TO IMPROVE IOSCO BEEF CATTLE HERDS

Prescotts Purchase Eight Fine Hereford Sires

Farmers are being asked over the radio, through news papers, and at meetings to increase the national food supply during 1943. Included among these requests is one for more pounds of beef to feed not only our soldiers but also our civilian population in this nation and other Lend Lease countries.

In order to cope with this request, C. T. Prescott, president of the Northeastern Michigan Hereford Calf Association, and George A. Prescott, Jr. spent Monday and Tuesday of last week in Southeastern Michigan visiting leading Hereford Cattle breeding establishments and during this time purchased eight high quality Hereford bulls which will serve as herd sires in this Northern Feeder Calf territory for many years to come.

Through the careful selection of these mated, rugged, heavy boned sires the production of more and better feeder calves to be fed in southern Michigan feed lots is sure to result.

These life-long cattle authorities selected two deep bodied January calves, of a year ago, from the noted Crapo farm of Swartz Creek, which were sired by the big thick bodied herd sire, Ellison Domino 42nd. Two other dark red, straight topped last March calves sired by the noted 12 year old sire, Aaron Domino were also selected for new homes in the Northeastern Hereford calf section.

Four other bulls were purchased from the Hi-Point farm which is owned by E. F. Fisher of Romeo. The Hi-Point farm is a rather recently established Hereford breeding establishment but has rapidly gained national fame, especially since the purchase, two years ago, of the grand champion sire T. Royal Rupert 15th for $10,000.00 from the Turner ranch of Sulphur Oklahoma.

One of the Hi-Point purchases was a very deep, heavy loined 14 month old calf sired by the noted Nebraska bred sire "Publian Mischief." Two other big well grown summer calves also sired by the "Publian Mischief," bred were purchased. While the 4th addition was the largest individual of the entire selection, a 1 1/2 year old strong topped, beautiful headed bull sired by the Hi-Point W. H. R. bull, "White Thorn, 2nd."

These eight bulls are all creditable additions to this section of the state and will serve as foundation sires in the cooperative organization known as the Northeastern Michigan Hereford Calf Association, for many years to come.

(Practicing that bullets are coming at you from an airplane, or that lights are being turned on you at night.) It is quite hard to get in the position you are supposed to fall in when you take to the ground. I always have my heels up in the air instead of having them on the ground. The inner side portion of your shoes are laid flat on the ground."

"Another thing I have a little trouble with is not having my bed made right. You must have 45 degree angles on the corners, and the bed is made without wrinkles.

"We are getting lots of exercise by hiking with full packs and rifles. Yesterday, we went on a 15 mile hike, and boy, was it raining. This made it very hard for marching (in step). We go out in the field all next week. That is, we shall sleep and drill in the field."

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Thornton,

I guess I can write and say that I am permanently situated for some time again and certainly would appreciate receiving the Tawas Herald as before.

At the present time, according to County Agent W. L. Finley, Dairying is sufficiently important that it should be re-emphasized.

While feed prices are at their present level and butter fat is bringing more than 50c per pound, Isoco county dairymen should spend a little extra time in the dairy barn and produce every possible pound of butter fat.

Our nation needs more milk and now is the time to produce it. Numerous simple tasks may be employed to meet this increased demand. Simply feed or grain will help. Give the cows who will respond best the greatest portion of the grain. The dry cow, contrary to the belief of nearly every Isoco county farmer, will pay the greatest dividends for the grain you feed her. Every dry cow should have 6 pounds of grain per day for five or six weeks before freshening. Therefore it is absolutely necessary that a breeding record be kept upon every cow for six to eight weeks, and there is no reason for not drying any cow at any time you wish.

The fresh cows are 2nd choice as far as the grain goes and fed according to the amount of milk they produce. Guernsey and Jerseys should receive 1 pound of grain for each 3 pounds of milk, while the Holsteins should be fed 1 pound of grain to each 4 pounds of milk. The cows now in production that will freshen during late spring and early summer (Turn to No. 2 Back Page)

OPA Would Force Business Places to Convert to Coal

The Office of Price Administration is moving to force conversion of all oil heating units in buildings other than private homes, it was announced today by Russell H. McKenzie, Chairman of the Local War Price and Rationing Board.

That arrangements have been made for conversion by a definite date within the current heating season, or unless the applicant has proved conclusively that conversion is impossible.

The increasingly serious oil supply situation in the 30-state rationed area was cited as the reason for the order, and local boards were charged with forcing conversion at the earliest possible time.

SEVERE SNOW STORM SWEEPS IOSCO COUNTY

Temperature Hits Sub-Zero Levels Wednesday Night

This week's storm which started early Monday morning, and apparently plans to continue with us through the week, is the most severe witnessed here in years. Tuesday it had reached blizzard proportions. Tuesday night the temperature dropped to sub zero levels and by Wednesday the wind had blown the storm out, and the snow into huge drifts.

Thursday morning it was again snowing and the wind blowing the drifts into new high peaks.

Old timers have been spending their time in recalling the days when Isoco county really had winter weather. When the snow would drift to the tops of the stump fences along the Hemlock, Meadow and Plank roads and everyone would get out with teams and shovels, in snow removal "bees," and dig the roads open to town. In some places it was found easier to detour the road through the fields. No state and county highway crews in those days with snow plows running all night to keep the roads open.

Throughout this storm, state and county highway crews have been busy with snowplows pushing snow off the roads. On U. S. 23 their efforts have been quite successful and this highway has been continuously open for traffic. State highway M-65 up to Hale and portions of the Hemlock were passable Thursday. Energetic efforts were made to keep the main highways of the county road system open to traffic. It was sometimes discouraging because within a short time after the plow had gone through, the road would be drifted full.

School children have been enjoying an unexpected vacation because of the storm.

Thursday morning, when the storm had again nearly reached blizzard proportions, a letter was received from a subscriber, who now resides in Florida, in which he said, "We are having grand summer weather, with flowers, fruit, sunshine and swimming." We shall boast of harder things as soon as we can dig our way out of the front door and see them.

ON THE HOME FRONT
with RUTH WYETH SPEARS

"DEAR Mrs. Spears: Recently I sent for your stamping pattern of Mexican figures and used them for two sets of tea towels and pot holders and a pair of curtains for my grand-daughter. Her husband made racks of them that also helped to give the kitchen a gay air.

A triangle shelf to fit in a corner near the sink was put up. It had an ordinary bathroom towel rod screwed to the bottom, and painted, cut-out scallops nailed to the front. For the pot holders, he scalloped both edges of a 4 by 1/2-inch board; painted it; screwed a brass cup hook in the center of every other scallop and then nailed it up over the stove. G. B. S."

NOTE: You will enjoy these gay figures. There are more than 20 on the transfer; all different and easy to do. Mexican Pattern No. 203 is 10 cents if ordered direct from

CHAPTER XV

Curt left the bedroom door ajar slightly, for better circulation of air than he could get from the two-foot lattice-work portion of wall under the ceiling. He stripped, showered, and flung himself on the bed under the mosquito bar. Outside, Emilio hadn't moved, simply went on reading, smoke curling up past his squinting left eye.

Curt had no intention of falling asleep; he only wanted to outwit his shadow. But he was so muscle weary that he did succumb to a catnap—with one ear on the alert.

The click of the outer door latch brought him to. He glanced at the luminous dial of his wrist watch. Eight-twenty. He'd been dozing for nearly an hour.

Quietly he left the bed and went to the door, but remained out of the wedge of light coming from the porch. The door was grinner ajar than he'd left it. He widened it himself.

Because of the fan-shaped layout of Tempujo, Curt's bungalow was in plain view of the mess-hall, used as a clubhouse outside of meal hours. He could see Emilio enter the long, screen-front building, select a table where he had good view of the lighted porch he'd just left, and settle himself. He was joined at once by a couple of natives—Curt recognized them as rodmen under Al Random—and a pack of cards was produced. Curt grinned again. That should tie up the hombre.

He made quick time of dressing. A minute sufficed to pull on shorts, breeches, shirt and socks, but it took longer to lace up his high boots. He slipped a flashlight into a hip pocket, buckled on his gun belt. He thought of his hat. But he couldn't step onto the open screened porch without the risk of being seen, so he did without it.

He had one further thought. He'd like to make sure that no one entered while he was gone and discovered his absence. Emilio had a key. Lauriano Duro had a key. Curt skidded a magazine across the floor, landing it up against the screen door as though it had so fallen. No one could enter without displacing it, nor could anyone enter and leave again, and replace the magazine in just that position.

Quickly he unhooked the rear window screen and swung to the ground. Some hundred yards upriver from the dock were a dozen or more cayucas—wooden dugouts belonging to natives in the company's service. Carefully, taking advantage of every black shadow, Curt made his way to them.

He played his flash briefly, selected one, worked its line over the stake that held it to avoid trouble in duplicating the knot on his return, crawled in.

McInnis was waiting for him, slapping viciously at neck, arms, thighs. He seized the nose of the dugout to pull it onto the bank.

"Cripes, Curt," he complained, "if you'd been any longer you'd have found only bones. These mosquitoes are big as hawks."

"Yeh," Curt said briefly. "Been noticing. Let's get away from the bank and light up. It'll help some." Presently, their pipes doing the work of smudge pots. "Well, get the dope?"

"Yes. But remember Mitchell, Curt. His curiosity got the better of him just before he was bumped off. Mitch made a secret trip over here one night, just as you're doing now, and for the same reason. The Old Man told me. Now, two are better than one, pal, so I don't spill till you cut me in on it!"

"Jerry," Curt exclaimed, "there's something rotten on the griddle over there! I can smell it but I can't identify it. Look. You've heard of Zora Mitchell's death, of course, and Bill Henderson's.

who was more like a jailer, the housemaid who spied on his home life, the faulty cartridges. About being reprimanded by Montaya for hiring Collins.

"But Curt, you must have worked up some kind of idea!"

"Oh, I had a momentary brainstorm the other day," Curt admitted, "when that Army plane made an emergency landing at San Alejo. You know about that. For an instant I figured Mitch had got the wind up over those two planes we fly. They're Junkers." He gave a sour laugh. "Other things Mitch had let drop indicated that perhaps he had the Panama Canal in mind. But Mitch was no fool! He undoubtedly knew those planes could be used to damage the Canal—if that's what he had in mind.

"Another thing I figured was that maybe Montaya had political ambitions. If he did have plans for a dictatorship unfriendly to the United States—"

McInnis cut in. "Old Man Moore's in a position to know, Curt, and he says positively there are no political strings to your friend."

"So far's known, he means," exclaimed Curt. "But no would-be dictator announces himself in advance."

McInnis grunted. "I've never known the boss to be wrong, Curt." Curt gave a short laugh. "Well, there are other things wrong with that idea. Let's have the dope, Jerry."

"Yeh. Well, your pal Apolonio comes from an old family down this way. You'll recognize the family name. Lara. Coffee, cattle, hides, silver, cigarettes, cerveza.

"His grandmother was Luisa Lara

Or did the stuff come from Germany, via Vladivostok?

who married a Montaya. His mother was the only daughter of that union. She married a German settler, name of Kuhlman. The Kuhlman had a number of kids, but Apolonio looked so much like Grandfather Montaya that he became the old lady's favorite.

"She was the chief moneybags of the old Lara clan, so you can't blame Apolonio for taking the name of Montaya to please her. He could by custom, you know, it was his mother's name. That's why I didn't know where the money came from for this outfit. The fortune was always associated with the name Lara.

"Well, he was educated at Harvard, and spent some years in pleasure trips between his own country and the States and Europe, but he went home to stay when the old lady died and left him the bulk of everything. No one knows exactly how many millions of pesos it ran to, but the guesses average four-teen to sixteen.

"There are some foggy spots to the story. One thing, he got hooked up somehow in the Cedillo revolt in Mexico, but got out of it with a whole skin.

"He's never married. Had several affairs of the heart, though, in his salad days. Most serious one was with a German countess—a married one," McInnis added cynically.

"German?"

"Yes. Germany, by the way, is his favorite foreign country. When there he uses his legal name of Kuhlman."

"Germany! Germany!" Something bothered Curt.

McInnis slowed down in his recital. "I suppose that raises the Nazi question in your mind, Curt. It did with me. But Montaya's never been known to have any connections with the Nazis—nor any trouble with them, either, if that means anything."

I've been! I've known all along that the Dutchman's formula was no excuse for all this hush-hush, all this spying on me, these murders! And all the time the real answer's been staring me in the face! What a cluck I turned out to be! Here's one of the slickest Nazi tricks—"

McInnis was rubbing his shin. "Well, let me in on it."

"I should've seen it before. I did ask one question. You'll remember it. How could he sink so much money here when the cost of handling fruit will mean so much in competition with you people?"

"There's one country that'd be darned glad to subsidize him—with limits—this close to the Panama Canal—for favors received. The kind of favors he's in a swell spot to give. Nazi Germany!"

"Draw me a picture," said McInnis dryly.

A Nazi crew here, with Toenjes in charge. "Jerry, he's no more Dutch than I am. Overheard him and Montaya talking once. Assumed it was Dutch. Now I know it was German. Ryden and Lannestock, they're not Swedes!"

Curt sucked in his breath. His voice came in a croak. "And there's the answer to why Montaya 'likes children,' why he wants a family man for his chief engineer. Lee! And the kids! Hostages for my silence against the time they learn I've discovered all this.

"Jerry, those birds mean business!"

Curt returned to his side of the Negro, his face the color of old newspaper yellowed by weather.

He knew now what kind of spot he was in—more important, the terrible position of Lee and the children. But he knew. That was the saving point. He knew, and could plan against every contingency.

And, he had two major trumps. One was a friend across the Negro. Unlike Mitchell, Curt was not going to play a lone hand. Two—so far, Montaya and his precious crew had no reason to suspect Curt's knowledge.

First, he must get hold of Collins. At once.

Slipping the cayuca's line over its shore stake exactly as he'd found it, Curt returned to his office-bungalow. He must make certain his absence hadn't been discovered. Too much now depended on not tipping his hand. The magazine he'd shield against the front door would tell, but he couldn't see this from outside. So he listened under his window, then climbed in.

A glance from the bedroom onto the lighted porch sufficed. The magazine was just as he'd left it. Well beyond, in the mess-hall, Curt could see Emilio still at cards, but now there were four men in the game. The watchdog still faced the lighted bungalow.

Who else was in the mess-hall Curt couldn't see from where he stood. He swung himself to the ground again, took a position from where he could view the whole long room. There were several small groups. Curt accounted for young Dr. Fisher, a few of the transients of the engineering force, most of the trainmen—whom he knew by now, engineers, firemen, brakemen. But Monahan wasn't there, nor Collins.

Skirting the pools of yellow cast by the Tempujo lights, taking advantage of every shadow, Curt made his way to the bachelor quarters reserved for transients. It was here Collins would have a room for the night.

The building was simply a long string of small rooms, with a screened porch extending the length of it. There was one entrance from the footpath onto the porch. Each room had a window in the rear wall, another in the front wall beside the door which led onto the porch.

Soundlessly Curt made his way from window to window along the back of the building. Standing on piles as it did, Curt could only reach the window sills by stretching, and had to jump for a hand grip, then chin himself to see inside. Enough light came through the front windows to show him each room dimly.

The first six rooms were not only empty but undisturbed, occupancy indicated only by a bag of sorts dumped on a chair, or a bottle and glass on a table, or a package bought at the Tempujo branch commissary before it closed.

The seventh room showed a mussed bed. There was no baggage in this room, no personal articles on table or dresser, just the rumpled bed and the mosquito bar swung aside to show that someone had lain here for a while.

The eighth and ninth rooms were made up and undisturbed, but the tenth and last was occupied. Slats Monahan, judging from the snore coming from under the mosquito netting.

Huh. That meant that Collins was abroad. But where? There were only two places where he could be in Tempujo at this time of night—the mess-hall or his room. And he wasn't in either. There was no other spot to hang out. Mulling this over, Curt headed back for his bungalow.

He still kept under cover. Near the river wharf, where everything was locked up for the night and only two lights showed—one in the dispatcher's office, one in the dock office—he stiffened into immobility. He'd caught sight of another figure, likewise hiding itself in shadow. (TO BE CONTINUED)

U. S. Coffee Is Held in Brazil

Government Unable to Move Vast Stores, Brazilian Scientist Reports.

NEW YORK.—While Americans must ration their consumption of coffee, their government owns more than one billion pounds of coffee beans stored in Brazilian warehouses that it is unable to transport to the United States, it was reported here by Dr. Moacyr E. Alvaro, secretary-general of the national committee for the prevention of blindness in Brazil and professor of ophthalmology at the Sao Paulo school of medicine.

Change in Feeling.
Dr. Alvaro, who arrived here by clipper from Brazil to address a meeting of the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness, said there is a great surge of friendly feeling for the United States throughout Latin America.

"We Brazilians like America more and more," he said with a smile. "Of course, we were always friendly with your great country, but never so friendly as now. The people of Brazil feel that Americans and Brazilians stand for the same democratic ideals."

Dr. Alvaro, who was in Argentina last summer, declared that more than 80 per cent of the people of that country are pro-Allies in their sympathies. He said that on the basis of his travels and experiences in Argentina he believed the people there would back with enthusiasm any action of their government to aid the United States in the war.

War Upsets Economy.
The war has upset the economy of many Latin-American countries that counted on their trade with the United States, Dr. Alvaro declared. He pointed out that in Brazil, for example, no one is allowed to use a private automobile and that many coffee plantations are being converted to cotton, alfalfa and soy bean cultivation.

Dr. Alvaro will confer with American leaders about the Pan American congress of ophthalmology scheduled for Montevideo next November. He is the secretary-general of the congress.

He said that through Latin America about one person out of every thousand is sightless. He declared that at least 72 per cent of such blindness can be prevented. For the first time, he added, many Latin-American countries are organizing societies for the prevention of blindness and these organizations are endeavoring to spread education about sight and to make available more medical facilities for combating diseases of the eye.

These Identical Twins Keep Step Right Along

MANLIUS, ILL.—A new chapter has been written in the amazingly similar development of Charles and Allan Thompson, identical four-year-old twin sons of Mr. and Mrs. Orville D. Thompson.

At birth in Princeton hospital, they weighed within 1 1/2 ounces of each other, and have varied little in height or weight since then. There were only a few hours difference in times they learned to walk and talk.

They had the whooping cough and mumps together, and in February, 1941, they both underwent appendectomies within an hour. This time? It was their tonsils. Both developed the same symptoms with identical infections, and underwent tonsillectomies.

Chinese Prison Inmates Boost War Bond Sales

VANCOUVER, B. C.—When one of the officials instructed a Victory loan salesman to take a trip out to the B. C. penitentiary to "sell a couple of bonds" he didn't think the salesman would take him seriously.

But the salesman went out anyway and when he returned to the office he announced, rather proudly, that he had sold two $500 bonds.

"Two Chinese prisoners bought 'em," he said. "There's a good market there. A number of other inmates have signified their willingness to purchase later on."

Warrant, Flight Officers Ruled Entitled to Salute

WASHINGTON.—The war department solved a problem in military etiquette by ruling that warrant officers and flight officers are entitled to salutes from enlisted men and non-commissioned officers.

Warrant officers and flight officers rank just below second lieutenants, but this ruling affirmed the fact that they were commissioned officers.

Among other prerogatives granted to them is the right to obtain membership in officers' messes.

Fighting Family Are All Officers in Service

SALEM, ORE.—"I guess I'll have to salute the whole family," complains J. McNeil, navy quartermaster third class.

His wife is a civilian defense major; one son, James, is a sergeant pilot in the army, and another, Robert, is a naval aviation cadet.

JESUS THE GREAT PHYSICIAN

LESSON TEXT—John 5:2-17.
GOLDEN TEXT—Wilt thou be made whole?—John 5:6.

Hope of the hopeless, help of the helpless—who would, that be, but Jesus? Coming to Jerusalem for the feast He did not seek out the homes of the mighty, the places of learning and culture, but betook Himself to the Pool of Bethesda, where there lay a multitude of them that were sick, blind, halt, withered." Why did He go to such a place? Because He always had compassion upon those in need.

In this multitude He saw at once the neediest man of all—one without friends or loved ones to care for him, despondent and disheartened. What happened that day may well encourage the heart of every sad, lonely, and discouraged one.

I. Hopeless Infirmary (vv. 1-7).

How weak and helpless is humanity. Oh, yes, we seem to be strong, capable, fearless, but only until we meet some great elemental problem. Then we see that we are indeed a great multitude of impotent folk. The gently falling snow stopped the undefeated Napoleon. The silent fog can paralyze a nation. Sickness, death—who can stay their hand? We need the steady and powerful grip of God upon our lives if we are to go through such experiences. Not only was this man ill and weak, but his long years of suffering had made him so accustomed to weakness that he had reached a state of despair.

Such an attitude invites defeat. It may be the only recourse of the man of the world, but with Jesus standing by to help, there is good reason for assurance of faith in the darkest hour.

In the face of his need—yes, even in the light of Jesus' provision for that need—the leaders of the Jews could only criticize.

II. Heartless Religion (vv. 10-13, 15-16).

Jesus had done for the man what the Jews had not been able to do; in fact, one wonders whether they had so much as lifted a finger to help this poor sufferer. But now that he was able to walk, they were greatly concerned about the violation of their Sabbath day restriction against any work.

Instead of shouting for joy that this man was able to carry not only himself but his bed, they became zealous about maintaining the letter of their law.

Are there not those in our day who would be greatly disturbed if the deathlike quiet and dignity of their church services were to be broken by the cry of a new born babe in Christ? Would a revival be welcomed in the great churches of America which have lost the savor of Christ and the power of the gospel? We think not.

The man who had been healed answered well (v. 11). He did not know who Jesus was, but he knew that if He had authority to heal, He also had the right to tell him to carry his bed. When we meet Jesus we will be healed of our infirmities and, like this man, be delivered from the fear of cold ecclesiasticism.

But let us turn to the heart of our lesson, which is the act of Jesus in giving him

III. Healing of Body and Soul (vv. 8, 9, 14).

The body of this man was miraculously healed. There was no partial improvement, no long drawn out convalescence and regaining of strength. In fact, he was told to do something which called for the full vigor of a healthy body, to show that he was healed.

Even so when we are healed from sin it is not to a half-dead existence, but to the full vigor of spiritual life. We are to arise and walk in the power and grace which Christ has brought into our lives.

Note that the miracle performed here was for the glory of God. The miracles of God are not mere marvels or wonders. They are not for the advancement of the cause of any man or for personal glory. They are the mighty signs of an omnipotent God wrought for the good of men, for their spiritual enlightenment, and as a testimony to the one true God.

So in this case Jesus found the man in the temple to admonish him to continue steadfast in the spiritual liberty which had come to him "lest a worse thing befall" him.

Evidently this man's infirmity had been caused by sin, and even though he had suffered those 38 long years the tendency toward sin was still alive in his heart. Sin dies hard. How often have we not seen those who have cried to God out of their affliction, promising all sorts of spiritual changes if God will deliver them. When He does, they go right back to their old ways. The one who does that may well be looking for the "worse thing" which will surely befall him.

Most Feed Crops Best Put in Silage

Keeping Essential Vitamin A Necessary

Almost any feed crop is worth twice as much an acre when made into silage as it is in the barn or stack.

This is especially true of corn and grain sorghum crops which will not make much grain. It applies equally to sweet sorghums, Johnson grass and sudan.

If corn and grain sorghums can be left standing until the grain is hard, they will make better silage, provided the majority of the leaves still are green. Nevertheless, these feeds should be made into silage even though the leaves are burned or dried up. But all vitamin A would be lost in the latter case.

Sheep are playing a double role in Uncle Sam's fight for freedom: Food for fighters, workers, allies; fleece lined clothing for soldiers in arctic climates.

Vitamin A is very essential, especially if silage is its only source, and the main origin of vitamin A for livestock is green feed.

It is even more necessary to have the sweet sorghums, such as redtop cane and seeded ribbon cane, ripe for making silage. Immature sweet sorghums make sour silage. Johnson and sudan grasses should be headed out and the seed in the dough stage.

Any of the grasses and legumes should be dried until their water content is reduced to 35 or 40 per cent before being put into the silo. This means about half dry enough to bale for hay.

When a majority of the leaves of corn, grain and sweet sorghums, and Johnson and sudan grasses are green, it is not necessary to add water if the feed is chopped in one-quarter-inch lengths or less with an ensilage cutter when put in the trench.

If the majority of the leaves are dry, it will be necessary to add enough water to wet the feed about like a heavy dew. Dampen bundle feed even though the majority of the leaves are green.

Agriculture in Industry

Mints

An effort is being made to grow in the United States some commodities which are becoming scarce and will soon be unobtainable. Manufacturers and dealers in medicines, spices, and condiments who depend on a steady supply of these botanicals from abroad, are urging that they be produced here in greater quantities.

Sage, the savory herb used in cooking, can be easily and profitably grown here. Our American sage is usually of a better quality than the imported article, and growers are being offered very attractive prices for their crop. It is used widely in the meat packing industry and is also a standard ground spice for the pantry shelf.

Sage is one of the 12 species of the mint family and can be started by cuttings or simply dividing the roots. From this family come many other crops which are commercially marketed. Spearmint is used for mint sauces and for flavoring chewing gum; peppermint yields oil and menthol used in confections, flavorings and medicines. Pennyroyal is used in medicine and the lemon-scented leaves of bergamot are much used in perfumes.

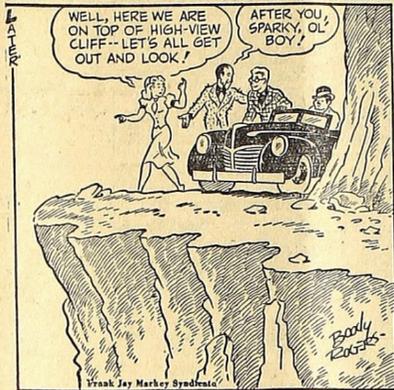

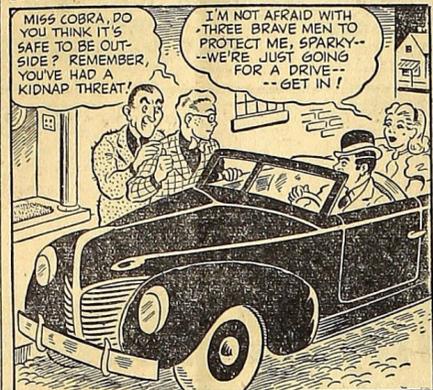

Agricultural Notes

Sunlight and soybeans are suggested by the California college of agriculture to poultrymen searching for substitutes to replace fish oils and meal in poultry rations.

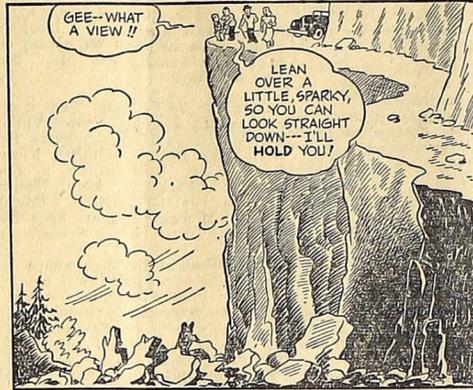

Cannibalism in young chicks is best controlled by keeping the brooder house as cool as practical and by covering the windows with a single thickness of paper to prevent brightly lighted spots within the house.

Dunking Old Idea

Dunking in your "bunchum" is a custom as ancient as Arabia. It was there where the world's first cup of coffee was made from some strange, bright red berries the Arabians called "bunn." The beverage became "bunchum" and was thick enough to scoop out of the bowl with bits of food. Result: Introduction of dunking to the world!

Why do people do it?

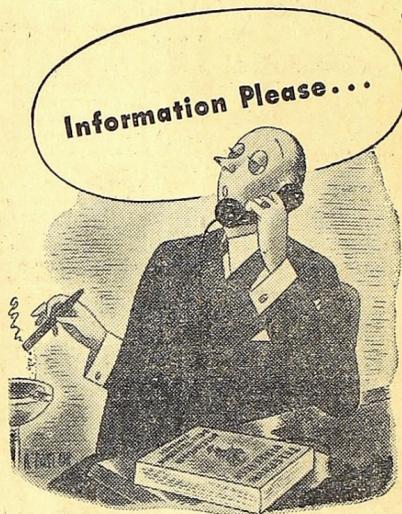

People who call "Information" for numbers that are readily available in the telephone directory probably don't realize the serious waste they are causing.

1,450 hours of operators' and equipment time are wasted each day in Michigan by calls for numbers that are listed in the telephone directory. Those thousands of unnecessary calls further congest the war-loaded telephone system.

So please look in the directory for the number you want. If it is NOT listed and you must call "Information," write it down so you won't have to ask for it again.

A War Message on WAR BONDS

from the President of the United States

"... The American people know that if we would raise the billions which we now need to pay for the war and at the same time prevent a disastrous rise in the cost of living, we shall have to double and more than double the scale of our savings.

"Every dime and dollar not vitally needed for absolute necessities should go into WAR BONDS and STAMPS to add to the striking power of our armed forces.

"If these purchases are to have a material effect in restraining price increases they must be made out of current income.

"In almost every individual case they should be big enough to mean rigid self-denial, a substantial reduction for most of us in the scale of expenditure that is comfortable and easy for us.

"We cannot fight this war, we cannot exert our maximum effort, on a spend-as-usual basis.

"We cannot have all we want if our soldiers and sailors are to have all they need."

... Franklin D. Roosevelt

Women AT WAR

Sophia

Mrs. Kimball and Mrs. Worthington, dressed soberly and wearing their best black gloves, walked along the stony country road back toward Sophia Hardy's farm, to pay their visit of condolence.

"How do you reckon she'll be bearing up?" Mrs. Kimball asked Mrs. Worthington. Both ladies wore their most solemn, funeral expressions.

"A mighty severe blow," Mrs. Worthington said. "Mighty severe. To lose your only son, the mainstay of your declining years. And such a dreadful death, too—to go down with a ship. Mercy!"

"The first of our boys from Hand County to go, too," Mrs. Kimball said, mournfully. "I wouldn't blame Sophia Hardy for feeling right bitter."

They stood on the simple stone doorstep, with downcast eyes, getting themselves into the proper commiserative mood.

"Come in," Mrs. Kimball said. "The voice was brisk and cordial. They looked up in surprise. Sophia herself had come to the door. As they followed her into the parlor they exchanged glances, with eyebrows lifted. Sophia was not even in mourning. The parlor shades were not even drawn."

"It's nice of you to come," Sophia said. "Do sit down."

"We came," Mrs. Kimball said almost reprovingly, "to tell you that our hearts are bleeding for you in your great loss."

"We know how lonely you must be out here," Mrs. Worthington said. "With nothing to take your mind off . . . off . . ." She sniffed and reached in her purse for a handkerchief.

"Oh, I keep busy," Sophia said. "I've just finished applying for the Government insurance on Tom's life."

The visiting ladies could not resist a shocked glance at one another.

"I want to get it right away," Sophia said. "So I can put it into War Bonds. My boy hasn't finished fighting yet, not by a long shot."

The ladies were so occupied with feeling horrified, so titillated by this callous behaviour in a bereaved mother—that neither of them noticed Sophia's hands. Under the folds of her clean print dress, against the seat of her chair, they were tightly clenched.

THE GENERAL'S TWO WIVES
There was much more than meets the eye behind the departure of Gen. Hsiung Shih-fei, head of the Chinese military mission to Washington. It had its intriguing personal side, but also it went deep into the vitals of our most difficult war problem.

On the personal side, it happened that General Hsiung had two wives, which in China is a criterion of power and prestige. But it also happened that Madame Chiang Kai-shek, educated in the United States, does not approve of two wives.

When in China, Madame Chiang does not interfere with the military appointments of her husband. But in the United States, General Hsiung is reported to believe that the situation might have been otherwise, and that the U. S. A., big as it is, might have been too small for both of them.

FARM FIGHT

A group of presidents of land grant colleges, headed by President H. C. "Curley" Byrd of the University of Maryland, called on Secretary of Agriculture Wickard the other day. Behind that call was one of the most important fights which will come before the present congress.

Actually the land grant college presidents came to propose an agricultural program which they think will overcome the food shortages. But behind this is a plan to put control of the farm economy back into the hands of the farm bureau and the powerful farm lobbies. It is a fight which probably will keep up a running fire all during congress.

Background of the fight goes back to early in the Roosevelt administration when Henry Wallace, then secretary of agriculture, delivered a speech in which he criticized his own agriculture department for helping only the one-third upper-crust farmers. The great mass of the farmers, he said, the tenants, the little farmers, and farm labor, got no help from the government.

Wallace was referring to the fact that the American Farm Bureau federation, the Grange, the National Co-operative Milk Producers, and other organizations with powerful lobbies in Washington, had always influenced farm policies and dominated the agriculture department.

Working hand in glove with them have been the land grant colleges, the state commissioners of agriculture, the county agents, and the farm extension services.

These groups controlled agriculture locally, even when Washington was supplying a majority of the funds.

HITLER OR JAPAN?

Another factor, however, goes much deeper and is one reason behind reports that Gen. Joseph Stilwell may return as head of the U. S. military mission to China.

This factor is the Chinese argument that Japan is a greater enemy than Hitler, coupled with the fear that after we have defeated Hitler, we will make peace with Japan at the expense of China.

This fear is one which cannot be laughed off easily. In fact, it will take a lot of persuading to dispel Chinese worries. They know that a lot of the career gentlemen, powerful in the state department, have contended that Japan should have her place in the sun. They know that some of the state department clique tacitly favored Japanese occupation of Manchuria, while the British almost openly supported it.

The realistic Chinese, therefore, argue that after Hitler is defeated Japan is more than likely to propose a compromise (as she got Teddy Roosevelt to do to end the Russo-Japanese war) whereby Japan gets a slice of China and the world gets a rest from war.

The realistic Chinese also know that they could make peace with Japan tomorrow by giving her several treaty ports and a slice of the North. In fact, the Japs probably would like nothing better than a peace which would permit them to withdraw half a million men from China and use them against us in the Pacific.

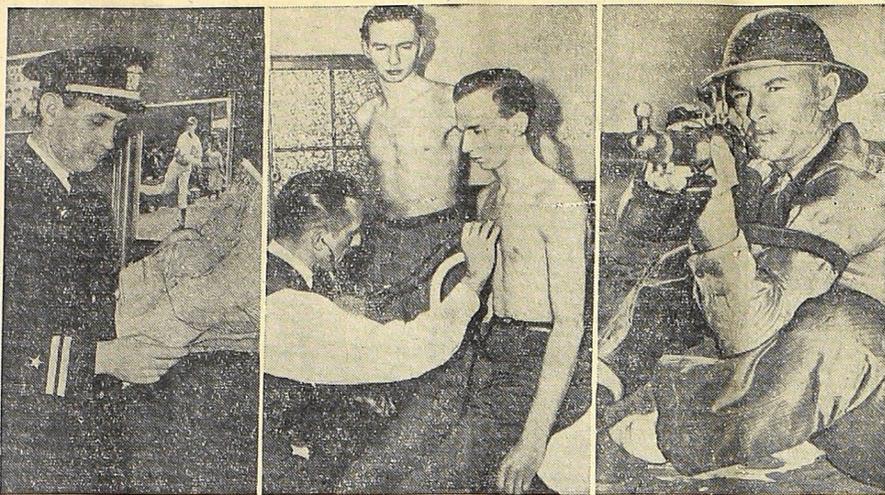

Finally Chiang Kai-shek has his own troubles with his generals, many of them pliable to Jap wiles, especially "silver bullets," which the Japs claim is the easiest way to win wars.

So Chiang needs something to show to keep his generals in line—either more arms, which he is not getting; or a treaty from the United States pledging we will fight to the end until China is absolutely free.

Instead of such a pledge, Chiang has a military mission headed by a man whom the Chinese don't like—General Stilwell. Joe Stilwell comes from the old school which didn't particularly like the Chinese, and the Chinese make no bones about the fact that they don't like him.

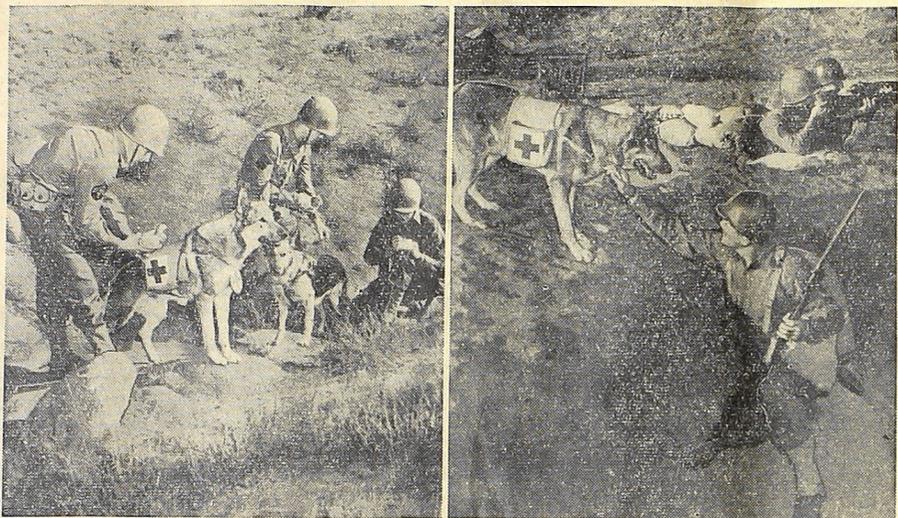

He insists on doing all his business direct with the generalissimo, talking to him only.

As a result, Willkie was given a message to take back to Roosevelt to get General Stilwell out of the picture.

Army Dogs Serve as Messengers to Men at Front

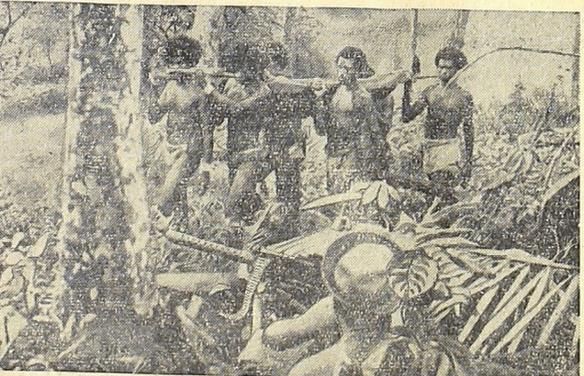

Carrying pigeons on their sides at the front line is a duty that army dogs often perform. In picture at left, dogs are shown at a simulated front line position, while the men prepare to release the pigeons to the rear for more aid for the medical corps to help with the wounded. A soldier writes the message. Right: Here Rin Tin Tin III illustrates how a dog would bring a message from a command post at the rear of the detachment holding the front lines. These dogs would prove of inestimable value to detachments and other units during actual warfare.

Private Wins $1,500 Air Medal Competition

Private Walter Hancock of St. Louis submitted the winning design for the new air medal. Private Hancock entered the competition while he was yet a civilian. Word that his design won the competition came at the end of a day of KP at Camp Livingston, La. Picture shows Hancock, left, receiving $1,500 check from Col. W. M. Dixon, finance officer, U. S. army. Inset: Cast of the new air medal designed by Private Hancock.

The Home Town Boys Lend a Hand

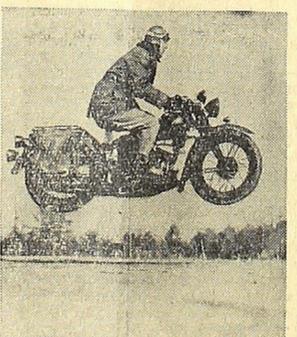

Natives, who know New Guinea territory even better than the jungle-hardened Aussies and Americans, carry the wounded past a machine gun nest. Transporting the injured from the line of battle is merely one important function of these dark-skinned men and boys who act as porters, guides and carpenters.

Somewhere in India

Capt. James W. Snyder, U. S. army intelligence officer, who in civilian life was a historian, is shown in conversation with a veteran Indian guide. This picturesque native served in China during the Boxer rebellion. The ribbon decoration is for service with the late Lord Kitchener. He also served under Lord Roberts.

HANK LANDRY'S red eye is right powerful stuff and even if Monty an' me wuz under the influence of it, when we made the bet, we knowed our sense of honor demanded that we go through with it.

This is how it comes about:

Monty says to me: "Bunky," he says, "in regards that there hoss of yours which you calls Curly, I hereby rises to remark that he is nothin' but a bag o' ole bones, descended from a cross twixt a prairie dog an' a pair of blue overalls."

Well, right away I knowed that Hank's red eye has took a strangle hold on Monty's brains, else he wouldn't go makin' no such statement, as everyone knows in these here parts that I am super-sensitive in regards my hoss Curly, an' won't stand fer no such remarks under ordinary conditions.

However, I am not the kind of jigger who would overlook the lubricant qualities of Hank Landry's red eye on a hombre such as Monty Hunt, so instead o' yankin' out my six gun an' emptying its contents into Monty's ribs, I merely smirk in a very insultin' fashion, an' says: "Monty," I says, "I am sick an' tired of hearin' you cast aspersions agin my hoss Curly, which hoss is the fastest runner in the state and probably more intelligent than a certain individual who ain't at the moment so far away. As a matter of fact," I orates, "I am convinced that aforementioned aspersions are provoked in you by an emotion called envy, which emotion can be readily understood by me when I brings to mind a picture of that mangy, flea-bitten, lazy bunch o' crow bait which you has the audacity to refer to as a hoss and calls 'Dynamite'!"

Whereupon I an' Monty consumes two more of Hank Landry's stiff ones, after which Monty he turns to me all dignified and important and says like this: "In that case," he says, "let us make a wager. We will race from here to the C Cross R, an' the owner of the hoss that gets there last will pay to the owner of the other hoss one sawbuck."

After which, Monty he tilts the bottle of red eye, an' looks more important still, an' I says: "O. K.," I says. "It is a bet." An' tilts a bottle on my own account.

Well, we hangs around Hank's for awhile tiltin' bottles an' what not, and presently sits down to contemplate. After awhile I remembers Monty's wager an' it strikes me that all is not well. I ponders fer awhile and pretty soon I says to Monty like this: "Monty," I says, "do I understand that the owner of the last hoss to arrive at the C Cross R is to win this here race?" And Monty, he says, yes, that is the bet and that is how she stands an' if I am tryin' to get out of runnin' the race we will have to settle this thing otherwise.

Well, I am not a man to wish to get out of any bet whatever, an' so I says: "O. K.," she stands as she stands," which settled the matter.

So we sits around Hank's fer awhile longer, tiltin' bottles an' what not an' wishin' the other would decide to go home, as the last one to go would win the race accordin' to the terms as agreed. Along about mid-afternoon I thinks to myself, well, now, this is a pretty howdydo, as both of us is apt to sit here forever, not wishin' to lose that there race, whereupon I confers with Monty upon this matter an' he says, yes, it is certainly too bad, but as a bet is a bet there is nothing can be done about it.

However, if I wish to go home I can do so by payin' him ten bucks as, for one thing I do not have ten bucks to pay an' fer another thing there is the honor of my hoss Curly at stake.

So Monty an' I sits around an' wonders just how long we can sit without becomin' uneasy, when in walks Buck Andrews, who is the C Cross R foreman, which is where we works. Well, Buck sees us a' sittin' there in the depths of despair, an' he comes over an' says: "Look here, boys," he says, "you two was due back at the ranch this mornin' an' what I wants to know is, are you comin' back or shall I pay you off now an' look elsewhere for two punchers?"

At these words Monty he breaks down an' cries, as everyone knows he has a soft spot for the dear old C Cross R, just as everyone knows I an' he are the soul of honor.

Buck looks surprised an' asks us what is the matter, whereupon Monty he stops his crying an' explains the whole situation, ending by sayin': "Now, you can see what a jam I an' Bunky is in, as it is a matter of losin' our jobs at the C Cross R, which is one place in all this world we loves an' can call home, or losin' our sense of honor, which is somethin' that no man can afford to lose an' live in these here parts."

Well, Buck immediately sees the seriousness of the situation, and scratches his chin in deep contemplation. Presently he smiles. "I'll tell you what," he says. "You two boys get up now an' go outside and get your hosses. Only you, Bunky," he says to me, "you climb aboard Monty's Dynamite and you, Monty, climb aboard Bunky's Curly, an' race back to the ranch. And, of course, the last one in will lose the race as the terms state that whoever owns the last hoss to reach the ranch will pay to the owner of the other the sum of ten bucks."

Well, I an' Monty looks at each other, an' suddenly we sees the light an' thinks well, Buck Andrews is certainly a very smart man. Then we scrambles to our feet an' runs outside an' Monty he catches up my Curly an' I catches up Dynamite, an' pretty soon we're headed for the dear old C Cross R lickity splittity, with Buck followin' along in his buckboard an' laughing very loudly.

It is ten miles from Hank's to the dear old C Cross R an' for five of them miles I an' Monty runs a neck-and-neck race, which is a surprise to me as I did not believe that his bronc Dynamite was much of a runner. At the same time I am struck by the thought that if this same Dynamite reaches the ranch ahead of good old Curly, it will prove that Monty's aspersion against my cayuse is justified, which is plumb upsettin'. I am therefore torn twixt my love of ten bucks and permittin' Monty to feel that his aspersion castin' was justified.

Along about this time, Monty he seems to think of the same thing an' begins slowin' down, whereupon I slows down, too. Monty, I guesses, is also concerned about admittin' to me by reachin' the ranch fust that my aspersion castin' against his cayuse was justified.

Well, pretty soon we are slowed down to a walk an' Monty is eyenin' me out of the corner of his eyes an' I am eyenin' him likewise. About now the ranch comes into sight an' at the same time Monty allows he is powerful tired and thinks well, he'll take a rest. So he stops and climbs down and stretches out under a cottonwood tree, which I does likewise, and afore you can say Jonathan Robinson, we is both slumberin'.

After awhile we wakes up an' finds ourselves lying on the floor o' the C Cross R bunk house an' Buck Andrews a-settin' on a bunk floor luffin' his fool head off.

"Look here," says Monty, settin' up quick-like, "who won that there race?" he says. An' I says: "Yes, who come in last?"

"Well," says Buck, "nobody won it as you both come ridin' back in my buckboard with them two nags o' yours tied on behind, which makes it a tie."

Which is a big relief to I an' Monty as we both feel that we is still the soul of honor.

Municipal Tax Collection

Prospects Good for 1942

Prospects for municipal tax collections are at least "good" this year despite added federal taxes and other drains on taxpayers' purses, the Municipal Finance Officers association said after reviewing factors affecting local revenues.

Making heavy demands on taxpayer income and tending to delay payment of local taxes, are war bond purchases and community chest increases, added federal income and excise taxes, higher living costs, and increased cost of domestic help. Also affecting local collections are the curtailment and closing of certain businesses.

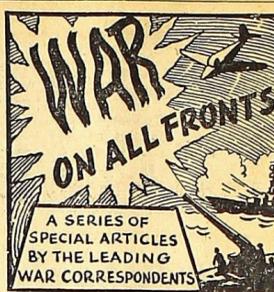

Lessening the demand on private incomes, on the other hand, are such factors as rationing of automobiles, gasoline, household appliances and radios, and stoppage of new building and extensive repairs on old.

Changing incomes—higher for some groups and lower for others—probably will be reflected in local tax collections also. The wage earner in war industries may see his income rise as much as 70 per cent, along with the rising incomes of large business and industry engaged in war work. In the salaried group increased compensation comes slowly and in small amounts; among professionals, physicians' and engineers' incomes are up, lawyers' are down.

Water, electric and gas companies will show larger incomes, especially in defense areas, as will publicly owned utilities in such areas.

Saving Mileage

When three men in Passaic, N. J., living within a radius of three blocks of each other, pooled their cars on a 36-mile daily round trip to work, each man began to save 8,200 miles of driving a year.

America's Naval Hospitals

By Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with Collier's Weekly)

San Diego hospital has grown from 900 to 5,000. This might imply confusion—as new buildings have gone up everywhere—but the small units are as neat and well cared for as the large ones. I went into the small TB building in which there were some boys from the southern islands of the Pacific. They might well be there for weeks, but at least the disease has been discovered and with proper care they have a chance for recovery.

Some of the old Fair buildings have been converted into barracks where the men who are convalescing are sent to spend their last few weeks of convalescence. Here they have more freedom. They may wander in the gardens and there is a Red Cross room with trained workers who visit the wards as well as talk to the boys in the office. Many a difficulty is ironed out when it is talked over with these capable young women.

The nurses have pleasant quarters, though arranged to simulate, as far as possible, the space which they will have to fit into at sea, in the hope of breaking them in gently in case they are needed.

I remember having attended a large luncheon in the gallery of this very building, and I could not help thinking that today all of this beauty is serving a far better purpose than it did even during the peaceful days of the Exposition.

An Awkward Moment

Not all the boys in the hospitals are casualties from actual fighting zones. Some of them are brought in from shore stations or from ships at sea, and very often their ailments are characteristic of a civilian population. Jaundice may be found, and there were four wards of appendicitis cases in one hospital. In fact, I was allowed to look into the operating room, where, under local anesthetic, two boys were having their appendixes removed.

I would never have tried to attract their attention, but the doctor in charge said that they would be disappointed if they did not see me, so he suggested to both of them that they turn their eyes and look at me. I responded in a rather embarrassed and nervous manner, I fear, but then, I could see what was happening to those appendixes!

Some of the patients play chess; most of them play games of some kind. Many of them read, and the Red Cross has a canteen and a traveling library in nearly every large hospital. Few of the boys I talked with were near their own homes. One boy made the whole ward laugh as he told me, "I'm going to have a baby in December and I sure hope to get home for it."

South Carolina is a long way from California.

You got the feeling that most of Texas had gone into the navy as boy after boy, asked about his home, named some little Texas town.

Young America is extraordinarily heartening. They may come from farms or factories or colleges, but there is a spirit in all of them which binds them together. That spirit which somehow knows that victory is theirs.

I visited only one army hospital—Lettermen's in the Presidio. It is a lovely location and beautifully kept, but it hasn't been obliged to expand in the same way that the navy hospitals have. So I speak primarily about the naval hospitals.

Wishes Sweethearts Could See Them

The mothers, wives and sweethearts of the men in the armed forces of this country want to know how their menfolk are housed and fed and cared for when they themselves cannot be with them. I kept wishing a hundred times a day, as I went down between the long aisles of beds, that the boys could look up and instead of finding a stranger's eyes upon them, could see the women they loved.

One can only hope that in having a great desire to pass on to these patients a sense of security and affection and admiration, one does succeed; and perhaps through their own imagination, they see the women they love in any woman who comes to them with a real interest and affection in her eyes.

The organization of all of these hospitals, the choice of men to head them up, is a gigantic business venture. When you think that they are dotted all over the East coast and the West coast, over the islands of the Pacific and the Caribbean, you look with pride at the surgeon general of the navy, and feel a great sense of satisfaction in the medical profession of the whole country, which has responded so magnificently to the call to enter the armed services, and which has made this necessary expansion not only possible but a fact.

This Is the Army
(By the Soldiers in Irving Berlin's Show for Army Emergency Relief.)

According to the pay rate for American soldiers as compared with the wages the average Jap soldier gets, Uncle Sam considers the American private to be worth 167 Japs. . . . Soldiers are flooding the Fifth Ave. Public Library with requests for books about Germany, Japan and Italy—especially the points of interest in those countries. They're so confident the U. S. will take over they want to be prepared for a bit of sightseeing.

The Quartermasters Department at Philadelphia has asked manufacturers of medallions and decorations to bid on the manufacture of between 500,000 and one million decorations to be worn by the soldiers of the Army occupying Germany after the present war. . . . The U. S. Army tells its men: "It is commonly supposed that the first duty of a good soldier is to die for his country. This is a mistake. The first duty of a soldier is to make his enemies die for theirs."

The U. S. Army runs the largest movie chain in the world—500 theaters at camps throughout the country. . . . The Army soon won't have any dish-breaking problems in its messhalls. The Quartermaster Corps has developed a new shatterproof glass that will bounce like a golf ball when dropped. . . . One of the Army's special services for its men is providing members of the A.E.F. with an opportunity to acquire an education via correspondence courses.

WALTER WINCHELL is on a tour of duty outside Continental U. S. During his absence, contributors will substitute.

Our average soldier is more than a half inch taller and nearly 10 pounds heavier than the men of 1917, according to the war department. . . . Glider pilots are referred to as the "G-Men of the Air". . . . The speed limit for all Army vehicles is 30 miles per hour, regardless of the civil speed limit. The Army wants its vehicles driven in a manner that will set an example for civilians. . . . The men who load the bombs on Uncle Sam's planes refer to them as "Bundles for Berlin."

As the result of a survey made by the Quartermaster Corps, all government issues of Army trousers, in the future, will be more roomy around the seat. . . . A Negro private, after being issued his Army clothing at Fort Sill recently, was asked about the fit of his new uniform. "Why, these duds fits fine, 88 gint," he replied, "but do you mind if I buys another pair of pants for jitterbugging?"

Although the new steel helmet is slightly heavier than the 1917 model, the soldiers don't mind the extra weight. They claim the new helmet is a hair-restorer because it stimulates the scalp by bouncing around on the head.

During the Army's recent maneuvers, the boys discovered lots of uses for their new steel helmets. It makes a good seat just outside the pup tent, sort of a front stoop. It's an excellent container for the things a soldier takes out of his pockets before going to sleep. It can be used for taking baths. And it's the finest outdoor wash tub ever designed—it holds at least two shirts and a couple of pairs of socks.

Army Slang: Insects are "mechanized freckles". . . . A wastebasket is known as "File 13," and the nut house is "Section Eight". . . . Nurses are "Snow Whites," and a letter from the girl friend is a "sugar report". . . . The guardhouse is the "Cross-bar hotel," and woollen underwear are "Superman drawers". . . . The bugler is "Gabriel," money is "E Pluribus," and a garbage truck is a "honeywagon."

A girl in Sebring, Fla., whose boy friend is on duty in the Pacific war zone, recently received a letter from him. On opening the letter, the girl found only a narrow slip of paper on which was written: "Your boy friend still loves you, but he talks too much." It was signed "Censor."

When Gen. Jimmy Doolittle recently made a breathtaking steep takeoff with an observer, he turned around and chuckled: "Bet 95 per cent of the people down there thought we'd crash". . . . The observer replied: "Only 50 per cent up here thought so."

U. S. troops in Australia have a hit tune of their own titled, "The Aussie and the Yanks Are Here." It was written by Pvt. The shortest movie review ever printed appeared recently in the Fort Leavenworth Reception Center News. The picture was a War Department training film on "Sanitati n." The comment was: "Good clean fun."

It's So Easy to Make His Suit Into a Smart One for Yourself

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

THE urge to sew, mend and "make over" is taking possession of patriotic women everywhere. Not only does the idea of reviving the art of home sewing carry appeal to those who perform most practice economy for economy's sake, but it is developing into a real hobby among women who are going "all out" in their eagerness to serve their beloved America in the victory program set before them.

Now that this wartime winter is ushering in an era of home sewing that is due to last the duration through, fabric and pattern departments are being besieged by women whose new-born enthusiasm for sewing is leading them to attempt anything from a simple blouse to a dress and some are even going so far as to try their hand at a suit or a garment as pretentious as a smart, softly tailored spring coat.

Aprons of the new home sewing trend, here's a question to ponder—how could your husband's old suit be made to suit you? A few months ago you might have raised your hands in utter protest or just laughed the idea off. However, today, with government conservation in full swing, you'll think twice and decide that nothing could please you more.

It's easy enough to whittle down an old suit to your size, and think of the wonderful men's fabric you will be acquiring for your suit—where is she who has never coveted the perfectly grand wool materials used for the suits worn by the male members of the household! Once you've attempted a "cut down," the man's closet in your room will no longer be his to have and to hold for his very own. However, we recommend that you start with a worn, outgrown number for your first experiment. Of course you don't do a thing until you've ripped apart the suit, reversed the fabric and sponged and pressed it.

Contrast Front

Countless are the ingenious ways in which designers are featuring striking color contrast. One of the most successful methods stressed this season is the use of contrasting color for the bodice front only. Three outstanding fashion touches are given to the frock pictured above. The body is of dull black crepe, the ice-blue front is of lustrous satin (very new this season), and the front closing is finished with a large sequin-encrusted button matched to the ice-blue of the satin. It adds to the charm when the hat repeats the color of the contrast front. This may be done in a discreet color touch, or the newest thing is to wear a beguiling little feather hat in matching color.

You'll get your skirt out of the trousers, to be sure. Invert them and use the ankle part for the waistline. Then cut up as far as the crotch and you will have a graceful flare for each side seam, also a center space both back and front to be later inset with pleats formed of excess material cut off the trousers, as you shortened them to your measurement.

It's no trick at all to manipulate the jacket, for there's ample material in a man's coat to cut down to the type you like best. The illustration gives you the picture of a suit before (oval inset) and after making over. The suit as the lady wears it in the picture is one of those conservative types made after a simplicity pattern that will remain fashion-correct for seasons to come.

If you do not cut into the vest (it really is not necessary to do so) you can convert it into a smart gilet to wear with your jacket sweater which will give you a most pleasing change, especially if your sweater is color-bright. Get a pattern of one of the new, chic gilets and try it.

When little daughter of the household sees mother's suit so trim and so modish, she will be wanting a suit, too. And why not? Brother's outgrown suit calls to action! In making a stylish outfit for wee sister, use the trousers for a little skirt with "kick pleat" back and front or shallow pleat it all around. At any rate, make it the suspender type with bolero jacket or Eton. Embroider the suspenders in gay wool yarn. Make a little handbag and beret of self fabric scraps left over and embroider with yarn to match.

Cotton Lace Returns to Daytime Fashion Scene

Good news! Comes the report from style centers that daytime frocks of pretty cotton laces are scheduled for a return engagement this spring. These are being made up in string color, in white and in all the dainty pastels. For the most part they are of the short waisted and coat dress types.

Perhaps the biggest news in regard to the new cotton laces is that you can get a lovely sheer type in black that makes up beautifully for dressy wear. It has a Chantilly appearance that is really good looking.

Straw Hats Will Sparkle With Touches of Sequin

When you go to your milliner to preview the advance spring hats do not be taken by surprise to see many charming straws starred with sequins, not in a crude, conspicuous way but just enough to give them a firefly glow that is very lovely. There will also be a discreet of beads and sequins done in most unique and original matter on the prints we will wear and on certain little pastel cloth dresses. It's this way fashion has chosen to stress the pretty feminine look.

Black Sweaters

Black sweaters will be with us again this spring. Smart hand-knit models are the preferred kind. Some are so classically simple as to invite the wearing of important looking costume jewelry. Others have the jewel adornment worked as an intrinsic part of the sweater, being embroidered with beads, bright stones or jet. An edging of wee fringe or vivid yarn distinguishes the latest models. Others have little crochet ruche trimming that sparkles with tiny jet beads.

PEAKING OF SPORTS

By Bob McShane

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

MAJOR league baseball moguls seem to have recovered from the highly contagious jitters that attacked them during the fall and early winter months.

The future of big time baseball no longer is so doubtful—at least for 1943. When Judge K. M. Landis, baseball czar, conferred with Joseph Eastman, director of the Office of Defense Transportation, he cleared up a lot of matters which had baffled said moguls for many a month. The news Landis brought to them was heartening, if not completely satisfying.

To begin with, the self-imposed ban on unnecessary traveling, with the resulting saving in transportation facilities, is practically all that was asked of baseball. Club owners were quick to fall into stride with the request, enunciated by Commissioner Landis.

In order to conserve rail miles, the magnates agreed to restrict spring training to a definite area, open the season April 21 instead of April 13 as originally planned, and close the season October 3 instead of September 26.

New Camp Sites

Training camp sites have been bound by definite geographical limitations. Camp sites must be picked north of the Ohio and Potomac rivers and east of the Mississippi river, except for the two St. Louis clubs. The Browns and Cardinals have been granted the right to train in Missouri if they wish. They probably will take advantage of that leeway if suitable locations can be found.

When executives of 15 of the major league clubs (Washington not being represented) met with Landis in Chicago following his conference with Eastman, only three clubs had made training arrangements not in conflict with developments reported by baseball's big chief. The Chicago Cubs and White Sox will condition at French Lick, Ind., and the Boston Red Sox will train in the fieldhouse at Tufts college.

Sam Breadon, president of the World Champion Cardinals, indicated Springfield, Mo., as a possibility. The Browns might head for southern Indiana.

Connie Mack of the Philadelphia Athletics still figured on training at Shibe park. The Athletics did it before—back in 1919—and Mr. Mack figures they can do it again. The Phils, under the leadership of Gerry Nugent, may move his boys into a college fieldhouse near Philadelphia.

General Manager Jack Zeller of the Detroit Tigers indicated that the club might wind up at Evansville, Ind., where they would be in a position to play exhibition games with the White Sox or Cubs, or at Benton Harbor, Mich., for the baths. The Cincinnati Reds showed some interest in the southern Indiana location and the Senators (on the Potomac) can't go further south. The Indians probably will stay in Ohio and the Pirates and Giants hadn't any definite plan.

A compromise resulted in the April 21 opening date. The initial suggestion was that the season start April 27. The discussion touched on April 22, 23 and 24. Then the 21st was set.

The extra week at the end of the season came as a new development. The seven extra days were provided to give that much more time for the playing of the 154-game schedule. The extra days will be used where transportation difficulties might develop.

New Losses

Even though spring training difficulties had been completely settled—which they haven't—the biggest headache of all would still remain. The question: Where to find playing talent?

Both major leagues have contributed their share to the nation's fighting forces, and now they face further losses to war industries. This was emphasized by the intimation from Dixie Walker that he likely would remain as athletic director of a war plant instead of returning to the Brooklyn Dodgers' right field.

Lou Finney of the Boston Red Sox was informed by his Alabama draft board that he would remain on his farm or be inducted. Alf Anderson, infielder for Pittsburgh, recently was classified 3-B and frozen to his job as a shipbuilder. Oris Hockett, Cleveland outfielder, seems as contented, financially and mentally, in his toolmaker's job as he was in baseball. Dolph Camilli, Dodger first baseman, told his bosses he thought "raising beef more essential than playing ball." Quite a few ball players are discontented with things as they are.

The problem of what to send a service man has been solved by the men themselves. Tobacco tops the list of gifts service men prefer from the folks back home, according to numerous surveys. If you have a friend or relative in the armed forces—Army, Navy, Marines, or Coast Guard—who smokes a pipe, or rolls-his-own, a pound of his favorite tobacco is very much in order. A big favorite with many service men is Prince Albert, the world's largest-selling smoking tobacco. Local dealers now are featuring Prince Albert in the pound can for the men in the service.—Adv.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Driven under 35 miles an hour, properly inflated and on a car with wheels in alignment war tires of reclaimed rubber should return up to 10,000 or more miles of service. Cars should be the watchword of the "war tire" user!

Rubber is considered one of the three most important strategic materials in war by officers in the Army's ordnance department.

Progress in reverse to the reopening of a street car line in Brooklyn, N. Y., that had been converted to motor buses several years ago. A war measure that will save 1,300,000 bus miles a year—end of course a relative amount of rubber.

Caster, camber, toe-in and king-pin inclination are factors in wheel alignment tire users are going to hear about now that periodic tire inspections are mandatory. They mean much to tire conservation.

AT FAMILY THEATRE

The above is a scene of Bud Abbott and Lou Costello from their latest picture "WHO DONE IT?" which opens a three day engagement at the Family Theatre, East Tawas, Sunday, January 24.

Farm Equipment Secured Through County War Board

Farm residents were reminded today by R. H. McKenzie, chairman of the local War Price and Rationing Board, that they must get in touch with the chairman of their County Agricultural War Board if they wish to purchase farm machinery or equipment. They should not apply to their local rationing board or to the War Production Board, Mr. McKenzie emphasized.

OPA officials report that many rural residents have misunderstood these requirements and as a result have made application to rationing boards or to field officers of the War Production Board when they wanted to purchase equipment. Instances have been reported of persons driving many miles to the nearest War Production Board office, asking a certificate to purchase equipment, only to find they had gone to the wrong agency.

Such applications have been handled by County Agricultural War Boards since these boards were set up by the Department of Agriculture in each county in the nation last fall. More recently applications for plumbing and heating equipment in farm homes also have been brought under the Agricultural War Board's jurisdiction.

Thus farmers should remember to get in touch with the Agricultural War Board chairman whenever they wish to purchase any type of machinery or equipment for the farm or farm house.

Share the Meat
by Dorothy Scott, Home Agent

The first resolve must be to get the most from every bit of meat you have. Cutting wastes all the way from the butcher's block to the table is a primary solution. Other suggestions for getting the "Most" from your meat supply are these:

Be open-minded. Use different cuts and kinds of meat, even if they are new to you.

Know your cuts—and know how best to use each of them.

Buy only what you need and can successfully store for a short time.

Uncooked meat, if kept longer than a few hours, requires cold storage of some kind. Even cooked meat needs careful storing where it is cold, and ground meat, whether cooked or not, must be kept colder and for shorter lengths of time than unground meat.

Be modern in your meat cookery. Use moderate heats, until done and no longer. Meat cooked this way is more juicy, tastes better, and retains more food values.

Let the cut and amount of fat determine the method of cooking. A tender cut is roasted or broiled—in an uncovered pan with no added water. Tough cuts want long, slow cooking in a covered pan with water or steam. Or grind the tough cuts and cook as tender meats are cooked.

Very seasonings, especially if you use the same kind of meat often. Onion, tomato, green pepper, a dash of herbs or spices, these give a different flavor.

Serve in many ways. For instance, stew can be given a new appetite appeal by serving in meat pie, as a filling for hot biscuits, or scalloped with macaroni or spaghetti.

Save all left-over meat, drippings, and gravy. There are thrifty and tasty ways to use them. If you have too much fat—contribute it to the fat collection.—Adapted from suggestions by the Bureau of Home Economics.

When I went back to the Coast Guard dog training school near Philadelphia I knew I would get sent out from there but where to I didn't know until arriving here today.

The place I am at now is an island six miles off the New Jersey coast. We are patrolling the beach of it with our trained German shepherd dogs. There are about twenty fellows at my station at present. This island is about one half mile wide and eighteen miles long and strictly a resort place. Inhabitants are few and far between right now and all the empty mansions along the beach here add to the spookiness of walking alone with just my dog. We have a .45 caliber so with that and the dog it helps quite a bit to take the fraidiness out of us. It sure is a desolate place. On all sides of our small station is the Atlantic and in the distance we can see the mainland. One long bridge connects the island to New Jersey.

There are two cities on the island, namely, Beach Haven and Barnegat City. We have plenty of liberty here and don't have to shave as long as we stay on the island—some place!

Well, I guess that is all for now and I'll be looking forward very much for the Herald. My new address is:
