A patriotic flag drill and details of the Style Review will be under the supervision of Miss Dorothy Bonsecours, home economics teacher of the Whittemore school and District Home Economics Agent Dorothy Scott.

A summer 4-H program built around the theme of "More Food for Freedom" was discussed at length. A goal of 220 completed summer projects was established. This goal is a 1000 per cent increase over the summer club completions of a year ago. Projects which are to be emphasized by council members and leaders include gardening, canning, food preparation, crops and livestock. Plans were also discussed regarding a fall fair or achievement day with hope expressed that this group might cooperate with the county Grange in establishing a county fall festival for both adults and youngsters. If this portion of the program is completed the fall fair will probably be held in late September.

A committee consisting of A. C. Hqrbach, H. E. Friedman and V. Marzinski, assisted by representatives of the plant union, conducted an employee meeting at the plant recently and explained in detail the importance of purchasing War Bonds through the payroll method. Will Explain Tax to Farmers Monday

Questions regarding the filing of a farm income tax report have become so numerous at the Agricultural Extension office that County Agent W. L. Finley has completed plans to discuss this problem at the Grant township hall, Monday evening, March 8, at 8:00 p. m. Eastern War Time.

All farmers of the county are encouraged to attend this Monday evening meeting where record keeping for an income tax will also be discussed. Tax records necessary and good farm management practices, and adjustments under war time conditions will receive emphasis.

Clyde O. May, farm management specialist of the Michigan State College, will be present to discuss the topic "What are Food Farm Management Practices and Adjustments Under Wartime Conditions." Unbalancing the Axis, and yet permitting a farmer to keep his farm business in balance is one more thought that will be developed in these discussions.

Washington, D. C.
THE AGRICULTURE DEPARTMENT

In the last few days the President himself has silenced administration critics of Claude Wickard, and decreed that he remain as secretary of agriculture.

The President's stand came at the height of an increasing storm brewing round the amiable Indiana corn farmer, whom everyone likes but whose all-important food program is lagging.

White House advisers have told the President that Wickard's program was inadequate, that it must be drastically revised, that there would be shocking deficiencies of food. Some have urged that Wickard be replaced.

The President, however, has defended his secretary of agriculture. But also he has appointed White House Secretary Lauchlin Currie—whose regular field is Chinese relations—to act as umpire on the farm program. Currie has given Wickard a nine-point program for revamping American agriculture and among other things has pointed out that England increased her food production 50 per cent with little additional manpower. Why, he asks, cannot the United States do the same?

AGRICULTURE'S PROGRAM

Here are Currie's proposals, advanced with the blessing of the White House:

1. The goals of agricultural production should be higher.
2. A new production program, possibly with a new budget, should be presented to congress.
3. All acreage allotments and other restrictions on production should be removed to encourage the more efficient farmers.
4. The 1,000,000 farm operators of second rate efficiency should be brought into full production with the aid of seed, fertilizer, livestock, machinery and even land.
5. Cotton and tobacco acreage should be reduced, corn acreage, allotments removed entirely, and more wheat should be fed to livestock.
6. Profiting by British example, a new "land army" should be organized, to use town and city dwellers, especially women, for farm work.
7. Truck farmers who produce such luxuries as iceberg lettuce should be converted to more essential crops.
8. Facilities for processing and drying foods should be increased.
9. Local direction of the farm program should be shifted away from Farm-bureau-minded agents, toward agents more responsive to federal direction.

WICKARD'S FARM PROGRAM

Wickard's response to this sweeping proposal was to accept part of it, reject part.

He believes the production goals are already high enough that it's too late to present a new program for 1943, that cotton goals have already been substantially lowered, and tobacco reduction would require change of the law.

He agrees to removal of acreage restrictions on most crops, but not on cotton and wheat, which still yield embarrassing surpluses.

Claude is a little touchy on the question of county agents and committeemen, insisting that federal representation is adequate.

FULL PRODUCTION

On other points, however, he agrees with the White House proposals, declaring some already are in effect. He wants to bring the 1,000,000 less efficient farmers into full production, to increase dehydration of foods, convert truck farmers from iceberg lettuce, etc., and organize a new land army from towns and cities. In fact, he already has a plan well advanced for the "land army."

Wickard, who had hardly been heard of before his elevation to Wallace's place in the cabinet, has had clear sailing for two years, thanks in part to good weather.

Now, however, he is facing just as tough a job in trying to produce more, as Wallace faced ten years ago in trying to produce less. No secretary of agriculture ever faced more opposite and more difficult problems. The average person realizes the problems confronting the secretary of agriculture. They are exceedingly complex.

Wickard knows his position is shaky. But he is on his mettle, fighting to meet the established production goals.

CAPITAL CHAFF

¶ Munro Leaf, who wrote Ferdinand the Bull, hailed as a children's classic on pacifism, has now got himself a captain's commission in the army, and is more belligerent than any West Pointer. He even believes that it is sacrilegious to criticize anyone in the army, or anything the army does—especially the services of supply, to which he is detailed.

¶ When Postmaster General Frank Walker was shown a recent news photo of himself, he said, "Is that Herbert Hoover or me?"

PEAKING OF SPORTS

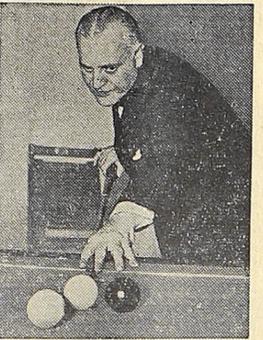

By Bob McShane
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

WHEN Willie Hoppe won his first billiard title, Joe Louis hadn't been born, Eddie Plank was the American league's leading pitcher, DeWolf Hopper was on Broadway and a city speed demon was pinched for beating the eight-mile limit in New York.

In case your memory doesn't extend back that far, the year was 1906. Hoppe, 18, the boy wonder, conquered the great Maurice Vignaux for the 18.1 balkline world title in Paris.

Today, at 55, the same Willie Hoppe is more active in the game than he ever was as a stripling of 30 or 40. He is giving a far larger number of exhibitions on a tour of army camps than he did in the class days of balkline when he could play to a five-dollar top.

Mr. Billiards rolled up 14,000 miles in a four-month trip south and west. He has played as many as nine exhibitions in a day, averaged four, and for the first time finds himself booked solidly for as long as he cares to perform.

Fine Reception

"I'm having a more lively time, if you could put it that way, than I ever did," he says. "I mean there is so much excitement and enthusiasm in the camps that I get a lift myself. No one ever played to more responsive and appreciative audiences than the soldiers."

By sport's stopwatch, it's hard to realize how long Hoppe has been at the top. He has seen a generation of athletes shuffle on. As long ago as the early twenties, a writer pointed out that "At 36, Hoppe is the patriarch of the billiard world, the survivor of the old school."

This statement was made after he pulled the first of his so-called comebacks. He had lost the 18.2 balkline title in 1921, a title he had held since 1912. Young Jake Schaefer beat him. A nervous ailment bothered his shooting arm and he retired for six months. Returning in 1922 he defeated Young Jake in a five-way tournament which brought Hoppe $6,680.

Hoppe's career goes back further than his defeat of Vignaux. He was far from unknown, even then. Willie had toured the country in 1904 with Old Jake Schaefer, and managed to outclass "The Wizard" quite consistently. He was only eight when he started to play the game in 1896.

Triumphant Return

Willie bowled the best of 'em over when he came back from France and whipped the 18.1 title holder in America. He beat George Slosson (The Student) for a $5,000 purse and a $500 side bet. Two years later—in 1908—he beat George B. Sutton, 500-272, in Madison Square Garden for the 18.2 world championship.

He then relinquished both titles because he objected to the conditions governing play. In 1910, when the rules were changed, he took back both championships.

No one was able to catch Hoppe from then on until Young Jake caught up with his sore arm in 1921. In 1923 Welker Cochran looked good. He tied the old master, but lost in a playoff for the 18.2. Six months later Hoppe handed Cochran a one-sided defeat worth more than $6,500 to him.

The experts were ready to lay him away again in 1925, when he fell on the ice and his cue arm was badly cut. The next year Young Jake made it "inevitable" again when he won from Willie the 18.1 title he had taken from Ora Morningstar in 1912.

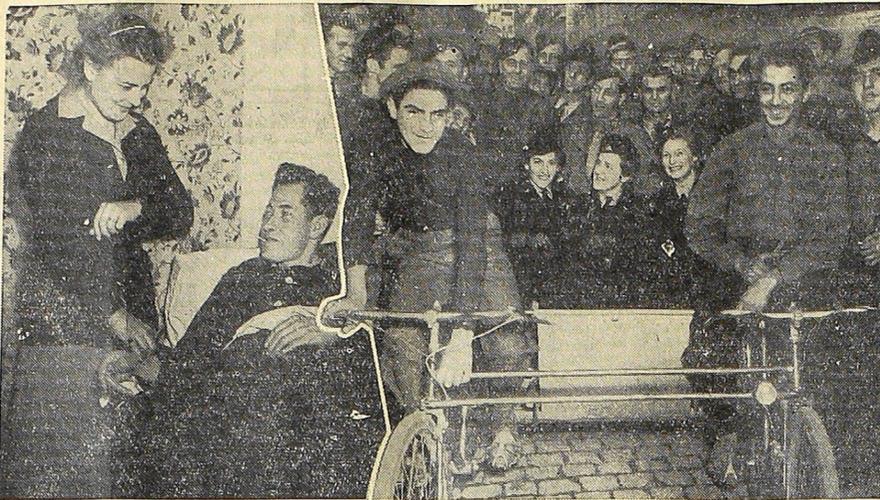

Ten years later, in 1936, Hoppe captured the 18.1 again, plus two other titles—the cushion carom and the three-cushion for the first time. Both Schaefer and Cochran were on the mourner's bench.

Recent Record

Willie has lost only one match in the past three years—to Art Rubin last winter in Chicago as he took the three-cushion title for the third time in a row. This year's tournament has been cancelled.

Billiards, particularly in its plebian form—pool, is an important part of army recreation, according to the champ. Almost every camp has at least a fair setup for pool and three-cushion billiards, which should help the future of the game

United States Army Nurses in North Africa

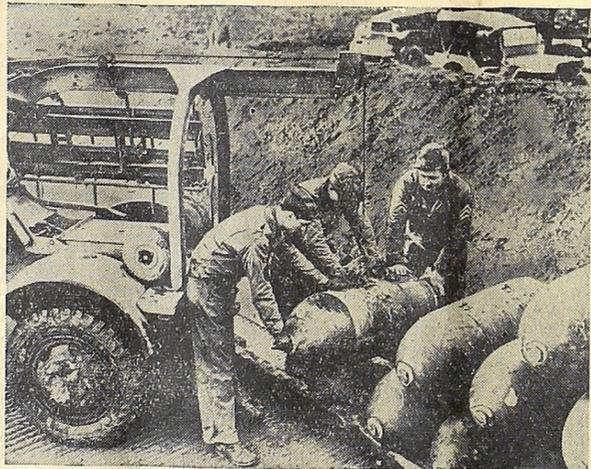

The first U. S. army nurses arrive in North Africa at work and at leisure here. In picture at right three American nurses set off in a bicycle taxi to see Algiers, and create quite a stir among the natives. Left to right they are Lieuts. Doris Gressel, Herkimer, N. Y.; Margaret Farrell, Paterson, N. J.; and Florence Christman, Kregesville, Pa. At the left, Lieut. Betty Eggiman of Rochester, N. Y., takes the temperature of Sergt. Leonard Krenzke of Racine, Wis., who is obviously pleased to receive the ministrations of an American army nurse.

German and Italian Prisoners Not Too Unhappy

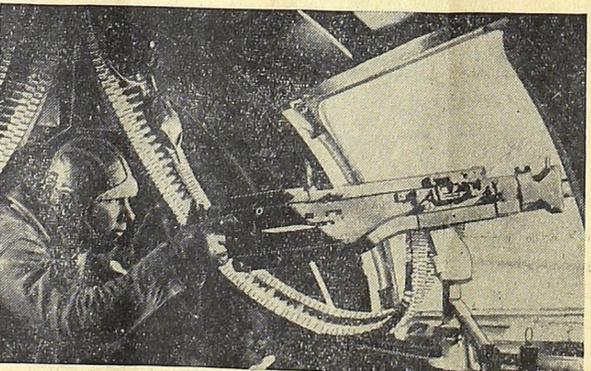

The brighter side for enemy soldiers is to be taken as war prisoners, as is apparent in this picture. Shown on the left are smiling Italian prisoners who realize that the war and all its horrors are over for them. They are on their way to a prison camp for the duration. On the right, German prisoners from a U-boat don't seem to be too unhappy over their plight. Perhaps they are thinking of food, shelter and comparative safety.

Stacking the Deck on the Axis

His Gun Blazes in Raid Over Tunis

Calm, but with determined accuracy, waist-gunner Robert L. Doremus controls his blazing gun as he directs fire at enemy planes. This action took place when Flying Fortresses accompanied by the deadly P-38s bombed Tunis in one of the biggest air raids on the Tunisian front. Twenty-year-old Doremus of Henrietta, Okla., hero of the operation, kept his guns going all the time.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

BIBLE TEACHINGS AGAINST DRUNKENNESS

LESSON TEXT—1 Samuel 30:16, 17; Isaiah 20: 1-4, 7; Galatians 5:19-21.
GOLDEN TEXT—"Strong drink shall be bitter to them that drink it."—Isaiah 24:9.

Sowing and reaping is one of those universal laws which applies in all realms of life. What we sow we reap, whether in the farmer's field, in our national life, or in the life of the individual. It is true physically, mentally, morally and spiritually.

How surprising then that intelligent Americans think we can go on with the use of intoxicants which have destroyed other nations and expect to escape the same sad consequences. Professional men have wrecked their careers, business men lost their hard earned positions, and rich men dissipated their inheritances; and at the same time each of them has fallen into moral decay—all through their inability to control their desire for drink. Yet we continue to license its sale, and so another generation of young men must meet the same temptation.

Our lesson presents three results of drunkenness.

I. Military Defeat (1 Sam. 30:16, 17).

A crisis in the life of King David is related in this chapter. The Amalekites had taken Ziklag. The king and his family were prisoners, held by a host of barbarous men far too strong for them to oppose. He inquired of God and was told to attack. With his little army of 400 men he defeated them. Why? Because in a drunken debauch they were celebrating their victory of the day before.

This was not the first, nor the last, time that military defeat followed indulgence in alcoholic beverages. It has happened even in the present war. Have we learned the lesson? Will we avoid that danger?

In this country our armed forces and defense workers are constantly exposed to temptation—and how many of them fall, anyone may know who has eyes to see.

From distant battlefronts come disquieting reports that intoxicants are among the "supplies" which find quick transportation to the very front, where they are soon put to their destructive use.

II. National Decay (Isa. 28:1-4, 7).

Isaiah was a mighty voice against moral corruption, and for the righteousness of God. With true prophetic insight he saw beneath the outward prosperity and apparent glory of his people, and exposed the sins which would soon destroy them as a nation. Outstanding among these destructive forces was drunkenness.

Turning first to the northern kingdom of Israel (for the nation had now been divided), he tells them that though their valleys may be fertile and their cities resplendent, the collapse of all their boasted greatness will surely come if they live in revelry and drunkenness.

He speaks of the coming of "the mighty and the strong one" (v. 2) who will be like a destroying storm. He refers to Assyria—itsself an ungodly people, but used of God to scourge His own people who had become indulgent and sinful.

There is a truth here which we need to learn. When nations forget God and fail in their responsibilities to Him and to their fellow men; when they become vain and self-indulgent, God will bring judgment upon them. He may use as His instrument nations who are themselves pagan, to accomplish His purpose.

The people should be led in repentance and righteousness by their religious leaders. How sad that some set an example in the other direction. Others who live personal lives above reproach are silent on these important questions lest they give offense to someone who may make it difficult for them. How sad!

III. Eternal Destruction (Gal. 5:19-21).

Military loss and national declension should be enough to align every right thinking person against intoxicants. But far worse is the fact that women into eternal separation from God.

In this passage "drunkenness and revellings" find their proper place with the other works of the flesh which close the door to the kingdom of God. There is no use trying to dismiss or cover it up as the unfortunate weakness of an otherwise nice person, or the natural result of a bit of social fellowship.

America has too long regarded a drunken person as a joke—or at most a bit of a nuisance to be indulged and tolerated. The Bible says that "they who practice such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God" (v. 21).

That is plain enough, isn't it? Mr. Drinker, outside or inside the church, had you better not think about that before you drink again? Church of Christ, is it not time for you to do something more effective to deliver the young men and women of America from the constant temptation now placed before them?

WAR ON ALL FRONTS
A SERIES OF SPECIAL ARTICLES BY THE LEADING WAR CORRESPONDENTS

The World Food Problem

By Herbert Hoover

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with Collier's Weekly)

There are more Horsemen that follow modern war than at the time the Apocalypse was written. In modern total war, Famine and Pestilence are accompanied by four new recruits—whose names are Revolution, Unemployment, Suspicion and Hate. These additional destroyers make the job harder to manage.

That there is and will be famine in this world of today, needs little demonstration. Already 148,000,000 people in the occupied democracies in Europe and Asia are short of food; millions of them are actually starving, and our Allies are obviously running on very short rations.

The Nazis' food supply is sufficient for their evils of today. They are working herds of prisoners on the farms and robbing some of the occupied territories. But their internal production will grow worse as the war goes on and there is less to steal from the subjected peoples.

In fact, the whole of Europe will continue to degenerate in domestic food supply. The reasons for that are simple enough: Europe in peacetime—and by Europe I mean Britain and all of Europe excluding Russia—has to import large amounts of food for human beings. That is now cut off by the blockade, except to Britain, and some small amounts to the neutral countries.

Decline in Field Crops.

On top of this, under the pressure of total war, field crops decline year by year. Manpower and horsepower are increasingly drained to the war; farm implements cannot be replaced; fertilizers are diverted to explosives; planting is less effective, and harvesting less perfect. Also, the animals in Europe are in considerable degree dependent upon imported feed. In consequence of the blockade, some part of the dairy and breeding herds must be slaughtered early in total war, and domestic feed for the remaining animals decreases because more fields must be turned to direct food for humans—and still more of the flocks and herds must be slaughtered.

In the last war, the principal food animals of Europe—cattle, hogs and sheep—decreased by over 70,000,000 head, and that is again taking place. The invaluable chicken vanishes, and fishing is greatly diminished. Thus the stream of animal products steadily decreases. To all this must be added the ravages of armies and scorched-earth policies.

Nor will famine this time be limited to Europe, for these causes are also working in Asia and Russia.

It is difficult for Americans to picture widespread hunger or starvation. We have not had such a thing in America.

What Starvation Means.

Nation-wide hunger and starvation mean grim suffering, incalculable grief over wilting children, physical degeneration, stunted growth, distorted, embittered minds and death. Its lasting effect is one of degree and time. Adults can recuperate from months of undernourishment. Children can stand less. In fact, the undersized, rickets, and the death rate among children are the sensitive barometers of starvation. Not even during our Civil war was there a town or city where these effects reached one-tenth of what they are in certain cities of the occupied democracies at this moment.

From all food shortages comes the danger of pestilence. People do not often die directly from starvation. Their resistance is weakened and they fall easy prey to contagions. Moreover, people consume their available fat supplies and have little or none left for soap. Uncleanliness invites such scourges as typhus—which is transmitted by body lice.

There is another vital peril in this question. Unless these masses of people in scores of nations can have food and be protected from pestilence, there can be no social or political or spiritual stability upon which peace can be built.

We had a parallel experience with this problem after the First World War. In that famine, America bore the major load of supplies, finance and administration. Except for American food preparedness there would then have been the greatest sacrifice of human life in all history.

That America succeeded in its task is evidenced by grateful statements of every government in Europe.

No nation had ever undertaken such a mission before. We had to pioneer through the thickets and swamps of governmental, social, financial and economic problems, including human nature in the raw. From that experience, we can make some estimate as to the need next time, the source of supplies, and the strategy and tactics necessary to defeat both famine and pestilence and to set millions upon the road back to strength and health.

USO Service for Nation's Fighters Reaches Peak in Chicago

Lounges and Information Desks Transform Big Railway Stations for Men in Uniform

CHICAGO.—Transportation center of the continent—that's Chicago. Twenty-one railroad lines stop here. None goes through. There are six major railway stations. And every 24 hours more than 400 trains enter and leave.

This maze of stations, coupled with complicated timetables and lonely stopover periods, could have been pretty baffling to the hundreds of thousands of servicemen who pass through daily. As a matter of fact it was, but only until four days after Pearl Harbor when USO began to set up a nation-wide chain of Troops-In-Transit lounges.

Thanks to USO there's no repeating of World War I railroad-station confusion. Lounges and information desks have transformed the big stations into friendly reception rooms for thousands of men in uniform, which means the blond lad from Texas, the Massachusetts red-head, the Norwegian sailors, and thousands like them.

Of the nation's 98 lounges, Chicago claims 6. Nowhere is USO service to troops in transit more needed—that's certain. Most cross-country travelers come in one station and go out another. Meeting your soldier boy at a station is likely to be a complicated matter if you aren't sure which road he is traveling on. Hostesses at the USO lounges are not surprised when an excited mother rushes up saying, "Have you seen a sailor?" They know it's just one more case of mistaken identity of railroad stations, and proceed to identify the particular sailor, then locate him.

The commonest problem, however, is finding the addresses of Chicago friends and relatives for visiting men in service who are not too clear just where the folks live. The well-trained hostesses are old hands at this game and invariably are able to solve the problem.

Helping men on leave plan their recreation is another job they do expertly. They give the boys addresses of places to go in Chicago, and diagrams to show them how to get there; suggest sight-seeing expeditions and out-of-town trips; and relay to them offers of hospitality from the city. There are all kinds of everyday services the volunteers render—helping the men write letters, making them up if they do off between trains, sewing on insignia, buttons, or mending tears, and often just lending an ear while a lonesome serviceman talks about his girl back home. If it's a quiet place to read the man wants, he is directed to the lounge library and given a book or magazine. If he doesn't finish it there, he can take it along and turn it in at another USO center. Magazines needn't be returned. Free stationery, cookies and cigarettes also are provided.

The lounges are intended primarily to be of service to members of the armed forces, who, in traveling, may not have time to visit established USO clubs outside the stations. Furnished with easy chairs, davenport, radios, phonographs, desks, lamps and games, they offer a quiet, home-like atmosphere. Besides serving soldiers, sailors and marines, the lounges are also open to inductees, merchant marines, WAACS, WAVES, nurses and other recognized military groups, and serve as a meeting place for servicemen in transit and their relatives and friends.

Open from 8 a. m. to 11 p. m. 365 days of the year, the lounges are manned by volunteers who are trained by Travelers Aid. Ten thousand women in the nation give freely of their time, serving in three-hour shifts. Chicago has 650 such hostesses.

It is estimated that millions of men have used the lounge facilities since their inception.

An average of 40,000 servicemen per month drop into Chicago's rest centers . . . men just back from North Africa . . . sailors who have seen action in the Pacific . . . inductees on their way to an assigned post . . . and others destined for parts unknown.

FUN FOR YOUR FAMILY

By MISS ABBIE CONDIT

National Recreation Association. For real excitement and hilarity an April Smiles or Laughter Party is just the thing. There is no formality about this kind of party whose keynote is "be yourself." Let this be a home party.

Write your invitation on small white cards about the size of business cards. Draw a funny face on the card in the upper left-hand corner and write: "This is a closeup of you after attending our Smiles and Laughter Party (date), at (time). Wear a foolish costume. This is a funny party for funny people." Name—address.

Make your decorations as funny as possible. Turn pictures to the wall and use kitchen chairs, boxes, and camp stools for seats. Hang several funny signs around the room. One might read: "Be it ever so homely, there's no face like your own." It's fun to pretend you aren't expecting guests. Turn off the lights, hang a sign on the front door saying "Out to lunch, try the back door." The sign on the back door might read "Fresh paint."

Begin your party by measuring grins. Ask each guest to grin as widely as possible and measure his open mouth with a tape measure. The one with the widest grin is winner.

Make your first event a funny indoor relay race. Line up several teams, boys in one and girls in another. At one end of the room, opposite the girls' line, place a board over a stool with some nails and a hammer on it. Opposite the boys' line have an apron, needle, thread and buttons. At a signal the first contestant in each line runs across the room. The man threads his needle and sews a button loosely to the apron. The girl tries to pound the nail into a board. This continues until all have finished. The first line to finish is the winning team.

For a quiet game give guests paper and pencil and allow them ten minutes to relate their funniest experiences. The guests then read their papers.

For a hilarious game try Stoop. Form two circles, one inside the other, so that each player faces a partner—boys in one circle, girls in another. When the whistle blows once, the circles move and guests walk around until two blasts of the whistle are given, when each guest runs to grab his original partner. They join hands and stoop. The last couple to get together leaves the circle. The game continues as before, but before each round the inside circle must move up one place so that players will have a different partner each time.

Refreshments may be served buffet style. Arrange a table at one end of the room with matching paper tablecloth, napkins, plates, and cups for hot drinks. Serve hot dogs, sandwiches, pickles, potato salad, coffee and cake. Let guests get in line and serve themselves.

Minute Make-Ups

Have your legs smooth before you "pour" yourself a pair of "stockings." And take that extra minute to blend your liquid smoothly. A streaky job of "cosmetic stockings" is as ugly as the real thing with runs. You'll have no runs, no streaks, no errors, if you blend—only a hit!

Red Cross Services to Fighting Men

WASHINGTON.—"I never realized how thoroughly the Red Cross covers the globe. I had not been in the hospital on a South Sea island half an hour before a Red Cross man called on me and asked what he could do for me. Less than an hour later, I had been provided with everything I could possibly need. . . . I was really terribly impressed. . . ."

That's Hans Christian Adamson, U. S. army air corps, one of the heroes of the Rickenbacker epic, talking from his bed in Walter Reed hospital here where he is recuperating from the effects of his experience.

And throughout the world—in North Africa, on Guadalcanal, in Alaska, and at military camps and bases in the U. S. A.—American fighting men echo Colonel Adamson's sentiments.

This praise is coming from the 1,000,000 men aided by Red Cross field directors since January 1, 1942; from the thousands who owe their lives to Red Cross blood plasma; from the millions who have enjoyed the facilities of the 150 overseas clubs and rest centers established by the Red Cross, from the men whose wounds have been dressed with the millions of surgical dressings produced by Red Cross volunteers.

AMERICA IN ACTION

THE ARMORER

It was Brig. Gen. Claire Chennault who scanned the bullet-scarred planes of his Flying Tiger A.V.G. forces and broadcast the hurried plea, "Send me armorers." That was all. Just send him armorers—men who could put the bombs in the racks, men who could fit the hard-hitting fire in the deadly caliber .50's, men who could make guns speak so that the invader might be silenced.

General Chennault's words are typical of a revision of air-attitude which has placed a major emphasis on flying fire-power. Time was when America's finest flight engineers designed the world's best motors, fitted them to the noses of the world's fastest fuselages—and then threw a few guns on just for kicks.

The current concept—a concept which makes Lowry Field's mammoth school of armament a major air forces factor—is in many ways a complete reversal of former flight engineering precepts. Today the trend indicates an attempt to ascertain the fire-power first—and then throw the plane around the guns. The Bell P-39 is a good example. The "Aircobra" is equipped with a 20-mm. cannon in its nose and six or more machine guns. The new Republic P-47, reputed to be the fastest ship in the world, has 50's firing in salvo from the wings.

General Doolittle's North American B-25 is supposed to be just a "medium" bomber, but it has a wide cruising range at high speed, plus a man-sized armament complement. It carries 3,000 pounds of bombs and is defended by four .50's and a single "flexible" .30.

These are just a few representative examples of what America's fathers of fire-power are turning out these days. Thousands of armorers are needed to care for the guns and bombs, to maintain the costly control equipment and to keep the aircraft's fire-power in top fighting shape.

Secret of Painting on Real Spider Webs Lost

Among the most beautiful and unusual displays of artistry are spider-web paintings—paintings on real spider webs. Originated by a famed Innsbruck family of Tyrol (now Italy), the secret of this type of painting was lost when last members of this family died. Unlike the flimsy cobweb of the ordinary house spider, these spider-web backgrounds are thick and durable like tough canvas. Usually small, 2 by 3 inches, these paintings have endured for 400 years.

All-Welded Ships

Compared with an all-riveted ship, an all-welded vessel is much stronger because it is in one piece, travels faster because its hull is smoother and has up to 13 per cent less deadweight tonnage and, therefore, a correspondingly higher cargo capacity, because it does not carry the weight of rivets and overlapping plates.

My Kingdom For a Sponge!

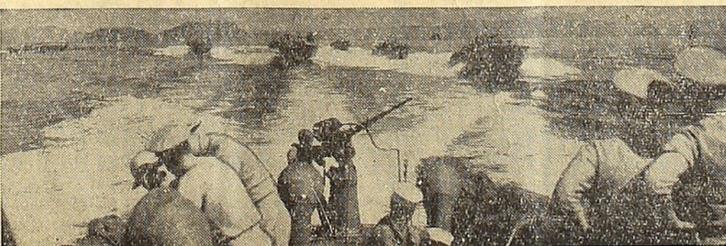

Are you one of those shoppers who has been scouring the market for a sponge? Then you know how difficult it is to find a good sponge, at any price.

Sponges are scarce. The supply of good marine sponges has never been large enough to satisfy the demand, and today the demand is greater than ever before partly because of the increased need for sponges in industry and the armed services. Furthermore, the best sponges lie far off the coast, in deep water. Sponge divers cannot reach distant sponge waters and return by sundown, as required by the coast guard.

That's why, if you find a good sponge on the market, you'll have to pay a great deal more for it than you ever did before. Rubber sponges, the normal substitute, cannot be made. Rayon sponges, however, are still being produced, and it is to these many are turning to pinch-hit for them in the many duties formerly discharged so well by the marine sponge.

ALBERT H. NUNN

Funeral services for Albert H. Nunn, son of the late Rev. I. B. Nunn, were held from the Methodist church Thursday afternoon. Rev. McCleary officiated.

Mr. Nunn had been an invalid for some time, and for several months had made his home at Fenton, Michigan, where his sister, Mrs. Nellie Jennings, and brother, Edwin Nunn of Rose City, have helped to care for him in his last illness.

Former Resident Visits Hale

Ed Kelly of Detroit visited his aunt, Miss Anna Kelly, on Sunday. He was accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Nelson of Minnesota.

Mrs. Nelson will be remembered by the older residents as the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Kelly who moved to Minnesota about 45 years ago. The two ladies have not met since that time, so the reunion was a very happy one.

Mrs. Nelson, with her husband and daughter, have been working in Detroit this winter, and were on their way home to their farm in Minnesota. She was able to recognize many old landmarks, even though she was only eight years old when she went away. She hopes to come again when the weather is more favorable.

March came in like a lion, the old timers would say.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. Porter Sabin, Mr. and Mrs. Wiley Streeter and Ray Kessler, were initiated into the Grange Monday evening.

F. T. White passed away Saturday morning after a long illness. Funeral services were held at the Methodist church Tuesday afternoon, Rev. McCleary officiating. Burial was in the Evergreen cemetery.

Gilbert Dorcey came up from Detroit to spend Sunday with his wife and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Chrivia spent Sunday with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Chrivia and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dorcey.

Bert Chrivia is working in Detroit. Latest report from Loren Putnam, he had come through his operation, and was doing as well as could be expected.

Arnold Bronson has started extensive alterations on his house.

A special meeting of Hale Grange was held Monday at the Dorcas rooms for conferring degrees on seven candidates for membership. We hope to keep on with this good work and plan for victory. All enjoyed a bountiful supper and social evening. Come out and meet "Old Pat" at our next regular meeting, March 16. Rev. Mercer is attending a minister's conference at Flint.

Mrs. Swanson and Mrs. Mercer and Frank Buck were in Tawas Tuesday. Ed Teal has purchased a new John Deere tractor.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

One of the most essential articles of equipment for our soldiers is his canteen. In equatorial countries and in other warm climates they are particularly important to the welfare of our fighting men.

The canteen, now being largely manufactured of plastics, costs about 43 cents. The canvas cover . . . about 41 cents or 84 cents in all. Your purchases of War Bonds, or People's Bonds, will buy many of these for our men in the Solomons or in Africa where they are badly needed. Buy War Bonds every payday . . . at least ten percent of your income . . . through a Payroll Savings plan. U. S. Treasury Department

Navy Has Foot Trouble

Even the navy has its foot trouble. The United States Naval Reserve corps has decided that among the specialists eligible for appointment are chiropodists, or podiatrists. Action of the navy in appointing chiropodists follows the report of the Council of the American Medical Association that "chiropody is a department of the healing service and it has its basis in scientific and demonstrated knowledge and satisfies a gap that general medicine has failed to fill."

Vitamin C

Vitamin C prevents scurvy. Keep teeth, bones, blood vessels healthy, helps prevent anemia. Daily requirements: Oranges, lemons, grapefruit, or tomatoes in any form (juice, soup, raw, canned). Also in onions, berries and vegetables. Very unstable. Destroyed by overcooking and too much water. Use raw fruit and vegetables when possible; if cooked, serve juices. Potatoes baked in skins retain vitamin C.

Origin of 'Vaudeville'

The word "vaudeville" is derived from the gay French songs called "Voix-de-Ville"—voices of the city—which originated in Normandy, in the valley of the Vire (Vaux de Vire).

Spanish Colonies Revolt Caused Monroe Doctrine

In the days of President Monroe there was considerable apprehension that European interests might so interfere with South American states as to menace the security of the U. S. So Monroe declared that, in the American continents, any attempt to exploit any territory for European colonization would be held an unfriendly act.

Spain was the country directly concerned, because of the South American Spanish colonies that had revolted. It was feared that Spain might transfer her claims to a "Stronger Power."

So the Monroe Doctrine has come to mean that Europe must never interfere in the Americas.

DEEP WATERS

By BEN AMES WILLIAMS
©WILLIAMS W.N.U. FEATURES

THE STORY SO FAR: After a chance meeting and swift courtship, Will McPhail starts for Moose Bay, leaving Robin Dale to wonder how a career girl could be so completely swept off her feet. She knows little of Will, except that he is an engineer and that he has a brother named Angus, a dour Scot who hates women. Tired of the city and eager for adventure, Robin decides to take the next steamer up the St. Lawrence to Moose Bay. Driving to the port where she is to take the boat, she meets a strangely interesting man who tells her about salmon fishing. She nicknames him "the Salmon Man." On the road again, she comes face to face with another car.

CHAPTER II

They stopped, almost touching. There was no chance to pass, either here on the trestle or along the narrow road in either direction, nearer than the spot where Robin had turned around. Just as Robin realized this, a man got carefully out of the other car. She recognized him by his shapeless hat. He was the Salmon Man. He came along the trestle to her side and said in a cold politeness:

"Let me take the wheel. I'll back you up to the turn around."

His tone was so polite it was almost profane. "Oh, I'll do it!" she told him icily. "I'm sorry to be in the way!"

The Salmon Man said uncomfortably: "If I'd known there was another car up here, I wouldn't have come. You did that backing very well."

She felt that was a great deal for him to say. He was nicer than she had thought. She left Madeleine next morning and reached Rimouski at first dark, tired and hot and dusty from the road. The steamer would stop at Quai Rimouski about midnight; so she went to the hotel to change and dine and rest; and about eleven o'clock in the evening she checked out and arranged with a garage to house her car. The young Frenchman in charge of the garage drove her out to Quai Rimouski to leave her there on the end of the dock with her baggage.

She walked to and fro, looking here and there. Two Norwegian vessels lay along the north side of the dock, one preparing to take on a deckload of lumber, the other a cargo of coal. Except for the few men visible on their decks, the dock was deserted. A blinker light at the entrance to the harbor winked reassuringly; and the fog horn was blowing at Father Point, four or five miles away. Robin wondered why, for there was no fog here where she stood, and she could see the light at Father Point flashing in monotonous rhythm; but the great horn tooted insistently. She sat on the stringpiece beside her luggage and wished it were light enough so that she could use a pencil; and a car came bumping out the long dock and deposited a man and his bags a few paces off. The car drove away; and Robin thought hopefully that here was company. She said, raising her voice to be heard above the pile drivers:

"Good evening. Going on the White Queen?"

"Sure," the man assented. He wore a checked suit which she did not particularly approve; but he seemed friendly. "I'm crossing to Moose Bay."

"Oh, so am I."

He looked at her swiftly. "That so? Your menfolks there?"

She smiled happily. Will McPhail was certainly her menfolk, all of them; but not even Will knew she was coming, and it was certainly no affair of this man in the checked suit. "No, I'm just going to see the place," she said. "Are you working there?" Perhaps he knew Will. He shook his head. "No, I'm going on down to Labrador. My name's Jenkins," he added enquiringly.

"How do you do?" She was amused at herself for feeling that she was safer if he did not know her name.

"You'll find Moose Bay quite a place," he told her. "Three thousand men working there, and no women at all except a few wives." He said approvingly: "A girl as pretty as you will own the town."

Robin had been told often enough that she was a pretty girl; but this was the first time she had ever been made uneasy by the telling. She decided to stand up, and did so; and she was relieved to find that she was almost as tall as he.

"But Labrador's way beyond Moose Bay," she said at random.

"Oh, sure. I'm picking up my own boat at Moose Bay, going down along the coast in that, selling canned goods."

"It must be interesting."

"It's wild country, all right." He offered her a cigarette. She declined it, and he lighted one himself. "I'll bet you'd like it," he said. "I've got a good boat, clean and roomy and dry. I always take a friend along."

"I expect it's lonely if you go by yourself," she agreed, and wished the White Queen would come, or something.

He said: "We might as well sit down."

The pile drivers suddenly fell silent. She exclaimed in an unreasonable relief: "Thank goodness they've stopped. That noise is terrible!"

He chuckled. "They shut down from midnight to one, to let the babies go to sleep."

A car came out along the dock and stopped near them, but no one got out. "More passengers?" she wondered.

Mr. Jenkins laughed. "I've seen four-five cars out here, a couple in each one, some nights," he said. "It's the sea air, I guess. Let's sit down. Cold? I've got a flask."

"No, really, thank you," Robin told him. She wished desperately that someone would come. This was a lonesome place, with the foghorn blowing on Father Point, ha-rumpling so ominously; and this man so persistently friendly. She wished someone would come, and a taxi came bouncing out the long dock, the shafts of its headlights bobbing up and down. It stopped near them and the passenger alighted. It was too dark to see his face, but she recognized his hat. It was battered and old and shapeless, a hat unique and unmistakable. Robin knew it at once, knew him. He was the Salmon Man. She moved toward him gratefully.

"Oh, hullo!" she said. "I saw you at the salmon pool at Gaspe." She felt hurried and breathless.

He came along the trestle to her side.

"And last night, up the Madeleine. Remember?"

The Salmon Man did not speak, and Mr. Jenkins protested: "Now, sister, we were doing all right."

Robin said quickly: "But this gentleman and I are old friends, you see."

"He don't act it." The Salmon Man said quietly: "Old friends, yes, of course." He said no more than that, but it seemed to be enough. Mr. Jenkins looked at him for a moment, appraisingly. Then he muttered something and moved away to the other side of the dock. The Salmon Man seemed uneasily disposed to leave Robin too, and she said, almost pleadingly:

"I'm afraid I'm a nuisance again. But—please stay. You did tell me about the salmon, remember?" And she asked: "You know a lot about salmon, don't you?"

"They're my business. I'm in the fisheries department, the Government."

"Oh, really?" She had to hold him somehow. "Are you going fishing now? You must be going on the White Queen?"

"Yes. But not fishing as you think of it. My brother and I are going along the North Shore and down the Newfoundland coast, tagging salmon."

"Tagging them? You mean, like ducks?"

"Yes, to get data on their migration."

"Oh!" She looked toward the man in the checked suit. "He's going the same way. It must be a wonderful trip. Is your brother meeting you here?"

"No, he's at Moose Bay. Our boat is there."

"Just you two?"

"We have a cook and boatman."

Robin tried to think of other questions. The Salmon Man was hard to talk to. He was courteous, but his answers had each a cold finality and completeness.

"Why does the foghorn keep blowing?" she wondered.

"There's fog in the river."

"Oh! Will that make the White Queen late?"

It was a moment before he spoke. "They had the Empress of Ireland."

Robin had never heard of the Empress of Ireland. She said so; and he looked at her briefly. "It was before you were born," he decided. The fog was tight about them. "We lived here in Rimouski. I was a boy. The Empress was out there off Father Point with about fourteen hundred people aboard, in a fog like this, and a freighter ran into her."

"Did she sink?"

"She sank in fifteen minutes," the Salmon Man said in his quiet tones. Robin had a curious feeling that he had forgotten she was here. "It was about four o'clock in the morning. The water where she sank was shallow enough so that sometimes at low tide when the light was right you could see the tips of her masts, down in the water. But after a few weeks she tipped on her side. You can't see the masts now."

"There must have been a lot of people drowned?" She felt inane and young and stupid and in the way.

His eyes touched hers. "Four hundred bodies came ashore between this dock and Father Point in one day," he said. "And others later. They were stacked in piles in the shed back along this dock. Trains came loaded with empty coffins and went back with every coffin full." Memories in him seemed suddenly to demand release in words. "Over a thousand bodies came ashore, within a few miles."

"Do you remember it?"

"Yes, I remember it."

She thought she could understand now that look in his eyes, so grave and stern and still. "It must have been terrible for you."

"Yes," he assented. "It was. My father and mother were aboard her." He added: "I found mother, myself. They never found father."

She wanted suddenly to take him in her arms. He was a little boy, running to and fro along this dreary shore, peering into dead faces, hurrying on, crying out at last a dreadful broken cry. Her eyes were streaming. The fog had thinned. They could see the blinker light at the harbor mouth; and the Salmon Man remarked:

"That may be the White Queen coming now."

She saw a ship's lights through a blur of tears; but she did not try to speak. She felt him watching her, and she knew suddenly that he was a little surprised and approving because she did not cry out in pitying empty words how sorry she was for him. Robin said carefully:

"You'll enjoy your trip, won't you?"

"Yes. My brother and I don't have much time together." He filled his pipe. He said: "We've been pretty close, since then." She knew what he meant by that final word. His tone was strangely gentle when he spoke of his brother. This quiet man had an eloquence in him, without effort. Robin liked him tremendously.

"She's coming in," he said.

The White Queen's lights, in fact, were nearer. Robin and the Salmon Man moved across the end of the dock toward their luggage. The foghorn at Father Point ha-rumpled monotonously. The little steamer slid alongside, lines were made fast, the gangplank slid out, the purser came to meet them. He spoke to the Salmon Man. He said:

"Hello, Mr. McPhail."

Robin's pulse pounded in her throat. McPhail? The purser told one of the stewards her cabin number, and Robin mutely pointed to her bags and fled up the gangplank.

In her cabin a moment later, Robin stared at herself in the small mirror above the washstand, and she said aloud: "Heavens to Betsy!" Her eyes were dancing. The Salmon Man was Will's brother! He must be. It seemed to her now that she might have guessed the truth; yet there was no physical likeness between him and Will. He was square and lean and tall. His cheek was bronzed, his hair brown; yet there was something gray and old about him.

But Will was not gray! Will had brilliance and sparkle. Will's hair was black as coals, and so were his eyes that shone with youth and humor, and gay impudence. There was always laughter in his tones. He and the Salmon Man were as unlike as men well could be; so how could she have guessed? Will had never told her that his father and mother were lost on the Empress of Ireland. He had never told her that he had lived as a boy in Rimouski. He had never even told her that his brother was a fisheries man.

She opened her bag and rummaged out Will's letter, and reread what he said about his brother two or three times. "He's grand... he's been father and mother and brother to me ever since I was a baby... It isn't his fault he... feels the way he does about girls. He was pretty shamefully treated by one... It left scars on him that are still open... Unless you can help heal them..."

No matter how cold the winter, spring always arrives in time with its flowers. That reminder is carried in the floral design so colorfully patterned on these glazed percale pajamas and the brunch coat worn over them. Simplicity of Spring Styles Encourages Home Sewing Idea

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

MORE and more the home sewing idea is taking on new interest among patriotic women who are eager to do their part in the cause of wartime thrift and fabric conservation.

To meet with government priority rulings even the smartest fashions are being designed with deliberate simplicity, so much so that whether one be expert at sewing or not it becomes an easy matter to stitch up a "basic" suit or dress that can be made to look as important as occasion demands with an artful use of accessories to give quick change personality.

For instance, the two-piece "torso" dress to the left in the above illustration can easily be made in a day or two. As to having "style" that will be outstanding in any group, there's no question about it. It is one of those enduring fashion-right types that you will be able to wear with perfect confidence right through the spring on into the summer. Make it of jersey, rayon crepe or of a spun rayon weave. The addition of sparkling white lingerie touches or a boutonniere, or perhaps a big bow at the throat with a corresponding bow at the neckline, will make it equal to any daytime occasion. Other costume strategy would be to wear with it a hat, glove and bag ensemble in striking contrast color.

Another sound sewing investment for a smart spring turnout is a suit made of one of the crisp fabrics now so fashionable, such as faille or bengaline. These fabrics are amiable to weather changes and can be worn right through the summer. It is a suit of this type we are showing centered in the group. This model conforms in silhouette and detail to the WPB fabric-saving rule. Notice this "new" brief jacket (shorter length smartest for spring) with its cut-away lines and the stem-slim skirt, the hemline of which follows the cut-away technique of the jacket, dipping at the back to provide grace in walking. This is one of those dependable suits that provide a perfect foil for beguiling feminine accents, whether your choice be a crisply tailored bow at the throat or a dramatic dash of frothy white frills.

Glazed Percale

No matter how cold the winter, spring always arrives in time with its flowers. That reminder is carried in the floral design so colorfully patterned on these glazed percale pajamas and the brunch coat worn over them. The coat is quilted and flared, while the pajama trousers have tapered legs, as most of the newer types have. The oriental suggestion carried in this picturesque house costume is very evident.

If you want to look casual and pleasantly feminine in your off-duty hours, the suit with plaid jacket and monotone skirt shown in the above picture (left) will do just that for you. It is surprising, so fabric salespeople declare, how many ambitious women show a willingness and eagerness to undertake making a suit as well as their daytime frocks. They realize that the fashionable jacket and skirt suits of soft wools or crepes are now being made with a soft styling that does not always require expert tailoring. This model is one of those much-to-be-desired, many purpose suits that go about town very unostentatiously, without dramatic accessories, during the busy hours of the day. Comes "date" time, the costume stages glamour with a jabot that spreads its sheer beauty over the jacket front, or a handknit vestee with a band of the same handknit on the hat, together with gloves cuffed with matching handknit, or a bib necklace of plastic flowers that repeat the pastel tones in the plaid.

Not even a beginner need resist the "make your own" urge which is sweeping the country, now that sewing centers are being established in countless communities where you will be instructed to use modern sewing machine gadgets that do anything you want them to do in the way of shirring, fagotting, tucking and endless other couturier "tricks of the trade." You can also add plenty of drama to any suit by consulting your sewing center about the new fabric-covered monogrammed buttons and the belt and buckle service they render. And if you are a busy wartime worker you'll be wanting a thermoplastic dress form that's an exact twin of your figure—it can be molded for you at your local sewing center in only 30 minutes.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Rubber ball sports, baseball, football, tennis, etc., really had their beginning back in the 16th century. Someone has reported that in 1520 Emperor Montezuma entertained Cortez and his soldiers in Mexico City with a game played with rubber balls. Overloading and over-inflation are two rubber wasting practices most common with motor truck operators. Plantation rubber had its beginning in 1876 when Henry Wickham had planted in the Kew Botanic Gardens in London some of the 7,000 Hevea brasiliensis seeds he had smuggled out of the jungles of Brazil. A few years later trees were transplanted to the Far East. A car traveling on packed snow at 20 mph when braked will travel 79 feet before coming to a stop if it is not equipped with anti-skid chains on the rear wheels. Attachment of chains will stop the car traveling under the same conditions in 40 feet.

Eggs by the Pound Instead of by Dozen

Trend Favors Both Buyer and Seller

A trend toward selling eggs by the pound instead of by the dozen is becoming evident in some sections of the country, and this is profitable both to the producer and the consumer, in the opinion of Myrtle Murray, home industries specialist of the Texas A. and M. college extension service.

Under present marketing practices, the consumer pays as much per dozen for extremely small eggs as for standard eggs which weigh two ounces each, or a pound and a half per dozen. Likewise, Miss Murray explains, the producer who markets standard size eggs or larger receives no price advantages for a better product.

Until the public and the trade accept the change from the dozen to pound basis, producers will have to obtain their premiums by offering high quality clean, infertile eggs correctly prepared for marketing.

An Indiana farmer hitches up his team of mules. There's plenty of use for a team these days.

This means that eggs should be gathered at least twice a day and kept in a clean wire basket until they are cool and ready for packing. They should then be graded as to size, putting the uniformly small eggs, the medium (24 ounces to the dozen) and large ones in separate containers. They should also be candied, and sort out the defective eggs.

Eggs should always be packed with the pointed end down. If packing materials have been used previously, care should be taken to see that they are clean. Avoid wrapping eggs in newspapers.

Miss Murray recommends that eggs be marketed at least twice a week so that consumers can be assured of fresh produce.

Rabbits

California is the leader in rabbit production although no complete figures for the nation are available. It is known that in the Los Angeles trade area, 1,600,000 pounds of rabbit meat have been sold in one year. The U. S. Rabbit Experiment station is located at Fontana, Calif., where studies are being made in breeding, fur and wool production and marketing. Rabbit raising has thrived in the West because the mild climate permits open air hutches.

Most of the income is made by selling rabbits for meat. This compares favorably with other meats in protein. It has less fat and costs less per pound than expensive cuts of beef and lamb. This country has imported an average of nearly 91,000,000 pounds of dressed rabbit pelts and it would seem that there might be a bright outlook for selling furs and pelts. Efficiency studies show, however, that meat is the more dependable outlet. Because of the cost of stock, it requires more money to raise rabbits than poultry.

California raises more Angora rabbits than any other state. Much rabbit wool is imported and some California people have obtained a better price per pound for wool when it was spun into yarn at home and then sold to department stores.

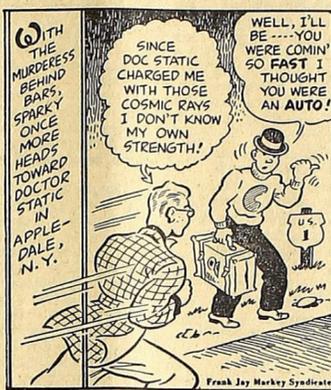

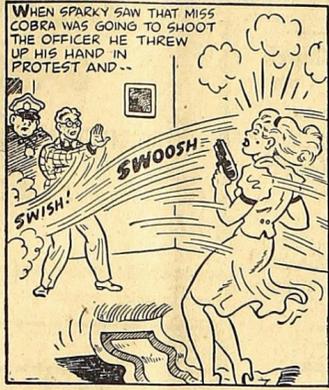

Minerals for Hogs

Feed proper minerals to hogs at all times. Market hogs make cheaper gains, brood sows raise more thrifty pigs, and healthier hogs are produced when minerals are used. By using a protein supplement, such as a mixture of equal parts of cottonseed, peanut, or soybean oil meal with tankage, or shrimp meal, farmers can grow out their pigs and fatten their hogs with about half as much corn or sweet potatoes as when these feeds are used alone.

Red Cross Needs $125,000,000 To Finance Wartime Program

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Faced with the greatest wartime program in history, the American Red Cross will launch its 1943 War Fund appeal for $125,000,000 on March 1. Chairman Norman H. Davis has announced. Pointing out that the bulk of the fund will be used to expand Red Cross services to the men of the armed forces and their families, Chairman Davis urged every American man and woman to contribute to the fund. With the approval of President Roosevelt, who also is President of the American Red Cross, the month of March is being observed as Red Cross Month. Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, is chairman of the Red Cross 1943 War Fund.

"Red Cross services to our armed forces and to the needs of distressed civilians on the battle and home fronts can be supplied only by greater expenditures and sacrifices," Chairman Davis said. "We are exerting our utmost efforts to accomplish these tasks with the least possible drain upon the resources of the people in funds, time and energy. We must never falter in our determination to meet these definite obligations. The Red Cross is confident that all our people will be generous in their support of the 1943 War Fund."

No. 1 Continued from the First Page

Mrs. J. N. Sloan was present and briefly outlined plans of their program for Isoco county during 1943, expressing hope that every family might have access to a home garden this summer in order that all commercially packed foods might be made available for our soldiers stationed at all corners of the world. Mrs. C. J. Creaser, chairman of the Tawas Garden Club assured the group that every possible effort would be made by their group to encourage home gardens in the two townships, cooperate with this youth program, of more and better food. Paul Newcomb supervisor of the Huron National Forest outlined the program of the Forest Fire Fighters the high schools of the county. This program, locally, is under the leadership that will soon be organized in Lietz and District Forest Ranger Herman Olson. Mr. Newcomb's explanation showed clearly how a fire prevention and control program also contributes to the food program with which we as citizens are all interested. The next meeting of the 4-H Club Council will be held the third Tuesday in June.

No. 2 Continued from the First Page

 Dear Mr. and Mrs. Thornton:
 I want to thank you for sending me The Tawas Herald. I think you have to actually experience living as far from home and loved ones to appreciate what it means to hear from and about them occasionally. To me, your column, "With Our Service Men," is worth its weight in gold. It's the first thing I read and I never cease to hope that some day we will be lucky enough to be stationed at the same base as some of our Tawas boys.
 We move so often that I have learned to pack and unpack in a few hours. Since last March, when we were first called by Uncle Sam, we have moved four times. Each time we move, it is to a town already over crowded and sometimes I am two or three weeks finding a place that is large enough for my tooth brush and Gene's flying equipment.
 He is with the 5th Ferrying Command at Love Field, and they are furnished with flying suits that I can hardly lift. He goes prepared to make a flight on a moments notice and sometimes that's all he has. So you see, when I say good bye to him in the morning, I may not see him for a week. We never know. However, I am not complaining. He loves what he is doing, and lots of women cannot be with their husbands at all. When he is gone, I do what all the other aviation "widows" do. Mostly, it's Red Cross work. We have completed several of work for the Office of Civilian Defense. They cannot have too many volunteers.
 I worked for a short time at the North American where they build A. T. 66's. It was a real interesting work and I enjoyed it a lot.
 Arlene Smith,

 February 26, 1943.

Dear Friends at Tawas:
 I have been thinking of all of you folks and the good old town of Tawas, for quite a while, so I decided I would write a few lines.
 During my first three months in the service I was at Brooks Field, Texas. There I received my basic training and was taught some of the minor duties of a soldier, which he will be called on to perform, no matter what his regular duties are.
 I am now here at Chanute Field Technical Training school and am now taking up aircraft sheet metal work.
 I like the army, and it sure keeps a person in a healthy condition. We are given the best of care.
 When going to school we march in a column of threes and ranks are a good half mile long. In the front of our ranks we have a flag bearer named McLean of Oscoda, Harold the insignia of the 32nd School Squadron on it. While marching we sing many of the old songs, such as, "When Johnnie Comes Marching Home," "The Air Corps Song," etc. The spirit of the fellows in the armed forces is fine, and there's no doubt a one hundred per cent victory for this Good Old U. S. A.
 I receive The Tawas Herald each week from my folks, and I can see by it that good old Tawas is keeping up the home front as well as any town in the country. Keep up the good work and we will come out with "Old Glory" flying high.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Nurse that heating plant along for it must do you for the duration. Metal . . . every bit we can rake and scrape up is going into War Production to provide the tools for our Boys on the fighting fronts.

But start saving now for that heating plant by your purchase of War Bonds every payday through a Payroll Savings plan. War spending goes on month after month. So War Savings must keep pace, month after month. Put at least ten percent of your income in War Savings through War Bonds. U. S. Treasury Department
