LOCAL CLUB ENTERTAINS WEDNESDAY

Ladies Literary Club and Study Club Guests of 20th Century Club

The Twentieth Century Club of this city entertained the Rural Women's Study Club of the Hemlock road and the Ladies' Literary Club of East Tawas Wednesday afternoon at the Baptist church, with nearly 60 present.

The meeting opened with a patriotic medley of standard airs by Mrs. A. E. Giddings, followed by the assembly singing "The Star Spangled Banner and giving allegiance to the flag. Three numbers, "How Beautiful Upon the Mountain," "The Sheep and the Lambs" and "Art Thou the Christ?" were beautifully sung by Mrs. Nyda Campbell Leslie before an appreciative audience.

Mrs. Horton, president of the club, introduced the guest speaker, Miss Amanda Hamilton, president of the Ladies Literary Club, who gave the delegates report of the State Federation of Women's Clubs held at Jackson last month. The theme of the Federation was "Establishing Foundations for the Post War Structure" and Miss Hamilton, in her report, gave a splendid review and interesting account of the convention. She also brought a copy of a song composed in honor of the boys in the service and first used at the convention.

Mrs. Nyda Leslie sang it as a closing number to a program which club members say was outstanding. Tea was served with Mrs. Horton presiding at an attractive table covered with a lace cloth and silver appointments. The lovely centerpiece of white carnations and blue iris was presented to Miss Hamilton.

The next meeting will be held April 14 at the home of Mrs. C. L. McLean. The topic for study is "The Child and the Home" and will be a panel discussion, with Mrs. J. A. Campbell, leader, assisted by Mrs. Giddings, Mrs. Carlson, Mrs. Bing, Mrs. Mallon and Mrs. William J. Leslie.

Farm Slaughtering Regulations Defined

Beginning April 1, meat slaughtering Regulations No. 26 and 27 went into effect. As defined in these meat regulations, it is believed by the War Board that all butchers and slaughterers in Isosco county will fall under the farm slaughtering classification. Farm slaughter classification includes all slaughterers who dressed 10,000 pounds of meat or less in 1941. In establishing this slaughter quota one is not required to include slaughtering done for other farmers on a custom basis.

Slaughtering in excess of 10,000 pounds will automatically place the slaughterer in the butcher classification which includes everyone who during 1941 dressed 10,000 to 300,000 pounds of meat.

Farmers who butcher for their own consumption will not be required to obtain a permit to slaughter such animals. However, if any portion of the meat from these animals is sold or given to other persons, a farm slaughterers permit must be obtained.

A farmer who slaughters upon a commercial basis is required to obtain a permit. His quota will be based on his 1941 slaughter operations. In his case he did not slaughter livestock in 1941, he may secure a quota which will include a total of 500 pounds of meat, or he may be given a permit to slaughter three animals which must not include more than one head of cattle during the calendar year of 1943.

Anyone obtaining a permit must meet sanitary requirements as established by the State Department of Agriculture or regulations which the War Board may recommend in individual cases.

Farmers are permitted to sell as many head of livestock as they may wish on the live basis. However, they must be sold through regular trade channels. Farmers are warned at this time against selling to city dwellers or others who have no slaughter quota under which they may butcher for their own use or for resale. Individuals who knowingly sell animals on this basis, as well as those who purchase, are liable for violation of the meat slaughtering act. We again warn farmers not to be a party to any such sale.

Russell Rollin Had No Opposition

Catherine Ann Zollweg

Catherine Ann, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Zollweg of Detroit was suffocated by smoke early last Tuesday morning.

The baby, 14 months old, had been coughing throughout the night and the mother, sleepless most of the night, decided to use the "croup kettle" in hopes that the fumes would give the child relief. She attached the inhaler, placed it on floor near the bed and withdrew from the room to quieten her other child, Richard, age four. She intended to return in a few minutes, but dropped to sleep and when awakened, found that the baby's room was filled with smoke. The "croup kettle" had become overheated and had burned a hole in the floor. The baby was found dead when admitted to Eloise Hospital at 5:20 that morning.

The father, Albert, is employed on the midnight shift at the Ford Motor Company, and was not at home at the time of the tragedy.

Mr. and Mrs. Otto Zollweg and daughter, Marion, of this city attended the funeral services. The young people have the sympathy of their Tawas friends in their bereavement.

Some Part of Car

A small girl entered Keiser's Drug Store last week and said: "I want a can of Shift Powder." JOYBRINGERS AT EAST TAWAS

Special Lenten Services At Methodist Church Begin Sunday

Residents of Tawas City and East Tawas are looking forward with great interest to the Christian Crusade to be held at the East Tawas Methodist church the last two weeks in Lent. Rev. E. C. Stringer, pastor of the church, has announced that the meetings which open Sunday, April 11, will be under the direction of Miss Pansy Bray and Miss Irma Herrman, known throughout the country as the "Joybringers." Services will begin each night at 8:00 o'clock except Monday, which is rest night, and will culminate in the Easter observance.

In these days of stress and turmoil men in ever greater numbers are turning their thoughts toward a solution of the world's problems and increasingly they are coming to believe that Christ and His teachings are the answer.

The inspiring program of the Joybringers are therefore particularly appreciated now. Sincere, enthusiastic, well trained women, their portrayal of a loving God kindles the minds and souls of their listeners who leave with a song in their hearts and a greater desire to be like Him.

The Joybringer have held meetings and have broadcast from churches and stations from the Pacific to the states of Ohio and Pennsylvania. During the past two seasons they have worked entirely in lower Michigan.

Miss Herrman, musician of much talent is the musical director. With an understanding heart and mind for the problems of others, she has brought many to see the happiness of a Christian life.

The public is cordially invited to come every night and bring your friends. Several times the Joybringers will show moving pictures of their travels. These dates will be announced later.

SMELT RUN ON; U. S. TO HELP MARKET CATCH

U. S. Fisheries Institute To Cooperate With Fishermen

The smelt run has started in Tawas river. Dippers have caught a few during the past several nights. Judging from past years, within a night or so the silver horde will be going up stream by the million.

To prevent the waste of any of the millions of smelt that will become available for food when the spawning runs begins this spring, a service has been organized which will keep Michigan fishermen aware of their opportunities and buyers fully informed about where they may get the fresh caught smelt in quantity.

The service is organized under Dr. John Van Oosten, U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service Coordinator of Fisheries in the Great Lakes area. Dr. Van Oosten looks for big runs as usual in spite of the heavy mortality of smelt reported in some areas this winter.

Serving as "Troubleshooters" during the weeks of the run, men of the service will work to increase production by notifying dippers of when and where the smelt are running; by advising them where they may obtain boxes, so the pack may be clean and by helping them secure special gasoline rations for this work. Where necessary, local officials will be asked to plow snow roads if their condition otherwise would hamper maximum fish production. Cooperation of the public in reporting smelt runs is invited.

A ready market is available for all smelt taken, as both the army and the chain stores are prepared to buy great quantities. Fishermen are urged to keep the harvest operating so smoothly that little of the catch will be so delayed in the processing that it will be diverted for use as animal food.

Dr. L. N. Allison of the Institute for Fisheries Research is in charge of the runs occurring in streams flowing into Lake Huron and is located at Barnes Hotel, Tawas City. Conservation Officer Arthur Lietz is assisting with the work in Isosco county.

Last Food Production Meets Next Wednesday

The fourth and last food production meeting in a series which have been recently held in Isosco county is scheduled for Wednesday, April 14. According to County Agent W. L. Finley, two meetings will be held in this county. The first at 1:32 P.M. Eastern War Time, at the Reno township hall, and at 8:30 P. M. at the Tawas township hall.

Extension specialists from the poultry and agricultural engineering departments of Michigan State College will be present to outline suggestions that should assist local farmers in increasing their food production for the coming year so that our citizens and soldiers will continue to be well fed.

One of the poultry tips to be discussed will be how to produce two broods of chicks instead of one and yet not add equipment. Others will provide pointers on three egg collections a day, how to ventilate and insulate laying houses and how to put a flock on a 12-hour working day with artificial lighting.

Farm machinery information will include suggestions on machine repair, the trading of labor and the lending of equipment. One new problem of parts allocations arises. The 1943 allowance of machinery parts will come into dealers' hands at the rate of but one-fourth of the entire year's supply within any three months. Early orders get the parts. Frequently questions are presented regarding the production of increased foods when equipment is not available. Among these questions include such things as:

Can you buy an electric motor for your pump if the present one burns out? Can you hire help to meet your labor requirements during the 1943 production season? Can you meet the 1943 production goals with your present equipment?

If you cannot answer "yes" to the above questions, Finley suggests attending one of the above agricultural engineering and poultry meetings.

The shortage of labor and the scarcity of new equipment and repairs require that every effort be made to prevent breakdowns during rush seasons. Every effort should be made to make the most efficient use of present equipment.

A motor that is used only once a week on an emery wheel can be used for many other jobs. A burned-out motor on a water pump or milking (Turn to No. 3, Back Page)

DEEP WATERS By BEN AMES WILLIAMS W.N.U. FEATURES

THE STORY SO FAR: When Will McPhail leaves for Moose Bay, Robin Dale decides to follow him. On the way she meets Will's brother Angus, a dour Scot who hates women. He does not know that she is engaged to Will, and Robin realizes that she must not come between the two men.

CHAPTER VII

Robin said, as one explains to a child: "I didn't mean to stow away, to—make trouble for you. I was taking the cruise boat back to Quebec tonight; but it was late, and I hoped to see you, so I waited by your boat for you to come. When it began to rain, there was no shelter on the dock. I—thought I might as well wait in the cabin."

"So you came into my stateroom and made yourself at home!" "Not quite like that," she said patiently. "Mr. Jenkins came aboard your boat just after I did. He was the man on the dock at Quai Rimouski; came down on the White Queen with us. I heard him on the dock, and when he started down the ladder, I hid in the stateroom. He and another man came into the cabin and started talking; and there was no place to sit in the stateroom, so I lay down. Before I knew it, I went to sleep."

McPhail looked at her with bleak eyes. "Jenkins came aboard my boat?"

"Yes. He'd—been pretty friendly, and I didn't like him, so I hid, and lay down—and slept till just now." She smiled in faint appeal. "I hadn't slept much last night, I'm afraid."

"What time was all this?" "It must have been about half-past six."

Angus opened a door that led through engine room and galley into the forecastle; he left her in the cabin and went that way, and she heard the murmur of voices. Then he returned and closed the door and said simply: "Romeo was here from six o'clock on. He says Jenkins didn't come aboard."

She colored faintly; but if Romeo denied having seen Jenkins, then Romeo—whoever he might be—lied. She wondered why. She asked: "Who is Romeo?"

"Romeo Perrault. My cook." "Did you tell him what I said?" "No. They don't know yet that you're aboard."

"Who is Mr. Jenkins, Mr. McPhail? Do you know him?"

Angus hesitated before he answered her. "I never met him till this trip. He's a salesman, sells canned goods, dry groceries. This North Shore and the Labrador is his territory." She realized that he was sufficiently puzzled by what she had told him to forget his anger for a moment. She said, holding his attention: "Once when I was with him in Moose Bay he asked a man whether he had collected the tickets, and the man said 'yes' and Mr. Jenkins said to let them in. What did that mean?"

His eyes narrowed. "I don't know."

"Why are people afraid of him?" Without answering, he moved thoughtfully across the cabin, sat down at his desk, took off his battered old hat and pressed his hands for a moment against his eyes. She saw that he was desperately tired. Somewhere he had changed his clothes since Will's funeral; had ridden himself of those wet torn garments in which he had returned from his two days in the wilderness. He sat down and seemed to sag a little; and she said: "I'm afraid of him. A little." She added: "You see, he wanted me to go with him down to Labrador, Mr. McPhail. With Mrs. Freel as chaperone. And after that, when he came aboard here, I didn't want to see him, so I hid."

He nodded in a weary way. "So now you're on my hands. I suppose I've got to take you back to Moose Bay. If I don't, they'll turn out the police, planes, coast guard; waste a lot of Government money hunting for you."

"I'm not sure I'll be missed," she reflected. "I checked out of the hotel; so the clerk will think I took the cruise boat. But I had no cabin engaged; so the purser didn't expect me, won't wonder where I am. And I've no family to begin worrying. You don't need to take me back. No one will ask where I am."

He stared at her in a sort of wonder. "Are you a fool? To tell me that? Don't you realize that I've come as near as that?"—he snapped his fingers—"to choking the rotten life out of you?"

She waited an instant to be sure of her voice, to steady her pounding pulse. She opened her hands with a simple gesture of surrender. "You're quite free to do anything you like to me, of course. If your men don't know I'm aboard, you could easily kill me and drop me over the stern." She tried to laugh. "But if you're going to—why?"

His cheek burned darkly; he made an ironic sound like laughter. "I'm not! If I did, someone would find your luggage. Where did you leave it?"

"On the pier at the head of your ladder. Just a bag and a pack-sack." There was a heap of dunnage against the bulkhead; and she looked toward it instinctively and then exclaimed: "Oh! There's my bag! They must have loaded it aboard with yours, thought it was all yours." She looked at him. "So there's really no reason you shouldn't do what you will like with me, you see. Only, I do wish, before you do anything, you'd tell me why you want to?"

His tone was dry with grief and weariness. "Because you killed my brother!"

Astonishment made her cold. "I?" The man's face twisted with pain. He threw up his hand in a helpless monotone, "curse your little soul!" She cried: "Don't! Tell me quickly. Why do you say that? What do you mean?"

"Oh—I suppose it was nothing to you. Will was running the crane across the dock from the White Queen. You staged a private, personal bathing-suit parade on the steamer's bow so three or four hundred men could see your pretty little figure. Will saw you. Naturally he forgot to watch his job, forgot everything but you. While he was—goggling at you instead of watching his job—he swung the crane too quickly, and the load pulled him overboard. You might as well have shot him."

Her heart was squeezed in a vise of pain. She whispered helplessly: "I didn't mean to! I didn't mean anything. I was just going swimming!"

Angus laughed, but there was no mirth in the sound. "I've spent these two days alone in the woods, in the rain, thinking what I'd do to you." His tones were flat, without inflection.

She watched him for a moment, forgetting herself. She said quietly: "Let's grow up, Mr. McPhail."

There was something like scorn in her tones and his cheek burned red. "I suppose you think you're safe. You think I'm a gentleman. You think I'll give up my cabin to you, defer to you, protect you."

"Yes," she assented, "I'm sorry you're so hurt and so grieving; but after all, you're an adult. Now, how can you get rid of me most easily? You don't need to take me back to Moose Bay, do you? There must be places up here, towns, where you can land me."

"Fishing villages. Fishermen. Foolish, hospitable folk, not wise enough to tie a stone around your neck and throw you overboard. They'll take care of you."

"Please don't go on being silly." He considered her for a moment as dispassionately as though she were under a microscope. "You're so sure of your charm, aren't you? Of your power to command men, to coquet with them, make them fall in love with you?"

Robin rose, touched his arm. "I'm sorry, Mr. McPhail," she said. "I didn't mean to—speak lightly; to make a joke of this. You must know it isn't a joke to me—to be told I've—caused a man to die." She held her voice steady. "I suppose I am a little scared, too. Probably any girl would be." Her voice broke and she laughed like a sob, and then dropped on the bench again, her head in her arms, crying hard. It felt good. She cried till after some minutes his hand dropped on her shoulder; till he said angrily: "Don't do that! Stop! Stop it! I'll take you back to Moose Bay." She did stop, after a moment.

She lifted her head and wiped her eyes and sat very quietly, thinking. Back to Moose Bay? Angus, behind her, seemed to be waiting for her assent.

Robin said slowly: "You can drop me somewhere, surely?" She turned toward him; and she thought he seemed smaller, as though anger had gone out of him and left less of him; he seemed small and weary and sad.

He said hopelessly: "I suppose so. You take the stateroom. I'll sleep on the bench here tonight, and I can put you ashore at Beaver River tomorrow afternoon. You can get a boat there day after tomorrow."

"All right. Can I go to bed now? We're both so tired."

He lifted her bags, put them in the stateroom. He came out and she looked at him uncertainly. "Thank you," she said. Then she remembered something. "Mr. McPhail, one of your men did talk to Mr. Jenkins. I don't know whether it was the one you call Romeo or not; but I heard him. They talked French and I don't understand French; but his voice was clear, high, almost feminine."

He nodded. She saw that she was believed. "I know," he assented, his eyes clouding. "But—why the devil should he lie to me about it?"

"I don't know, but—I didn't lie about it. Good night, Mr. McPhail."

When she was half asleep, she remembered a question she must ask him; but it could wait till morning. She felt drained and empty; felt bruised and sore all over, as though his bludgeon words had been actual blows. Her own grief for Will was forgotten in her pity for his brother. Thinking of Angus, she was suddenly deeply asleep, all perplexities forgotten.

Robin had elected to sleep in the upper of the two berths in the cabin, because there was more room above it than above the lower berth, so that she need not feel cramped and confined. The berth was almost as high as her shoulders; and she slept till someone spoke, near her. She opened her eyes to look up into the countenance of a man she had never seen before, leaning over her, saying something, smiling.

This man had twinkling eyes; and he wore a neat small mustache, and he was definitely a handsome fellow with a good nose and a fine brown cheek, and hair of a rich way brown which any girl might have envied. There was a scrubbed look about him, and he was fresh shaven and his hair was brushed. She saw open admiration in his eyes; and she was rather glad that her pajamas were sufficiently substantial so that they might have served as well on the beach as in bed.

Yet she was more amused than resentful. She forgave his bold, audacious eye, and she thought suddenly of Will, to whom it was so easy to forgive much. Will and this man standing beside her bunk with a breakfast tray in his hands were deeply alike. Women would always forgive them easily. Probably if Will had lived and they had married, she would have spent the rest of her life forgiving him his trespasses. The man beside her said something, and she said, "What?" And he spoke again, in French, and by that time she was sufficiently wide awake to smell the strong tea and the crisp toast on his tray. She said, "Oh, thank you." And then, pleased with herself for remembering, "Merci, m'sieu!" She wondered how to tell him to put the tray down somewhere. She preferred not to sit up till he was gone. She tried pointing, pointing at the foot of her bunk, and groping in her memory and said tentatively, "ce jette la!"

He laughed at that. He had excellent teeth. He laughed, and chattered something so fast she could get no word of it; and she decided "jette" was probably the wrong word. Jettison meant to throw something overboard, and a jette was something thrown out from shore into the water like a pier. "Jette" must be wrong, and he was telling her so. She thought if he talked more slowly she might understand, so she said: "Plus tard, s'il vous plait?"

But that left him bewildered. He put the tray on the foot of her bunk, bowed elaborately, backed out and closed the door. She wondered about running water and things. Certainly there was nothing of the sort in this small cabin. But she was hungry; too hungry to delay breakfast. Was it breakfast or lunch? Her watch, forgotten last night, had run down. Through the port she saw that the day was overcast, so she could not guess time by the sun.

But whatever the hour, she was hungry; so she ate first and dressed afterward. When she emerged into the cabin, it was deserted; but she opened the door that led through the engine room into the galley, and the handsome Frenchman saw her and came smiling toward her. She realized he must be Romeo—who might be a friend of Mr. Jenkins. She asked, carefully: "Ou est la . . ." She could remember no likely word; so she made a gesture of washing her hands; and he laughed audaciously, and opened the right door and showed her how to pump the water, and brought her a towel. She said, "Merci, m'sieu," and his eyes twinkled. She thought she and Romeo would get along.

PETER AND JOHN WITNESS CHRIST'S GLORY

LESSON TEXT—Mark 9:2-8; II Peter 1:16-18. GOLDEN TEXT—A voice came out of the cloud, saying, This is my beloved Son; hear him.—Mark 9:7.

Christ is God! The one who comes to know that truth is ready to follow Christ, and to make Him known to others. The want of such a true conception of the Son of God weakens our convictions and hinders our usefulness.

"Where there is no vision, the people perish," said the wise man (Prov. 29:18). For want of a true vision of Christ as God, and the God-given constraint which makes men give themselves in sacrificial service, the people perish in their sins.

Peter and John saw our Lord in His transfiguration, and the glow of that experience lighted their entire life and ministry. The touch of the supernatural was on these men and their message—for they had seen the glory of Christ.

I. The Amazing Glory of the Son (Mark 9:2-6)

The transfiguration of Christ is one of those wonderfully beautiful and deeply spiritual experiences which defy analysis or satisfactory description. Poetry and art have vainly tried to depict it only to become "in fact a confession of the impotence of the loftiest art to rise to the level of the divine" (Van Dyke).

Peter was so dazzled that he could only suggest that they remain there, forgetting for the moment that down in the valley was demon-ridden humanity waiting for the divine deliverance of the Son of God (see Luke 9:37-42).

What took place on the mount can possibly best be explained as the outshining of the inner glory of the Christ. He had laid aside His glory when He became flesh, but not His divine attributes as very God. There in the presence of God and the heavenly visitors that glory shone through His humanity and His appearance became dazzling in its whiteness.

II. The Approving Word of the Father (Mark 9:7, 8)

A cloud, like the cloud which filled the Temple of old (I Kings 8:10, 11), covered them, and the Father spoke out of it words of approval of His Son.

These words carry "both judgment and command; judgment concerning Jesus, 'This is my beloved Son,' and command to the disciples, 'Hear ye him'—that is, 'Listen to him'" (Lesson Commentary).

John and Peter came to a fuller conviction that He was the Son of God as they saw Him transfigured and heard the words of the Father. They learned more plainly the fact that He was God manifest in the flesh for the redemption of man. They saw in the indescribable beauty of that moment a foregleam of His coming glory. What important truths—His deity, His redemption, His coming kingdom. Have we learned them as we have beheld His glory?

III. The Assured Faith of the Disciples (II Pet. 1:16-18)

These words were written by Peter when he was nearly eighty years of age—about thirty-five years after the transfiguration. John wrote sixty years after the event and said, "We beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father" (John 1:14).

The one who follows these eyewitnesses in believing in Christ may share their assurance expressed by Peter that we do not "follow cunningly devised fables" in making known to the world the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. Our faith is built on God's Word, and upon such testimony as this by eyewitnesses. Here is real ground for assured belief in Christ.

Great experiences of spiritual renewing and power lead to effective life and testimony for Christ. They may not be in outward manifestations, in fact they are most often in the inner recesses of man's soul; but they do transform men and send them forth to magnificent living for God. One wonders if much of the dearth of power in the Christian Church is not to be attributed directly to the lack of such experiences with God.

The disciples had an unforgettable mountain-top experience. Even so have many others found the secret of power. It came to D. L. Moody as he walked down a New York street, praying in agony, "Deliver me from myself. Take absolute sway." The story of what happened to him and through him as a surrendered instrument in God's hand is written large on the pages of history. Others have had similar experiences.

Let us remember that such privileges are not reserved for a few, they are the birthright of every Christian. Power without knowledge is a dangerous and destructive thing, but knowledge without power is a dead thing, resulting in a stale and unfruitful orthodoxy that in turn produces a dreadful and unchristian religious system.

It's the Softly Styled Suit That Leads for Easter Wear

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

ACCORDING to the signs, the Easter fashion parade will be made up for the most part of ever so goodlooking, softly styled tailored suits. Let no one think, however, that spring, 1943, will stage a scene of regimented uniformity, for the new-this-season suits and suit dresses are not only amazingly versatile and interest-holding in the matter of fabric and styling as well as gay color, but with cunning strategy designers are providing, with interchangeable accessories, an ever varying role for the simple suit and the classic basic dress as well.

The beauty of a suit is that it makes the perfect background for most exciting versatile blouses, hats, gloves and bags, together with all sorts of equally thrilling gadgets and furbelows. That is exactly the spirit motivating throughout the fashion program during this wartime period—making one simple suit or dress play the role of many aided and abetted by a wardrobe of interchangeable accessories.

Typical of the prettily feminine, as emphasized throughout fashion's program of Easter apparel, is the charming suit-frock shown to the left in the accompanying illustration. It is made of a supple light gray rayon flat crepe. Welcome the news of gray. A veritable orgy of delectable grays is stampeding the fashion picture for spring, and there is no better fabric buy from the standpoint of wearableness than a gray rayon crepe such as used for this most attractive Easter outfit, which is so definitely springlike in its mood.

The blouse top has a newsy story of its own to tell in regard to the gay applique that enhances it. This frill motif is a print cutout, the idea being new this season in the blouse realm. You will find these fruit and flower appliques repeated again and again on chalk white crepe blouses. Soft front draping in the skirt and softly fitted lines in the hip-length jacket are important fashion points. You will find that this two-piece in light gray takes kindly, also, to a fine rayon crepe blouse of ruffy lingerie type. Looks fresh and immaculate, also, with a white chapeau together with white gloves. The versatility of materials that enter into their fashioning adds to the interest of this season's suits. Much ado is being made about the handsome suits of richly colorful paisley prints like that used for the model centered in the group illustrated above. This multi-colored suit relays big news not only in a fabric way but in the fact that its hemlines and loose sleeves are all edged with narrow black lace. The use of black lace edgings in most unexpected ways is a highlight fashion note that heralds a new outlook. In the newer collections you will be seeing stunning frocks and suits of plaid or check taffeta that are edged with tiry black lacy frills, and dainty pastel spun rayon or crepe afternoon dresses that are finished off with black lace. Very new is the white crepe blouse detailed with the tiny black edging, and widely exploited for spring is the all black sheer blouse that is lace trimmed.

In the classic suit tailored of bold black and white hunter's check shown to the right you see one of the most notable fashion successes of the season. This goodlooking suit is being shown in one of Chicago's leading State street stores as eminently smart and style-correct for Easter wear. When combined with an ultra-feminine frilly blouse it is charming. It is the type of suit that lends itself to any number of accessory changes. It is ladylike with lacy frills and it is swagger style worn with a hat, glove and scarf ensemble in bright red or the smart violet tones.

I LICKED MY CONSTIPATION

Of course, it wasn't due to anything organically wrong with me. It was just ordinary constipation, due to lack of "bulk" in the diet. A dose of some medicinal laxative gives only temporary relief for such constipation. You get to feel something that gets at the cause and corrects it. I found just that—in KELLGOS's ALL-BRAN.

ALL-BRAN is a wonderful-tasting breakfast cereal and a swell way to start the morning. Eat it regularly, drink plenty of water and—if your constipation's like mine—you'll "Join the Regulars," too! ALL-BRAN is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek, Michigan.

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action. Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strains on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood. You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feet constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination. Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off hard, excess body waste. Time to Check and Recondition Tractor

Points for Checkup Routine Are Listed

If you want to save yourself some exasperating moments in the field this spring—and make your tractor last longer, too—W. C. Krueger, extension agricultural engineer at Rutgers university, suggests you thoroughly check and recondition the tractor now.

"It doesn't make any difference whether a tractor has been in storage all winter or whether it has been in occasional use—it still needs a general reconditioning," Krueger says. And he lists some of the points of the check-up routine as follows:

If battery equipped, make sure unit is fully charged and that all connections are tight and that the battery is firmly supported and braced.

Take out spark plugs, clean and re-gap and replace those with appreciably worn terminals. Oil magneto, wipe out distributor cap and flush impulse coupling with kerosene, lubricate.

Perry Thompson, Indiana farmer, gives hungry tractor a feed of precious gasoline and gets going.

Flush the water cooling system thoroughly and fill with clean rain water preferably. Tighten all connections and replace worn or gummy hose.

Thoroughly clean oil filter or install new element. Thoroughly clean air filter according to instructions; change oil in oil bath type.

Check and flush entire oiling system by first pouring a mixture of gasoline and light lubricating oil, half and half, into each cylinder through the spark plug hole and crank the engine until the mixture has been forced out of the holes. This washes old oil from cylinders, valves and pistons and helps loosen piston rings. Use the same mixture for flushing the valve operating mechanism under the valve housing cover. Flush the crank case with kerosene, drain and refill with proper grade oil. Drain gear box and crank case and refill with specified grade of lubricant. Thoroughly grease and oil all points as specified in the lubrication chart.

Start the engine and operate slowly, watching for any unusual conditions. Sticking valves can be loosened with kerosene applied to the valve stem.

Pasteurize the Cream To Keep Butter Sweet

Many farm people, making butter for home use for the first time in many years, are anxious to learn how to keep butter from developing a rancid flavor. According to Forrest C. Button, professor of dairy manufactures, Rutgers university, the answer to this question is pasteurization of the cream.

"The heat of pasteurization makes inactive the raw cream enzyme, which causes deterioration of the fat," Professor Button explains. "Pasteurization is a simple procedure: Just put the cream into a can or pail; place this container in a large kettle, boiler or other suitable container partly filled with water; place this on the stove and bring the cream to a temperature of 145 to 150 degrees Fahrenheit for 30 minutes. A shorter method is to heat the cream to 165 to 170 degrees for 10 or 15 minutes, but the 30-minute method is the standard procedure. The cream should be stirred while being heated.

When the pasteurization process is completed, Professor Button says that the cream should be cooled to 50 degrees Fahrenheit or lower and held at this temperature for at least three hours before churning in order to insure firm butter granules.

The Vanishing American

The farm laborer, today's vanishing American, has disappeared down one of two separate channels—the armed forces and industry. A high percentage of the skilled specialists who operate the mechanical gadgets of both army and navy have been from farms. Equipped with the rugged physique that comes from long hours of hard work in the open farm boys have been gratefully accepted by all the armed forces and are serving their country well.

WAR RESTRICTS

Telephone Installations to a Conditional Basis

NO INSTALLATIONS can be made in some sections

UNDER an order of the War Production Board, telephone installations can be made hereafter only on a conditional basis. The order requires that an applicant agree to share his line with others, or to relinquish his service entirely, if the facilities are needed later for vital war or other essential purposes.

Service moves to new addresses for present telephone users also are on a conditional basis.

In some places, no installations can be made because the facilities are being used to capacity and critical material shortages prevent expansion of the telephone system.

These and other wartime restrictions will inconvenience many persons, we know. However, we shall continue to supply service whenever possible, and we look forward to the day when we again can give all the service wanted, when and where wanted.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

by Drew Pearson

Washington, D. C.

PRESIDENT LISTENS

The President did the listening, instead of the talking, when he conferred on farm manpower and food with three prominent farm leaders—Albert S. Goss, master of the National Grange, H. E. Babcock, vice president of the National Council of Farmer Co-operatives, and Ezra T. Nelson, its executive secretary.

The farm spokesmen spent about 30 minutes of the 37-minute conference expounding their views on what caused the food shortage now facing the country and what has to be done to remedy it. The President confined his remarks chiefly to asking questions.

He began by telling his visitors that the food situation was "extremely serious."

"That's why I invited you gentlemen here today—to get your opinions on what has to be done," the President said. "Go ahead and be as frank as you like."

The farm leaders accepted the challenge. They charged the administration with "shortsightedness" in dealing with farm labor deferments and contended that government price policies also had contributed to the farm manpower shortage.

Local Draft Problem.

"If you want my views, I'll give them to you, Mr. President," spoke up Ezra Nelson. "Two things have to be done and done immediately. First of all, someone in authority here in Washington must tell these local draft boards where to head in."

"They must be told that they have almost as much responsibility to see to it that we have sufficient manpower to produce food for the war effort as they have to provide men for the fighting forces. Food is just as important as munitions in my opinion. We can't fight the war without it, and we can't let our civilians starve."

"A lot of these local draft boards still feel that they must fill their induction quotas," Nelson continued. "The boards have been assigned quotas, but they don't have to meet them, at least not in sections where there is a crying farm labor shortage. You, or someone else should tell them this."

The President pointed out that many young farmers don't want to be deferred.

"This isn't the fault of the draft boards," he said. "The young men themselves are so patriotic that they do not want to remain on the farm while a war is going on."

It was agreed that steps would have to be taken to convince selectees that they could serve their country as well on the farm as in the army. Goss suggested that one "way out" would be to induct farm hands and then "furlough" them back to the farm at prevailing farm wages, instead of army pay. This would require legislation, but the President said it was an idea worth considering.

Stop Selling Cows.

"The second thing that has to be done is for the government to step in and stop the widespread selling of dairy cows and other stock and farm equipment by farmers who are unable to continue in business at present farm price levels," Nelson continued.

"I'm as much opposed to inflation as you are, Mr. President," he added. "But we have got to make it possible for farmers to operate at a fair profit if we are to lick this threatened food shortage. They have got to be assured fair prices in order to pay wages that will keep their help from migrating to jobs in industry."

The co-operative official contended that farms had lost two-thirds of their manpower to war industries because of low farm wages.

The President said that he, too, was deeply concerned about this factor, suggested to his callers that they get together with Secretary of Agriculture Wickard and map out a program embracing their recommendations.

"Then come back and see me again," urged the President. "I want to continue these discussions."

⚡ The super-cabinet's careful consideration of how big our armed forces should be was actually a sham battle. Speaking of Sports

by Bob Melkane

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

WHEN Bill Cox, head of a New York-Philadelphia syndicate, bought the Phils he took over a job that would make the most experienced of baseball men cringe with sheer terror.

Cox, 34-year-old former NYU and Yale athlete, organized the syndicate that bought the Phils after the National league had foreclosed on them. It is his announced intention to bring a new deal to Philadelphia.

The tables have been turned. When Cox took over the team the Phils constituted the most important of the ivory markets. Under the old management, Philadelphia was the trading block of the circuit.

When Gerry Nugent held the reins of the Phils, other ball clubs looked to him for building program reinforcements. Nugent had few commitments about selling players. To him they were worth only the cash they would bring in the open market. The Cincinnati Reds, Dodgers, Giants and Cardinals all managed to win pennants with the help of players bought from Nugent.

The Bargain

The syndicate was reported to have paid $325,000 for the franchise. Included was a lease on Shibe Park—and very little else. At that time there were about 20 players on the roster—most of whom were not world-famed for their prowess.

Before he stepped out Nugent sold the Phils' best pitcher, Rube Melton, to the Dodgers. Catcher Benny Warren went to the Cubs. Nick Etten, the Phils' best hitter, went to the Yankees, and the one other good pitcher, Tom Hughes, is in the army.

The history of baseball in Philadelphia is not a gay, frolicsome tale. It is one of the game's oddest stories. It will come as no startling surprise to point out that every baseball league must have a tail-end club each year. But the Phils have taken advantage of the other seven clubs. Year after year they refuse to be budged from that particular, easy-to-remember location. Other clubs may view with alarm, but the Phils ignore them with an indifference verging on boredom.

Pennant Winner

Only once since 1900 did they win a pennant. Pat Moran led them to glory in 1915. Except for a few isolated and unavoidable seasons the Phils have remained triumphantly in the cellar since that time.

There are many reasons. The Nugents (Gerry and Mrs. Nugent) inherited their holdings from the late William J. Baker, one-time police commissioner in New York city. Their operating methods followed no time-worn pattern. When the income failed to keep pace with expenses they sold a player or two. They managed to keep the books out of the red temporarily, but it was rather rough on the roster.

Former Phillies can be found in all sections of the league, especially pitchers. Gerry seemed to have a weakness for bartering pitchers.

There's Bucky Walters at Cincinnati, Claude Passeau with the Cubs, Rube Melton, Kirby Higbe and Curt Davis with the Dodgers. Then, too, there's Dolph Camilli, Dick Bartell, Benny Warren and quite a few others scattered throughout the league.

This isn't to intimate that Gerry was a chump for a deal. In fact, the Giants are reported to have paid $105,000 for Bartell. The Cubs anted up $85,000 for Chuck Klein and at least $100,000 more went for first baseman Don Hurst and Pitcher Passeau.

Final Effect

The Dodgers paid $50,000 for Camilli and $65,000 for Higbe. It was quite a while ago that Jimmy Wilson was sold by Nugent to the Cardinals. Whatever he cost the Red Birds it was money well spent. He was the man they needed to win four pennants.

The effect of the Nugent management isn't hard to imagine. Fans couldn't stand the punishment. Civic pride can stand only so much. There were times when the Phils might well have closed up shop, selling an occasional player when grocery stores ran low. At least the players wouldn't have been subjected to the unkind remarks of a handful of customers who wandered into the stands in a fit of absentmindedness.

Another unfortunate circumstance was the former scene of operations—the old Baker Bowl. The right field fence was so close the larger lefthanded batters could reach out their bats and touch it. The Phils moved to Shibe Park three years ago but by that time the fans' indifference was miraculous.

Cox isn't going to have an easy time getting players. And he can't hope to rebuild Philadelphia's interest in baseball by maintaining the status quo.

He must give some other club a chance at that last-place position.

Personalities on Day's News Front

Erwin Rommel's desert army in Tunisia something to think about. Center: Petite, attractive Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, first lady of China, who has become the American spokesman for China's fighting masses. Mme. Chiang thrilled great audiences here. Right: J. Charges were made that false tests were made on steel which was being used by the navy.

Teamwork Keynote of Anti-Aircraft Artillery Success

In few branches of our armed services are teamwork and co-ordination more important than in the anti-aircraft artillery. Pictures shown here were taken during maneuvers at Camp Davis, N. C. Upper left: When the alert sounds, anti-aircraft crews must reach their stations in seconds. Dress is of slight importance, but they must have their rifles, cartridge belts, gas masks and helmets. They race to their posts. Right: This picture was made while the 90-mm gun was actually in full recoil. Lower left: Captain Rousseau peers through a slit in the battery commander's underground station to check on the operations of the crew.

Sends Son to Fight Against Homeland

Shamed by the Jap attack upon Pearl Harbor, James S. Kondo, 51, a Jap-born resident of the Hawaiian islands, was gratified when the army permitted his son, Herbert, 18, to join a special combat regiment made up of Americans of Japanese ancestry. Herbert is shown in the center with his mother and father, who wears his American Legion cap. He is a veteran of World War I.

U. S. PRODUCTION IS BASIS OF WEALTH

PRODUCTION is the foundation upon which is built our ever-increasing national wealth, consisting of everything upon which a monetary value can be placed. Dividends from our national wealth, including wages, constitute our ever-increasing annual incomes. In the early years of our Republic, that annual income represented less than $150 per capita. Today it is better than $700 per capita. Year after year, decade after decade, it has been more equitably divided. It is the increase in our annual income that has raised the standard of living for all of us in America. It has made possible better homes, automobiles, radios, washing machines, telephones, and all those things which make living for us easier than it was for our parents and grandparents.

It is machinepower of the present as against manpower of past generations that has made increased production possible, and at the same time, reduced the hours of labor and the cost of production. With a tractor attached to a gang plow, the farmer tills more acres and in fewer hours than did his father with a team attached to a single plow share, turning one furrow at a time. The same thing is true in manufacturing plants. Power-driven machinery makes possible the mass production of automobiles. It reduces the cost of cars to a point where all can own them. It reduces the hours of labor and the sweat of manpower days.

Production creates a demand for production to satisfy, and satisfying creates new jobs, which, in turn, create new demands.

To place a limit on production in any line is but to stop progress, to break down the foundation upon which our well-being is built. Our need is not less production, but increased facilities and speed in distribution. That is the problem facing not only the economists and statesmen of America, but those of the entire world. It is a problem which can be solved when applied to a world scale. It cannot be done by uttering idealistic phrases or by merely wishful thinking. It calls for the application of the nation's and the world's best brains, and it calls now.

AMERICANS DO NOT LIKE TO BE PUSHED AROUND

WAY BACK 150 years and more ago, England's German king, George III, tried to tell the American people what to do and when to do it, without telling them why and without saying "please."

At Boston they slapped that German king of England in the face and after a few years of armed controversy, they kicked him in the pants at Yorktown, and sent him home. That was America's first experience with a bureaucrat.

Since then the American people have selected leaders whom they expect will lead and not drive. They expect leaders to tell them the "what," "when" and "why" of doing things, with an accompanying "please." They have never been willing to be pushed around, but have been willing and anxious to be led. Whenever their leaders have attempted to become pushers, the American people have demonstrated a habit of dispensing with the services of those pushers, as they did with George III. They do not take kindly to bureaucratic methods or government by decree.

LOCAL OFFICIALS KNOW THE REGULATIONS

RECENTLY I listened to the head of a state rationing organization attempt to explain what rationing is all about and how it is done. After a brief statement as to the necessity of rationing, he offered to answer any questions members of the audience might ask. The questions poured in to the speaker. They were normal inquiries, the kind for which any head of a household, anxious and willing to obey the regulations, would like an answer. The speaker could not answer one in a dozen of those questions. He had either not read the voluminous and often contradictory instructions, or had not interpreted them. A member of the town rationing board came to the rescue and did a satisfactory job of imparting detailed information which fully satisfied those who asked the questions. All of the ability and wisdom is not centered in high places. The federal official was drawing a handsome salary. The local man received nothing for his work, but he was a conscientious American.

SOME YEARS AGO I witnessed a farce prize fight—two would-be gladiators in a ring pounding typewriters. At the call of time, they rushed to the center and read what they were going to do. I am reminded of that at times when I read about what we and our Allies are going to do to the common enemy. More punches and less talk would bring a knockout faster.

THE WORLD DEMAND for food will continue so long as America will provide it on lease-lend terms.

America Spreads Her Wings

By Robert McCormick

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with Collier's Weekly)

In less than 12 months our army air force has grown from nothing into one of the mightiest fighting outfits the world has ever seen, with bases speckled over the globe like pepper on a fried egg. Every line of it was designed around a central idea that it must have a positive part in destroying enemy resistance. It was patterned for bombing the heart out of the enemy, for subduing enemy aircraft, and for attacking enemy ground and sea forces. These things it would do, not in any one battle or one spot, but in all American battles wherever they might come.

The production of airplanes more than doubled, got up to better than 5,000 a month. The types of combat planes being manufactured were cut to less than a dozen, but each of these had a specialized purpose. Many got their first battle tests in the last 12 months.

Level Off a Glacier.

These ships appeared at bases in the Caribbean, in Alaska, in Britain, at points all through the Pacific and Africa and the Middle East and India and China. A glacier was leveled off to make an airport in the Far North. An American engineer dropped by parachute into the middle of the Sahara, armed with a pocketful of money, rounded up native labor and built an airfield.

Measure Distance by Hours.

Between these isolated spots, grew up an AAF air-transport system that became bigger than all the prewar commercial airlines of the world put together. The air transport command became larger than the entire air corps was before the war, and it flew more miles than all the world's airlines before the war.

It stopped measuring distances in miles. India became 70 hours away, instead of 14,000 air miles; England became 10 hours away, instead of 3,300 miles; Africa 40 hours, instead of 3,900 miles.

Lieutenant General "Hap" Arnold, chief of the AAF, flew back from Australia in 35 hours, compared with the conventional ship-sailing time of 33 days. The air transport command shuttled great people around like suburban commuters. Mrs. Roosevelt flew to London and back, Madame Chiang Kai-shek flew here from China, Harry Hopkins flew hither and thither with loose-jointed freedom, the Harriman mission flew to Russia and back, Wendell Willkie moved all over the globe.

Climax Comes With Casablanca.

The climax came when the President himself—who hadn't flown on a domestic airline since he took office—broke all the rules by letting the army fly him to Casablanca to confer with Churchill. It wasn't simply a matter of picking the President up and putting him down. The Secret Service had to go first, high-ranking army and navy officers had to be taken along, and extraordinary protection had to be given each one. When Mr. Roosevelt did away with precedent, he did it in a big way, knocking off 15,488 miles in the air.

The army, and civilians as well, got used to seeing young men in their twenties and early thirties wearing the eagles of a full colonel. The youngest of these officers is Col. Charles M. McCorkle of North Carolina, who was graduated from West Point in June, 1936, and became a colonel on November 16, 1942. He was 27 years old.

Other Sources Contribute.

New training schools turned out quantities of at-home pilots, navigators, bombardiers, gunners, ground crews, mechanics, radiomen and all the other specialized personnel necessary to such a gigantic business. Wright Field erected a building big enough to test 40-foot propellers; aircraft engines of more than 2,000 horsepower appeared; swanky hotels were taken over at Miami Beach, Atlantic City and Chicago to house AAF cadets in training; stretches of desolate land in all parts of the country were set aside as bombing ranges; emergency landing strips appeared along American highways.

American parachute troops were flown nonstop 1,500 miles from England to Africa; troop-carrying gliders were developed; General Kenney moved enough supplies and troops into New Guinea to enable the American forces to start a hammering offensive at the Japs—and almost all of both men and material went by air.

Family Allowances for Enlisted Men Explained

A Brief Outline of Soldiers' Benefits Under Public Law 625—77th Congress

What is a family allowance?
A government check sent to the soldier's dependents regularly every month. The family allowance is made up of money set aside from his pay and money contributed by the government. It is granted only upon application. It is payable only to dependents eligible under the law. These include, primarily, wife and child (Class A relatives); dependent parents and minor dependent sisters and brothers (Class B dependents).

How much is set aside from the soldier's pay?
Twenty-two dollars a month, if the allowance is for Class A relatives only, or class B dependents only; $27 a month, if it is for both Class A and Class B.

How much will the soldier's dependents get?
Here are a few examples:
Wife $50
Wife and child 62
Wife and 2 children 72
Wife and mother only 47
Wife and parents 80

How soon does a family allowance begin to be paid?
The allowance begins to accrue the month after he applies and is payable when that month has ended. For instance, if he applies in March, the allowance begins to accrue in April and is payable in May.

Who may apply?
The soldier may apply as soon as he is on active duty. All enlisted men in the fourth, fifth, sixth or seventh grades may apply. Dependents may apply, too, but it is better for the soldier himself to do it. His wife or child (also a divorced wife to whom alimony is payable) may receive this benefit with or without his consent. But class B dependents may receive it only if the soldier agrees.

How is application made?
Application is made only on the official form WD, AGO 625. These forms are available at reception centers, recruiting stations, local chapters of the American Red Cross, service command headquarters, and the office of dependency benefits.

Is documentary proof of relationship and dependency required?
Yes, and soldiers or relatives should gather that proof before submitting applications and attach it to application. Documentary evidence consists of certified copies of the public or church record of marriage and of the birth of the soldier's children; two affidavits of dependency, sworn to by disinterested persons, for each Class B dependent named in application.

Evidence must accompany any application filed by a relative or dependent of the soldier.
All army men may authorize a CLASS E ALLOTMENT FROM THEIR PAY For their dependents.
For a civilian life-insurance premium.

To a bank, for a savings or a checking account in the soldier's name or in the name of a dependent.
What is a Class E Allotment?
The Class E allotment is a voluntary allotment authorized by a man in the army, by WAACs, by army nurses and by certain civilian employees of the war department on duty outside the United States. The allotment is taken from the allotter's pay each month and sent to his dependents in the form of a government check. It may be in any amount the allotter wishes to authorize, provided (if he is an enlisted man) he leaves himself not less than $10 a month. An officer may allot his entire pay and allowances.

Who mails the checks?
The Office of Dependency Benefits, 213 Washington street, Newark, N. J., administers Class E allotments as well as other soldier's benefits, and issues all checks.

How soon will an allotment be paid?
An allotment is payable at the end of the month for which it is made. Check may be mailed during the following month. An allotment authorized to begin in January is payable in February.

Can a soldier authorize an allotment and also apply for a family allowance?
Yes, if in the fourth, fifth, sixth, or seventh grades of the army.

Can he increase, decrease or discontinue an allotment?
A soldier may do so at any time on the official form provided for this purpose.

What is the difference between an allotment and a family allowance?
An allotment is a sum deducted entirely from the serviceman's own pay. A family allowance consists of a sum deducted from his pay, plus a sum contributed by the government, and is payable only to certain relatives or dependents.

Spring Must Be Just Around the Corner

More Pork Through Disease Control

CHICAGO.—Two steps by which farmers this spring can achieve greatest results in increasing pork production for the nation's war needs, were outlined here recently in a report issued by the committee on swine diseases of the American Veterinary Medical association.

The two steps are: prevention of baby pig mortality, and reduction of swine disease losses. Nearly one third of each spring's pig crop dies during the first few weeks or months, the committee's report declares. If more of these pigs could be saved, it could mean a large increase in our food production. Here are some of the specific steps recommended by the American Veterinary Medical association committee, to help save the lives of baby pigs:

"Provide a balanced diet for the sows, so they can nourish healthy, vigorous pigs, both before and after farrowing; make sure that hog houses are warm, dry, well-ventilated, and free from drafts; keep the sow and her litter away from old hog lots where the young pigs can pick up parasites or infections; provide sufficient floor space for each litter to prevent overlying; if illness appears, call a veterinarian promptly instead of waiting until a number of pigs have been lost."
Swine disease control is more imperative this spring because of the larger number of hogs per farm and the greater possibilities of disease spreading, the report indicates. Some of the suggestions for disease control offered by the report include:

"If feeder pigs are purchased at public auctions or sale rings where they have been in contact with other animals, isolate them from the home drove for two or three weeks, to permit latent diseases to manifest themselves. Hog cholera will again be the greatest swine destroyer this year, and all pigs should be vaccinated around weaning time. In erysipelas areas, pigs should be vaccinated against this disease, also. Rigid sanitary measures should be practiced for the control of enteritis. Balanced diet for sows will help prevent pig scur. Breeding stock should be selected carefully to avoid infectious abortion. Nutritional anemia of suckling pigs can be avoided by making a preparation of iron and copper available to them. Sanitation can be one of the greatest factors of all in prevention of swine diseases."

The report declares that tens of thousands of hogs are lost because their owners are not sufficiently alert to detect disease symptoms when they appear, and then delay too long in taking steps to check the spread of the disease when they do recognize it. "Prompt diagnosis of the exact cause of the illness is half the battle in preventing disease losses, and the other half depends on immediate measures to check the disease and prevent its spread," the committee states.

7. Do not let your kite go over radio aerials.
8. Do not attempt to pull down a kite which has become entangled in power lines because a short circuit might result. Sometimes a wire breaks and falls to the ground, causing danger or injury to kite flier or bystander.
9. Do not attempt to remove a kite entangled in a power line. Call the power company and they will send out a skilled workman to remove the kite with danger to no one.

AMERICA IN ACTION

AIRCRAFT MACHINISTS

Suppose some day an American bomber were to come limping back to its base with certain engine bolts sheared and shattered by enemy fire, unable to take to the air again until they were replaced. Suppose supplies on hand didn't include those bolts. A ship, otherwise airworthy, might be grounded for days or weeks.

The aircraft machinists who are developed from air forces enlisted men are skilled in general machine work and all tasks of ordinary heat-treating and repair likely to come up in maintenance of aircraft and the stations from which they operate.
Chosen, as are the candidates for all the air force specialist schools, by competitive aptitude and intelligence tests, the embryo machinist is plunged immediately into days of basic training in metal working, a training he shares with sheet metal and welding trainees.

He learns the channels through which aircraft service orders come, and how to find his way about in parts catalogues and systems of reference for repair and service of parts. He learns to identify various metals and to recognize their properties and composition of alloys by the painted color bands which are a code for the various alloys at army supply bases. He learns to read and interpret blueprints, and is given elementary training in mechanical drawing. He learns the uses of all the fundamental hand tools essential to this branch.

Then he is ready to take up the tools themselves. Emphasis throughout is on tools—how to make them, how to handle them and care for them. Woe be unto the man who handles them carelessly, for this to an army machinist is the unforgiveable sin. From the simplest wrench or file to the most complicated turret lathe, tools are his business—the tools that "Keep 'Em Flying."

What to Do

By PHYLLIS BELMONT

If you are planning to marry a man in the service and your wedding is going to be a "hurry up" furlough affair, please spare him too large and pompous a wedding party.

Most girls picture as romantic the idea of a military wedding and an archway of crossed swords—and it is. But the man in the case would like a quiet affair with just a few intimate friends present without the fuss and excitement.
Your wedding can be as lovely, though it is small, and you can look just as alluring in a street length dress as you would in a flowing gown and veil.

You won't be nearly as tired out when it's over with as if you had planned and executed a large affair with all the attendant entertaining and arranging.

BEDTIME STORY

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

CHATTERER TELLS SAMMY JAY ABOUT SHADOW THE WEASEL

CHATTERER the Red Squirrel, was hurrying through the Green Forest. He didn't know just where he was going. He had but one thought, and that was to get as far away from Shadow the Weasel as he could. It made him have cold shivers all over every time he thought of Shadow.

"Seems to me you are in a great hurry," said a voice from a pine tree he was passing.
Chatterer knew that voice without looking to see who was speaking. Everybody in the Green Forest knows that voice. It was the voice of Sammy Jay.

"I—I—am," he said.
"What's that?" Sammy asked sharply. "I always knew you to be a coward, but this is the first time I have ever known you to admit it. Who are you running away from?"

"Shadow the Weasel," replied Chatterer, still in a very low voice, as if he were afraid of being overheard. "Shadow the Weasel is back in the Green Forest, and I have just had such a narrow escape!"
"Ho!" cried Sammy, "this is important. I thought Shadow was up in the Old Pasture. If he has come back to the Green Forest folks ought to know it. Where is he now?"

"Ho, ho, ho! Ha, ha, ha!" laughed Sammy Jay. "I wish I had been there to see it."

Chatterer stopped and told Sammy all about his narrow escape and how he had left Shadow the Weasel in a hollow of a chestnut tree with Redtail the Hawk watching for him to come out. Sammy's eyes sparkled when Chatterer told how he had pulled the tail of old Redtail. "And he doesn't know now who did it," he thinks it was Shadow," concluded Chatterer with a weak little grin.

"Ho, ho, ho! Ha, ha, ha!" laughed Sammy Jay. "I wish I had been there to see it."
Then he suddenly grew grave. "Other folks certainly ought to know that Shadow is back in the Green Forest," said he, "so that they can be on their guard. Then if they get caught it is their own fault. I think I'll go spread the news." You see, for all his mean ways Sammy Jay does have some good in him, just as everybody does, and he dearly loves to tell important news.

"I—I wish you would go first of all and tell my cousin, Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel," said Chatterer, speaking in a hesitating way.
Sammy Jay leaned over and looked at Chatterer sharply. "I thought you and Happy Jack were not friends," said he. "You always seem to be quarreling."
Chatterer looked a little confused, but he is very quick with his tongue, is Chatterer. "That's just it, I replied quickly. "That's just it! If anything should happen to Happy Jack I wouldn't have him to quarrel with, and it is such fun to see him get mad!"

Now, of course, the real reason why Chatterer wanted Happy Jack warned was because down inside he was ashamed of that dreadful thought that had come to him of leading Shadow the Weasel to Happy Jack's house so that he himself might escape. It had been a dreadful thought, a cowardly thought, and Chatterer had been really ashamed that he should have ever had such a thought. He thought now that if he could do something for Happy Jack he would feel better about it.
Sammy Jay promised to go straight to Happy Jack and warn him that Shadow the Weasel was back in the Green Forest, and off he started, screaming the news as he flew, so that all the little people in the Green Forest might know. Chatterer listened a few minutes and then started on.

"Where shall I go?" he muttered. "Where shall I go? I don't dare stay in the Green Forest, for now Shadow will never rest until he catches me."

Farmers who customarily slaughter animals for sale to local butchers, may apply at one of the County USDA War Board members office for a permit to slaughter such animals, remembering that his quota is based on 1941 slaughter records.

Larger slaughter houses are required to stamp the wholesale meat cuts with the permit number which adequately identify the meat as wholesale meat cuts being slaughtered under such permit. The farmer will identify his meat by a tag bearing the permit number. Any meat which does not carry an identification showing the permit number is classified as meat in the black market.

All livestock dealers who purchase and the resell animals within less than 30 days are classified as dealers and are required under this some act to secure a permit for such activities. Farmers are cautioned to avoid livestock sales to nonlicensed dealers as both parties are subject to penalties as set forth in this act. Sales of livestock from one bonafide farmer to another are not subject to these regulations.

few days furlough at Tawas City and Battle Creek.

A letter from Pvt. R. H. Bullock at Camp Hulen, Texas is being shared by Mrs. Robert Murray with Herald readers.

Dear Mrs. Murray:

I am sure receiving this letter will be quite a shock so maybe you had better sit down and get some hot and cold packs hand in case you faint. You may think I'm kidding but I assure you its sound advice, but on the other hand, if you weathered the storm of my marriage announcement you can probably stand anything.

Well, what do you hear from your son, Bill? No doubt he is getting the situation well in hand, and has devised some scheme to rid the world of those Hitlerites. I sure would like to have his address, maybe we could compare notes on how to win friends and influence on fifty dollars a month. (In my case its $18.00, but I'm not worried, I'm going to start a union.)

I've found the government very considerate, they remembered all of the sand at Tawas, so they sent me down here on the Gulf of Mexico where I can eat it, sleep in it and lubricate my watch with it. This camp down here is a very temporary affair, I know it must be, because at the rate it's blowing away I'll be sleeping right in the Gulf in another week or two.

I've been attached to an Anti-aircraft Battalion, a part of the Coast Artillery. It is a mobile unit. You ask me how I know? That's easy. I think that if I had done all the walking in a straight line toward Michigan, that I've done in the last two weeks I'd be just ringing your door bell right about now. And why would I ring the bell? Well I probably wouldn't have strength enough to open the door. Well, good luck to all you folks.

Sincerely, Dick.

P. S. I meant to tell you, Tom Chestler is here in my battery, and you might tell Mr. Murray that there are lots of Fords down here and they all seem to use Sinclair!

Navy Recruiter will be in East Tawas at the Federal Building on April 14 and 15. machine may cause more than just a serious inconvenience.

Home made devices can save many man-hours of labor on your farm this summer. Among these devices are transport buck rakes, grain elevators, self feeders, feed carts, and one-man hay rakes. These and other subjects will be discussed at the meetings.

More eggs are required in 1943 in order to fulfill the required quotas than were produced during the record breaking year of 1942. Your own poultry flock through proper management may be made to produce from three to four dozen more eggs per bird this coming year than they did in 1942. It is suggested that farmers avail themselves of this information at one of the meetings Wednesday of next week. The poultry extension specialist who will attend these meetings will also discuss such topics as "war time feeding problems," "physical fitness program for 1943 pullets," "adequate laying houses for more winter eggs," and preserving the best possible egg quality on the farm.

The most difficult job in the poultry business is the raising of good
