HEREFORD CALF GROWERS MET TUESDAY

Discuss Improvement of Area's Beef Cattle Herds

Activities of the Northeastern Michigan Hereford Calf association showed increased enthusiasm this week among the white faced cattle men of Iosco county.

Tuesday evening, twenty-five directors and members of the association assembled at the Federal Building in East Tawas to discuss spring activities of the organization which might lead to improvement of the breed in this noted grazing area of Michigan.

C. T. Prescott, president of the association, called the meeting to order and pointed out opportunities which this area have in the National Food Production program. He showed that even when extreme moisture conditions prevented local farmers from planting their usual grain and feed crops, many tons of valuable food was being produced on the backs of the white faced cattle in this area, and might save many soldiers and citizens from hunger before the close of the war.

E. L. Benton, extension specialist from Michigan State College, was present. In discussing the cattle market outlook, he pointed out the importance of the best possible breeding stock, and encouraged cattlemen to attend the Gladwin beef cattle sale which was held Thursday where 24 high quality Hereford bulls and heifers were to be consigned from some of the leading herds of Michigan.

The meeting Tuesday evening, grew into an informal discussion of the meat marketing program in which "Black Marketing" was highly condemned. It was felt that little illegal marketing was in practice in this portion of the state, and that most dealers and slaughterers are now working under government permit. The meat supply and demand program received much consideration with the newly introduced price "roll back" "subsidy" program being highly condemned by many of those present. It was felt that such a program would discourage meat production, would further discourage farmers, would reduce the food supply for our soldiers, would be costly to administer, and would reduce the farmer's income, while increasing the middleman's profit, with but little reduction in the consumer's meat cost.

The cattlemen went on record as favoring a meat program in which rationing should be adjusted to control demand according to supply. They also went on record as being highly opposed to a subsidy program of any kind at this day and age.

It was voted to pass this information to State and Federal officials with whom the responsibility of a food control program is in charge.

"Immortal Sergeant" At Family June 6-7-8

From all the far-flung fields of battle, there has come no more stirring story than the heroic epic of Libya. Appropriately enough, 20th Century-Fox's picture story of John Brophy's "Immortal Sergeant," which has Libya as its locale, is one of the finest films turned out on the war. The picture plays at the Family Theatre next Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, June 6, 7 and 8.

Starring Henry Fonda and Maureen O'Hara, "Immortal Sergeant" is that rare cinematic gem—a picture whose authenticity and execution matches its magnitude of theme.

Jack Benny and Priscilla Lane are co-starred in the hilarious mid-week attraction, "The Meanest Man in the World" which shows at the Family on Wednesday and Thursday, June 9 and 10.

Benny is at his best as a "meaney" and Rochester is on hand to assist his "boss" in this comedy that will stock you up with laughs for a long time to come.

134 BEN AMES WILLIAMS W.N.U. FEATURES

THE STORY SO FAR: Robin Dale, a young artist, goes to Moose Bay to see her fiancé, Will McPhail. When Will is accidentally killed, his brother Angus blames Robin. She goes to Angus' fishing cruiser to see him. While she is on board the boat sails, carrying her, Angus, Pat Donohoe and a cabin boy named Romeo toward Labrador. The boat is seized by a man named Jenkins. Caught running contraband alcohol, Jenkins is trying to escape from a government patrol. When the boat sinks in a storm they are stranded on an island. Jenkins surprises Robin in the act of getting a cake of chocolate she has saved for Angus and Pat.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER XV

"So!" he whispered. "Cheating, sister? What have you got?"

She clutched the treasure tight against her breast. "It's mine!" she cried.

"Now don't be greedy, sister!" He came toward her. She was still on her knees in the low, cave-like shelter. At the thought of being caught there, panic swept her. She scrambled out just as Mr. Jenkins reached her. He caught her wrist with one hand, the cake of chocolate with the other. She clung to it, holding it with both hands against her body; and she screamed in a shrill, metallic way. He cried:

"Blast you, let go! Shut up!" He looked over his shoulder, still wrenching at the chocolate, and she bent her head and bit his hand.

He swore mightily, and he struck her hard in the face. Her head rang, and her legs gave way and she fell on her knees, still clinging to the cake of chocolate. He caught her wrist again, with his left hand, and there was an insane rage in him now. He drew his pistol and struck her knuckles with the barrel of it.

Then, behind him and a little above him, not a dozen feet away, the big Irishman came charging into view, Robin saw him. She cried Pat's name; and Jenkins, instantly reacting, jerked her around to serve as shield as big Pat Donohoe came on.

Since he first saw Robin on the wharf at Quai Rimouski, Mr. Jenkins had changed his mind about her half a dozen times. Beginning with the casual interest he might have felt toward any pretty girl, he had progressed to a lively resentment at her presence aboard McPhail's cruiser.

He did not actually see her slip down into the cleft to go to the shelter today. His back was toward her at the moment. But he glanced that way an instant later and, since she was no longer in sight, he knew at once where she had gone.

But he did not start toward Robin without a first cautious look around. Romeo was beyond him, laboring with a great boulder, a hundred yards or so away; and Angus and Pat were out of his sight on the other side of the naked dome where the monument was rising. When he was sure of this, Mr. Jenkins, as quietly as a cat, slipped back toward the head of the cleft.

When he came where he could see her, Robin was in the shelter, working in panting haste, shifting the rocks which he and Romeo had piled across the end of their refuge to shut out the wind. Mr. Jenkins came quietly down below the break of the ledge, so that no one could see him from the cairn above; and he watched in a lively curiosity. He was standing there, three or four paces away, when she turned to crawl out of the shelter with the cake of chocolate in her hand.

When Robin screamed, big Pat Donohoe had just reached the cairn with two or three rocks nursed in the cradle of his arms. As he dropped them, he heard her cry; and without a moment's hesitation, he raced that way. She and Mr. Jenkins did not hear his pounding feet; but Robin, looking past Mr. Jenkins, saw Pat on the ledge above them and cried his name. Mr. Jenkins had that much warning. He whipped around, and he drew her in front of him like a screen, the pistol in his right hand. At the same time, Pat's foot slipped and he fell awkwardly sideways, sliding over the lip of the ledge, landing absurdly in a sitting position ten feet away from where Mr. Jenkins stood with Robin fast in the steel circle of his arm. The breath went out of Pat with a grunt; and Mr. Jenkins, lips tight across his teeth, said sharply:

"Get up! Get out of here!"

But Robin cried, "Here, Pat!" She threw the chocolate toward the Irishman. The throw was awkward. The precious stuff landed on a sloping ledge and slid downward; and Mr. Jenkins swore at Robin and thrust her aside so that he could retrieve it. But she clung to his right arm—the pistol was in that hand—tugging at him, holding him back; and Pat, seeing his chance, came to his feet like a released spring and made his leap. Mr. Jenkins jerked free his pistol hand and fired.

When Mr. Jenkins fired, Pat was a lion in mid-leap. He felt the bullet like a flame stab his leg; but it did not stop him. Mr. Jenkins tried to twitch aside out of the way of Pat's charge; but he was driven back and down, Pat's great hands grappling for the pistol and for Mr. Jenkins' throat.

Robin, by the impact of Pat's leap, was knocked spinning to one side, and she fell, and Pat's heel caught her in the temple. It struck her senseless. Then the two men fell on top of her. She was under their thrashing bodies, forgotten by them both while they fought.

Up to this moment, neither Romeo nor Angus had appeared. They were both too far away to hear Robin's scream; but they heard the pistol shot. Romeo instantly raced to take a hand in whatever here went forward. Angus, even before the shot, had some forewarning. He was on the opposite side of the island when he discovered that Pat had disappeared. With as many rocks as he could carry in his arms, Angus went toward the cairn to see where Pat had gone; and he had almost reached it when he heard the shot. He dropped his load and raced up to the cairn, and saw Romeo coming from the left, scudding like a rabbit along the break of the cliff toward the cleft from which sounds of battle rose.

Angus raced to cut Romeo off; but he was still ten or fifteen yards short of doing so when Romeo reached a spot just above the shelter. The man stopped there and whipped a knife from its sheath at the hip and balanced it in his hand, looking down into the cleft as if to pick a fair target.

There was not time to come to him before he threw the knife. Angus scooped up a rock half as big as a brick; and as Romeo raised his hand, Angus threw the rock with all his might at the man's head. It missed that mark, but it did strike Romeo's elbow fairly, with a sharp, cracking sound. Romeo's knife flew out of his hand, and he screamed with pain and whirled and saw Angus almost on him.

It was in McPhail's mind to get his hands on Romeo's throat and do a thorough job of it; and the intent was blazing in his eyes. Romeo dodged and darted away—and Angus saw Pat and Mr. Jenkins by the shelter just below him, locked together, rolling over and over in a tight and silent fury. Also, he saw that Robin lay as flat as a beaten rug under their thrashing bodies.

He forgot Romeo. He reached them in two jumps. Mr. Jenkins at the moment happened to be up-bermost. Angus hauled at Mr. Jenkins; and since Pat clung like a terrier to his foe, Angus threw them both aside together. They rolled down the slope, and Angus picked Robin up, holding her awkwardly, shaking her, trying to think of some effective thing to do.

Then suddenly he was cool and sane again. Robin was unconscious, dead perhaps; but there would be time to tend her later. Pat and Mr. Jenkins, still locked together, had somehow disappeared around the corner of the shelter, down the steep rocky slope toward the sea. Angus, wondering why Pat needed so long to handle Mr. Jenkins, turned to help.

But Pat needed no help. When Angus left Robin and swung that way, he saw Pat crawling laboriously up the slope toward him. There was no sign of Mr. Jenkins. The rain fog dropped smotheringly about them, and Angus called sharply:

"Where's Jenkins?"

Pat looked over his shoulder; and a gull on patrol in the fog looked down, turning its head sideways the better to see what lay broken on the rocks. It wheeled sharply, with excited cries, and Pat Donohoe said:

"The gull's found him, down below. Rest his black soul!"

"Dead?"

"He is that! We fell off a ten-foot shelf, locked together like two sweethearts; but he was underneath when we landed, praises be! If it hadn't been for him to break my fall, not even my head could have stood it. His didn't. Or maybe it was his back. I heard it crack." He grinned. "He saved my life, peace to him."

Angus said flatly: "Romeo's somewhere around. Look out for him. I've got to tend to Miss Dale. She's hurt." He turned back to Robin, and lifted her into the shelter and laid her there and eyed her doubtfully, not sure what to do. Clearly, she was alive, for her breath stirred and she made gasping sounds; but there was a lump on her forehead, and her knuckles were bruised and broken, and her sweater torn. He held a handkerchief open in the spiteful little rain till it was dripping wet; then began to bathe her forehead and cheek and throat.

He had forgotten Pat. The Irishman crawled nearer on hands and knees till he came to the front of the shelter. He watched Angus for a while; and presently he said in a mildly persuasive tone:

"She's took nought but a crack on her head, sorr. She'll be fine!"

Angus nodded, still without looking around. "I guess so. I don't know, can't tell whether she's hurt or—just knocked out. She's coming around." He continued his ministrations; till Pat said, apologetically:

"Sorr, could you maybe be stopping the blood from running out of my leg here? I'm all thumb-handed like. I can't seem to manage it alone."

Angus looked around at him, in a quick surprise; and Pat lay softly down on his face and sighed and closed his eyes. Angus caught the big man in his arms.

It was time. Pat's leg was broken by that single shot which Mr. Jenkins had found time to fire. Waiting uncomplainingly while Angus tried to revive Robin, he had rolled up his trouser leg and pulled off his shoe and sock drenched with blood; but then increasing weakness left him helpless to tend himself. The bullet had entered just beside the shin bone, had come out through the back of the calf above the ankle. When Angus saw the wound, he understood how Mr. Jenkins had been able to fight so long against Pat's greater weight and strength.

With his thumbs he put pressure on till the hemorrhage slackened and stopped. He rolled his handkerchief, put a bit of rock in it, tied it around Pat's leg and twisted it with his knife for leverage. He tried to remember what to do next; and then Robin, in the shelter behind him, came back to her senses. Her head seemed like bursting, and her world was all confusion; but her first conscious thought was of that cake of chocolate. She had dropped it somewhere, somehow. She must find it. She crawled out past Angus; but when she saw what he was about, she made a low pitying sound, and Angus said:

"Oh, hullo! I had to take care of Pat. He was bleeding badly. Are you—hurt much?"

"I don't think so. Just my head, and my hands, I guess. And I'm sort of—sore all over. Where's the chocolate?" He thought her mind was wandering; but he said: "I came to try and get it, and I did, but Mr. Jenkins caught me here, and then Pat came. Did Mr. Jenkins get it? Where is he?"

She looked around to see where Mr. Jenkins was, and discovered the chocolate, crushed and flattened where the men in their fight had rolled on it. She retrieved it jealously, forgetting Mr. Jenkins; and Pat came groping back to consciousness again. She said: "Here it is! See?" Pat groaned, and she cried: "Oh! Give him this, Angus! Let him eat it."

"He doesn't need it yet. We've got to take care of this leg of his." "Let me," she said. She loosened the tourniquet, watching the wounds of entrance and of exit to see what flow of blood there was. "No big artery cut, I'm sure," she decided.

Angus recognized competence in her; and he watched her wet his handkerchief to make a cold pad to compress the wounds. He turned to look around, and saw Mr. Jenkins' pistol in a cranny among the rocks and picked it up. Then, remembering Romeo, he climbed to the ledge and saw the man not twenty yards away, stealth in his posture, creeping near. Angus raised the pistol, and Romeo whirled and ran, zigzagging like a snipe in flight to dodge the bullet he expected. But Angus did not fire. When Romeo was out of sight, McPhail remembered the knife the man had dropped and looked for it, and found it where it had slid down off the ledge.

Robin called to him: "We need something for a bandage." Angus descended to her side. A bandage? Some garment they might tear into strips. In this windy cold, no rag they wore could be spared. But Mr. Jenkins was somewhere below them, and he had no more need of clothing.

"I'll find something," Angus told Robin, and went down the rocky slope. He came to the ledge off which Pat and Mr. Jenkins in their fight had fallen. Mr. Jenkins lay like a rag beaten limp by rain, on his back, his eyes open; and Angus was shaken by the sight, till he realized that Mr. Jenkins was alive, was watching him.

Simplicity Wartime Fashions A Boon to Home Dressmakers

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

A WONDERFUL boon to home dressmakers is the simplicity which characterizes wartime fashions. With accent placed on fabric interest rather than on involved draping and gingerbread trimming, and with so many lovely rayon fabrics available within every budget, the girl who makes her own has a golden opportunity this season.

For utility frocks that look trim and correct for morning wear, for taking junior to school or for trips to the market, she may choose from any number of lightweight practical rayon fabrics that are as easy to tailor as they are pretty to see. Especially adaptable to this type of frock are the smart spun rayon constructions that are so popular for fashionable sportswear. These include fine linen-like weaves, hopsacking, sturdy homespun and basket weaves, shantungs and light-weight gabardines. In bright or pastel solid colors and prints as well as in this season's new checks and stripes, they are charming and fresh made up in tailored shirtwaist frocks, in shirt and skirt teams or in any of the many versions of gay peasant styles. For commuting and everyday town wear, dark-toned versions of the same practical fabrics make smart little short-sleeved jacket-and-skirt costumes or one-piece frocks that will look cool and trim whatever the temperature.

For the all-occasion daytime frock that goes smartly to business or takes you nicely from committee meeting to luncheon and on through the day's busy round of activities there is a wide variety of luxurious good-tailoring rayon fabrics such as supple crepes, fine shantungs, sleek jerseys and cool shirtings. Printed, plain or checked versions are equally popular for going-everywhere frocks. Dark-toned or colorfully printed sheers and crepes are excellent choices for the new suit-frocks, for summer town wear and offer the background ideal for fresh white lingerie touches such as collars and cuffs or dickeres of fine rayon marquisettes or linen-type spun rayon.

Coat-dress styling is stressed throughout costume design for summer. Very smart is the full-length front-buttoned version of the printed shirtwaist frock in fine rayon sheer shown to the left in the illustration. A striped floral patterning in white is fresh and cool on a dark green background in this attractive style which has little white composition buttons and narrow white belt as simple trimming.

A very feminine version of the two-piece suit-frock for summer is centered in the group. This attractive dress which can so easily be made by the home-dressmaker uses rose-colored fine rayon sheer with a smart white and green print patterning. The double ruffles at the turned-back V-neckline interpret a definitely new 1943 summer styling. Cuffed three-quarter length sleeves and dressy white buttons at the jacket front make it adaptable for morning-midnight wear.

Easy to drape and to tailor is the smooth gray-and-white polka-dotted rayon crepe chosen for the flattering one-piece daytime frock shown to the right. Styled on simple, softly tailored lines with dainty lingerie touches for added flattery, it is right for town and country all through the season.

After you have succeeded in making several pretty frocks such as here shown if you should grow ambitious to make a smart afternoon suit see the new handsome rayon tissue failles. Best-dressed women are wearing simple suits in suave lines done in navy or black faille aided and abetted with masses of snowy sheer frills. A lovely innovation this season is the use of light-colored rayon crepes, sheers and tissue failles in soft suit-frocks for furrough weddings. Pastel greens, blues, and pinks are first choices for these adaptable frocks that will continue to be important members of the bride's wardrobe when the ceremony is over.

Matching Mantilla

Because of the ingenuity and resourcefulness with which designers are dramatizing the ensemble idea the summer style picture is staging just one thrill after another in way of matching this with that. The newest sensation is the dress that has its own self-fabric or self-lace mantilla. Pictured is an exquisite new street-length dress-up frock of a print which patterns a black lace motif on a pale green rayon crepe, with a matching mantilla.

Pique for Dress And Accessories

Designers like to work with pique and this season more than ever crisp, ever smart and immaculate looking pique is playing an important role. Just now the call for all-white in smart afternoon frocks, in graduating dresses and even in wedding gowns as well as evening formals is answered in pique frocks that are fetchingly trimmed in handsome hand-crochet laces.

If you have a simple afternoon white pique dress you can convert it into a very lovely all-white frock by wearing froths of white organdy frills that flare out from the new plunging V-neckline. Cover a little calot with petals made of pique and you will have a hat and frock combination that will be admired wherever you go.

Pretty House Dresses

Many women who never have done their own housework are now forced for the lack of help to do it for the first time in their lives which accounts for the present unprecedented call for pretty house frocks. If she is a young housewife the new pinafore types will be her favorites. You can get the most adorable styles some all flutter with ruffles. Bordered chintz prints make up charmingly into pinafore fashions. For practical wear no-iron seersucker button-back pinafores are just what you will be wanting.

ON THE HOME FRONT

with RUTH WYETH SPEARS

SEW-ON covers of chintz or other smart cottons are always neat and trim and, since the pieces are all sewn to the old upholstery of the chair with rather long stitches, it is not difficult to remove the cover for washing or cleaning. If washed at home it is much easier to handle separate pieces than an entire slip cover.

A sew-on cover should be pinned with a 4-inch tuck-in around the spring seat and 1-inch seam allowances. Use tailor's chalk to mark stitching lines and indicate pieces to have welting stitched to edges. Here, welting is used for the side seams of the inside center back section; across the front of the seat; for the top and bottom of the outside; and all around the front of the arm sections. The sketch shows how welting and un-welting pieces are sewn in place. The welting hides the stitches if you use heavy duty thread matching the cord covering.

NOTE—The new BOOK 10 of the series of booklets offered with these articles gives other valuable pointers on making both sew-on covers and removable slip covers. BOOK 9 gives directions for repairing the springs of chairs before covering them. BOOK 9 and 10 are 15 cents each. Send your order to:

Trial Sans Prisoner

When a man indicted for a crime committed in Panama is a fugitive from justice, his trial is held without his presence, while the witnesses for the prosecution are alive, available and of sound memory, says Collier's. Recently, a safecracker began a six years' sentence within an hour after being captured, his trial and conviction having taken place three years before.

I SAID GOOD-BYE TO CONSTIPATION Harsh, medicinal laxatives only gripped me—and never really stopped my constipation. It always came back. Then I found out why. I just wasn't taking on enough "bulk"-forming foods. So I started eating KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN regularly and drinking plenty of water. And—I "Joined the Regulars!" That's because KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN gets at the cause of constipation like mine and corrects it—by helping to form a soft, bulky mass in the intestines. If your trouble is what mine was, why not try KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN? It's made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek and tastes swell.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Considering cost of oil, gas, tires and upkeep, it is estimated that the cost of driving the average car for 1000 miles at 45 miles per hour is $22.03. At 25 mph the cost is cut to $14.36 and at 35 mph it is held to $17.88.

Malaya and the Netherlands Indies were the only sources of natural rubber in the world which had been successfully exploited to an important extent prior to the present war.

Rubber and gas rationing did not drastically cut motortruck operations last year. Official figures show that during 1942 trucks hauled an estimated 46 billion tons of freight on main rural highways, compared with 46.7 billion in the more normal 1940.

Abnormal Tire Wear

If tires show abnormal wear the trouble may be caused by under-inflation or misaligned wheels, according to the California State Automobile association. Another cause of uneven tire wear is unbalanced wheels. At high speed a wheel only slightly out of balance develops a powerful centrifugal force. This force jerks the wheel up and down as it rotates. In addition to abnormal up and down motion there also may be side motion as the heavy spot moves fore and aft. Unbalanced wheels frequently cause shimmy, abnormal wear in steering mechanism, as well as cupped spots in the tire tread.

MEETING WITH THE PRESIDENT

Certain senators who have been working backstage for a streamlined "war cabinet" got some interesting ammunition when they cross-examined one of the President's close associates at a closed-door committee meeting.

They learned that cabinet meetings, except for an increase in the number of participants, still are being conducted on an informal, crack-barrel basis, with no plan or system.

The weekly meetings are conducted without an agenda. Cabinet officers and agency heads never know what will be discussed from week to week, frequently come unprepared for policy questions that affect them.

Senators who have been digging into the matter feel that the White House secretariat should contact department and agency heads several days before a cabinet meeting to learn what problems they want to discuss with the President. On the basis of this, as well as matters the President himself intends to bring up, an advance memorandum could be prepared and distributed before the meeting.

Besides regular cabinet officers, there are usually a dozen other top government officials at White House sessions, including Harry Hopkins, Manpower Chief Paul McNutt, WPB Chief Donald Nelson, Farm Czar Chester Davis, Economic Stabilizer James Byrnes, Admiral William D. Leahy.

Time was when disputes between departments and agencies were ironed out at a cabinet meeting, but not now. Even disputes affecting major military and domestic policies are passed over. Favorite trick of department heads, who have a ticklish matter on their minds, is to wait until the meeting is finished, then pass a note to the President stating their particular problem, with a request for a private audience.

FOUR GERMANS WATCH U. S. A.

There are four Germans who know the United States better than any others. Where they are now reveals what importance Hitler attaches to the United States and its influence on the neutral countries. For all four Germans are located in key neutral capitals where they can watch Americans and keep their ears open for news of U. S. diplomatic and military maneuvers, and counteract American influence.

Here are the four German experts on the U. S. A.

Franz von Papen, German military attache in Washington during the last war when he engineered plans to blow up the Welland canal and brain-trusted various other sabotage.

Hans Dieckhoff, ex-ambassador to Washington and one of the most skillful to be stationed here in years.

Kurt Sell, correspondent of the official German News Agency DNB, long stationed in Washington where he was generally popular. Unofficially he acted frequently for the German Embassy.

In Europe these four are now stationed as follows: Von Papen in Turkey; Dieckhoff in Spain; Thomsen in Sweden; and Sell in Portugal.

These are countries which, if they moved their neutral position one way or the other, might decide the fate of the war.

DEFEAT IN BURMA

Recent events in Burma unfortunately have pretty much punctured the one-time world-beating reputation of Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell, supreme commander in the India-Burma theater.

The Japs are reported to have only about 50,000 men in Burma. How many the British have in the entire India area is a military secret but it can't be less than a million. However, there is one factor mitigating the otherwise dismal fiasco of General Wavell—most of his army is Indian.

Indian troops have fought well in other wars, but not in this one. Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, vitally interested in reopening the Burma road, recently has hinted at the reason.

Would it not be better, he tactfully suggested, to settle India's political problems rather than lose China? In other words, Indian troops with no independence to look forward to, are not going to fight their best.

CAPITAL CHAFF

Generals Giraud and DeGaulle are going to unite on at least one thing—an ultimatum to Admiral Robert of Martinique that he resign. WPB's Ex Vice Chairman Ferd Eberstadt says: "Before I came to Washington my crowd in Long Island hated Ickes, and I was provincial enough to agree with them. But I have found that he is one of the best executives in Washington and one of the few who always keeps his word. When he promises to do a thing, he does it."

POST-WAR PLANNING SHOULD BE REALISTIC

THE TALK WE HEAR of post-war planning consists almost entirely of impractical and impossible idealism. We talk as though America would mother the earth, would provide the brotherly love, the milk and honey, the ever-abundant life that would make people of every nation happy. To attempt any such program would mean merely to liquidate America. The Axis nations and their satellites must undoubtedly be policed for a long period. America cannot do all of that policing. We can only do our part.

When the war ends, millions of people of enemy and conquered nations must be succored and fed. America cannot do all of that. We can only do our part. If we attempt more than we can do, we will but liquidate America through the bankruptcy route. We will ruin the American people, American industry and the American government. Our impoverishment will benefit no other nation, but it will mark the end of all plans for world betterment.

Our post-war planning must be along realistic lines, only flavored with such idealism as can be applied in a practical way. Only such a program can be worked out to a satisfactory conclusion. We must think of America, just as the English people will think of England; as the Russians will think of Russia.

War will not have obliterated selfishness, and America cannot be the only unselfish nation if we are to continue to live and exert an influence.

Churchill has very definitely stated that he does not intend to liquidate His Majesty's empire. That was a practical statement without any false idealism. American statesmen must consider post-war problems from that same practical viewpoint as they pertain to the United States. We, alone, cannot hold the idealistic bag, as all too many of our people would have us do if they really mean what they are saying.

A bankrupt and dead America would not be a world asset.

LIVING STANDARDS IN 'BACKWARD' NATIONS

AS AN INCENTIVE for higher wage scales through which to raise living standards in the backward nations, why not an international tariff system based on the cost of production in exporting countries? For example:

If it costs as much, or more, to produce 100 pounds of pork in Canada as in the United States, the American pork market would be open to Canada.

If the cost of producing an automobile in Canada were greater than in the United States, Canada to collect a tariff equal to the difference in production costs on automobiles imported from the United States.

If the cheap labor and sweat-shop methods of Japan produce cotton fabrics at 50 per cent of the cost of producing similar fabrics in America, Japanese fabrics imported into the United States to pay an import duty of 50 per cent.

No import duties to be charged on materials or products imported into countries where such materials or products are not produced.

Import duties to change as production costs go up or down in the exporting or importing countries.

Tariffs to be fixed by an international commission with a veto power on the part of each nation as to import duties on materials or products coming into its territory, but such veto to exclude the import of such products from all countries.

Such a system would tend to raise wage scales as a means of reducing or eliminating tariff walls, or would afford protection for the wage scales and standards of living in the more progressive nations.

It would provide a means of helping people of those nations in which standards are low, such as India, China, Japan, and, proportionately, those of many other nations. It would practically close American markets to competitive merchandise from such countries until such time as wage scales and working conditions equalled those of this country, which provides approximately 50 per cent of the purchasing power of the world, a market consuming 50 per cent of the products of the world.

THIRTY-FIVE THOUSAND PUBLICITY writers are employed and this year the government is spending $90,000,000 of our money to sell us the United States of America as it is or as it may be. And the law is that no government revenue may be spent for publicity unless specifically authorized by congress.

VICTORY GARDENS AND TWO-LEGGED BUGS

THE METROPOLITAN CITY DWELLER, should he plant a victory garden on the vacant lot next door, must employ an armed guard to keep the two-legged bugs from harvesting his crop. In rural communities, such as the one in which I live, victory gardens are entirely safe. Even watermelons planted along the edge of a sidewalk will not tempt the small boys. To all of them a Victory garden is hallowed ground.

Death, Destruction, From Six-State Flood

Rushing water from rivers swollen by several days of incessant rain overflows onto six midwestern states. Thousands of persons in the inundated areas were left homeless by the flood, and so much planting has been ruined that food production in the area is seriously threatened. PEAKING OF PORTS
By Ed. McShane

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

COUNT FLEET, the horse of the year, may easily become the horse of the century. Winner of the Wood, the Derby and the Preakness, the Count has been compared endlessly to Man o' War. The urge to compare them will grow if he goes on to win the other three-year-old stakes for which he may be pointed.

At one time Count Fleet could have been bought for $4,500 or less from John D. Hertz. His possibilities seemed far from outstanding. He was rather an odd looking yearling, and even Hertz, student of breeding and distinguished turfman, was lucky to hold on to him. He just didn't look like he'd turn into a winning race horse.

But the fact that such a horse as the Count could have been purchased for so little shouldn't influence you into quitting your job in search of a bargain race horse. Joe Williams, a New York sports writer, tells the results of a study made by Col. Joe Estes of Lexington, a national authority on the subject.

Results of the Study

Colonel Estes made a study of all the thoroughbred foals born in 1934 and followed them through to 1939, or through four years of racing.

Here are the results—and they are a typical illustration:

Of the 4,834 foals born in 1934, 3,080 survived to get to the track, or 63 per cent, which means that 37 per cent never started in a single race. Of the 3,080 that did get to the races, 2,099 won one or more races, this being less than 50 per cent.

According to Williams, the Colonel's study shows further that the average starter in this grouping ran in 32.2 races during the four-year period studied. The average horse won 3.7 races and earned $3,553. This amounted to an average of $108 a start.

Only 226 of the 4,834 foals—about one out of 21—earned as much as $1,000. There were 157 stakes winners, less than 4 per cent of the total.

Yes, Count Fleet could have been purchased for a ridiculously low price, and he already has won more than $200,000. But Count Fleet isn't just another race horse. He's a minor miracle.

Premature

Give the Count a little time and he may hang up as fine a record as Man o' War. But the comparison is somewhat premature for the moment. The Count has won only three major engagements as a three-year-old while Man o' War, having skipped the Wood and the Derby, went on to win the Preakness, the Withers, the Belmont, the Dwyer, the Travers and the Lawrence Realization and the Jockey Club Stakes, with a few minor triumphs scattered among them. But time may see the Count equal this record, or better it.

However, it isn't necessary to go all the way back to Man o' War to make comparisons. In 1937 War Admiral, as a three-year-old, was kicking up a lot of dust. In case you've forgotten, he was quite a horse.

War Admiral was similar to the Count in quite a few ways. He won only three of his six starts as a two-year-old, but found himself as a three-year-old. He won the Chesapeake Stakes, the Derby, the Preakness and the Belmont. Injured in the Belmont, he was laid up until fall when he returned to Maryland to win two stakes at Laurel, and climaxed his campaign by winning the first Pimlico Special.

Two Defeats

As a four-year-old the Admiral won nine times in 11 starts. His twin defeats came in the Massachusetts Handicap, when he ran out of the money for the only time in his life, and in the Pimlico Special, which was a match race with Seabiscuit. His victories included the Widener, the Wilson, the Saratoga Handicap, the Whitney and the Jockey Club gold cup.

The Count has captured the public's imagination. Even when he runs away from his rivals the race is thrilling. The Preakness, for instance, resembled a contest only for the split second that the colts came out of the gate. New Moon was a stride in front. Then the Count took the lead. It was no longer a race. But a great colt was out there running magnificently. He increased his lead to five lengths, then moved just fast enough to hold it there.

There was no close finish, but the onlookers roared their appreciation. They were paying their homage to a champion.

SPORTS SHORTS

Branch Rickey, a gifted speaker, averaged three addresses a day on behalf of the war loan drive.

Arday Keller of the St. Louis Browns once played with the House of David.

Jimmy Dykes, White Sox manager, once made five hits in five times up off Yankee pitching, each hit on the first pitch.

Indiana university's pistol team finished its season with 16 victories in 17 telegraphic intercollegiate meets.

Inside Story Of Toulon

By J. C. Fernand-Laurent

(WJU Feature—Through special arrangement with Collier's Weekly)

It was nothing but German stupidity that lost Hitler the French fleet last November, and the arms and munitions at the great naval base of Toulon. I know the story, because I was in Toulon.

Admiral De Laborde, the French commander, had received no recent instructions from Vichy. The only orders in his possession were those dating from the armistice, commanding him to resist all aggression from whatever source, and to sabotage the fleet rather than surrender it.

These orders never had been countermanded. Preparations for sabotage had been made. On the morning of November 27, Vichy, in the name of Marshal Petain and as ordered from Berlin, tried to rescind this order by telephone from Vichy to Toulon.

The new instructions authorized surrender of the fleet to the Germans. But the telephone was not functioning.

Why not? The truth is simple.

Germans Cut Wires to Isolate.

The German commanders at Toulon, having completed encirclement of the place and not wishing to be disturbed in carrying out their intentions, cut every telephone wire on the night of the 26th, and jammed all radio transmission in order to isolate the naval base from the rest of France—including Vichy. It is for this reason alone that Vichy's orders to surrender the fleet never arrived—until too late to save the ships for Germany.

Here was Justice: self-administered!

Many accounts have been published concerning what happened at Toulon and why it happened. Most of the accounts have contained mistakes. This article, I believe, is the first true story of the heroic end of the major part of the French navy.

On November 27 I was near Toulon at the home of a member of our underground movement. We were awakened a little before seven in the morning by the crash of explosions.

Germans Filter In At Night.

During the night, the German troops had filtered through the sleeping city. They encountered no one. The French sailors were aboard their ships, the infantry and the Senegalese were in the arsenal, the forts and the casemats. The Germans hesitated, losing precious time.

After a while, two columns formed, one heading toward the arsenal, the other toward the docks. Soon the Nazis were throwing themselves into every boat they could find, crowding upon pontoons they had brought with them. Suddenly a gun boomed from the flagship.

Gun Signal Booms.

It was the signal—the order to sabotage all ships, to destroy port installations, to spike the guns of the coastal batteries. Aboard the 70 vessels moored or anchored in the harbor, commanders were at their posts. They gave the pre-arranged orders. Soon the old dock, the water front, the harbor, and the roadstead—the anchorage where France's proud ships had lived—were no more than cemeteries.

Fresh explosions came from the arsenal. Machines and workshops in the factories were being destroyed. To the south, flames and clouds of smoke from burning ammunition dumps rose high. All around the base, from the Saron to Cape Brun, there were new explosions. Mortars, huge rifles, shells in vast quantity—all were destroyed. France's most powerful naval base, the work of 20 years, was a mass of smoking wreckage.

Blind with rage, the Germans stormed the arsenal, killed the sentinels and forced open the heavy gates. They were too late. There was hand-to-hand fighting in the workshops between Nazi soldiers and French workers, many of whom were killed or wounded.

In their rage the invaders then turned against the cadet school, surrounded the youngsters and by weight of numbers manacled them, thrust them into trucks and rushed them to a concentration camp. Several times along the route, crowds tried to free the lads.

First reports after the tragedy said that crews had gone down with their ships. This was not so. The truth was simpler but no less fine: Officers and sailors, to a man, having done their work of destruction, remained at their posts to the last moment, and then in perfect order abandoned their ships and reached shore.

A number of both officers and men were explosion victims; some others were drowned.

When the crews got ashore, they met heavy German forces, and most of them were taken prisoner.

Modern Science Brings Forth Amazing Devices To Defeat Axis Powers

NEW YORK.—A gray cylinder packed with destructive power sufficient to knock out an armor-plated behemoth of the seas plunges through the water toward an Axis target. Neither waves nor ocean currents swerve it from its course.

The enemy battleship—an example of modern industrialism at its belligerent best—shifts desperately in an unsuccessful attempt to dodge this doom-laden missile of mid-20th century science and ingenuity. The speeding cylinder strikes and the ocean-going fortress lurches. Water geysers into the air as the ship shudders to an explosion whose reverberations reach into the stratosphere.

An American-made torpedo, with a mechanical brain and a mechanical crew more efficient than the best of human beings, has provided the blow that counts out another Axis battleship.

Although little has yet been written of the torpedo, it is one of the most intricately constructed and delicately balanced achievements of present-day armament. Much of the mechanism which makes the torpedo apparently motive with the logic of a highly trained human mind must remain sealed against public knowledge for the duration.

However, that which can be told reveals how once again the marvels of modern science have been harnessed to the war effort.

The "brainpower" of the torpedo is the gyroscope, revolving at an all but incalculable speed. Once the course of the torpedo is set, the gyro—with weirdly human power—directs it on its way, counteracting its slight inclination to divert from the target.

Thus serving as a mechanical pilot, the gyroscope has the seemingly uncanny power of pulling the torpedo back into line regardless of what conflicting forces it encounters.

The present-day "gyro" is the intricate development of what earlier in the century was a child's toy. It was back in 1911 that American first gyroscope was completed, according to William Heine, superintendent, and Rolland Nordquist, chief designer of the plant, who had a hand in designing much of the machinery.

From the plant, the majority of the gyroscopes are shipped to the factory of the Amertorp company, a subsidiary of the American Can company, where finished torpedoes are being manufactured.

The finished torpedo which, foot for foot and pound for pound, has been called the most expensive and delicate of all naval "vessels," is more than 20 feet long, weighs about 3,000 pounds and costs about $12,000.

Each torpedo carries its own "engine room" in which the motor which sends it speeding through the water is anchored. First of the torpedo's four sections is the warhead which contains hundreds of pounds of powerful explosive. In the second section in the center is a big compressed-air chamber. The third section contains fuel, water and lubricating oil for use in the engine room, which is in the fourth section. At the tail end or the fourth section are vertical and horizontal rudders, similar in theory to those on an airplane and two four-bladed propellers which turn in opposite directions.

Old-Timers Perform Important Service in Forest Industries Throughout Nation

More than a thousand "old-timers" in the forest industries—some of them octogenarians—are providing proof on a wholesale basis these days, that great age doesn't necessarily bar a man from performing important service as a producer in the Arsenal of Democracy.

Hard hit by a shortage of some 80,000 men, the forest industries have welcomed the volunteered services of the rugged oldsters, most of whom had previously retired from labor. But what has surprised the foremen and superintendents is the exceptional skill, agility, and endurance which these veterans of the forests and the mills have shown.

Some of the old-timers are actually holding "key" positions—jobs which call for top-rank skill, such as adjusting and operating the grinding machines which sharpen the teeth on 60-foot band-saws with micrometer exactitude. A few, however, insist upon following the muscular trade of their younger years, as fallers and buckers, and find that when it comes to swinging axes and sawing fallen trunks they can still keep up with many a man younger.

Even those who can't keep pace in violent exertions, find plenty of jobs where they can "plug a gap" left by some former worker now in the army or navy. There are, for example, railroad switches to be operated, axes to be sharpened, boards to be graded, and donkey engines to be run, logs to be scaled, and clean-up chores to be done.

Thus, in scores of ways these old-timers are helping the forest industries to produce the tremendous volume of lumber, plywood, pulpwood and other American wood products which army and navy officials estimate will amount this year to as much as 120 million tons—nearly 30 million tons more than even the nation's total production of steel.

Many of the old-timers who will help to produce this total have been in retirement for as long as two decades and are pleasantly surprised upon their return to find that many of the forests in which they worked 20 years ago are in better condition now than they were then.

Each part of a gyroscope must be checked for the tiniest of scratches or the most minute of cracks. This worker studies one of the jewel-like parts of a "gyro."

youngsters played with a top which could be placed at an angle on a slim pedestal and would keep its balance.

Then, Elmer Sperry pointed out the "gyro's" potentialities to the U. S. navy and it became a weapon of war. However, even during World War No. 1, the gyroscope had not reached its present-day perfection and there are said to be a number of cases when this precision pilot's failure to function properly caused a torpedo to circle on its course and sink its own ship.

So delicately adjusted is this high powered and efficient piece of mechanism—no larger than a clenched fist—that a speck of dust or an extra drop of oil on the bearing from a hypodermic needle can destroy its balance or reduce its speed.

Parts of the gyro are measured to one ten-thousandth of an inch. The average American can best comprehend what such measurements mean when he understands that a human hair is only 25 one-thousandths of an inch in diameter.

In an eastern plant of the American Can company, which is making records in the manufacture of these "instruments that think," a group of the nation's most expert watchmakers work on the assembly of the gyroscope in a glassed-in room as carefully guarded from dust as a hospital nursery is from germs.

Conversion of the plant, which formerly produced precision machinery for the manufacture of tin containers, is one of the industrial romances of the nation's war effort. Asked by Washington to convert to production of gyroscopes, the company found it necessary to design and construct special machines for the making of gyro parts. Six months later, the

FUN FOR YOUR FAMILY

By MISS ABBIE CONDIT

National Recreation Association.

Buttons have always held a strange fascination for grownups and children, but now they are coming into their own for a very practical reason: With dresses becoming plainer and materials less interesting in wartime, trimmings are taking a new turn and we are discovering that buttons can do more to brighten up an old dress than almost any other ornament.

Of course many kinds of buttons have disappeared from the store counters because of war shortages, but with a little paint you can dress up old buttons to look like new. Go through your button box and see what you have on hand. Then get out your paints and go to work.

Cover the button first with a coat of white shellac and allow to dry. Mix a small quantity of oil paint to the right shade and thin somewhat with turpentine. Apply this to the top of the button and allow it to dry thoroughly. You may then add any design you wish in a contrasting color. If the button is to be washed, protect it with one or two layers of white shellac.

Carved Buttons.

Buttons carved from wood are beautiful. They can be made in any size or shape, and one also has a choice of lovely natural colors which can be found in almost any locality. Here is a list of possible woods with their colors: holly, white; maple or pine, natural; ebony, black; walnut, brown; mahogany or rosewood, red; cedar, natural marked with red; basswood, natural (soft for carving).

Nut and fruit pits have been popular as decorative buttons the past few years and are easily made. Whole nuts can also be used if they are sorted carefully as to size and shape. A small screw eye inserted through the shell will enable you to sew the buttons to a dress or packet. Be sure the nuts are perfectly dry and shellac them before using. Attractive buttons can be made by cutting black walnuts crosswise into several layers. Smooth the surfaces with a file and shellac. A small drill will make the button eyes.

Chessmen are easily made into amusing buttons by adding screw eyes to the different pieces. The pawns might be used as buttons and a single knight or rook added for a neck ornament. Checkers can be used in the same manner.

Try making earrings to match the trimming on your dress. Use old frames of discarded earrings, prying off the ornamental part and attaching buttons to match those on your dress. This is done by sealing the back of the button to the earring with household glue or cement. If you wear a comb in your hair, it can also be decorated with buttons by using strong thread or millinery wire.

A charming and colorful button boutonniere can be concocted from a variety of glass buttons with some raffia or scrap leather to complete the design.

Selecting Buttons.

People are often apt to take buttons for granted without realizing what care is necessary in selecting buttons. For a print dress, use plain buttons that match the background color. If you have a dress with a tiny bit of color that you would like to emphasize, you can do it by adding buttons in that color. A plain fabric may be trimmed with buttons of any contrasting color. Wooden buttons are good with knobby fabrics and plaid materials.

AMERICA IN ACTION

ADVANCED ELECTRICAL TRAINING

A modern military airplane has at least three electrical systems. They include:

- (1) The radio system, maintained by one set of specialists,
- (2) The electrical instruments, taken care of by another set of specialists,
- (3) And the generators, starters, retracting gear, signal - warning, lighting and ignition systems. These make up a province large enough to occupy the exclusive attention of a third corps of specialists. Graduates of the army air forces technical training command's advanced electrical course at Chanute Field, Ill., are the men who do this important work.

The necessary fundamentals are taught right at the outset. The first few days of the course are devoted to basic principles—electrical maintenance systems and records, the inspection system and the principles of batteries and wiring.

The theoretical groundwork having been laid, the students then plunge into the study of generators and the auxiliary power systems of airplanes, and then those of specific models. Such systems are first studied in detail, then actually connected up and run in "mockup" form; that is, with all connections intact just as they would be in the plane, with all the elements mounted on a single panel. The maintenance of storage batteries is taken up, and at all points the course stresses "trouble-shooting," the finding of defects and running down sources of failure.

PETER COMFORTS PERSECUTED CHRISTIANS

LESSON TEXT—I Peter 3:13-17; 4:12-16; 5:6-10.

GOLDEN TEXT—For it is better, if the will of God be so, that ye suffer for well-doing, than for evil-doing.—I Peter 3:17.

What shall we do? Where shall we turn? Is there no help for us? Such are the natural and understandable cries of those who bear the heavy heartbreak of persecution. God's Word has the answer, for from the very beginning the followers of Christ have had to meet that problem.

Peter is especially the apostle of comfort, and the portion now before us is rich in helpful instruction. His word to persecuted people is five-fold.

I. Do Not Be Afraid—Christ Is Lord (3:13-17).

By doing good the Christian will escape much suffering (v. 13), but if even then it comes, he is not to be afraid (v. 14). He is to sanctify Christ in his heart, that is, fully recognize the holiness of Christ and all that He is and can do for him. This is to be done in his heart. That means the exercise of full faith in Christ the Lord as the indwelling Presence. How then can he be afraid?

Note that this is not just a subjective spiritual exercise for his own enjoyment—it will show in his "good manner of life in Christ" which will put his persecutors "to shame" (v. 16). How effectively that has worked only recently in Germany, Norway and elsewhere.

II. Do Not Be Surprised—the Enemy Will Attack (4:12, 13).

Surprise attack is effective. Remember Pearl Harbor! Satan is an expert in strategy, and is eager to keep Christians in an easy and comfortable mood, so that he may strike a vicious blow when it is not expected. We best prepare to meet him when we recognize that persecution and suffering will come.

We are to bear in mind that it is not some "strange thing" which has happened; we who suffer as Christians are "partakers of Christ's sufferings." Joy and glory are ahead.

III. Do Not Be Ashamed—You Suffer for Christ (4:14-16).

Sadness and depression rest upon the one who suffers for his own evil deeds, but those who suffer for Christ's sake may be ever rejoicing. Can you not see that "the spirit of glory and the Spirit of God" are resting (v. 14) even now on some who sit in prisons and concentration camps? What a glorious picture of His grace!

It is proper to observe here that the believer is not to be guilty of that which justly brings the law's condemnation (v. 15). Do not fail to note the last of the list of crimes—"meddler in other men's matters." Has not just that caused endless trouble in the church, and harmed its testimony before the world? Let's quit meddling!

IV. Do Not Worry—He Careth for You (5:6, 7).

Worry! Worry! How it does crowd itself into our thinking. Yes, we know we are Christians, that we are unjustly accused or persecuted, that we are suffering for Christ's sake. That's all true, but how is it all coming out? What about my family? Will they harm my children? If I do survive will I be able to start life anew? And so on—questions without end; and soon comes the corroding touch of worry.

What shall we do? The answer is plain. Cast all your care on Christ—"He careth for you" (v. 7). That takes an act of faith just as it does to become a Christian in the first place, but it works.

The cure for all anxiety is right there—but it can only be reached by the path of humility. "Humble yourselves" (v. 6). There is the gateway to comfort, and to true exaltation in God's own good time (cf. Jas. 6:4-10).

V. Do Not Waver—God Is Your Strength (5:8-10).

Steady, perfected, established in Christ, sure of his eternal destiny and with the eyes of faith seeing the glory to come—such is the man who is ready and able to meet the devil when, like a roaring lion, he seeks to disturb and devour God's people. The believer should be ready and equipped.

That does not mean that the Christian sits with his hands folded waiting in a fatalistic way for the inevitable to happen. Never! He is "on the alert" with his spiritual ears attuned to hear the approach of the enemy's "bombers." He is "sober and watchful" against the "roaring lion" (v. 8).

Satan is unusually busy in our day. Alert Christian people see his deadly onslaughts on their brethren, which are possibly more severe now than for many years. He is seeking to break them down physically, mentally and spiritually, to make them fearful, to make them timid about work for Christ, to limit their usefulness, and to steal from them their victorious assurance. He is busy—let us be alert against him.

What to Do

By PHYLLIS BELMONT

Nowadays we must take better care than ever before, of our precious electrical appliances. Don't use your vacuum cleaner with a tangled cord. Be sure you empty your cleaner of dirt, at least once a week, oftener if necessary.

Be sure you loosen the tension in the wringer rolls when not using your washer—and be sure never to overload your washer with too many dirty clothes.

Defrost your refrigerator regularly—more than once a week if conditions warrant. Don't let people in a hurry wrench out the ice trays because they'll loosen the inside "works" as well.

'Can-Opener' Planes Are Poison to German Tanks

LONDON.—The secret of the Royal Air force's tank-busting airplanes, which have earned the name "can-openers" because of their work in North Africa, was officially revealed.

The "can-openers" are Hurricanes designed especially for use against armored vehicles. They carry two 40-mm. guns, one in each wing. The guns are capable of automatic or single shot fire with a shell weighing 2 1/2 pounds.

The gun itself, specially designed for aircraft use, weighs only 320 pounds. The plane also carries two 303 Browning machine guns.

Invents Unique Device From Wrecks of Planes

CAIRO.—Technical Sergt. Clyde L. Collins, Missoula, Mont., is credited by the U. S. army air force with invention of a unique device which charges plane batteries, checks all wiring, lighting, controls and regulates motors and generators.

The instrument was made from pieces of salvaged Messerschmitts, Heinkels, Capronis, Stukas, Hurricanes and Brewster aircraft.

Conserve Bottles

MILK · BEVERAGE · BEER

Conserve BOTTLES as you save tin cans and waste kitchen fats... it's patriotic and practical! Modern bottling equipment restilizes empty MILK, BEVERAGE and BEER BOTTLES... gets them ready to make more trips to bring your family these products more quickly in glass bottles, the most efficient containers. Why leave them absentee at home... not serving you?

It's patriotic and practical to join the Program for Bottle Conservation.
