Turner-Tawas City Play for Championship Sunday

TURNER WINS FIRST GAME IN PLAYOFF

Exhibit Heated Contest In Last Sunday's Game

Turner defeated Harrisville last Sunday at the Tawas City Athletic Field by the score of 6 to 5 in the first game of a play-off series to break the three-way tie with Turner, Harrisville and Tawas City for first place in the American Division.

The game was a heated contest throughout and with Harrisville taking their turn at bat in the last half of the ninth inning, trailing by three runs they staged a last inning rally in which the tying run was thrown out at the plate by Owen Reid ending the game and starting a free-for-all fight. Here's what happened in that inning: Gunderson, first batter up, drew a base on balls. Pfeister singled, Holmes hit an infield fly which wasn't called by the umpires, McPherson and Whitehouse pulled an Alfonso Gaston act and the ball was dropped by McPherson, loading the bases with no one out. Teeple fanned. George forced Holmes at second, Snyder to McPherson, Gunderson scoring. George stole second. Foster singled to center scoring Pfeister, and George was thrown out at the plate with a perfect throw by Owen Reid. In an attempt to break up the play at the plate, George wrapped his arm around Szaryov's neck where the latter happened to be sporting a carbuncle and didn't care whether he was hurt or not as George went about it anyhow, and showed his resentment by throwing a handful of fists toward Mr. George's jaw, and that was the spark which started players and spectators to exchange punches and jostle one another around, everybody was hitting or pushing anyone who happened to be within reach. The young riot was eventually quelled with very little if any damage being done.

"Lefty" Gardner was souping them over the platter for Turner, Herbie Holmes was curving them across for Harrisville. Both pitchers turned in a good performance. Gardner allowed seven hits and Holmes was found for ten. The Harrisville hits were all singles, while the Turner collection included four doubles and a triple. Each team was guilty of five miscues which aided in the scoring for both teams.

Next Sunday, September 10, Tawas City and Turner will cross bats at the Tawas City Athletic Field. The winner of this game will be recognized as the American Division champions and will represent their circuit in a three game series with Sterling, 1939 winners in the National league, to determine the Northeastern Michigan league championship.

This game should be another thriller with the American Division title at stake and the heated contests these two teams have staged in the past, the fans should see everything which it takes to create a good ball game. Let's all come out and see this important game. Last Sunday's spectators witnessed a hard fought battle which included some timely hitting and sparkling fielding. The feature of the game was a diving catch by Owen Reid of a line smash over second off the bat of Walt Ayling in the fifth inning. Teeple and Cuyler of Harrisville and Snyder of Turner made some "big league" stories on balls which looked like sure base hits. What's in store for this Sunday? Tawas City will be out there fighting to win the championship and make it two in a row, Turner will be trying for the honors which were theirs two years ago. The game is scheduled to start at 2:30 sharp. The same three umpires will be calling them again Sunday.

Detroit Man Drowns At Van Eitan Lake

John Abbott, age 36, of Detroit was drowned late Sunday afternoon at Van Eitan Lake. The body was recovered at nine o'clock Monday morning by members of the Coast Guard. Abbott, his wife, daughter, Joan, and Dick Henrick of Detroit and Miss Nona Foster of Farmington who had been vacationing at the lake, were out fishing. While lifting the anchor the rope broke and Abbott fell backwards into the water. Henrick attempted to rescue Abbott but the drowning man pulled him under. Henrick struggled free and dove to find him. Sheriff John Moran, State Troopers and the Coast Guard worked until late Sunday night but were unable to locate the body. It was located Monday morning.

County Women to Meet At Hemlock Church

A meeting for all women in Iosco county is scheduled to be held at two-thirty p. m. Thursday, September 14, at the Baptist church on Highway 55, six miles west of Tawas City. This meeting is called by the Child Health Council to meet Miss Edna Hamilton, Director of Nurses for the Children's Fund of Michigan. Miss Hamilton has a very important message for the ladies of the county; and the child health committee members are very anxious to have as many women as possible attend this meeting. Any mother who has her child's welfare in mind cannot afford to miss this meeting.

ALL SCHOOLS WILL BE OPEN BY SEPT. 10

Commissioner Rollin Tells About New School Laws

With one exception, all Iosco county schools are now open, states County School Commissioner Russell Rollin. Osceola will begin their school next Monday. "With the opening of our schools," said Mr. Rollin, "comes many of the old problems as well as many new ones. Among these problems, we think the problem of the safety of our children is among the most important. We all must remember that many hundreds of these children are now daily crossing and re-crossing our streets and highways and it is well that we drivers of these same streets and highways use added precautions so that we may not be among those responsible for the loss of a life in our county." IOSCO BOY! WINS STATE FAIR HONORS

Five Win Prizes in Ogemaw County Fair Exhibits

Irving Youngberg of Burleigh township successfully completed his summer 4-H Club project, in lamb feeding, this week by exhibiting a pen of three fat lambs at the Michigan State Fair in Detroit. According to County Agricultural Agent W. L. Finley Irving's pen of three lambs won second place in competition with lambs exhibited by 4-H boys from other counties of the state. An individual lamb selected from the pen placed third in the 4-H Club Class and fifth in the open class. The pen of three was also placed third when shown in the open grade wether class among both wethers fitted and shown by both adults and 4-H Club boys.

The Youngberg lambs won the honor of competing at the Michigan State Fair when they were selected for third place in a class of seven pens at the Ogemaw County Fair at West Branch the week before last. The three top pens from this show being selected for exhibit at the State Fair. The first two places were taken by boys from Ogemaw county, while fourth place was taken by Wm. St. James of Reno township and fifth place by David Webb of Plainfield township. Sixth and seventh places were held by Ogemaw county boys also. While in the individual fat lamb class at West Branch the lamb shown by Wm. St. James was fourth, David Webb's fifth and Irving Youngberg's sixth. Other Iosco county boys who competed in the West Branch show were Merton and Gayle Kelly of Reno township. The 4-H Colt Class was topped by a Percheron gelding, shown by Gayle while his older brother, Merton, also with a percheron gelding one year old, occupied the second possession of the class. We as agricultural boosters in Iosco county sincerely hope that this lesson taught by better feeding of livestock and better showmanship will induce more boys to fit their lambs, colts and calves so that they too will be selected to represent Iosco county at Michigan State Fair in the fall of 1940.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS BY HENRY W. PORTER

British-German Settlement Of Polish Issue Under Way; 'Appeasement' a Solution

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

A self-explanatory map of the European continent, describing the strength of the Berlin-Rome axis with that of Great Britain, France and Poland. The strength in man power, planes and ships is shown by the inserted figures on the map.

EUROPE: Appeasement?

A move to "appease" Hitler is definitely under way, according to reports from London and Berlin, as this is written. Continued preparations for war, however, are reported from Poland, France and other European centers. The seeming contradiction of peace talk in the midst of these warlike maneuvers was not explained officially. Arrangements for a settlement between Great Britain and Germany over the Polish issue were well advanced, it was said in diplomatic circles.

Pressure was being put on Poland from London to accept the preliminaries which Hitler demands as a basis of settlement with the British. Hitler demanding Danzig and the Polish corridor before entering negotiations. It was hoped in London to compel Poland to contact Berlin immediately.

Berlin reported that Hitler had signed a treaty with Albert Forster, chief of the state of Danzig. The city is already virtually in possession of Hitler's men.

Hitler has named a special six man council for the defense of Germany. The council was given blanket authority to act on its own initiative, but he still may issue decrees and direct legislation through the reichstag.

Other developments in Germany included the authoritative statement that the German government "welcomes with extraordinary sympathy the offer of mediation by Queen Wilhelmina and King Leopold." The Germans indicated, however, mediation would not be considered pending the outcome of the discussion with Britain.

What is going on now is believed to be a war of propaganda, otherwise a gigantic game of bluff, with the game going to the best bluffer finally. However, Europe breathed a little easier and the hope was expressed that war again has been dented.

An inexplicable aspect of the situation is the French censorship. French papers reach London with whole columns of white space marked "deleted by censor," just as in the World War. No communication by telephone with Paris is possible, and yet from London one can telephone easily to Rome, Berlin and other parts of Europe.

No effect was given in London apparently to the appeal of Warsaw to Britain regarding the concentration of German troops on the border.

Continuing their war propaganda, Germans assert that "a cave-in is unavoidable because 500,000 Russians are threatening Poland's eastern flank while her western and southern borders are threatened by German forces preparing a formidable military plunger movement that can be started at a moment's notice."

Developments leading up to the British offer for "appeasement" of Hitler were merely a repetition of the guessing and rumors that had kept the world in a turmoil.

New barriers in the way of a peaceful settlement of the Polish crisis were raised by Hitler in his latest note in the exchange of communications between the German dictator and Chamberlain. Diplomatic circles which knew the contents of the reply, were frankly alarmed. Hitler again demanded the unconditional surrender of Danzig and the Polish corridor before he was willing to discuss international problems with other powers. Now he adds to his previous demands return of the former German lands of Posen and Polish Upper Silesia.

While England and Germany are negotiating directly, Germany paid little attention to the efforts of the queen of the Netherlands and the king of Belgium in offering their services as mediators.

Events took an uglier turn in London while the Hitler note was being discussed. Aroused by the heavy concentration of troops on its southern frontier the Polish government decided to invoke the British guarantee under the mutual assistance pact. The Polish communique said:

"The occupation of Slovakia by German troops represents an act of aggression against Polish vital interests and is considered a threat to Polish security."

Prime Minister Chamberlain dumped the whole question of war or peace into Hitler's lap in an address in the house of commons. The tense but cheering members were told that Great Britain again had made it plain to Adolf Hitler its determination to fulfill its obligations to Poland and added that "the issue of peace or war is still undecided."

"We shall hold fast the line which we have laid down," he declared, as the house echoes with tremendous cheering. "We still will hope and still work for peace."

Without disclosing the details of the exchange, Chamberlain declared Great Britain delivered "our final answer" to a communication from Hitler; that "we have made plain that our obligations to Poland will be carried out," and that "at this moment the position is that we are waiting for Hitler's reply." The prime minister spoke in a firm and assured voice. At times almost buoyant, such as when he said: "At any rate we have not had to begin here by issuing ration cards"—an obvious reference to Germany.

Speaking for the liberal opposition, Sir Archibald Sinclair said: "At this moment I agree with his majesty's government that they should have solid support of all peace loving people in this country. The last word rests with Herr Hitler."

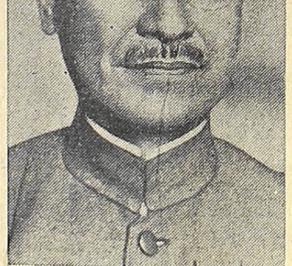

Offer of their "good offices" for an effort to mediate the Poland-German crisis from King Leopold of the Belgians and Queen Wilhelmina of The Netherlands, was reported in a quarter close to the French foreign office. The offers were made to France, Great Britain, Germany, Italy and Poland. France promptly accepted, it was said.

JAPAN: New Cabinet

Gen. Nobuyuki Abe has succeeded in forming a new Japanese cabinet in succession to Baron Hiranuma, who resigned over the German-Russian pact. General Abe has surrounded himself with political veterans for the task of restoring domestic unity while avoiding international pitfalls. For the present General Abe announced that he would retain the post of foreign minister.

The new government is expected to pursue an isolationist policy. In line with this, authoritative circles believed that the ambassadors to Rome and Berlin, Toshio Shiratori, and Maj. Gen. Hiroshi Oshima, who had advocated outright military alliance with the axis, would be replaced.

BUSINESS: Outlook Good

War conditions are accepted today as a nominal business factor rather than a series of temporary economic shocks as has been the case in the past, according to the magazine Banking. The magazine reported a general hopeful outlook for business in spite of the war conditions.

"Business is beginning to see daylight and solid ground, although still wary," it stated. "Improvement has been fairly general, but statistically, trade still falls short of levels reached two years ago."

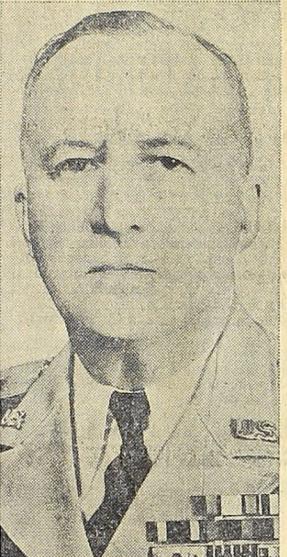

The magazine cited four factors which, it said, are responsible "for quite a noticeable spirit of hopefulness on all sides."

"Of these," it stated, "one is the perfectly obvious change for the better that has come over public opinion regarding business. A second factor is the unexpected nature of the improvement and consistent activity of the summer months. Third on the list of encouraging items is the low point of most inventories," it said, adding that the present business reaction to war conditions as a normal business factor constituted the fourth.

U. S. ARMY: Weakness

Recent army maneuvers at Plattsburg, N. Y., revealed such serious deficiencies in training, equipment, leadership and administration of the nation's armed forces that Lieutenant General Drum declared conditions were inexcusable and deplorable. General Drum's citation of errors and mistakes made in the field included the following:

1—Extensive additional training is needed by the National Guard, the organized reserves, and the regular army units in large-scale actions where they function together.

2—The army is dangerously undermanned and the shortage of modern arms is critical.

3—There is a serious breakdown of supply services essential to the maintenance of an army in the field.

4—Staff work has not been speeded up to cope with the speed and great territorial range of mechanized forces.

General Drum found that neither officers nor men receive enough experience in operating as parts of a large unit. The staff work was particularly poor as a result.

PANAMA CANAL: Safeguarded

Extraordinary steps have been taken to guard against espionage, and possible sabotage at the Panama canal, the nation's lifeline of defense. Washington officials stressed that the assignment of additional guards at strategic locks and control houses is purely precautionary and that there has been no indications of foreign plots against the canal.

The safeguards coincide with start of a huge defense program, including construction of another air base, extra anti-aircraft and coast batteries, enlarged garrisons and supplementary locks. The posting of extra guards at vital spots along the canal is part of the general preparedness developed by the army and navy to meet an emergency. Details of the new vigilance measures are being treated as military secrets.

Similar steps to guard against foreign spies and sabotage have been taken during recent months in aircraft factories, arsenals and other government or private plants engaged in manufacture of war materials.

INDUSTRIES: War Program

The war resources board is making an intensive study of America's plan for industrial mobilization in case of war. Edward R. Stettinius, chairman of the board and top man of the United States Steel corporation, is charged with the responsibility of seeing that the nation's industrial machine can be swiftly changed over from meeting the needs of peace to meeting the needs of war. Helping Stettinius are several prominent industrialists.

Catarrh May Result From Bent Septums

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON

MOST physicians pay little or no attention to bends in the septums—the partition between the two nostrils. As a matter of fact, a nose with a straight septum is almost rare. It is estimated that perhaps one in every five or ten is about the average finding.

The reason little or no attention is paid to a bent or deflected septum is that the physician figures that there is no difference in air space between 50 and 50 each side in a straight septum and 60 and 40 with a bent septum; they both add up to 100. This, of course, refers to slight bends or deflections.

What about severe bends or deflections of the septum? Can the severe deflection cause symptoms?

When the deflection is so severe that it actually closes up one side of the nose there will not be any air going to or coming from the lungs on that side. This means lack of ventilation of the sinuses on that side of the head and lack of draining of any mucous from the sinuses.

Dr. W. S. Syme of Glasgow, whom I have quoted before, in the British Medical Journal, tells us that middle ear and catarrhal conditions are found very often with deflection of the septum. When severe, it may cause pain by pressing against the side wall of the nose. However, the blockage of the little opening from sinus into the nose prevents mucous or pus from draining out into nose and throat, causing severe pain from pressure. In these cases the bend or deflection is high up in the nose due to injury—football, boxing, or a fall.

The point about this is that while most of us have a bent septum and no treatment is required, in cases of sinus trouble, catarrh or middle ear conditions where good ventilation and drainage is necessary, one with a bent septum is more likely to have severe pain and require operation than one whose septum is straight.

A bent or deflected septum, even if badly deflected, which is causing no symptoms requires no treatment.

Causes of Chronic Arthritis

Despite our knowledge of preventing rheumatism—arthritis—by removing infection from teeth, tonsils, sinuses, gall bladder, together with proper rest, diet and exercise, there are many cases which become chronic before infection has been removed. The infection in joints has caused changes that often cannot be repaired or corrected and the patient is afflicted with stiffness, pain, and some degree of deformity.

In speaking of these cases of chronic arthritis, Dr. Robert T. Phillips, Boston, in the New England Journal of Medicine, tells of the help that can be given by "physical" medicine or treatment—rest, exercise, massage, and electricity.

Dr. Phillips points out that rest is needed by chronic arthritis because of the long drain on their nervous and physical energy caused by the infection. The suggestion is an hour's rest after meals. Two positions are taken. For the first 30 minutes the patient lies on his back, stretched well out, a pillow under lower back and the knees but not under the head. For the second 30 minutes he turns face down, supported by a pillow placed crosswise under his abdomen.

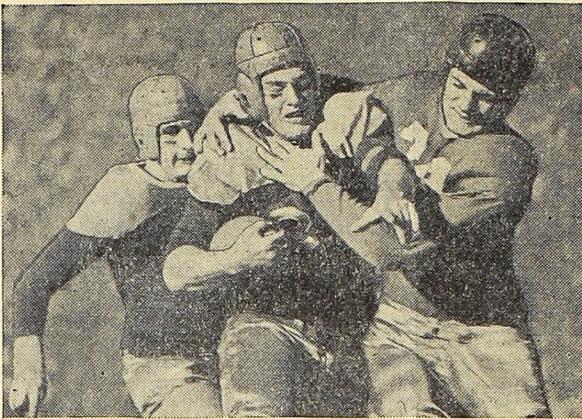

Joints Should Be Straight. In regard to exercise, arthritis must not allow joints to remain in a bent position. No matter what the degree of arthritis, the patient can carry out some exercise—lying, standing, sitting, walking—to move his joints and strengthen his muscles.

In regard to heat Dr. Phillips suggests the use of hot water applications by means of some woolen material covered with a towel or blanket to hold in the heat. The massage is done by the use of long, smooth strokes in a direction toward the heart as it is the return circulation of the blood that needs help. If pain is present, massage should be gentle. Heat should be applied before or during the massage.

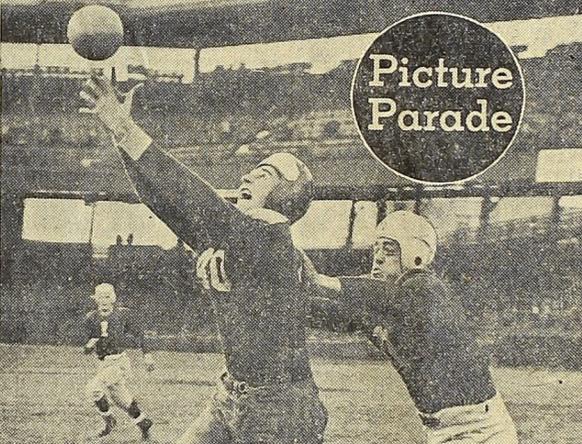

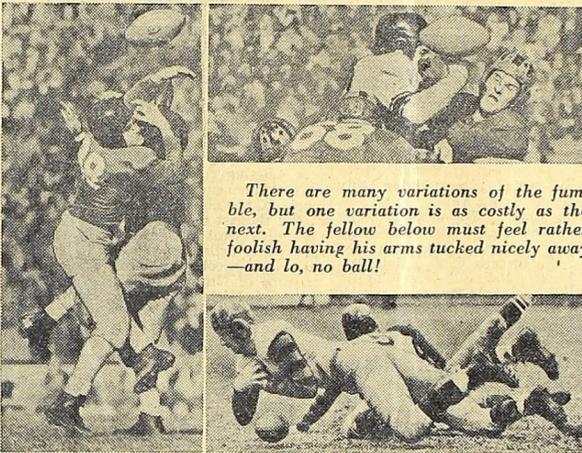

In regard to electricity, it is unfortunate that physicians do not give more attention to acquiring the knowledge of the proper methods of using electricity in the treatment of chronic arthritis as it gives excellent results in skillful hands. When proper treatment by electricity is not available, the use of the other "physical" forms of treatment—rest, heat, exercise, and massage—faithfully carried out will give satisfactory results.

AUTUMN SPORTS Football Is Serious Business But Here's the Funny Side

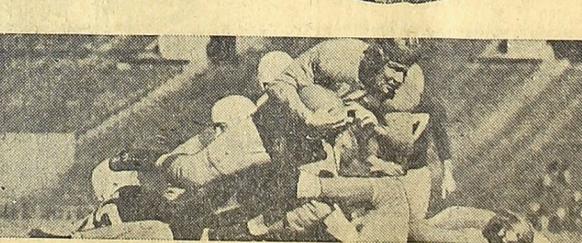

Each autumn, at risk of smashing their cameras, sports photographers get a classic assortment of pictures from the gridiron. They catch beautiful action plays, freak accidents, fumbles, penalty plays and quite a bit of rough stuff generally. The above pose, for example, is not one of endearment. Jack Williams of Santa Clara is merely using a high tackle to down St. Mary's giant, Mike Klotovich. Jack is probably saying, "Beg your pardon, Mike." And Mike answers, "Not at all, Jack" . . . maybe, but we doubt it.

I'll huff and I'll puff and I'll shove—and blow your ballplayer down. This is one way to break up a passing attack, but don't try it while the referee's watching. The trick, preserved for posterity by your photographer, cost Georgetown a neat 15-yard penalty in its game with Hampden-Sidney last autumn. Yes, Sylvia, it's against the rules. But Georgetown won 51 to 0, anyway.

Right: Spectators get it, too. Here is Miss Thelma Quinn, Tennessee cheer leader, after being k.o'd when she got mixed up with a bunch of players in last year's Orange Bowl game. Which proves the safest place to watch a game is over your radio.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—On his record, it would appear that Gen. Edward Smigly-Rydz, Poland's strong man, might be more inclined to fight Germany without Russia's aid than with it. He made his career fighting the Bolsheviks, and news dispatches of the last few weeks have hinted that he has been considerably embarrassed at being drawn into the new apparently broken fellowship with Russia. It has been clear that being saved by Russia was the least and last of his ideas.

He is beyond doubt the ablest of Poland's military leaders, and, once the bell rings, there is no question that he can and will fight, as he proved in the campaigns to free Poland and in his forays against early-day Bolshevik Russia.

He never has quite come through as a dictator. In 1936 there was one of those "ideological" build-ups in which he was to emerge as the head of reconstructed Poland. Handsome and imposing, of dominant bearing, he looked the part, but he couldn't seem to manage the big talk necessary for the job. The best they could get out of him was something to the general effect that nobody would ever be allowed to take a single button from Poland's robe.

On August 6 of this year, when it appeared that Germany might just take the robe and leave the button, he was expected to make a sizzling speech at Craow. His audience was howling for a knockout punch, but the speech was mostly shadow-boxing, with nothing specific about what he proposed to do about Danzig.

Fifty-four years old, with an engaging personality, he has been a popular dinner guest and holds the honorary presidency of the Polish academy of letters. The old Marshal Joseph Pilsudski, nearing the end of his life, anointed the general as his successor. He has been supremely efficient in his army job, but, as a strong man, has been somewhat overshadowed by the showier, more facile and adroit Josef Beck, the foreign minister. But fighting is his main business and knowing observers figure that, talking little, he is more apt to fight.

A MICHIGAN friend of this writer reports that Gov. Luren D. Dickinson's war on sin may turn out to be good political medicine out there.

War on Sin While big-town political leaders are said to be somewhat embarrassed by the aged governor's alarmed discovery of wickedness in high places, the word is that his forces have been entrenched and widened since he let loose about the drinking and dancing orgies of the Albany conference of governors. His Bible class at Eaton, Mich., is crowded to the doors and he is besieged with requests for lectures and participation in revival campaigns. Currently he tells a gathering of Chicago and Detroit "pupils" that this Albany conference was pretty much like Belshazzar's feast and that our Babylonian wastrels will drag us down if we don't mend our ways.

For 25 years, Mr. Dickinson has held in fee simple the anti-sin vote of Michigan. It has held steadily around 200,000 votes, undivided in its allegiance in his repeated forays against evil, chief of which has been his still continuing prohibition battle. He is a spare, bald evangel of righteousness, his friendly eyes glinting behind his octagonal rimmed glasses when he is aroused, his meager frame shaken with pietistic fervor. He employs much of the lexicon of the late Dr. Parkhurst of New York, in assailing sin, and some of his philippics seem to voice again the pious horror of the author of "New York by Gaslight," written 60 years ago.

He is a native of New York, born near Lockport in Niagara county. His parents removed to Eaton, Mich., when he was a small boy. There he still lives, happily engaged with his Methodist church Bible class, and, more recently, with the state of Michigan and, unhappily for his peace of mind, in a bout with evil which he never knew existed before.

Shays's rebellion of 1786 jolted the big-town politicians with a realization of what a mixture of agrarian discontent and old-time religion may amount to. In Governor Dickinson's compact voting phalanx, things are something like that. His allied conservative Republican organization appreciates all this.

Lights of New York

by L. L. STEVENSON

Mrs. Ida Harris is 60 years old. For many years she has been selling newspapers at a stand at Wall and William streets. Every day except Sunday, through the heat of summer, the cold of winter, snow, sleet and rain, she is at her stand from seven in the morning until ten at night. Her patrons are her friends. Many men and women of the financial district stop for a little chat with her when they are not too hurried. Forty years ago she came to this country from Lithuania. She married and eventually her husband became an assistant superintendent in the state employment office. But there were children; two boys and a girl, to whom she wished to give educational advantages she had not enjoyed herself. That caused her to take up paper selling. Six years ago, her husband died. Since then the newsstand has been her sole source of income.

When her children were small, Mrs. Harris, of course, did not have much time to herself even on her own day off. But because she liked to make things with her hands, with stiff paper and crayons, she produced paper flowers which gave her much pleasure. Her children are now grown. One son is a mechanic. Another is a pharmacist. Her daughter, who has two degrees from Fordham university, is a school teacher. The daughter's husband is a dental mechanic. Work is scarce these days. Another baby is expected so the daughter isn't teaching. That means that Mrs. Harris is practically the sole support of another family. But that doesn't keep her from using her hands on Sundays. Only now, instead of making paper flowers, she does sculpturing.

When Mrs. Harris decided to take up clay modeling, she didn't have any money to spare for tools. Undaunted, she made some out of wood. The kitchen table was good enough for a bench. Clay isn't expensive. Each Sunday morning, right after breakfast, she goes to work and doesn't quit until late in the afternoon. She especially likes to model hands. Hands have much character and tell more than words, she holds. When she does something that affords her pleasure, she takes it to her newsstand that she may study it for defects while selling papers. Recently, a member of the Sculptors guild happened to see some of her specimens. And thus, the biggest day of her entire life.

When the Sculptors guild held its annual outdoor show at Park avenue and Thirty-ninth street, Mrs. Harris was present. Not merely as one of the many spectators, but as a guest of honor. From the guild, she received a set of the finest sculptor's tools that could be bought and a hundred pounds of the best modeling clay was sent down to the Peck Slip apartment which she occupies with her daughter's family. All that was extremely thrilling. But there was still a bigger thrill for the woman who sells papers in Wall street—Adolph Wolff, well-known sculptor, chatted with her about art more than an hour. Then he modeled her head. The head, with the title "The Vegus of Sixty," will be a part of his forthcoming exhibition.

After her day of days, Mrs. Harris went back to selling papers and she's still at Wall and William day after day. Her Sundays, however, are spent with her beloved clay. Clay is her pleasure. The newsstand is her independence. And there are seven grandchildren who must have an education. She is determined that they have it, for to Mrs. Harris education is the very best thing one can get out of life.

Bad Girls Are Just Three

Times as Bad as Bad Boys
PHILADELPHIA. — Delinquent girls are three times as bad as boys, in the opinion of Dr. Henry Gideon, head of the department of compulsory attendance of the Philadelphia board of education. He said: "It takes the efforts of three boys to be as bad as one bad girl. When you have a bad girl on your hands you have a real problem." Gangs of delinquent boys in Philadelphia have been largely wiped out, and the problem is now one of individuals, he added.

Beacons Glean Adown History

Gulf Lights See Commerce Of World Pass for More Than 200 Years

NEW ORLEANS.—Fort Boulaye, sprawling on the mud banks of Southeast pass at the mouth of the Mississippi river, has watched the commerce of the world pass up and down the mighty stream for more than 200 years.

Fort Boulaye is not a fort, but one of the first lighthouses erected in North America. The tower, 62 feet high, was built in 1721 by Adrien de Pauger, engineer of the French colony of Louisiana—five years after the famous Boston light was constructed.

When British ships moved up the river bearing General Packenham's redcoats to their defeat at Chalmette in the War of 1812, lookouts spotted the markers along the river banks—crude devices telling skipper where the danger spots were located.

Hazards were marked along the gulf coast at spots where now stand Biloxi, Miss.; Pensacola, Fla., and Mobile, Ala., by seafarers long before the Declaration of Independence was signed.

Service Taken Over by U. S.
As the southern portion of the country gradually was absorbed by the youthful republic, lighthouse facilities were taken over by the lighthouse service, a governmental department established by the first congress in 1789 under the signature of President Washington.

After 150 years of successful administration, the lighthouse service has moved out—its place taken by the coast guard under President Roosevelt's governmental reorganization orders.

Warning beacons along the Mississippi river, Lake Pontchartrain and along the gulf have kept pace with the growth of ocean commerce to southern ports.

The first lighthouse built by the United States government in Louisiana was at Bayou St. John on Lake Pontchartrain in 1811, the year of the state's admission to the Union. By 1823, increased ocean-going commerce had made necessary the construction of a tower at Northeast pass at the mouth of the river.

Coast Cities Included.
Gulf coast cities also were getting lighthouses. An entrance light was built at Mobile in 1822 and at Pensacola in 1825.

Both South pass and Southwest pass of the Mississippi river were marked with lights in 1831 when Northeast pass began to shoal.

More than 400 miles of Texas coastline were marked following that state's entry into the Union in 1845. The first lights were placed on Halfmoon reef in 1850 and at Bolivar point and Matagorda in 1852.

Between 1860 and 1870, however, many of the lights were extinguished, but following the reconstruction period in the South, they again were placed in operation.

This progress has continued until today. In the eighth district, which includes New Orleans and the Mississippi river as far north as Baton Rouge and from the Sewanee river in Florida to the Rio Grande in Texas, there are more than 750 lighted aids to navigation and more than 1,130 unlighted aids. There also are seven radio beacons maintained in the district.

War in China Returns Villages to Middle Ages

TIENTSIN, CHINA.—War conditions in North China have turned the hands of the clock so that many villages have taken precautions and fortified themselves as in the Middle Ages.

But instead of battlements and drawbridges the villagers have surrounded themselves with masses of barbed-wire entanglements, charged with electricity at night.

At sundown the people drive their live stock into the fortified area and send them out at dawn to scatter over the countryside on which they barely manage to exist.

Killed by Electricity

IONIA, MICH.—Stephen Ludwick, 68 years old, was killed when a pipe he was pulling from a well touched an electric wire. William Baker, at whose home the accident occurred, was hurled several feet by the shock.

Law Firm Partners

Are Father, Daughter
SCOTLAND, CONN.—The law firm of Dennis and Dennis is unusual in that its partners are father and daughter.

Miss Elizabeth Drayton Dennis, attractive brunette, moved into her father's office after her application was accepted by the bar association early this summer.

Her father, Judge Edward L. Dennis, of the Windham county juvenile court, reasoned she wanted to be a lawyer because "she's heard nothing but law since she was a child."

As President Roosevelt Meets With Nation's Press

Three camera studies of President Franklin D. Roosevelt show him as he discussed the European situation with the press at one of his regular bi-weekly press conferences. The President made two recent appeals to German Chancellor Adolf Hitler for world peace, suggesting three methods of averting war; direct negotiation, impartial arbitration or conciliation. His last appeal was the fifth peace message President Roosevelt had addressed to Hitler in less than a year.

Governors to Meet on (Potato) Field of Honor

Right now it's "Heil, the champion!" to Gov. Lewis O. Barrows of Maine, left, gubernatorial potato-picking king of the western hemisphere. But Gov. C. A. Bottolfsen of Idaho, right, may be a dark horse in this year's spud-picking contest, to be held September 22 on a Blackfoot, Idaho, farm. With both height and reach on his side, Barrows won the title in 1938 from former Governor Clark of Idaho.

Royal Vacationists Rest in Cornfield

Too young to be greatly concerned over the peril of war, Prince Edward and Princess Alexandria, children of the duke and duchess of Kent, nephew and niece of King George of England, rest in the newly mown grain in a cornfield at St. Margaret's Bay, Kent, England, where they are vacationing.

When a Feller Really Needs a Friend

Henry Armstrong's faithful terrier fairly exuded sympathy as he performed for his battered master in New York after he was shorn of his lightweight boxing title by Lou Ambers. And Lil' Henry needed sympathy. He lost five rounds—and the championship—by hitting low. That's a record for championship bouts. Experts were agreed that Armstrong would have won the fight had he not lost the five rounds by fouls.

Between Scares

When news of the Nazi-Russian pact was announced in London, this newspaper placard, which speaks for itself, proved that war scares have not dulled British humor. The sign-board pokes fun at "Comrade" Hitler.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

HEZEKIAH: A KING WHO REMEMBERED GOD

LESSON TEXT—II Chronicles 30:13-22. GOLDEN TEXT—Turn us again, O God, and cause thy face to shine; and we shall be saved.—Psalm 80:3.

The way out—that seems to be the chief object of the search of men. The world is in what seems like hopeless confusion with the imminent danger of a devastating explosion which may in the judgment of some destroy civilization. Politics, economics, education, yes, even religion, have tried their hands at solving the problem and we seem to be worse off than ever. Conditions are much as they were when Hezekiah came to the throne after the death of his wicked father Ahab, who had brought Judah into moral, spiritual, and national declension and disgrace.

The young king brought the nation back within a few years to peace and prosperity. How did he do it? He did not do it. God did it, and He did it because Hezekiah remembered Him and led His people in a return to God, in a recognition of His Word, and to restored worship. God therefore prospered them.

It is significant that while our lesson is about King Hezekiah, his person quickly recedes into the background of our thinking and God is given our attention and our praise. Truly great men do not magnify themselves or their own names, but point by their very greatness to the eternal God to whom they give the glory. Let us consider how God worked through Hezekiah.

I. A Cleansed Temple.
Our lesson calls for attention to the context. Read chapter 29 and learn how the priests and Levites first were directed by the king to cleanse the temple which had suffered degradation and disgrace under King Ahab. Sixteen days were devoted to a thorough clean-up.

That's a good place to start. America, how about cleaning up our churches? Some of them need attention to their physical property, cleaning and rehabilitation. Others are beautifully kept up as far as the building is concerned, but the rubbish is in the teaching and in the manner of worship. Let's clean that up too.

II. A Prepared Priesthood.
Hezekiah gathered the scattered priests and Levites, but he did not permit them to serve in the temple until they had been sanctified and prepared for their work. The men who stand in the sanctuary to direct the worship of God must not only be men of God's own choosing, but they must be cleansed by the blood. As the sacrifices were offered in Hezekiah's day, so for us has One been given in holy sacrifice, and unless those who profess to be His ministers have been cleansed by His blood they have no proper place in His service or in the sanctuary.

III. A Purified People.
The people of the nation were not ready for God's blessing. Some of those in the northern kingdom, to whom the royal invitation had graciously been extended to come to the Passover, scorned the invitation (30:10). There was nothing that could be done for them. But others humbled themselves and came (v. 11), and those in Judah came out in a great assembly (vv. 12, 13).

Observe carefully that this was more than a great homecoming or jubilee event. The people were here to worship God and they needed to be prepared by being "healed" of their sins (vv. 18, 20). They too needed the cleansing blood. It is the only way even now, for "without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sin" (Heb. 9:22). Sin is what we must be cleansed from and healed of if God is to bless our land.

IV. A Feast of Joy and Blessing.
The nation and its leaders kept the feast not only for seven days, for they were not satisfied with this, but they kept it for seven more days. Think of many of us who can hardly sit through an hour of service on Sunday morning, and if we also go to Sunday school we are quite worn out. It is just "impossible" for us to get to the Sunday evening service or to the midweek prayer meeting. Evidently we do not have the spirit of the people of Hezekiah's day or the joy that they found in their hearts as they worshiped God. If we did, we would seek His house and give ourselves gladly to His worship. The result would be that we would receive some of the great blessings which came to the people of Judah.

The reading of II Chronicles 31 and 32 will reveal how God responded to the cry of His people and how He blessed and prospered them. He is the same God today and He can and will do wondrous things for those who trust and honor Him.

Commonest Faults

Some of the commonest faults of thought and work are those which come from thinking too poorly of our own lives and of that which must rightly be demanded of us.—Bishop Paget.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste
Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery. Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder may be burning, scanty or too frequent urination. There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nationwide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

Trout Favored by Fishermen Great strength and a fighting heart in a small body make the trout a favorite of fishermen. No fish as small fights so long when hooked. It protects itself by changing color to blend with that of the bottom of a stream. It is something of a weather prophet, too. Eight or nine hours before a freshet, caused by rains miles away, floods its home stream, a trout stops feeding.

Ohio's First Settlement

Ohio was settled soon after the Revolutionary war, which made "the West" a part of the new republic. The first permanent settlement was established at Marietta by a land company. This was called the Ohio company, and was formed in 1787 in New England by Revolutionary officers, with a view to opening up the West. The government sold the company 1,500,000 acres, and the company recruited settlers and sold to them. In the winter of 1787-88 the first party set out from the east and arrived April 7, 1788, at the spot chosen for a town, at the junction of the Muskingum and Ohio rivers.

Lamp Lore

A modern electric lamp factory has two main classes of lamps are made. The vacuum lamp, so called because every trace of air has been extracted and the lamp hermetically sealed; and the gas-filled lamp, where the air having been similarly exhausted, its place is taken by an inert gas, such as argon or nitrogen—dry and pure—to given pressure. The vacuum is obtained by the use of a mechanical pump, and by its means a vacuum of 400,000th of an atmosphere can be produced.—The B.U. Magazine.

The Turnspit Dog

Up to about 1800 in England and France, the hardest working member of large households was the turnspit dog. In a revolving, treadmill-like cage, hung from the ceiling and attached by pulleys to the spit before the open fire, these dogs would run from two to three hours at a time turning the meat while it roasted.—Collier's Weekly.

Jane smiled at him with her chin tilted in her bird-like way. She was really having the time of her life. She was thrilled and fascinated by the beauty of her surroundings, and gradually Frederick began to take on something of the fascination.

After dinner they sat in the great drawing-room—a portentous place—with low-hung crystal chandeliers—pale rugs—pale walls—with one corner redeemed from the general chilliness by a fireplace of yellow Italian marble, and a huge screen of peacock feathers in a mahogany frame.

"I call this room the Ice Palace," Frederick told her. "Mother furnished it in the early eighties—and she would never change it. And now I rather hate to have it different. I warmed this corner with the fireplace and the screen. Edith always sits in the library on the other side of the hall, but Mother and I had our coffee here, and I prefer to continue the old custom."

Jane's eyes opened wide. "Don't you and your niece drink your coffee together?"

"Usually, but there have been times," he laughed as he said it, "when each of us has sat on opposite sides of the hall in lonely state."

Jane laughed too. "Baldy and I do things like that."

They finished their coffee and he smoked a cigar. Edith and Baldy telephoned that the thing was more serious than they had anticipated. That perhaps he had better send Briggs.

"So that means I'm going to have you to myself for an hour longer," Frederick told Jane. "I hope you are as happy in the prospect as I am."

"I am having a joyous time. I feel like Cinderella at the ball."

He laughed at that. "You're a refreshing child, Jane." He had never before called her by her first name.

"Am I? But I'm not a child. I'm as old as the hills."

"Not in years."

"In wisdom. I know how to make ends meet, and how to order meals, and how to plan my own dresses, and a lot of things that your Edith doesn't have to think about."

"And yet you are happy."

"I'll say I am."

He laughed but did not continue the subject. "I've a rather wonderful collection of earrings. Would you like to look at them? Queer, isn't it? But I've picked them up everywhere."

"Why earrings?"

"Other things are commonplace—brooches, necklaces, tiaras. But there's romance in the jewels that women have worn in their ears. You'll see."

He went into another room and brought back a tray. It was lined with velvet and the earrings were set up on tiny cushions. It was a unique display. Cameos from ancient Rome, acorns of human hair in the horrible taste of the sixties—gypsy hoops of gold—coral roses in delicate fretted wreaths—old French jewels—rubies, emeralds, sapphires, and seed pearls, larger pearls set alone to show their beauty, and a sparkling array of modern things, diamonds in platinum—long pendants of jade and jet—opals dripping like liquid fire along slender chains. She hung over them.

"Which do you like best?" he asked.

"The pearls?"

He was doubtful. "Not the white ones. These—* he picked up a pair of sapphires set in seed pearls—rather barbaric things that hung down for an inch or more. "They'll suit your style. Have you ever worn earrings?"

"No."

"Try them."

He helped her to adjust them—and his hand touched her smooth warm cheek. He was conscious of her closeness, but gave no sign.

There was a little mirror above the mantel. "Look at yourself," he said.

She tilted her head so that the jewels shook. The blue lights of the stones made her skin incandescent.

Frederick surveyed her critically. "You ought to have a more sophisticated gown. Silver brocade with a wisp of a train."

"It changes me, doesn't it? I am not sure that I like them."

What a joy she was after Adelaide. As if the name had brought her, a voice spoke from the door. "I wouldn't let Waldron announce me, Ricky, may I come in?"

She stopped as she saw Jane. "Oh, you're not alone?"

"This is Miss Barnes, Adelaide. I think you met her brother today at luncheon. Edith telephoned that you and Edith had found her."

"That's what I came about, to warn you. Edith has the reporters on her trail. She'll be over in a minute. But the harm will be done, I am afraid, before you can stop her."

"Oh, I'm resigned. Edith's coming back tonight. Miss Barnes' brother is bringing her."

"Really?" Adelaide Laramore was appraising Jane. A shabby child. From the threshold she had had a moment of jealousy. But the moment was past. Frederick was extremely fastidious. He adored beauty and this Barnes child was not beautiful.

Jane was unfasting the earrings. "Aren't they heavenly, Mrs. Laramore?"

"The sapphires?" Mrs. Laramore sat down on the couch. Her evening wrap slipped back, showing her white neck. Her fair hair was swept up from her forehead. She had a long face, with pink cheeks and pencilled eyebrows. She was like a portrait on porcelain, and she knew it, and emphasized the effect. "The sapphires? Yes. They're the choice of the lot."

She went on to speak of Eloise. "She is simply hopeless. She has told the most hectic tales and all the papers have sent men out to the Inn."

"Well, they escaped. They started early and have been hung up at Alexandria."

"Eloise and Benny and the Captain dined with me. She was still telephoning when I left. I told her that I did not sanction it, and that I should come straight over and tell you. But she laughed and said she didn't care. That she thought it was great fun and that you were a good sport."

"I shan't see her," shortly; "she ought to know better. Setting reporters on Edith like a pack of wolves."

"I told her how you would feel," Adelaide reiterated.

"I should see her if I were you, Mr. Towne," said a crisp, young voice.

Adelaide turned with a gasp. With her slippered feet crossed in front of her, Jane looked like a child. For the first time Mrs. Laramore got a good view of those candid gray eyes. They had a queer effect on her. Eyes like that were most uncommon. Fearless. The girl was not afraid of Frederick. She was not afraid of anyone.

"Why should I see her?" Frederick demanded.

"Won't it just add to her sense of melodrama if you don't? And why should you care? Your niece is coming home. And that's the end of it."

"You mean," Frederick demanded, "that I am to carry it off with an air?"

Jane nodded. "Make comedy of it instead of tragedy."

Adelaide slipping out of her wrap was revealed as elegant and distinguished in silver and black.

"May I have a cigarette, Ricky, to settle my nerves? Eloise is tremendously upsetting." Adelaide was plaintive.

Jane watched her with lively curiosity. The women she knew did not smoke. Baldy's flappers did, but they were abnormal and of a new generation. Mrs. Laramore was old enough to be Jane's mother, and Jane had a feeling . . . that mothers . . . shouldn't smoke . . .

But none the less, Adelaide Laramore and her exotic ways were amusing. She had a brittle and artificial look, like the Manchu lady in the Museum, or something in wax.

Jane was brought back from her meditation by the riotous entrance of Eloise and the two men.

"I knew Adelaide was telling tales."

"I told you I was coming, Eloise." Eloise stared at Jane when Frederick presented her. "You look like your brother. Twins?"

"No," Jane decided that she liked Miss Harper better than she did Mrs. Laramore—which wasn't saying—much . . .

"The reporters are on their way to Alexandria—full cry." Eloise all in emerald green, with her red hair in a classic coiffure, was like some radiant witch, exultant of evil. "You mustn't scold me, Frederick. It was terribly exciting to tell them, and I adore excitement."

"Where are they?"

Frederick chanted composedly, "We three know . . . but we will never tell . . ."

"Adelaide will, when I get her alone."

"I will not."

"Then Miss Barnes will. Do you know how young you look, Miss Barnes? I feel as if you'd tell me anything for a stick of candy."

They roared at that. And Jane said, "Nobody ever made me do anything I didn't want to do."

And now Benny and the Captain looked at her, and looked again. What a voice the child had, and eyes!

Eloise, on the couch, hugged her knees and surveyed her gold slippers. "They are putting my picture in the paper and Adelaide's. They saw one on my desk—"

Mrs. Laramore cried out, "Benny, why did you let her do it?" and there was a great uproar—in which Eloise could be heard saying:

"And they are going to have a picture of the Inn, and one of your brother if they can get it, Miss Barnes."

Jane began to feel uncomfortable. She was, she told herself, as much out of place as a pussy-cat in a Zoo. These women and these men reminded her somehow of the great sleek animals who snarled at each other in the Rock Creek cages. Frederick did not snarl. But she had a feeling he might if Eloise kept at him much longer.

It was in the midst of the hubbub that Edith entered. She walked in among them as composedly as she had faced them at the Inn.

"Hello," she said, "you sound like a jazz band." She went straight up to Frederick and kissed him. "I suppose Eloise is shouting the news to the world." She tucked her hand in his arm. "There are more than a million reporters outside. Mr. Barnes is keeping them at bay."

"Where did they find you?"

"Heard of us, I suppose, at the Alexandria hotel. We didn't realize it until we reached here, and then they piled out and began to ask questions."

Frederick lifted her hand from his arm. "I'll go and send them away."

Eloise jumped up. "I'll go with you."

And then Frederick snarled, "Stay here."

But neither of them went, for Baldy entered, head cocked, eyes aghast—Jane knew the signs.

"They've gone," he said. "I told you I'd get rid of them, Miss Towne."

He nodded to them all. Absolutely at his ease, lifted above them all by the exaltation of his mood. Finer, Jane told herself, than any of them—his beautiful youth against their world-weariness.

Edith was smiling at Jane. "I knew you at once. You are like your brother."

They were alike. A striking pair as they stood together. "It is because of Mr. Barnes and his sister that we got in touch with Edith," Frederick explained. He had regained his genial manner.

"Oh, really," Adelaide knew that she and her friends ought to go at once. Edith looked tired, and Eloise at moments like this was impossible. But she hated to leave anyone else in the field. "Can't I give you a lift?" she asked Jane, sweetly, "you and your brother."

But it was Frederick who answered. "Miss Barnes lives at Sherwood Park. Briggs will take her out."

So Adelaide went away, and Eloise and the two men, and Edith turned to her uncle and said, "I'm sorry."

Her face was white and her eyes were shining, and all of a sudden she reached up her arms and put them about his neck and sobbed as if her heart would break.

And then, and not until then, little Jane knew that Edith was not like one of the animals at the Zoo.

In Jane's next letter to Judy she told her how the evening with the Townes had ended. And that she had invited the Townes and Follettes for tea the next afternoon.

When she had written the last line, Jane sat very still at her desk. She was thinking of Evans. She hadn't seen him for three days. Not since the Sunday night she had gone to the Townes. That night in the fog had impressed her strangely. She had felt for Evans something that had nothing to do with admiration for him nor respect nor charm. His weakness had drawn her to him, as a mother might be drawn to a child. His struggle was, she felt, something which she must share. Not as his wife! No . . . That kind of love was different. If only he would let her be his little sister, Jane.

He had not even called her up. When she had invited him and his mother to tea with the Townes, Mrs. Follette had answered, and had accepted for both of them. Evans, she said, was in Washington, and would be out on the late train.

When he arrived ahead of the others on the afternoon of her tea, Jane said, "Where have you been? Do you know it has been four days since we've seen each other?"

"Weren't you glad to get rid of me? I've thought of you every minute." He dropped into a seat beside her.

"She was gazing at him with lively curiosity. "How nice you look."

"New suit. Like it?"

"Yes. And you act as if somebody had left you a million dollars."

"Wish he had. I bought this outfit with a first edition 'Alice in Wonderland,'" he laughed and explained. "I've been getting rid of some of our rare books. I feel plutocratic in consequence. Five hundred dollars, if you please, for that old Hogarth, with the scathing Ruskin inscription. And I'm going to open an office, Jane."

"In Washington?"

"On Connecticut Avenue. Same building, same room, where I started."

"Evans, how splendid!"

"Yes. You did it, Jane."

"I? How?"

"The night of the fog. I never realized before what a walking-stick I've been—leaning on you. Henceforth you're the Lady of the Lantern. It won't be so fatiguing."

He was smiling at her, and she smiled back. Yet quite strangely and inconsistently, she felt as if in changing his attitude towards her, he had robbed her of some privilege. "I didn't mind being a walking-stick."

"Well, I minded. After this I'll walk alone. And I'm going to work hard, and play around a bit. Will you have tea with me tomorrow, Jane? At the Willard? To celebrate my first tottering steps."

She agreed, eagerly. "It will be like old times."

"Minus a lot, old lady."

That was the way he had talked to her years ago. The plaintive note was gone.

"Take the three-thirty train and I'll meet you. I'll pay for the taxi with what's left of 'Alice.'"

"Don't be too extravagant."

Campfire Girls, Girl Scouts Like Nature Study

"Smaller than a robin—gray, a black cap, a black chin." What is it? A chickadee, of course.

"A flag of Belgium on each wing, from the cattail hear him sing! What is it? A red-winged blackbird, as any Camp Fire girl or Girl Scout who has followed nature trails at the Cleveland Museum of Natural History will tell you, says a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Guided by the animal highway charts, they play a game with the charts, and find out what kind of an animal a mouse is, or a grasshopper or a snake.

Or they go to the insect room on the second floor and learn the eight orders of insects, count insect legs and discover that "an insect is an animal without bones and has six jointed legs." Perhaps they go to the tanadonna room and learn that "some trees, like some people, are easy to tell by their shapes." Or perhaps they visit the rock room and discover a few of the elements of which minerals are made.

Then they go to the Hanna star dome on the second floor and sit on the floor in groups of 25. When they are able to point out and name seven constellations, seven stars, the constellation in which they appear and an interesting fact about each one, as well as a variable star and the time that elapses between its two periods of greatest brightness, they have earned three different honors. If they can tell the difference between a comet and a shooting star and four points of difference between a star and a planet, they have earned two more honors.

Probably the most fun of all is the "nest hunt." The nests of seven birds, their location—whether on the ground or in a tree—the number of eggs, and the color of the eggs, all will entitle them to another honor.

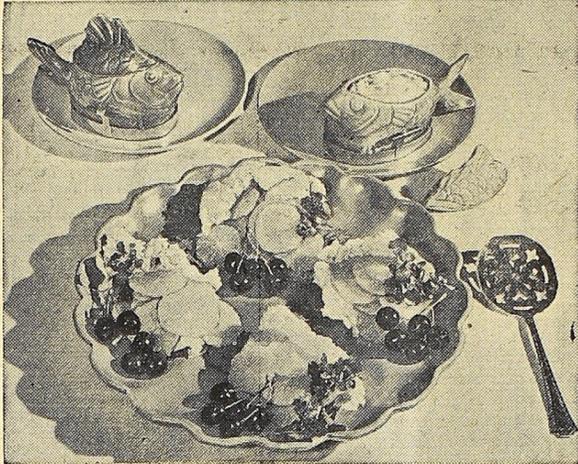

More than 1,000 Camp Fire girls and Girl Scouts follow these trails annually on Saturdays throughout the winter. They earn their honors, learn a great deal about nature, which they can follow with actual outdoor study the next summer and, incidentally, have a very good time, especially while they play nature games and eat their lunches in the auditorium at noontime.

TASTY SUNDAY NIGHT SUPPERS
(See Recipes Below)

Sunday Night Suppers

Even though you expect everyone to have had a noon meal with staying power on Sundays, people do like to eat when Sunday evening rolls 'round! To be sure, they like food that's somewhat lighter, and food that's out of the ordinary. So it's a grand time to leave the beaten path and serve something a little different.

If you serve left-overs, be sure to serve them in a new way or with an unusual accompaniment like the jellied chili sauce I've suggested in menu No. III. If you plan a meal especially for Sunday night, plan one which can be served "help-yourself" style and arrange foods, dishes and silver on the table so that guests may serve themselves. Appetites will be quickened by the eye-appealing arrangement of the table, and the air of informality makes Sunday night supper a sociable affair.

These menus are suited, too, to serving larger numbers—lodge groups, church organizations or clubs. Recipes for the main dish and salad in every menu are easily increased. Unless you have special recipes and equipment, cakes and pastries are likely to be better if the single recipe is used.

Sunday Night Supper Menus

Clam Chowder
Assorted Relishes
Lettuce and Tomatoes with Roquefort Cheese Dressing
Pineapple Cream Tarts
Beverage

Tuna Casserole
Orange-Cherry Salad
Hot Rolls
Beverage

Thin Slices of Cold Roast Beef
Jellied Chili Sauce
Mixed Vegetable Salad
Toasted Loaf
Cocoa Marshmallow Cake
Coffee

Lettuce and Tomatoes With Roquefort Cheese Dressing.
(Serves 6)

1 head lettuce
2 tomatoes
¼ pound Roquefort cheese (crumbled)
French dressing
Remove coarse outer leaves from head of lettuce. Cut into wedges. Peel tomatoes, remove stem end, and cut into eighths. Place in salad bowl with the lettuce. Add crumbled Roquefort cheese and French dressing. Toss lightly until well mixed.

Cocoa Marshmallow Cake.
2 tablespoons cocoa
½ cup sweet milk
2 cups brown sugar
3 eggs (separated)
½ cup butter
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
2 cups cake flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon soda
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup sour milk

Place cocoa, sweet milk, 1 cup brown sugar, and 1 egg yolk (beaten) in top of double boiler. Cook over hot water, until mixture is well blended. Cool. Cream butter, and add remaining cup of brown sugar while beating constantly. Add the two remaining egg yolks, together with the vanilla extract and mix thoroughly. Then mix and sift all dry ingredients and add alternately with the sour milk. Beat egg whites stiff but not dry, and fold into the cake mixture.

Place in 2 well greased layer cake pans and bake in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees) approximately 30 minutes. Ice with boiled icing to which 8 marshmallows (cut in quarters) have been added.

Jellied Chili Sauce.
1 tablespoon gelatin
2 tablespoons cold water
1 cup chili sauce (or catsup)
Soak gelatin in cold water for 5 minutes. Add to chili sauce, which has been heated to the boiling point, and stir until dissolved. Pour into tiny paper cups, individual molds, or small pan from which the chili sauce may be sliced or cut in attractive shapes when firm. Chill thoroughly before serving.

Tuna Casserole.
1 7-ounce can tuna
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 cup cooked peas
1 can button mushrooms
2 cups cooked noodles (medium width)
Salt, pepper and butter
1 cup milk
Butter individual baking dishes. Sprinkle tuna with lemon juice. (This brings out the tuna flavor). Arrange alternate layers of tuna, peas, mushrooms and noodles, putting noodles on top. Season each layer with salt and pepper. Dot top generously with butter. Pour milk into dish and top with buttered bread crumbs. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees) 30 minutes. (Serves 4-6.)

Toasted Loaf.
Trim top and side crusts from a loaf of unsliced white bread. Cut through the center of the loaf, lengthwise, cutting just to the lower crust, but not through it. Then cut crosswise, spacing the cuts about 2 inches apart. Brush top and sides generously with melted butter. Toast in a moderately hot oven (400 degrees) until the loaf is golden brown. Serve hot.

There are so many points to be considered in planning meals. One which is all too likely to be overlooked is this—that the dessert is more than something to satisfy the family's "sweet tooth"; it really plays an important part in the menu.

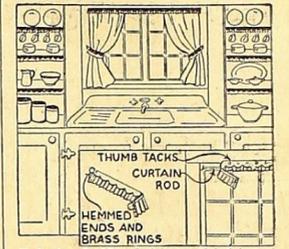

Next week in this column Eleanor Howe will tell you why—and will give you, too—some of her favorite recipes for "Desserts That Are Different."

Clam Chowder.
(Serves 6)
½ cup carrot (chopped)
2 tablespoons onion (chopped)
1¼ cups potato (chopped)
¾ cup celery (chopped fine)
1 pint clams
2 cups water and clam liquor
Salt and pepper to taste
1 pint milk
3 tablespoons flour
3 tablespoons butter
½ tablespoon parsley
½ teaspoon paprika
Chop the vegetables in small pieces and place in large kettle. Chop the clams and add together with the clam liquor, water, salt, and pepper. Cover and cook about ½ hour, or until vegetables are tender. Scald milk. Make a smooth paste of the flour and water. Add half of this flour paste to the clam mixture and half to the scalded milk. Cook each, stirring constantly, until the mixture thickens. Combine and add butter, parsley and paprika. Serve very hot.

Shelf Edging Dresses Up Kitchen Windows

SOME of us can remember seeing our mothers cut scalloped shelf papers. Dextrously they folded and snipped the edge in points or curves; sometimes adding a cut out diamond in the center of each scallop. For many there is more satisfaction in this creation of their own hands, than in using fancy lace edge paper by the roll. Today, we find that same satisfaction when we choose oilcloth shelf edgings—thinking in terms of color has a fascination even beyond scallops with diamonds in the center.

The suggestion sketched here for using shelf edging to dress up kitchen windows was sent in by a reader. The busy homemaker will appreciate the fact that the curtains are perfectly straight and plain and easy to remove for laundering. When windows and shelves match the effect is especially good. Banded towels may be of the same color, and tin containers for bread, sugar, and spices may be painted with bright enamel, to match.

The new Sewing Book No. 3 by Mrs. Spears is packed full of useful, money saving ideas, that almost any homemaker may put to practical use. Every idea is clearly illustrated with large sketches. You will be fascinated with the variety of interesting things to make for the home and for gifts. The price is only 10 cents postpaid. Send coin with name and address to Mrs. Spears, 210 S. How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 52), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells. Get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a good general system tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life. FARMERS LOSE CASH GRAZING WOODLANDS

Forestry Specialist Points Out Common Fallacy.

By R. W. GRAEBER

Farmers who graze cattle in woodlands lose money both in milk or beef and in timber and erosion control.

Experiments have shown that managed woodlands yield an annual return of about $4 per acre, and that the best open pastures yield about the same amount. However, when grazing and forestry are combined on the same area, the yields are much less, the total annual return for typical woodland pasture being only $1 per acre.

Why do farmers run their cattle in the woods? There is only one logical reason: They think they can pick up an extra dollar or two by letting the cattle pick a few buds and twigs in early spring, along with the low-growing plants and a few sprigs of grass or briars which may grow where a few rays of sunlight reach the ground.

This is a fallacy. A farmer doesn't pick up an extra dollar or two; the cows do not produce as much milk or as much beef as when they graze in open pasture; the timber supply is reduced; grazing woodlands induces erosion and loss of leaf litter; the fencing bill is higher.

Salt May Poison Hogs, Veterinarians Reveal

After investigating several cases of salt poisoning, veterinarians have found that most farmers are unaware that salt is poisonous to hogs if given in too large quantities.

A good example of such a case was a farmer who had 222 head of pigs which had been vaccinated with both virus and serum; seven of the group had died seven days after the vaccination and four more were sick. The farmer blamed the treatment. The sick pigs wandered about the pen in a daze, gradually weakening until completely paralyzed. Death soon followed. The owner said the pigs seemed to crave something, so he set out several blocks of medicated salt. A number of the pigs ate considerable amounts from the block, he continued. The salt was removed from the pens and no further losses occurred.

After observing several cases of salt poisoning, Dr. Hefferd says that inflammation of the kidneys and bladder, together with a hardening of the liver, are the most common effects of too much salt in the ration.

As a rule hogs require little salt in the ration and the practice of mixing salt with the feed or soaking mash feeds in salt water should be discouraged, as a brine is likely to form which may cause acute poisoning with death following quickly, leaving post-mortem findings somewhat indefinite.

Farming Not Easy

Successful farming is not easy. It requires much experience in doing the various kinds of farm work and the ability to show others how to do this work. It requires training in business management and knowledge of the principles of plant growth, the feeding and care of animals, and the maintenance of soil fertility. Few industries require such a wide range of training and experience. Farming is not simply growing a particular crop or feeding a certain kind of live stock. It is an all-the-year-round business, involving the production of various plants and animals and the successful organization of the varying farm enterprises into a smoothly working unit.

Farming Briefs

After only 100 years of extensive cultivation, this country has destroyed, seriously damaged or threatened with destruction an area equal to all land from which crops are normally harvested.

Added steps in processing food to prepare it for the consumers' tables reduce the farmer's share of the food dollar. Wage scales paid by food processors were twice as high in 1933 as in 1910-13. Slicing bread before it is sold and putting farm produce in small packages are two of the later developments in processing food.

For more than a year farm products exports from the United States have been rising and imports falling.

The good poultryman is never too busy to keep after the lice and mites that increase so rapidly in the warm days.

Since the relationship between the price of milk and the cost of grain is favorable, dairymen should feed all the grain their cows will use efficiently.
