CONFIDENT IOSCO WILL GO "OVER TOP"

Campaign Nears Deadline In $240,000 War Bond Drive

With only a few hours remaining in the Second War Loan Drive, reports last night (Thursday) indicated that Iosco county would go "over the top" in this three weeks campaign. H. E. Friedman, county chairman, said that the county lacked about $15,000.00 in its drive to sell its quota of $240,000.00 in War Bonds. Of this amount, $100,000.00 is in "Series E" bonds, the type usually purchased by individuals, with the remainder allocated to financial institutions and other purchasers.

Chairman Friedman said that canvassers in the various communities of the county were all working hard today, and he felt confident that when the campaign closed at six o'clock tonight, Iosco county would complete the $240,000.00, its portion of the thirteen billion extra dollars which the people of the United States have loaned to Uncle Sam during the past three weeks.

It will be several days before the sales in the Second War Bond Drive can be tabulated and a complete report given. The drive required a large amount of work, and Mr. Friedman said "I wish to thank all the workers throughout the county who patriotically devoted their time in this important contribution toward helping to defeat the Axis. I wish to especially thank those patriotic men and women in the county who are digging down deep in their pockets to do their part to help in the war effort. It takes money to buy planes, ships, guns and the million other things that our boys must have in their fight to defeat our enemies. Iosco county has never failed to support its boys in the service, and in this Second War Bond Sales Campaign it will continue to support them as in the past."

ONLY A FEW FISHERMEN TRY STREAMS

Cold Weather and Lack of Gasoline Given as Cause

A considerable number of outside fishermen have visited Iosco county trout streams during the past week. The number is much below usual at the opening of the season, due to the gasoline rationing and the cold, rainy weather. Some or local addicts have met with success, but many have been indifferent to the sport on account of adverse weather conditions.

Rustic Furniture Maker Leases C. E. Tanner Mill

C. E. Tanner of the Tanner Lumber company said yesterday that he had leased a portion of his mill to the Huron Shores Rustic Furniture company and that manufacturing operations were now underway. He said the firm had placed a number of men and boys on the payroll and a considerable amount of material had been delivered at the plant.

The firm, which has been operating in its shop on US23 10 miles south of here, was started by C. F. Hamilton of Bay City nearly two years ago with the design and manufacture of rustic furniture as its main product. Orders for large quantities of the fence, secured during the past winter have necessitated the expansion. Among the accounts being supplied is a large mail order house.

The fencing of ornamental type, is being used extensively for yards and grounds, it is constructed almost entirely of non-critical materials, largely cedar poles, with a minimum number of nails used. Distribution is on a nation wide basis.

H. C. Westrich, who is manual arts teacher at East Tawas high school, is a partner in the enterprise, and is acting as superintendent.

Local K. of C. Purchase $10,175 in War Bonds

The Supreme Council of the Knights of Columbus sponsored a War Bond Drive during the month of April with $25,000,000.00 as its goal. The members of the Tawas Council of Knights of Columbus purchased $10,175.00 worth of War Bonds during the drive.

MRS. FERGUSON FUNERAL HELD WEDNESDAY

Succumbs Sunday After Eleven Weeks Illness

This community lost one of its pioneer residents Sunday afternoon in the death of Mrs. Stephen H. Ferguson, wife of Tawas City's oldest active merchant.

Mrs. Ferguson died at her residence here about four o'clock following an illness of 11 weeks duration. Death was attributed to natural causes due to her advanced age. She was 76 years old and had been a resident of Tawas City or East Tawas more than 56 years.

Until recently Mrs. Ferguson had been active in club work, church and community affairs. She was a member of the Eastern Star Chapter, member and Past Noble Grand of the Rebekah lodge, a member of the Twentieth Century Club and headed the Baptist Ladies Aid as president.

Mrs. Ferguson, whose maiden name was Isabelle McCandora, was born in Collingwood, Bruce county, Ontario, August 7, 1866. She and Mr. Ferguson were married at Shelsey, Ontario, January 26, 1886. A year later the couple moved to East Tawas where Mr. Ferguson was employed in the lumber mills. In 1904 Mr. Ferguson opened a grocery store and meat market at Tawas City which he has operated for the past 39 years.

Surviving Mrs. Ferguson are her husband; two sons, George Ferguson of Saginaw and Douglas Ferguson of Tawas City; a daughter, Mrs. R. W. Tuttle of Tawas City; four grandchildren, George Tuttle, of Charleston, S. C., Betty Jane Ferguson of Saginaw, and Shirley Ann and Faye Isabelle Ferguson of Tawas City; a brother, Samuel T. McCandora of Sault Ste. Marie, and a sister, Mrs. Anna Carpenter of East Tawas.

Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon from the Tawas City Baptist church. Rev. Paul H. Dean officiated. Interment was in the Tawas City cemetery.

Out of town relatives and friends who attended the funeral were: Samuel T. McCandora, Mr. and Mrs. Warry McCandora, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Townsend, of Sault Ste. Marie; Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Ferguson of Uxbridge, Ontario; Mr. and Mrs. Neil Ferguson, Mrs. Harriet Collins and Earl Ferguson of Bay City; Mrs. Al Waltz of Grand Rapids; Mrs. Frank Metcalf of Battle Creek; David Ross and John Ross of Glenzie; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dease and daughter, Dorothy, of Bay City.

THE STORY SO FAR: Robin Dale, a young artist, goes to Moose Bay to see her fiancé, Will McPhail. Just after her arrival, Will is accidentally killed. Learning that Will's brother, Angus, blames her for his death, Robin goes to Angus' fishing cruiser to wait for him. She falls asleep and awakes to find the boat at sea, bound for Labrador. Angus' crew consists of Pat Donohoe and a cabin boy named Romeo. Another cruiser passes them, and Robin recognizes a man named Jenkins. Later they see a government patrol boat. Soon after they discover Jenkins has taken over the boat. He orders Angus into the stateroom.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER X

When Angus was gone, Mr. Jenkins looked at Robin. "You've got inside," he said. "Some girls would have yelled and carried on. Nobody's going to hurt you. Go in there with him."

She obeyed. Mr. Jenkins said, "Shut the door." Robin did so. She and Angus, close together in the narrow space between the bunks and the bulkhead that divided the stateroom from the engine room, heard him move to and fro in the cabin. Then he seemed to go forward, and Angus looked down at her thoughtfully and he said:

"He's right. You're brave."

"I'm scared, of course," she admitted. "But I'm interested, too. What is it all about?"

"I ought to have taken you back to Moose Bay. I had no right to get you into this mess."

"You didn't know. It's all right." They spoke in whispers, standing close together. In the forecastle there was a murmur of voices. McPhail said:

"Yes, I did know. I heard all about it on the patrol boat last night. They've had trouble at Moose Bay for months, because someone was bringing in alcohol and selling it to the men and they couldn't find the source of supply. They knew Dad Freel sold some. Marm Freel ran a restaurant back of Dad's barber shop, and Dad sold alky. The company spotters watched them to find out where they got it. They noticed that Marm Freel bought an awful lot of baked beans. Canned beans. That gave them the lead. Yesterday Jenkins delivered a supply of groceries to Marm Freel. They waited till he had left Moose Bay, and stepped in on her and started opening bean cans. The cans were full of alcohol."

"But—why didn't they arrest Jenkins? Why did they let him get away?"

"Dad Freel wasn't the only one selling it. Some of the commissary clerks were in it, too, at Moose Bay and in the swamping camps. Jenkins had a lot of men working with him. They wanted him out of the way so the gang would have no leader. Dad Freel talked after he was arrested. He told them Jenkins was on his way to meet a fishing schooner from St. Pierre that brings him his supplies."

"That's why the plane was following him?"

"Yes. Flying high, staying well behind him, just keeping him in sight."

"That's rather wonderful, isn't it; to think of the plane watching him from way up in the sky. But—how did he get aboard this boat?"

McPhail said grimly, "Romeo. If I had had any brains, I'd have known something was wrong when Romeo denied that Jenkins came aboard us in Moose Bay."

"I see. They were both silent for a moment; and then they whirled together. For Mr. Jenkins spoke, just outside the closed door, in calm tones.

"Good guessing, McPhail," he said. "Come out now and I'll tell you the rest."

She whispered: "He was listening!"

McPhail reached past her to open the door. Jenkins motioned with his pistol. "Sit where you sat before," he said.

Robin saw that he was now more composed. As she sat down again, the engine started, and settled into a steady murmur punctuated by the click of valves; and a moment later she felt the clutch take hold, and the boat heel to her course. Jenkins said mildly:

"Now we're all set. The Irishman is tied to the fo'c's'le ladder, not tight enough to hurt him. He's pretty comfortable." He smiled a little. "I'm hungry. Are you, McPhail?"

Before Angus could answer, Robin said: "I am. May I get supper for us all?"

Jenkins nodded. "Yes, sister, go ahead. I'll keep this door open, keep an eye on you."

She smiled. From the galley, she could see Pat Donohoe. He sat on the floor at the foot of the steel ladder that led up to the hatch. He faced forward, and his arms were drawn back and secured to the uprights of the ladder with black electrician's tape. Cords were knotted over the tape to make his bonds more secure. She said:

"We're all right, Pat Donohoe." Jenkins called: "No talk, sister. Shut that door into the fo'c's'le."

She did so, lighted the little stove, put water to boil, looked along the shelves to see what the larder offered. She went to ask them. "Creamed codfish? I make it rather well."

"Suits me," said Jenkins.

"Don't talk about things till I can hear you, will you?" she suggested, smilingly. "I want to know what's going on."

"Plenty of time," Jenkins assured her. "We've got two or three days ahead of us."

She tried not to let him see how this disturbed her. Two or three days! Back in the galley, she put flakes of salt cod in a skillet and covered them with water and brought them to a boil two or three times; then with two forks she plucked them into small bits, poured over them a can of condensed milk and added a chunk of butter, pepper, a teaspoonful of savory sauce. She made toast and served two plates, carried them into the cabin, set one before Mr. Jenkins, the other before Angus on the desk. "May I take one to Romeo? And feed some to Pat?" she asked. "I'll play square."

Jenkins hesitated, then assented. "Go ahead." He grinned wisely.

"But first, sister, take my plate here to McPhail and bring his to me. Just in case you did try something."

She laughed approvingly. "How clever of you! I feel like one of the Borgias. Only I'm afraid there isn't a drop of poison in the house." She shifted the plates, returned to the galley, preparing two more, took one to hand up to Romeo in the pilot-house, smiling up at him.

"Remember you brought me my first breakfast aboard?" she said. "It's my turn now."

Pat scowled at her and would eat nothing. "Be off wid ye," he said.

In the cabin, Jenkins reminded her of his tea; and she brewed tea for him and for McPhail and herself. Afterward she made quick work of the dishes and came back to the cabin again. "Now," she said, proposed that she come cruising with him down to the Labrador, with Mrs. Freel for chaperone.

The silence seemed to last a long time, and then Jenkins smiled a little grimly. He even laughed. He said: "You've got me wrong, McPhail." He looked at Robin in remote appraisal. "I'm not saying I wouldn't make a pass at her, if the setup was right. Fact, I did, before I knew any of this was going to break. I thought I might kid her into taking a little trip with me. But that's out, now." He frowned soberly; and he said: "The police are after me, McPhail. I've got other things on my mind right now besides fooling with women. If they catch me, I'll be locked up for a few years, and I'm kind of jumpy about it. The only thing I'm thinking about is getting away. I'm not thinking about dames. You don't need to worry about her." He urged, almost wistfully: "You know what I mean. If you were two jumps ahead of jail, you wouldn't waste time on a girl."

His gesture was curiously scornful. "There's a million girls in the world. I've got plenty of time for them after I get clear. I'd give a nickel right now if she was safe home in bed. With her aboard, you're apt to get some fool idea of protecting her, and make trouble, and I'll have to shoot you."

He looked at Robin in a grim resentment. "Sister, I wish you were out of this. If it were just us four men, we could be sensible; but Romeo's always been woman crazy anyway. He's apt to make a pass at you, and McPhail here thinks he's got to look out for you, so anything can happen. You're nothing but a pain in the neck to me."

Robin found herself remembering a certain wise old orchard man whose ten thousand apple trees covered the southerly cant of the hills above that Maine farm where she had sometimes spent her summers. Jeff Plaisted was his name. He and Robin had been friends, given to long talks together; and she remembered something he once told her about apple trees that were about to die, and how they sought to bear fruit as though to pass on this life in them while they could; and how people were like trees.

She looked at Angus, thinking. He would understand that. I must tell him, some day.

Angus was saying something, in a plausible firm tone. "But Jenkins, you might change your mind. I'm not going to let you tie me up. I'm staying aft with Miss Dale."

Jenkins wagged his head. "Man, you're stubborn!"

"As long as you're not ready to kill me just to have your own way, I do the deciding."

"I don't have to kill you to make you behave."

"Say you shot me through the knee, then," Angus argued, calmly enough. "I might bleed to death, or die of infection, and that would still mean hanging for you. You couldn't attend to my wound without coming within my reach. If you did, either I'd rip your throat out or you'd have to kill me—and you don't dare kill me, because you know we may be spotted by the plane at daylight." His tone was persuasive and reasonable. "I'll be missed in the morning. They expect me at Loon River at Sunrise, and—that plane can cover a lot of territory pretty fast, Jenkins. They're apt to be alongside pretty early."

Robin saw that Mr. Jenkins was again perspiring with nervousness. The little cabin was on the surface peaceful enough; but affairs were in a precarious balance, which any word might disturb. Jenkins said through tight lips: "If they do, McPhail, you'll speak a piece. If the plane does spot us, you're going to step up on deck and tell them you changed your plans, that you're going to work the Newfoundland rivers first. You'll tell them just that! I don't want to hurt you, but I'm pretty jumpy. Don't get me sore."

"Exactly," Angus agreed. "If you're overhauled before you get clear, you'll need me to explain; but I can't explain if I'm dead. So you won't shoot me tonight. So tonight you've no choice but to let me have my way. You can't compel me to do anything."

Jenkins said after a moment: "What's your proposition?"

"We'll let Miss Dale take the stateroom. You and I can sit here and chat."

"No chat!" Jenkins told him. "That's out. I'll have to spell Romeo at the wheel, for one thing; and I'll have to get some sleep. So will he. I've got to have you somewhere where you can't start any trouble."

Angus said: "Jenkins, you've been in a dirty business; but that's your affair, and the affair of the police. It's not mine. My concern is to protect Miss Dale, and Pat yonder, and myself. So I'll undertake to play along with you, as long as you behave. I don't want to be shot, any more than you want to shoot me. I'll make any promises, within reason, that you want."

Jenkins eyed him thoughtfully. He said at last: "You're playing dumb. You don't fool me, McPhail." He added: "I forgot, a while ago. I took your word you'd behave, the other time. But I forgot, then. I remember now."

Pat scowled at her and would eat nothing.

"What comes next? Tell us all about it, Mr. Jenkins."

"You know the first of it," he said. "I heard McPhail telling you. He had it right. I saw the plane with my glasses; so I sent my boat on toward the Straits. She'll lead them to Greenland if they'll follow her that far." He grinned. "I'm hoping they'll stay on her tail till I'm clear. I always meant to pull out of the game this fall, anyway. I've got enough, where it's safe." His eyes were for a moment stony and still. "I'd like to go back and make Dad Freel sorry he talked so much; but I don't want to risk my neck just to break his. So I'm pulling out, and—I'm going to use your boat to get away."

"Where to?"

"There's a schooner waiting for me at the right place." He stirred. "Now, McPhail, I hate to do this. But I can't watch you all the time. I've got to have some sleep. I'll have to tie you up, in the fo'c's'le with Pat."

McPhail's tones were steady enough. "How about Miss Dale?"

"She can have the stateroom. I'll sleep on the bench here."

It was suddenly very quiet in the little cabin. Robin felt cold. Her cheeks stiffened, and her lips were tight. She looked quickly at Angus, and she knew miserably that panic flickered in her eyes.

He met her glance; then he spoke again, quietly, to Jenkins. "No, you won't tie me up. And—you won't stay aft with Miss Dale."

Angus did not raise his voice when he contradicted Jenkins. He did not shout, nor brandish his fist, nor otherwise emphasize his simple words; yet what he said was like the alarming clamor of a great bell. Robin thought it was suddenly very quiet, so that she heard the clicking valves of the engine, the steady purr of the exhaust barely audible, the hush and rustle of the water along the cruiser's sides. She thought, curiously, of Mrs. Freel. Jenkins had proposed that she come cruising with him down to the Labrador, with Mrs. Freel for chaperone.

The silence seemed to last a long time, and then Jenkins smiled a little grimly. He even laughed. He said: "You've got me wrong, McPhail." He looked at Robin in remote appraisal. "I'm not saying I wouldn't make a pass at her, if the setup was right. Fact, I did, before I knew any of this was going to break. I thought I might kid her into taking a little trip with me. But that's out, now." He frowned soberly; and he said: "The police are after me, McPhail. I've got other things on my mind right now besides fooling with women. If they catch me, I'll be locked up for a few years, and I'm kind of jumpy about it. The only thing I'm thinking about is getting away. I'm not thinking about dames. You don't need to worry about her." He urged, almost wistfully: "You know what I mean. If you were two jumps ahead of jail, you wouldn't waste time on a girl."

His gesture was curiously scornful. "There's a million girls in the world. I've got plenty of time for them after I get clear. I'd give a nickel right now if she was safe home in bed. With her aboard, you're apt to get some fool idea of protecting her, and make trouble, and I'll have to shoot you."

He looked at Robin in a grim resentment. "Sister, I wish you were out of this. If it were just us four men, we could be sensible; but Romeo's always been woman crazy anyway. He's apt to make a pass at you, and McPhail here thinks he's got to look out for you, so anything can happen. You're nothing but a pain in the neck to me."

Robin found herself remembering a certain wise old orchard man whose ten thousand apple trees covered the southerly cant of the hills above that Maine farm where she had sometimes spent her summers. Jeff Plaisted was his name. He and Robin had been friends, given to long talks together; and she remembered something he once told her about apple trees that were about to die, and how they sought to bear fruit as though to pass on this life in them while they could; and how people were like trees.

She looked at Angus, thinking. He would understand that. I must tell him, some day.

FIRST-AID to the AILING HOUSE

by Roger B. Whitman

Roger B. Whitman—WNU Features.

You may not be able to replace worn or broken household equipment. This is war. Government priorities come first. So take care of what you have . . . as well as you possibly can. This column by the homeowner's friend tells you how.

DOUBLE-GLAZING

Question: I intend to double-glaze my steel casement windows instead of putting on storm sash. Naturally, extreme care would have to be used to avoid soiling the glass. What do you think of the possibility of condensation between the glass, causing spots on the surface of either pane?

Answer: The possibility of condensation between the two sheets of glass will depend entirely on how well you seal the spaces between the two pieces of glass. Eventually, the inside surfaces of the glass will become soiled by infiltration, making it necessary to remove one pane of glass in each frame for a thorough cleaning. You can get a double glass that is factory sealed, with a dehydrated air space between. Ask your glass man about this.

Time to Paint

With the winter months behind, your home may be due for a coat of paint. Surface dirt should be brushed off with a wire brush, then wipe off with rag. Blisters should be scraped.

Dark Woodwork

Question: The woodwork in my house is oak, finished quite dark. I wish to paint it ivory, semi-gloss. How should I go about doing this?

Answer: For the best job, remove the present finish with varnish remover, which will soften the finish enough to be scraped off. Clean off all traces of the remover with benzene—being very careful of fire. Sandpaper, wipe off dust and then refinish with two undercoats of ivory and the semi-gloss enamel. An alternative method is to roughen the old finish by sandpapering, wipe off dust, apply a sealing coat of shellac—thinned half-and-half with denatured alcohol—and then one undercoat of ivory, to be followed by the final coat of enamel.

Wood Floor in Basement

Question: During the past two years a new wood floor has been laid twice in our basement, and each time the wood decayed. What can be done to stop the floor from warping and rotting within a year?

Answer: I presume that it is a cement floor. For a good job, you could use the following method: First, mop on a coating of liquid tar or asphalt. Then put down a layer of heavy asphalt or tar-saturated felt, overlapping the sheets half their width, with a mopping of liquid tar or asphalt between the laps. The wood flooring, in parquet-like blocks, then is laid in an asphalt mastic cement. Most flooring contractors are familiar with this method.

Faded Curtains

Question: Grayish-tan crash window drapes were drawn most of the time, so that the folds exposed to the sun became faded, the underfolds remaining as they were originally. What can I do to them to get a uniform color?

Answer: Have the curtains dyed a slightly darker shade. If done by a reliable dyer, the color will be uniform.

Cracked Door Panel

Question: I have a cracked panel in a bedroom door that I should like to fill before giving the door a coat of flat white paint. How can I fill the crack?

Answer: You can get a prepared crack filler, which is on sale at hardware and paint stores. Or you could try filling the crack with thickened paint, scraped from the upper part of a half-used can. After drying, smooth with fine sandpaper.

Victory Garden Clothes Stage An Intriguing Fashion Parade

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

HERE'S news that is big news—

Victory garden fashions! Now that debutantes, career girls, housewives, in fact men, women and children in every station of life are so enthusiastically turning to hoeing and planting and digging in answer to the challenge that Americans must not only feed themselves but must provide food for millions across the seas, a new chapter on "what to wear" when tilling the soil is writing itself into fashion history.

Never have smart, gaily colorful cottons had such a chance to "show off" as they now are having in the present coast-to-coast Victory garden style parade. Rugged work demands rugged apparel, and if you want to build an in-the-garden wardrobe that will be right from the very foundation up, the ideal thing to do is to start with corduroy, the cotton that tops them all when it comes to "looks" and dependable wear combined.

When there's husband-and-wife work to be done in the Victory garden the proper clothes that make one feel fit will help produce bigger, better tomatoes and carrots, cabbages, beans, peas and potatoes—a bit of psychology worth trying out. Cordurex (for him) and cordurella (for her) will be right at home with spades and trowels. These lightweight corduroys are comfortable to wear because of their soft, yielding texture and long-lived because of their sturdy durability construction. Then, too, corduroy offers warmth in early planting and is patriotic in the bargain for, being cotton, it conserves wool for the armed forces. When it's harvest time in summer their light weight makes them just as comfortable to wear.

As seen in the illustration, Mr. Gardener views the results of his efforts, clad in his cordurex ensemble done in good landscape colors—yellow for his shirt, sage green for his slacks. Mrs. Gardener, as pictured, blends nicely with the plants in her overalls of dark green with adjustable straps. Large patch pockets keep working tools handy.

Displaying her Victory garden produce, the sprightly little farmette seated to the right wears a pinafore of blue cotton chambray with heart bib outlined with polka dot percale, which also makes the blouse. The bonnet matches the pinafore and is lined with polka dot. You will see the heart motif stressed all the way through the play clothes and garden togs program this season.

That charming little green and striped cotton frock to the left is a cleverly styled New York creation done in simulated jumper effect. It has special fashion interest in that it is a favorite with Bonnie Beth Byler, chosen as 1943's "Maid of Cotton" sponsored by the National Cotton council. Bonnie is touring the country this spring in an all-luxurious cotton fashion show, telling women how to care for and conserve cottons.

For a refreshing diversion and for a treat to the eye it is time well spent to go sauntering about in the Victory garden displays stores everywhere are staging this season. You will come across such diverting items as a Maude Muller sunbonnet of gay print ensembled with a bulb basket of matching print. It has huge side pockets for garden utensils. A striped garden apron has an ample leatherette knee pad stitched on to protect you from stones and dampness, also there are convenient pockets for trowel and seeds. As to the moral of this story—beg, borrow or lease a plot of ground, then get into your corduroys or denim or gay picturesque cottons and do your duty with a smile!

Long Gloves

Short sleeves, long gloves, that's the new formula fashion prescribes for the dressy afternoon frock and for the street-length dinner gowns so voguish this season. Black with blue is the color scheme for this pretty-as-a-picture print gown shown for spring. The sleeves are short, the gloves long, in accordance with fashion's decree. The peplum gives a two-piece effect, and the slit skirt is a new note.

Lovely Shirtwaists Worn With Skirts

Much ado is being made about shirtwaist-and-skirt costumes. The big news about them is that they have gone extremely dressy. The fashion begins in the 'teen-age set, who will be wearing the most eye-catching dirdnd skirts of gay print (especially glazed chintz) fancy can picture. These they top with exquisitely dainty lingerie shirtwaists. The peasant type blouse with a low-cut drawstring neckline is the favorite type.

Fact is the new shirtwaists and blouses are just too pretty to cover up with a suit jacket. There is a ladylikeness about the lovely shirtwaists made of rayon crepe in either pastels or chalk white. The newest out is the blouse of stark white crepe which is frilled up and down the front and about the neckline with lace frills falling over the wrists. For later in the season you will be wanting one of the simply styled very sheer chiffon blouses. These are so transparent they call for a camisole. The sleeves are usually wrist depth, although some of the new-type shoulder-cap sleeves are shown.

Knitted Slacks

It is said that the new knitted slacks are a welcome "find" in that they are so lightweight and supple. They are designed with a smart tailored look and with a bright print jacket top or blouse they make a chic outfit for lounging and with a knitted sweater jacket are good-looking for sports and outdoor wear.

The man who sings his own praises is usually a soloist.

An Old Proverb—Never shift your tongue into high gear until you are sure your brain is turning over.

"The man who wants to marry should make a little money first," says a social worker. Afterwards his wife has to make a little money last.

Success comes from cans. Failure is packed in can'ts.

When the soldier talks about "the skipper" he means his captain, the head of his company. And that's just what the title "captain" means. It comes from the Latin word "caput" meaning "head." Another leader high in the Army man's favor is Camel cigarettes—they're first choice with men in the Army. (Based on actual sales records—from service men's own stores.) When you're sending gifts from home, keep in mind that a carton of cigarettes is always most welcome. And though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. S., and to men in the Navy, Marines, and Coast Guard wherever they are.—Adv.

Guarding Fertility Farms' Best Resource

Replacement of Mineral Food Very Important

Regardless of how good a cropping system may be, it cannot of itself completely maintain the fertility of the soil. Moreover, the more efficient a farmer is in maintaining high production, the more rapidly will fertility leave his land, according to Dr. C. O. Rost of the Minnesota agricultural experiment station.

Most good farmers are like a merchant who opens a store with well-filled shelves and by vigorous selling methods rapidly disposes of his goods, but neglects to order new stock. His stock of staple goods is soon depleted.

The staple goods first drained from the farmer's store in the soil will be nitrogen, phosphorus, potash, lime and organic matter. All crops, livestock and livestock products remove fertility from the farm. In Minnesota alone, it would be no exaggeration to say that the equivalent of at least 500,000 tons of commercial fertilizer is removed each year from the soil in the form of cash crops and livestock products. The situation in Minnesota is typical of what occurs every crop season throughout the United States.

But this is not the entire story. Scientists of the department of agriculture have estimated that 63 million tons of plant food materials are removed each year by erosion from the fields of the United States. Much of this loss is directly traceable to wasteful cropping methods, to failure to replace fertilizer elements or to grow cover crops and follow rotation systems.

In the majority of cases, losses from erosion can be largely eliminated by the use of proper crop rotations, special cropping systems and good soil management practices which include the use of fertilizer. These, when combined with other supplementary practices such as contour plowing and strip cropping, can help eliminate erosion.

The problem of replacing mineral plant foods drained away by crop production is serious and should receive serious attention. A part of the nitrogen removed may be replaced by growing inoculated legumes, but minerals cannot be replenished unless they are supplied in the form of commercial fertilizers. Surface soil contains the major part of the organic matter and a large part of the readily available nutrients.

He thinks our increased food production is a military secret.

HOGS

So valuable are all the hog fats that even the water used in the packing house is strained to retrieve floating greases. From these come liquid oils, pasty grease and hard tallow which is sold as lard, manufactured into salves, cosmetics, candle stock, metal polish, soap, lubricating oils for engines, explosives, burning oils and animal feeds.

Pepsin is produced from the linings of the stomach of hogs. Glands produce the drug insulin, and liver extract comes from hog liver. Only the large packers can market glands for pharmaceutical uses since they must be marketed quickly in large quantities before deterioration begins.

Blood of slaughtered hogs is used in refining sugar, printing calico, in making buttons, shoe polish, fertilizer and animal feed. Bones are cut into ornaments, buttons and combs and ground into bone meal and oil, animal feeds and glue.

Bristles from the hog are used as brushes. Hair from the body goes into felting, mattresses, upholstery, air filters and insulation for refrigerators. The skin is marketed for leather goods, razor strops, belts and gloves.

Rural Briefs

Large cows of any breed, when given an equal opportunity, average out better in milk production than small ones.

Nowadays stress is placed on growing green and yellow vegetables and tomatoes, high in Vitamins A and C, and on doing more canning, drying, freezing and storing of home-grown fruits and vegetables.

Dunking Old Idea

Dunking in your "bunchum" is a custom as ancient as Arabia. It was there where the world's first cup of coffee was made from some strange, bright red berries the Arabians called "bunn." The beverage became "bunchum" and was thick enough to scoop out of the bowl with bits of food. Result: Introduction of dunking to the world!

Who Has The Money For 2nd War Loan?

"Where is all the money coming from to meet the 13 billion dollars of the Second War Loan goal?" is a question heard on many sides. It will come out of the 45-billion dollar surplus earnings of 1943, according to statistics reported by Treasury experts.

During 1941 personal savings of individuals amounted to 9 billion dollars. During 1943 this surplus or prospective savings will increase by 36 billion dollars over 1941 when consumer goods were easy to get.

Now that prices are high, thrifty people will make their goods last longer and place more money in War Bonds.

Dated February 15, 1943.

Charles F. Hauser and Grace Hauser, His Wife, of South Branch, Michigan, Mortgagee, by N. C. Hartingh, Attorney, of Tawas City, Michigan.

Pigeons Fly Coop

An Akron, Ohio, officer testified he knew his prisoner was drunk because his eyes were bloodshot, whereupon the prisoner calmly removed his glass eye and the judge said "case dismissed." The Messrs. Kurwoski and Stawdohr of Chicago, each claiming ownership of three pigeons, suggested that the judge release the birds which then would wing home to their rightful cotes. A window was opened, the doves flew forth—whither no man knoweth to this day.

Mother'll Understand

if you don't call her on Long Distance this Sunday

Mothers are understanding and patriotic. They know that under the steadily increasing burden of war-created calls, long distance telephone equipment is seriously overloaded.

Of course, they like to be remembered on Mother's Day, but they'd rather be sure the lines are kept clear for vital war messages.

This year, send your love in a letter. And if you'd like to give your mother a present, she will truly appreciate a U. S. War Bond—a gift of fighting dollars to back our boys overseas.

Don't make any long distance call this Mother's Day unless it is extremely urgent.

People's Responsibility

Eight billion dollars of the 13 billion dollars in this Second War Loan Drive must come from non-banking sources, so the responsibility for the bulk of this 13-billion-dollar drive rests with the American public. Indications are that Americans generally need only to be reminded of this responsibility and how much they should lend their government in order to reach this goal. Americans are backing up their fighting men on the battle fronts. They are supporting the Second War Loan. "They give their lives . . . You lend your money."

THE 2ND WAR LOAN DRIVE IS ON!

Come on,
Let's WIN this war!

If we should lose the war, life would not be worth living.

"But we won't lose it," you may say.

Listen, brother—in this world nothing's sure, unless you make it so.

This month it's up to us here at home to do our part, and then some, to make Victory surer—and quicker! To do it, we've got to lend Uncle Sam 13 billion extra dollars.

It isn't easy—but war isn't easy and Victory isn't cheap. It takes money—and more money—to buy planes, ships, tanks, guns and a million other things our boys must have to deliver that final, paralyzing knock-out punch.

And it's a whale of a lot easier for us at home to lend our money than for our boys to fight through the hardships and dangers of deserts, swamps, jungles, ice-fields and sub-infested seas!

There are 7 different types of U. S. Government securities—choose the ones best suited for you!

Just think! Every extra bond you buy will help provide the weapons to save the lives of many American boys! Isn't that alone worth every effort, every economy you can make? You bet it is!

There are 7 types of U. S. Government securities to meet the needs of every purse. They offer the finest investment in the world—liberal interest, plus securities guaranteed by Uncle Sam himself.

A volunteer worker for the 2nd War Loan Drive may visit you soon. Welcome this unselfish patriot—and buy all the bonds you can. But don't wait for that call. Go—today—to your bank, investment dealer, broker, post office or bond booth and invest to your uttermost limit. Even if it hurts, it's nothing compared to the agonizing impact of a bayonet thrust, a flesh-tearing torpedo fragment or a bone-crushing bullet.

So dig deep, brother, and do it NOW!

THEY GIVE THEIR LIVES . . . YOU LEND YOUR MONEY!

FOOD AND PAY-AS-YOU-GO

Washington, D. C. Although food was supposed to be the chief topic of discussion at the recent White House conference with farm leaders, actually Foodcar Chester Davis did his best to sell the President on pay-as-you-go taxation. He proposed it as an anti-inflation measure to drain off surplus income and ease the work of income tax payment on the average citizen. "We have simply got to come to it, Mr. President," argued the food chief. "It was unfortunate that pay-as-you-go taxes were given a black eye by the Rumi plan. But pay-as-you-go taxes should go hand in hand with rationing to prevent overspending."

The President didn't commit himself definitely, but indicated that he would favor a pay-go plan if wind-falls to the wealthy, as provided for in the Rumi plan, were completely eliminated.

Ed O'Neal, president of the Farm Bureau federation, and Ezra T. Benson, executive secretary of the National Council of Farmer Co-operatives, also took up the cudgels, O'Neal contending that taxpayers wouldn't be able to meet next year's assessments unless the pay-as-you-go plan or forced saving were adopted.

G.O.P. Watching Chances.

"I've made a poll of taxicab drivers and they are all for it," said O'Neal. "The great majority of the American people feel the same way. They are against windfalls but they feel they won't have enough money to pay their income tax payment next year. If the administration doesn't take some action on this, the Republicans will steal the ball from you."

"That's right, Mr. President," chimed in Benson. "The farmers in my organization are overwhelmingly for a pay-as-you-go tax program. I think labor is, too."

"Maybe you're right," responded the President. "Chester (to Davis), I suggest that you talk this over with congressional leaders."

The conversation then turned to farm distribution and the President drew on his own experience as a farmer to illustrate the difficulty "little farmers" are having getting their crops to market.

"I used to raise 100 barrels of apples every year on my Dutchess county farm in New York," the President said. "I also raise some apples on my land in Georgia."

Apple Competition.

The President grinned to Albert Goss, master of the National Grange who hails from Washington, the biggest apple-producing state in the country: "I'd stack my apples up against those you produce in Washington any day."

"You're getting out of your class, Mr. President," smiled Goss. "Have you ever eaten a Delicious?"

"You win, Albert," chuckled the President, "but the point I am trying to make is this—little farmers like myself, and the same goes for all other farmers who don't have the advantage of co-operatives, have encountered a lot of difficulty marketing their crops and getting their money since the war began because of the transportation problem and other factors."

"Don't you think the government should step in and buy up apples and other products that have been running into distribution troubles and store them in the warehouses?" the President asked Goss. "It would take a lot off the market and help many little farmers who are hard up for cash."

Helping Little Farmer.

"I don't agree with you, Mr. President," replied Goss. "I think the way to protect the little farmers is by continuing the agriculture department 'support price' program. Farmers can get along if they are assured that they can get fair prices and a decent break on priorities for machinery to produce their crops. I don't think the government should buy up and sell farm products when there is no necessity for it."

The President meditated for a moment and replied: "I guess you're right at that."

The meeting also thrashed out the question of price ceilings, Ed O'Neal of the Farm Bureau and Albert Goss of the Grange contending that if rationing were tight enough it wouldn't be necessary to have price ceilings, that rationing would automatically take care of prices. Justice Byrnes, Chester Davis and Jim Patton of the Farmers Union argued to the contrary. The President decided with them.

His order shortly thereafter putting price ceilings on almost everything was the chief result of the meeting.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

Embassador John G. Winant has provided an apartment in London for six American soldiers wounded in action with the British Eighth army in Egypt. Three are Harvard men, three from Dartmouth. The six graduated as the top six in a British officers training school before going to Egypt with the British 60th regiment. This is the famous regiment which in Revolutionary times was withdrawn from action in America because it was too friendly to the colonial cause.

U-Boat Meets British Destroyer—Goes Down to Stay

The Italian submarine Asteria had the misfortune of meeting a British destroyer in the Mediterranean. In photo at upper left the sub is brought to the surface for the last time by a depth charge attack. Her crew await being picked up. Lower left: The Asteria is on her way to a permanent rendezvous with Davy Jones, as members of her crew, most of whom were saved, swim to the destroyer. One Phase of Tough Job for Army Engineers

In transporting pipe and other supplies for a pipeline connecting the Norman oil fields of Canada with White Horse, on the Alaskan highway, to make fuel easily available for defense stations, U. S. army engineers overcame great obstacles. Here a convoy of supply barges and towing craft nears the end of a rough 16-mile cross-country voyage.

Farm Migration to More Fertile Areas

As partial solution of the farm manpower problem, farm families are being transported from so-called "submarginal" low-production farms to areas where production is high. Picture shows men, women and children arriving in New York en route to the truck farming region around Stafford Springs, Conn. Camp Connors, former CCC camp, will house them.

'Ike' Meets 'Monty'

Speaking of Sports

By Bob McShane

THE desire to start picking pennant winners burns all the more brightly this year because, in our opinion, it probably will be the last opportunity to make selections on the major league races until after the war.

Much has been said about the chances for a wide-open scramble in both leagues, due largely to the inroads of the draft. But it is becoming apparent that the lines are clearly drawn. Confining this week's history-making, blood-curdling document to the National league, we agree with the betting commissioners that the Cardinals and the Dodgers are the teams to beat.

And, further than that, the Cardinals will be the National league entry in next fall's World Series.

Our complete selections for the senior circuit—which are as ridiculous as anything thought up by a tortured imagination—follow:

The Cardinals were the best club in baseball last season and it is our opinion they are still the best in their league today. What other team can boast of as strong a pitching staff? They have Mort Cooper, Ernie White, Max Lanier, Howard Pollet and six or seven others who are good. They can afford to lose four or five from this group and still have a fine staff left.

Durocher Speaks

Leo Durocher, as usual, doesn't agree with the findings. According to Leo, "the Dodgers will have a lot to say about it. And we'll say it with high-class pitching and a flock of base hits. I think we have every bit as good a chance to win the National league pennant as the Cardinals have."

Leo Durocher

Durocher admits that St. Louis gets the edge in speed. But he isn't giving anything away to the Cardinals' pitching staff. He can point with pride to Wyatt, Higbe and Head. This trio won 45 games last year and Leo figures them for closer to 60 games this season.

One issue can't be overlooked. Although the Cardinals look better going in, the draft may change the picture in a hurry. They are a younger team than the Dodgers, with greater speed and snap. But don't overlook this—those extra years may come as a big help to Brooklyn with the eyes of the draft boards looking in the general direction of youth.

The Chicago Cubs are due to trip up quite a few prognosticators who can't see them finishing better than their sixth place of 1942. The point has been made that the Cubs have as good a pitching staff as there is in the league.

We can't go along with this. Cooper, White, etc., with the Cardinals are too tough. The Cubs top hurlers are Derringer, Warneke, Passeau and Lee. In their prime it would be hard to find four greater stars. But they are no longer kids. In fact, their four careers add up to a total of 55 years—an average of nearly 14 years each in harness.

In 1942 these four Cub stalwarts won 53 games. It isn't impossible that they may be good for 60 wins in 1943. But they will need better hitting support than they received last summer.

The Case of the Reds

The Reds for 1943 are an unpredictable team. They have been picked for berths ranging from first place through sixth. They finished fourth last year. Their chief loss was Catcher Ray Lamanno who went into the armed services. Their main acquisitions are Eddie Miller, Braves' spectacular shortfielder, and Charley Brewster, Nashville star.

With Philadelphia safely ticketed for last place, the Pirates, Braves and Giants are likely to finish under a blanket.

Mel Ott, capable manager of the Giants, will get everything possible out of his team, but it's going to be hard to get along without men like Hal Schumacher, Johnny Mize, Harry Danning and Babe Young. New York will have hustle and some good pitching, but too many big guns are lost.

Frank Frisch will make every effort to lift his Pirates from last year's fifth place, but he lacks the material to make them a strong contender for pennant honors. The loss of Pitcher Ken Heintzelman to the armed forces may be offset by the addition of Xavier Rescigno, who won 23 games for Albany, and Wally Hebert, who won 22 games for San Diego last season. And Rip Sewell, who won 17 in 1942, will be on deck.

The Pirates finished fifth last season with 66 victories and 81 defeats. Their chances to improve seem rather slight at the present writing.

Flying Fortress Dishes It Out

By Capt. Clyde B. Walker

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with The American Magazine.)

We were carrying some mighty heavy stuff for Jerry in our big Flying Fortress.

Leaving our home field in England at six o'clock in the morning, our objective was the submarine pens at Lorient, France.

As we approached, somebody yelled "Flak!" and the anti-aircraft shells broke around us. At the same time the ball turret gunner shouted "Wolves coming up!" He had sighted a dozen German fighters, Focke-Wulf 190s, climbing fast from downstairs.

I held the ship steady on her course. A few seconds later Bombardier Bentinck pressed his bomb triggers. The giant bombs hit exactly where he had aimed them, in the middle of a platform between two submarine pens.

"Bull's-eye!" he whooped over the intercom. I never heard any one sound so jubilant. Those were the last words Bentinck ever spoke. The next second, everything hit us at once. Things started happening much faster than I can tell them.

FW's Take Us On.

We were raked from end to end with flak. At the same time a swarm of FW's dived out of the sun. They came in like hornets, with 20-millimeter cannon and machine guns wide open.

One burst of flak ripped into the nose. It killed Bentinck instantly. The same burst wounded Navigator Smith and knocked him unconscious.

A second burst ripped away the doors of the bomb bay. Another burst sprayed around Co-pilot Bill Reed and myself.

That wasn't half of it. Krucher, in the tail, had been hit. A cannon shell had torn a big hole in the ball turret. Radio Operator Frishholz had a flak hole in the back of his head, and the radio room was on fire.

No. 1 Engine Is Out.

The first broadside of flak smashed the drive shaft of No. 1 engine. The No. 2 had been hit on top and was throwing oil. It might catch fire any second. Flak had knocked a big dent in the propeller of No. 3, and No. 4 had a big hole in its base. I carried on with 3 and 4. The ship staggered and started falling behind the rest of the squadron. I put the nose down and dived steeply for the cover of some clouds far below us.

FW's Close In For Kill.

Seeing we were badly hurt, the FW's closed in for the kill. Then the boat really lived up to her name of Flying Fortress. We took plenty during the next 60 seconds, but not half as much as we dished out.

My waist gunner, Bill Stroud, took care of the first one. It was so close that he could see the back of the pilot's head. Stroud poured a stream of bullets into him. The FW went into a spin, and Stroud followed him with burst after burst.

A moment later another Jerry came under his sights. He poured steel into him, saw him break up.

Right waist gunner Berring was pumping 50-caliber slugs at range. He, too, got a "probable," a red-nosed FW which spun down and out of sight.

Meanwhile the wounded tail gunner got a chance. While he was lying back there losing blood, an FW roared in to finish him off. Krucher took steady aim and rapped out one long burst. It literally sawed the German's wing off. He went down in flames.

With the wind shrieking through the flak holes, we raced down, down, for that beautiful layer of clouds. We made it. The remaining FW's didn't attempt to follow us into the clouds.

Somehow or other, we limped home on our two engines and landed at an English airport near the coast. Our wounded went to the hospital, and have now recovered.

Bentinck—as great a bombardier as ever served in any man's army—was gone, but the other nine of us will soon be flying again.

Our trip back was as big an adventure as our fight with the FW's. Coming out of the cloud cover, we were down to 600 feet when we saw the ocean again, then a large town, which I recognized as Brest, one of the most strongly fortified places in France.

I pointed the ship straight over Brest. We were so low that we could see people staring up at us, but there were no fireworks.

Crossing the harbor, we passed right between two German destroyers at anchor. They could have blasted us to blazes.

ON THE HOME FRONT

With RUTH WYETH SPEARS

HERE is how you can play Fairy Godmother to a kitchen chair. Pad the back as shown here, using at least three layers of cotton batting for the front of it and one for the back. Next, cut an 18-inch circle of cardboard and use it for a pattern for marking the shape of the round seat on boards or plywood. Cut out the wooden seat and screw it to the chair. Save the cardboard pattern.

Cover the front of the chair back next, tufting it with covered buttons sewn through the back with a long needle. Sew the back of the cover in place with stitches hidden under welting. Tack a strip of muslin around the seat, and sew the ruffles to it. Now, pad the round cardboard; stretch covering fabric over it; then sew it in place on the chair.

NOTE: Readers are writing to tell us that the new BOOK 9 should be called the Victory Book as it contains so many ways to make pretty things for the home that could not otherwise be had for the duration. Copies are available by mail postpaid for 15 cents. Address:

It's Interesting to Watch Departments Whizz By

Desirous of bucking up business, the proprietor of a large department store engaged an "efficiency expert," whose chief delight was changing the departments round.

One day a section would be at the top of the building; the next it would be in the basement or where the restaurant used to be.

After three weeks of this an old lady approached a worried-looking shopwalker and asked if he could tell her where the hardware department was.

"No, madam," he replied wearily, "but if you'll stand here for a few minutes, I'm sure you'll see it go by."

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Stout chains and padlocks bind each of the four wheels to the bumpers of a Trenton, N. J., woman's car when she parks it in the streets of night.

It was not until 1916 that the U. S. made its first annual appropriation for Federal aid highways. Good roads, good automobiles and good tires are companion necessities in modern motoring.

It is generally believed that at speeds below 35 mph, tire blow-outs, whether front or rear, are not particularly dangerous for alert drivers, other things being equal. Another good reason for keeping to the rubber-saving 33 mph limit.

In return for their stimulated rubber growing and collecting activities the United States has agreed to pay South and Central American countries from $3 to $4.50 cents a pound for rubber until the end of 1946 at least. Before government price freezing, rubber was selling in the U. S. at 22½ cents a pound.

THE 38,000 ACRE FARM THAT WENT TO SEA

What It Takes in Farm Acreage to Put a Cruiser In Uncle Sam's Service

That 10,000 ton cruiser—stalwart member of Uncle Sam's great fleet—took a lot of farming before she rolled off the ways bound for ocean duty.

Ten thousand men spent a solid year building her. Food from 38,000 acres—about 10,000 tons—helped them maintain top speed and efficiency. Over 250,000 pounds of cotton and 25,000 pounds of wool went into clothes for those workers—say 1,200 acres of cotton, and wool from 3,000 sheep. Another 250 acres grew tobacco for 3½ million packs of cigarettes.

On the job, the shipbuilders laid some 207 acres of soybeans on that cruiser in the form of oil for paint to make her shipshape.

Before she started on her first shift of ocean duty, more farm acres did their share in outfitting ship and crew.

Now she's carrying about 125 tons of food, a year's production from some 425 acres. Almost 3,000 sheep are represented in the blankets under which the crew sleep. Many acres of cotton went into the making of mattress ticking, bunting and canvas, and more cotton helped outfit the crew. So did lots of wool from lots of sheep.

Ropes and hawsers so essential to her efficient operation were woven from American-grown hemp.

When her guns fire their thunderous salvos they draw on her stores of some 120 tons of explosive powder. That powder required 176,000 pounds of cotton lint and alcohol made from 530 acres of wheat, or instead, perhaps, from 70 acres of sugar cane.

Yes, it took a lot of farming—and a lot of farmers—along with the welders and riveters and carpenters and engineers.

Today she's one of Uncle Sam's watchdogs of the ocean lanes, that 10,000 ton cruiser. She's 38 thousand acres of might and fight. She's the farm that went to sea.

Kleberg Gets Old Shoes

He Gave Away Years Ago

WASHINGTON.—Representative Kleberg, Democrat of Texas, part owner of King ranch, was astonished when he opened a box and recognized a pair of shoes which he had worn nearly six years and had given away four years ago to one of his Mexican ranch hands. It all grew out of the shoe rationing order.

Penciled in Spanish, a note accompanying the shoes said the sender had noticed in the newspapers that Mr. Kleberg was wearing the same shoes he had bought four years ago, at the time he gave up the enclosed pair.

Unable to write, Willie Flores, 60-year-old cook, dictated to another ranch hand, and signed with an X, this message:

"I see where you don't have but one pair of shoes, so I am sending my good friend the pair which you gave me a few years back.

"Sorry, but we are short of shoe strings here at the ranch. Hope these will help the situation and that you are well."

That sleek, swift 10,000 ton cruiser whose eight inch guns will speak so loudly for victory takes a heap of farming to put it on the high seas. Story at left gives interesting details.

What to Do

By PHYLLIS BELMONT

What is the proper signature for a woman to use?

Answer—The only time a woman calls herself, or signs her name "Mrs." is for purposes of identification.

She signs her letters to friends "Mary Smith" or if she has just married and is afraid she won't be recognized, she signs "Mary Jones Smith." If whomever she is writing would not recognize "Mary Smith" she may add in parenthesis under her signature "Mrs. John Smith."

Her cards are engraved "Mrs. John J. Smith."

A single woman signs her name "(Miss) Mary Jones"—to clarify her identity, but she signs "Mary Jones" where she is known. Her cards would be engraved "Miss Mary Jones."

FUN FOR YOUR FAMILY

By MISS ABBIE CONDIT

National Recreation Association.

Such timely suggestions are offered in a bulletin entitled "Games and Songs in Wartime" issued by the New York State Extension service that we can do no better than share them with you. The bulletin points out that as work hours in spring and summer become longer there will be fewer times when people can play together, and it is increasingly important that these occasions be planned better. "There should be a period of recreation while folks gather for 4-H, Home Bureau or other meetings, between business and work periods, or after the meetings. Singing, folk dancing, games—any of these are good group activities. Have something always ready, and plan social evenings to which folks can walk."

Spring Showers. Teams stand in single file, lined up behind a starting line. Stretched across the opposite end of the room is a length of cord, the clothesline. In front of the line, opposite each team, is a box of clothespins and an improvised "wash basket" in which are several articles reminiscent of the weekly wash. Upon a signal, the first person in each team runs up to his respective wash basket, takes out the articles, hangs them on the line with the clothespins, and runs back to the starting point. If an article falls down, he must go back and fasten it securely. The second person runs up, takes down the wash, puts it in the basket and places the clothespins in their box. The game continues until the winning team finishes first.

Seed Identification. Players should be given a pencil and paper to write down as many different kinds of seeds as they are able to identify from numbered saucers on a table. There should be about 15 varieties available.

A Farmer's Love Letter. Read the following letter aloud, saying "blank" at the appropriate places. Divide the group into teams and see which can call aloud or write down the most correct vegetable or fruit answers. "My darling Sweet (Potato). Do you (carrot) all for me?"

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

My heart (beets) for you and my love is soft as a (squash). I am for you strong as an (onion). You are a (peach) with your (radish) hair and (turnip) nose. You are the (apple) of my eye, so if we (cantaloupe) then (lettuce) be married, for I know we will make a happy (pear)."

Hidden Hats. Give each of the players pencil and paper, and tell them to write as many words containing the word "hat" as they can think of in five minutes' time. A tiny bonnet may be given to the one who produces the longest list and to the one who thinks of the longest word. Examples of words which may be used are: hatchet, chatter, etc.

Spring Hat Parade. Take the colored hats displayed in magazines and cut every hat into an equal number of pieces. Then mix up the pieces. Seat the guests around the table or around the room and let everyone draw one piece. Then give them an equal number of other pieces. Everyone is to pass a piece to the right until she has succeeded in collecting all the pieces that belong to her hat. The first one done may be the prize winner.

Ring the Bunny's Ears. Cut the silhouette of a large rabbit from a sheet of heavy white cardboard and tack it against a box so that it can stand upright. Tie a big bow of pink crepe paper around its neck and place it in the center of the room. Let each guest try his luck at ringing the bunny's ears. Use ordinary jar rubbers for rings. See who can ring the most "ears" in five trials.

Hate the Russians More, Nazi Leader Tells People

NEW YORK.—A call upon the German people for "hate and more hate" against the Russians and "the Anglo-American hypocrites" was issued by Dr. Robert Ley, chief of the Nazi labor front, writing in the newspaper Angriff.

The article, reported by the OWI, said the fate of the German soldiers lost at Stalingrad "still hurts us very much," but there was "no alternative" but to make the stand there.

In an earlier article Ley asserted that "the harder the fight in the East becomes and the more difficult the war, the more grateful we must be to the Fuehrer."

PHYSICAL TRAINING

New trails are being blazed to reach the army air forces technical training command's goal of physical fitness for every man.

The physical training program has been worked out with the knowledge that each station has its special problems and special facilities. However, the over-all program is uniform, and the schedule as outlined by Lieut. Col. C. L. Brownell, director of the technical training command's physical training program, follows:

(1) First hour—25 minutes of conditioning exercises; and 35 minutes of road work, running and obstacle course activities.

(2) Second hour—10 minutes of warm-up drills; and 50 minutes of games, sports, and athletics (compulsory). Where aquatic facilities are available, these are used to supplement games, sports and athletics.

When a soldier qualifies for study in one of the technical training command's schools and leaves the basic training center, his physical training program continues but is reduced to one hour, six days a week.

The program at the technical training command's schools calls for more strenuous games and sports. Most of the schools have obstacle courses which help develop speed, muscular endurance, strength, co-ordination and aggressiveness.

The obstacle course is laid out over a stretch of terrain 175 yards long by 50 yards wide. Fifteen men may compete at one time. The standard obstacle course consists of: brush hurdle, 7-foot, 6-inch wall, 8-foot trench, rope climb, low bars for going under and over, and inclined ladder and jump.

Emphasis is placed on rough and tumble sports among the younger men and those physically fit to stand up to the rigors of combat activities. For example, at Chanute Field, Ill., "Heck" Kenney, former wrestling coach at the University of Illinois, instructs classes in jujitsu as well as wrestling.

One of the latest features of the physical training program is the regular measurement test by which instructors can gauge the benefits of conditioning to the individual soldier. Improvement in cardio-respiratory endurance, muscular strength and endurance, power, agility, speed and body co-ordination are systematically checked. Special classes are organized for soldiers who do not make satisfactory progress in regular games and exercises.

Wooden Tires Help Nation Solve Rubber Problem

When the Japs took Malaya and the Dutch East Indies shortly after Pearl Harbor, cornering almost all of the world's rubber supply in a swoop, they scored heavily, especially against America, the world's greatest automobile nation. But in the long run it may prove that the Japs really did America a favor. For never again will this country be entirely dependent on an outside source for anything vital to its economy. Already synthetic rubber plants are springing up throughout the country, and many of these plants are producing rubber.

Many and ingenious are the stunts tried by Americans to tide over the rubber shortage crisis. One of the best tried so far is the wooden tire. There are many versions of the wooden tire, and one of the best is that developed by Dugan Brothers, baking firm of New Jersey. The wooden tire developed in their shop is made in four sections of five layers of wood. It has a tread of tough, wear-resisting brake lining that makes the going smooth enough on concrete roads. When it comes to travel over cobbles or rutted roads, however, there is plenty of jolting. Picture at right shows procedure. The craftsman marks inside and outside diameters. Auto wheel goes inside the inner circle.

CHRIST'S CHARGE TO PETER

LESSON TEXT—John 21:15-24. GOLDEN TEXT—Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends.—John 15:13.

Breakfast for a hungry fisherman—that is what our loving and thoughtful Lord had provided on the shore of Galilee. He wanted to talk to Peter, but He knew this was needful first. There are some folk who think that following Christ is a doleful matter, devoid of every pleasure. Jesus never taught any such thing. He attended weddings and dinners even in the homes of those despised by men. But remember that He always did it for their spiritual good, not merely for His own enjoyment; and that He always brought the gathering up to His own spiritual level, rather than stooping to any worldly or wicked standards.

Here we find Him with a glowing fire upon which fish is broiling, and with bread ready for these hungry men. It was just like Him thus to meet in most delightful and satisfying fellowship those who serve Him. Draw up to the fire, Christian friends who are standing afar off. You may be so timid that, like the disciples, you will not dare to call Him by name (v. 12), but if you will come, you will find that the precious fellowship will soon warm your heart.

With the meal over, Christ turned to Peter and in their conversation we find the latter required to

I. Face Responsibility (vv. 15-17).

With kindly persistence our Lord brought Peter face to face with his responsibility of full-hearted devotion to Him. Before service can be rendered there must be a right relationship to the Lord.

Three times Peter was asked to declare his love for Christ. Such a public confession was quite in place, before the man who had thrice denied his Lord was restored to a place of leadership. The words "more than these" (v. 15) indicate that Jesus was asking of him a high measure of devotion. It is no more than He has a right to expect of us.

The conversation after breakfast that morning was a very profitable one. One is reminded, by contrast, that few of our mealtime discussions are very useful. Many (perhaps most) after-dinner speeches and conversations yield little profit. Here is an occasion when such was not the case. One wonders whether we would not be wise to take the suggestion and turn our thoughts and those of our dinner guests to spiritual things. Surely it should be so among Christian friends and in a Christian home.

II. Feeding Christ's Flock (vv. 15-17).

We review the same verses to point out that an expression of love to Christ means nothing except as it manifests itself in service. Like Peter, we are to be diligent about feeding His flock, whether they be the young and inexperienced lambs, or the mature sheep of the fold.

We tend to specialize. Even in soul-winning some give themselves to child evangelism while others reach only adults, and would hardly think of dealing with a child. True it is that we have varying gifts, and one does one type of work better than another. But let us avoid over-specialization. Every needy soul is a challenge to us as we present the gospel.

The word "feed" should be stressed. Here again the church has frequently failed. Men and women are won to a decision for Christ, and then forgotten. Sheep must be fed if they are to grow. A teaching ministry must accompany the evangelistic effort. They belong together, and to neglect either is to fail, at least, in that measure.

III. Follow Him to the End (vv. 18-24).

Endlessly ingenious are the devices of Satan. He who had sifted Peter like wheat (Luke 22:31) and had rejoiced in the weakness of his denial of Christ, now saw him stepping out into victorious living. He heard the prophecy of the martyr's death of Peter. So he put into his heart a question: Why should he suffer? What about John? What was the Lord going to do for him?

When our enemy cannot trip us up with temptation to personal sin, he resorts to the device of jealousy. Many promising Christian workers have become useless because they have taken their eyes off Jesus and put them on the persons and work of other Christians. Doing a work which was difficult and unnoticed but very important to God, they have felt the urge to quit because someone else seemed to have the easier task and receive more recognition.

The answer of Jesus in verse 22 plainly states that it is not the place of one disciple to judge the course of life of another, nor to gauge his own devotion to Christ by another's place or service.

The word of Christ to us is the same as to Peter: "Follow me." We have all we can do to live our own lives in a manner well-pleasing to our Lord.

12th Century Monastery Crossed Ocean in Cases

The 12th century Spanish monastery which Mr. William Randolph Hearst purchased and had shipped to America in a specially chartered steamer in 1923 has been sold to an anonymous buyer for $19,000.

Twice this sum was spent on re-packing the monastery, after it arrived in the United States in 10,500 cases. This had to be done because the stones had been wrapped in straw, and it was discovered too late that it was illegal—for sanitary reasons—to import straw. Mr. Hearst is believed to have spent $500,000 on the monastery. It has been estimated that it will cost another $125,000 to transport it from its present resting place in a New York warehouse to wherever it is to be re-erected.

Tawas City folks, please note the change in time of our service. This is being done in order to give the pastor and his wife a chance to attend Sunday school with you and study God's Word.

The Good Friday service held at the Baptist church was well attended. The program consisted of two solos, "Thou Art the Christ" and "Were You There," sung by Mrs. Nyda Campbell Leslie. We appreciate the different ones who came to worship this hour with us. An appropriate message on the Crucifixion was given by the pastor, Rev. Paul Dean. Also musical number on the piano was much enjoyed. It was played by Mrs. A. E. Giddings.

Heavy Water Is Stimulant

Tests on animals show that when heavy water is administered it produces an effect similar to that of adrenalin, a hormone, which throes the body into its greatest state of activity.

'Color Blind'

An artist in Cleveland, Ohio, who had won several prizes for his paintings, was rejected by the marine corps because he was "color blind."

Shallow Draft Vessel

Channel and lock improvements on the Missouri and Mississippi rivers make it possible for a shallow draft vessel to sail some 4,000 miles from Olean, N. Y., to Fort Benton, Mont.

Speed Drying

To speed drying of automobile finishes, parts are moved through "tunnels of light" in which hundreds of electric lamps provide heat from infra-red radiation.

Where Will Money Come From?

People ask: "Where will the money come from?" to reach the thirteen-billion dollar objective of the Second War Loan. The answer is simple. The people HAVE the income.

When we produce munitions or peacetime goods, or anything else, we likewise produce income. For every dollar of production, there is a dollar of income.

The problem of war finance boils down to this—if individuals and businesses receive more income after taxes than there are things produced for them to buy, then excess funds arise.

The government deficit is matched by the combined surplus of everybody else. This surplus should be put into government securities to wipe out that deficit.

They give their lives.... You lend your money.
