TAWAS CITY WINS 6-2 AT ALABASTER

Mallon Pitches for Tawas City; Franks for Alabaster

Tawas City journeyed to Alabaster last Sunday and handed them a 6 to 2 setback for Tawas City's first victory and Alabaster's first defeat of the season. Bill Mallon was Tawas City's choice to do the hurling, opposing him on the mound was Elmer Franks.

Tawas City went down in order in the opening frame. Alabaster scored one run in their turn at bat. Freel and J. DeLosh singled, Roiter advanced them with a sacrifice, and when Staudacher booted Robert's grounder, Freel scored. It looked like the locals were about to "boot away" another game, but Bill settled down and fanned Rollin and Gackstetter grounded out, short to first.

The locals got this run back in their turn at bat in the second. Quick drove a long fly to center which Roberts gathered in for the first out. Mallon then lined one down the third base line for three bases. Staudacher singled to center and took second when Roberts let the ball get by him. Mallon scoring on the hit. Zollweg grounded out short to first and Moeller drove a high fly to center which Roberts took for the third out. Alabaster went out in order in their turn at bat.

Tawas City scored two more in the third. C. Libka was safe at second when Freel, Alabaster's left fielder, dropped his fly for a two base error. Pierson walked, Libka scored and Pierson went to third when Gackstetter booted Smith's grounder. In an attempt to pick Smith off first, Franks balked, allowing Pierson to score and Smith to take second. Laidlaw sacrificed Smith to third. Quick bunted back to the box and Smith was thrown out at the plate. Quick was out. DeLosh to Roiter, in an attempt to take second on the play, ending Tawas City's half of the inning. Alabaster went out in order in the third and fourth innings. Tawas City had a man on base in the fifth as a result of an error. Alabaster scored their second and final run of the game in the fifth. Martin opened with a single over third. Wellina fanned, Mallon fumbled Franks' grounder, Martin taking second and Franks was safe at first on the error. Freel hit through first into right field for a single, a perfect throw to the plate by Moeller held Martin at third, filling the bases with only one out. Mallon then uncorked a wild pitch. Martin scoring and the other two runners moving up a base. J. DeLosh struck out and Roiter ended the inning grounding out to first base.

Rain set in after Tawas City went down in order in the sixth, holding up the game for about ten minutes. Alabaster got a man on in their half of the inning. Gackstetter singled to left, after two out, and was left on first as Martin grounded out short to first.

Tawas City scored three runs in a seventh inning rally. Staudacher struck out. "Kip" Zollweg doubled to left, Moeller grounded to short and was safe on a fielder's choice when an attempt was made to get Zollweg at third, both runners being safe. Libka grounded to third and was safe on a fielder's choice as Zollweg was caught at the plate. Pierson singled to left-center scoring Moeller, Libka taking third and Pierson going to second on the throw-in. Smith doubled to left scoring Libka and Pierson and was out on a close play at third when he tried for an extra base.

Alabaster had men on base in both the eighth and ninth but no damage was done as the local defense never faltered and came through with some fine fielding plays to halt any rally.

Roiter replaced Franks on the mound for Alabaster in the eighth. Two hits were made off his delivery. Laidlaw singled in the eighth and Zollweg in the ninth.

Each team collected seven hits, two doubles and a triple were included in the Tawas City collection. All of Alabaster hits were singles. Mallon had ten strikeouts, Franks five and Roiter

Buildings Settle Unevenly

A world-famous example of a building settling unevenly because of an unsatisfactory soil foundation is the Leaning Tower of Pisa in Italy. This building started to settle unevenly while it was being built and has continued to settle ever since. That it started to settle while in course of construction some hundreds of years ago is indicated by the fact that efforts were made to correct the slant of the upper floors by building them higher on the sinking side. Even these upper floors on which correction was made are very much off level.

County Agent Tells How To Combat Worm Horde

Field crops, garden crops, and orchard and forest trees are being rapidly destroyed or severely injured by the inroads of leaf feeding insects of many kinds, according to County Agent W. L. Finley, and he proceeded to tell how to protect these trees and crops.

"The gardener's worries, since the past few warm nights, will be turned to the cutworm. There are many kinds of cutworms and their damage is spread over a long season, but the most severe damage will be seen within the next couple of weeks while corn and other garden crops are first coming up and while the cabbage and tomatoes are being set out. Cutworms are easily controlled by the spreading of poison bait over the trouble area early in the evening following one of our good warm days.

A poison bait formula which will assure success may be made," says County Agent Finley, "by mixing 25 lbs. sawdust, 75 lbs. bran, perhaps 6 gallons of water, and 2 qt. 4 lbs. test) sodium arsenite, or 3 lbs. white arsenic, or 3 lbs. paris green, 2 gallons cheap molasses and 3 oz. banana oil. The bait should be spread very thinly, using from 20 to 30 lbs. to the acre.

"Farmers through several areas of the county will soon observe hordes of grasshoppers collecting their tax from the grain, hay and pasture crops. The little hoppers are now hatching and may be seen by the careful observer, with little thought of the damage that will be done between now and fall. The little hoppers hatch from eggs that were laid last fall and will feed until this fall unless destroyed in some way. Plowing harrowing destroys many eggs and young hoppers, although poison bait may be relied upon to protect the hay and alfalfa seed crops.

"Young hoppers are more easily killed than the older ones and damage from their feeding is reduced by early eradication. The same bait as for cutworms works very well, although 2 to 5 lbs. of common salt per cent. added seems to attract the hoppers to greater extent. Grasshopper bait is usually spread at the rate of 10 to 15 lbs. per acre.

"A third pest which is taking its toll at the present time is the East-Arn Tent caterpillar, or the apple tree tent caterpillar, as it is often called. These hatch from small brown egg masses which were laid upon the small twigs last July. As the small caterpillar hatch they begin spinning the characteristic tent which is now seen in trees belonging to the apple and cherry families. The caterpillars feed upon the new leaves and buds, often totally defoliating the tree. After four to six weeks of feeding the larva complete their growth. The tent is used only as protection where the worms are usually found during the warm part of the day, doing their feeding in early morning and evening. When the larva are about three-fourths grown they desert the tent and wander about searching for a suitable place to spin their cocoons. They remain in this pupa stage for about three weeks, after which a rather inconspicuous brown moth which flies by night emerges to lay eggs for the 1940 brood. The egg mass contains 300 to 400 eggs encircling a branch or twig. The egg masses are rounded at each end, the whole mass being coated with a brown, frothy, glue-like substance. Fruit trees and ornamental trees should be protected by mechanically crushing the larva while they are gathered in their tent or by removing the branch and burning it upon the rubbish pile or they may be controlled by thoroughly spraying the leaves with 2½ pounds of arsenate of lead

Tribute was paid to American soldiers and sailors last Tuesday forenoon at the Tawas City cemetery with exercises under the auspices of Jesse C. Hodder Post American Legion. A large number of people were in attendance.

Rev. S. A. Carey gave the Memorial address. His inspiring talk pointed out the ideals of American democracy and emphasized the necessity of retaining them if we hope to preserve our liberty in this day of dictatorships.

Miss Dorothy Blust gave the "Gettysburg Address" and Miss Norma Mursolf gave "In Flanders Field" with a few few words explaining the significance of the poppy symbol. Two songs were pleasingly rendered by the School Glee club. Music was furnished by the High School band, an organization of which we can take a great amount of pride. The Legion Memorial Day rites were given by Jesse C. Hodder Post, with Ernest Burtzloff in command.

Hale Defeats Whittemore

Hale defeated Whittemore Memorial day in the first game of the Northern League. The score was 18 to 4.

Whittemore could not have played a wilder game and all of their pitchers were used—Hottos, Reid, Durley and Tommy Brideski. Clark was behind the bat. Johnson and Shellenberger pitched for Hale, with Bloomfield catching. It being their first game of the season, the Whittemore boys just had to throw the ball somewhere and this they did, mostly out of the park.

Next Sunday Wilber will play at Whittemore.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—The muezzin from his tower cries that he can't exactly say that everything is all right, but it might be worse and it probably will be better. That would be Col. Leonard P. Ayres of Cleveland allying fears of a bear market, in his monthly business survey, a periodic voice as authoritative as any noontide bulletin from the minarets of Cairo.

Colonel Ayres, vice president of the Cleveland Trust company, was a school teacher for many years, and is the author of a book called "The Measurement of Spelling Ability," one of about a dozen of his books on educational subjects. He has written a similar number of books on business and finance, and, in his entire range, from spelling to selling, he has never overlooked detail and he is no offhand prophecier—prophecy being his main line, as contrasted to that of mere market analysis.

He has logged eight major depressions and eight cycles of inflation and deflation, and he gets the feel of the thing, in about the same way a good cook gets the feel of a cook book. He was one of the few financial experts who saw the 1929 blizzard coming, and said so. On October 3, 1928, he wrote: "The golden age of American business has come to an end."

Nobody was paying much attention to the muezzin then. He kept on repeating that the condition of finance was "thoroughly unhygienic," but the wind wasn't right and the words didn't carry down to the market place below.

A native of Niantic, Conn., Colonel Ayres was educated at Boston university, later garlanded with a chaplet of honorary degrees from other colleges. He taught school at Rochester, N. Y., and at Puerto Rico, and in the latter engagement turned his spare time to statistical research, with such success that he became statistician for the A. E. F. in war days—hence his title.

Previous to taking over the banking post in Cleveland, he was a director of education for the Russell Sage foundation, and he had rounded out his career as an educator nicely before starting another in finance. In between the two work zones, he wedged a book, "The War With Germany," written in 1919.

IN THE depth of the depression, a group of Wall Street financiers hired an economist to draft for them a shock-proof and slump-proof plan for the investment of their surplus funds, highly plausible.

Sino Business Sagacity Seems Highly Plausible

After diligent research, their adviser found that no such plan was possible, but suggested as an alternative that they put their money in the keeping of some sagacious Chinese financier.

This writer recalled then that several of the shrewdest business men in this country, including Edward Bruce of the fine arts division of the treasury department and the late William R. Murchison, had learned about the care and nurture of money from the Chinese sages of the abacus, and now comes Richard C. Patterson Jr., also schooled in business in China. He retires as assistant secretary of commerce to take a private post.

Back from China in 1927, with half of his allotted span of years still ahead of him and a sizable fortune already in hand, he wished to put in the rest of his life being socially useful. He was commissioner of corrections of New York city until 1932, given a big hand for his effectiveness on the job.

Just a year ago, he became a sort of liaison officer between the department of commerce and the nation's business. In this capacity, he urged a friendly get-together in an "economic clinic," as he thinks part of our trouble is due to a lack of basic facts and sound understanding of economic and business forces.

He was a Nebraska farm boy, routed through the University of Nebraska and the Columbia School of Mines to a successful professional and business career, first as a mining engineer with the J. G. White Engineering company, as a consultant for the DuPonts and later in mining and business ventures in China. He served on the Mexican border and in the World war, a major in the latter, annexing several foreign decorations.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS BY JOSEPH W. LaBINE

New Deal Will Seek Re-election On 'More-of-Same' Platform; Compromise Seems Impossible

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.) Released by Western Newspaper Union.

POLITICS:

Proclamation

"You cannot expect this administration to alter the principles and objectives for which we have struggled the past six years!"

This was a campaign speech, thought members of the American Retailers association who heard Franklin Roosevelt's first pronouncement of New Deal policy in five months. Ordinarily such remarks are not surprising, but 1939 is a crucial legislative-political year in which the groundwork is laid for next year's election, and in which White House and congress must adopt and set in motion the program on which they will stand for re-election. The inevitable program: More spending, no concessions to business, no balancing of the budget.

A big national debt is nothing to fear, said the President, because part of it is offset by debts owed to the government through loans made on a "business basis" by federal lending agencies. Another part is invested in federally owned enterprises (like Boulder dam) which will pay out over a period of years. Generally speaking, he thought that with national income increasing steadily, a $40,000,000 debt would not be big in relation to the country's assets.

Mr. Roosevelt's speech proved a meaty bone on which New Dealers, conservatives and congress could gnaw, a timely White House statement which gave direction to a heretofore vague political picture:

Congress. A spending spree succeeded the once highly vaunted economy campaign as house conferees approved the $1,218,666,000 agricultural appropriations bill carrying $338,000,000 in unbudgeted grants to farmers. Sentiment rose high for a $500,000,000 public works appropriation, providing funds for another pump-priming program, which congressmen have found a far more effective vote-getting force for election years than the controversial WPA.

New Dealers. Since Mr. Roosevelt refused to alter his "principles and objectives" for the 1940 campaign, New Deal theorists felt safe in trying to sell unhappy U. S. business on the wisdom of accepting the present relationship between government and private enterprise. Turning economist for the moment, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace urged that idle money be started moving again.

Simultaneously, before the senate's monopoly investigating committee, Assistant Secretary of State Adolf Berle Jr. not only scored idle dollars but suggested the U. S. do something about it. His plan: Junk our "obsolete banking machinery" which leaves small business "starved," creating in its stead government-sponsored capital banks and government-insured loans for small business. Most revolutionary Berle comment: "The theory that a bank must 'make a profit' today has ceased to be valid except in an extremely limited case."

Conservatives. A rebirth of spending and theorizing gave disgruntled anti-New Dealers a field day. Chief antagonist was Virginia's Democratic Sen. Harry F. Byrd, who commented on the next fiscal year's minimum total appropriation of $10,000,000,000 (a peacetime high): "We have not been able to purchase prosperity on borrowed money, and the continued effort to do this will inevitably lead to disaster."

Mr. Byrd's chief complaint was against the President's minimizing of the national debt. Granting the money is owed domestically, Mr. Byrd thought most of it was held by banks, and consequently "the vast majority will be paying taxes to pay interest to the small number of families owning (government) bonds." Contradicting Mr. Roosevelt's claim that much of the debt is offset by debts owed to the government, Mr. Byrd figured that government lending agencies have handed out only $6,310,000,000 as against a direct debt of $40,229,000,000.

Significance. Mr. Roosevelt's speech, resultant congressional spending, opposition to removal of alleged business deterrents and a rebirth of theorizing constitute the absolute antithesis of any effort to bring insurgent Democrats back to the fold in time for 1940. There can be no compromise; New Deal forces will carry the 1940 convention by forcing through a simple majority nomination rule, or they will strike out for themselves as a new party, leaving insurgent Democrats to put up their own candidate or join the Republicans.

NAVY: Submarines

Checking its records after rescuers had brought up 33 live and 26 dead passengers from the submarine Squalis, the U. S. navy department could be both proud and abashed over its record since the first underwater craft failed to come up 25 years ago.

Reason for pride: Though 62 of her 90 odd submarines are over the accepted age limit, the U. S. has had no mishap since 1927 when the S-4 sank off Provincetown, Mass., with a loss of 40 lives. Another source of pride: U. S. submarine mishaps have been singularly fortunate compared with those of other maritime powers. Total loss of life in five U. S. accidents is 139; in six British accidents, 217; three Japanese, 215; two French, 106; three Russian, 170.

Reason for being abashed: Italy, the world's No. 1 submarine power, has experienced but one fatal accident, that in 1928 when her F-14 hit a destroyer.

One good reason for Italy's luck is that 83 of her submarines are under age, four times more than the U. S. When all vessels being built or contracted for are completed, Il Duce's second-to-none U-boat fleet will total 129.

MISSOURI: Nephew Jim

Stone walls do not always make a prison. The walls of Alcatraz and Terminal island which have held Al Capone seven years did not stop his syndicate from ruling Chicago's underworld. Nor will the 15-month sentence at Leavenworth facing Kansas City's "Boss" Tom Pendergast keep that hearty away from Missouri politics. Convicted for evading federal income taxes, Tom Pendergast finds himself back where he started the day he inherited Kansas City's political machine from Brother Jim Pendergast. Today another Jim Pendergast—old Jim's son—is running the show while his uncle languishes in prison.

Looking ahead, Missouri politicians find that 1940 brings elections for a governor to succeed Lloyd C.

JIM PENDERGAST Boss pro tem.

Stark (who, like all Missouri governors, cannot be re-elected), a senator for the post now held by Pendergast-supported Harry S. Truman, 13 congressmen and a full slate of state officials.

On good behavior Tom Pendergast will be out of prison in 12 months, in time to plan defeat for Governor Stark should he seek Senator Truman's post in the August primaries. Reason for vengeance: The governor was a Pendergast protégé who turned on his sponsor after he learned about an alleged $440,000 payoff in Missouri's fire insurance rate compromise.

Though he looks like the old man, Nephew Jim Pendergast is not so astute as his tutor and can only be trusted to hold the machine together until next year. Last time he ran an election, when Uncle Tom was ill in New York during the 1936 vote, Jim won sweeping victories throughout Missouri. But 256 election officials were convicted in the government's sensational vote fraud investigation which followed.

LABOR:

Borrowed Leaf

In 1903 a Danbury, Conn., hatmaking firm sued United Hatters of America for instituting a nationwide boycott when denied a closed shop. After the U. S. Supreme court ruled the boycott was a restraint of trade under the Sherman act, a $74,000 verdict was awarded against the union, was trebled (as provided by the Clayton act), but finally dropped when a deputy marshal found 10 years later that he could collect nothing from the 197 laborite defendants.

Last April 3 a federal court jury awarded Philadelphia's Apex Hosiery mills a $711,932 judgment against C. I. O.'s American Federation of Hosiery Workers for damages suffered in a 48-day sitdown strike during 1937.

Even as this case was being appealed, Republic Steel corporation borrowed a leaf from hatters and hosiery makers to enter the latest in a series of cross suits growing out of the "Little Steel" strike in 1937. As if to answer one suit, which demands $2,500,000 in back wages and damages from Republic, Tom Girdler's company retaliated by demanding $2,500,000 damages, costs and attorneys' fees. Trebled under the Claypool act, the total suit runs to $7,500,000, which nobody expects John Lewis, or his steel workers to pay.

Chief values of the suit appear to be (1) neutralizing the damage claims made against Republic by C. I. O., and (2) focusing national attention on ineffectual employer-employee relations at a time when congress would just as soon adjourn without amending the Wagner labor act. Though he matched this setback by signing up coal miners in Kentucky's heretofore unorganized bloody Harlan county, John Lewis healed no wounds by allowing 13,000 employees to strike at Detroit's Briggs body manufacturing plant. Within 24 hours 65,000 workmen in assembly lines dependent upon Briggs bodies were idle and the automobile industry wondered if 1937 had returned.

EUROPE: Parallels

Some 30 years ago was born a fearsome triple entente designed to safeguard peace. Its members: Russia, France and Britain. Meanwhile Italy was joining the Austro-German alliance and Europe's power seemed hanging in the balance.

In 1939 the history that repeats itself has popped up once more; Europe's power division parallels that of pre-World war days except that part of the old Austro-Hungarian empire is now independent. Italy and Germany are bound in military unity while France, Britain and Russia are once more aligned side-by-side.

Examining the new status quo in comparison with pre-war Europe, observers find the triple entente even stronger now than then, Adolf Hitler's trumpet-blasting to the contrary. Devoid of colonies, befriended in Europe only by Italy and Hungary, the Reich is completely encircled by anti-aggression powers. If history repeats itself once more, Italy may find imperialistic Germany threatening her Mediterranean security and be forced to desert Berlin. A less likely repetition of history is the bogging down of Russia's smartly-trained military machine, which collapsed utterly the last time it marched westward.

Skin Disorders Usually Curable; Need Treatment

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON

LIKE many other physicians I have repeated the old story about the skin specialist who jokingly made the statement that he had chosen to be a skin specialist because his patients never got him up at night, never died, and never got well. The idea of repeating the story was to show that skin ailments were often difficult to cure and required much patience from patient and physician. That the repeating of this joke has really done harm is stated by Prof. Carroll S. Wright of Temple university, Philadelphia, as guest editor in Medical World.

"I have actually, on numerous occasions, had patients inform me that they understood that skin diseases, for the most part, are incurable, and a physician once told me that he had no interest in treating patients with skin diseases when even a skin specialist admitted that 'they never got well.'"

It can be understood then why patients with skin ailments will often neglect to undergo treatment if they believe it to be just a waste of time and money.

May Be Serious. In answer to this old joke, Dr. Wright states that as a matter of fact he has been roused from bed by skin patients with severe pain, has seen patients die because of skin ailments, and fortunately the great majority of skin ailments "are entirely curable or can be greatly benefited by persistent medical efforts."

The eight most common skin ailments in a series of nearly 1,000,000 cases, in the order they occur, appear to be eczema, acne (pimples), scabies (itch), psoriasis (white patches of silvery scales), seborrhea (dandruff), urticaria (hives), dermatitis venenata (inflammation due to touching substances of a chemical, vegetable or animal nature), and verruca (warts). Figures from the private practice of Dr. Jay F. Schamberg and Dr. Wright show ringworm to be as common as eczema.

Dr. Wright points out that the above diseases can be helped by treatment although the disease may return because the cause is not and perhaps cannot be entirely removed.

In order, then, that patients and physicians will get away from the idea that skin diseases cannot be cured, Dr. Wright says: "It is my belief that the results of treatment in skin diseases are at least equal, if not superior, to those achieved in other specialties."

Rheumatism Result Of Many Causes

Although rheumatism or arthritis is as old as man, it is only during the last 25 years that a knowledge of its cause, the damage it does and how best to treat it has become known. Figures prove that everybody past 50 years of age has arthritis to a less or greater degree.

Just as with other ailments, rheumatism or arthritis can only attack the individual if his tissues are in the necessary condition to develop rheumatism. And his tissues are put into this condition by infection of tonsils, teeth or other organs, which is carried to the joint and its surrounding tissues. Other causes which put his tissues into condition to develop rheumatism are cold and wet (indoor and out), changes in glands, overweight and underweight, injuries, poor posture—position sitting and standing, physical defects in spine, hips, shoulders and occupation. If one or more of these conditions is present in addition to the infection, a more rapid and more serious arthritis may follow.

"An adult complaining of pain, stiffness and disability in one or more joints which came on without causing much thought on the part of the patient and which progresses slowly may be assumed to be suffering with chronic arthritis.

Remove Infection Source. "There are the two types, atrophic (where joint actually loses tissue) and the hyperatrophic (where there is extra tissue—bone and gristle—formed in and around the joint)."

After removal of the cause—infected teeth, tonsils—any defects in the patient or his surroundings are corrected such as avoiding cold and dampness, then the usual treatment is rest, heat, passive or active exercise, together with a diet containing plenty of fruit and vegetables but cutting down greatly on starch foods—bread, potatoes, sugar and to some extent also on fat foods—butter, cream, egg yolks and fat meat.

Treatment may be necessary for a long time after cause has been removed because of the need for better circulation to remove wastes from joints and surrounding tissues.

Cleaning Fluid Stops Bleeding

Science Conquers Hemophilia With Oxalic Acid, Ink Remover.

TORONTO.—A startling discovery that the common hat-cleaning fluid and ink remover, oxalic acid, stops the "royal curse" hemophilia and all other kinds of hemorrhage, has been announced here.

The report was made to the Federation of American Scientists for Experimental Biology by Arthur Steinberg and William R. Brown of Kensington hospital, Philadelphia.

At first the assembled biologists gasped in surprise and refused to believe. Oxalic acid is a poison and is known, in test tubes, to do exactly the opposite in helping blood to clot quickly.

Even when the Philadelphians disclosed that more than 500 humans, in more than a dozen large hospitals, have had their hemorrhages stopped, and in some cases their lives saved, with oxalic acid, the biologists continued skeptical.

Process Demonstrated. The fact that a tiny amount of the acid injected into a living body acted exactly the opposite from its test tube ways was finally demonstrated before the eyes of a group of doubters. They went to a University of Toronto laboratory, where acid was taken from the shelf, injected into a rabbit and reduced the animal's blood clotting time from two and a half minutes to one and a half. Hemophilia has been called the "curse of kings" and "curse of the Hapsburgs" because it is common in the Hapsburg royal family and to some extent in the Spanish and Russian royal lines.

Tests Successful. Six American hemophiliacs, the report stated, had their time of stopping hemorrhage cut to less than that of normal persons by injections of oxalic acid.

One was a child who had scratched his throat eating rock candy. His normal time to end bleeding was 45 minutes. The acid reduced this time to 45 seconds.

It was necessary to continue giving the acid from time to time until the wounds healed in these hemophiliacs.

The report told of the acid stopping childbirth hemorrhage where all other remedies had failed. It stopped hemorrhage of "obstructive jaundice" in 15 to 30 minutes, after vitamin K, the new clotting vitamin, had failed. It was used for several different types of "bloodless" operations successfully.

Free Fair Tickets For Blind Visitors

NEW YORK.—Blind visitors to the New York World's fair may enter the gates with an attendant or guide at the price of a single admission ticket, it was announced by Robert B. Irwin, executive director of the American Foundation for the Blind, 15 West Sixteenth street.

The foundation and the New York Association for the Blind have set up a service whereby blind persons, both residents and out of town visitors, may employ guides through the association. The association will furnish accommodations for blind visitors at its residential clubhouse, and the New York Travelers' Aid society will make arrangements for blind visitors desiring other accommodations.

Park Service Inaugurates Charge for Auto Trailers

Following recommendations of the advisory committee on camping, the national park service has announced a revision of fees in federal recreational demonstration areas, inaugurating a trailer charge, but reducing individual fees.

A 30-day trailer permit will cost 50 cents. A charge of five cents a night per camper, and 20 cents per week for the use of tent camp sites is established for organized camps. The regular fee of 25 cents a night per camper for organized camping facilities by groups is reduced to 15 cents. No charge is made in rates for permanent camps used for seasonal organized camping.

Sixty organized camps have been prepared for this season, with more than 1,000,000 camper-days expected, the park service said.

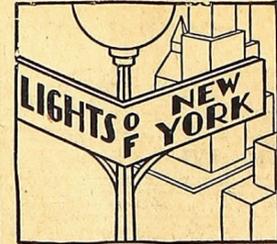

Dog, Missing 14 Months Returns to Mistress

CLEVELAND.—Olga Choma, 20, would give a lot if her dog, Brownie, could talk.

Fourteen months after he disappeared he trotted back in her yard with a new license on his collar.

The license was issued to Mrs. Louisa Micalk, who said the dog was given to her a year ago by a friend. Her friend had found Brownie.

Miss Choma identified Brownie as hers, and at the suggestion of a police prosecutor arbiter, paid Mrs. Micalk $3 for Brownie's "keep."

By L. L. STEVENSON

Spooks: Recently word spread that an old brownstone house rapidly falling into ruin on the outskirts of the Bronx was haunted. The tale ran that the ghost was that of a woman who had been killed there by her husband many years ago. No one saw the ghost but several persons declared that in the darkness of the night they heard unearthly groans. Finally four young men, all deeply interested in psychic phenomena, decided to investigate. Meeting at midnight, they boldly entered the house. What was taken to be a moan or a groan sent three of them out hurriedly. The fourth remained. His companions waited for him breathlessly and just when they had made up their minds to notify the police, out he came. With him he brought not one "ghost" but two. They were a pair of small owls that had evidently decided that a ruined and deserted house made a fine residence.

Zoological: Friends of Medrano and Donna, Hispanic dancers, observed them sneaking in and out of vegetarian restaurants lately. As they seldom eat anything but meat, so much curiosity was aroused that a checkup was made. It seems that on their last trip to Argentina, the dancers acquired a pet ocelot. It's a gorgeous, sleek animal, closely related to the leopard. When young, it makes a playful and entertaining pet. But when it grows older, it reverts to nature and becomes a fierce, meat-eating beast. So, to keep their pet tame and happy, Medrano and Donna have been endeavoring to fool it with a diet of vegetable and meat balls.

Stories: Several correspondents have called attention to the fact that the Hitler death prediction, published here a little while ago, was old. I hadn't happened to hear it before. A week after it appeared, one of the wire services carried a Monterey, Cal., dispatch giving the same yarn with a slightly different twist. Thus I wasn't the only one. Curious how such tales keep bobbing up. Comes to mind the corpse in the subway, the woman who died of leprosy in a hotel bedroom, the old woman hitch-hiker who, when given a lift, disappeared from the back seat, the famous "Jersey devil" and a number of others, always told by the friend of a friend who'd had the experience. And possibly, the foundation for a fine lot of American folklore.

Pictures: Chatted a bit with Miss Betty Broadbent, the "tattooed Venus" in the Strange As It Seems building at the World's fair. It seems that Miss Broadbent, blonde and lovely, has to wear two pairs of stockings whenever she appears in public because of the decorations on her legs. She loves to dance but never can wear an evening gown. She has nice shoulders but there is an American eagle extending from one to the other. Though tattooed from the nape of her shapely neck to her heels, on her body is the picture of only one living person—Colonel Lindbergh. She also declared that when she decided to become a tattooed girl she ordered a large picture first so if she lost her nerve, she couldn't back out.

Salutes: To Katharine Cornell for her excellent portrayal of an actress in "No Time for Comedy" . . . To Katharine Hepburn for her simulation of a girl of wealth in "The Philadelphia Story" . . . To young Sidney Lumet for the way he acts the poet's son in "My Heart's in the Highlands" . . . To that wonderfully garbed grand dame who took three dirty-faced gamins into a swank midtown soda dispensary, loaded them up with ice cream and sent them away each clutching a half dollar . . . To John Chapman for his third avenue columns, which are satires of Broadway gossip columns.

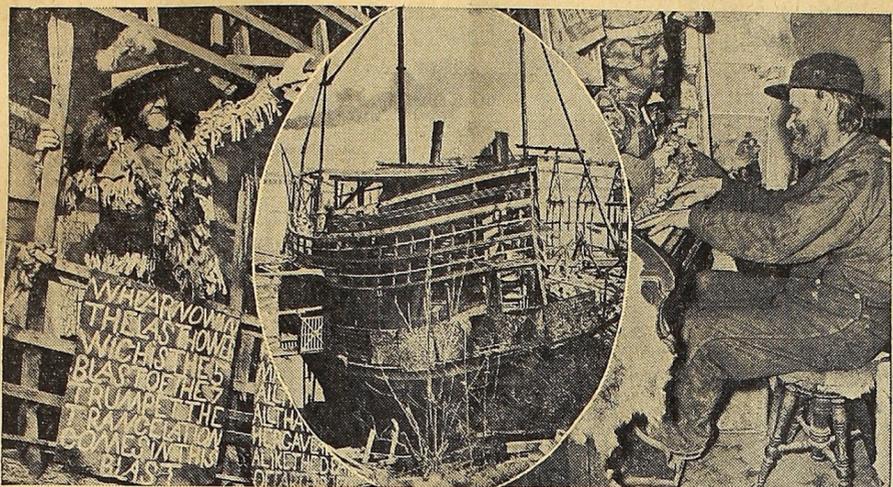

End Piece: Ira Wolfert was driving to a Brooklyn hospital with his two children. Each had to have an immediate tonsil operation. His thoughts on the youngsters, he passed a red light. A policeman stopped him. He tried to explain the circumstances. The officer wouldn't listen. So Wolfert went to traffic court, waited all morning and paid a fine. It's tough to be a cop. And it's tough to be the father of two sick children.

Nazi Medical Cost Rises; Blame Elderly Laborers

WASHINGTON.—A report to the commerce department from the American consul at Frankfurt-on-Main said Germany's medicine bill jumped 8 per cent in 1938 to $104,000,000. The 1938 expenditure per person, the report said, was $2.98, compared with $1.40 in 1929.

"The increased expenditure per person is said to have resulted largely from bringing into employment older and less robust persons, the report added.

Another Deluge? It Won't Bother Ark Owner

One of the famous landmarks at Olympia, Washington's state capital, is the craft known as "Noah's Ark No. 2," which serves as the home of William Greenwood, who built it. Greenwood is convinced that the end of the world is coming, and is prepared for a second deluge. At the left, Greenwood in one of his many "suits," looking like a combination of Buffalo Bill and Bojangles of Harlem. Right: The ark owner dreams up a few hot licks on a rather dilapidated organ in his homemade boat. It is only one of the "19 musics," as he calls them, that he can play.

Mailman May Ask Bird-Housing Project

Tony Plummer, Newport-Balboa, Calif., mailman, peruses his postal guide for the answer to a very baffling question. In a mailbox on his route a mother linnet is rearing four babies. Postal regulations specify that rural carriers must, during the winter, carry ample provisions to feed birds on their routes. But the rules say nothing about housing. Tony has been forced to ring the doorbell and deliver the mail in person, but is thinking of applying for a federal housing project for the youngsters.

Darkhorse Captures First Duck Derby

These Arcadia, Calif., ducks, under the supervision of their attractive trainers, were part of a large field of entries at the first annual duck race at Santa Anita racetrack recently. Members of this feathered quartet were heavy favorites when they waddled to the post, but none of them finished in the money.

HERO HONORED

The Distinguished Service medal was presented recently to Lieut. Arthur F. Anders, right, hero of the bombing of the U. S. gunboat Panay on the Yangtze river in China last year. The award was made by Vice Admiral John W. Greenslade, commander of U. S. battleships.

PAUL PLEADS HIS OWN CASE
LESSON TEXT—Acts 21:40—22:4; 24:14, 26:32.
GOLDEN TEXT—I have lived in all good conscience before God until this day.—Acts 23:1.

"They say. What do they say? Let them say!" So reads the inscription over a doorway of one of the great schools of England. What does it mean? It bespeaks the confidence of a life lived so nobly that the barbs flung out by wicked and slanderous tongues may be faced without fear, in fact, ignored.

The best defense against the attacks of men is the testimony of a good life. Paul had lived such a life, and consequently when the hour came for him to speak in his own defense, he needed but to point to the record. It is significant that his enemies did not deny the facts. They could only cry out, throw off their garments and throw dust in the air while they shouted, "Away with such a fellow from the earth!" (Acts 22:22-24). They did, indeed, manufacture accusations against him, but even the heathen officials knew enough to throw these out of court. The impotent rage shown by wicked men when they run up against the consistent testimony of a true Christian life is one of the strongest of testimonies to the genuineness of faith.

At first glance the portions assigned for our lesson seem somewhat unrelated though taken from the same general narrative. A little study reveals a surprising unity.

I. A Matter of Conviction (21:40—22:4).

Many men and women have no real convictions. They are Republicans or Democrats because their fathers were, and often they have not the remotest idea of what it all means. They are members of a certain denomination because they were brought up in it, and have little knowledge of its teachings and no definite convictions relative to them.

Paul was a Christian because of strong personal convictions of the deepest kind. He was reared in a tradition which made him a bitter persecutor of the followers of Christ, and it was a personal experience of the regenerating grace of God in Jesus Christ which made him into the bond slave of the One he had persecuted. We need more of that kind of know-so and say-so type of faith. Joining a church as one might join a social club means nothing—but following Christ in full and free devotion is everything.

II. A Matter of Authority (24:14-16).

Just as Paul's life was built on faith which was inward, based on personal convictions, it was also a faith that was Godward, based on the authority of His Word. The Jews might call it heresy, but Paul stood on "all things which are written" (v. 14); he had a "hope toward God" (v. 15), and "a conscience void of offence toward God" (v. 16).

Those who ridicule Christianity would have it that faith is really credulity. They say we believe things which we do not know to be true, while hoping that they may somehow prove to be so. A man who reads these notes in his hometown newspaper recently wrote to ask me if I was fool enough to believe the things I wrote. The fact is that we, even as did Paul, have the strongest of all foundations for our faith, namely the Word of God. Men act in faith on the word of their fellow men—their very existence is all bound up in that faith in men whom they hardly know. They believe them, but they will not believe God. I suggested to my correspondent that he read I Corinthians 1:18-25 and 2:14.

Christian faith calls for a personal belief, but that belief is not in any word of man, but in the Word of God, which abideth forever.

III. A Matter of Witness (26:19-23).

Inward, Godward, and now outward in witness—these are the three relationships of Paul's good life. He could plead in his own defense the record of his life, for he had not selfishly cherished a fellowship with God which had lighted and warmed his own soul and then left his fellow man to sit in the chilling darkness of sin. He was obedient to the heavenly vision (v. 19), and preached repentance, faith, and good works to both Jew and Gentile (v. 20), continuing to do so with God's help even in the face of severe persecution.

Some people are just so good that they are "good for nothing." Such men do not reflect the goodness of God. Every attribute of God is an active one. He is love and He does love. He not only is good, but He does good. His children should be like Him. They are not saved only that they may escape hell and enjoy the peace of God. They are saved to serve in the winning of others to Christ. Let us covet such a good life as that which Paul lived. Our bewildered age needs the sanctifying and stabilizing influence of such lives!

Our Education

GOD educates men by casting them upon their own resources. Man learns to swim by being tossed into life's maelstrom and left to make his way ashore. No youth can learn to sail his life-raft in a lake sequestered and sheltered from all storms, where other vessels never come.

Skill comes through sailing one's craft amidst rocks and bars and opposing fleets, amidst storms and whirls and counter-currents. Responsibility alone drives man to toil and brings out his best gifts.—Newell Dwight Hillis.

Britain Traces 1776 Failure
The British attribute their failure in our Revolution to the fact that, according to them, it was largely a naval war and the English fleet lacked its usual dash and enterprise. Their armies failed on land for want of proper support from the sea and Yorktown's surrender was due to the actual, if temporary, loss of the command of the sea, with Paul Jones harrying the English at their own doors.

There COMES a MOMENT

By ELINOR MAXWELL

ARCADIA HOUSE PUBLICATIONS—WNU SERVICE

The dinner Spike served was delicious, and it was fun to be at Phillip Buchanan's apartment after four solid days of no companionship other than Addie's. Both Spike and Oscar greeted her like a long-lost friend, Spike smilingly taking her hat and jacket, Oscar offering his great paw in a handshake of welcome.

The evening had turned cool, and a bright fire of channel coal crackled on the hearth. A table was already set before it when she and Phil arrived, and, shortly after, they were sitting down to English lamb chops, creamed new potatoes and buttered peas. Phil, himself, mixed a spring salad in a wooden bowl, while black coffee percolated in an electric pot on a side table.

"I've already spoken to Anthony Porter about your novel," he said, adding a dash of olive oil to the dressing he was making.

"Is he an agent?" Mary asked, biting into a piece of spongy French bread.

"Best in New York," Phil replied. "If your work's good enough for Porter to handle, you'll go to town."

Eventually, dinner was a thing of the past, and a well-fed Oscar lay asleep on the rug before the fire. Mary settled herself in one corner of the couch, and began "Storm on the Mountain" in a voice which she knew was a bit shrill with excitement.

Phil Buchanan, slumped into a deep chair nearby, filled his pipe from an oilskin pouch, and listened with half-closed eyes. On and on she read, able at last to overcome her nervousness; calmed yet puzzled by Phil's failure to make any comment whatsoever. She hadn't the vaguest idea what he was thinking, and, finally, at the completion of the third chapter, unable to stand his silence any longer, she put down the script.

"Are you thirsty?" Phil asked immediately. "How about a liqueur?"

"Well, yes, I am thirsty—for some water, but that's not why I stopped. I think I'll scream in a moment if you don't say something—anything! Tear the story to pieces, if you like—only don't keep me in such suspense!"

Phil puffed slowly, maddeningly, at his pipe; then removing it from his mouth, smiled lazily at her. "Do you really want to know what I think of 'Storm on the Mountain'?"

"Yes! For heaven's sake, say something!"

"Well," he returned slowly, "it's great! I'm crazy about it. The only thing that worries me is—can you carry on with the same style throughout the story? There's something almost breath-taking about your way of telling this tale. Frankly, I'm—fascinated with it; it's held my interest from the very first page."

Mary looked at him incredulously. "Do you really mean that?" she asked.

"My dear child, haven't I told you the truth about everything else you've written? Now on earth should I suddenly go soft? Naturally, there are a few rough spots that need polishing up; occasional sentences to be interchanged; here and there a word to be substituted; but fundamentally, it's darned good. Wait a second before you go on with that next chapter; I'll get you some ice water."

Phil returned shortly, a tall silver pitcher in one hand, and a tray, holding two tumblers, in the other. He poured some of the cold water into one of the glasses and handed it to her, and she drank from it swiftly, greedily.

"You were thirsty!" Phil said, smiling at her. "More?"

"Yes, please. And then I want to go on with the next chapter."

"All right. And when that's finished if you still crave a few comments, I'll make 'em."

Mary picked up her script, and began to read. At last, the fourth chapter completed, Phil left his chair and came over to sit on the couch beside her. "Now, let me look at that," he said, and Mary obediently placed the script on a table he had drawn up before the couch. "There's a paragraph in the first chapter—about page four . . ."

And bending over the script, their heads almost touching, they worked over the typed pages for the next two hours. Notes on the margin, notes on the back of each page; whole lines crossed out, and the thoughts of the man and girl working in unison, new lines substituted.

"You don't mind my tearing this to pieces in places, do you?" Phil asked, looking askance at the pencil marks that defiled one of the sheets.

"Mind?" Mary returned, her eyes filled with gratitude for Phillip Buchanan who bothered to rewrite the sentences she had composed.

"Mind! Why, Mr. Buchanan, I can't tell you how grateful I am! You're terribly nice to help me . . ."

Phil picked up his highball and, with head thrown back, drained its contents. "Don't be silly! I'm not 'terribly nice' at all. I'm a mean, grasping old man, taking great pleasure in indulging in my favorite sport—the business of discovering new talent! And, Mary, I believe you've got the goods!"

"Well, you've done enough 'discovering' for one night," Mary replied, a smile curving the corners of her mouth. "Look at that clock over there! It's twelve o'clock, and I must go home!"

CHAPTER XIV

The weeks slipped by—weeks that were almost identical in their pattern, yet strangely thrilling for Mary Loring. She was making excellent progress on her novel; the letters from home were fairly cheerful although her father had not yet found a position; she was seeing Phillip Buchanan two or three times a week, and he was, invariably, enthusiastic over each group of the newly-finished chapters which she read to him. This spurred her on to even greater efforts.

March had slid into April, and April had brought the publication of "At Sea" in The National Weekly. With it had come a number of fan letters, a glowing article about her in the Hawkinsville evening paper; and a small but significant spot in Phillip's circle of friends.

Anthony Porter had now read the first fifteen chapters of "Storm on the Mountain," and agreed with Phillip Buchanan that it was "good stuff." "Yes," he said, "I'll market it for you, providing the remaining chapters come up to what I've seen."

It was during the last week of April that Mary heard something rather startling about Jim Ormsby, and after several days of hesitation, decided to write Lelia an air-mail letter, and tell her what she knew.

Phil Buchanan had been her informant. "So Lelia's having a time for herself in Jamaica, is she?" he had asked, using that belligerent tone which he invariably employed when speaking of Jim Ormsby's ex-wife.

"Yes," Mary replied coldly. "Why shouldn't she?"

Phil scowled at her. "Well," he retorted, "it seems a little unfair when Jim's having such rough sledding."

"Rough sledding? What's the matter with Jim Ormsby?"

"Don't you know?"

"Know what? How should I know anything about Mr. Ormsby? Lelia hasn't mentioned him over three times since I've known her—and then, of course, only casually."

"Jim Ormsby's just dropped a lot of money in the Barstow Amalgamated failure," Phil returned, "yet he's kept on paying that ridiculously large alimony he signed up for when they got their divorce."

A shadow passed over Mary's face. "I'm sure Lelia doesn't know about Jim's losses," she said defensively. "She's one of the square-nesses, fairer women I've ever met, and, what's more, I believe she's still terribly in love with Jim."

Phil Buchanan's chin thrust forward angrily. "Well, if she is, now's the time for her to show it! Jim's not only almost completely down and out as to finances, but he's also a very sick man. Ulcers of the stomach, or something. And he's at his Connecticut place, sick, broke and alone except for his houseman."

"Perhaps Lelia ought to know," Mary had thought at the time. "I wonder if I should write and tell her. She might think I'm an officious little prig—yet I just know she's still in love with Jim, and she'll want to do something about it."

It was almost a week, however, before she could make up her mind to write Lelia, and, even then, it was with trepidation that she sent off the air-mail letter.

She and Phil had been seated on the lounge in Aunt Linnie's living room, and, finished with the reading of the last sentence of the last chapter, Mary looked up at the man, a shy unspoken question in her eyes.

"It's great, Mary!" Phil exclaimed. "Tony Porter can't help liking it! He'd be a fool to turn it down. It's got everything a popular novel should have—love and hate, revenge and vindication, conflict and suspense. And it's beautifully written, my dear."

The girl's eyes filled with sudden, unwanted tears of relief and happiness, and, looking at her, Phil thought, "Those eyes are like shining dark pools." Quite without warning, he put his arms about her, and drew her to him. "You little nut!" he said brusquely. "What in the world are you crying about?"

"I'm—I'm so happy!" Mary returned, smiling through her tears. "It's so wonderful to have the novel finished and to hear you say it's all right."

The man's arms tightened about her. "But," he protested, "I've said all along that it was good stuff."

"Well—yes. But you were so terribly insulting about those short stories!"

Phil extracted a big sheer handkerchief from his pocket and dried two shining tears that were sliding down her face. "I was frank about those stories, Mary," he said, and his gray eyes had grown serious, "because I wanted to help you. I suspect I was in love with you even then, but I didn't actually realize it until tonight."

"What!" Mary exclaimed, and, apparently aware for the first time that Phillip Buchanan's arms were about her, hastily drew away from him.

"Yes," he said in a low voice, making no effort to hold her, "yes, I'm in love with you, Mary, but never having been in love with anybody before, I suppose I didn't recognize the symptoms! . . . Darling?"

"Yes, Phil?"

"Will you marry me? I need you awfully. It's just dawned on me how important a part of my existence you've become; how alone and lonesome and lost I'd be without you."

Mary regarded him silently, her eyes dusky with bewilderment and surprise. This man was so different from—the others; so unlike Jerome Taylor and Umberto Balianti, even Christopher Cragg. He was so honorable and straightforward. He loved her; he was, well, rather a wonderful person, and she should be elated over his wanting her for his wife—yet a vision of Chris precipitated itself before her mind's eye.

"Phil," she finally began, "I hardly know what to say. I . . ."

He leaned towards her, and quietly took one of her hands in his. "Then don't say anything just yet," he replied, his speech blurred with a grief tenderness. "Don't give me, editorially speaking, a rejection slip tonight! Wait a while, dearest, and think things over. I shan't even ask you if you care anything at all about me. Perhaps I'd rather not hear. Perhaps I'm just a little afraid."

Mary tried valiantly to regain her equilibrium. "Phil," she began again, "I . . ." But her speech was halted by another blinding thought of Christopher Cragg.

Phil flung aside her hand, and, jumping up from the couch, started to pace the length of the living room. "Don't answer me now," he admonished shortly. "Give yourself some time! I won't force things, my dear. I'll simply wait until you're quite sure—one way or the other . . . Listen! You'll have to get 'Storm on the Mountain' typed, and into Porter's hands right away. I'm going to trot along now. It's twelve o'clock."

Mary got up from the lounge, and followed him into the entrance hall.

"You've been so good to help me with the novel, Phil," she said timidly. "I can't tell you . . ."

He opened the entrance door; then wheeled about and looked at her intently, a worried frown between his eyes. "I hope I haven't upset you, Mary," he said, his voice taut, "but remember I'll be waiting for your decision. There'll never be anyone else in my life, darling!"

Abruptly, he caught her in his arms and kissed her warmly, tenderly, on the mouth. "I love you, dearest!" he murmured.

Then, almost roughly, he released her, stalked to the door, and slammed it behind him. Mary stood where he had left her, as if rooted to the floor.

Unconsciously, her hand went to her lips. Phil had kissed her for the first time—and she had liked his kiss! "Yet how can I," she asked herself. "I'm in love with Christopher Cragg!"

Mary took "Storm on the Mountain" to a public stenographer's to be typed the next morning. Yes, she was told by the efficient young man behind a desk in the outer office, they'd charge twenty-five dollars for three copies, and they'd bind it for her if she wished.

A few minutes later, she was back on Forty-second Street, and the rest of the day before her. She didn't know just what she wanted to do, or where she wanted to go. She was utterly satiated with writing. She felt as if she'd scream if she had to look at another word—even in someone's else novel—for at least another week. She'd like to make a sort of holiday, a gala affair, of today, but a girl can't be particularly festive all by herself.

She wished that Phil had invited her to have lunch with him, but he hadn't even mentioned a future engagement when they had parted the night before. A deep red suffused her face as thoughts of that parting recalled themselves to her mind, and a pleasant sensation flooded her heart as she remembered his kiss.

"I've never felt quite like that before," she admitted to herself, "yet it's so silly for me to be—touched at all when I can't possibly be in love with Phil Buchanan. I wonder if he'll call tonight."

But "Mr. Phil" did not phone, and after eating dinner and reading the Sun, Mary, feeling lonesome for the first time since Linnie Cotswell's departure, went to bed.

had gone too close to the edge! The surry gave a sudden lurch and Dorothy was thrown out into space!

Says Dorothy: "I clutched at the air as it slid past me, like a drowning man clutches at straws. My hands grabbed some bushes growing out from the side of the cliff and I hung on for all I was worth. And there I was, between earth and air, and with nothing to save me from death on the rocks below but my precarious hold on those shrubs."

Dorothy says that time has no meaning under such circumstances. The minutes seemed like years. Her arms were aching and her head was swimming. She could hear Brownie and pulled the surry back on the road after she had been thrown out. For a terrible moment she clung to the bushes, and then her fingers encountered a branch of a small tree growing along the side of the cliff.

She caught it with one hand—then the other—and drew herself up over the cliff to safety. She lay on the ground for a while, sick and weak. Then, having recovered a little, she got up and stumbled to the road.

Brownie and the surry were nowhere in sight. Dorothy started walking toward home. You'd think she'd had enough adventuring for one night—but the big thrill hadn't even started. She had only walked a few steps when she heard a sound that froze her blood in her veins—the baying and yelping of dogs.

Wild Dog Pack Pursues Terrified Dorothy.

Dogs don't sound so dangerous—but Dorothy knew better. A short time before she had seen the body of a boy who had been killed and partially eaten by these same dogs. They were wild animals—descendants of dogs who had run away from their masters to live in the woods and had reverted to type. Every once in a while, in those days, packs of that sort appeared in the woods in various places throughout the country. And they still do, in wild, outlying regions.

A single dog would run at the sight of a man, but in a pack, and in the middle of the winter when they were half starved, they would attack almost anyone. Dorothy knew all too well what would happen if this pack caught up with her. She turned, stumbling, into the woods and ran until she found a tree.

It was a tree with a low fork of its branches—one she could climb. She began pulling herself up into it. The yelping of the pack was coming nearer and nearer. She wasn't a minute too soon. She had hardly clambered into the lower branches when they were on the spot, yelping and snarling at the bottom of the tree.

"And there I was," she says, "perched in the tree while the hunger-maddened brutes howled and snarled below. I still turn sick and cold all over when I think of that moment. The worst part of it was that I was afraid I'd grow weak or faint, or so numb from the cold that I'd fall out. I knew what would happen then."

With the First Streaks of Dawn the Dogs Left.

Hour after hour Dorothy clung to that tree, wondering why her folks didn't miss her and come looking for her. Wondering why they didn't realize something was wrong when the horse and buggy came home without her. She didn't know that old Brownie, turning completely around in his struggles to haul the surry back on the road, had wandered back to town and was spending the night in an open horse shed. Her folks thought Dorothy had decided to spend the night with relatives in town, as she often did, so they didn't worry. And all that night, she crouched in the tree racked by the cold and harried by terrible fears.

As the first streaks of gray appeared in the sky, the dogs slunk off through the woods, and when she thought it was safe she came down and crawled to the road. She couldn't walk, but a farmer, driving to the milk depot, found her in the road and brought her home.

Dorothy says she's written this story for us other adventurers to read, but she adds, "Usually, I don't think of it if I can help it." (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Works of Fifteenth Century Genius on Display in Milan

More than 200 working models of the outstanding inventions of Leonardo da Vinci, one-man phenomenon of the Fifteenth century, are on display at Milan, Italy. A three year, world-wide search for original drawings of Da Vinci's inventions has resulted in this exhibition. A great artist, painter of "The Last Supper," Da Vinci was also an engineer, architect and inventor. Today, more than 400 years after his death, the basic principle of his "differential" is still being used in every automobile. His "pile driver" is copied almost exactly today with a few modern embellishments. The original principles in his rolling mill, printing press, concave glass polisher, olive press, saw mill, pulley system and canal locks are used today the world over.

Production of Plate Glass Prior to 1850 almost no plate glass was produced in this country. Several factors at that time prevented development of such an industry. There were few skilled glass makers. The foreign producers were already firmly established in the market. Transportation of such a product was costly in America because of the lack of good roads.

HEADLINES FROM THE LIVES OF PEOPLE LIKE YOURSELF!

"Down the River Road"

HELLO, EVERYBODY:

Here's a yarn that packs thrills enough to last through a whole night. At least, it did for Mrs. Dorothy Murphy, the Bronx, N. Y. Many years ago, Dorothy was living on a farm in the Chestnut Ridge section near the little town of Dover Plains, N. Y. She set out to drive to the railroad station three miles away, and before she got back she'd had enough adventures to last a lifetime.

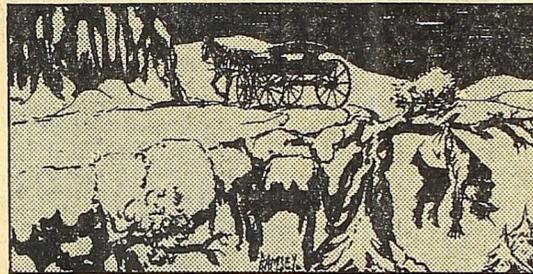

That was in February, 1914. Dorothy was just 18 years old. Her aunt had been spending two weeks with the family and it was she whom Dorothy drove to the train on that cold February evening. Automobiles weren't so common then. What Dorothy drove was a surry, drawn by an old, half-blind horse named Brownie.

The train pulled out of Dover Plains at 6:45 p. m., and Dorothy turned the horse around and headed for home. Already it was dark—a moonless, starless night. The way back lay along a steep, rough, unfenced country road that climbed for nearly three miles before it reached Chestnut Ridge. On one side of it lay thick woods covering an upward slope of the ground, and on the other was a steep declivity. For part of the distance, that declivity straightened out into a tall cliff. And there was nothing to prevent a carriage from going over it, if it approached too close to its edge.

That was Dorothy's first thrill—the prospect of driving over that road in the dark. She hadn't thought darkness would fall so soon that night, and she was scared stiff of that cliff. As she drove along, and the darkness deepened, she couldn't see her hand before her face, and she gave Brownie a free rein, hoping that his instincts would keep him on the road.

Dorothy Felt the Wheels Slipping Over the Edge.

They were going along the top of that cliff, and all was going well. And then, all of a sudden, Dorothy felt the wheels slipping over the edge. Poor, half-blind old Brownie had failed her. He had gone too close to the edge! The surry gave a sudden lurch and Dorothy was thrown out into space!

Says Dorothy: "I clutched at the air as it slid past me, like a drowning man clutches at straws. My hands grabbed some bushes growing out from the side of the cliff and I hung on for all I was worth. And there I was, between earth and air, and with nothing to save me from death on the rocks below but my precarious hold on those shrubs."

What to Eat and Why

C. Houston Goudiss Offers Practical Advice Regarding First Meal of the Day; Some Breakfast-Time Wisdom for Homemakers

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

IF THERE is one meal that can be regarded as more important than any other, that meal is breakfast. It comes after the longest fast and precedes a major portion of the day's work. Thirteen hours elapse between a 6:30 supper and a 7:30 breakfast, and the body engine requires a new supply of fuel before the daily activities are begun. Yet all too frequently this first meal is inadequate in food values, and is gobbled in haste . . . with consequences that may have a far-reaching effect upon health.

Men who set forth after a meager breakfast are licked before the day's work is started. They never seem to get into high gear and they lack the energy to perform their tasks efficiently. Homemakers who find themselves fatigued and irritable before the morning's work is completed may be surprised to learn that their lassitude is due to a skimpy breakfast. And children who go to school after an insufficient morning meal cannot hope to make good grades in their studies. They fatigue quickly, find it difficult to concentrate and easily become cross. Moreover they are apt to experience hunger pangs during the middle of the morning; and when it is time for the noon meal they will either eat too much or will have lost their appetite, thus disrupting the entire food program.

It is desirable to give whole grain cereals a prominent place in the diet. This rule can be followed even when cold cereals are used. For there are many nourishing ready-to-eat cereals made from substantially the whole grain. These appeal to the palate because they are so crisp and appetizing. And they supply important minerals, a good amount of vitamin B and some vitamin G, in addition to energy values.

A Cold Cereal Analyzed
It's interesting to analyze a popular ready-to-eat cereal, made from wheat and malted barley. We find a wide assortment of nutrients, including protein, energy values, phosphorus for the teeth and bones; iron for building rich red blood; and vitamin B which promotes appetite and aids digestion. It has been estimated that a serving of this cereal—three-fourths of a cup—with one-fourth cup of whole milk, will provide an adult with 7 per cent of his total daily requirement of protein; 11.5 per cent of his calcium, 11.2 per cent of his phosphorus; 9.75 per cent of his iron, and a total of 125 calories.

Starting the Day Right
It is therefore essential that every homemaker recognize the necessity for providing a substantial and satisfying breakfast. This is not difficult to do; nor is it necessary to spend a great deal of time in its preparation. When I hear such complaints as "My family won't eat breakfast" or "They're simply not interested in food in the morning," I suspect that the menus are dull and monotonous; and perhaps members of the household have the bad habit of sleeping so late that there is no time to eat properly.

Both situations are easily remedied, and they are closely linked. For if the breakfast menus are made sufficiently attractive, it won't be difficult to persuade every member of the family to rise a little earlier in order to enjoy a substantial, unhurried meal.

A Model Breakfast
A well balanced breakfast includes fruit or fruit juice; cereal; an egg or bacon; bread or toast; and milk, cocoa or cereal beverage for the children, with coffee for the grown-ups. The egg or bacon may be omitted occasionally, for an egg may be included in some other meal during the day. But cereal in some form is usually the mainstay of the breakfast menu, and there are many kinds from which to choose—both hot cereals and cold cereals.

Hot or Cold Cereal
Some people have the notion that cereals must be hot in order to be nourishing. This is a fallacy. For the nutritive value of a cereal is determined by the grain from which it is made and by the manufacturing process—not by whether

Vary the Method of Serving
To help make breakfast interesting, vary the cereal from day to day. Offer a choice of several kinds of packaged ready-to-eat cereals and allow each member of the family to select the one he prefers. Vary the fruit also. And occasionally you may combine fresh, canned or stewed fruit with cereals to make a "cereal sundae." Further variation may be introduced by using brown sugar or honey in place of white sugar. And on occasion the cereals may be baked into muffins, waffles or pancakes.

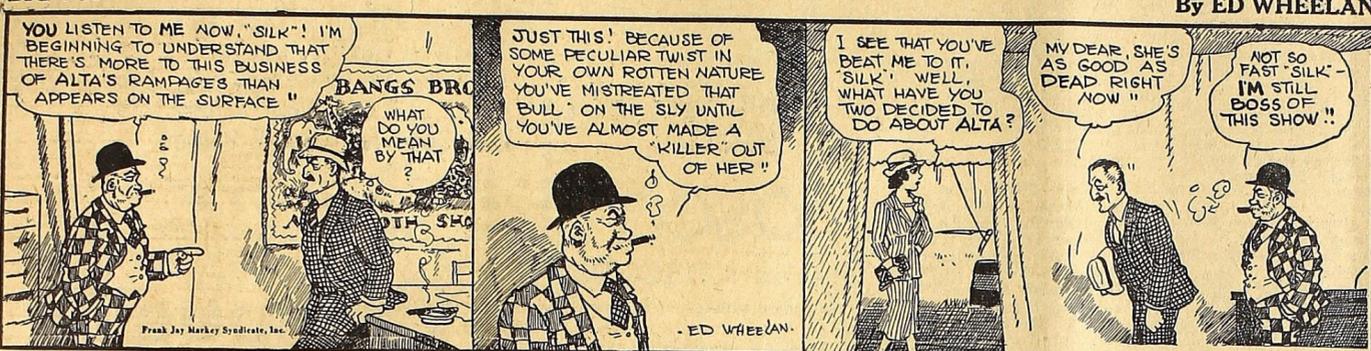

It is also possible to serve the eggs in many different forms—poached, baked, scrambled or in a plain or puffy omelet.

If these suggestions are followed, it should be a simple matter for homemakers to serve tempting wholesome breakfasts that will send their families away from the table well fitted for the day's activities.

Questions Answered
Mrs. S. C.—Yes, it has been observed that there is a special susceptibility to dental decay during adolescence. This may be due to the fact that calcium and phosphorus are required in such liberal amounts for rapid growth. It's advisable to include these minerals in the diet in generous quantities, together with a liberal allowance of vitamin D.

Mrs. A. M. C.—Milk should be the foundation on which every adequate diet is built, for it contains the greatest assortment of nutritive substances of any single food material.

Treatment for Linoleum.—Linoleum will last longer if, instead of washing, you rub it all over with paraffin. This not only cleans, but preserves. No other polish will be needed.

For Discolored Handkerchiefs.—Handkerchiefs that have become a bad color should be soaked for 24 hours in a quart of cold water to which a teaspoonful of cream of tartar has been added. Afterwards rinse and dry.

When Making a Fruit Tart.—Mix a little cornflour with the sugar before adding it to the fruit. This will make the juice like syrup and prevent it from boiling over.

Chocolate Substitute.—When using cocoa in place of chocolate, use three and one-half tablespoonfuls of cocoa for each ounce of chocolate, and add one-half tablespoonful butter.

Use for Newspapers.—Save plenty of clean newspapers for the moth season. Moths loathe printer's ink, so you'll find the papers useful when woolies and blankets have to be stored away.

When Burning Vegetable Refuse.—Put a handful of salt with the rubbish. This will prevent any unpleasant odor.

Polishing Tip.—Wring out your polishing cloth in a pint of water in which a piece of whiting, about the size of a walnut, has been dissolved. Use when dry. This gives a splendid polish to mirrors, brass, and chromium.

Use for Lumpy Sugar.—Lumpy sugar will make a simple syrup good for sweetening if put in water and heated. A few drops of vanilla may be added.

Cane Cleaner.—Wicker or cane garden armchairs if dusty or dirty after being stored away during the winter, should be scrubbed with strong soda water and then rinsed and left to dry in wind or sun. This will tighten up sagging seats as well as clean them.

Our Constitution

The American Constitution is, so far as I can see, the most wonderful work ever struck off at a given time by the brain and purpose of man. It has had a century of trial; under the pressure of exigencies caused by an expansion in point of rapidity and range; and its exemption from formal change, though not entire, has certainly proved the sagacity of the constructors and the stubborn strength of the fabric.—William E. Gladstone, 1878.

Owl's Mating Song
The mating song of the great horned owl is a succession of resonant bellowings in a single key—"Who, who, hoo-hoo, who"—quite variable as to length and form. Besides this the bird occasionally indulges in a sepulchral laughter, hoo, hoo, hoo, hoo, hoo, hoo—which arouses anything but mirthful feeling in the listener.

two. Mallon issued one base on balls as did Franks.

There were several good fielding plays during the game. In the seventh Smith came in on Franks' slow roller down the third base line scooping it up and throwing him out at first by a fraction of a step. Staudacher, after booting his first fielding play, handled six chances without a blemish. Roberts made several catches of fly balls which looked like extra base clouds and helped hold the local's score down. "Kip" Zellweg snared a couple of line drives which looked like a lot of trouble starting for the local boys.

Next Sunday, Turner, the league leaders, who haven't lost a game this season, will invade the Athletic Field and cross bats with the local team. Tawas City is on the way up after a rather bad start. Let's keep them climbing. The boys have found themselves and last Sunday showed a good brand of ball in the pinches. Turner and Tawas, in past seasons, have had some exciting games, and this year's should be no exception. The game is scheduled to start at 2:30 p. m.

Do not burn the nest from the tree with a torch as the limb is seriously injured and the worms drop to the ground only to return to the tree a little later on.

"A close relative to the eastern tent caterpillar is the forest tent caterpillar whose life cycle and feeding habits are almost identical to those above described. However the forest caterpillar does not build a tent but seeks protection by accumulating in large masses upon a limb or in a crotch where wind and rain are less severe. This species prefer aspens, poplar, oak, maple and birch to most other trees, and at the present time are defoliating thousands of acres of wood land in this and other counties of Michigan. The forest tent caterpillar may be identified by the interrupted row of lozenge-shaped white marks down the middle of the back in place of the continuous white mark along the back of the apple tree larva. According to entomologists of the Huron National forest this pest will within a few years develop disease and parasites to remove it from severe damage to our forests. It is also their belief that even though the trees are defoliated annually for four to six years that only small numbers will be lost. However they recommend the protection of park and ornamental trees by spraying with arsenate of lead at the rate of 2½ pounds to 50 gallons of water and the use of a tree tangle foot band or a cotton band two inches wide tied about the trunk of the tree. "Limited quantities of cutworm and grasshopper poison bait may be secured free of charge at the county agricultural agents' office in the court house at Tawas City."

Night Chant Halts Disease
A Navaha Indian who's unlucky enough to have a bad dream or to spit accidentally on an ant hill is running the risk of a serious illness, the Field Museum Bulletin relates. So he gets the medicine man to hold a "night chant," a nine days' ceremony and feast, which blocks the disease-on-the-way.

Fresh Air and Warmth
The public health service says that fresh warm air of a proper degree of moisture and free from appreciable draft is now recognized as essential to indoor workers. The old idea that a cold room necessarily contains fresh air and that comfortably warm rooms necessarily contain bad air has been discarded.

Napoleon of Italian Descent
Napoleon, the great French leader, was not a Frenchman by birth, but was of Italian blood and descent, says Pearson's London Weekly. Both his father and mother were Italian, and they lived on the island of Corsica, which had long been Italian before Napoleon's birth but became annexed to France in 1768.

Really Helping the Weak
The best way in which the strong can help the weak is by making them strong enough to help themselves.

Largest Salt Lake
The Caspian sea, the largest salt lake in the world, has no connection whatever with the ocean. Its surplus waters are lost through exaporation alone.

Naming Michigan
Michigan's first families gave the state its name, according to the Ottawa Indians of the region, and at the same time expressed their high regard for the state as a garden spot. "Place of clearings in the forests for gardens," is the word from whence Michigan got its name, they say. Contracted to Mish-a-gon it means simply clearing or garden. The Indians have used this region for their farms since prehistoric times, many of them wintering in the Kankakee river valley in Illinois.

Insanity
Most cases of insanity are not inherited directly from parents. Studies reveal that 80 out of every 100 insane persons come from mentally sound mothers and fathers.—Collier's Weekly.

City of Jeanne d'Arc
Fouen, France, a busy center for weaving, spinning and the manufacture of handkerchiefs, is the city of Jeanne d'Arc. There is the old castle in which she was imprisoned while she awaited trial; a tablet on the Archbishop's palace states that she was tried there, and a slab in the marketplace marks the site of the stake where she was burned.

If fire should strike your property tonight would you be properly prepared? Insure today.

FACTS FAVOR FORD

1 The 1939 Ford V-8 is a beautiful, modern motor car. Its 85-horsepower engine gives you economical, well-balanced performance over the entire speed range—and the 60-horsepower engine is even more economical.

2 The structural strength of the Ford car—frame, bracing, axles, body—makes not only for safety, but durability and long life.

3 Ford hydraulic brakes are exceptionally large and strong in proportion to car weight.

4 The Ford car is stabilized for comfortable riding. Its springbase, the distance between front and rear suspension, is 123 inches. Seats are toward the center, perfectly balanced. The car does not bob or dip and can have very little sway.

These four points—power, strength, safety, comfort—are by far the most important essentials in any motor car. They form the basic value of your investment.

With this solid foundation to build on, the Ford V-8 has been made beautiful, spacious, easy to drive. It is richly upholstered and has all the modern features which add to the luxury and pleasure of motoring.

You can see these things when you take a trial drive, but do not forget that the main value is in the things you do not readily see—quality of materials, precision of manufacture, fundamental engineering.
