished.

Hundreds of purchases were made by the association during its investigation. And so has been accumulated a collection of watches without works, of hosiery, dresses, ties and gloves so inferior they could not be used, of razor blades which were rewrapped seconds, of literature "obscene and demoralizing," and "of similar articles which resulted in loss to the customer and injury to the city." The peddlers, the association maintains, are sharp, shrewd fakers, surrounded by shills and who can still go into court, pay fines and make a "mighty good salary by duping their buyers."

Magistrates have an influence on the working places of the pitchmen, the association holds. If the magistrate sitting in the West Side court is known to be lenient, then the district north of Forty-second street is filled with pitchmen. If the Jefferson Market court magistrate is known to be lenient, then they shift south of Forty-second street, which is the dividing line.

On Madison avenue, between Thirty-eighth and Thirty-ninth streets, is a drab old four-story brownstone-fronted residence which is soon to be razed along with the others in the block. It was the residence of the late George F. Baker, once one of the most influential and wealthiest financiers in the country. Mr. Baker died there in May, 1931, and the house has stood vacant ever since. Next door is another old stone home, which has been vacant even longer. It was the residence of Mr. Baker's son who left it when he built a new home on Park avenue soon after his marriage in 1911. He died aboard his yacht near Honolulu in May, 1937. Now the Baker residences, together with four other old buildings, one the carriage house of the estate, which has been occupied by a caretaker, are to be razed to make room for a parking lot, which will extend along the entire block.

The coming of the parking lot will mark the invasion of business into the Murray Hill district against which the elder Mr. Baker fought until his death. With him in the battle was the late J. Pierpont Morgan, whose home was across the street. Millions were expended to build barriers against business. Court proceedings were frequent, the litigation continuing until a few years ago. So, the Baker home and surroundings are an island in the midst of towering skyscrapers and hotels.

Despite his wealth and shrewdness, about 20 years ago Mr. Baker was very nearly outwitted. An old apartment house was torn down and he was assured that another inconspicuous dwelling would take its place. He noticed, however, that heavy steel beams were being used in the construction. By the time he could acquire title to the premises, the building was up three stories. He stopped it then and there. But he did make a concession by making the structure, known as the Professional building, available to physicians.

Times Square eavesdropping: "He's so smooth that he makes you think he's doing you a favor by picking your pocket."

Declares Facial Shaping For Newborn Is Simple

PHILADELPHIA.—Facial malformations soon may be overcome as a matter of course, Dr. Ray Edward Raymaker of Missoula, Mont., told the convention of the Philadelphia County Dental society.

Doctor Raymaker said that any experienced dentist, using only his fingers and one small instrument, could reshape the pliable bones of an infant's face within 30 minutes after birth. In disclosing the results of 16 years of research, the Montana dentist stated that he had reshaped the faces of hundreds of babies.

He declared that nipples for babies' milk bottles should be prescribed by competent dentists after careful examination, because poorly shaped nipples cause upper jaw malformations.

Doctor Raymaker, addressing the general assembly of the convention, told 900 delegates that he had become interested in the problems of facial malformations while giving anesthetics for obstetricians in Montana.

In a clinic the Montanan displayed casts showing how various defects were corrected through his method.

Oldest U. S. Sunrise Ceremony Still Greet's Easter Morning

This Easter morning, B. J. Pfohl (left) leads the fifty-first year a band which has played at Winston-Salem, N. C., every Easter morning for more than 175 years. The strangest band in the world, possibly the largest, this group draws from 300 to 400 players for its once-a-year performance.

Salem's band was founded by Moravian settlers from Germany but this Easter it awakens not a village but a city of 95,000. Above photo shows the group assembling for its rehearsal at the old Home Moravian church. Mr. Pfohl estimates he has inducted about 4,000 members into the band during his more than 50 years experience.

Touring the city in busses and playing under streetlights, the band awakens Salemites each Easter in a traditional ceremony that has gone unbroken through the years. Later bandsmen go to the old Belo home where ladies of the Moravian church have a hot breakfast ready for them. Then they proceed to God's acre, the Moravian cemetery, to lead the ancient sunrise service. Right: The Moravian band starts them young. This lad began in Pfohl's Sunday school band classes, as have many Salem musicians.

Above: The democracy of the dead. In Winston-Salem, the Moravians permit no ostentatious marks upon their graves. This Easter morning scene includes a section of God's acre, showing how each member of the congregation has a grave marked with simple uniformity. The dead are buried in plots, according to age, sex and whether married or not. There are no "family plots" and no distinctions of any description. Left: Oldest member of the musicians-for-a-day citizens' band is H. E. Pusey, 80, who never plays at any time except for Bandmaster Pfohl at the traditional Easter sunrise service at God's acre. But he makes "good music."

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—When James D. Ross was appointed by the President as chief of Bonneville, the biggest dam in the world, in October, 1937, it was believed in some quarters that his selection would sharpen the disagreement between the administration and the power companies. Today it appears that Mr. Ross has allayed, rather than provoked hostilities. The utilities rate him as "reasonable." Bonneville has been the bete noir of western power development. This writer hears there is now a better chance for two-way appeasement than at any time in the past.

Mr. Ross, for 20 years head of the municipal power development of Seattle, has human traits which perhaps account for his expedient rather than doctrinal trend. No mere doctrinaire would amuse himself by keeping a copper ball in the air with no visible means of support—just because he loves kilowatts and likes to see them work.

He was a consulting engineer for the New York power authority and the St. Lawrence seaway, a consultant for PWA power development and later a member of the SEC before the President made him the Bonneville boss. As a boy, he rode his bike from Chatham, Ont., to New York city, to learn pharmacy. He got a job as an apprentice chemist, but pestling seemed piffing, so he hit the long grind back to Chatham—but he kept on pedaling. He headed up through Edmonton to the Alaska gold-fields, and, when dry land failed him, he made his own boat and pushed on. In Seattle, years later, he helped design the first municipal power plant.

YOUNG America is naturally envious of Capt. Harold E. Gray, who will be at the controls when the Yankee Clipper, huge Pan-American Airways flying boat, takes off for its flight across the Atlantic. It is now trying a few preliminary crop-hops around New York harbor.

Captain Gray, it seems, had a system, in qualifying for this stellar role in aviation. First he became a licensed airplane mechanic; then he qualified as an aeronautical engineer, a master mariner and a radio technician; after all, he took diplomas in meteorology, seamanship, international law, admiralty law and business administration.

That seems to be about par for the lad who would be a skipper on one of these new leviathans of the air. All this, and many years of hazardous flying over the mountain wilderness of Mexico and Central America bring Captain Gray to the ripe old age of 33. He left college in his second year at the University of Iowa and was aloft for the first time at the age of 19. His home town is Guttenberg, Iowa.

WARREN LEE PIERSON, head of the Export-Import bank, appears to rate an assist in the Nazi put-out in Brazil. The big credit deal, to clear the trade ways between the two countries, is widely accepted as a goose-egg for the Reich.

The young and energetic Mr. Pierson, who became head of the bank in 1936, toured the Latin-American countries last summer and fall and returned with a lot of sizzling new ideas about hopping up South American trade, and resisting the totalitarian drive, by deploying credit judiciously where it is needed most to grease the trade run-around.

When it came to Brazil, he got eager attention from both the state department and the administration, as Brazil is an important consideration of naval geography as well as trade. Shouldering far out into the Atlantic, with the new fascist threat to the Canary Islands, it would, if hostile, pinch us in a narrowing seaway, with Argentina, on the whole not so clubby with the U. S. A., away down under. For both strategic and commercial reasons, Brazil is our entrepot to South America, if we keep on being neighborly.

In Harvard law school Mr. Pierson was obsessed with foreign trade and directed his studies to practice in this field. Practicing law in Los Angeles, his opportunity came in 1934, when he was appointed general counsel for the Export-Import bank. In 1936, there was, for him, a timely New Deal row, which resulted in the resignation of George N. Peek as head of the bank and the upping of Mr. Pierson.

Active Persons Are Subject to Colitis Attacks

TODAY'S HEALTH COLUMN

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON
WHEN the word constipation is mentioned the first thought with many is to take more "roughage" in the food, as this roughage will irritate the bowel and cause its muscular coats to contract and squeeze the wastes downward and out of the body. And, as a matter of fact, rough food—fruits and vegetables—is the best single treatment for the ordinary case of constipation due to soft foods and lack of exercise.

There is, however, a type of constipation which alternates with diarrhea in which these rough foods are so irritating that they cause spasm or partial closure of the bowel and constipation is the result. Following the spasm and constipation there is diarrhea in which the wastes are covered with mucus. These individuals are always "aware" of their lower bowel or colon and the condition is called colitis. In order not to irritate the lining of the bowel, these colitis patients are often given soft and liquid foods, with daily doses of paraffin oil to lubricate wastes and enable them to pass readily throughout the length of the bowel.

Sufferers Are Emotional.
It has often been found that the individuals who suffer with colitis are not usually the lazy type but are active, high-strung and emotional. And just as the emotions can cause stomach, heart, gall bladder and blood vessel spasm, so also are they to blame for most cases of colitis. It is therefore only a small part of the treatment to prescribe diets in these cases. The important part of the treatment is to try to have them understand that it is their fears, their anxieties, their worry about their own or their family's health that is causing the constipation, diarrhea, dull pain and irritable abdomen.

Doctors Charles W. Mayo and E. G. Wakefield, Mayo Clinic, tell us that "the cure of these disturbances of the lower bowel (not due to organic disease) is not by a rearrangement of the diet but in attempts to control the social conditions causing the upsets. In order to get rid of these disorders the defects in education, morality, religion and even physical heredity have to be corrected."
In other words, these disturbances of the lower bowel or colon can only be corrected when these individuals recognize that they have not adjusted themselves properly to their circumstances and to life. And to the extent to which they adjust themselves and acquire poise and calmness, just to the same extent will their symptoms disappear.

Foot Defects Should Receive Prompt Care
One of the helpful things that was learned during the examination of recruits for overseas service was the importance of having normal feet—free from pain and discomfort. One may have brains and ambition, but to be unable to be about among others because of painful feet not only interferes with business and social progress but the constant nagging of the nerves affects the general health and happiness of the individual.
As most of these were young men who were presenting themselves for service, it can be seen that their foot defects were not due to any heavy work that was being placed upon them but because as little children and later as growing boys in their 'teens, proper footwear was not provided by their loving but thoughtless parents; the narrow "trim" shoe for growing boys and girls did not allow the proper width for the growing feet.
In writing on the subject, "Fitting the Feet for Life," Beulah France, in Hygeia, states:
Business Men Guilty.
"Nor are 'teen age youngsters the only ones who are guilty of foot indiscretions. While college girls and boys show sense about shoes as a rule, graduates who enter business leave foot fitness behind them. Men as well as women suffer all too needlessly from hammertoes, callouses, corns, bunions and ingrowing toenails due to ill fitting shoes. It is difficult to understand why a woman is willing to ruin her posture, her gait, her facial expression and her outlook on life by wearing uncomfortable shoes. Many an impatient gesture, many a hard word spoken, many a lined and wrinkled face, may be traced to the owner's feet."
Walk correctly. Do not toe either out or in, but straight ahead. If you cannot do this, your doctor will tell you whether he advises a leather lift on one side of your shoe's heels, or whether he would suggest some other form of correction.

University Cadets Engage in Mimic War Games

Preparations for miniature war games by cadets of the Reserve Officers' Training corps at the University of California at Los Angeles were held recently with modern anti-aircraft equipment moved in on the Westwood, Calif., campus. Cadets enrolled in the coast artillery unit of the student corps were instructed in actual operation. The equipment included a three-inch anti-aircraft gun, director, height finder, searchlight, sound locator and machine gun. Maneuvers are part of a practical training corps.

Justice Pierce Butler Satisfies Curiosity

Associate Justice Pierce Butler of the United States Supreme court reversed the usual proceedings recently and looked through the operating end of a newsreel camera. He satisfied his curiosity after posing for cameramen, feeling, evidently, that turn about is fair play.

Is Hitler Planning Ukrainian Conquest?

Map shows huge eastern European area inhabited by Ukrainians, whom Germany's Reichsfuehrer Hitler would group into one nation under domination of the Third Reich. Recent Nazi conquests in the former republic of Czechoslovakia and his trade overtures to Rumania lead international observers to believe the Fuehrer is paving the way for his "drive to the east" in which a new state would be carved, principally from Russian territory.

Centenarian Receives Centennial Ticket

Dr. Newell Patterson of East St. Louis, Ill., who, like baseball, is celebrating his 100th year, received the first of the souvenir St. Louis Cardinal opening day tickets commemorating the national game's centennial. A Civil war veteran, he said only bad weather would keep him away from the Cardinal-Chicago Cub opener in April.

PIGEON EXPRESS

Margaret Gillen, 10 years old, a patient in St. Clare's hospital, New York, where she is recovering from two operations, holds a pigeon which flew from Elizabeth, N. J., recently, bringing her a canary, the gift of J. N. (Ding) Darling, cartoonist and outdoor enthusiast. The canary is in the small aluminum pullman on the pigeon's back. The pigeon flew 20 miles against a strong wind in 40 minutes without mishap.

JOSEPH BENTON NORTH has performed fifty-two marriage ceremonies, and not one of them had any lasting effect. He can recite the marriage rituals of forty-seven varieties of religion, ranging from the voodooistic ceremony to that of the Church of England, but he uses a mixed ritual which he made up himself. As you've probably suspected by now, he is a minister without portfolio, one who officiates only in the movies.

Of the many screen plays whom he has "married" North reveals that Claudette Colbert exhibited the most nervousness; he thinks that was because she is the most religious. The calmest person, he says, was Rochelle Hudson; she took two of his ceremonies in her stride, and apparently thought they were amusing. Laura LaPlante cried, and Marlene Dietrich kept arranging her hair and dress.

His most recent appearance on the screen as a marrying man was for "Wuthering Heights." Merle Oberon and David Niven were the bride and groom, and he used the ritual dictated by the period.

The Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret, of England's royal family, were asked recently to name their favorite motion picture star. Ignoring Norma Shearer, Janet Gaynor, Clark Gable, and the other topnotchers (including Shirley Temple) they replied "Gene Autrey."

When Billie Burke broke her ankle she was considerate enough to pick a perfect time in which to do it. She tripped as she was leaving the "Maiden Voyage" set, and snap went the ankle. Being a seasoned trouper, her first thought was of the picture, and the delay that might be caused by her accident.

But it happened that all of her walking shots had been made. She was due just to sit in the rest of the picture anyway.

How'd you like to look ahead to taking a beating? That is what Walter Pidgeon has been doing. For "Six Thousand Enemies" is slated as his next picture, and the script calls for him to be soundly beaten by one of the six thousand—with a husky pugilist selected by the casting department for the role. Pidgeon has been using his spare time between scenes of "Penthouse" to practice up a bit, but he is none too optimistic about his own skill, even though the script does put a limit on the amount of damage that is to be done to him.

Fred Allen is one of the few radio stars who does not own a farm. He hasn't a car, either; he prefers to live in a hotel and ride in taxis. Most of the big-time radio stars feel that they can't get along without a country home. Frank Black, Paul Whiteman and Benny Goodman have farms in Pennsylvania; Lanny Ross and Lowell Thomas each own acreage in New York state; Tommy Dorsey's place is in New Jersey, and Morton Downey's in Connecticut. And if you don't believe that they really turn into farmers whenever they get a chance you ought to hear them talk!

Those radio introductions are likely to go haywire, as did one in which Pat O'Brien was involved the other day. He went to the midget auto races in Hollywood with Norris Goff, who is "Abner" of radio's famous "Lum and Abner" team. Barney Oldfield, the former auto racing champion, introduced them as follows: "Norris Goff, better known as 'Abner' on the radio, and Pat O'Brien, who plays 'Lum.'"

ODDS AND ENDS—The reason that movie studios aren't more lavish with their screen tests is that the average test costs $10,000. The death of Ernie Hare deprives radio of one of its most beloved old-timers. . . . Looks as if the "Castle Walk" would out the "Lambeth Walk" as the most popular dance when RKO releases "The Story of Vernon and Irene Castle" with Rogers and Astaire. © Western Newspaper Union.

What to Eat and Why

C. Houston Goudiss Discusses Beverages of Various Kinds; Explains Their Role in the Diet

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

FOOD and drink are inseparably linked in any consideration of the nutritional needs of man. It is, therefore, in response to a fundamental need that we include some kind of beverage in every meal, no matter how simple or how elaborate the food may be. For primarily, beverages contain water which is as necessary to the human body as air.

Approximately two-thirds of the body is composed of water. It is found in the muscles, in the brain tissue, in the various organs such as liver and kidneys, and even in the bones. Every cell in the body is dependent upon water for its proper functioning.

Body's Need for Liquids
This precious fluid acts as a solvent of food materials and makes possible their digestion and absorption. Since it is an essential constituent of the blood, it helps to transport nutrients to every cell—this function alone requiring about 10 pounds of water in constant circulation. Finally, it helps to eliminate waste products from the body through the lungs, skin and kidneys.

The daily losses of water from the body must be replaced regularly or the consequences may be extremely serious to health. It has been shown that headaches, nervousness and indigestion may result when the intake of fluids is diminished below normal requirements.

Beverages Classified

The quantity of water needed by each person varies with the dietary and with the season of the year, much larger amounts being required when the temperature is high. But it is generally agreed that everyone should consume several glasses of water daily, in addition to the water obtained from foods, chiefly fruits and vegetables. Part of the need is met by milk, and by coffee, tea, cocoa, fruit juices and various other fruit-flavored drinks which add pleasure to mealtime, serve as wholesome, between-meal pick-me-ups, and provide a gracious method of extending hospitality to guests.

Aside from milk, which belongs in a classification by itself, and fruit juices which are consumed chiefly for their minerals and vitamins, beverages fall into two groups which overlap somewhat: those that are refreshing and those that are stimulating.

Refreshing Beverages

The refreshing beverages include fruit juices, fruitades and carbonated drinks, such as ginger ale and sarsaparilla. They are effective in quenching thirst and their appetizing flavors encourage the drinking of generous amounts of water. They also contribute energy values to the diet in proportion to the amount of sweetening used in their preparation.

Fruit juices are most frequently served as an appetizer at breakfast, lunch or dinner. Fruitades are useful as between-meal drinks and when entertaining. Children like to display their hospitality to friends and this type of beverage, served with a few crackers or simple cookies, makes an attractive snack.

Mothers will find it convenient and economical to utilize for this purpose beverage crystals which come in a variety of fruit flavors. These make wholesome, refreshing beverages at a minimum cost; the amount of sweetening may be determined by individual preference; and they are so easily prepared that children may do the mixing themselves.

Stimulating Beverages

The stimulating beverages are coffee, tea, chocolate and cocoa. When made with milk, chocolate and cocoa are rich in nutritive values, though their fuel value varies with the product used. Chocolate is much richer in fat than cocoa, and products labeled "breakfast cocoa" usually contain a larger percentage of the natural cocoa fat than products simply labeled, "cocoa."

The food value of coffee and tea depends entirely upon the cream or milk, and sugar with which they are served. However, they have an important place in the dietary because their flavor and aroma add greatly to the enjoyment of other foods and they give a comfortable feeling of well-being.

The stimulating principle in these beverages is known as caffeine in coffee, and thein in tea. Doctors may forbid coffee because of some abnormality in health which makes a stimulant undesirable. But competent authorities hold that the effects of the moderate use of coffee by normal individuals may be disregarded. Neither coffee nor tea, however, should be given to children. First, because they do not need stimulants, and second, because the use of these beverages will tend to reduce the consumption of milk which is so important to their nutritional welfare.

Guard Against Staleness

The subject of coffee has been investigated from many angles by competent scientists, whose findings should be of interest to homemakers. The flavor and aroma of coffee are derived chiefly from a volatile oil, which is developed during the roasting process. But it has been established that this substance is rapidly lost from the coffee upon exposure to air. Moreover, each pound of coffee contains about two ounces of fixed oil which may become rancid in the presence of air. These changes occur whether the coffee is ground or in the bean.

Since stale, flavorless coffee may have an adverse effect upon appetite, it is important to buy a product that is protected against the air, or to choose one that is freshly roasted. The homemaker should also buy coffee in small quantities so that it can be used up quickly once it is opened. After the coffee has been made, there may be a further escape of its flavor and fragrance with both heat and steam. That is why coffee should not be allowed to stand, but should be served the moment it is made, and why it should not be reheated.

Tea also deteriorates when it is stored for long periods. It should therefore be bought in small quantities and kept in air-tight containers.

Questions Answered

Mrs. S. M.—It has been established that there is a much greater loss of mineral salts in cooking carrots when they are cut in small pieces than when they are cut in large pieces. Mineral losses can be minimized by cooking this vegetable whole, just until tender.

Mrs. J. F. A.—Numerous investigations with children indicate that there is a definite connection between bodily well-being and mental ability. A child with poor appetite and digestion may exhibit poor powers of concentration, listlessness or irritability, all of which interfere with the ability to learn.

Sun Controls Tides

There are several islands in the South Pacific, notably Tahiti, where the tidal influence of the sun equals or exceeds that of the moon, reports Collier's. Consequently these tides come and go at approximately the same hours instead of having the daily 50-minute retardation that occurs in most of the world.

To Correct Constipation Don't Get It!

Why let yourself in for all the discomfort of constipation—and then have to take an emergency medicine—if you can avoid both by getting at the cause of the trouble?

If your difficulty, like that of millions, is due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, the "better way" is to eat Kellogg's All-Bran. This crunchy toasted cereal—a natural food, not a medicine—has just the "bulk" you need. If you eat it every day, it will help you not only to get regular but to keep regular, month after month, by the pleasant means you ever knew! Eat All-Bran daily, drink plenty of water, and "Join the Regulars." Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

Extension Telephone saves Four Lives

BECAUSE Robert Wochholz had an extension telephone on the second floor of his home in Albion, his family is alive today! Here are excerpts from his tribute to the protection an extension telephone affords, published with his permission.

"In addition to the extension telephone having saved us many, many trips downstairs, it proved the best investment I ever made when, on the night of January 23, 1939, our house caught fire, trapping my wife, our two children, and a maid on the second floor.

"After calling the fire department over the extension telephone . . . they crawled onto the porch roof and were taken down by the firemen.

"... If it had not been for our extension telephone upstairs, it would have been virtually impossible for my wife to summon the fire department."

The low cost of an extension telephone . . . 2 to 3 cents a day . . . places its protection and convenience within reach of every family. A small connection charge applies. For complete information, call the Telephone Business Office.

TIPS to Gardeners

Plant Seeds Carefully

WHEN vegetable and flower seeds purchased from reputable firms do not germinate as they should, it is safe to assume that conditions are not favorable for growth, or that seeds were not planted properly.

Therefore, it is of greatest importance to plant seeds according to directions on the packets. Extremely small seeds must be covered only lightly with soil, according to Harold N. Coulter, vegetable expert.

The will to grow is strong in seeds, but they have their limitations. To plant a tiny seed, like the petunia, under an inch of soil is like burying a man under a 20-story building and asking him to push it away.

Heavier, larger seeds, of course, may be planted deeper. Beans and cucumbers may be covered with three-quarters of an inch to a full inch of soil. Peas and corn sprout vigorously and may be planted from an inch to an inch and one-half deep.

Many successful home gardeners actually cover peas and corn with an extra half-inch of soil after they begin to push through. This protects them from birds, and also helps keep weeds down.

SAFETY TALKS

'Pedestrian Faults'

THE National Safety council has charged pedestrians with a for traffic accidents that killed 39, large share of the responsibility 500 persons in 1937. Of this total 15,400 were pedestrians.

In "Accident Facts," a statistical review of 1937, the council said: "Many pedestrians show utter lack of caution in their use of streets and highways. Combined state reports for 1937 show that in 67 per cent of all fatal pedestrian accidents the pedestrian either was violating a traffic law or was acting in an obviously unsafe manner. In non-fatal accidents pedestrian faults appeared in 69 per cent of the cases."

The council described such things as jay-walking, failure to observe traffic lights, drunken walking, walking with instead of against traffic on rural highways, crossing streets in the middle of a block as "pedestrian faults."

Affectionate Authority

He makes a great mistake who supposes that authority is firmer or better established when it is founded by force than that which is welded by affection.—Terence.

This climate is an OLD STORY to Ferry's DATED Seeds

ONLY those vegetable and flower varieties capable of growing most productively in your locality are offered in your dealer's display of Ferry's Seeds. By constant testing, Ferry-Morse scientists know what these varieties are. So, this climate is an old story to Ferry's Seeds.

As an additional safeguard for you, all Ferry's Seeds must pass rigid tests for germination and vitality each year before packaging. Then each packet is dated. Look for this mark—"Packed for Season 1939"—when buying your seeds this year. You know they'll grow.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

By REV. HAROLD L. LUNDGIST, Dean of the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, © Western Newspaper Union.

Lesson for April 2

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education, used by permission.

SAUL BECOMES A NEW MAN

LESSON TEXT—Acts 9:1-12, 17-19. GOLDEN TEXT—Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature; old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new.—II Corinthians 5:17.

The conversion of Saul is admittedly one of the outstanding events in Bible history. When two brilliant English lawyers, Lord Lytton and Sir Gilbert West, set out to disprove the truth of Christianity, they selected the resurrection of Christ and the story of Paul's conversion as the focal points of their proof. Working independently, they then came together to compare notes and found that they had both become Christians since they had become convinced of the truth of the Scriptures.

The two events may well stand together as evidence for Christianity, for only on the ground of regeneration can the change in Saul be accounted for, and only on the assurance that he met the risen Christ on the Damascus Road can we account for his conversion. This is a great lesson, let us make the very most of it.

I. A Bold Persecutor (vv. 1, 2).

As our lesson opens we find the brilliant and zealous young Jew, Saul, "yet breathing out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord." The persecutions in Jerusalem had practically wiped out the church in that city but had scattered the disciples abroad, and thus the witness had been spread. The death of the godly Stephen, to which Saul had given his approval, had only increased his determination to destroy those who were "of the way" of Jesus. Looking for new fields to conquer, he carries with him to Damascus letters from the high priest at Jerusalem, giving him authority to imprison the followers of Christ. But on the way he meets Christ Himself, and is stricken to the earth.

II. A Convicted Sinner (vv. 3-9).

Stricken down by a brilliant heavenly light, he finds himself talking to the Lord Jesus. He hears from His holy lips the solemn indictment of those who persecute God's people—"Why persecutest thou me?" He who lays unkind hands, or untrue accusation upon God's children had best beware, for so closely is our Lord identified with His people that when they suffer, it is He who bears the hurt.

In a single sentence the Lord disposes of the persecuting zeal and the sinful skepticism of this proud young Pharisee, and Saul enters into Damascus not as the haughty persecutor, but as a man trembling and astonished at his own sin. He spends three days shut in with his own soul and God, not seeing, not caring to eat, losing all consciousness of earth, but entering into communion with God. By God's grace the old life is pulled up by the roots as it is displaced by the new life in Christ Jesus.

III. An Obedient Disciple (vv. 10-12).

Ananias was the "I am here, Lord" type of Christian to whom the Lord can confidently commit His important business. All we know of him is what is contained in this chapter, but it is a very beautiful and enviable record. God is able to work directly on any human soul and accomplish His end (as He did with Saul on the Damascus Road), but His usual manner of working is through faithful human agencies. One wonders how much would be accomplished for God if every Christian were as willing and ready as was Ananias to do the Lord's bidding in seeking out and helping a struggling soul. The greatest of all Christian leaders, the apostle Paul, was led out into his life of loyalty and service to Christ by a humble layman. Repeatedly God's Word by precept and example stresses the vital importance of personal work on the part of laymen and women. The leaders of Christian work during the coming generation are now in the Sunday School classes of our churches, perhaps in a little wayside chapel in the country, in the village church, in the mission or settlement house, or in the great city church.

IV. A Converted Brother (vv. 17-19).

The fears of Ananias that Saul might still be a worker of evil (v. 13) are soon overcome by God's assurance that in the praying Saul He had prepared for Himself "a chosen vessel" (v. 15) to bear the gospel to the Gentiles and to kings, as well as to Israel.

It is interesting to observe that Saul knew nothing of that subtle hypocrisy known as being "a secret believer," for at once he made open confession of his faith in baptism, and "straightway he preached Christ in the synagogues that he is the Son of God" (v. 20).

Secret Prayer Life

It is possible for a Christian to accomplish more for the Kingdom of Christ by a faithful secret prayer life than by the most public active life without it.—John R. Mott.

SYNOPSIS

Mary Loring and her father, Jim, an ineffectual attorney, meet a train which brings his wealthy sister-in-law, unmarried Linnie Cotswell and her friend, Lelia Ormsby, divorcee, for a Christmas visit. Waiting at home for them are Mary's mother, her younger sister, Ellen, her father's nagging maiden sister, Aunt Linnie, and Peter, the baby of the family. At the depot Dr. Christopher Cragg helps the guests with their luggage. Mary is secretly in love with Doctor Cragg. In leaving, her Aunt Linnie urges Mary to visit her in New York, but Mary refuses. Mary works in a rental library, where she spends her spare time writing short stories. Mary's father is let out as railroad attorney, the fees of which were almost the sole support of his family. To earn money she decides to begin writing in earnest. Mary feels sure that her newest story, "At Sea," would please the editors of National Weekly. After finishing it she calls Doctor Cragg, who comes to the book store for a current novel. Falling from a ladder while getting his book, she regains consciousness to find his arms around her. He tells her he loves her, and then tells her he is to be married this coming month to a girl he has known all his life. Despondent, Mary decides to accept her Aunt Linnie's invitation. In New York her aunt laughs at her for her plans to write, and insists that she meet as many eligible men as possible. The new week brings two letters. One, from the National Weekly.

Almost afraid to touch the letter, yet frantic to know its contents, Mary picked it up, and feverishly slashed it open. A sheet of paper, folded twice, dropped out, and glancing toward the bathroom, hoping Lelia would not come out until after she had read whatever news the letter held for her, Mary started to flatten it out. At last, her fingers ceased their stupid trembling! At last—

It was a check on the Corn Exchange Bank of New York, and it read:

New York, January 22nd, 1937
Pay to the order of Mary Loring... $100.00
One Hundred and no/100 Dollars
The National Weekly

"Lelia!" Mary shrieked, rushing towards the bathroom and pounding on the door. "Lelia! Lelia!" Lelia, a bathrobe of Turkish toweling wrapped hastily about her, opened the door. "What's happened, Mary?" she demanded apprehensively. "Have you had bad news?" Mary prouetted about on her silly silver-and-scarlet sandals, and waved her precious bit of paper in the air. "Bad news!" she cried. "Darling, it's good news! Grand news! The best I've ever had! Lelia, my story's been accepted by The National Weekly, and they've sent me a check for a hundred dollars."

"Mary! That's wonderful! Congratulations, darling. I'm proud of you."

"What in the world is going on?" demanded Linnie Cotswell, crossing the hall from her own bedroom.

Mary rushed towards her aunt and engulfed her in a bear-like embrace. "Aunt Linnie, my story, 'At Sea,' has been accepted, and the magazine's sent me a check for a hundred dollars. Just think of it! A hundred dollars!"

"But," Linnie Cotswell demurred, her speech somewhat hampered by the chin-strap that bound up her face, "why didn't they write to you first and make you an offer, instead of just taking it for granted that a hundred dollars was satisfactory to you?"

Mary looked dubious. "Perhaps that's their regular price for a short short-story."

Stooping, Mary retrieved from the floor the letter which had accompanied the check, and hastily glanced through it. "They say they like 'At Sea' very much," she murmured as she scanned the typed lines, "and they want to see more of my work. Work! Doesn't that sound professional? A man named Buchanan, Phillip Buchanan, has signed it."

"I know Phillip Buchanan," Lelia offered casually, returning to the bathroom, and reaching for a gold-and-white box of bath powder.

"No!" Mary exclaimed. "Not really! What is he like? Terribly learned, and everything?"

"Terribly—human," Lelia returned. "And utterly wrapped up in his work. He started The National Weekly about twelve years ago, soon after he graduated from Harvard, and he's built it up until today it's just about the biggest thing in weekly magazines. The circulation is enormous, you know."

"Is he married?" Aunt Linnie inquired.

"You would ask that!" Lelia replied, chuckling with amicable derision as she started to close the bathroom door. "No, Linnie. He's wedded to his magazine and, from all I hear, he wouldn't consider being dragged to the altar by anybody on earth."

"I'm merely interested in Life as it should be led," Aunt Linnie retorted with mock wistfulness as she left the room, the little train of her satin negligee swishing about her heels.

Mary, left alone, fingered her check from The National Weekly with loving fingers. "I've finally written a story that was good enough for someone to buy," she told herself with awe. "Now I'm started on my life's work."

Opening the top drawer of the dressing table, she extracted the new brown suede purse Aunt Linnie had just given her, opened it, and slipped the check inside the zippered pocket. Then, turning eagerly towards the bed, she picked up Ellen's letter.

Darling Mary, we do miss you so. The house seems so dull without you, and poor Dad appears absolutely lost. You see, he has always depended on you more than anyone else, and while I try my best to take your place, we both know it isn't quite the same.

Well, Mother has heard about his dismissal and the shock of the discovery has gone rather tragically for all of us. It happened this way. She was buying some tape in the notion department at Sullivan and Ourverda's, and Miss Pattie Carson came in to get some thread, and breezed right up to Mother with, "Oh, Janet, I want to tell you how sorry I am about Jim's losing his position. And right before all the clerks!"

Mother hadn't the vaguest notion what she was talking about, and although Miss Pattie's remark almost made her faint, she managed to hold her head up and smile, and say, "Why, Miss Pattie, Jim just had to resign because his private business is demanding so much of his time."

Then, she paid for the tape, and walked out of the store as calmly as she could, but as soon as she got past the store window, she fairly ran up to

"It is an ambition attained," he replied in a voice that struck Mary as being too soft.

Dad's office, and demanded an explanation. And when darling Dad admitted the whole thing, she fainted, and he and I had a dreadful time bringing her back to consciousness.

Mother says we'll have to let Phrony go, and, no doubt, we will in time, and Aunt Linnie says she can't do a lick of work, what with her arthritis or neuritis, or whatever it is she's supposed to be having this winter.

And what do you think? A report's going around town that Christopher Cragg's going to be married soon—to a girl he's known for some time. Her name's Ilsa Graeland, and she's the daughter of a Chicago doctor. Have you heard anything about it? Everybody seems awfully surprised, and really, for a bride-to-be, I must say Chris doesn't look particularly radiant.

Darling, do you love New York? Do write me about everything.

Give my love to Aunt Linnie and Lelia, but save most of it for yourself.

Mary, so blinded by tears that she could scarcely see, folded the letter, and tucked it beneath the pile of handkerchiefs in the little right-hand drawer of the highboy. Lelia was coming into the room, and she must not see her tears.

Mary, her back to the other girl, hurriedly applied a handkerchief to her eyes; then, with apparent casualness, reached for the powder puff and dusted it over her straight little nose. "I shall get that check cashed tomorrow," she said to herself. "Aunt Linnie'll tell me where to go. And I'll send all but fifteen dollars of it to Dad. Something will have to be kept out for my pocket money. Poor Dad. Oh, poor, dear Dad!"

A thin blue haze of cigarette smoke hung like a delicate cloud over Linnie Cotswell's living room, and the smell of tobacco, Opheia roses, and the last word in imported perfumes filled the air. It was Sunday afternoon, and Linnie's friends were dropping in to meet Mary Loring.

Miss Cotswell flitted about from guest to guest, exchanging a welcoming word here, a bantering sentence there. Lelia Ormsby presided over a silver tea service that had once belonged to a Russian grand duke; while Mary remained entrenched behind a group of men in front of the fireplace.

"And why has Linnie kept you a secret all this time?" a tall man with a gardenia in the buttonhole of his cutaway coat was saying. "I, for one, demand an apology. To think you've been walking in beauty all these years, and I've been totally unaware of your existence!"

He was a distinguished-looking person, with pepper-and-salt hair and that intriguing assurance of manner which only those who always get what they go after possess. Mary nudged her memory for his name. Taylor! That was it—Taylor, Jerome Taylor.

She smiled back at him mockingly. "All this time, and all these years!" she quoted. "Aren't you making me fearfully old—almost passee?"

Jerome Taylor held a cocktail glass, frosted with sugar, to the level of his laughing eyes. "My dear," he said softly, lifting the glass in an almost imperceptible toast to her, "you are ageless!"

"Fol-de-rol!" commented Linnie Cotswell, pushing her way towards Mary, a dark, intense young man in tow. "Jerome, don't be trying any of your well-known allure on this child of mine. She's far too young and sweet to be contaminated."

"Linnie, my darling," Jerome Taylor returned, completely unabashed, blatantly amicable, "forget, for a moment, how violently you disapprove of me, and tell me which night this week I may entertain you and Mary Loring at dinner. Any night, dear Linnie. Any spot. Any play."

"Hush, Jerry. I'll tell you later. Right now, I want to introduce Balanci to my niece."

"I await with eagerness that pains—with impatience that sears," the young Italian announced oratoricaly, attempting to wither Jerome Taylor with a glance.

"Mary," said Aunt Linnie, trying to control the corners of her mouth, "this is Count Umberto Balanci. Balanci, Miss Loring." Then, turning to Jerome Taylor, "Trot along to the table, Jerry. Lelia hasn't been able to coerce anybody except the Bishop's wife into taking a cup of tea. Even the Bishop balked!"

Aunt Linnie's sentence was drowned in a roar of laughter from that corner of the room where Judge Byford was holding forth; and Mary suddenly realized that her hand was still clasped in Balanci's, and that his grip was unpleasantly moist. "How do you do?" she remarked inadequately, smiling at the handsome, dark person whose gaze upon her had never flinched.

"It is an ambition attained," he replied in a voice that struck Mary as being too soft, almost oily.

"An ambition attained?" she repeated uncomprehendingly.

"But yes!" he returned with fervor. "I saw you at the Stork Club two nights ago, and since that moment my eyes fell upon you, it has been my ambition, my sole thought, to meet you."

Mary felt a little dazed. A fixed little smile forced itself to her lips. The man was still devouring her with his somber eyes, all the while extracting a fat, gold case from an inner pocket, removing a cork-tipped cigarette, lighting it, and exhaling a puff of heavily scented smoke. "Egyptian cigarettes," thought Mary. "That heavy fragrance makes me a little sick." Aloud, she said inanely, "I didn't see you at the Stork Club."

"One does not expect a queen to notice a serf," purred Balanci.

Mary thought perhaps she was going to scream. When would this asininity ever end?

At nine, Jerome Taylor came to bid her good-by. "We're seeing each other Wednesday evening," he told her. "Linnie has actually agreed to let me have a little party for you. Dinner at my house, and, afterwards, seats for 'High Tor.'"

As for Balanci, he left ten minutes later, and too, wedged his way through the crowd to say good night. Again, he took Mary's hand in his damp grip, and focused the full warmth of his brooding gaze upon her. "Fate is being kind to me," he said softly. "We are meeting again very soon."

He was gone before Mary could reply, and with an ague of repulsion, she thought, "Good heavens, has Aunt Linnie made an engagement with him, too?"

Later, when the guests were gone, and Addie and Louella were putting

Anticosti Island Has Changed Ownership Many Times; Roughly in Shape of Whale

Anticosti, now an island appendage to Quebec, has changed hands many times in its career, says the National Geographic society. Last leased in 1926 by a pulp and paper company, it has served—in reverse order—as a pulpwood empire, a rich man's social experiment, a pirate's stronghold and an explorer's reward.

Roughly in the shape of a great whale, its tail in the St. Lawrence river and its head in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, Anticosti island is about 140 miles long and averages 35 miles across. It is a sportsman's paradise. Great forests of spruce bring green down to its very shores; game fish fill its streams, and flocks of ducks and geese stop off there regularly on flights north and south. So conspicuously placed and accessible is it that for the last 400 years this island has been the scene of man's activities and experiments. It has known business booms and colonization schemes that failed. It has seen the fashionable chateau life of a French "chocolate king" and been the haunt of an eccentric charged with being not only a buccaner but in league with the devil besides.

In 1534 Jacques Cartier, seeking the apartment to order, and opening the windows to let in the crisp February night air, Aunt Linnie informed Mary that she had indeed made an engagement for her with Count Balanci. "He wants to take us to dinner Tuesday evening," she said.

Lelia, nibbling a much-needed sandwich, turned swiftly about. "Not me!" she said sharply. "I won't go anywhere with that gigolo!"

"He's not a gigolo, Lelia!" Linnie replied almost angrily. "I don't know why you're so suspicious of all foreigners with titles. Besides, he didn't ask you."

"He knows I wouldn't be seen with him!" Lelia retorted, sinking into the depths of a chair, and kicking off her high-heeled pumps.

"Well, you've snubbed him so often," Linnie admitted, "that, no doubt, he's finally taken the hint. But, after all, he is a charming person, and a perfectly legitimate count."

"As if that meant anything these days!" Lelia retorted.

"I want Mary to have every opportunity," Linnie went on, "and after all, Umberto has a title, goes everywhere, belongs to one of the oldest Italian families. In fact, he's a sort of cousin of the king's."

"He might travel faster if he were a cousin of Il Duce's," Lelia observed icily.

"He's terribly taken with Mary," Linnie continued happily, "and really, it would be rather fun for her to be the wife of a diplomat."

"I'm not at all interested in marriage, Aunt Linnie," Mary said harshly, her heart contracting as she thought of Chris. "All that I care about is writing—and making a lot of money in the quickest possible time. In fact, I'm starting a new 'short' tomorrow morning."

Miss Cotswell rose from her chair, and started towards the hall which led to her bedroom. "All right, Mary," she said coldly. "I'll leave you to your own devices for a few days, knowing only two well that you'll soon get over this foolishness about being a woman with a career. Every young girl who comes to New York entertains that complex for a while—and then eventually reaches the same conclusion that, after all, marriage is the one and only thing for a woman."

Mary leaped to her feet, and rushed to embrace her aunt. "Please don't think I'm ungrateful, Aunt Linnie, for all that you're doing for me. I appreciate everything, absolutely everything. And thank you, darling, for the wonderful party."

Linnie Cotswell, restored to good humor, brushed Mary's cheeks with her lips. "All right, my dear. As for your working on one of your little stories, you just start right in tomorrow. I, for one, hope to sleep all day."

CHAPTER V

Mary woke with a start at seven the next morning, and, for an instant, lay in her comfortable bed wondering just where she was. At home in Hawkinsville? And was the slim figure beneath the covers in the other twin bed that of Ellen? Then, as consciousness came fully upon her, she realized that she was in New York, in Aunt Linnie's apartment, and that the sleeping girl beside her was Lelia Ormsby.

It was while she sat scanning the headlines of the Herald Tribune, a second steaming cup of coffee in one hand, a third piece of jam-covered toast in the other, that Addie brought in the mail. "Anything for me, Addie?" she asked.

It's Pretty to Wear And Easy to Make

ISN'T the dress with paneled skirt and lifted waistline (No. 1716) a lovely thing for larger women to wear? It's so simple, so soft and slenderizing, with a bodice that fits perfectly, because the shoulders are shirred and the waistline gathered. Make this of silk crepe, georgette, chiffon or flat crepe. Wear flowers or a jeweled pin at the becoming, deep neckline.

For slim figures, the bow-trimmed bolero frock (No. 1705) is particularly flattering, and it's new as tomorrow morning! The dress, even without the bolero, is a real charmer, with its high neckline, flaring skirt and tiny, tiny waist. Tailored enough for daytime, and yet appropriate for afternoon parties, too. Thin wool, flat crepe or silk print are pretty materials for this.

"No, suh," replied Sambo. "A horse and wagon would cost dat."

"Well, I must have some guarantee for the money. What can you offer?"

Sambo thought for a minute.

Hanging Draperies Over French Doors

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS "I NEED some help," my friend's voice said over the telephone. "The living room draperies are finished. I am bursting with pride over them, but I don't know how to hang the ones for the French doors."

"Yes, I want to cover the door frame at the sides, but I can't cover much of the door because it must open and shut without interfering with the draperies. I did want the curtain rod for the door to match the ones at the windows too."

Her voice trailed off in a discouraged tone as if there were just too many difficulties ever to be solved. But they all were solved. The sketch shows exactly how it was done. The curtain rod was placed on hooks near the top of the door frame and extended a good 7 inches over the wall at each side of the doors. The curtains were sewed to rings. When they were in place, they covered both the hooks and the sides of the door frame, and allowed the doors to be opened.

NOTE: These curtains were lined and had a pleated heading. They were made from the step-by-step sketches in Mrs. Spears' Book 1; SEWING, for the Home Decorator. Books are 25 cents each; if you order both books, leaflet on how to make Rag Rugs is included FREE; Address Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplains St., Chicago, Ill.

School Notes

HIGH SCHOOL

The English IV students are studying the Victorian Age from the standpoint of poetry. The miscellaneous prose writers and novelists have already been studied. Among the most known of the poets of this period are Tennyson, Browning and Kipling. The class held a spell-down based on the factual material concerning the Victorian poets.

The American government class took the author's standardized test Thursday covering the material for the second month of the present semester. The median of the class was 49 from a possible score of 60. Records have been kept of this particular test since 1931 and this is the highest median obtained during these years. It is four points higher than the median secured by the author by administering it to about 900 seniors.

The Seniors have secured the services of Charles F. Hamilton of Bay City as commencement speaker for June 15.

The Juniors entertained for LeVerne Koepke and Hazel Herman at the school house Monday evening, March 27. This was another of the series of birthday parties given for members of the class. Each guest of honor received a novel gift. Following a good supper, a few games were played in the basement.

The second home-made candy sale was held in the lower hall of the school building Wednesday of this week. There must be some expert confectioners in the class because the people sure "go for" their candy.

Members of the European history class have been asked to keep careful watch of the events in Europe for a period of two weeks. A general discussion and report will follow on Friday. Some of the class feel mightily imposed upon. But it is being noted that if we are to maintain our democracy, we must keep ourselves informed. If we are willing to accept the privileges of a democracy we must also accept the responsibilities of a democracy. To the degree to which we are willing to accept these responsibilities we will retain the freedom which we now have.

The group of apprentice bookkeepers working for the fictitious, Mr. Collins, are learning a few practical lessons. They are learning the need for patience, thoroughness, simple mathematical calculations, such as addition and subtraction, and that they must check their work.

SEVENTH and EIGHTH GRADES
The eighth grade arithmetic class is studying circles and triangles. Many members are quite clever in combining geometrical figures in the making of designs.

Those on the Honor Roll this month are: Eighth grade, Charlotte Hughes, Lyle Hughes, Ruth Giddings and Daniel Ostrander. Seventh grade, Maxine DePotty, Willard Musolf, Dick Clark and Hazel Galliker.

The people having "As" in the last two Michigan history test are: Bill Brown, Bill Musolf, Herbert Ziehl and Lyle Hughes. What's the matter with the girls?

FIFTH and SIXTH GRADES
The fifth grade language class memorized the poem "The Daffodils," by William Wordsworth.

We are making some posters for the next P. T. A. meeting.

THIRD and FOURTH GRADES
We had a spell-down last Thursday. Elizabeth Westcott stood up the longest.

We enjoyed the health play which Miss Hall's pupils gave in our room last Thursday.

Several interesting poems were written in the fourth grade language. The third graders memorized the poem "Five Little Chickens" for their language lesson Monday.

PRIMARY
We have finished the pictures for our Holland booklets and plan to bind the books this week.

Some of the people from our room have been invited to sing again for the Twentieth Century Club. They will use a group of health songs we learned while working on our health project.

er, school board and community; confidence of the board and community by the teacher and in the board by the community and teacher; and cooperation between all three units of the school community. Mr. Haitena's talk, which was the highlight of the entire institute lastly left the audience with the thought that there is no more integral essential of a successful school district than a good teacher.

At this time, the high school teachers met with the state representatives who had visited the high schools, and the elementary and rural teachers met with those who had visited their schools. These meetings were discussions of needs and accomplishments as determined by the visiting educators.

The afternoon session, conducted by Commissioner Rankin, of Roscommon county, was opened by two delightful selections by the West Branch High School Glee Club. Following this, the school officers met with C. Taylor, of the state department. Teachers had their choice of four discussion groups, where informal forums were held, in which all were invited to participate.

1. "What is Failure, How Caused, and How Prevented"—Mr. Clapp.
2. "Substitutes For the Recitation"—J. S. Haitena.
3. "Evaluating the Instructional Program"—Mr. Mosier.
4. "Teaching Democracy Through Democratic Organization"—Miss Alice Evans.

Following summaries of the conference and discussion groups before the entire assembly, all attending left the room admitting that this form of institute was more beneficial than ever before and all felt that the day had been worthwhile.
