IOSCO TEACHER MISSING IN PACIFIC AREA

Lieut. Raymond Kukoski Taught Agriculture At Whittemore

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kukoski of Stambaugh received word Friday that their son, Lieut. Raymond Kukoski, age 24 years, has been missing in action in the South Pacific area since March 24.

The telegram read "The Secretary of War expresses deep regret that your son, First Lieut. Raymond Kukoski, is reported missing in the Pacific area since 24. Additional information will be sent you when received."

Mr. and Mrs. Kukoski heard from their son the week before in a letter that assured them that everything was fine. On the night of January 5 he piloted a bomber over Stambaugh, his home town, and Iron River. He had been stationed with a bomber unit at the Army Air Base at Topeka, Kansas, and when he and his crew of nine men were ordered on patrol flight to Minneapolis he received permission from his commanding officer to detour over Stambaugh and Iron River. He visited his parents on leave a few days later, leaving shortly after for the West Coast.

Most recently he had been stationed with his bomber squadron in Hawaii. Lieut. Kukoski, who received his promotion to first lieutenant last December, received his wings and commission as second lieutenant on April 29, 1942, at Hicks Field, Fort Worth, Texas, after a nine months training period. He served at several bases including Hendrick's Field, Sebring, Florida, before being transferred to Kansas.

He graduated from the Stambaugh high school in 1935 and from the Michigan State College in 1939. He taught manual training and agriculture at the Whittemore high school prior to his enlistment as an air cadet on June 28, 1941.

His twin brother, Stephen Kukoski, is in the submarine service of the Navy and Leonard K. Kukoski, the oldest brother, was to receive his second lieutenant's commission in infantry at Camp Lee, Virginia, last Friday.

Lieut. Kukoski had a large circle of friends around Whittemore, and was well liked among his pupils as a teacher. His many friends hope for his safety.

Major and Mrs. O. O. Koepfel of Delaware, Ohio, are visiting the city of the Townline for several days. Their mother, Mrs. Ted Winchell, they expect to return Monday.

Mrs. Ervin Galbraith went to Flint on Thursday where she expects to be employed.

William Musolf of Detroit will spend the week end with Roy and Dale Landon.

Mrs. Jessie Thornton returned Sunday to her home in the city after a couple of months visit with her son, Kenneth Webster, and family at Detroit. Kenneth brought her home.

Mr. and Mrs. George Overhalt and children, and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Batzloff and daughter of Bay City were Sunday guests of Frank Ullman and daughters, Mable and Betty.

Dr. and Mrs. John LeClair and sons, John and Tom, returned Tuesday from Detroit after a short visit.

Mr. and Mrs. George Myles spent several days this week at Detroit. Mr. Myles is attending a school of instruction relative to municipal water works and sewage disposal.

Mrs. Abram Frank of this city been diligently collecting discarded silk and nylon hose to add to the salvaged hosiery asked for by the State Salvage Committee. If others have discarded silk or nylon hose and wish to add to the big pile that Mrs. Frank is accumulating, she will see that they all get into Defense work.

IOSCO 4-H'ERS TO INCREASE PRODUCTION

Plans Now Being Made for Various Summer Projects

L. H. Rhodes, district 4-H Club agent, is visiting all schools in the county this week to help the boys and girls enroll in 4-H projects, especially those projects which help with the production of food. Anyone interested in 4-H projects may contact Mr. Rhodes or County Agricultural Agent W. L. Finley.

"The projects that we are encouraging the young people, between the ages of ten and 20 years, to carry," says Mr. Rhodes, "are garden canning, poultry, rabbits, corn, beans, potatoes, sugar beets, pig, sheep, dairy and beef. With the exception of dairy and beef projects, which the club member must be 12 years old to carry, all other projects may be started by club members only ten years old."

Secretary of Agriculture Wickard has asked that the 4-H Clubs double their effort for 1943 so as to help with the production of food to feed the armed forces, to help with the lend-lease, and to help feed the people of the United States.

There are three ways in which this can be accomplished. First, by increasing the number of club members; second, by increasing the number of projects for each club member; and third, by increasing the size of each project.

All club members who enroll in garden club work will be given a ten by 14 inch Victory Garden 4-H sign. All other club members will be given a Victory Project 4-H sign. These signs may be placed either in the window or attached to board in front of the club member's home so anyone in passing will know that a 4-H Club member lives at the home where the sign appears.

Any inquiry or question may be mailed to L. H. Rhodes, district club agent, West Branch, Michigan.

EASTER SERMONETTE

By Rev. Elwyn C. Stringer

Easter is here again in all its glory. I am wondering what it means to us this year. Does it mean clothes, bright colors, flowers, festivities? Yes, all of these. But it means these least and last. Easter is, and ought to be a joyous time. It is the Holy Day standing on the threshold of the springtime, with its promise of new life and hope. All the world is given the second chance, for we have failed in the task of making the experience of Christianity a reality. How sad it is that the religious fervor of Easter cannot last throughout the year. How different the world would look today if the religion of Jesus Christ had been given a chance through the years. Easter stands for something far above outward sign of festivity or war. It stands for hope and immortality of the human soul.

Because the world's Savior rose above the grave, conquering death and sin, all men have a chance; nay, definite assurance, of experiencing a resurrection themselves, if they choose to obey His will. Dear reader, what does Easter mean? Something to eat? Very well, but do not forget the soul, it needs the Bread of Life.

We live in a war torn world where a deep spiritual faith is much needed. We need to turn to God because He is the only way out. Christ died for the sins of the world. Martyrs have given their lives for their generation, soldiers have bled on the battlefields, homes have been broken up, eyes have been dimmed with tears, all because of sin. I am wondering if we are worth dying for. After this war is over will we be more Christian? Will we insist on a peace of forgiveness and brotherhood? Will we continue the third front against injustice and prejudice? Just what have we learned through our suffering that will make our world worth dying for? These are tremendous questions that can only be answered deep down in our hearts.

Are we better Christians, more thoughtful, more kindly, more forgiving, more compassionate than we were during peace and prosperity? The world will never be a decent place for humanity's growth until we adopt Christ's way of life.

Our government cannot for one minute forsake the high motives which lay behind men and women who braved the dangers of the Atlantic, and the wilderness, and hewed out of the forest the beginnings of what today is the grandest nation on earth. We want to keep this nation grand tomorrow. We want to look into the future and see that we have accepted the place of Christian leadership for all the world.

DEEP WATERS

By BEN AMES WILLIAMS
©WILLIAMS W.N.U. FEATURES

THE STORY SO FAR: Robin Dale, a young artist, goes to Moose Bay to see his fiancée, Will McPhail. Just after her boat, the White Queen, docks, Will is accidentally killed. Learning that Will's brother, Angus, blames her for his death, Robin goes to Angus' fishing cruiser to wait for him. She falls asleep and awakes later to find the boat at sea, bound for Labrador. Angus' crew consists of Pat Donohoe and a cabin boy named Romeo. Robin and Angus are talking when another cruiser draws abreast of them. On deck is a man named Jenkins, who was a passenger on the White Queen. He raises his hat to Robin, then is gone. Now they are fishing for salmon.

CHAPTER IX

While Pat and Angus were working the easternmost pair of nets, Robin saw a large craft coming toward them from the west; and when it drew near she called Romeo on deck to see it. She thought in some surprise that he seemed uneasy at what he saw. The new boat ran past them at reduced speed; and an officer looked at them for a long time through glasses, and she realized this was some kind of Government vessel.

"It's like seeing a policeman," she decided. "When you're driving and see a policeman, you always slow down and feel guilty."

Then she saw Angus leave the net and go alongside the cutter, at anchor to receive him. Pat Donohoe returned to join her here, and as he climbed aboard, Robin said quickly: "Listen!"

The plane they had seen a while ago was returning. She heard it far away, and after a moment they saw its lights, low above the water, growing swiftly nearer, the roar of its engine loud and louder till the plane itself burst out of the purple dusk close by. Its pontoons touched; it taxied toward the coast-guard boat; they saw it moored astern.

It was dark when Angus returned. A boat from the cutter fetched him; and they were all to meet him. The boat rowed away; and Angus spoke at them in the darkness and spoke briefly, in French. Romeo asked a question; Angus answered too casually; and Romeo and Pat went below. When they were alone, Robin asked quietly:

"What is it? What is happening?" "What? Oh, you mean the cutter? Why, they're on patrol all the time."

She smiled in the darkness at his evasion, did not press the question; but afterward when they were under way, she and Angus at table together, Romeo in the galley, Pat in the pilot-house, she asked without warning:

"Does Mr. Jenkins know they're watching him?" She saw his eyes turn sharply toward the galley where Romeo was busy. Then he looked at her again. "Miss Dale," he said, "talk can't mend a broken plate. But it can break one."

"I'm sorry." She saw that there was real concern in him, doubt and uncertainty.

When she woke next morning, the sun was high; and the cruiser was at anchor. She dressed and went on deck and saw that the small dinghy which they carried lashed in chocks on top of the cabin was gone, she falls dangling. She was alone. The cruiser lay in a wide shallow bay bordered by a sweep of wooded shore. In one place there were some cleared fields and a scattering of houses and a dock and warehouse. This must be Beaver River. There were small fishing craft at anchor here, sharp-stemmed, with stubby masts; there was one larger schooner; and she saw the coast guard cutter coming up from the westward.

Angus came at noon with news. "Miss Dale, that cruise boat isn't stopping here. I'd forgotten they change their route on this trip. She's going home by way of Corner Brook. Nothing's expected here for ten days, except the schooners to take the salmon. I don't know what to do with you." He said doubtfully: "There's a steamer going on to Labrador tomorrow, but that won't help you get home."

"I've certainly made a nuisance of myself. What can you do?" "We'll stop at Corner Brook ourselves within a week or so." His tone was tentative.

"We're pretty far out of the world, aren't we?" "Pretty far out of—your world, yes."

"No. I mean out of—other people's world. My world is where I am. Wherever I am is mine. For then it's the place I belong in then." She smiled. "I don't mean to be philosophical; just practical. If you can stand being put out of your stateroom—may I go on to Corner Brook with you?"

He said, coloring slowly: "I think you know I'll do anything you want. I owe you—anything." She spoke in quick reassurance. "Please, all that's forgotten. You were—tired, distracted."

He spoke gravely. "You're . . . Well, you've a lot of steadiness, and honesty, and strength. I'm not good at putting things in words; but I want you to know that I'm glad my brother had the happiness of loving you before he died."

She was at once warm with happiness and choking with tears. There was nothing she could say. That she would go on with him as far as Corner Brook was settled.

An hour or two later, Romeo brought the boat to anchor near them; and at sunset they went aboard her and got under way. Pat took the wheel, and Romeo turned to in the galley. Robin, in her stateroom, heard the chatter of his activity there; and he began to sing in a rich, rather sweet tenor. When she came out into the cabin, she said to Angus:

"He has a pleasant voice, hasn't he?" Angus nodded. "Yes. Sometimes he plays the accordion and sings at the same time. I always enjoy it."

The engine stopped. On any power-driven craft at sea, or on a plane in the air, the sudden silence of the motive agency is startling. Angus looked around in quick surprise; and then the door between engine room and cabin opened. Mr. Jenkins was there in the doorway. His checked suit was stained with grease, sadly rumpled and soiled. He held a pistol in his hand. Angus stood up sharply; but Mr. Jenkins said in gentle tones:

"You might as well sit down, Mr. McPhail. While I explain."

When Robin saw Jenkins appear from the engine room, she had a sense of familiarity, as though all this had happened before. Even the pistol in his hand seemed to belong there. She decided that this was what you expected from Mr. Jenkins.

The plane they had seen was returning.

Perhaps that was why, when now the pistol actually appeared, she was not frightened. She knew quite well that he was the sort of man who might shoot you; but she decided that he would shoot only if he were badly scared, and he did not seem scared just now. Her lips were dry, and her palms were moist; but though physically she was thus disturbed, mentally she was entirely calm.

"Sit down, McPhail." The cabin suddenly was very small. It seemed crowded. Mr. Jenkins, standing in the doorway with the pistol in his hand, crowded it. But when Angus did sit down, there seemed to be more room. Mr. Jenkins seated himself on the bench across the table from Robin. This bench ran along the port side, and for much of its length it served as a seat during meals, but it was a little longer than the table. Mr. Jenkins sat on the clear end of the bench that extended toward the engine-room door, so he was free to move quickly if he wished. Robin was four or five feet away from him, the table between them; Angus sat at his desk to her right and behind her, on the starboard side of the cabin.

"There," said Mr. Jenkins. "Now, McPhail, you know I don't want trouble. Give your word not to start anything?"

"I won't promise anything blind," Angus told him. "What do you want?"

Robin saw that Mr. Jenkins was perspiring a little. There were beads of moisture on his brow. She wondered inconspicuously whether he had lost his hat. It had been rather a dashing hat, brown and fuzzy. She saw that the man was under a heavy strain; and just as she decided this, he told them frankly enough that it was true.

"I hope you'll sit still and talk easy, McPhail," he said. "I'm jumpy. If you want to move, tell me beforehand what you're going to do, and then do it slow. I don't want to hurt anybody; but if you moved suddenly, and I didn't know what you were doing, I'm so nervous I might shoot first and ask afterward. Okay?"

McPhail nodded. "If I make a move without warning you, shoot and be darned! But you understand, I'll jump you if I can."

"Sure. I would myself. If you do, you take your own chances. No hard feelings. That's understood." Mr. Jenkins was streaming perspiration now; but the pistol in his hand was steady and ready. "I'm a pretty good shot, McPhail. I don't want to kill you. I'm in a devil of a hole! If I have to kill you to get clear, I'll do it; but I'd rather not." He added frankly: "There's some chance I won't get away. If I'm caught, I don't want a killing proved against me."

"Naturally. You don't want to be hanged."

"Right. So if I have to start shooting, I'll take a crack at your knee first. That will be just about as bad, for you, as killing you. Lots of men would as soon be dead as one-legged. It will be as bad for you, but not for me. They wouldn't hang me for shooting your leg off. See what I mean? I'm just telling you, McPhail. I have to use you and your boat, but I don't want to hurt you."

McPhail said: "What do you want?"

"Why, right now, I want you and the young lady to go into the stateroom there, without any fuss. I want you to promise to stay in there with her till I tell you to come out." He added, frowning a little at his own perplexities: "You see, McPhail, Romeo's got Pat Donohoe at the point of a gun, forward. We've got to tie him up. I shut off the engine till we could get things straight. I can take your word, but I can't take Pat's. That Irishman would swear to anything, and then kick me in the head the minute I turned my back. I'll have to see him tied up before I can be easy in my mind. Romeo can't do it alone. So I want you to go in the stateroom with Miss Dale here, and promise to stay there, both of you, till I call you out." He looked at Robin thoughtfully. "I don't want to hurt either of you," he said.

McPhail considered. "Just now, you've got the bull by the tail and can't let go. You've got me under your gun here, and Pat under Romeo's forward; but you're not getting anywhere. The boat's drifting. If we stay here long enough, the patrol boat will be back and pick us up."

"Right," Mr. Jenkins agreed. "So you'll know I'm pretty jumpy. You won't want to push me too far, McPhail."

"Suppose we make a bargain?" Mr. Jenkins said wearily: "Now, McPhail, you know we can't bargain. You wouldn't take my word for any promise I made. Let's just do what I say. You and Miss Dale go in the stateroom and promise to stay there while we fix Pat so he can't make trouble. We won't hurt him, you understand. Then I'll start the engine and we'll pull our freight out of here, and then we'll all calm down. I don't want anybody coming along and asking questions. Be sensible, McPhail." He added in a soothing warning: "And don't get any ideas, will you? I know you had guns aboard here; your shotgun, and Pat's rifle. But they're not where you left them. I took care of them. Don't start anything, McPhail."

"You can't hide a boat this size where a plane can't see it. You're bound to be caught. So you won't do any killing."

"Don't get me wrong, McPhail," Mr. Jenkins told him almost pleadingly. "If I can get clear away by killing you, and can't do it any other way, I'll kill you in a minute." He added simply: "But if I do kill you and Pat, I won't kill Miss Dale. You might think of that."

McPhail nodded, his lips tight. "I have thought of that. Very well, we'll go in the stateroom and stay there; but suppose I call to Pat first, tell him not to make a fuss? Will that help you?"

"It just might. I won't trust him, anyway; but it may save him getting hurt." He opened the door beside him. "Go ahead," he directed. "But McPhail—be careful what you say."

Angus nodded, and he raised his voice. "Pat, can you hear me?" The big Irishman's answer from the forecastle sounded surprisingly near. "Aye, sorr."

"I'm making a deal with them, Pat," McPhail explained. "Let them tie you up. They'll be nervous and dangerous as long as you're loose. Take it easy, and do whatever they say. Nobody's going to get hurt if we keep our heads. Understand?"

"I hear what you say, sorr; but shame it is, to be sure."

"We've Miss Dale to consider."

Pat submitted grudgingly: "Aye, sorr, if you say so."

"I do say so. Miss Dale and I have given our word to be quiet, to make no trouble. You let them tie you up."

"Aye, sorr." McPhail looked at Mr. Jenkins. "All right?"

"As far as it goes. But if he makes a move, you'll understand I can't take any chances. He's a powerful man. Now you and Miss Dale go into the stateroom. You first, I don't want her crossing between us."

"Very well," McPhail smiled grimly. "I'll stand up and walk directly into the stateroom."

King Cotton Is Getting Tough

Problems of Adapting Fiber To Battle Front Use Being Solved.

NEW ORLEANS.—King Cotton is being toughened and conditioned here for the serious business of war.

In a big concrete building the king is getting tough. As one of four such regional laboratories established by the U. S. government, the southern branch quite naturally inherited cotton research.

A few of the laboratory's current problems which censorship will permit one to mention:

1.—To create a cotton fabric for sand-bagging that will prove as resistant to weather, bomb-concussion and shrapnel as the burlap formerly imported.

2.—To replace the sisal binder twine no longer available from the Near East for the nation's grain-harvesting machines.

3.—Production of a cotton tire cord that can take the beating rayon takes, and then some.

Erstz Palm Oil. Already the big white building has produced a cottonseed oil that pinch hits for palm oil in the intricate business of tin-plating, an industry important to the feeding of a country at battle.

The trained energies of more than 150 experts are at work in the scientific gymnasium: Chemists, chemical engineers, machinists, textile workers. A complete textile mill has been built, three floors of individual laboratories.

"We can't say much about what we're doing, or preparing to do, or what we've done," says James A. Kime, technical assistant to the director, "but the work goes on."

"I think some big stories will come out of these laboratories—after the war. I think the surprising sophistication of cotton will be one of them."

Kime points out that last year the nation's mills consumed more than 11,000,000 bales of cotton, running day and night to handle the need for camouflage fabrics, tenting, khaki and webbing, along with other military and civilian needs.

"Yet back in the 30s," he says, "this country hit a low of 5,000,000 bales handled by the mills. That should spell something for the future of cotton."

A Heavy Demand. To feed those mills, the nation had on January 31 an estimated 16,800,000 bales of cotton, a little above the average of recent seasons and held to that figure by the sharp increase in domestic use which to a considerable extent offset the drop in exports.

The 1942 cotton crop of some 13,000,000 bales was produced on 23,000,000 acres of land.

But despite that harvest, heavy demand will leave a stock of the staple of around 10,455,000 bales at the end of the season on July 31, trade estimates say.

Cotton is more than a passive combatant in this war.

Gun cotton, made by nitrating the linters which stick to the seed after ginning, is definitely a dish-it-out agent. Work is under way to create machinery which will chop the fibers into lengths comparable to those of linters. That means more guncotton. Faster. Easier.

King Cotton is a versatile fellow. He can give you a pair of government pants, then blow them off you. He's tough.

Reveal Mustang Plane Has 8 Machine Guns

INGLEWOOD, CALIF.—The Mustang fighter, deadly combat plane of the U. S. army and the RAF, is armed with eight machine guns, North American Aviation company disclosed.

The plane, designated as P-51, has been termed by the RAF as the best co-operational craft in the air.

North American, builder of the speedy fighter, disclosed that four of the machine guns are of .50 caliber and four of .30.

The heavily armed Mustangs have been used principally for ground strafing in occupied Europe. They gained wide acclaim last year when they participated in the Commando raid on Dieppe.

25 Per Cent Family Rise Urged in Great Britain

LONDON.—The size of the average British family must be increased considerably after the war to maintain the population near its present level, but at the same time there should be an improved standard of living and better educational opportunities generally, Herbert Morrison, home secretary, said.

THE RISEN LORD

LESSON TEXT—John 20:1-17. GOLDEN TEXT—He is risen.—Mark 16:6.

"Christ is living! My people shall know it. I shall preach about it again and again until they believe as I do." So exclaimed Dr. Dale of London when the glory of Christ's resurrection laid hold of him as never before. There began that day the custom of singing an Easter hymn in his church every Sunday morning.

Easter has come again, and it ought to make us glad to recall the resurrection power of Christianity in the midst of the world's awful sorrow and death. Easter should mean more to us than ever this year, if we believe in Christ. If we do not, why not rid ourselves of the dark garments of unbelief, and put on the bright and beautiful garment of faith in a living Christ. Let us be clad in His righteousness.

The first Easter Sunday had scarcely dawned when the faithful Mary came to the tomb. Finding the stone rolled away from its entrance she ran to find Peter and John. What they came and saw, and what—rather who—she remained and saw, make up our interesting lesson.

I. Peter and John Saw the Empty Tomb (vv. 1-10).

Peter, though he had denied his Lord, was not sent away by his brethren. They knew his true heart, and evidently the gentle and loving John had taken him to his home. Mary knew where to find him. What a tender incidental indication of the Christian spirit of the brethren of Peter.

John and Peter ran to the tomb. The unusual news so stirred them that John the younger did not think to await the slower steps of Peter. He came first, but when he did he only looked in. Peter had no hesitation, but went right in. What he found there was most significant.

Here was twofold evidence that the body of our Lord had not been stolen. The burial clothes were there. They had not been carried off by a thief. Nor had they been snatched aside by a deceiver. They lay in order. There off to one side, carefully folded, was the head covering. Jesus was gone, but He had left in all the dignity and majesty of a triumphant Lord.

What they saw caused John to believe. It appears (v. 9) that they had not yet understood the clear teachings of the Old Testament regarding the death and resurrection of Christ. They were slow to believe. Let not any in our day, with its greater light, fail to believe.

Peter and John came and saw—and then they went away again unto their own home. And so they missed seeing Christ Himself.

II. Mary Met the Risen Christ (vv. 11-17).

The tears of Mary were the genuine expression of a devoted heart, but they were nevertheless mistaken tears. The question of the angel reveals that fact. Why weep because His body was gone, when that was the very thing which should give her joy? Why weep over a dead Christ when He was alive?

How often our discernment is dimmed by tears and our judgment warped by sorrow. We look on the wrong side of our circumstances and see only a tangle of threads and blurred colors. On the other side God is weaving a pattern of beauty and blessing, which will be our joy through all eternity. Why not remember that now?

Blinded with tears and troubled in heart, Mary did not even recognize the Lord when He spoke to her. But our Lord looking into her soul and knowing that it was her very love for Him which made it hard for her to think of anything but His death, gave to this true-hearted woman the privilege of first seeing Him after His resurrection.

As He spoke her name, she knew Him. We recall that Jesus Himself had said that He was the Good Shepherd who "callet his own sheep by name" (John 10:3-14).

He knows your name and mine, fellow Christian, and one day we too shall hear His voice even as Mary did on that day. She believed and worshiped. Let us follow her example this Easter day.

There is a danger that the observance of Easter may lose its real significance in the empty incidents which the world would have us believe make the day. It is a holiday. There is thought of new clothes, of formal church attendance, of family gatherings, of flowers and feasting. They are all right in their proper place. But let us be sure that no adult fails to meet the risen Christ today, and let us be sure that the smallest child knows that this is more than the day of bunnies and candy eggs. They will rejoice in the knowledge that a victorious Christ lives to give them eternal life.

Let us really "keep the feast" this year, purging out the leaven of hypocrisy and dead works, and remembering Christ (see I Cor. 5:7, 8).

ON THE HOME FRONT

CUT PANELS WITH DESIGN CENTERED. PIN INSIDE OUT ON CHAIR. THEN TRIM TO FIT.

IN EVERY price range today there are handsome flowered materials for slip covers. The patterns are designed so that a motif may be centered in each part of a chair to make a panel. This is not difficult to do if you cut straight pieces first according to the widest and longest measurement of the part to be covered, plus one inch at all seams and four inches for a seat tuck-in.

Pin and trim to fit, as shown. Seams that are to be sewn without wetting are pinned and basted from the wrong side. Unpin seams where wetting is to be used. Baste the wetting to the right side of the seam edge, then baste the seam.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Alter, mend, remodel, dye, tint, patch, and darn decoratively. All may extend the wear of your present wardrobe and keep you abreast with wartime styles.

If the butter is too hard, heat a pan with hot water or otherwise, pour water out and invert pan over butter dish. This does the trick and softens the butter evenly.

It is cheaper to put on a new roof when the old one shows signs of wear, than to have rain leak through and cause redecorating as well as reshingling expense. Leaky roofs are expensive.

When rolling doors get rusty and hard to open and shut, simply put a little axle grease on the track. Then the doors will open and shut like new.

Perfect balance in grouping furniture makes a rambling and irregular living-room inviting.

Foods to be stored in freezer lockers should be in a moisture-vaporproof container.

In putting on window screens, be sure that they are securely fastened. Otherwise a tragedy may result should a child lean against the screen.

A right-toe cording foot is best for welted seams as it allows the bulk material to be on the left where it will rest on the machine leaf.

Women in Great Farm Mobilization

Taking Over Jobs Of Fighting Kin

Food is becoming more than ever "woman's business." In 1943 she not only buys it and prepares it for her family. She's growing it and harvesting it, as well!

From the Atlantic to the Pacific come reports of a highly successful feminine occupation of the land. Women are handling tractors, driving farm trucks, running combines and other machines, and even riding the range on some of the West's broad grazing acres.

They're taking over the jobs of husbands and brothers in the armed forces, and of the thousands of hired workers also lost to Uncle Sam's army and navy and industrial plants.

Back in the days of World War I women "farmerettes" did their part, too, but agriculture has changed since 1917. Today's farm is a highly mechanized plant, with tractors numbering about 1,800,000 as compared with the 85,000 of 25 years ago. Motor trucks in operation have jumped from around 245,000 to close to 2,000,000. These and many other mechanical aids to the farmer require trained operators and repairmen, even though they are releasing a lot of manpower.

Women are being prepared for both jobs, and thousands are already busy keeping the farm machinery rolling. Vocational agriculture classes in the schools and instruction offered by farm implement companies have both contributed to providing skilled feminine mechanics.

Colleges and universities, as well as high schools, are giving courses in agriculture for the girls. To increase their interest in farm work, the University of California at Los Angeles has instituted a series of farm festivals.

Manpower experts estimate that 70 per cent more women were doing farm work in 1942 than in 1940.

Good Care Assures

More Young Lambs

Saving a high percentage of the new lamb crop and getting them ready for an early market is one of the important wartime jobs of the American farmer, according to Dale C. Snodgrass, animal husbandry extension specialist of North Carolina State college.

By following a few simple, well-established practices, the sheepman can be sure of success with his young animals. Snodgrass lists some of these practices as follows:

Have the ewes in a good, strong, thrifty condition before lambing, and be sure that the flock is securely separated from other stock, especially hogs.

Do not disturb a ewe at lambing time, unless she needs help, but be sure to stay on the job. Carelessness may mean the loss of a lamb. See that the young lamb nurses and does not become chilled. Should the ewe disown her lamb, try to get her to claim it.

Gradually increase the feed given to the ewe after the lamb is about one week old to stimulate the flow of milk. During lambing time, the ewe should be housed at night and during bad weather.

If a new-born lamb becomes chilled, take it to a warm room and put it in warm water up to its neck. After the young animal is warm, take it out of the water and dry it thoroughly before placing it with the ewe in a warm dry place.

Conserving Fuel

It is clear that farmers have a vital stake in the conservation of gasoline and fuel oil. If supplies run too low, not only will production and distribution of essential food and fiber be hindered, but the ability of many farmers to continue operation will be endangered.

Farmers can be assured the amounts of gasoline and fuel oil which they actually need for productive uses and heating. Any uses beyond these must be eliminated.

This Is a 'Corker'
Here's a story that may well be termed a "corker." Recently Robert E. Adams of Shreveport, La., mourned the disappearance of $40—his whole week's pay. He considered himself a "liard-luck guy." A happy ending came later, however, when he found the money—in his cork leg. Adams said he apparently had put the money in his trousers pocket in which there was a hole, and the money fell through into the artificial limb.

War Takes 96¢ Of Each Dollar
Out of every $18.75 that is invested in a War Bond, $18 goes into guns, planes, tanks, ships and other military equipment. The 75 cents goes for ordinary governmental expenditures. Out of every dollar 96 cents goes toward the war effort and 4 cents goes for Government "business as usual."

The same ratio applies to all other securities the Government has offered investors in the Second War Loan campaign for 13 billion dollars.

It's A People's War

We are paying more in taxes than ever before . . . and likely will pay more. But we cannot rely on taxes to finance the war. It would not be fair to base a tax on the average single family income when many families have more than one income. We could borrow all the money from the banks, but for both economic and social reasons this is undesirable. The government would then sacrifice its greatest dam against inflation. This is a People's War and the people should finance it. The people WANT to finance it. Sale of War Bonds has mounted consistently since Pearl Harbor. They give their lives . . . You lend your money.

THE 2ND WAR LOAN DRIVE IS ON!

Come on, Let's WIN this war!

If we should lose the war, life would not be worth living.

"But we won't lose it," you may say.

Listen, brother—in this world nothing's sure, unless you make it so.

This month it's up to us here at home to do our part, and then some, to make Victory surer—and quicker! To do it, we've got to lend Uncle Sam 13 billion extra dollars.

It isn't easy—but war isn't easy and Victory isn't cheap. It takes money—and more money—to buy planes, ships, tanks, guns and a million other things our boys must have to deliver that final, paralyzing knock-out punch.

And it's a whale of a lot easier for us at home to lend our money than for our boys to fight through the hardships and dangers of deserts, swamps, jungles, ice-fields and sub-infested seas!

There are 7 different types of U. S. Government securities—choose the ones best suited for you!

Just think! Every extra bond you buy will help provide the weapons to save the lives of many American boys! Isn't that alone worth every effort, every economy you can make? You bet it is!

There are 7 types of U. S. Government securities to meet the needs of every purse. They offer the finest investment in the world—liberal interest, plus securities guaranteed by Uncle Sam himself.

A volunteer worker for the 2nd War Loan Drive may visit you soon. Welcome this unselfish patriot—and buy all the bonds you can. But don't wait for that call. Go—today—to your bank, investment dealer, broker, post office or bond booth and invest to your uttermost limit. Even if it hurts, it's nothing compared to the agonizing impact of a bayonet thrust, a flesh-tearing torpedo fragment or a bone-crushing bullet.

So dig deep, brother, and do it NOW!

THEY GIVE THEIR LIVES . . . YOU LEND YOUR MONEY!

Aid to Enemy

"Any American who wilfully neglects to pay his taxes on time or to invest every cent he can in War Bonds is surely giving aid and comfort to the enemy. . . . We have a job to do and we are all called for service to our country. Our dollars are called to service too. Let us all ask ourselves, 'Shall we be more tender with our dollars than with the lives of our sons?'" — Secretary Morgenthau.

What Is Inflation?

Do you have excess cash? You will answer, "No." But the fact remains that you do. For almost every wage earner these days has an income, in checkbook or pocketbook, well above the cost of his living, taxes, insurance and debt repayments.

You never actually "bid" against anybody for a porterhouse steak, but when you take the spending of all average Americans as a group, it's a different story. So it is important that excess money be saved rather than used collectively to bid up prices. If it is spent, instead of saved, prices soar. . . . That's inflation.

Ideally, it should be invested in Government securities during the Second War Loan. "They give their lives . . . You lend your money."

WAR RESTRICTS

Telephone Installations to a Conditional Basis

NO INSTALLATIONS can be made in some sections

UNDER an order of the War Production Board, telephone installations can be made hereafter only on a conditional basis. The order requires that an applicant agree to share his line with others, or to relinquish his service entirely, if the facilities are needed later for vital war or other essential purposes.

Service moves to new addresses for present telephone users also are on a conditional basis.

In some places, no installations can be made because the facilities are being used to capacity and critical material shortages prevent expansion of the telephone system.

These and other wartime restrictions will inconvenience many persons, we know. However, we shall continue to supply service whenever possible, and we look forward to the day when we again can give all the service wanted, when and where wanted.

WHITE HOUSE SPRING DAYS

When the White House butler says "Dinner is served," it doesn't mean what it used to mean.

Except for the occasional visit of a South American president, social activity at the White House has disappeared.

A friend of Gen. "Pa" Watson, aide to the President, sent him some finnan haddie the other day.

If Grace Tully is there for dinner, it means work after dinner.

Fact is, the President is leaning heavily on letters, and cutting down interviews.

Sometimes the President swings around from his desk, takes a quick look at the sunshine over the South Grounds.

A Ride in the Country.

This means a quiet tour into the country, without motorcycle escort.

Members of the President's intimate staff insist they see no change in him under the pressure of war.

The slackened social activity doesn't shut out the house guests, however.

They do. They come for a day or two, sometimes for a week.

In short, evenings are very quiet at the White House, and except for the President's own late hours at his desk, the electric light bill is the lowest in years.

JAMES J. ("JIMMY") COLLINS, the man who made third base famous, probably will be the next of baseball's immortals to get his pass to the Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N. Y.

As happens all too often, the honor will come too late to cheer the great fielder and former manager.

The baseball world was considerably saddened because Jimmy had long nursed the ambition. He deserved the honor.

New Standards

Collins, 73 at the time of his death, was manager of the Boston Red Sox when they won the World Series in 1903.

Collins—not to be confused with Jimmy "Rip" Collins—was in professional baseball for 18 years, 13 of them in the big leagues.

To Collins goes the credit for making third base an important position. Third was just another stop on the way home until Collins changed the picture when he was with the championship Red Sox teams of 1903 and 1904.

The Big Switch

Oldtimers still talk about the game which brought Collins in from the outfield to third base, thus launching him on his way to all time greatness.

Collins was then playing with Louisville. The team was playing the Baltimore Orioles. The Orioles were on their toes.

Jimmy was shifted to third and from then on all the bunts of Wee Willie Keeler, John McGraw and the other flashy Orioles went for nothing.

The following year the ranks were swelled by such men as Napoleon Lajoie, Tris Speaker and Cy Young.

Newcomers

In 1938 Grover Cleveland Alexander was given the nod, and in 1939, the baseball centennial year, the additions were George Sisler, Eddie Collins and Wee Willie Keeler.

Rogers Hornsby, fifth in the balloting of 1938-39, was elected to the immortals last year.

In baseball, as in any other sport, it is the outstanding player who deserves the most credit and glory.

From that viewpoint, Jimmy Collins qualifies without reservation.

America Loved In Middle East

By Gordon Caskill

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with Woman's Home Companion.)

Since time means nothing in the great bazaar of Damascus, I had contentedly spent a full half hour haggling the price of a dagger with a merchant named, like all Syrians apparently, Ali Hassan.

I nodded and Ali Hassan pondered my answer for a moment. Then suddenly he held out the dagger.

"Take it," he said, "take it free for nothing, and the next time you see that President Roosevelt, give him the dagger as a present from me and tell him he has the love of Ali Hassan of Damascus."

So I took the dagger, and told him I would, and I will—for I think I shall never forget the look in his eyes as he said the name of Roosevelt.

High Opinion of U. S.

I have now been in the Middle East long enough to be past amazement at such behavior. But at first, before I became immune, I was astonished and touched to find how enormously America bulks in the thoughts and dreams of the entire Middle East.

For example, merely because I was an American, a Jewish merchant in Beirut had given me the best pair of shorts in his shop, a Free French tobacconist had pressed rare and expensive cigarettes on me, an Arab restaurateur had refused payment for my dinner, and a Greek woman who runs a printing shop had waved aside money for some visiting cards.

"All Americans," she said simply, "will go to heaven. All of them. I am certain." I let it go at that.

Prized American Cigarettes.

When I entered Syria at a remote border point, the frontier official waived all formalities, and I gave him a package of American cigarettes.

Syria has always loved Americans. Most of us forget, if we ever knew, that after the last war Syria voted to have the United States rule her.

America has been generous to Syrians who emigrated and often found their fortunes. Almost every other Syrian you meet has a kinsman in America and asks something like: "Do you know my son, Joseph, in the state of Philadelphia?"

Zahle, a charming city in the Lebanon's lovely Valley of Mulberries, especially cherishes Americans. There are 20,000 Zahlian in Zahle, but 20,000 more live in America.

It was in Zahle, for instance, that a woman of about 50 came up to me as I was walking along the main street and asked me, in French, whether I was really an American.

What she said about "all other Americans" makes a point that should be underlined: This lavish gratitude and hospitality that Americans in the Middle East are receiving is emphatically not for us as individuals, but as symbols of the 130,000,000 Americans back home.

Even the money situation helps this pleasant state of affairs. For example, the lowest paid American ordinary seaman receives today at least $200 a month, or about as much as a British major.

For economy's sake, American merchant marine officers have discarded their ancient prejudice against wearing their rather snappy uniforms on shore. They have discovered that a uniform—any uniform—means great savings.

Imports Own Sugar

The Dominion of Canada has to import most of the sugar for its own use; receives 2,000 pounds of refined sugar every minute of the year.

AT THE FAMILY

The above scene shows Teresa Wright as she appears in the tense mystery film, "Shadow of a Doubt," which shows at the Family Theatre next Wednesday and Thursday, April 28 and 29.

Joseph Cotton is excellent as the co-star and performances of the supporting players are very competent. Photography and musical background are cleverly attuned to theme and mood.
