First Junior-Senior Banquet Held at Hale

On Friday, May 8, the Juniors of the Hale High School gave the Senior Class a banquet in their honor. The banquet was held in the dining room of the community building. This was the first Junior-Senior banquet ever given at Hale, as this Senior Class of 1943 is the first to graduate from Hale since it was made 12th grade school last fall. It was a big event for all involved. The banquet was semi-formal. Nearly all the girls wearing formals, making a very charming sight.

The Senior Class colors, red, white and blue, were carried out throughout the decorations, and blue streamers on the table forming a V for each individual plate. The menu was written in army style, and many people were in question as to what they were going to eat. However roast bazaar proved to be roast chicken.

The program following the banquet was very interesting. Norman Van Wormer served as toastmaster. A welcome was given by the Junior Class president, Wilma Bueschen. Tillsworth Bernard, president of the Senior Class, responded. Eva Glendon gave the class will; Nellie Walt, the Class History; and Margaret Ann Smith, the Class Giftatory. These were very clever and amusing. Supt. W. D. Meeker gave remarks, and Norman Van Wormer gave two vocal solos, "The Sleeping Rio Grand" and "There's a Star Spangled Banner Waving Somewhere."

Immediately after the banquet, the party went up into the auditorium to dance.

Victor Bouchard Buys Anschutz Farm

Victor Bouchard has purchased the George Anschutz farm from Paul Anschutz. The deal was completed Tuesday. Paul Anschutz will reside in cottage near Tawasville which he purchased from Fred Bouchard.

The farm in this transaction is one of the oldest farms in the county, and has been owned by members of the Anschutz family for three generations.

Red Cross Activities

Coming — Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, June 6, 7 and 8, to the Family Theatre, East Tawas, a Pete Smith special feature on First Aid. Dr. Mitton, first aid chairman of Iosco county, draws attention to the fact that all who have taken the first aid course should see this picture, in which screen stars demonstrate first aid technique and which offers a convincing illustration of what not to do in an emergency. It also offers a splendid opportunity to review first aid principles.

First Aid Certificates were recently issued to eleven at Hale. The class was taught Mrs. Townsend who had received her instructor's pin, a reward for past services.

Another class in first aid is under way at East Tawas under the supervision of Mrs. Townsend.

DEEP WATERS

THE STORY SO FAR: Robin Dale, a young artist, goes to Moose Bay to see her fiancée, Will McPhail. When Will is accidentally killed, his brother Angus blames Robin. She goes to Angus' fishing boat to see him. While she is on board the boat sails, carrying her, Angus, Pat Donohoe and a cabin boy named Romeo toward Labrador. Now they have another passenger. Caught running contraband alcohol, he is seized the boat, with the help of Romeo, and is trying to escape from a government patrol. The boat runs aground on a rocky ledge and sinks. They succeed in reaching shore but have no idea where they are. Now Robin has just discovered that they are on an island.

CHAPTER XIII

No one answered her. The thing was plain enough without words. The island on which they stood was perhaps a quarter mile long, 200 yards wide. This upper part of it was sleek naked rock, black with wet little streams of rain water running down its slopes to cascade over the break of the cliffs on every side. There was never a tree in sight, and scarce a bush worth the name. Angus turned to Robin with gray, tired eyes. She asked:

"Where are we? Do you know?"

Angus shook his head. No one spoke. Robin tried to speak, but her lips were stiff with cold. A gust of sleet pelted them; and Angus drew Robin beside him, sheltering her as well as he could. "We'll have to get a fire going," he said. "Have to find some cover against the rain."

Pat spoke. "Sorr, there's a place I marked back there where we came up. Come and see. 'Tis not much; but it will be some better than nothing at all."

"We'll have a look," Angus assented. They turned back toward the cleft, and as they did so, Romeo and Jenkins came up into view. Mr. Jenkins wore now an oilskin coat he had not worn before. They approached him, and Romeo drew warily aside as though fearful of some violence. Robin saw a long open cut on cheek and jaw in front of Romeo's ear, and all his countenance was battered and swollen. She remembered how when he threw her aside in the fore-castle last night she struck at him with the knife like a club.

Angus asked a question. "Where did you get the coat, Jenkins?"

"I had it on last night in the cabin to keep warm. I got out of it when it looked as if I'd have to swim ashore. It floated up on the beach." He nodded toward Romeo. "I sent him down to get it, this morning."

"Miss Dale needs it more than you do."

Robin started to deny this; but before she could speak, Jenkins laughed grimly. "Her? I wouldn't give it to her to save her life. If she hadn't been along, Romeo would have tended to business, and we'd be all right now. Let her freeze."

When he saw violence in McPhail's eyes he took a step or two backward and dropped his hand into his pocket and said: "Easy, McPhail. I've still got my gun. Come on, let's get out of here."

Angus hesitated. "We can't," he said. "We're on an island. Water all around us." Rain and sleet lashed at them.

"An island? You're crazy!"

Angus said, "See for yourself." He indicated the dome above where they stood. Jenkins and Romeo went that way, and Pat led Angus and Robin down to the break of the cliff. A dozen feet below them, some harder strata had resisted the weather, and a ledge two feet thick projected like a shelf. The outer part of it had broken off, a great slab a dozen feet across; and this stood on edge like a wall across the seaward face of the cavellike space under the overhang.

Nevertheless, here was shelter. Angus and Pat began to chink that opening at the top, to reduce to a minimum the amount of rain and sleet that might come in; and then Mr. Jenkins and Romeo returned. "We're in a tough spot, McPhail," said Jenkins, soberly.

Angus nodded. "First thing is to look around," he suggested. "See what we've got to get on with. Look for firewood. We can all meet here later, start a fire." Jenkins moved away in a silent assent, and Romeo after a moment's indecision, as though choosing the lesser of two evils, followed him. Pat watched them go; and he said to Angus with a relish:

"Romeo'll never wince another girl with the handsome face of him; and he'll not laugh again at this scar of mine."

"What cut his face so?"

Pat's glance touched Robin. She remembered that he had been close beside her in the fore-castle last night, must have seen the knife in her hand; but he said evasively: "Like as not he butted the glass out of the pilothouse or what not. He had it coming to him, anyway, bad cess to him! Aye, them two bold men will sing small now; or you and me we'll break the both of them."

Angus did not press the point. Jenkins and Romeo had gone toward the more distant end of the island. "You and I will search this end, Pat," McPhail decided. "Miss Dale, you stay here where there's some shelter."

She felt like a child rebuked. "I'm sorry," she said. "I've certainly ruined things for all of you, haven't I?"

He spoke in a still impatience. "Blame doesn't matter now. We'll manage. You stay here."

So she was alone for an hour or more in the scant shelter afforded by these two great slabs. Wind curled in around the slab that was like a wall; so she began to pile some rocks at one end, and thus engaged, she remembered for the first time that cake of chocolate inside her flannel shirt.

She put it in a dry crevice, especially contrived, in the barrier she was building across the open end of the shelter; and she piled rocks over it and around it to keep it safe for him.

Angus and Jenkins and Romeo returning, met just above the shelter, and she heard their voices and looked up and saw them there. Mr. Jenkins brought a broken orange crate, and Romeo a few dead twigs and a stick of rotten drift, and Angus some scraps of wood. Angus called down to her: "All right?"

"Yes." She would not tell him about the chocolate while they could hear. They brought their scant burdens of firewood to deposit them by the shelter, and she noticed that Jenkins and Romeo kept a wary distance between them and Angus, as though fearful of a surprise attack. Then Angus said to Mr. Jenkins: "I found no better shelter than this. Did you?"

Jenkins said sullenly: "No. And there's darned little driftwood, and nothing to eat."

Robin thought proudly and happily of her hidden chocolate, a treasure beyond price. Then Pat hailed them from the dome that was the highest point of the island. He was out of sight, but they heard him shout.

"Halloo!" he called. "Here's land, sorr, and a town!"

Angus turned to race up the slope. Romeo and Mr. Jenkins did not move to follow him; but Robin, forgetting everything else but this hope of quick rescue, scrambled up to the level and ran toward where Angus and Pat stood together.

"So this'll be Humpback Island we're on, sorr; and yon's Humpback Harbor. Nought but four or five families live there; but they fish a bit, and they can run us to Corner Brook as easy as baiting hooks."

A scud of sleet and rain hid the distant land and houses behind a gray veil; and like a curtain then the fog came down again. Angus said quietly: "They could if they knew we were here."

"Sure, sorr, we'll signal them."

"They can't see us through the fog."

"It will be lifting, come afternoon."

Angus glanced at Robin. "Surely," he agreed. He looked around for Jenkins and Romeo; but they were not in sight. He told Robin: "It's only eight or ten miles to shore, so we'll be all right, as soon as it stops raining."

But Pat Donohoe suddenly squatted on his hunkers, and he made a doleful, keening sound. Angus asked quickly: "What's wrong, Pat?"

Pat wagged his head. "Sorr, there'll be trouble to signal the folk ashore there, even when it clears."

"We'll light a fire."

"With never a dry match among the lot of us? Nor a dry rag on any one of us?"

"We'll manage somehow."

Pat stared at the rock between his feet. "Sorr, did ever ye hear of the Queen of Swanssea?"

"No."

"Many's the time I've heard the old folks tell that tale." Pat's low tones were remote and strange, like the murmurs of a sleeper. "She went ashore in a snowstorm, one December day seventy years ago, on Gull Island. Two women and nine men got off her, so they did. They got to the island before she sank. They had a bit of sail for shelter, but no food, no water, no wood."

Mr. Jenkins sat cross-legged, facing them.

Robin was trembling with a sudden terror. She cried defensively: "We've food! I have a pound of cooking chocolate. And we've water! There's rain water in every hole in the rocks. And we've shelter."

Angus looked at her sharply; but Pat did not lift his head. His voice droned on. "Sure, sorr, they could see a village eight miles away, the same as us. They built fires to signal, too, at night; but the folk ashore went to bed at dark, belike; and wood was scarce and the fires were small and no one ever saw them. It was a March day when a fisherman found them, in a heap under the poor bit of sail."

"Dead?" Robin whispered. She cried desperately: "But Angus, we can signal them somehow. We can put up a flag!"

Pat droned mournfully: "With never a flag, nor a flagpole? How will we be doing that, ma'am?"

Robin forced herself to laugh at him. "Pat, Pat, you'll not give up so easily! Why, we can swim ashore if we must! I could almost do it myself."

"And the water like ice, and the tide current like a river running?"

Angus chuckled. "Come out of your trance, Pat! Here's what we can do. We'll build a monument for them to see. A cairn. A pile of rocks. People who live beside the sea always watch the horizon. You know that, Pat." Pat's head rose as though hope revived in him; he uttered an approving grunt. "If they see something sticking up on top of the island here, they'll come to see what it is."

Pat sprang to his feet, his hopeless mood gone as quickly as it had come. "Right for you, sorr!" he cried. "We'll do that!" He turned sharply as though to begin; but Angus said:

"Wait, Pat. Miss Dale, you say you have a cake of chocolate?"

She nodded; and then she was suddenly cold, remembering. She looked toward the cleft below them. Mr. Jenkins and Romeo were not in sight. They must be down in the shelter under that overhanging slab, and—the chocolate was there. She caught Angus miserably by the arm.

"Yes, but it's down there." Then he turned that way and they followed him. They came to the break of the ledge and looked down into the shelter a dozen feet below them. Mr. Jenkins sat cross-legged in the open end of it, facing them. Romeo peered over his shoulder. Mr. Jenkins held his pistol in his hand. Angus stopped at sight of it, and the others too. Jenkins said assentingly:

"Yes, that's right. Stay where you are."

Robin felt the sudden storm in Angus, but his tones were calm enough. "Jenkins," he said, "we're all in this together. We've got to . . ."

Jenkins interrupted curtly. "Not me, McPhail. Some of us may not live till we're found. Two or three days in this rain and cold will kill anyone. There's no room for five of us here." He grinned. "There's room for Miss Dale, if she's cold. Romeo will keep her warm. But you and the Irishman will have to find yourselves another hole!"

Angus, without a word, led Robin back from the lip of the cleft. Pat followed them and they walked away together silently; but when they were at some distance Angus stopped.

"Pat, we've got to get him out of there."

"Aye, sorr!"

Robin asked hotly: "Do you think he's eaten our chocolate?"

"Was it where he would see it?"

"He might not. I piled rocks over it to keep it dry."

"Can't tell about that," Angus decided. "But Pat, we've got to have some place to get in out of the rain, anyway. We've got to handle them. Here's our best chance." Pat listened soberly, and Angus said: "You get down to the beach, somehow, and crawl up the slope below them. Get as near them as you can. I'll be lying flat on my stomach right above where they are. When you're near enough, make some sound. Jenkins will come outside to take a shot at you; and I'll be on him in two jumps."

Pat looked dubious. "What about Romeo? He can throw a knife straight enough to split a stick."

Angus said briefly: "I can throw a rock as hard as he can throw a knife."

Angus hesitated, then he nodded. "Very well, Pat. Maybe I'm better than you at dodging bullets; and you're certainly better than I am in a rough and tumble. I'll draw his fire, and—you get him."

"I will that!"

"I'll be able to help, on Romeo. Give me time to get near them. Don't make a move till I yell."

"Aye, sorr."

Angus considered for a moment. "All right," he said. "It's not very good; but I don't know anything better. Let's go."

BIBLE TEACHINGS ON WINE'S DECEITFULNESS

LESSON TEXT—Proverbs 20:1; 23:29-35; Matthew 24:45-51.
GOLDEN TEXT—At the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder.—Proverbs 23:32.

Deceitful is a good word to describe both the product and the propaganda of the liquor business. Alcoholic beverages are in themselves most deceitful, and the methods by which they are sold to the public certainly cannot commend themselves to right-thinking people.

Intoxicants are associated with social preferment, festive occasions, radiant beauty, when they ought to be connected with the bleary eye, the babbling tongue, the ragged children and brokenhearted mothers. What about the men who have lost their positions and their characters, and the women who have paid with their virtue for their love of intoxicants? Why not picture them in the beautiful magazine advertisements?

I. Wine Is a Deceiver (Prov. 20:1). Wine is personified here as an evil demon who leads men on in the hope of some pleasure or advantage, and then lets him down to the depths of destruction. It makes him think he is great and powerful, when he is only weak and degraded. It excites him to foolishness and wild boisterousness, when he would normally be sensible, quiet and orderly.

He who thought he was wise in partaking of its stimulation, finds himself deceived, and to his regret he realizes that he is a fool in the hands of a malicious deceiver.

II. Wine Is a Depraver (Prov. 23: 29-35). Depravity is a word not used as much as it was a generation ago, but it well describes the condition to which the drunkard comes in due time. And it is wine and other liquor which has depraved or corrupted him. A number of things appear in the text.

1. Liquor Destroys (vv. 29, 30). This is true morally, mentally, physically, and spiritually. Red eyes, wounds, complaining—these are only the outward signs of inward physical destruction of alcohol. Woe and sorrow speak of mental and social distress. The moral and spiritual destruction follow.

2. Liquor Deludes (vv. 31, 32). Its color, its sparkle and effervescence, its smooth appearance—all excite the anticipation of goodness and pleasure. And what does the drinker receive? The bite of the serpent and the sting of the adder. How true!

3. Liquor Demoralizes (v. 33). Alcohol is the handmaid of immorality. "Strange women" come into the picture very quickly. They and the drinker soon find that drink sets them free from the limitations of decency and good sense, and the result is beyond description.

Those who defend liquor, or temporize with this problem, may as well recognize that they are encouraging the moral destruction of our boys and girls. It is a terrifying responsibility!

4. Liquor Dulls Man's Senses and Dazes Man's Mind (vv. 34, 35). Only a fool would lie down to sleep in the midst of the sea, or on top of the mast of a ship, or in the gutter, or against a lamp post. That's what drink does for a man.

His perceptions become so dull that he can be beaten, and he does not know he has been hurt. Exposed to inclement weather, he knows not enough to seek shelter. His money is lost or given away without concern on his part.

And when he sobers up—what then? His faculties are so dazed that he can think of only one thing to do, and that is to seek more wine. What is it that Scripture says about the dog and the fool? (See Prov. 26:11).

III. Wine Is a Destroyer (Matt. 24:45-51).

We have already touched on that point in its personal application, but now we see it in its bearing on his occupation and standing in the community.

The contrast is between the good servant who recognizes that his one and constant obligation is to serve, whether his master is present or absent, and the evil servant who violates his trust.

Notice that his first thought after cruelty to his fellow servants is to satisfy his appetite "to drink with the drunken."

Cruelty, mismanagement, unfaithfulness are tied up without question with drinking. Is it not so today? If you doubt it, read your daily newspaper. Why trifle with anything which keeps such evil company? You may find yourself mixed up with them beyond your ability to get free.

The final result is the loss of his position and of his life. Who will deny that this aptly states the end of the drunkard's way. But someone says: "I do not intend to be a drunkard. I only take a social drink." That is the way the drunkard started. Why begin to travel that road?

Victory Garden Is Ration Book's Friend

Opportunity to Save 2,772 Ration Points

A 25 by 50-foot garden plot plus 25 tomato plants, a couple of pounds of seed and someone to plant, harvest and can them, equals 2,772 ration points saved in the course of a year.

So let ration points, as well as nutritive values and the family budget, provide the yardstick by which you measure returns from your 1943 garden. That's the advice given by Prof. F. G. Helyar of Rutgers university, chairman of the state Victory garden and food conservation committee.

And remember, if you have not yet started your Victory garden, it's not too late. But you must get busy now.

The plan on which he has figured the 2,772-ration point return, based on present point values, includes two rows of tomato plants, each row 50 feet long; two rows of snap beans, planted from a pound of seed; two rows of carrots, planted with an ounce of seed; and a similar planting of beets and of lima beans, for which an ounce and a pound, respectively, of seed will be needed. Professor Helyar estimates that on the average the tomatoes will yield three bushels of fruit, or 54 quart jars and 1,481 ration points. The other crops, measured on the same basis, will produce as follows: snap beans—one bushel, 16 quarts, 358 points; carrots—one bushel, 18 quarts, 403 points; beets—one bushel, 16 quarts, 256 points; and lima beans—one bushel (in the pod), nine quarts, 274 points.

Measured from this standpoint, it is obvious that the garden will not only help keep an average-size family fed in accordance with good standards of nutrition for the year, but it will save them from spending their ration points for foods that will probably be drastically needed by families in metropolitan and city areas who are unable to garden, Professor Helyar adds.

Commercial Uses for Our Citrus Fruits

Back in 1920, grapefruit was an inexpensive delicacy. Have you heard of the woman who boiled one for hours and could not make it tender? Today, five times as much grapefruit is grown and it is well known by rich and poor.

Our grapefruit is grown mostly in Florida, Texas, Arizona and California. California and Florida produce 97 per cent of our oranges and virtually all lemons are grown in California. These citrus fruits are used almost entirely for food, but there is still a great waste from canning and marmalade making and a need to find non-food uses for culls.

Orange and lemon oil is produced commercially in California. Grapefruit oil is a very new product valued in the textile industry to fix turkey red dye. The peel and pulp of citrus fruits may also become an important source of pectin which is sold commercially to add to other fruit juices in making jelly. It may also be possible to recover some of the valuable vitamins and turn them to commercial uses.

Citric acids are being produced for food flavors and uses in medicine. Novel food products are appearing, such as citrus powder and citrus butter. Canning of grapefruit hearts and juice has been on the increase, about 62 per cent coming from Florida canneries and 36 per cent from Texas.

Until the present European war, the United States was on the way to developing a fine export trade in fresh oranges and canned grapefruit.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Neither South American sources of natural rubber nor expansion of Guyana, Ceylon, Ceylon and all other rubber-bearing shrub production will produce any large amount of satisfactory rubber for some years, according to government agencies. In 1941, 86 per cent of all travel by Americans was in cars. No gas! No cars! Ban on pleasure driving brought a drop of about 80 per cent in the passenger cars on the streets of New York City. Jay walkers had a holiday in the automobile deserted main streets. Five in a car instead of just the driver and one passenger means that 8 tires are saved, if the average of three cars to five was plant workers is considered. The amount of rubber in 8 tires is enough for 72 gas masks, or for life rafts and rubber-life jackets for 8 plane crews.

Fight the Forgery Racket!

By FRANK J. WILSON Chief, United States Secret Service. PROTECT yourself against those who steal and forge government checks, first by having your mail box equipped with a good lock. If you lock the box AFTER a check is stolen, you will be learning the hard way. Second: Be at home, or have some member of the family at home, when government checks are due to be delivered. Professional mail thieves often follow mail carriers along their routes. After the carriers deposit mail in the letter boxes, the thieves steal checks from the boxes. Sometimes the forger also steals monthly bills for electricity or gas, so that when he asks a storekeeper to cash his forged check, he can show the merchant the bills to make him believe the forger is the person entitled to the check. In other words, he uses other stolen mail to identify himself and get the stolen check cashed. If you can get your check as soon as it is delivered, it cannot be stolen. Remember—forgers aren't particular, but YOU must be!

PLEASE cut down your Long Distance calling

AS Michigan's war industry hits full stride, more and more long distance calls have to be made—war calls vital to victory.

The burden of calls on many long distance lines has reached a critical stage. Central office equipment, fully manned with operators, is being used to capacity. At times, each unimportant call, regardless of its destination, affects the speed with which all other calls can be handled. Many calls are delayed—some for hours. And materials to expand the system cannot be had.

Yet, war calls must go through promptly! So it is necessary that we all curtail both our personal and our business use of long distance. Therefore, please—

1. Make fewer long distance calls—and keep them short.
2. Give the operator the number of the telephone you are calling, if possible.
3. If your call can't go through at once, stay near the telephone ready to talk when the operator notifies you.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

The tradition of American cavalry threads back to Indian warfare days and although modern armies are largely motorized today, the cavalry still plays an important role. Sturdy, well trained horses and excellent equipment and trappings are necessary.

When men are in the saddle for hours, their saddles, saddle rolls and other equipment must be made to stand the wear. Complete with carbine and helmets, the equipment for the cavalryman runs into hundreds of dollars. You can help provide this with your War Bond purchases. If you have not done so, join the Payroll Savings Plan and put ten percent of your income into War Bonds. U. S. Treasury Department

Urge to Rick Cop

The Very Rev. Edmund J. Reilly of a Brooklyn church found a note on the collection plate signed "Patrick Gunn," inviting the good man to step outside after mass for a fist fight. In Minneapolis a pretty woman walked up to a policeman and without ado kicked him smartly on the shin. He said "ouch," and she let him have another. Her explanation for such quaint conduct was simple. "All my life," she told the judge, "I've wanted to 'kick a cop.'"

AID TO RUSSIA

It is now permissible to reveal that several months ago about 300,000 tons of shipping were tied up in the Persian Gulf waiting to be unloaded.

This represented a super attempt to aid Russia, and although some ships were tied up for weeks, it was not the fault of the War Shipping Administration or the army. This was an attempt to show good faith to Russia when she was under terrific siege, when the battle of Stalingrad was in the balance.

In some cases ships rode at anchor 50 and 60 days in the Gulf of Persia, waiting to unload, their crews idle.

Basic reason for this delay is that port facilities along the Gulf of Persia are backward if not medieval. There were no modern docks or cranes, and to unload locomotives without cranes is almost impossible. Also the railroad running north from Basra to the Caucasus is a meandering affair, never completely finished, originally built to reach the Shah's hunting lodge rather than port facilities on the Caspian.

Very little had been done by the British to improve this line, until American engineers got busy. Even before Pearl Harbor, when we first started sending aid to Russia, American railroad men were rushed to Basra. But it was a tough job, and was still unfinished last fall and summer. At that time the Nazis were knocking our Murmansk convoys off Norway into smithereens. So, to keep faith with Russia, ships were piled into the Gulf of Persia.

Today the situation, though still difficult, is greatly improved. In fact, hard-hitting Lew Douglas, dynamo of the War Shipping Administration, has pepped up unloading facilities in India, South Africa and other bad bottlenecks where previously U. S. ships had to wait three and four weeks to unload.

WORRIED OVER RAILROADS

Certain Washington officials acquainted with railroad operation are worried about temporary breakdowns of the transportation system, and consequent serious delays in moving war materials.

While it is admitted that the railroads are doing a "grand job," there is no overlooking the fact that the burden is proving too heavy.

Most serious is the situation in westward freight traffic. The country's railroads were built with the idea of moving traffic eastward, with bigger facilities as traffic moves east. But today, with a Pacific war to supply, the westward movement is greater than ever.

Breakdowns have occurred on single-track western lines, requiring re-routing in a circuitous manner, with delays of days and weeks in some cases. A transcontinental freight movement which once was accomplished in five days is now requiring ten and fifteen.

The remedy seems to be an increase in the centralized control of traffic. This smells like government operation, from the railroads' point of view, and they shy away from it. But officials in ODT who have no railroad connections regard such control as necessary for the war-time job.

Note: The burden for meeting these problems falls on the shoulders of V. V. Boatner, director of the division of railroad transport in the ODT. Boatner has now shifted to a "without compensation" basis so he can act as consultant for the railroads and be paid by them. He is still officially working for the government.

FARMER CHENNAULT

Freshman Rep. Charles E. McKenzie of Louisiana expected to get a first-hand report on the war in the Far East when he shook hands with his most distinguished constituent, Gen. Claire Chennault, leader of American forces in China, who is visiting in the United States.

But the "Fighting Tiger" almost fumed McKenzie by inquiring: "How's farming down home? I can't wait to get back to my plantation." McKenzie replied that he had just returned from Louisiana, that farmers in his district were doing "very well" considering the shortage of labor and machinery.

"Did you see my place in Concordia Parish?" asked Chennault anxiously.

"You bet, General," replied McKenzie, "and I can report that it is one of the most beautiful and best regulated plantations in Louisiana. I'd like to live there myself, on the banks of Lake St. John."

Note: While Chennault is at war, his Louisiana farm is being managed by his wife and children.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

The carpet in the state department reception room, where Secretary Hull holds press conferences, is bordered with swastikas.

William B. Lewis, chief of OWI's radio bureau, resented "Time's" calling him "smooth, dapper," and one of the "soap salesmen" in OWI. He called "Time's" Washington bureau threatening to write letters of protest to important people. "Write one to us," said Felix Belair Jr., head of the bureau, "if it's good, we'll print it."

BUYING BONDS THE 'EASY' WAY

THIRTEEN BILLION DOLLARS worth of bonds, which Uncle Sam asked us to buy during the Second War Loan drive, and which we did buy, is a lot of money. To provide that amount would take practically all the coins and folding money in the United States if we were to put up the cash. But that is not the way it works.

John is working in a war industry plant. His wages amount to $50 a week. Each Saturday night, at his request, a $5 bill is withheld from his pay envelope to apply on his war bond purchase. That $5 bill is deposited in a bank to the credit of the United States. John spends much of the remaining $45 for things he needs, or deposits a portion of it in the bank. Out of what he spends, other Johns and Marys are paid, and they, too, buy war bonds. Out of what John deposits, the bank buys war bonds.

John's weekly pay is but a portion of an ever-revolving fund. Week by week it is paid to the government and again paid out to those producing what we must have to win the war. Week by week the ghost continues to walk because the Johns and Marys are financing their jobs by buying government securities. What they pay comes back to them, and in addition they have their government's IOU and will in time get it all back, plus interest.

CAPITAL NECESSARY TO KEEP LABOR AT WORK

BILL JONES has a job. That job provides food, clothing, shelter, a car, tickets for the movies, and other luxuries, as well as essentials for Bill and his family. To enable Bill to have a job means an investment of $8,000 in tools, including factory building and other essentials of production. Bill did not have $8,000, and others had to provide the tools which made Bill's job possible. It was the American capitalistic system that provided the tools.

For each man who has a job in an American factory, there is an average of $8,000 invested in the tools and buildings which make a job possible. It means a total investment of something like 480 billion dollars. That is America's working capital which provides jobs for our 60 million workers. If we make it impossible for capital to provide the tools, we take away the jobs that support workers and their families.

That is what we are doing right now. The war will be over some day and then new tools must be provided to replace those used in war production. With government taking out of industry all industry can earn, leaving nothing with which to provide new tools, Bill Jones, and his co-workers, will be without jobs. We will have won a war and lost a peace. We will have destroyed the American system of free enterprise.

LABOR MONOPOLY AND GOVERNMENT

A BILL that would curb some of the more atrocious activities of the labor racketeers was introduced in the Colorado legislature. The bill, if enacted into law, will give union members control of their own organization by forcing regular elections of union officers by secret ballot, as well as forcing union officials to account for union receipts and expenditures, and calling for a secret ballot of members before a strike can be called. The self-appointed, self-perpetuating union officials notified the state government that if the legislature passed the bill, the law would not be obeyed. The labor racketeer has been cajoled and appeased until he considers himself above the law. He will permit no interference with his self-given right of extortion from those whom the government forces into union membership if they are to have a job.

TOP-HEAVY BUREAUS IN GOVERNMENT

SAMUEL INSULL created a great public utility structure by building corporations on top of corporations, until the top-heavy organization toppled over, and in the crash the public lost millions of dollars. To prevent a recurrence of such a catastrophe, congress created the SEC. But the government is not taking its own medicine. Bureaus and departments are being built on top of other bureaus and departments, until government has become as top-heavy as Insull's public utility structure. There is a limit, and should a top-heavy government topple over, the Insull failure would be but a drop as compared to an ocean of disaster.

DEBT LIMIT AND THE FAMILY

CONGRESS RAISED the federal debt limit to 210 billion dollars and it will reach that point by the end of this year. That means each man, woman and child has been mortgaged for $1,616, and over each family of five there is a mortgage of $8,080, on which there is an annual interest charge of not less than $161 for each family to pay. Our indebtedness at the close of 1943 will be eight times what it was at the close of the First World War.

WHILE there have been three managerial changes in the majors this year, Mr. Oswald Louis Bluege of the Washington Senators is the only authentically new guiding star of the 1943 baseball wars.

Two of the changes came to pass in the American league. Bluege became manager in Washington following the resignation of Bucky Harris and Steve O'Neill succeeded Del Baker in Detroit. Harris moved to Philadelphia in the National league replacing Hans Lobert.

One can safely say that Ossie Bluege isn't the most widely known baseball player in the business.

In fact, he's probably the least known star of the past generation. It so happens that he broke into professional baseball more than 20 years ago—back in 1920 with Peoria. But outside of his fellow artisans and a close group of friends, he is as well-known as your Aunt Emma.

Ossie Bluege

Dependable

For about 17 years Bluege was a dependable infielder for Washington. Dependable, mind you, not colorful, nor flamboyant, nor exciting. When a man puts that many years in the big leagues the historians usually have gathered enough material to fill a good sized volume.

Not so with the mysterious Ossie. In this case the record books don't provide enough information for a thumbnail sketch. Aside from the necessary cold statistics, the fact that he has blue eyes and brown hair and that his hobbies are "bowling, skating and reading good literature," the records are lifeless things.

But Bluege was an exceptionally able infielder. The figures show that he had a major league batting average of .272, a lifetime fielding average of .962. An outstanding performer in the 1924 world series, he accepted 32 chances on third base—some sort of a record.

Clark Griffith, president of the club, hardly expects Bluege to win the pennant, but nevertheless, Washington is one club in the league which is stronger than it was in 1942. The hard hitting outfield, including Bob Johnson, former Athletic slugger, may cause quite a bit of trouble here and there.

For eight seasons Bucky Harris went along with screwball importations from Cuba and raw alumni of such farms as Trenton, Springfield, Chattanooga and Charlotte. When Griffith finally decided to spend a bit of money in a Double A league he came up with Jimmy Pofahl, whose arm isn't known for its power and durability.

Unquestionably this is a good year for a man of Bluege's talents and personality to break in as a manager. The draft board is much more important to him than the front office. The standards of past days will be largely forgotten.

New Deal

When Harris stepped out of the American league to handle the Phillies his move caused little or no consternation. The club finished in last place in 1942, winning 42 games while dropping 109. The prospects of moving up are not too good. But at least they have a new deal and the old feeling of futility is not so pronounced. The Phillies lack pitching, catching, fielding, hitting and most of the other things you can think of. But if Harris has any enthusiasm left after eight years with Washington, he may strengthen the club to some extent.

Steve O'Neill came back from the minors to take over the Detroit Tigers following the reign of Del Baker. Steve moved to Detroit with a not too strong leadership record in Cleveland. He succeeded Walter Johnson as boss of the Indians in midseason of 1935, when he finished third. In 1936 he finished fifth, and the following year fourth. Then came Oscar Vitt—and the Indian revolution.

But O'Neill is known for his ability to handle pitchers, and since this is doped as a good year for hurlers, Steve may bring the club up to fair strength.

SPORTS SHORTS

Jimmy Brown, son of OPA Administrator Prentiss M. Brown, is an outfielder on the University of Michigan squad.

Playing with Beaumont last year, Dick Wakefield led Texas league outfielders with 17 assists and five double plays.

The words of Fritz Crisler, Michigan's athletic leader, should be remembered: "We plan to continue a complete schedule in all sports even if Michigan does not receive a dime of revenue."

Gold, Diamonds
By Stanley Ross

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with The American Magazine.)

I had been a news correspondent in Caracas, Venezuela, for two months when I determined to see the Gran Sabana, scene of a gold and diamond rush as colorful as California in '49 and as tough as the Klondike.

Germany and Japan need diamonds desperately. They are a vital war necessity for a hundred important war purposes, including drawing wire, cutting, drilling and for parts in precision instruments that must not wear down.

Until two years ago the Axis got diamonds from Brazil and Venezuela through LATI, the Italian air line. When LATI was suspended, U-boats took up the job. You can hide a million dollars worth of diamonds in your wooden leg.

I engaged passage for the Gran Sabana (the great plain) on the plane for Santa Elena, its only settlement.

"You are lucky you can fly there," the agent told me. "You will reach it before dusk. If you went by land it would take six weeks."

The Gran Sabana is separated from the rest of Venezuela by one of the most desperate jungles in the world and by a vast series of sheer cliffs, rushing streams and waterfalls. Until five years ago it was known principally through Conan Doyle's "Lost World." Recently, because of the wild treasure hunt, the Venezuelan government extended daily air-freight service to the newly created village of Santa Elena, near the ranch of Dr. Lucas Pena, the territory's sole white settler.

Fly Over Jungle

We flew over the jungle and the huge sheer cliffs, circled the settlement, and landed. I had expected no style or comfort, and I wasn't disappointed. Santa Elena is 70 palm-thatched huts made of mud, in which 500 persons exist.

I had a letter of introduction to a diamond dealer, but he was away, and so I went to stay with Dr. Pena. It fits the wacky history of this region that the first man to discover this immense alluvial wealth will have no part of it. Even today, Dr. Pena ignores the gold under his dining-room floor and a rich diamond deposit on his ranch.

Early next morning, accompanied by three tough hombres, I started along the twisty, tree-covered, muddy route to the mines. When I reached the diggings, I found that the diamond mines are a collection of holes out of which men drag pay dirt to sluices in the streams. The living accommodations are rudely thatched, wall-less shelters, with hammocks hung so close the men are warmed by the heat of one another's bodies.

Only Place in World of Its Kind

The Gran Sabana fields are the only place in the world where diamonds are found in pure jungle. Before a miner begins digging he must fell the huge trees and hack away the brush with his machete. The miners work in pairs, threes or fours, digging down 6 to 25 feet until they reach the diamond-bearing gravel, and then sluicing it with primitive troughs and pans.

If a miner puts in a full day's work he can usually average three or four small stones a week. A one-carat stone might be worth $30, depending on its quality. A two-carat stone is worth about $100. An eight-carat stone is worth about $1,000.

I stayed at the mines three days, paying prices that make a New York night club look like a bargain basement. Cigarettes were $2 a package, eggs $8 a dozen, chickens $11 each, apples $1 each. The difficulty of transportation causes the high prices. Everything comes from Tumaremo to Santa Elena by air at 30 cents a pound. After passing through several money-making hands it must be carried burro-back or human-back, to the mines.

When I first heard about these prices, I wondered how the miners ate. They don't. They starve until they strike it rich, then head for Ciudad Bolivar or Caracas, blow the works and borrow passage back.

Except Dr. Pena, every one of the men and women who endure the hardships of the Gran Sabana is crazed with the lust of riches.

Thirty years ago, at 18, Dr. Pena came to Ciudad Bolivar, seeking latex. In the jungle he drifted away from civilization; adventure and life for life's sake became more important to him than money. He worked his way somehow to the Gran Sabana. A tribe of friendly Indians welcomed him and helped him build his home on the hill. There was a great feast when he married an Indian maiden.

Emergency Doctors, Next Best Thing, Do Fine Job for U. S.

Shortage of Doctors Puts Big Burden on Pharmacists' Mates

There simply are not enough doctors to go around in our armed forces today; that is, if every ship in the navy and the coast guard is to have its own doctor as well as the thousands of doctors required on shore with the army and in naval shore stations. So the navy and the coast guard have the next best thing—the pharmacist's mate—who can perform near miracles in a pinch.

For instance, it is now history how a pharmacist's mate performed an emergency appendectomy on a sailor aboard a submarine submerged in enemy waters, using ordinary table spoons and knives from the galley in lieu of the regular surgical tools. The navy and coast guard get many of their pharmacists' mates from the corner drugstores of the nation. But there aren't enough corner drugstores to supply the demand, either. So selected groups of regularly enlisted men are sent to school to learn pharmacy and physiology and minor surgery to fit them for berths aboard war craft that have no medical officers.

The college of pharmacy at Columbia university is sponsoring one training program which has been planned in association with the coast guard medical officers and is based on the navy manual. The curriculum gives the men a background and working knowledge of anatomy, physiology, chemistry, minor surgery, nursing and pharmacy. Upon completion of the course, trainees are eligible for the rating of pharmacist's mate third class, and are qualified as medical aides to render emergency treatment pending attention from a medical officer. There are times when emergencies arise while a ship is in a silent zone, where she can not use her radio, and at such times the "emergency doc" is on his own, as in the case of the youngster who removed a comrade's appendix.

The above photos show you two members of a class of coast guardsmen in training as pharmacists' mates at Columbia.

FUN FOR YOUR FAMILY

By MISS ABBIE CONDIT
National Recreation Association.

Here are merry games for any time of the year, for families or club groups:

Games.

Opening Game. As guests arrive, give each person a small paper bag containing ten beans. Each person is asked to chat with someone else, changing partners frequently. Whoever can be caught saying "yes" or "no" must forfeit a bean to the person with whom she is talking. This game can be started when there are only a few guests and continued until playing at tables begins.

Table Games. Four bridge tables—numbered one to four—are set for four to play at each table. (Numbers may be cut from old calendars.) One of the program committee stands beside each table to direct play and keep score. Tallies are given each player. If more guests have been invited than there are places at the tables, fill up the tables and begin. The games go rapidly, and when the first group has finished a second group starts in. Of if you prefer, run nine tables, using the extra games given here, or parchesi, simple puzzles, or Crossword Lexicon.

At the end of the first game the high couple at each table progresses. But after the first game the couple longest at the table (regardless of score) progresses. In this way no one is embarrassed by being detained at one table and every player becomes acquainted with more of the other guests. A time limit (5 or 10 minutes) is announced for each game by the scorekeeper.

There are no partners. Each player keeps her own score on her tally, adding the scores made at all four tables. High score wins. First, second and third prizes may be given, if desired.

Table One. Picking up beans with toothpicks. Each player is provided with two toothpicks and two shallow paper cups. One cup is full of beans. At a signal, players transfer beans from one cup to the other by means of toothpicks and enter on their scores actual number of beans picked up.

Table Two. Needle-threading contest. Each player has a pack of needles (very large eyes) and a spool of thread. A signal is given, and each player threads as many needles as she can, tying knot in each string. Individual player writes down number of needles threaded.

Table Three. Word guessing contest. A page of newsprint (sheet of newspaper or large magazine) is passed around the table. Each player is asked to write down the total number of words she guesses are on the page. Score: nearest guess, 4; next, 3; next, 2; next, 1.

Table Four. Pig drawing contest. This gives the artistic players a chance. All players are asked to shut their eyes and draw a pig. Score: most successful drawing gets 4, the next, 3, and so on, as at Table Three. If at any time scorekeeper is in doubt, give two 4's and two 3's.

What to Do

By PHYLLIS BELMONT

Don't neglect your house just because your husband, or son, has gone to war. Dusting and cleaning may not seem too important when the head of the house won't be home to appreciate it, but it is vitally important to your morale, and that of your children, to see that the home remains attractive.

You preserve your household articles by keeping them clean and polished. Therefore, when the war is over and your man comes home he will find everything just as he left it—and just as he remembered it.

Department of Interior Handicapped By 33% Enlistment and Induction

Secretary Harold L. Ickes of the department of the interior has announced an intensification of his virtual "cradle to the grave" search for trained personnel, exempt from military service through age or physical reasons, to carry on vital interior work on the home front.

"The work of my department has been critically handicapped by the enlistment or induction of 33 per cent of all male employees between 18 and 37 years of age," the secretary said. "I have admitted to the house military affairs committee that I erred in the administration of a deferment policy in the department of the interior. I let these men go. With the wisdom of hindsight, I see that fewer interior employees in uniform would have been more in the public interest."

"It does not make sense to permit the draining away of trained personnel needed for vital behind-the-line service. With 4,788 interior employees on military service as of March 1, we have had to make extraordinary efforts to fill their places."

The interior department has employed over 1,000 more women than it had at the start of the war and put many of them in positions formerly held by men, Secretary Ickes declared.

"We are now hiring women engineers and we're going to have more if we can get them," he said. "Recently we hired a 72-year-old former vice president of a bank as a stenographer. Normally, to do the nimble rough work incident to surveying, we hire rodmen about 18 years old, but we recently were forced to employ three 'youngsters' of 62, 67 and 71 years of age, respectively, as rodmen on a job near Media, Pa."

"We have crippled geologists in wheel chairs, who can and do make their contribution to the war effort."

We have women junior chemists in the Geological Survey. To meet war demands in the various bureaus we are already recalling men to service who are 72 and 73 years old, and holding other men in service long past the legal retirement age.

"As the heart-breaking stream of crippled men comes back from the battle fronts, we intend to do our best to find them positions for which they will be qualified and in which they are useful to the department, I have asked the secretary of the navy and the secretary of war to make recommendations from this group. We are doing our absolute best to clear manpower for the war."

Group Farming

Big Aid in Australia

SYDNEY, NSW—Australia, normally a food exporting country, now has a surplus in only two major crops—wheat and wool. There are many shortages. For example, oranges, as common before the war in Australia as in California, now are almost unobtainable in shops. Two main factors are responsible for shortages of this kind. Fruit cultivation makes heavy demands on seasonal manpower reserves which no longer exist. But the greatly increased commitments in the supply of food for American troops in Australia under reciprocal lend-lease and for export to United Nations is perhaps the most important factor.

It is estimated that only three agricultural workers remain to do the work done by five before the war.

In answer to these problems the Australian farmer has come up with what observers—after more than a year's trial—concede may be a solution—group farming. The entire state of New South Wales has set an example which is being copied by all other states of the commonwealth. This involved the organization of 31 District War Agricultural committees. With their help over the last six months, absolute co-ordination of agricultural production has been attained.

Founded to organize all available labor in the various districts, the committees consist of farmers, represented of the manpower authority, and an official of the department of agriculture. The DWACs came out of the voluntary and spontaneous organization in the Guyra district, which is situated in northeast New South Wales where production was in danger of being hard-hit by the manpower shortage. This district was zoned, and a careful survey made of men, machinery, horses, seed and transport. Equipment was used where most needed, irrespective of ownership. Harvesters and teams were driven by their owners, and pooled labor was paid on exchange basis. Objections raised by some farmers that "the last man's crop to be harvested runs more risk of storm damage" were overcome when it was discovered that under the group plan, the crops of the entire district were brought in in a few days where it had taken weeks under the individual plan.

JUST

Safety First

The burly truck driver leaned out of his cab and soundly abused the young man in the stalled car. The girl stood it as long as she could.

"Jack, surely you're going to say something to that surly lout," she said at last.

"You bet I am," replied her companion. "Just wait until I get the car started."

No Saving

"My, what beautiful hands you've got! Tell me, after you've cut your nails, do you file them?" asked a chorus girl.

"Oh, no," replied her typist friend, "I throw them away."

There Were Two

"Well, your daughter has consented to marry me," said the young man.

"What?" exclaimed the girl's father. "She has accepted you? Young man, you're the second happiest man in the world!"

On the witness stand in court the witness was asked to tell about his marital relations. "They're all right," he said, "but they always want to live with me."

Fair Warning

The barber, having sold a bottle of hair restorer to a customer, said: "Excuse me, sir, but do you happen to play billiards?"

"Yes; why?"

"Then I must warn you, sir, after using this lotion, to be sure to wash your hands before as much as touching a billiard ball."

As the International Ice Patrol in the Atlantic has been discontinued, there is no estimate of the number of icebergs that will drift south into shipping lanes this summer.

Their number varies considerably from year to year; while the average since 1900 was 423, there were 1,351 in 1929 and only two in 1940.

Victory Vegetables Are Grown in Large Department Store 'Farm'

Chicago's Loop, hub of the Middle West's business scene, now has its own "farm" area.

In the Marshall Field & Co. store, where thousands of dresses, items of furniture and children's apparel are customarily offered to the public, they've planted carrots, beets and onions, and set out a brooder of baby chicks—all for the purpose of showing city folks that Victory gardens are an important phase of our Battle for Food.

Hives of bees—a suggestion to sugar-rationed families—buzz about in the department which has been opened in co-operation with the Office of Civilian Defense, the Chicago park district, and the University of Illinois as an information center for prospective growers of Victory vegetables.

In a 20 by 20 foot plot, rows of crisp vegetables are being tilled throughout the ten-week campaign, in order to provide first-hand proof of the productivity of small plots of land for skeptics who doubt the feasibility of the Victory garden program.

Some indication of the importance of the national campaign to enlist 21,000,000 Victory gardeners whose produce will supplement commercial supplies of food is found in a statement made by J. S. Russell, deputy director of the Food Distribution administration, who officially opened the store "farm" and garden information center.

"A nation-wide spadeup of the backyard plots of the country is the home-front's most important row to hoe in the war effort," said Mr. Russell in a national broadcast from the store. "Until every citizen plants a garden, he can't say he's really digging for all he's worth—for Victory." Mr. Russell commented.
