Eugene E. Perrin Discredits Cynics

BRIGHT FUTURE PREDICTED FOR TODAY'S YOUTH

Tawas City Class of 1943 Receive Diplomas Thursday

Discrediting the cynics who cannot see a bright future for American boys and girls, Eugene E. Perrin, director of admissions at the Bay City Business College, in his address to the graduating class of the Tawas City High School at the commencement exercises held Thursday evening, said "Youth's only real problem will be a quick return to normalcy. The problems arising out of these times of stress will create new and greater opportunities for the youth of today."

Mr. Perrin's talk was divided into two phases—the problems which will confront youth in their re-adjustment to a post war world, and a promise of ample opportunity in the world of tomorrow.

He pointed out that this war, except that it is more highly mechanized, is little different from any other war in our world's history. He warned the graduates that it is dangerous for them to believe their problems are different from those of war graduates in past generations. He pointed as danger signals to post-war re-adjustment, the alarming number of war marriages, the decline of morals, and the lack of money management and sound home economics as the result of war wages.

Along this line of thought, Mr. Perrin said "If, in the eyes of you graduates, your parents and relatives here tonight appear to you as settled normal people, remember that as a group they were in their teens in the years of the first world war. They saw a draft; they saw rationing; they earned big wages; and they had love affairs similar to yours. Mother's skirt was a bit longer, the auto was slower, and the juke box and Coca-Cola were missing—but, otherwise, things were essentially the same."

He outlined our scientific progress, even since Pearl Harbor, pointing to the electric-eye, the supra drugs, synthetics, plastics and other discoveries which will give more consumers goods—better goods at lower prices in thousands of new industries yet unborn. He said that from coal, air, water, salt sulphur and the humble soybean, youth can build the wonderful new world of tomorrow. He said "With these materials and proper training, this generation can build a civilization that will outshine even the dreams of Moore and his Utopia, Aladdin and his lamp, and King Midas and his golden touch."

The graduating class included: Philip E. Ross, Helen E. Krumm, Ruth E. Giddings, Audrey G. Bell, Annette M. Murray, Jeanne M. Moeller, Ella F. Witzke, Virginia C. Ristow, Lyle D. Hughes, Philip A. Mark, William F. Rollin, Charles Brown, Alton E. Hill, Reg. Bublitz, Walter M. Blust, Martin Cunniff M. Clifford Anschuetz, Richard Shover, Kenneth Rollin.

Thursday evening's program was as follows: Processional, Miss Vera Senob; Invocation, Rev. E. C. Stringer; Salutory, Miss Helen Krumm; Music, Girls' Glee Club; Address, Eugene Perrin; Vocal Solo, Miss Vera Senob; Valedictory, Philip E. Ross; Presentation of Diplomas, Supt. E. C. Carlson; Junior Gift, Lyle Hughes; Class Song; Benediction, Rev. E. C. Stringer.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our dear husband and father who was taken suddenly away from us all on June 1st, 1942.

His wife, Annie; Jean M. Seifert of Battle Creek; Bess of New Guinea; Annie (Mrs. A. Tower) of Detroit; Thomas Bradford of Texas, and Melbourne (Aussie) of Camp Claiborne. Remembrance is golden chain. Death tries to break, but all in vain. To have—to love—and then depart. Is the greatest sorrow of One's heart. The years may wipe out many things, But this they wipe out never. The memory of those happy days When we were home together.

I hope to see my Pilot face to face When I have crossed the bar.

WANTED—Middle aged woman to help care for invalid woman at home. Modern home and all conveniences. Good wages. Phone 68 for particulars.

Poppy Day

Faith in America with those who died in the nation's service will be pledged anew on Poppy Day, May 29, sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliaries of Tawas City and East Tawas. The East Tawas Auxiliary will be assisted by the Girl Scouts.

Millions of Americans will wear the poppy this year as a tribute to the dead of both World Wars, and a mark of their determination to conclude this war with complete victory.

The flower is the symbol of life given in service for America. The wearer makes an unspoken pledge to the nation's heroic dead, that he will live as they died, serving America.

Ironwood Daily Globe Publishes Editorial on Judge Dehnke's Findings in Gogebic County

The recent one-man grand jury investigation of Gogebic county officials held by Judge Herman Dehnke has had state wide interest and his findings should clear up a bad condition which existed in that county. In the final summing up of his findings, Judge Dehnke points out the fundamental American safeguard against bad government which existed in Gogebic county, or might exist anywhere within the nation.

The following excerpts are from an editorial which appeared May 10 in the Ironwood (Gogebic county) Daily Globe: Judge Dehnke's findings in the one-man grand jury investigation have been made public. The investigation is completed insofar as it concerns the majority of the members of the present Board of Supervisors and county officials. They may now settle down to giving the county the kind of government it should have, for from what Judge Dehnke describes as the tension in which the county government has been encoiled because of apprehension over the continuance of the investigation.

The tension and apprehension could only have been due to uneasiness of awakening consciences of those who knew that their conduct as public servants had not been above reproach.

That there was no apprehension at the start of the inquiry in January was noted by Judge Dehnke, as it must also have been by any observing citizen. Judge Dehnke found that during the early part of the investigation there was an "air of jocular unconcern exhibited by many of the officials involved, as if to

CHAS. S. BROWN DROWNED IN TAWAS RIVER

Missing Since Last Week Thursday; Body Found Yesterday

Charles S. Brown, well known Tawas City resident, missing since last week Thursday, was found yesterday (Thursday) noon drowned in Tawas River. Four boys, Glenn Stewart, Robert Brown, Stanley Brown and Frank Toms, while fishing in the river discovered the body. When it was found last Friday morning that Mr. Brown had disappeared, a thorough search was made of the water front, the river and throughout the city by neighbors, State Police and members of the sheriff's department. At the inquest held Thursday afternoon by Coroner E. D. Jacques the jury brought in a verdict that death was due to accidental drowning. It is thought that Mr. Brown accidentally fell in the river last Thursday night.

Charles S. Brown was born April 16, 1877, at Point Ann, Ontario. He came to Tawas City as a young boy and has resided here ever since. Until a few years ago he had been a commercial fisherman. In 1900 he was united in marriage to Alice Lloyd of this city, who preceded him in death during February of this year.

He is survived by four daughters, Mrs. Mable Carson of Detroit, Mrs. Dorothy Lake, Misses Beulah and June Brown of this city, a son, Ferris Brown, also of Tawas City; four sisters, Mrs. Lucy Bonnett of Bay City, Mrs. William Shaffer of Jackson, Mrs. Synthia Bradshaw and Mrs. Joseph Waddell, also six grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at two o'clock Saturday afternoon from the Jacques Funeral Home.

Circuit Court Will be In Session Next Week

The June term of circuit court will open Tuesday of next week. There are three criminal, three civil and five chancery cases on the calendar which is as follows:

Petitions for Naturalization
William Roy Wickert, James Scheuson, Andrew Ferdinand Affelt, James Ori, Henry Homewood Cassidy, Mary Johanna McLean.

Ration Book No. 3 Will Soon be Distributed

War Ration Book No. 3 will soon be distributed to the American public. This is a replacement book. The stamps in it will be used to take the place of those in Book No. 1 and No. 2 as they become exhausted.

Between May 20 and June 5 application blanks for War Ration Book No. 3 will be distributed by postman and at general delivery windows. Persons who do not receive applications by June 5 should call at the general delivery window at the post-office and get a copy before June 10.

The back of each application carries the printed address of your state mailing center. Applications must be filled out correctly and mailed. A staff of volunteers at your state mailing center will check them and mail the new ration books to the head of each family.

It is absolutely essential that all applications be filled out correctly and legibly. Ration books cannot be issued unless applications contain all of the information called for in legible form. Careful records must be kept of all books issued. Books cannot be sent to indefinite names or indefinite address. Ration books cannot be forwarded. Books sent to wrong addresses will be returned to State Mailing Centers.

Read and follow directions on application cards carefully. If you do not understand them your postmaster or rural mail carrier will help you. Write or print all information plainly.

W.N.U. FEATURES

THE STORY SO FAR: Robin Dale, a young artist, goes to Moose Bay to see her fiancé, Will McPhail. When Will is accidentally killed, his brother Angus blames Robin. She goes to Angus' fishing cruiser to see him. While she is on board the boat sails, carrying her, Angus, Pat Donohue and a cabin boy named Romeo toward Labrador. The boat is seized by a man named Jenkins. Caught running contraband alcohol, Jenkins is trying to escape from a government patrol. It sinks, leaving them stranded on an island. Angus, Pat and Robin are trying to get some chocolate hidden in a cave held by Jenkins. Robin has just vetoed their plan for a rushing attack.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER XIV

The two men turned together; but Robin said quietly: "Wait, please. Suppose he kills—both of you?"

They stood before her like guilty children, the heat of battle dying in their eyes. Then Angus nodded in a sort of submission. "She's right, Pat," he said. "We can't risk that. We'll try to manage without a fight."

Pat after a moment suggested uncertainly: "If there's no fighting to be done yet a while, sorry, we could be after building that rock pile you mentioned. The work will keep you warm. It'll need to be plenty high, eight or ten feet anyway, for them to see ashore."

Robin said: "I can help some."

Angus looked at her appraisingly. Rain drove about them, though thin now. Her heavy sweater was sodden with water, hanging about her hips. Her head was bare, her hair wet and dripping; and her lips were white with cold, her teeth clicking. He stripped off his leather jacket, came toward her.

"Sorry I didn't think of this before," he said. "Put it on. It's sopping wet, but it will break the wind a little."

"No, please," she urged. "I'll have to take my chances with the rest of you."

"You can't stand as much as we can. Here," she submitted; and Pat pulled his stag shirt off over his head and came chuckling to make her put it on. They laughed together at the figure she made, lost in its immensities. It hung like an overcoat, almost to her knees.

The two men turned to attack the task, and Robin followed them. The rounded ledge, like a hump that was bare of boulders and rock fragments. The materials for the cairn they meant to build would have to be carried laboriously to the peak, or if they were too heavy to lift, rolled over and over up the ledge. They went methodically to work; but Robin chose to stay near Angus, to help him when she could, to talk to him. When they were away from Pat she said slowly:

"Will you tell me honestly—just how bad this is? Was that story true, the one Pat told about the people who could see shore, freezing and starving?"

"I never heard it," he said. "But Pat's Newfoundland born and bred. Probably it was true."

"I came to Newfoundland fishing with my father once. We had fog for two weeks, even up the Codroy. Fog and rain and cold. Maybe it won't clear off for days."

"Those spells do happen," he admitted soberly. "But we're not badly off—for a few days. We can keep warm by huddling together at night."

"How long will it be, do you suppose, before someone comes? Will that plane be hunting?"

He smiled at her in a quiet reassurance. "Don't try to think ahead. Live an hour at a time. And don't be frightened. Fright tires you out. Keep steady. A person can go a long time without food, if he's not scared. We've plenty of water as long as it rains, and there'll be some in pools in the ledge afterward; and when it stops raining, if the sun comes out, we can dry out, we can dry our matches, manage a fire. We'll pull through."

They were working while they talked, panting side by side, climbing to the peak of the ledge, he with a great rock in his arms, she with a lesser one. She realized suddenly that she was happy, toiling thus beside him. Life was becoming simple, reduced to fundamentals. She smiled and said:

"That cake of chocolate is the most important thing in the world, right now, isn't it? That and Mr. Jenkins' oilskins, and a chance to get out of the rain."

He nodded.

"Yes, of course."

She said, half to herself: "It's queer to think we might all die here. People do queer things, have queer feelings when they're afraid of dying." She smiled at her own thought. "Angus, I know an old man in Maine. He has a big orchard, and he told me an interesting thing once. He said that if an apple tree is dying, it bears better than ever toward the end. He said if you broke down a branch and left it hanging by the bark, that branch would think it was dying, and it would have lots of apples on it; or if you take a two-year-old tree and tie a bit of copper wire around the bark at the foot, the tree will think it's going to die, and it will bear apples long before it would otherwise. He thinks the trees are trying to pass lie on while they still can."

He bent to tumble a big boulder over and over up the ledge. She tried to help him, but he put her aside. "I can manage," he said. "You'll hurt your hands."

"He thought people were the same way," she suggested. She said: "Maybe Mr. Jenkins would give that chocolate to me if I asked him."

He looked up at her quietly. "Miss Dale, in a tight place, any woman is a liability. Don't expect—chivalry from Jenkins or Romeo."

"You and Pat gave me your clothes. They might give me my chocolate, if I asked them."

"If they knew it was there they would eat it. Naturally. Unless they've already done so."

"I wish I hadn't left it there. When Pat called that he could see land, I forgot all about it."

He did not answer. He rolled the boulder laboriously upward to add to the little pile already gathered on top of the ledge. She found one she could carry; and by the cairn, Pat met them.

"Sorry," he said, "by the feel of the wind, it's colder." He added, pointing: "The land's off that way,

Jenkins was there, watching her.

so that's bound to be east. That makes the wind northwest, the way it's coming.

Angus said indifferently: "Yes." Pat urged: "Then it just might blow clear this afternoon, sorry. If we could build this pile of rocks high enough before dark, then ashore might see." He chuckled.

"I'd as soon not spend another night like last unless I have to."

Angus looked at him and his eyes quickened. He glanced toward the cleft below them where the shelter was. "We can't build it high enough to make much show, alone," he said.

"But those two might help if we put it to them right. I'll try. They don't know what we're doing." He went down toward the cleft, but before showing himself he called: "Halloo, Jenkins! I want a word with you!"

Jenkins after a moment answered him. "Bring the Irishman and the girl so I can see the three of you."

"Right! Here we come!"

They approached the lip of the cleft. Jenkins, when they first saw him, was inside the shelter, watching warily for their appearance; but as soon as he was sure they were all three together, he stepped outside, his weapon in his hand. "All right," he said. "Speak your piece."

Angus did so, without preamble. He explained that they had seen the mainland, and a village, a while ago when for a moment the fog lifted. "Then the rain shut in again, but now the weather's changing. The wind's backing into the northwest. That means it may clear; but it will probably haul into the northwest again tonight. If it does that, it may stay thick for days. This afternoon may be our last glimpse of shore for a while. Pat and I have started building a cairn, hoping they'll see it. But four of us can build something sizable a lot quicker than two of us. If we can make a showing before dark, and it clears, they may see us tonight." He asked crisply: "Will you help?"

Mr. Jenkins considered. Romeo came to his side and they spoke in whispers. Then Mr. Jenkins said: "Okay, McPhail, we'll help. Only it's understood that you won't try any tricks, and it's understood that the shelter here is ours tonight, or any time today if it starts to rain again," Jenkins said, slowly.

"Nothing's understood," Angus told him curtly. "You can help or not, just as you like. There's no promise on either side."

Jenkins grinned. "Have it your way; but if you start trouble, you take your own chances. And any time we want the shelter, we'll take it. I'm coming up now. Back off."

"Nothing's understood," Angus told him curtly. "You can help or not, just as you like. There's no promise on either side."

Jenkins grinned. "Have it your way; but if you start trouble, you take your own chances. And any time we want the shelter, we'll take it. I'm coming up now. Back off."

I don't want either of you too near me. It gives me the fidgets." He took a step toward them, said over his shoulder: "Come on, Romeo, work up a sweat and you'll feel better about that pretty face of yours." He told Robin grimly: "Romeo's afraid the girls won't like him any more, after the way you cut him up. You'd better keep away from him. He doesn't like you as much as he did."

He came on, and Robin stared past him, trying to see into the shelter, wondering whether they had found the chocolate. Hunger was a wolf in her. She had never wanted anything as much as she wanted that cake of chocolate now.

Angus held her arm, drawing her back as Mr. Jenkins and Romeo came toward them. A moment later they stood in two groups, twenty feet apart; and Mr. Jenkins surveyed the situation. This small island was humped, as its name implied. Its top was naked rock, rising to a high point fifty yards away from where they stood. There Pat and Angus had already piled some loose rocks together. On the bald ledge a few rounded boulders were scattered here and there; and Angus said now:

"The handiest rocks are on the other side, in a fissure of the ledge."

Jenkins said: "Okay. You and Pat work from there and we'll work from here. I don't want to get too close to you. You might get funny—and I'd have to kill you after all."

Angus nodded. "Right," he agreed. He turned away; and Pat and Robin followed him. During the hours that followed, while the wind blew colder and the skies began to clear a little, the four men worked top speed at this task that might bring rescue; but Mr. Jenkins and Romeo never forgot to protect themselves against surprise. They took care not to come near either Pat or Angus. If Mr. Jenkins approached the growing pile of rocks when they were near it, he dropped his load twenty or thirty feet away, left it for them to fetch. He worked stoutly enough, and so did Romeo; but they maintained an equal vigilance.

This use of humble cottons by milliners is about the most exciting thing that is happening in the fashion world today. Add to this program of cottons for hats the fact that gloves, bags and neckwear are made of the same materials, and you will agree that these new and unusual ensembles are adding a thrilling chapter to the current style story. The smart postillion made of glazed chintz shown to the left here proves that neither chintz nor, for that matter, any other cotton, from henceforth, can be regarded as belonging exclusively to the decorator or to the designers of housecoats and pinafores as we have been led to believe. This most amazing hat, trimmed with flowers as you see and adding long gloves to point up the costume, certainly marks the dawn of a new era when it comes to the use of smart cottons.

Another cotton designed to go to your head is simple, ordinary seersucker. When plaid cotton seersucker appears as a stovepipe hat flaunting a matching ascot as shown centered above one begins to sense what we have been missing all these years in failing to recognize the style possibilities that exist in wash fabrics which up to this season we had thought belonged only to a workaday world. Look at the adorable bonnet and glove set (lower right) of gay plaid gingham with bands of dainty beading run through with narrow ribbons, and you will have discovered the reason why they are saying in fashion circles that "gingham girls will be belles of the summer season." The long matching gloves complement the bonnet with high drama. Here is a twosome that has charm about it, and to think that simple gingham did it! And, would you believe it, milliners are even using mattress ticking for hats that hold one spell-bound because of their novelty and their air of high-style distinction!

For the neat little postillions and other smart suit hats some milliners are using black, navy or bright colored shantung successfully. A devastating little veil gives the feminine accent. You are apt to see most remarkable and versatile combinations in the new ensembles, such as cotton plaid hat partnered with a boutonniere made of the same check or perhaps a bretteau of calico or gingham, or what have you, with a matching gilet that has a huge bow tie at the throat.

Another cotton that clicks in millinery is white organdy. Loads of organdy frills and pleatings and ruches are massed on as attractive summer hats as one may ever hope to see. The ensemble idea is carried out with organdy frills on gloves, or perhaps a jabot of the frilled organdy.

Then there's white pique that is being used in effective and versatile ways all through the hat program. Smart, indeed, are pert little pique sailors with pique flowers. Tiny calots formed of pique petals, with sprightly trimmings of starched pique, also hold interest.

Smart Hats Are Being Made of Seersucker and Other Cottons

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

That gingham, chintz, chambray, pique and other cottons are being made up in utilitarian dresses, blouses, pinafores and sunbonnets is no news, but gingham, chintz, chambray, seersucker, and a host of other cottons are also being made up into the choicest of millinery confections—'tis news that's big news.

This use of humble cottons by milliners is about the most exciting thing that is happening in the fashion world today. Add to this program of cottons for hats the fact that gloves, bags and neckwear are made of the same materials, and you will agree that these new and unusual ensembles are adding a thrilling chapter to the current style story. The smart postillion made of glazed chintz shown to the left here proves that neither chintz nor, for that matter, any other cotton, from henceforth, can be regarded as belonging exclusively to the decorator or to the designers of housecoats and pinafores as we have been led to believe. This most amazing hat, trimmed with flowers as you see and adding long gloves to point up the costume, certainly marks the dawn of a new era when it comes to the use of smart cottons.

Another cotton designed to go to your head is simple, ordinary seersucker. When plaid cotton seersucker appears as a stovepipe hat flaunting a matching ascot as shown centered above one begins to sense what we have been missing all these years in failing to recognize the style possibilities that exist in wash fabrics which up to this season we had thought belonged only to a workaday world.

Look at the adorable bonnet and glove set (lower right) of gay plaid gingham with bands of dainty beading run through with narrow ribbons, and you will have discovered

New Dinner Dress

Here is exactly what we are coming to in the way of new-type dinner gowns made of enchanting cottons. The trend in these evening dresses that are made of cottons is to stress simplicity. The best of it is that a frock of this type makes every woman look her prettiest, even though it doesn't cost a lot. This charming dinner gown tops a glazed chintz skirt with a dainty lingerie blouse trimmed with green velvet bands and a bow.

Modern Curtains to Make Your Bay Windows Appear More Attractive

BAY windows are much in vogue again. One reason for this is that modern methods of hanging curtains make bay windows more attractive than they used to be in the Gay Nineties when they were a feature of so many houses.

In those old houses the vertical lines of woodwork and wall showing between windows made the bay seem like a coop stuck on the outside of the house. Many home owners had the bays removed because, while they actually added space, they made rooms seem small and cluttered.

Today curtains are hung to cover both wall and woodwork around the individual windows in the bay. This brings the group of windows together as a unit and makes the bay seem a broad and spacious part of the room. The sketch at the right shows a standard fixture that allows curtains to extend beyond the window frame; but don't rush out to buy new rods. The chances are that your old rods may be extended over the wall if you wire them to hooks or staples at the upper corners of the window frames.

OFF ON ONE

"Now I'll imitate something, and you guess what."

"Okay."

"All right, what am I imitating?"

"Nothing, as far as I can see."

"You're wrong. I'm giving a perfect imitation of a man going upstairs."

"But you're not even moving!"

"Of course not. I'm on an elevator."

NOT TOO GOOD

"Do you think you could learn to love me?"

"Possibly; but wouldn't you hate to think you were an acquired taste?"

SENT THE SCENT

His teacher sent a note home with Johnny asking his mother to give him a bath. The next day Johnny brought an answer:

"Dear Miss Smith. When I send Johnny to school I send him to be learnt, and not to be smelt; he ain't no rose."

THAT'S SAFEST

"Doctor, my wife tells me that I talk in my sleep. What should I do?"

"Nothing that you shouldn't."

TRANSFERRED

The little woman had worried the grocer over trifles at the busiest time of the day, and at last he had managed to satisfy her.

"Do you know, Mr. Peck," said the woman, "when I came into your shop I had a dreadful headache. I've quite lost it now."

"It isn't lost," said the distracted grocer, "I've got it!"

When you see news photos of soldiers "off duty" in camp or behind the battle-lines—notice how often you'll see them smoking a cigarette. There's a good reason for that. Army officials say that cigarettes are an appreciable factor in maintaining morale—and the soldiers themselves add that a carton of cigarettes from home is always welcome. What brand? Well, sales records in Post Exchanges and Canteens show that Camels are the favorite cigarette with men in all the services. Though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. S., and to Sailors, Marines, and Coast Guardsmen wherever they are.—Adv.

These Items Offer You

Something New in Purses

The white plastic handbag is news. Ask to be shown the various types that go to make up the new collections. Black faille bags are carried with afternoon dresses, and the pouch types are especially smart, as are intricately worked underarms. There are large briefcase effects in black or brown patent leather designed large enough to carry important papers and reports of those engaged in war work. Shopping bags for women who do their own marketing are made of strong cord crocheted.

White 'Topper' Is Good

From Morning to Night

It does not matter whether your dress be a street-length formal black, or a summery print, a casual wool pastel or a tailored pique, if you wear with it one of the new white "toppers" teamed with a pert little white hat, you will look as if you stepped out of the pages of a fashion magazine. These white toppers of corduroy, or heavy white slipper satin, or flannel are scheduled for a tremendous vogue this summer.

Sleek Lines

Dress designers are working toward a slimmer, sleeker line in dresses and coats as one way of conserving material. The results are all that can be hoped for and then some in the way of chic and grace and charm. The outlook is for refined types adroitly styled with long waistlines, princess effects with shirtings through the midriff, or coat dresses that achieve variety through versatile button fastenings designed to slenderize.

Soil Chemists Study Farm Crop Diet Needs

Determine Extent to Which Plants Use Food

If farm crops are provided with a more substantial diet by the addition of nitrogen, phosphorus, potash and calcium to the soil, the plants will do their part by utilizing the increased nutrients and passing them on to their human or livestock consumers in the form of needed minerals.

This was the conclusion of a special study to determine the extent to which crops will use plant food when given the opportunity, conducted by Dr. George D. Scarseth, soil chemist of the Purdue university agricultural experiment station. He was assisted by Dr. D. H. Sieling, assistant professor of agronomy and R. E. Lucas, graduate assistant.

These soil scientists used test plots on which various fertilizer treatments had been applied and plots which received no treatment whatever. Then they compared the rate of plant food used by the crops grown on these plots.

Three different locations were used for the tests. These included Crosby silt loam plots at Lafayette, Ind., Bedford silt loam at Bedford and Clermont silt loam at North Vernon. The crops studied for three consecutive years included corn, wheat, oats, alfalfa and red clover, soybeans, timothy and lespedeza.

In general, the tests revealed that crops produced on fertilized plots utilized about twice as much nitrogen, nearly three times as much phosphorus and two and one-half times as much potash per acre as those grown on unfertilized plots.

At Bedford, for example, a corn, wheat, soybean and hay rotation grown on a plot treated with a 3-18-9 analysis, utilized 43 pounds of nitrogen, 12 pounds of phosphorus and 29 pounds of potash per acre. Plant food used by the same crop on an unfertilized plot amounted to only 20 pounds of nitrogen, 4.5 pounds of phosphorus and 12 pounds of potash per acre. On another plot where lime was added to the 3-18-9 analysis, the crops utilized 55 pounds of nitrogen, 15 pounds of phosphorus and 31 pounds of potash. When both lime and manure were added, the plant food utilization increased to 71, 21 and 52 pounds respectively. On Clermont silt loam soil at North Vernon, a corn, wheat and hay rotation treated with a 3-20-12 fertilizer utilized 39 pounds of nitrogen, 14 pounds of phosphorus and 36 pounds of potash per acre. When lime was added, the utilization increased to 57, 19 and 38 pounds, respectively. The same crops used up only 18 pounds of nitrogen, six pounds of phosphorus and 15 pounds of potash when grown on an unfertilized plot.

Pecans

Nuts usually are thought of as delicious additions to pastry, candy and ice cream, but the Georgia school of technology views the pecan as raw material for industry.

Charcoal has been produced from the pecan hulls. When pulverized, it has as great power in decolorizing dyes as do other vegetable charcoals now being used industrially. Oil has been obtained from pecan meats which has a pleasant bland taste and odor. It becomes transparent when refined by the same process used for cotton seed oil. The oil can be used as salad oil or as a substitute for fats in baking. It has been used experimentally as a basis for cold cream which compares well with the finest commercial grades.

Ground nut shells may also have possibilities as abrasives or as a dusting agent for cleaning certain kinds of furs. They may also be useful for combining with dusting powders to kill insects.

Pecans are native to the southern states where the output is annually 20,000 to 50,000 tons. Improved varieties have been developed by selection and propagated by budding, but more than 50 per cent of the amount marketed are wild and seedling pecans which are native to the warm climate. Texas produces the greatest crop followed by Oklahoma, Georgia, Mississippi, Alabama and Arkansas.

Crop Protectors

Manufacturers of materials used to combat plant diseases and insects claim there will be adequate supplies of most insecticides and fungicides to protect field and fruit crops in 1943. They also say that there is a better supply of containers than last year, but dealers and farmers are asked to return to factories all usable empty containers.

A substantial increase in production of calcium arsenate has been requested by the government.

LOOKING BACKWARD

40 Years Ago—May 29, 1903

J. D. Hawks, president of the Detroit & Mackinac railway and the Detroit, Ypsilanti, Ann Arbor & Jackson, is making a collection of lumbering day pictures. His purpose is to preserve the history of a famous industry, and when completed the collection will be presented to the University of Michigan.

James Jeffries and James Corbett have signed articles for a match to be held August 14. The two pugilists have accepted the offer of the Yosemite Club.

The county road commission has adopted the Hemlock road as starting at the L. B. Smith farm. Work on improving this road will start soon.

Dr. George L. Tiffany of East Tawas has retired from the medical profession and will enter the ministry. His first charge will be at Roscommon.

Mr. and Mrs. James Chambers returned Sunday after spending a week's bridal trip to Niagara Falls and other points.

James McKay is the new assistant cashier at the Carson, Ealy & Co. bank.

Benjamin Frost and family of Hale left Tuesday for Laramie. They expect to return in July.

Fred Latham has purchased a new J. I. Case threshing machine.

Robert MacGregor of Hale was in city on business Tuesday.

E. Smith has purchased the La-May place at McVior and is having it repaired. He will open a hotel.

R. E. Nash has built a neat building at the Junction for the accommodation of a lunch counter.

The Matthew Street bridge has been lowered to street level.

Attorney Edwin Rawden will deliver the Memorial Day address at the cemetery tomorrow.

Robert Logie of J. M. Wuggazer & Co. has gone to Grand Rapids for the week.

In visiting the Yosemite Valley, President Theodore Roosevelt has entered the last phase of his long western tour which will end June 5.

25 Years Ago—May 31, 1918

"Every man of draft age must either work or fight" is the order of Provost Marshal General Crowder.

Harvey Gilbert, Cleo Matheson and Edgar Duby will leave June 5 for Laurel, Maryland, where they will enter the nation's service.

The schools of the county were very well represented at the Iosco county field day held Friday at the Fair Grounds.

Clayton Jennings of Hale is at Lansing taking a Civil Service examination.

Miss Mildred Hinman of Alabaster has completed a very successful year as teacher at Bentley.

The following is a list of eighth grade graduates: James Mielock, Ed Anderson, Paul Gnath, Orjive Westcott, Louise Burgeson, Dorothy Phelps, Arthur Miller, Marie Schaaaf, Lucille Musolf, Elsie Wendt, Laura Bischoff, Harold Grise, Josephine Gauthier, Harold Groff, Lorene Wilson, Leah Friedman, Edward Sieloff, Eva Buckle, Lavin Woizeschke, LeRoy Stineblower, Florence Sommerfield, Lee Brown, Frances Schriber, Elizabeth Sheldon, Anna Klenow, Richard Ingalls, Dorothy Schill, Nina Noel, Ellen McDougald, Ethel McDougald, Jesse Sibley, Helen Siefert, Blanche Waters, Florence and Edna Kohn, Daniel Dickinson, Samuel Gardner, Laura Day Edward Hall, Roland Heber, Gertrude B. Food Administrator G. A. Prescott says that while there is a scarcity of wheat, there is danger of a tremendous loss of food stuff through not using the perishables, such as potatoes. There is a great surplus of last year's crop, and the new crop will soon be on the market. Eat potatoes and save wheat!

With enemy air raids on Paris increasing every day American aviators have volunteered to help defend the city.

The lack of important movements during the past few days on the Western Front would indicate that the Germans are preparing to strike in another gigantic offensive. Our allies must hold on as well as they may, because the American Army requires many more troops with months of training before it will be an effective help.

Money Divorce Cause

Money, or rather the lack of it, is the most common cause of marital troubles, according to Circuit Judge Paul D. Barnes of Miami, and he should know, for last year he handled 4,000 divorce cases. "Willingness to live within income is the most important thing I can say to young married couples," Judge Barnes said. "The tendency to exceed income seems to be a fashion of the times, but it's probably the most disastrous habit married couples can fall into."

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Wags!

No quadruped of the K9 contingent used by the Marines, the Army or the Coast Guard is purchased. They're strictly volunteers for the duration, loaned by their masters and mistresses. These dogs are taught to hear and smell and see enemies where humans cannot. They are invaluable at night.

Several K9 training stations are maintained by various branches of our fighting services. You may not have a dog to send to war but you can send your money. Buy War Bonds.

People You Meet:

Victor Mature, formerly of Hollywood and Broadway, now of the U. S. Coast Guard . . . He furloaf'd in the Broadway arena again the other midnight for the first time in a long spell . . . Just back from long convoy duty, and now gone again . . . Proud of his promotion and the part he is playing in the war . . . The other night his huge hands were weatherbeaten and tough . . . "What!" one of us remarked. "No manicure?" "Oh, I couldn't have a manicure," he replied seriously. "The fellows on the ship would be in stitches" . . . No squawks . . . Just one little one . . . The way they keep teasing him—about Miss Hayworth.

Amon Carter . . . Prosperous newspaper publisher from Fort Worth . . . He and his wife were divorced about a year ago, but they both patronize the Stork Club a lot . . . And never interfere with each other's pleasure . . . They simply do not talk any more . . . The other night the transatlantic phone operator found him there . . . Friends in London had word of his son . . . Captured by the Nazis in Tunisia . . . The news was a relief . . . There had been none about the boy for so long . . . He wanted to share the news with his ex-wife—but he didn't know how . . . And so he waited for someone they both knew to come in (his daughter) who told the mother.

Bob Russell, who can't speak a word of Spanish . . . He wrote the words to three foreign ditties—"Maria Elena," "Frenesi" and "Brazil" . . . "Maria" was the first song in 16 years to hit the million copy division. The words to "Frenesi" he considers his worst lyric . . . His words to "Brazil" lay on a publisher's shelves for over a year—they couldn't see it! . . . His latest lyric is heard at the Versailles where they feature the song, "Dark Blue" . . . His newest thrill is making the Hit Parade last week with a grand torch called: "Don't Get Around Much Anymore."

Then there's Bea Wain, whose voice hardly needs an introduction to people who buy recordings and have a radio . . . Bea opened at the Riobamba last night—succeeding Frank Sinatra, whose click was town talk recently . . . Bea was oofly nervous, mister . . . Not only was she taking over the spot vacated by a crowd-puller, but it was her night club debut, too . . . Nervous, it seems, because she was afraid she wouldn't be good enough! . . . Good enough? . . . She's merely been featured on the Hit Parade and Magic Key programs, and her recording of "Deep Purple" sold 2,500,000 copies!

The Magazines: The Satevepost's vivid pictures about the siege of Sevastopol chains your eyes to the pages . . . Omori Harris, who spent 40 years among them, offers some lowdown on the Japs' alleged courage in Harper's . . . This Week includes a piece about city gals on the farms called: "The Farmer's Step-Daughter." It sounds like the bluest of the anecdotes after the Hays censors laundered it.

Lost Generation: It was our world . . . and it is not today, Pour then the wine and trim the candles down, We were the fools who blithely lost our way And dumbly played the charlatan and clown . . . Call for the fiddler . . . name the lazy waltz Speak of the fragile beauty that has flown, It is too late to lance us of our faults— We must go on unheralded and alone.

There in the dust of old, enchanted Inns We sold the precious heritage of man For rancid wine and unimportant sins That stole the theme and purpose of our plan . . .

As Axis Troops Surrendered to Allies

Covered by a Sherman tank, German prisoners prepare to move on after surrendering themselves to Allied forces in North Africa. A short time later all organized enemy resistance had ceased in all sectors, and an estimated total of 150,000 German and Italian troops had been taken prisoner, together with their commander, Col. Gen. Juergen Von Arnim. Vast quantities of guns and war material of all kinds were captured.

With the trumpets of the great Allied victory in Tunisia still reverberating around the world, Winston Churchill, Great Britain's prime minister, and President Franklin D. PEAKING OF PORTS

By Bob McShane
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

THE "match of the century" will develop when bashful Gunder Haag, famed Swedish middle-distance runner, arrives in the United States to pit his speed and endurance against America's best athletes.

The match of the century, of course, would see barrel chested Greg Rice, formerly of Notre Dame, meet the Ghost of Gavle, in a match designed to end a lot of arguments.

Holder of five official world records at distances from 1,500 meters to 5,000, including a 4:04.6 miles, Haag is looking forward to competition in America with all the eagerness of a rookie seeing big league action for the first time.

Haag boarded a tanker at Goteborg for his voyage across the Atlantic. In an interview before he left, he said:

"I love to run and it has always been my dream to go to the United States. I have never been outside Europe and I am looking forward to competing with America's great runners.

"When I get there I'll run any place and any time, and the AAU can let the profits of any meets go where it finds suitable—whether to war benefits or other funds."

Explanation

The sandy-haired Haag, a village fireman at Gavle, had a very definite purpose in mind when he made the latter statement. Previous reports published in this country indicated that he was unwilling, as a citizen of a neutral country, to compete in meet staged for the benefit of war relief agencies.

Haag denied the statement flatly. "I am ready to run, especially if it helps war invalids or other victims of the war," he said.

Tentative arrangements for Haag's appearance in this country include the National AAU championships, to be held in New York June 19-20, and special meets in other cities.

The AAU championship program has been arranged so that Haag, if he wishes, could run in the 1,500 meters on June 19 and in the 5,000 meters on June 20.

It is in the latter race he probably would be called upon to face Greg Rice, world indoor record holder at two miles and far and away America's leading distance runner. Rice is a chief specialist in the United States Maritime service. In New York, Dan Ferris, secretary-treasurer of the AAU, said that all benefits from meets in which Haag competes would go to the U. S. Air Forces' Aid society.

Sports Spectacle

The race should be one of those rare sports spectacles where the issue is a clean cut test of superiority between champions. Such meetings seldom take place—largely because two great competitors seldom arise at the same time.

Old timers recall that in the field of distance running, the victory of Italy's Pietri Dorando over America's John J. Hayes at the old Madison Square Garden was one of the most talked of events of the century. Hayes had been proclaimed the Olympic marathon winner in London in 1908, after Dorando, leading until a few yards from the finish, fell and was helped over the line by friends. Hayes was given the title after Dorando was disqualified.

Then Dorando and Hayes turned professional and engaged in a series of marathons. The first of these took place in New York. The crowds were slightly terrific. Thousands couldn't attend because of safety restrictions. But Dorando proved himself. He won a majority of their races, thus vindicating himself in the eyes of his followers.

SPORTS SHORTS

Ⓢ The major league fielding record for first basemen is a .999 average set by John P. ("Stuffy") McInnis of the Boston Red Sox for 152 games in 1921.

Ⓢ Since Doug Mills became basketball coach at Illinois seven years ago, the Illini have won 61 games and lost 26 for a 701 percentage against Big Ten competition.

Ⓢ In 1942, 116 major league double headers resulted in standoffs and 123 others produced double wins for one of the contesting teams.

Speak American, Lady

By Lucie Kinsolving

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with Woman's Home Companion.)

All over the world, the American soldier likes a joke, even when war puts him in a field hospital. To keep him happy, the American Red Cross girls of the hospital recreation groups help a lot. I was the first of these girls to go to North Africa.

"I'd give a month's pay to talk to an American girl," confided one disconsolate boy. "This morning when I stepped up to a neat little French number and said, 'Bonne jower, comment allese vu', she breezed right past me! No American dame would treat me that way."

It's being unable to make themselves understood by the feminine sex over there that's one of the hardest things for our soldiers in North Africa, I found. I interpreted for an hour and a half to a French lady for an American officer. His tactics were Anglo-Saxon directness, hers were Gallic evasion. At the end of that time the gentleman had no idea whether the lady was amused or merely contemptuous.

This incident gives you only a slight idea of the varied ways that we Red Cross recreation workers try to make ourselves useful.

There was a rumor that a very great American general had said a year ago he would never "have wanted women mixed up in a war," but after he saw what Red Cross workers accomplished in England he definitely wanted them in Africa and right away.

Greeted by Soldiers.

When our Red Cross group docked in North Africa on the first sunny day we had had for two months, we were greeted by shouts of welcome from the soldiers. "Speak American, lady," they cried as they had in London where they had stopped us on the street just to hear the home twang.

As we drove up the roadway, the populace of varying races and religions who had learned Americanisms fast, held up two fingers in the Victory salutation, hoping this would bring them chocolate and "chue-gomme."

Some faces wore doubtful expressions, mystified by our women's uniforms, but when we came closer a light broke through. "Voila La Croix Rouge," they shouted enthusiastically. "Vive La Croix Rouge." Imagine what a thrill that gave us!

First Red Cross Club in Africa.

That very night we opened our first American Red Cross club in North Africa. Only a few hours before it had been a barnlike empty automobile showroom. But Al Fink, Herb Siffert and Jim Snider, three of our enterprising field directors, had worked such wonders that as I played the piano for the soldiers to sing I heard one boy blurt out, "Gee, this sure is like home!"

This was in Oran, Algiers, not many days after our troops arrived. Since then in our Oran club hundreds of men have found "a home away from home." In addition to the piano, we have radios, games and at night entertainment by army musicians.

At first we had difficulty providing snacks for the boys, but we found we could fill in the hungry spaces with mandarins and dates.

Our next job was a tough one—to organize a Red Cross hospital for which our six months' supply of everything was lost. I felt like Christopher Robin, for I spent my time going down "to the end of the town," getting warehouses open where there were priceless Red Cross stocks of cigarettes, tooth paste, brushes and shaving cream for the wounded.

Living Problems.

Our personal problems of living are easier than we had imagined, as women in a man's army on a battle front, but they are extremely incongruous. Unbelievable luxuries are mixed with discomforts. We can have coiffures that "do things for you" but no hairpins. We have exotic tropical fruits but no pasteurized milk. Fine handmade shoes are in shop windows, but no stockings. We live in a typical French house surrounded by palms, golden cascades of mimosa, and giant tree ferns.

We have become increasingly resourceful since that hot day in September when, loaded down with musette bags, steel helmets and gas masks, a group of us Red Cross girls hitched up the gangplank of a troopship.

Our quarters were comfortable, on a very crowded ship, and we learned our first lesson then—the chivalry of the United States army.

We were faced with hundreds of homesick and seasick men. I found a tin-pan piano and started playing. By the end of the evening the crowd was booming.

Washington, D. C.

SUBMARINE ANTIDOTE

A history making event took place recently in the long war against the submarine. Official tests were made of the helicopter, which, despite opposition of the navy, has been urged by officials of the army and War Shipping administration for anti-submarine patrol.

Within a few hours after the publication of a Merry-Go-Round story on this subject, a group of officials from Washington, including highly interested and highly placed officials of the British admiralty, British shipping mission, and the RAF, stood in amazement on the deck of a tanker offshore while a little airplane with a crazy rotary wing on top landed and took off from a deck space not more than twice the size of the plane itself.

It was a Sikorsky helicopter, piloted by a boyish colonel who reminded everybody of Charles Lindbergh in his younger days—H. F. Gregory, from Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, who knows more about helicopters than anybody else in the air force.

Gregory made 24 landings on the tanker during the two days of trials. He operated under all conceivable conditions—when the tanker was running at anchor, when she was running at 15 1/2 knots, when she was headed into the wind, and when she was running with the wind.

The War Shipping administration, which supplied the tanker, had offered to remove the mast, to provide a safer landing space. But inventor Sikorsky scorned that as "too easy." Accordingly, his plane was set down by Colonel Gregory in the space between the mast and the deck house, with only a 14-foot clearance on either side.

Far-Seeing 'Eyes.'

To the British and American shipping experts whose ships are going to the bottom every day, the significance of this feat was inescapable. They firmly believe the helicopter can be used to supplement the escort vessels for the greater protection of merchant ships in convoy.

It is too light to carry much striking power of its own, except a few rockets, but it can fly out ahead of the convoy, hover over the sea, spot the wolf pack, and report by radio to the escort vessels. This saves movement of the escort vessels, which in present practice have to maneuver constantly around the merchant ships, with heavy consumption of fuel oil.

Moreover, the helicopter, without firing a shot, brings alarm to the prowling submarine and causes the U-boat to dive.

Earlier acceptance of the helicopter was prevented by the navy's bureau of aeronautics, which contends that the machine is defenseless against the guns of a submarine.

The defenders reply that the plane can dart about so crazily that it is too evasive to be easily hit. Moreover, helicopters can be built for $15,000 each, and the loss of a few would not be serious, compared with the loss of escort vessels.

In any case, the matter has gone beyond the stage of argument. The War Shipping administration is determined to have helicopters, and if the navy won't come along, WSA will make a deal with the coast guard to train pilots, and another deal with the war department to place the planes on its ships.

ARMY AND COAL MINES

John L. Lewis would have got the surprise of his life if he could have had a dictaphone recording of the conversation of Secretary of War Stimson and Gen. B. B. Somervell regarding the use of troops in taking over the coal mines.

Lewis had expressed public apprehension that the army had a plan to seize the coal mines in case of a strike. Undoubtedly subordinate army officers did have such a plan in mind.

But when Secretary Stimson sat down with Secretary Ickes, plus General Somervell and other army officers, the army expressed vigorous opinions to the contrary. General Somervell, accused by some of wanting the army to take over all civilian activities, made this remark:

"The last thing we want is an issue of the army against the people."

Waste Acres Offer Opportunity to Grow Needed Food

Homemade Pools for Rearing Fish Answer To Depleted Larders

How does your underwater garden grow? In ponds, with little plants called algae, tiny animals, water insects, bluegill bream and bass, all in a circle. And the result can be 200 to 400 pounds of edible fish per watery acre a year, a sizable family supply of high protein food to supplement rationed meat.

Spade work for thousands of fish gardens has already been done on farms and ranches where gullied and waste land has been flooded to restore fertility to the soil, in accordance with recommendations of the U. S. soil conservation service. Fertilizing for fish may seem strange to those who take their tuna from yacht decks or cast for trout in mountain streams, but experts have proved that well-managed fertilized ponds yield about twice as much fish as ordinary unfertilized ponds. The "crop rotation" goes like this: fertilizer feeds the microscopic aquatic plants or algae, algae feed tiny animals and water insects which feed the little fish, and, on a diet of little fish big fish grow bigger.

War has cut the national supply of marine food fish about 22 per cent. Biologists and engineers of the soil conservation service say it would be practicable to add enough farm and ranch ponds and reservoirs to furnish the nation with 100,000,000 pounds or more of fresh fish every year to help make up for this reduction. With transportation and canning facilities directed toward war production, the aquatic garden that yields a crop of fish as much as a Victory garden as a plot of prize vegetables—and there is no labor problem. A home-made pool is the only harvest equipment needed and hope of a good crop makes pleasure of such work as fertilizing and stocking the pond.

Drawing at top illustrates food cycle by which the black bass comes to be what he is, the most highly prized catch of anglers. Below, at left, you see 16-year-old Robert Summers of Paragould, Ark., applying fertilizer to a fish pasture of aquatic plants. Center: A young neighbor harvests a crop from the fish pond of Edgar Stephens, New Albany, Miss. Right: Young Judson Crowley of Watkinsonville, Ga., eyes the harvest of fresh fish from his father's underwater Victory garden.

FUN FOR YOUR FAMILY

By MISS ABBIE CONDIT
National Recreation Association.

Spring is family time. For instance, the first full week in May is celebrated in many churches as Family week. Then in June comes Children's day (June 13) and Father's day (June 20). What more appropriate season for an all-family party?

Through the Looking Glass Party.
Who could resist an invitation to Looking Glass Land, beloved of childhood? The Red Queen and White Queen beckon from the invitation. This party could be used for a large crowd of fathers, mothers, daughters and sons. The party is followed by a buffet lunch.

Invitation. Write on white paper with rough edges. Figures are silhouettes cut from red paper and pasted on.

Come to a "Through the Looking Glass" Party.
O Looking Glass Creatures, quoth Alice, draw near.

'Tis an honor to see you, a favor to hear:
Let the Looking Glass Creatures, whoever they be,
Come and play with the Red Queen, the White Queen, and me.

Time: _____ Date: _____
Place: _____

Games.
Looking Glass Signatures. This is a game which starts the ball rolling. It gives the early arrivals something to do, and each person as he arrives joins in. Paper and pencil are given to each person. The game is to go up to others and have them write their signatures in true looking glass style—backwards. Having obtained a signature, the player must write out the name as it is normally written. The person who has the longest list of correct names and signatures wins a prize.

White Knight's Problem. This is another game to play while people are arriving. A large jar of dry beans stands on a table. Beside it are pads of paper, pencils, and a box or man's hat upside-down (opera hat preferred). There is a sign over the table "The White Knight's

The Airman's Prayer
(A poem written by Sergeant Hugh Brodie of the Royal Australian Air Force, has been widely acclaimed. Sergeant Brodie has been posted "missing in action.")
Almighty and all-present Power,
Short is the prayer I make to Thee.
I do not ask in battle hour
For any shield to cover me.
The vast unalterable way,
From which the stars do not depart,
May not be turned aside to stay
The bullets flying to my heart.
I ask no help to strike my foe,
I seek no petty victory here.
The enemy I hate, I know,
To Thee is also dear.
But this I pray: Be at my side
When death is drawing through the sky;
Almighty God Who also died,
Teach me the way that I should die.

Problem: How Many Beans in the Bottle? People come up to the table, write out their guesses, sign them, and drop them in the hat. At the end of the evening, prizes are given for the best two guesses. To make the game fairly difficult, the number of beans should run into the thousands. If the party is an elaborate one, let the White Knight himself, in armor, preside over the box.

Wonderland Flower Garden. Players sit in a circle. Have two circles if number of players exceeds 40. Each player is given the name of some flower. It doesn't matter if your list of flowers runs out and several have the same flower. One player stands in the center of the circle and says, "I enter the garden and I want a rose and a lily." Players with those names must immediately change seats, while the center player endeavors to get one of the vacated seats. When he succeeds, the player losing out must take his place in the center. When the center announces a "windstorm" all flowers must change seats.

DEVIL DOG 'CHOW'

United States marines lay claim to being the best fed of the world's fighting men.

And it is easy to see why the Leathernecks believe their "chow" is so superior. A menu picked at random from any marine base throughout the country is a good illustration.

Here's one—breakfast at the marine corps training station at Parris Island, S. C.: oatmeal with cream, bacon and eggs, fried potatoes, buttered toast, coffee and fruit.

And here's what the boys at Quantico, Va., had for dinner on Sunday, September 12: roast turkey with dressing and giblet gravy, mashed potatoes, buttered string beans, tomato and lettuce salad, bread and butter and ice cream.

Another sample menu will round out the day. This is a typical Sunday evening meal: cold cuts, baked beans, sliced cheese, beet and onion salad, bread and butter, doughnuts and coffee.

Each and every meal prepared for the "fightin'est body of men on earth" can well satisfy the most exacting gourmet.

Carefully designed menus of attractive and well-prepared food necessary for the needs of these sea-going soldiers is an every-meal project. It is most important that the food give the number of vitamins and calories required by the nature of their work.

The amount of food may vary according to climatic conditions but marines abroad eat of the chow of the same quality and quantity as their buddies back home.

The food which the enlisted man of today eats is as good as, if not better than, that which he had been getting in civilian life.

British Ferret Out Axis Arms Secrets

Never Caught by Surprise by New Equipment.

CAIRO, EGYPT.—The accuracy with which British intelligence experts have anticipated changes in designs of German military equipment long before the innovations appear on the battlefield has been an important factor in their strategy.

The British knew all about the new Mark VI tank 18 months before the 60-ton monsters appeared on the front. This knowledge enabled Allied commanders to reallocate their armor and anti-tank defenses so that when the test came the "tigers" achieved only nominal success.

Of the hundreds of variations of battle equipment introduced by the enemy, Allied intelligence officers say, none has caught them by surprise. To get this information they have risked, and in some instances, lost their lives.

An example of the lengths to which the British go to untrickle new armaments secrets was provided just inside the Egyptian frontier when the first Mark IV tank fell into Allied hands. The Germans, desperately trying to keep the British from examining it, bombed the tank almost every foot of the way back to Cairo.

The tank was taken to Suez and placed on the deck of a liner for shipment to England. That night the Germans bombed Suez shipping and hit the liner. By daylight the ship was listing badly and enveloped in flames. Port authorities were convinced the tank could not be saved, but a young British officer, Maj. Davis Evans, discovered a 30-ton crane, assembled a volunteer crew and surmounted enormous difficulties in engineering the crane to the ship side and lifting the tank onto a barge. It got to shore safely.

BLACK PUSSY ALMOST CATCHES A GOOD BREAKFAST

BLACK PUSSY was out very early hunting for her breakfast. Not that she needed to hunt for her breakfast! Oh, my no! Black Pussy didn't need a single thing. Every morning Farmer Brown's Boy filled a saucer with warm fresh milk for her, and every day she had all the meat that was good for her; so there wasn't the least need in the world for her to go hunting. Black Pussy was just like all cats. Lying before the fire in Farmer Brown's house, blinking and purring contentedly, she seemed too good-natured and gentle to hurt anyone, and all Farmer Brown's family said that she was and believed it.

You see, Farmer Brown's folks really didn't know Black Pussy. But the little forest and meadow people did. They knew that Black Pussy was just like all cats—ferce and cruel down inside. This particular morning Black Pussy had chosen to have a look along the old stone wall on the edge of the Old Orchard. Many times she had hunted Striped Chipmunk there. She didn't know enough about the ways of the little people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows to know that this cold weather had sent Striped Chipmunk down into his snug bedroom underground for a long sleep, so she sneaked along from stone to stone hoping that she would surprise him. She had gone half the length of the old wall, without a sign of anything to catch, when she heard voices that put all thought of Striped Chipmunk out of her head. Crawling flat on her stomach to keep out of sight, she softly worked nearer and nearer until, peeping from behind a big stone in the old wall, she could see Chatterer the Red Squirrel, Peter Rabbit and Sammy Jay talking so busily, and so much excited, that they didn't seem to be paying attention to anything else.

Sammy Jay was safe because he was sitting in an old apple tree, but Chatterer was on the old wall and Peter was on the ground. Which should she catch? Peter would make the biggest and best breakfast, but Black Pussy hadn't forgotten the terrible kick he had once given her when she had caught little Miss Fuzzytail up in the Old Pasture, and she had great respect for Peter's stout hind legs. She would be content to catch Chatterer this morning.

More slowly and more carefully than ever Black Pussy stole forward. Her eyes grew yellow with excitement, and fierce and cruel. At last she reached a place where one good jump would land her on Chatterer. Carefully she drew her feet under her to make the jump. The end of her black tail twitched with eagerness. Just as she got ready to spring there was a shrill scream from Sammy Jay. He had caught sight of the moving tip of that tail, and he knew what it meant. Black Pussy sprang, but she was just too late. Chatterer had dived headfirst down between the stones of the old wall at the sound of Sammy's scream and Peter had dived headfirst into Johnny Chuck's house, on the door-step of which he happened to be sitting.

Black Pussy looked up at Sammy Jay and snarled at him in a terrible rage. Sammy shrieked at her just as angrily. Then, when her head was turned for just an instant, he darted down and actually pulled a tuft of hair from her coat and was safely out of the way before she could turn and spring. Then Black Pussy thrust a paw down between the stones where Chatterer had disappeared. She pulled it out again with a yowl of pain, for sharp little teeth had bitten it. Slowly and sullenly Black Pussy turned and limped back toward Farmer Brown's house. She suddenly remembered that saucer of milk, and that that was really all the breakfast she wanted.

PETER'S COUNSEL TO SCATTERED CHRISTIANS

LESSON TEXT—I Peter 1:1; 2:11-25. GOLDEN TEXT—Honor all men. Love the brotherhood. Fear God. Honor the king.—I Peter 2:17.

Persecution for Christ's sake has been the lot of believers from the first century down to 1943. Sometimes it has been official, but more often unofficial, yet nonetheless severe and trying.

The manner in which Christians face their difficulties is one of the best testimonies to the reality of their professed faith. Sometimes, however, in the midst of their trials the enemy of their souls brings discouragement—and then they need the counsel and encouragement of others.

Such was the situation when Peter addressed his first epistle to the early believers who were scattered abroad (1:1). His counsel was just what they needed, and is equally helpful to us. They were to be

I. Separated As Pilgrims (1:1; 2:11, 12).

Christians are in this world but not of it. They are passing through, wayfarers on their way to the eternal dwelling place of God. That does not mean that they are not interested in the welfare of those round about them, or delinquent in sharing the responsibilities of life, but it does mean that they are to have the pilgrim's detachment from the things of the world and the flesh.

In the days of Peter, membership in the church was not considered a normal or respectable thing. It marked a person as belonging to a hated sect, one which was falsely accused of many evil deeds. For example, Christians met at night, men and women together for communion service. Because they spoke of this as a "love feast," they were accused of immorality, and because they spoke of the body and blood of Christ they were said to be eaters of human flesh.

Christians must meet such malicious reports. How? By silencing their accusers by their good works.

II. Submissive As Citizens (2:13-18).

One of the hallmarks of Christian character is willing and gracious recognition of proper authority, whether it be in the state, in the place of employment, in the school, or in the home. He does this for the Lord's sake (v. 13), and even when that authority is in the hands of an unreasonable man.

This does not mean that the Christian is to encourage or countenance tyranny and oppression, but that he is loyal to the state and to his employer, even though the present representative be a hard, unjust man. In all well ordered society there will be proper and effective means to correct injustice. But in and through it all the Christian shows his faith by his behavior.

III. Suffering As Christians (2:19-25).

Christ is our "example" (v. 21). Since some have interpreted this word and the statement "that ye should follow in his steps" as indicating that we are saved by our imitation of Christ, it is well to point out that this would be quite impossible. We would have to begin where He began—He was without sin (v. 22). But we have all "sinned and come short of the glory of God" (Rom. 3:23). We need a Saviour—not an example as far as redemption is concerned.

In the ever present problem of suffering, we as redeemed ones do have Christ as our example. He who was sinless and without fault bore the shame and suffering of Calvary without complaint. When He was reviled He did not retaliate, when He was hurt He did not threaten revenge (vv. 22, 23), but was willing to leave the ultimate judgment in the hands of God, who will have the final word.

We ought to do the same when we suffer for Christ's sake. If we suffer because of our own sin or folly, we can claim no credit for bearing it patiently (v. 20). But when we have done well and then are persecuted, we have opportunity to show whether our profession of being followers of Christ really means anything. At this point some Christians lose their testimony and influence by a bitter, vengeful spirit.

These are trying days for the souls of men. In many parts of the world Christians are forced to drink the bitter cup of persecution. To the glory of God we record the fact that they are doing it heroically and in a true Christian spirit.

What to do with the huge stocks of synthetic and natural rubber will test the ingenuity of manufacturers and sales executives.

say, 'nothing serious will happen, this is merely another gesture—one bunch of good fellows being investigated by another.'

A goodly number of the total roster of Gogebell county's public servants now find themselves in position where they have agreed to make restitution to the county of the public funds which they collected. The sum to be repaid represents compromises *** which are due, the court said, 'to our inability to unscramble the omelets of the past.' *** The grand jury findings give no encouragement to anyone who might in the future regard the county treasury as a 'sort of year-around Christmas tree' *** as Judge Dehnke finds had become a practice here in recent years. ***

The warnings issued by the auditor general over a period of several years were based on the findings of state auditors in their annual examinations of county records. Disregard for the law reached its climax in 1942, which has been described as the 'banner year.' The result was the ordering of a special audit and the grand jury investigation.

That investigation has now been completed, with the results noted, and with the exception of two or three cases which are still under consideration. *** The task of restoring public faith and confidence in county government rests on the board of supervisors. On this point it may be well to repeat Judge Dehnke's statement:

"I am very hopeful that the board of supervisors will now rise to its responsibility as the first and principal line of defense against illegal, injudicious, or reckless expenditures of public funds, and that it will have the co-operation of all county officials therein. No one proposes to put county government in a straight jacket. The state has neither the desire nor the money and personnel to keep grand juries in session supervising county officials. It steps in only when irregularities have grown beyond control."

That a very important duty rests on the public also is set forth by Judge Dehnke in these words, which bear repeating and ought to be remembered:

"Citizens must bear in mind that eternal vigilance is not the price of liberty only, but also of good government; and that the fundamental American safeguard against incompetency and chronic lack of good judgment in public office is not a grand jury, but the ballot box."

Aviation Cadet James Halligan, U.S.N.R. is visiting his father, Jos. Halligan this week. James has completed his training at Mansville, Ohio. He expects to leave for Detroit on Friday for a brief visit before going to Iowa Pre-Flight School for further training.

Mr. and Mrs. John Westcott have received word that their son, George, in the U. S. Navy, had been in North Africa the first part of the month.

First Lieut. James Sloan paid an over night visit to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Sloan. He flew here from the Enid Army Air Field in Oklahoma, arriving Monday evening, and landing at Camp Skeel. He left the following noon to return to his duties as instructor at the Air Field.

Clair J. Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Smith of Alabaster, has been promoted to sergeant according to a notice received today from the Army Air Force Gunner School at Kingman, Arizona. Sgt. Smith is a recent graduate gunner and his work will be on a bomber plane.

In a letter to his parents Sgt. Smith says:
I am fine. May not have time to write to all of you because I am leaving the first thing in the morning. I have been getting my equipment together. It consists of a parachute, what we call a "Mae West," that is, a life preserver that we wear in the water, a three piece suit made with heavy sheep skin lining, and the boots to go with it. Also have two helmets, a pair of sun glasses, a nice leather jacket, a sweater, oxygen masks, and a lot of other little things. Altogether, I have four big bags and a handbag full.

We received our wings this morning, and they lined us all up and had our picture taken.
Well folks, I am glad that everything on the farm is going OK. If it weren't, I'd be worrying, but I know that you and dad are doing your part.

Your loving son,
Clair Smith.
