TAWAS CITY

FESTIVAL HAS EXCELLENT ATTENDANCE

Hundreds Secure Fine Catches of Perch In River

The Perch Festival last week-end was timed exactly for the perch run in the river and hundreds of fishermen had the pleasure of returning home with a catch of perch. The various activities Saturday and Sunday brought out large crowds of people. Although the day was cold spectators lined Lake street from Hayes-Leslie garage to the Lake street bridge over Tawas river to view the parade Sunday afternoon. A large number among those present have attended our perch festivals for several years.

H. J. Keiser, chairman of the general committee, said today "I wish to thank everyone who helped to make the Perch Festival a success. The members of the various committees co-operated splendidly. Next year, with a new auditorium in which to hold many of the events, we can look forward to a very fine festival."

The Perch Festival came to a climax Sunday afternoon with the parade. It was headed by the Colors and color guard and a squad of veterans from Jesse C. Hodder Post, American Legion. In addition to the Queen's float, with Queen Lyda Moore and her court there were floats from West Branch, East Tawas, Forest Service, Iosco County Roads, and a large American flag carried by a group of girls from Emanuel Lutheran school. The girls, dressed in red, white and blue dresses. Represented in the commercial floats were a number of Bay City and Saginaw wholesale houses and bakeries, local milk dealers, automobile dealers, tractor dealers, the Mallon Boat Works, and the Mueller Concrete Products company.

High school bands from Standish, Oscoda, East Tawas and Tawas City, and two floats carrying tonette bands composed of little folks from the Tawas City schools, furnished music and color for the parade. A banquet was held in honor of Queen Lyda and her court and Ron Gamble and Bob Clark of WJR Saturday evening at the Masonic temple. More than 150 were present.

Following the banquet Coronation ceremonies and the Queen's ball were held at the Edgewater Pavilion. Queen Lyda was crowned by Ron Gamble assisted by Bob Clark in the presence of about 500 people. One hour of the ceremonies and dance was broadcast over WBCM. Music for the dance was furnished by Applin's Rhythm Wringers. One of the special attractions of the evening was the organ music by Bob Clark.

3. That this resolution shall have the same effect as a City Ordinance and violation thereof is declared a misdemeanor, and punishable by a fine of not more than $50.00 and costs of prosecution or by imprisonment in the county jail for a period of not more than 60 days or both fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the court.

Mueller Products Plant Operating at Capacity

The Mueller Concrete Products company is now operating in its new plant at full capacity, stated Ernest Mueller, owner, yesterday. There has been a large demand for blocks for new building construction this spring and he stated that this demand was ahead of production at the present time.

The new plant located on Fifth avenue was built with the idea of having ample room for an expanding business. There is a large main floor for the power block machine with two bays for drying the blocks. Surrounding the plant are large storage and seasoning yards.

All new machines for the making of power tamped blocks were placed in the plant. The blocks are made in a large variety of styles and sizes—standard smooth face, rock face, sash blocks, round nose blocks, solid and cored slabs, plaster blocks, building tile and back-up blocks. Mr. Mueller also manufactures cement brick. The blocks can be secured in water proof or plain grey concrete.

Dist. No. 1. Wilber Votes To Retain School

More than 80 persons were present at the special school meeting of Dist. No. 1, Wilber, which was held at the school house on Friday evening, April 28.

The crowd consisted of 64 legal voters; the superintendents of the Oscoda and East Tawas schools; members of the boards of education of both schools; and some others who were just inquisitive as to the outcome of the vote.

The object for which this meeting was called was to determine as to whether or not our primary school should be closed and the children be transported to a city school—the board having previously been presented with a petition asking that this step be taken. But the "honest to goodness" reason for doing this—if there is one—is still a mystery to many of us.

And although Miss Worden and all those present, connected with the city schools, were given a chance to express their opinion as to where our lower grades would receive the most (Turn to No. 1, back page)

"Union Pacific" Will Be Shown at Family

Barbara Stanwyck, in a role completely different from any she has previously attempted, and Joel McCrea, as a character strongly reminiscent of the one he portrayed last season in "Wells Fargo," are costarred in the romantic leads of "Union Pacific," Cecil B. DeMille's grand-scale interpretation of the building railroad.

Although the popular Miss Stanwyck has played roles as varied as Middle Western farm-woman, New England factory wench and Park Avenue debutante, her Mollie Monahan in "Union Pacific," which Paramount will show Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, May 7, 8 and 9, at the Family theatre, marks something totally new in the Stanwyck repertoire. She is a daring, warm-hearted, fiery girl of the West, the daughter of the "U. P.'s" first engineer, the postmistress of "end of track" and little sister of the husky railroad-builders. She is equally at home outwitting Western sharpshooters, comforting the homesick Irish laborers, battling Indians on the warpath or engaging in high-powered romance.

Robert Preston, Akim Tamiroff, the roistering Russian actor, and a dozen other popular Hollywood players will be seen in equally unusual roles in De Mille's production.

GOVERNMENTAL REORGANIZATION (SEE WHITE HOUSE)

"To make democracy work . . . to ensure . . . free government . . ."

EUROPE: Prelude, Song, Postlude

Democracy was adamant one week before Der Fuehrer gave Reichstag and the world his answer to President Roosevelt's peace appeal. By four days before speech time Hitler had become adamant, Britain and the U. S. cautiously shifting their stand to show simultaneously that democracies (1) will not, and (2) can be persuaded to, participate in another Munich conference.

Britain showed appeasement inclinations by rushing her previously recalled ambassador, pro-Nazi Sir Nevile Henderson, back to Berlin. Next day, as Nazi Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop delightedly kept Sir Nevile waiting outside his door, Britain indignantly inaugurated her first peacetime conscription and presented parliament with a $6,213,000,000 budget (of which 47 per cent will go for arms). In the U. S., Secretary of State Cordell Hull warned Hitler to eschew more conquests in favor of "peace before war" via negotiation. Meanwhile the treasury wooed Hitler's good will by modifying its 25 per cent penalty against German imports.

Poland prepared to defend her borders at all cost. Rumania decided to avoid an anti-Nazi pact. Japan fidgeted excitedly and complained she did not want war with democracies despite her anti-Com-intern pact with Italy and Germany. The Balkans were apparently a solid Nazi front. With Rome and Paris waiting in strange silence, the world finished its quavering prelude to the most vital speech Adolf Hitler will ever make:

Song. Never a brief speaker, Der Fuehrer took more than an hour to lay foundation for a point-by-point rejection of Mr. Roosevelt's peace plea, a rebuttal he interlarded with fine sarcasm. Biggest pre-sarcasm revelations:

(1) Germany considers the Anglo-French-Polish non-aggression pact unfriendly, therefore denounces its 10-year friendship pact with Poland. But Poland can still have the treaty Germany secretly proposed several months ago, a 25-year friendship pact contingent upon return of Danzig to the Reich and designation of a pathway from Germany to East Prussia through the Polish corridor. In return, Hitler guarantees the Polish corridor and recognizes Polish commercial rights in Danzig.

(2) Treaty or no, Danzig must be returned to Germany.

(3) Hitler denounces the Anglo-German naval limitations treaty, but will gladly discuss the problem to prevent a naval race.

Highlight of the rebuttal was that Germany will give non-aggression promises to each of the nations allegedly "threatened," but that each guarantee will be made individually upon petition and on a basis of absolute reciprocity. Greatest rebuttal sarcasm concerned such "threatened" nations as Ireland and Palestine, which—according to Hitler—have more to fear from English suppression than German aggression.

Point-by-point rebuttal:
(1) Mr. Roosevelt pointed to three European and one African nation whose independence has been terminated since 1936. Answer: What is "independence," anyway? Albania, Austria and Czechoslovakia really had their "independence" terminated after the World war. As for Africa, Mussolini's Ethiopian conquest merely followed a precedence of aggression established by France and Britain.

(2) Has Germany been aggressive? Answer: No, Germany has kept peace since 1918, compared with repeated U. S. intervention in the world's wars.

(3) Has any nation the right to wage war except in self defense? Answer: No, and certainly the U. S. did not enter the World war in self defense, which gives Mr. Roosevelt little right to speak of such matters.

(4) Can world problems be solved via conference? Answer: Yes, theoretically, no, practically. Example is the League of Nations which the U. S. shunned, thereby admitting the failure of peace by conference. Hence Germany followed U. S. example and left the League. The freedom of North America was not solved by conference any more than was the U. S. civil war.

For U. S. citizens, biggest news of the speech was (1) a promise that Germany intended no invasion, (2) a supplication that President Roosevelt take the lead in world peace efforts. For British, biggest news was a very obvious bid for good will despite denunciation of the naval pact.

Postlude. Best opinion held the two-hour harangue a conciliatory refusal of Mr. Roosevelt's appeal. Said Kansas Sen. Arthur Capper: "After listening to Hitler, I still hope Europe's troubles can be settled by peaceful methods." Informed observers left their loud speakers expecting both the U. S. and Britain to make new overtures, confident that war had been averted for the nonce, but certain above all else that Adolf Hitler positively holds the European whip hand.

WHITE HOUSE: Reorganization

"Dictator" criticism notwithstanding, U. S. governmental reorganization is substantially a sound idea if it promotes economy and efficiency by lumping miscellaneous, isolated and similarly functioning offices under a single administrator. Last year's reorganization bill stumbled partly because it might have given an unscrupulous future President too much power. Modified and passed this session, it allows the President six administrative assistants and permits him to draft reorganization plans which congress must accept entirely or reject within 60 days.

Already submitted is the major portion of Mr. Roosevelt's plan (see chart above) designed "to make democracy work—to strengthen the arms of democracy in peace or war and ensure the solid blessings of free government . . ." Three new agencies (public works, social security, loans) will be managed by three of the six new $12,000-a-year administrative assistants, each of which will have a $9,000-a-year assistant administrator. Lacking cabinet portfolio (the original plan contemplated new cabinet posts for security and work agencies), the new administrative assistants will nevertheless be virtually of that rank.

Two more reorganization plans to come will (1) shift bureaus from one department to another, thus securing more logical classifications, and (2) reorganize intra-departmental machinery. Biggest contemplated objective in the latter plan, since dropped, was consolidation of all six of the treasury's investigative units, a step the President finally decided might lead to a U. S. copy of Germany's Gestapo or Russia's Ogpu.

PHILIPPINES: Problem Child

Less than a decade has passed since the U. S. fought Philippine independence demands, but tables have a way of turning. Given congressional assurance of early freedom, Philippine President Manuel Quezon hardly had time to exult before Japan turned imperialistic, swagged into China and began grabbing off every piece of unprotected real estate within Asiatic waters. Since Japs already hold a strong commercial position in Manila, moreover since even a double-strength U. S. Pacific fleet might not be able to hold the islands against sudden attack, many Americans believe their nation should leave the Philippines before getting involved in war. Added impetus is given by U. S. agriculture's resentment over concessions to Filipino sugar.

Sensing that the U. S. was anxious to pull stakes, Manuel Quezon last year appealed to President Roosevelt and won an administration-sponsored proposal calling for political independence in 1946, the 25 per cent tariff being increased by 5 per cent a year until wholly effective in 1961. Since President Quezon will not be able to attend hearings this year, the bill is being tabled until next session. When he does arrive, Mr. Quezon will be offered an even stronger deal which members of the Senate committee on territories and insular possessions have already accepted unanimously, albeit secretly. The deal: If Filipinos will cut political ties with the U. S. in 1942, current 25 per cent tariff rates will continue until 1946 as under the administration bill. Then rates will jump 10 per cent annually until the U. S. washes its hands of the whole affair in 1953.

Still officially unannounced, the substitute bill (suggested by Maryland's Sen. Millard E. Tydings) has been hushed for fear Japan may sail into Manila immediately, confident the U. S. does not care to defend the harbor Admiral Dewey stormed so heroically in 1898.

BOLIVIA: Democratic Dictator

Forbearers of Bolivia's 35-year-old President German Busch came from the country which supplied his baptismal name, but for two generations Busches have been loyal Bolivians. In 1935 German Busch emerged from the Gran Chaco war with Paraguay to find his country's government in horrible shape. Friendly to labor and business, boasting strong Catholic support, Youngster Busch became provisional president in July, 1937, when Col. David Toro's "socialistic" state was toppled. Last May he was constitutionally re-elected, beginning a task from which lesser men might have turned away.

Plagued by Naziism and Fascism, bankrupt and facing possible revolution if Bolivia's three Chaco war parties (Liberal, Republican, Socialist Republican) won the May legislative election, President Busch surprised the world by announcing a new type political animal, dictatorship to prepare for "a real democracy."

Observers give German Busch a good chance of succeeding. Having canceled the election, dissolved his congress and abolished constitutional guarantees on the plausible assumption that restive Bolivia does not deserve democracy at this moment, Colonel Busch is the world's first dictator to (1) invite "patriotic" criticism of his regime; (2) reject his cabinet's resignation; (3) view Fascism and Naziism "with pain," and (4) promise an election five to eight months hence to let Bolivia decide its own destiny.

PEOPLE: Shortstop to Cardinal?

Named archbishop of New York to succeed the late Patrick Cardinal Hayes, Most Reverend Francis J. Spellman, 49-year-old auxiliary bishop of Boston whose boyhood friends at Whitman, Mass., remember him as the town's best baseball shortstop and a better-than-average boxer. Forecast: That Archbishop Spellman will also be named cardinal at the June consistory in Rome.

Appointed to the securities and exchange commission, liberal Leon Henderson, 44-year-old former NIRA board man and WPA economist.

Silenced by Scotland Yard, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, from telling reporters about White House living quarters planned for King George and Queen Elizabeth during their June visit.

Ousted from Rome, Richard Mower, correspondent for the Chicago Daily News, for his "unfriendly" dispatches. Last November 20 another Daily News man, Frank Smothers, was also invited to leave Italy.

Included in New York's large contingent of "collectors" is Andre Kostelanetz. Since not so long ago he was voted America's No. 1 air traveler, because he commuted between here and Hollywood for some time, it is natural that his taste runs to miniature airplanes. In his collection are a number of replicas of machines that have made historic flights and he is still seeking a model of the crate used by "Wrong Way" Corrigan when he attained fame. Ben Bernie is a member in good standing of the fraternity. His hobby is old minstrel programs. His prize specimen is an opening night handbill describing the wonders of "The Dixie Boys Carnival of Minstrelsy—first appearance on any continent outside the U. S. of A." The year was 1904 and the show played in Liverpool with "Dat Memphis Zoo-Zack Man" as the opening number.

A more youthful member of the fraternity is Ezra Stone who at 20 is one of Broadway's busiest sons, holding down jobs as an actor on the stage and radio, production assistant in still another stage show and faculty member of a leading dramatic school. He collects pipes and in the last two years has picked up three dozen really rare specimens. One he found on the Atlantic shore-line, washed up by the tide and caked with salt. Another is a long-bowled pipe from West Africa. He also collects stage revolvers. His start was with one used in a production of "Treasure Island" in which he appeared at the age of 11. His favorite is what he calls a "narsty looking gat," which was used in the original production of "Dead End."

In the feminine contingent is Lucille Manners, whose hobby is miniature stage settings. She being a singer, these are mostly operatic, the smallest being the Wagnerian "Die Meistersinger," on a stage 10 inches across. At present, she's trying to figure out how to get settings of her favorite musical movies.

Alice Frost has a fine collection of hand-carved furniture, much of it, she proudly admits, the work of her actor-husband, Robert Foulk. Except that she doesn't think it quite practical, she'd like to collect dogs also. "And I will, too," she adds, "as soon as we can find the kind of a farm we both want."

They tell the story in the Havana-Madrid—and it's good enough to be true whether or not it is—of an out-of-towner who came in with his wife the other evening and took a ringside table. Nano Rodrigo's band was beating out one of his hottest rhumbas. The expert rhumba dancers, who congregate there nightly, were slinging hips and weaving in and out in the most intricate gyrations. In fact, things were pretty hectic and remained that way for fully a half hour. Then the provincial called the headwaiter.

"This is a swell floor show," he confided. "But when will it be over? My wife and I would like to dance."

Genevieve Rowe was walking along Broadway in the Fifties the other afternoon when she observed a motorist, who had turned west on an eastbound street, being hailed by a traffic cop. Evidently wishing merely to steer the driver in the right direction, the officer remarked, "Say, buddy, that's a one-way street."

"But I'm only going one way," flipped the motorist.

"Okay, wise guy," returned the cop, who, of course, had the last word, "then I'll give you a one-way ticket."

Reminiscent of Ma Sycamore in "You Can't Take It With You," who turned from sculpture to playwrighting because some one delivered a typewriter to her home by mistake, is the song writing career of Claud Reese. Lyn Murray, director of the singers, gave Reese a typewriter for a birthday present. Reese, having nothing else to do, started to peck out lyrics—and proved so efficient that he sold five songs in one week.

Asiatic Influence Noted In Ancient Utah Relics

SALT LAKE CITY.—Proof of an ancient race of people who came to America from Asia is contained in his collection of artifacts, E. P. Pectol, Wayne county representative to the Utah legislature, believes.

These people sailed from Asia to America 3,000 years ago in homemade boats, Pectol contends. They are well-known to readers of the Latter Day Saints' Book of Mormon, which calls them Nephites.

Pectol points out that the basket work, shields, moccasins, horn spoons and pottery he has found in caves and mounds are similar in construction and decoration to Egyptian work of the corresponding period.

Big Top Hits Trail Once More With Bigger Bundle of Thrills

Shut down last mid-season by bad business, Ringling's "greatest show on earth" expects its biggest run this year thanks partly to Charles LeMaire (left), noted designer who planned unique costuming, air-conditioned big top and restyled it with a blue ceiling, gold and silver center and quarter poles.

Elephants are always good circus attractions. Modoc, an acrobatic pachyderm, pulled this head-stand from her trunk of tricks at the show's winter quarters in Sarasota, Fla.

Horses are also good attractions. Above, Tex Elmundt, famous trainer of liberty horses, puts a quartet through their paces. Below, Achmed, the performing horse, performs for William Heyer. He leaps directly up into the air and lands in the same spot. This is probably the first time such a stunt has been accomplished or photographed.

Aerialists rehearse their breath-taking feats at winter quarters.

Right, Hubert Castle, wizard of the wire, knows what perfection means, and here he is putting in some practice at his specialty. Reckless riders, intrepid handlers of ferocious animals, horse trainers and the world's funniest clowns complete the picturesque assortment.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—Progressive education has been pushed around a lot lately. The Bellwether Lincoln school of New York has been backtracking as have several other Daniel Boones of the educational wilderness. From the right came the charge that they just let the youngsters fool around with toys and tools, without rubbing in any real education.

Here's a field goal for the other side. At the somewhat ultra Fountain Valley, progressive school of Colorado Springs, the boy, David Hare, scion of a highly placed New York family, was given carte blanche to build his education around a $2 camera. The idea, as in all progressive schools of those few years back, was to give the green light to any creative impulse.

But, at 22, here is Mr. Hare with a New York exhibit of camera portraiture, with President Roosevelt among his subjects, and with famous artists and photographers, including Arnold Genthe, cheering him as the "Leonardo da Vinci of the camera." Specifically, they agree that young Mr. Hare has proved indisputably that the camera not only may be, but now is an instrument of the highest artistic expression, and that he demonstrates an absolutely new method and medium of color portrait photography.

His three-lens camera allows the superimposing of color images, in the manner of the color-printing process, and makes possible shading and emphasis in the service of mood. His is the first and only color portrait exhibit in the country. Artists and prominent society folk are boiling with enthusiasm over Mr. Hare's achievement.

He is a tall, shy, personable young man, somewhat inarticulate, as he filters life through a lens, and hesitant in any other form of expression. As was the young Lindbergh. There is the same "We" combination here. Whether he knows the prepositions used with the ablative or whether he stumbled across the "Bride of Asses" is not revealed.

OUT of the limbo of the past rises "Ole Bill," Bruce Bainsfather's famous walrus-mustached cartoon character of World war days, to adorn recruiting posters being displayed throughout the United Kingdom. Bainsfather says his revised character reveals signs of age, but, for that matter, so does the cartoonist.

The slow attrition of 20 years since a slender youngster created "Ole Bill," in a trench in Flanders, has added to his bulk, had taken toll of his thatch of wavy black hair. Bitterness came, too, as when he returned all his war medals to the British government in protest against its treatment of veterans.

Somehow, despite the wide and varied exploitation of Bill—books, lectures, a play, "The Better Ole," a syndicated piece and so forth—Bruce seemed to get the short end of it all. He is said to have received some $10,000 out of $500,000 earned by his black and white creation. Putting on his own review, "Uilo," he lost $40,000, and after that events led him straight to bankruptcy, liabilities $75,000, assets negligible.

He was born in India of a long line of army forebears and began life as an electrical engineer. Of recent years, what with lecturing, writing and drawing, life is said to have dealt more amiably by him.

SELECTED for transfer from his post as ambassador to Argentina to the government of Gen. Francisco Franco in Spain, Alexander W. Weddell, 63 years old, bears with him such assets as are implied in the long experience of a career diplomat, a man of tact and diplomatic deftness, combined with broad humanitarian sympathies.

Mr. Weddell was educated at George Washington university law school and the University of Catania in Italy. Appointed private secretary to the minister to Denmark in 1908, he entered the consular service two years later as consul at Zanzibar. He spent two years, 1912-14, as consul at Catania, going thence to Athens as consul general.

Retiring from the diplomatic service in 1928, he returned six years ago, filling various consular posts until his appointment as ambassador to the Argentine.

Finders Keepers? Not for These Boys

These 12 East Side boys were honored guests at the Ringling Brothers circus in New York recently—and for a good reason. Through a mistake they were given 900 tickets supposed to go to a charity organization, and planned to profit thereby. When they found out the tickets were to go to orphans they promptly returned all 900 tickets. As a result they were admitted free of charge to the big top.

Liver Filters Poisons From Blood Stream

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON
SOME years ago I found myself writing very often about the liver and gall bladder. I felt that as the liver was really the king of the organs (from the standpoint of work and of health), I could not write too often about it. I decided to write about the liver about four to six times a year.

TODAY'S HEALTH COLUMN

As mentioned before, the healthy liver keeps us free from many symptoms that would make life miserable because it filters poisons from the blood, stimulates bowel action, thus getting rid of wastes, stores up sugar for future needs, puts rich, fat foods into condition to be digested and helps to build the blood.

Naturally when the liver itself or its adjoining gall bladder containing concentrated bile is disturbed the entire body feels the effect; the skin may be jaundiced, stomach upset by gas pressure, the head aches, the bowel is constipated, the nervous system becomes dull or depressed.

So much can an upset liver and gall bladder upset appetite, digestion and bowel movement that physicians agree that most disorders of appetite, stomach and intestine are not caused by any condition in the mouth, stomach or intestine but by these disorders of the liver and gall bladder.

Animal Bile Used.

As these disorders interfere with the manufacture of bile, many physicians are using preparations of bile obtained from animals in the treatment of disorders of the stomach and intestines.

Dr. J. M. Winfield, Detroit, in the Michigan State Medical Society Journal, records his use of dried bile (obtained by drying pig bile in high vacuum) in 27 cases in which there appeared to be no loss of bile in the patients (by drainage) but in which there were symptoms which might have been due to a lack in quantity or quality of bile in the intestine during digestion.

The chief symptom for which the dried bile was given was loss of appetite. When the feeding of the bile proved helpful the increase in appetite was evident usually within a few hours. Also the other symptoms usually present—belching, gas distension (fullness) and constipation—were corrected in the majority of cases.

It should be remembered, however, that bile pills or capsules need only be taken by those unable to exercise.

Allergic Persons Inherit 'Tendency'

A few years ago a physician doing special work in allergy—sensitivity to certain substances—used about 23 different substances in making the skin tests. Among these substances were ragweed, golden-rod, horse hair, cats' fur, eggs and whole wheat. Today he uses over 400 different substances and it is likely that in the days to come there will be many more found that cause hay fever, asthma, head colds, eczema, hives, stomach and intestinal upsets and other symptoms.

This sensitiveness (allergy) to various substances runs in families just as do tuberculosis, rheumatism and other ailments. It is now believed that almost two of every three sensitive or allergic individuals have inherited this "tendency"—not the ailment itself. Thus the grandparent may have asthma, the parent hay fever, and the grandchild eczema. There is thus said to be a "hay fever, asthma, eczema complex" in some families.

Cause Can Usually Be Found.

The point to remember is, of course, that these sensitive individuals, although they have the "tendency," will not suffer with any of these ailments—stomach upsets, asthma and others—unless they eat these foods or breathe in these substances. Many drugs, soaps and face powders are responsible for symptoms. There is always some definite substance causing the symptoms, and this substance or substances can usually be found if searched for long enough. This may mean, as mentioned above, a great many skin tests or other tests before the offending substances are found.

The tests are made by making tiny scratches on the skin—usually the forearm or thigh—and the substance in the form of a powder or paste is applied to the scratch.

By avoiding the foods or other substances causing the symptoms the individual would likewise avoid these symptoms. However, as many of these substances must be eaten to sustain life or cannot be avoided because they are in the air and are breathed into the lungs, treatment is given by injecting these offending substances under the skin.

Pocket for dish towels.

TWO pockets on the inside of this pantry door are used for dish towels—the upper for clean towels; the lower for soiled ones. The pockets themselves are made from four dish towels with bright red borders and are hooked onto the door with brass rings. All the dimensions for cutting, and directions for making are given here in the sketch. If toweling by the yard is used, 3 3/4 yards will be required.

These directions are not in either Book 1 or Book 2, so be sure to cut them out for reference. Each of the books contains complete directions for making dozens of other useful things for yourself, your home and to use for gifts and bazaars. Many readers are also making scrap books of these articles and when they are combined with the two books, they have a treasure house of ideas that have been tested by thousands of homemakers.

Book 2, Gifts, Novelties and Embroideries, contains 48 pages of step-by-step directions which have helped thousands of women. If your home is your hobby you will also want Book 1—SEWING, for the Home Decorator. Order by number, enclosing 25 cents for each. With orders for two books we include FREE, a leaflet of 36 authentic patchwork stitches. Address, Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

SAFETY TALKS

Driving Ability

THE National Safety council reports that automobile drivers reach the peak of their skill and ability after 20 years of age.

Recent studies, said the council, indicate that drivers under 20 years of age have the highest accident rate. This rate decreases quite steadily to the age of about 50, and then increases sharply.

Britain Traces 1776 Failure
The British attribute their failure in our Revolution to the fact that, according to them, it was largely a naval war and the English fleet lacked its usual dash and enterprise. Their armies failed on land for want of proper support from the sea and Yorktown's surrender was due to the actual, if temporary, loss of the command of the sea, with Paul Jones harrying the English at their own doors.

Make Drive to Prevent Crossing Accidents
Roy D. Young, general claims agent for the Detroit and Mackinac railway and member of the Michigan Railroad Police association, in a part of a state wide drive to prevent grade crossing accidents now in progress, says that a majority of these accidents are preventable. Many of them come through violation of the law.
He calls the attention of automobile drivers to the Michigan Uniform Vehicle Act, No. 318, which provides:

"Whenever any person driving a vehicle approaches a highway and interurban or steam railway grade crossing and a clearly visible and positive signal gives warning of the immediate approach of a railway train or car, it shall be unlawful for the driver of the vehicle to fail to bring the vehicle to a complete stop before traversing such grade crossing."

Section 53 of the same Act (Section 4745 of the Compiled Laws of 1929) provides:
"(a) It shall be unlawful and constitute a misdemeanor for any person to violate any of the provisions of this act unless such violation is by this act or by other law of this state declared to be a felony."
"(b) Every person convicted of a misdemeanor for a violation of any of the provisions of this act for which another penalty is not provided shall for a conviction thereof within one year be punished by a fine of not more than one hundred ($100.00) dollars or by imprisonment in the county or municipal jail for not more than ten (10) days; for a second (2nd) such conviction within one (1) year such person shall be punished by a fine of not more than two hundred ($200.00) dollars or by imprisonment in the county or municipal jail for not more than twenty (20) days or both such fine and imprisonment; upon a third (3rd) or subsequent conviction within one (1) year such person shall be punished by a fine of not more than five hundred ($500.00) or by imprisonment in the county or municipal jail for not more than six (6) months, or by such fine and imprisonment."

"Have you anything," asked the judge, "to say before I pass sentence upon you?"
 "Most assuredly I have, your honor," replied the prisoner. "I desire to take this opportunity of stating without reserve or circumlocution that in my opinion the penalty imposed upon me by this court should be in keeping with, or as it were, commensurate with my station in life which hitherto has been one of no inconsiderable importance."
 "Well," replied the judge dryly, "you certainly seem to have a liking for long sentences. Ten years."

ARCADIA HOUSE PUBLICATIONS—WNU SERVICE

"Good Lord!" Phil Buchanan exclaimed incredulously. "You're—you're not crying! My dear child, please don't take this thing so seriously. After all, The National Weekly's not the only magazine in New York!"

Mary averted her face, and gazed blindly out of the window. "No," she finally managed to say, "The National Weekly's not the only magazine in New York, but if you say 'Their Son' is trite, and lacks conviction, there's no use in my trying to market it anywhere else. And what a fool you must think I am! Crying because you don't like my story!—I bet I'm the only woman who ever bawled in your office!"

Buchanan grinned, showing those strong teeth that looked so startlingly white compared with the tan of his face. "Well, perhaps you are, but let's forget it!"

Mary smiled through her tears. "Maybe you can, but I'm sure the memory of my making a fool of myself before an editor will haunt me to my dying day!—Mr. Buchanan?"

"Yes, Mary?"

"Throw that script in your waste basket!"

"Why, I can't do that. It's your property, you know."

"I never want to see it again!"

"No, I won't. It'll be mailed to you in proper form. Now tell me, what's the new tale about? And do you feel that you've allowed yourself enough time on it?"

Mary looked at him with troubled eyes. "Why, I don't know. I worked on it constantly for two days and a half—and, after all, a short is only a thousand or so words in length. Do you think I'd better take it back home?"

"No. Leave it here. I'll glance over it, myself, instead of submitting it to the regular routine. Then, if I feel it should be improved upon, I'll return it to you for revision before putting it through the usual reading procedure. Are you having that picture taken this afternoon, by the way?"

Mary glanced at her watch. "Yes, I am, and it's time I was getting to the photographer's. Thank you, Mr. Buchanan. You've been—nice, and I'm sorry I acted so silly."

Phil Buchanan followed her to the door. "Well, there's something you might do to—ah—make up for having floored me just a bit there for a comment."
 "Mary smiled at him obliquely. "And what is that? Never darken your doors again?"
 "To the contrary. I have to drive Oscar up to Westchester this afternoon, and I wish you'd go along."
 "Oscar?"
 "Don't tell me you've forgotten Oscar! My dog, you know. He's working up an attack of something or other, and I want to get him to the veterinarian's before he breaks out with distemper or the rickets, or whatever Great Danes have. We could call for you at the photographer's if you'll go; then, after getting Oscar settled, drop in at Trudi's on the Boston Post Road for a beef-steak dinner!"

Mary hesitated. She had accepted an invitation with Count Balianci for dinner somewhere, and one of their usual walks, but an evening with Phil Buchanan suddenly appeared far more desirable than an evening with the suave Italian. She could phone Balianci; cancel her engagement with him.

"I'd love to go with you and Oscar," she finally said. "I don't imagine the photographer will keep me more than an hour, do you?"
 "Not a chance! Shall I call for you, say, at five?"
 "Yes, at five. Good-by."

He was, by the grace of a friendly policeman, waiting for her in his low-slung coupe when she came out of the building at five minutes after five. Oscar, looking regal in spite of a nose that was definitely dripping, occupied the rumble seat.

Mary hastily slid in beside Buchanan, and slammed the door. "I didn't know anybody short of the mayor could park on Fifth Avenue!" she said. "How's Oscar?"

"Oscar's got a decided case of the sniffles," Phil replied, looking really worried, "and Spike says you can hear a sort of wheeze in his chest—like an organ in a country church when the organist misses a note."

Mary turned about, and looked at the big dog through the back window. "He seems to be enjoying life right now," she reported. "Sitting up very straight and regarding the traffic with enormous interest!"

Eventually, they arrived at Doctor Horner's Country Retreat for City Dogs, and, cramped and cold, alighted from the car. Mary could discern, through the gathering dark of the March night, a rambling frame building, once a barn, so Phil Buchanan informed her—now a model hospital for canine pets.

A united howl from the inmates had set up the moment Phil's car had pulled into the driveway. Oscar, feeling he had been betrayed by his master and this girl who had allowed him to lean so comfortably against her, slunk beneath the car and, for exactly ten minutes, steadfastly refused to budge.

Eventually, they wheeled him out, Doctor Horner having produced some bait in the shape of a very large hunk of round steak. Finally, assured by the veterinary that Oscar merely had a cold and would probably be in the pink of condition within a few days, they told the dog good-by, and, followed by his accusing eyes, made their way to the coupe.

It was nearly midnight when Mary reached home. Lelia had just got in, and was rifling the ice-box; while Miss Cotswell, propped up in bed, was reading.

"Come on in here, girls," she called from her bedroom, "and bring some cheese and crackers. Where in the world have you been, Mary?"

Mary stepped into the bedroom. "Why, Aunt Linnie, didn't Addie give you my message? I telephoned about five, but you weren't in, and I told her to tell you I was driving to Westchester with Mr. Buchanan. He had to take his dog to a veterinary's, and asked me to go along."

 "Heavens! How domestic and unexciting!"
 "But it was fun, Aunt Linnie, really! We stopped at Trudi's on the way back, and had beefsteak and German-fried potatoes, and pancakes. And we sat in front of a big log fire in a room that can't be a day less than a hundred years old. No one else was there, and after Trudi served our dinner, he and his wife, who cooked it, came and sat with us, and we talked."
 "Sounds cozy," commented Lelia, entering the room with a tray of food. "Phil Buchanan loves to hobnob with all kinds of people. Perhaps that's why he's so successful; he knows every phase of life. Half the policemen in New York have named their first-born son after him."

Miss Cotswell regarded her niece with speculative eyes. "Darling, you're not falling in love with him, are you?"
 The butter knife with which Mary had been spreading some cheese clattered to her plate. "No," she said coldly. "I'm not falling in love with him, and a darned lot of good it'd do me if I were. He's interested in me as a writer—not a woman. And not so terribly interested, at that! He turned down 'Their Son' today—said it was trite and banal."

"Um," murmured Linnie, and bit into her cracker. "Well, I can't say, my dear, that I can shed any tears over that. The sooner you discover you were never meant to be an author, the better it'll be for you. Something will have to wake you up to the advantages of marrying Jerome Taylor."

Mary placed her plate on the tray with a bang that was almost fatal. "I'm never going to marry that silly old man, Aunt Linnie, and you might as well know it right now. Also, I wouldn't have Umberto Balianci, with his brilliant hair and perfumed cigarettes, for a gift. I'm sick to death of their fatuous glances and their silly speeches. It was wonderful—simply wonderful—to spend this evening with a man who never once mentioned so-called beauty, nor attempted to kiss me. No, Aunt Linnie, I'm not falling in love with Phil Buchanan! And heavens knows, he certainly is not falling in love with me. In fact, there are times when I feel quite sure he doesn't even like me—that he secretly thinks I'm something of a fool!"

And, leaping to her feet, her eyes burning with unshed tears, she fled from the room.

CHAPTER X

The script of "Their Son" had reached Mary the second morning after the drive to Westchester with Phillip Buchanan, and the very sight of the long envelope in which it came, and the printed rejection slip that automatically had been enclosed, sent a wave of nausea over her. There was a small fire burning on the hearth in the living room, the March morning being chill; and Mary, seeing that Aunt Linnie was engrossed in her mail, stepped to the hearth, and dropped the script on the burning logs.

"That's that!" she told herself. "I never want to see the thing again. It'll only remind me of how futile my efforts are."

In that same morning mail, there had come a letter from Janet Loring; and Mary, seeking what privacy she could, seated herself in the wing-chair by the window, and slit it open with a hairpin.

Mary Dear:

I am getting more and more worried about Dad every day. He is so terribly discouraged, and as yet not one ray of hope has come his way concerning a position for him. Also, he is not well, and has contracted a hacking cough that keeps him awake night after night. I've urged him to go see Doctor Craig, who's back from his honeymoon, you know, but Dad always says, "Oh, it's nothing. I'll be better tomorrow."

I know, however, the truth of the matter is—he's afraid of the doctor will tell him, and also he feels he can't spend the money even on such a necessary thing.

He won't tell me how much money we have left in the bank, but I know it must be practically gone—after Pete's operation two years ago, and what Dad's had to draw for expenses lately.

Morning after morning, he leaves the house right after breakfast, just as he's done for twenty-five years, when there really was some work to be going to. Each morning he bathes and shaves and dresses so carefully, and there actually seems to be some hope in his face; but he always comes back to noon dinner, and again for supper, with no news to tell us, and a look of defeat in his eyes.

I've come to the conclusion that we ought to tell Linnie about our affairs, ask her for a loan of a hundred dollars would be a life-saver for us right now—would give Dad some relief until he can find a position, but when I mention this to him, his face gets red, and he says, "No, Janny. We haven't come to that yet. I don't mind your sister's sending you valuable presents, and giving Mary a lovely time in New York, but I can't allow you to ask her for money to—feed us!"

People don't seem to like Chris Craig's wife very much. I saw her at Sullivan and Ourverda's the other day, and she was being positively rude to poor Miss Ackley about their line of chintzes. I overheard her say, with a little toss of her head, "I'll simply have to go to Chicago in the evening paper. Why, I can't even get a decent haircut or manicure."

We're so excited over the news that your story will appear in The National Weekly next month. Mr. Chickering called up the other night to get the details, and he's going to print a nice article about you in the evening paper. To think my daughter should be a successful author!

Have a good time, darling, and as long as you are so adamant on the subject, don't let on to Aunt Linnie in any manner, shape or form, that we are so frantic about finances here at home.

Mary read the letter again, her heart heavy with compassion. "Have a good time, darling!"—"Don't let on to Aunt Linnie!"—"To think my daughter should be a successful author!" The brave, pitiful sentences danced about in her tired mind. "Poor Dad!" she thought. "Poor Mother! So gallant—so defeated! Wanting me not to tell. Wanting me to have a good time. Thinking me a successful author, when 'At Sea' is probably my one and only story that'll ever see itself in print."

Suddenly, unable to bear her thoughts in the narrow confines of Aunt Linnie's home, she jumped to her feet. "Aunt Linnie," she began, and her voice was breathless. "I'm going out for a walk."
 Miss Cotswell glanced up from the announcement of an art exhibit. "Why, Mary! So early? It's only nine o'clock!"

Belgian Barge Dogs Have Been Used For Many Years as Guards on Boats

Travelers in Belgium sometimes see on the decks of barges and canal boats little black dogs keeping their watchful eyes on everything going on about them. They are the Belgian barge dogs, and from their use they derive their name which, incidentally, is pronounced, skieperkeh, and means in Flemish little skipper, writes P. Hamilton Goodsell in the Detroit News.

Little is definitely known of the breed's origin. It has been used for many years as a guard on the boats that ply the inland waters of Flanders, with his brilliant hair and perfumed cigarettes, for a gift. I'm sick to death of their fatuous glances and their silly speeches. It was wonderful—simply wonderful—to spend this evening with a man who never once mentioned so-called beauty, nor attempted to kiss me. No, Aunt Linnie, I'm not falling in love with Phil Buchanan! And heavens knows, he certainly is not falling in love with me. In fact, there are times when I feel quite sure he doesn't even like me—that he secretly thinks I'm something of a fool!"

Although the Schipperke has not the full coat of the Pomeranian, one of its characteristics is its profuse ruff.

It weighs up to 18 pounds and possesses the usual terrier qualities. The breed first made its appearance in England in the eighties, but it was not until much later that it became known to any extent in this country.

At one time, it is said, sailors on

The older woman, discerning the girl's unrest, studied her lovely young profile. "What's the matter, dear? You haven't received bad news from home, have you?"
 "No, everything's—all right. I simply feel—restless. I won't be gone long."

Linnie Cotswell, sympathetic to something she could not fathom, continued to search the girl's face. "All right, my dear," she finally said. "Run along, but don't forget we're leaving for Journey's End at eleven. Jerome's car'll be here promptly on the hour."

"I know," Mary murmured as she left the room to get a hat and coat. And to herself, she was saying, "Journey's End—Oh, my God! How can I stand driving out there today—filling myself with rich food—being shown those thoroughbred horses and dogs—talking fool notions!"

The days wore on—fruitless, sterile days for Mary. She longed with every fiber of her being to write, but the words would not come. It was futile to try, she finally told herself, until after she had learned the fate of "Concerning Anne." If Phillip Buchanan accepted it, her belief in herself would be restored. The dried well of her mind would again gush forth. Until then, she must go on in this helpless daze—eating, bathing—dressing; attempting to sleep; attending farewell parties given for Linnie and Lelia.

It was now the twelfth of March, and they would be sailing in three days. Maybe, after they had gone, and she and Addie were left alone in the quiet of the apartment, she'd be able to think. Maybe . . .

It was early in the afternoon of the twelfth that, coming home from a dull luncheon at the Ritz with some of Linnie's friends, she found a letter from The National Weekly on her dressing-table. Her heart flooded with hope when she saw that it was thin and flat—that it could not possibly contain a script. With clumsy haste she tore off one end of the envelope, and snatched out the single sheet of paper it contained.

"Why, it's in longhand," she said to herself. "How strange! Did Mr. Buchanan write it, himself?" Yes, there was his signature, "Phillip Buchanan," scrawled at the bottom of the page.

Then, with joyous anticipation, she began to read:
 My dear Miss Loring,
 I've just finished reading "Concerning Anne," and my dear child, "Their Son" was a gem in comparison. It, at least, had possibilities—that is, perhaps, for some magazine other than The National Weekly. What has come over you? Why can't the girl who wrote "At Sea" produce another perfect short?

It's in you, Mary Loring. It is—only something about which I can't possibly know is destroying your beautiful talent. Please try to overcome it, or shake it off, or forget it. I feel sure you can do it. I have absolute faith in your ability. That is why I am writing you these words which, in all probability, you will consider brutal.

"Concerning Anne" is not being returned to you by mail. I don't want anybody in the office to see it. Instead, will you lunch with me at the Brevoort Saturday the fifteenth, and talk things over?
 Sincerely,
 Phillip Buchanan

Mary never knew how long she stood there at the dressing-table, staring blindly at Phillip Buchanan's letter. A dull pain pounded at the back of her neck, and, for a while, she thought she was going to be sick. The frankness of his words was reacting upon her with physical violence. Her mouth felt dry and hot. Automatically, she moved towards the bathroom, took the peach-colored glass from its niche in the wall, and turned on the cold water faucet.

PAUL WORKS A HARD FIELD
 LESSON TEXT—Acts 18:1, 4-11; I Corinthians 2:1-5.
 GOLDEN TEXT—I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me.—Philippians 4:13.

"Sissy!" That one word uttered with the depth of scorn of which only a school boy is capable, is enough to ruin the happiness of the one toward whom it is directed. The writer of these notes has a many son of eight years of age who has many ambitions in his young heart, but one great fear, namely, that he may do something that will mark him as a "sissy." It is a commendable thing that boys should feel that way, provided, of course, that they are properly instructed in home and church so that they know that real manly courage does not mean being a ruffian or an unduly person.

One could wish that more of that spirit were evident in the Christian Church. We really have all too many professed believers who are "soft"—afraid of the hard blows of life. These people tell young folk both by word and deed that Christianity is a religion for the soft-hearted and sentimental, when as a matter of fact it calls for all the red-blooded vitality of the strongest man and woman. Here is a place for the boy or girl, man or woman who has a backbone and the spirit of the pioneer. It is a great and glorious battle in which we are engaged. Paul knew it and lived it. In the progress of his ministry we find him at Athens (Acts 17), where a brilliant appeal to the philosophers of that place brought little result. From thence he comes to Corinth, one of the greatest and most wicked cities of the day. Here he meets a difficult task.

I. Human Inability (Acts 18:1, 4-8).
 To call a man a "Corinthian" was to label him as a drunkard and a libertine. The town was really tough and Paul walked right into that impossible situation to preach the gospel. He naturally first went to the Jews in the synagogue, but when he preached Christ they made short work of putting him out. Rather we should say he very definitely separated himself from them. Consider the graphic picture in verse 6. But he didn't go far, he set up his testimony for Christ in the house next door, where God had a believer all prepared to receive him. The preacher of the truth may move, but he does not run away from God's appointed place.

Opposition was evidently keen, and as Paul came and went the leaders in the synagogue would probably meet him and make known their plans to destroy him. This, added to the opposition of the wicked city, was enough to discourage any man. He had some results (v. 8), but on the whole he had to struggle with the heartbreak of an impossible task. But the hour of man's extremity is the time of God's opportunity. There comes

II. Divine Encouragement (Acts 18:9-11).
 God never tries His people beyond their ability to bear. It is not always given to His servants to have the assurance of success which came to Paul, but in all probability they do not face such staggering discouragement. In any case, those who have walked in the valley as well as on the mountain top with the Lord testify that He gives strength in the hour of weakness to all those who trust Him.

Paul was assured that no bodily harm would come to him and that he was not to think that he was alone, for there were many of God's people even in that wicked city. Safety and fellowship were thus assured, and none too soon, for almost at once a bitter persecution broke out against him. Read verses 12-17. Note that the assurance of God's protecting care does not mean that we shall escape trials and sorrows, but that we are to be kept in the midst of them.

III. The Secret of Victory (I Cor. 2:15).
 Looking back on his ministry in Corinth, Paul writes of the secret of his successful work there. This is a passage that every teacher and preacher of God's Word should prayerfully ponder. Eloquence, human wisdom, and self-confidence may be the basis of success in the things of the world, but not in the ministry of the gospel. How well we know that the most carefully reasoned and well-phrased message may be utterly flat and powerless, while the stumbling utterance from a heart full of the love and grace of God "becomes a fire and a searching and a burning, because the Holy Spirit catches it up and bears it upon the inner consciousness of men" (Morgan). The man who preaches without his soul atremble with the sacredness of his task, his own unworthiness, and an appreciation of the power of God, may be eloquent and learned, but he will accomplish little for God.

What to Eat and Why

C. Houston Goudiss Considers the Question: How Often Shall We Eat? Suggests That Some People May Benefit by More Than Three Meals

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

ONE of the questions I am frequently asked is whether or not it's advisable to eat between meals. Any answer must take into consideration a number of factors. It is true that many people experience a desire for food in mid-morning, mid-afternoon or before going to bed. Some begin to nibble as soon as they feel hungry, and often they continue to eat in excess of their needs. Others, trained to more self-restraint, refrain from eating, because they have been brought up with the idea that no food should be eaten except at regular meals.

Unfortunately, it frequently occurs that neither procedure is based upon actual food requirements.

Consider the Day's Food Needs

In arriving at any decision concerning between-meal eating, the day's ration should be regarded as a whole. If the foods served at breakfast, dinner and lunch or supper are carefully chosen, with a view to meeting bodily requirements, there should be no need for many adults to eat between meals.

On the other hand, it should be borne in mind that dividing the day's food into what we Americans so often call "three square meals," is primarily a convenient custom. One reason that it has grown up over a period of years is because it allows the maximum free time to pursue our various occupations. In a number of countries, a fourth meal is an accepted part of the day's routine. No Englishman, for example, would consider going without his afternoon tea; and workers pause in offices, stores and factories, as well as at home, for a brief rest and welcome refreshment.

How Many Meals?

In recent years, several scientists have advanced the idea that some of us may benefit by eating more than three meals. At a leading university a few years ago, two distinguished investigators concluded that smaller and more frequent meals would promote general health and well-being for many types of individuals. They suggested lighter meals, but proposed as many as four, five, or even six feedings a day.

Another well-known authority has performed various experiments which effectively demonstrate that a light additional meal in mid-afternoon, consisting principally of a milk beverage, increased the efficiency of workers and helped to reduce fatigue.

Relieving Late Afternoon Fatigue. Many people experience a tired feeling about four o'clock in the afternoon. During the working day, they gradually utilize available food energy, so that by late afternoon, the supply may be greatly reduced—along with both mental and physical energy.

Here is a case where eating between meals is regarded as a decided advantage, provided the food is carefully chosen. A glass of milk and a few crackers, or some other carbohydrate food, will help to renew energy, relieve the feeling of fatigue and bridge the gap to dinner. It must be remembered, however, that the extra meal should be composed of light, easily-digested foods so as not to destroy appetite for the following meal.

Young Children and Elderly People

Children of certain ages, as well as adults, may benefit by a schedule that includes an extra meal. Very young children—in the toddler stage—are frequently given a mid-morning feeding of orange juice, or a mid-afternoon cup of milk with one or two crackers. And some school children also make better weight gains if they pause in the middle of the morning, or take an after-school snack, of fruit juice, or milk, and crackers.

Aged persons often require more than three meals. That is because large, heavy meals might overtax their digestions, and three light meals do not usually provide adequate nourishment. For this reason, nutritionists advise that they have a light, mid-afternoon pickup of a hot beverage and crackers; and perhaps a cup of hot bouillon before going to bed.

Don't Overeat

Thus, it is evident that there are numerous instances when there is justification for departing from the accepted routine. But it must be remembered that as the number of meals is increased, the amount of food taken at each one should be decreased. Otherwise, an undue strain may be placed upon the digestive organs.

Then, too, no matter how the day's food is divided, it must provide all the substances required for sound nutrition. Otherwise, the body will be improperly nourished, no matter how many meals are consumed.

The diet should be built first of all around the protective foods—milk, eggs, fruits and vegetables, which are such an important source of necessary minerals and vitamins. It must also supply protein for growth and repair, carbohydrates and fats for adequate energy, and sufficient bulk or cellulose to promote normal elimination.

Keep the Diet Balanced

Whether you serve three hearty meals and forego eating between times, or follow the plan of providing a mid-morning or mid-afternoon pickup, you should meet the requirements for a balanced diet. This, you will remember from previous discussions, includes a pint of milk for each adult, a quart for every child; an egg for each member of the family, or at least three or four weekly; one serving of a whole grain cereal; one serving of meat, fish or chicken plus a second source of protein, such as meat, nuts or dried beans or peas; two vegetables besides potatoes, one of which should be of the leafy green variety; two fruits or one fruit and one fruit juice.

Questions Answered

Mrs. E. L. C.—Vitamin B has been found to be an important factor in maintaining the normal muscle tone of the intestinal tract. This vitamin is obtained from whole grain cereals and breads, yeast, glandular meats, such as liver and kidneys; milk, nuts and many fruits and vegetables.

Mrs. A. C. M.—Though milk is the foremost source of calcium, the calcium of vegetables has been found to be well utilized in the diet of adults. Green, leafy vegetables are in general richer in calcium than other vegetables, though carrots also contain a significant amount.

Stains on Fingers.—Pumice stone is useful in removing cigarette and ink stains from the fingers. Simply wet the stone and rub it against the stain.

Keep Chocolate Cool.—The white coating which sometimes appears on cakes of chocolate is caused by keeping the cakes in an over-warm place, where some of the fat melts and comes to the surface.

Lustrous Glassware.—Laundry blue added to the water in which glassware is washed will give the glass an added luster.

Wash Chamois Often.—Chamois in which silver is stored away should be frequently washed, if the silver is to be kept bright.

Fresh Doughnuts.—Put freshly made doughnuts into a covered dish while they are still warm and they will stay fresh longer.

Washing Hint.—Never use soap on white silk. The soap should first be dissolved in water before laundering is begun.

Adding Height to Room.—Height can be added to a low-ceilinged room by using striped wallpaper and long window draperies.

When Buying Garments.—Look at the seams to see that they have a generous width and firm finish.

Keeping Cream Fresh.—Cream will keep fresh for a day or two if placed in its carton in a basin half filled with cold water. Muslin placed over the carton with the ends touching the water will help.

Use Mop on Linoleum.—Sweeping oilcloths and linoleums wear them. An oiled mop or dry mop is much better to use on them. A coat of wax frequently applied helps to preserve both oilcloth and linoleum.

HIGH SCHOOL
The standardized test covering the third period of study was recently taken by the American Government class. The class obtained a median of 44. This was the highest median obtained since the class of 1933 obtained one of 51.

An inspector from the University of Michigan arrived Tuesday morning and visited all day. The gentleman in question, Dr. Fred G. Walcott, is a critic teacher in the University Training school at Ann Arbor. He has had considerable experience in some schools in Michigan which are located in communities similar in size to that of Tawas City. We may expect some worthwhile constructive criticism in the report which Dr. Walcott will give us concerning our institution.

We much regret to hear that it will be necessary for Erma Lou Pfahl to remain from school several weeks because of scarlet fever.

After reading H. M. Tomlinson's essay "The Brown Owl" in which a very ordinary owl is depicted with insight and humor, the English IV students wrote essays on their particular pets. To these pets, ranging from dogs to toads, many human traits were attributed, thus making the papers very entertaining.

Some of the posters of the Latin I students showed much effort. "Fabula Trucenti" the story of grain, made by Harold Ross was well done. Marian Musolf also had a very neat piece of work.

The European History class are now studying the rule of Napoleon. A comparison is being made of the characteristics of all great dictators both past and present.

A standardized test given to the bookkeeping class showed the median of this year's class to be 16 points above the median last year.

The Junior class hiked to the Elms Wednesday evening to enjoy a hot dog supper and games around a camp fire. This was one of the birthday parties of the year. Those honored were Richie Zollweg and Arnold Rollin.

SEVENTH and EIGHTH GRADES
Peter and Donald Pfeiffer are absent because of scarlet fever.

The seventh grade are studying the history of Florence Nightingale. The following people who have not been absent nor tardy for the past three months are: Richard Clark, Evelyn Colby, Lou Libka, Neil Libka, Martin Cuniff, Marie Ulman and Herbert Ziehl.

FIFTH and SIXTH GRADES
Carl Lawrence of Pontiac entered the sixth grade Tuesday.

Barbara Matthews of Oscoda visited our room this week.

The fifth grade geography class is studying about cocoa. In language they are memorizing the poem "Somebody's Mother."

Blanche Beaubien brought a beautiful bouquet of arbutus. Kathryn Westcott brought some pussy willows.

THIRD and FOURTH GRADES
The following third grade people had perfect spelling papers last week: Richard Berube, Donald Britting, Donald Gingerich, Lloyd Hughes and Elizabeth Westcott.

Allen Brown was the winner in a spelling contest last Friday.

We are enjoying the story "Fuzzy-Wuzz" for our story period.

The fourth grade geography class is starting the study of the United States.

Eye Specialist Will Be Here May 15th

Dr. R. Sachs, Children's Fund Ophthalmologist (Eye Specialist) will come to Iosco county on about May 15 to give eye examinations to needy children. The Children's Fund rules relative to the eye program are as follows: "In counties where there is no registered ophthalmologist, all children needing eye care will be examined without cost. However, those children whose parents are in a position to pay for glasses are expected to do so. We limit the giving of free glasses to the indigent only. Glasses will cost $2.15 per pair. We feel that this small cost can be met by many parents who could not afford to take their children to a registered ophthalmologist in a distant city because of the cost of transportation as well as the cost of examination and glasses."

Appointments will soon be made for eye examinations by Miss Klumb county nurse. Eye examinations will not be given to children without the parents permission and each child requiring attention will be given a permit for his parents to sign. It will be necessary for the consent slips to be in the nurse's office before appointments can be made; so will the parents of children to be served please cooperate by helping the child be prompt in returning the signed consent slip to his teacher? Clinics will be held in Tawas City and Oscoda. Preschool children with crossed eyes are invited, as well as children of school age, including eighth grade. It is hoped that arrangements for transportation by school bus can be made for children from outlying schools.

McCORMICK-DEERING Side Rake and Tedder

THIS two-in-one hay tool combines the best in a side delivery rake and a tedder. It forms a quick-curing windrow—turning the leaves inward to prevent shattering and the stems outward to get the quickest action from the sun and air.

The shift of a lever converts the McCormick-Deering from a side rake to a tedder. Another lever sets the teeth at the right slant for either operation.

Roller bearings assure light draft. The strong frame is well braced by a large truss beam over the reel. Gears are extra heavy. Teeth are securely fastened by special clips and bolts. We have this and other McCormick-Deering hay tools ready for delivery.

advantages, not one of them did more than tell what they had to offer, and the decision was left where we think it should have been—to the voters of the district. Excuses were given and among them was the financial side. Figures comparing the cost of operating the high school for the past three years were placed on the blackboard showing that during 1936-37 and 1937-38 the cost had been over $1,400.00 each year, while for 1938-39 it had been just an even $400.00. But just what that information meant to many of us still remains a conundrum. The $400.00 must mean what has been paid for transportation, but that was paid with the understanding that later it was to be refunded by the state. Therefore it would seem that the only cost to the district would be the tuition paid for the seventh grade, closed this year, and so far no one seems to know just what that is going to be.

But all this did not seem to have anything in particular to do with the real purpose for which the meeting was called. It would seem that when voters are asked to vote on a question as vital as the one under consideration some real cause for doing so should have been given. And when they couldn't or wouldn't make clear their reason for circulating the petition, certainly they cannot feel offended because they lost out.

To be sure, they tell us the time is not far off when the state will step in and without asking our consent, put our children where they see fit.

Well, by that time roads will undoubtedly be in better condition—or if they wait long enough, the children may be transported by air—however, we feel certain when that time comes the majority of us will accept the inevitable situation with the same grace we have accepted other modern changes.

Several of us who wished the school could be kept here feel we could have put up a good argument had it been necessary, but it wasn't, and so the tale was told by the vote.

During the past three weeks while this question was being discussed, we have been pleased to find so many of the older residents of the district, who for no personal benefit to themselves, have said, "Because our school is an institution which has carried on here for 61 years, we of our own free will are not going to vote to close it."

The vote stood 36 to 28, and so far at least one more year we shall have a school house above which the "Star Spangled Banner" may float in the breeze.

It was agreed upon that the question as to which city school our high school students will be transported next year, should be settled by vote at the annual election on July 10, and in the meantime our present school board will not be found "napping," and no city school superintendent coming along with his contract will be apt to get it signed.
