DEEP WATER BY BEN AMES WILLIAMS

THE STORY SO FAR: Robin Dale, a young artist, goes to Moose Bay to see her flance, Will McPhall. When Will is accidentally killed, his brother Angus blames Robin. She goes to Angus' fishing cruiser to see him. While she is on board the boat sails, carrying her, Angus, Pat Donohoe and Romeo toward Labrador. The boat is seized by a man named Jenkins who is trying to escape from a government patrol. The boat runs aground and sinks. When Jenkins tries to start the location food kins tries to steal the last of the food, there is a free-for-all fight. Coming on Jenkins lying on the ground, Angus has just asked, "Are you hurt?" Jenkins looks at him in contempt and fear.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER XVI

Angus jumped down beside the other man. "Hurt?" he muttered.

Mr. Jenkins grinned at him. "What do you think?" he countered in sardonic question. "Think I'm lying here to watch the pretty clouds?" His lips twisted venomously; his words were vitriol, cursing Angus, cursing Pat, cursing Robin most of all.

He had not moved at all, lay flat on his back in the beating rain. The raging anger boiling out of his helpless body was a terrible thing to see. Angus said gently: "I'll get you under cover, Jenkins." He bent to lift the man, and Mr. Jenkins' hands flew up and fastened weakly on his throat. Angus caught the other's wrists, tore those hands away, flung them down. Jenkins had no strength in him. His hands were as weak as a child's. "Be sensible man," Angus said. "Let me take care of Jenkins spoke in sudden full surrender. "All right. I'm done. My back's broken, McPhail. Do as you please.

"We'll do what we can," Angus said. He lifted the hurt man, man-aged somehow to carry him up to the shelter. From weakness or from pain Mr. Jenkins lapsed into unconsciousness again on that short journey. Robin moved aside when Angus appeared and he laid Mr. Jenkins in the shelter.

Mr. Jenkins opened his eyes. He was, clearly, paralyzed from the waist down, yet there was life in him. When Angus gave him a bit of chocolate, he gobbled it without

Robin said: "Now we must bandage Pat's leg somehow, Angus. Isn't there anything?" "Handkerchiefs not big enough?"

"No, not nearly." "My underwear, then." Angus started to unbutton his shirt; but

Mr. Jenkins spoke.

"Take my shirt, McPhail," he said. His tone was mild enough. The fog of battle rage had left him, and he was sane again. "It's white, and I don't need it. There's no warmth in it, anyway; not enough to do me any good."

Robin felt her eyes sting. She thought she could almost like Mr. Jenkins. Pat spoke for all of them. You had the makings of a man, Jenkins," he said. "It's a sorry end you've come to."

Mr. Jenkins chuckled. "I'm luckier than the rest of you," he said. with grim humor. "You're cold all over; but I'm only cold from the waist up. Can't feel it, in my legs, at all. I'd trade my shoes for a flannel shirt, right now."

Robin still wore McPhail's leather jacket, with Pat's great stag shirt over it. She began to strip them off. Mr. Jenkins should have the one, Pat the other. They protested; but Angus supported her and she had her way.

By the time Pat's leg was bandaged, early dusk was settling around them. Angus distributed bits of chocolate to each of them. Robin, chewing her morsel, making it last as long as possible, felt warmth and strength run through her body like a flood.

For the night they all packed into the shelter side by side; first Mr. Jenkins, then Pat, then Robin, then Angus himself in the open end, with Mr. Jenkins' oilskin for protection against the rain. Dark came down, and Robin pressed nearer Pat. Angus sat like a wall between her and the weather. After a while she spoke to him.

"Come closer," she said. "We can all get under here."

"I've the oilskin. I'm all right." "I need you to keep me warm. Lie back against me. Take it off and tuck it around us."

He hesitated, then obeyed. She drew him back against her, in her arms. He spread the oilskin coat to cover them both.

"There!" she cried, almost contentedly, but he felt her trembling.

"Cold?" he asked. "No. Just-scared."

"Don't be. Keep your nerve. We'll manage. The rain can't last forever. And we won't starve. I'll get some fish tomorrow, trap them in the shallows when the tide goes out. Then there are shellfish, snails at least, in the seaweed. We'll find food, something."

After a moment she said softly: "Angus, I'm glad you're not here alone. If this was going to happen to you-I'm glad I'm with you.'

He said, after a little hesitation, in a defensive tone: "Don't be afraid. We'll come through."

She felt chilled, rebuffed by the remote impersonality of his words.

in her arms he seemed infinitely far away. She said: "I'm all right in daylight." Night was full of terrors; and sleet and rain came on a howling, hungry wind. They were silent for a while, and she felt his shoulders against her breast relax in weary stupor that counterfeited sleep. Her eyes were wide, staring into blackness. Once she felt Pat stir and mutter; and she whispered:

"All right, Pat?"

"Sure, ma'am, fine." She thought presently that she was the only one of them still awake. She held Angus closer, brooding over him. Somewhere outside the shelter a rock slid and rolled down the slope below them, the sounds growing less as it bounded toward the sea. That sharpened all her senses. Something had set the rock rolling. It must be Romeo, prowling near.

But she did not rouse Angus till a little later she saw a darker shape in the darkness a dozen feet away. Then dreadful terror filled her; and she spoke in McPhail's ear.

"Angus!" She felt him wake. "Romeo's sneaking up on us. See him, there, in front of you."

McPhail sat up. He cried in sharp challenge: "That you, Romeo? What do you want?"

Romeo without answering, raced away, scrambling up the slope. They heard the rattle of rocks dislodged by his flying feet. From the safety of the ledge above where they lay, he flung imprecations back at them; yet even while he cursed them all, he moved farther and farther away till the sound of his babbling rage grew faint and died.

Robin said wretchedly: "Poor man! Maybe he just wanted to get warm. Can't we take him in, give him a chance to-get out of the rain?"

Angus did not reply. She thought of Romeo running to and fro like an animal, pitifully questing in the night for shelter. Cold crept into her; and somewhere far below them she heard the growling of the hungry sea.

Robin woke before the others in the morning. It was daylight when she roused, a gray hopeless dawn. She would not wake them; but while she lay cramped and stiff, holding herself motionless so that Angus might not be disturbed, she heard. far away across the island, a cry She knew it must be Romeo; and she shuddered, thinking he was like a coyote howling from sheer loneliness, thrust out of their small society into the naked emptiness of this rocky, rain-swept world. She pitied him, and wished they might take him in to share their slight shelter, and when Angus woke at last, she suggested this. "I heard him crying, just a few minutes ago," she said. "It was pretty terrible. Can't he be with Angus stood up, stiff with cold 'I'll have a look around," he said. "I'll talk to him." He scaled the slope to the ledge above them and went out of their sight. A moment later they heard him shout, and shout again, the sounds receding. Robin thought he was trying to find Romeo, calling to the man.

He was gone what seemed a long time; and when he came back, she saw in his eyes something like despair. He squatted facing them and said quietly: "Romeo's gone. A fisherman took him off."

Robin felt her heart pound. Mr. Jenkins began to swear in a still, vitriolic way. Angus explained: "When I came up on the cairn, I could just see the boat, a dory with a sail. It was half a mile away toward shore, just going out of sight in the rain. I yelled, but they didn't sities. She knew she loved him; yet even hear me.'

Pat asked, as though anxious to be sure: "A fisherman?" Angus nod-ded. Pat frowned in a puzzled way. 'Now what would a fisherman be doing off here so early in the morn-

Angus suggested: "Maybe they saw our monument last night and came off to see who was here."

Robin looked at him. "Then Romeo would tell them he built the monument, wouldn't he? So they'll not think anything more about it when they see it still here. So they won't come for us."

Angus said: "He'll tell them about

Mr. Jenkins spoke in a quizzical amusement. "You trust men too easily, McPhail. Romeo won't tell them anything. Why should he? I beat him up. Miss Dale there cut his cheek open. He knows you don't his cheek open. He knows you don't like him any more; and he won't want to see Pat again. Romeo's well out of it. He'll keep his mouth shut and go clear."

"He'll have to tell them how he got here."

"He'll say your boat bucked the ledge, say you and Pat went down with her, say he got ashore alone.' The rain began again, in a little spiteful sprinkle that came hard and harder. Robin spoke. "Then we'll have to make ourselves at home, won't we?" She tried to laugh. "At least we won't have to carry rocks any more to build the cairn.'

After a moment Angus said: "I'll try to catch some fish today, find something to eat." He distributed another morsel of chocolate to each one of them. "We'll make this last as long as we can," he said.

Mr. Jenkins refused his portion. "Give it to Miss Dale," he directed.
"I'm done, anyway. No use wasting it on me." Robin protested. "Please! Eat it,

Mr. Jenkins. You mustn't give up. Somebody's sure to find us soon.'

He grinned at her, looked at An-us. "You're a sentimental lot, taking me in, taking care of me. If I were in your place, I'd dump me off the cliffs below here. I'm glad to have your company for a day or two, of course, so I hope you won't do it till I'm dead. But I won't eat your chocolate."

Angus scanned the sky. "No sign of better weather," he said. "Pat, we've got to have a fire as soon as we can. I'll go look for more firewood. You try to dry our matches." He had a box half full, of the safety type, and Pat and Mr. Jenkins had each a few. "Put them on a dry rock, Pat. Maybe the air will dry them. If we can have a fire tonight we'll all feel better." He brought under shelter the few scraps of firewood they had already collected. You can whittle off the outside of these sticks, Pat," he suggested. Get at the dry wood inside, shave enough kindling to start a fire, if our matches ever dry."

But when he and Robin left the shelter, he decided to add a few boulders to the cairn. "Just on the chance," he told Robin. "Maybe they haven't seen it from shore. Maybe Romeo won't speak of it." It was raining hard and the wind was icy cold. He had made her wear the oilskin coat. They worked side by side. Hunger was a cry of pain in her, and she was cold, and her hands were bruised and sore; but she did what she could.

At noon, Angus decided the cairn would do. It was eight or nine feet high, wide at the base, tapering to the top. "If the weather clears they may see it," he said. "Now I'll try to make us more comfortable. Let's see if Pat's all right."

They went down to the shelter together. Pat was cheerful, but Mr. Jenkins was as silent as a trapped animal. Robin thought him weaker. Pat had shavings ready, but the matches were not dry. Angus told Robin to stay here and rest awhile. 'I'm going to bring seaweed to chink the cracks in the wall," he explained. "I'll fix it so the wind won't come through."

She was too tired to argue so she obeyed him. He returned presently with a great armful of seaweed. The stuff was wet, but it did improve the rocky barrier across the closed end of the shelter. Pat and Robin put it in place while Angus brought more and more, till there was enough to make a sort of mattress on which they could lie. Also, he walled up part of the open end of this cranny under the ledge, and before dark they had a compact refuge with walls and a roof to shut out rain and wind.

They ate the last of the chocolate that night. The matches were still soggy, so they did not try for a fire. Robin slept against Pat, with Angus between her and the pitiless rain. Once in the night she heard Mr. Jenkins making meaningless sounds, either in his sleep or in a delirium. In the morning she was a little lightheaded. The world was become unreal. She looked out through gray dawn light at shapes that moved and changed their form, that were blurred and strange. Angus was still asleep, and her arms tightened around him. She wanted to protect him and to comfort him and shelter him against all these adver-

GOD'S EXCEEDING GREAT PROMISES

LESSON TEXT—II Peter 1:1-11.
GOLDEN TEXT—He hath granted unto us His precious and exceeding great promises; that through these ye may become partakers of the divine nature.-II Peter 1:4, R. V.

Growth in grace and in knowledge of Christ are as normal and expected of the child of God as bodily growth of the physical child. Tragic as is the failure of one to develop physically, it is even more distressing and sad in the spiritual realm. Yet it is a common thing in our churches, where only comparatively few believers even come to full stature in Christ, where more have only a partial growth, and some are forever babes in Christ.

God has made perfect provision for us, and has in His Word given plain and explicit instructions on how to gain spiritual development.

I. All Things Provided (vv. 1-4). In the physical world we are able to provide, at least in some degree, what is needed. We also know where to find mental food. Spiritual provision can come only from God, and we find from these verses that He has provided not just a small portion, or a limited ration, but "all things that pertain unto life and godliness," through the knowledge of

The "exceeding great and precious promises" of God are the abundant portion of the believer. They are members of the family just by getsure promises, based in the alto-gether dependable Word of God.

God's provision for us in Christ has made it unnecessary to look elsewhere. Here is escape from the world's corruption, the new nature in Christ, faith, grace, peace, power -all in Him.

without Christ men have only the weak and disappointing help of men on which to draw. Of such foolish ones the Lord said through Jeremiah the prophet that they "have committed two evils: They have forsaken me, the fountain of living waters, and hewed them out cisterns, broken cisterns, that can hold no water" (Jer. 2:13).

II. All Diligence Required (vv.

There is something that the Christian can do to insure his growth in grace. He is to be diligent, that is, as progress in any other sphere of life, and possibly more.

Faith is the foundation of all such growth and without it there is nothas we give "all diligence" to encourage their growth.

Notice the ascending scale. Faith leads to virtue, that is, courageous, resolute Christian character. Then comes knowledge-the intelligent understanding and discernment of truth. This is bound together by temperance, meaning self-control. Next is patience, that steady endurance which keeps going in spite of trial or disappointment.

The sixth note in this octave of graces is godliness, which speaks of piety, true devotion to God, and reverence for His name. Such a believer will love his brethren in all brotherly kindness; and that leads us to the high point of love (the real meaning of "charity," v. 7). Here love for God is obviously in mind, as the crowning grace of the believer.

III. All Eternity Assured (vv. 8-

We should look forward to that abundant "entrance into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ" spoken of in verse 11. There is such a thing as being saved "so as by fire" (I Cor. 3:15), slipping into heaven with nothing to show for our life as followers of Christ here on earth (read I Cor. 3:12-15).

God does not want for His people such an unseemly entrance upon eternity. Why should we be satisfied so to live that it may be true of us. Saved? Yes, but that is all! Are you satisfied with that prospect?

We should note, too, that this growth in grace will show itself in our daily life. It will keep us from being "barren (idle) and unfruitful" (v. 8). The Christian life must not be barren of true service for Christ, nor unfruitful of gracious harvest for Him. We are not on a sort of spiritual joy ride, sitting at ease as we speed on to the heavenly dwelling Works do not save a man. We are justified before God by faith. But our faith is justified before men by our works of righteousness. Fruit grows on the living and healthy tree.

Observe that the Christian who lacks these graces (Do you?) is a nearsighted one who lacks both vision and grateful remembrance of God's loving-kindness (v. 9). How many members of our churches and their spiritual eyes anointed bodice is designed for midriff expowith God's "eyesalve" (Rev. 3:18).

Cute Clothes for Youngsters Made of Men's Cast-Off Shirts find you can transform these shirts ting busy at the family sewing ma-chine and starting to stitch away.

Men's shirts, as a rule, are made of fine sturdy broadcloth and madras fabrics in stripes, line checks and other interesting weaves that make them perfect for children's clothes. So whether you plan to convert the The opposite is also true, that shirt into a shirt or rompers for your young son or a sunsuit and bonnet for your young daughter, here are some general steps to remem-

Cut the shirt apart along the seams. Remove the collar and yoke. Leave the buttons and buttonholes intact, you may be able to use them in recutting for the back closing on a little dress or the front closing on a boy's shirt. Be sure to launder all the pieces and press flat to make pattern placing, pinning and cutting easier and more accurate. Fold the back section down the center and have an earnest purpose and zeal to go ahead spiritually. This calls for application and endeavor, just go the same way. It doesn't matter match up the fronts and sleeves so what type of garment you make, the next step is to lay out the pattern on

Pin the pattern carefully to the ing on which to build. But on it, or material, then pink all the fabric better, "in" it, we have all these edges with the pinker attachment other Christian graces springing up, in your sewing machine kit. This will dispose of the more involved task of making French seams, because once the fabric has a pinked edge simple seams are all that is necessary. When using a pattern that calls for buttons and buttonholes, down the front or back, place the pattern so that the center line of the button and buttonhole markings on the pattern fall on the center line of those already on the shirt. Additional buttonholes can be made in a jiffy with the buttonhole attachment. Remember, too, that girls' clothes button from right to left, boys' from left to right. Just the opposite is true if the garment has a back closing. It is important to mark all the pattern notches on the fabric to insure precise points of joining. The final step is stitching.

Glamorize each costume with such clever trimming tricks as lattice work effects and medallions which you can stitch up in practically no time by using the unerring little handicraft attachment to your sewing machine with which rickrack braid (rickrack is lavished on dresses and pinafores this season) is attached in unique and ornamental ways. Cutout monograms to adorn tiny pockets can be made of scraps of material and are jiffystitched with the aid of the zig-zagger attachment. If you would like to dramatize your daughter's writing ability have her write her name on the collar of her dress, then with the one-thread embroiderer you can follow her lettering with a signature stitch. A man's worn shirt of beige-striped madras was used to make the enchanting little sunsuit and sunbonnet for the two-year-old miss seated so gleefully centered in the picture. In the one-piece dress to the right there's a Peter Pan simplicity that's very practical. It's made from a man's pin-stripe shirt. The cost to remake was about ten cents for navy blue binding stitched on quickly with the binder attachment to enhance the edge of collar, sleeves and pockets. Pinafores as seen in the little sketches are the big news in little folk's fashion circles. Men's striped shirts make unusually attractive pinafores for children when you use the stripes vertically for the garment and horizontally for pockets, waistline band and pleated edging. Add to this the professional details of applique hearts (see sketch lower left corner) that can be applied quickly with the zigzagger attachment and you have a pinafore that looks brand new and expensive.

By dropping in at a local sewing center even a completely uninitiated beginner can learn to stitch up a variety of attractive outfits from closet castoffs. In just a few afternoons via wartime budget lessons you can master all the modern sewing short-cuts as well as shirtreviver tricks.

Gay Play Suit

Vividly colorful cotton prints is the big style message for play suits this summer. Strikingly gay red cotton patterned all over with print motif of black and white bows is used for the intriguing suit pictured. As practical as it is colorful this suit is a three-piece, the full skirt being need their spiritual memory jogged worn over brief shorts. The little

Patchwork Fashions

A new craze in the fashion world is that of patchwork blouses, hats, pinafores and a whole list of novelties made of pieces of calicoes, ginghams and so on that are patched together. It is said that a thriving business is being done at the remnant counters for the idea is one that is appealing to young enthusiasts that delight in following fads.

Picture if you will slacks that are cuffed with little swatches of bright calico or chambray or gingham that have been patched together exactly as grandma worked her quilt schemes. Top these knee-length slacks with a blouse made of the same patchwork. You can make entire aprons of this patchwork or add pockets to your plain chambray play dress. Fact is "anything goes" in this new patchwork stampede.

New Skirt Type Designers are turning time and talent to creating versatile skirt fashions to wear with the exquisite lingerie blouses so fashionable this summer. A charming new style to be found in the stores suggests the dirndl trend. Being made of silk jersey it carries grace itself accented with such cunning details as little ruffles of the jersey outlining huge bow-tied pockets with a matching ruffle encircling the skirt but placed a full eight inches above the hemline. You'll love this skirt, it goes so effectively with any type blouse and it is to be had in delectable

DERRY LANCE lifted the dish cover and regarded the bacon and eggs with a skeptical eye. " 'All the world loves a lover," he quoted glumly. "But-"

"But—I have not finished my breakfast," added his guest, Billy Latham. "Of course, we all know that the world loves a lover, and all that, and of course I am aware that not one fair daughter of Eve cares two whoops for you! Right?"

"Right," gloomily assented Perry as he helped himself to a hot roll.

"It is all your own fault," went on Billy Latham. "You are a re-cluse, a woman hater, yes, indeed, dear boy! And yet you wonder why you have reached the advanced age of thirty and have never loved a woman!

"Get about a bit and see the world through clearer eyes?" Perry laughed heartily.

"A lark, I'll say," replied his friend. "Come on, Perry, it's a fine spring day. Let's go out and buy a rummy looking old car and some sample pots and pans!"

"Ye Gods!" yelled Billy. "She's put the tractor across the road!" Perry stared ahead and saw the tractor lumber to a standstill across their path in advance. He saw the girl jump from the tractor and run toward them. It did not surprise him when she jumped on the run-

This particular lark led both of them to the altar and Perry's faith in the female species was restored.

Plan 'Schools of Soil' For Young Workers

Specific Farm Skills Now Being Developed

Training of non-farm high school students for wartime farm work has two objectives, according to the plan announced by the U.S. department of agriculture.

One is to familiarize these young people with rural and farm life, and the other to provide training in specific farm skills.

Classes in farm work are being given in schools throughout the country this spring, so that the larmers' valuable time will not have to be used to teach young workers their job when they are supposed to be helping him. He will be responsible only for on-the-farm training where individual requirements demand it, or special processes are involved.

Among the jobs being taught are cleaning dairy barns, brushing cows, whitewashing building interiors, milking, pitching hay, harnessing and driving horses, operating tractors, and machinery repair. Some of these may sound simple, but the department of agriculture points out that each has its little technique that makes the difference between an efficient piece of work and one that is slipshod.

Other jobs for the young will include hoeing, weeding, picking fruit and berries, harvesting sugar beets, feeding chickens, gathering eggs, and—for some of the girls—assisting "Mrs. Farmer" with the cooking, dishwashing, scrubbing, sweeping and dusting that are the "KP" of the farm army.

The training program is primarily to be the responsibility of the U.S. Office of Education and the state departments of education-in other words, the responsibility of the public schools from coast to coast. Where possible, the farming activities will be conducted on farms or in real situations.

In each community it is planned to bring before the prospective young workers speakers such as farmers, vocational agriculture teachers, farm labor specialists of the U.S. employment service, representatives of agricultural colleges and of farm organizations, county agents, and others who can speak authoritatively on the many phases of farm work. Local facilities such as public markets, milk plants and fruit storage plants also will be uti-

On-the-job group training will be carried on where it is found desirable. It will be given by a teacher of vocational agriculture or some other approved individual.

Melons

Each year, the American public drinks about 80,000,000 gallons of canned fruit juices, excluding cider. This habit has salvaged thousands of tons of fruit which otherwise would be wasted.

If watermelon juice can be marketed as a beverage, as some enthusiasts believe, this might open a new market for food which now has no use. Tons of watermelons are grown for seed, leaving quantities of waste which is now a total loss. The rind of surplus watermelons may be used for sweet pickles, but pickling varieties with thick rinds are grown especially for this purpose. Some surplus is used for stock feed and some unharvested watermelons are plowed under as fertilizer.

Studies are being made to find out the possibilities of extracting oil from watermelon seeds. About 61,000,000 watermelons are marketed each year and another 2,000,000 are left unharvested because of adverse market conditions.

Cantaloupes and other muskmelons are raised entirely for the fresh fruit market. The only market for the surplus crop and the culls is as stock feed and fertilizer and about one-half of the entire crop is wasted. In Colorado, alone, an average of 1,000,000 pounds of cantaloupe are harvested each year for seed and seed raisers have no way of getting rid of the melon waste. Experiments are under way to find methods for drying muskmelons for cattle feed.

Using Poisons on Crops

Pests which attack practically all vegetable crops can be destroyed by toxic substances without undue danger to humans if properly applied and the vegetables and fruits are thoroughly washed and handled after harvest.

On potatoes and other root crops where the tops are not used for food they should be washed thoroughly and not be sprayed or dusted within 15 or 30 days before picking. Poison remains on plants longer when dry.

Dunking Old Idea

Dunking in your "bunchum" is a custom as ancient as Arabia. It was there where the world's first cup of coffee was made from some strange, bright red berries the Arabians called "bunn." The beverage became "bunchum" and was thick enough to scoop out of the bowl with bits of food. Result: Introduction of dunking to the world!

Muminated Aisles

Going into the gloom of dark cinema houses, people are likely to stumble, bump into others. Ushers with flashlights are nuisances; small lamps placed near the aisle floors illuminate only small areas. American Cyanamid company announced what it considers a better idea: aisle rugs treated with fluorescent dyes, bathed by invisible ultraviolet radiation from small tubes. Such rugs glow softly all over, interfere with nothing on the screen.

MORE CANNED GOODS

Housewives who will get more canned goods this summer can thank the senate's Truman committee. No one announced it officially, but it was due to their probing that the army recently released 30 mil-lion cases of canned fruits and vegetables for civilian use.

The Truman committee had re-The Truman committee had revealed the fact that huge quantities of canned goods were being hoarded or unwisely used by the army, when fresh vegetables were easily available. Especially revealing was the cross-examination of Gen. E. B. Gregory, the army's quartermaster general, by Senator Brewster of Maine.

"Why does the army feed canned time as a boy, only three homes had bathrooms. Those three families were the bon-ton of that community. Their tin bathtubs—evidence of extreme wealth—were coveted by all other families. In that same little city today, it would be hard to find a home in which there was not a bathtub.

In the rural towns, and on the farms, when I was a how the washthat as a result of the packers and canners were in a quandary and expected to curtail production. They knew the army had overpurchased, could never use its vast stores of canned goods. So the canners figured the army would dump this back on the market, thereby causing an oversupply just at the wrong time. That was why 30 million cases were turned back to civilian use by the army now, to civilian use by the army now, to ease the market while there is a civilian shortage.

WHITE COLLAR MINERS
While the War Labor board had John L. Lewis over a barrel for asking a $2-a-day wage increase for organized coal miners, another branch of the government, the Bureau of Internal Revenue, okayed various salary increases for nonunion supervisory employees in coal

The matter was kept hushed up by secret-loving Internal Revenue bureaucrats, but here are the facts:

A special Internal Revenue branch, known as the Salary Stabilization unit, functions in the salary field like the War Labor board in the wage field, to keep personal earnings below inflationary levels. The new unit must approve applications for all salary boosts affecting business executives and white collar workers.

While everything the War Labor board does is open to public scrutiny, Internal Revenue's Salary Stabilization unit operates strictly behind the scenes and doesn't answer to any-tors, in a move to block union or- his cheeks and forehead. GRAIN FROM CANADA

Food Boss Chester Davis has spent days looking for a good transportation man to solve that problem of bringing in wheat from Canada.

Commodity Credit corporation has bought 71/2 million bushels of Canadian wheat, but not a bushel has moved. Meantime, dairy and poultry farmers in the Northeast are running low on feed grains.

Great Lakes steamers got moving a month late, on account of the late thaw. They are loaded down with ore for the steel mills, have no space for grain. Rail movement is the only alternative.

Grain stocks in the U.S. have been the heaviest in history, but so is consumption of grain. Record-breaking animal production is eating into the stocks so fast that foreign imports must be moved. This is one time when farmers would welcome some of that much abused Argentine corn and wheat.

Behind this excitement about grain supplies is one big question mark which few people outside the government realize, namely, the feeding of occupied territories.

If and when invasion comes, the civilians on the invasion front, whether in France, the Low Countries, or the Balkans, will have to be fed from the American bread be fed from the American basket. Quickest way to get food to starving people is in the form of that first essential—the supply of food.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

I FDR has no love for the duke and duchess of Windsor, saw nothing of them when they conferred with Churchill . . . The only time Churchill ever was booed on the floor of defending Edward's right to marry ing up from the Bahamas to work in the U. S. A., so this was just an of efficiency of the government-opexcuse to see Churchill. He wants erated and the privately operated to get back to London.

"Because the men are too lazy to prepare fresh grapefruit," was General Gregory's frank reply.

He also admitted that green vegetables and fruits were readily available to army camps during a large part of the year, but that army commissaries purchased canned goods because it was easier to prepare than fresh vegetables.

The Truman committee also found that as a result of this hoarding the packers and canners were in a quandary and expected to curtail production. They knew the army had overpurchased, could never use

THAT BROKE A STRIKE
DURING WORLD WAR I, England suffered from a coal mine strike on the part of the Welsh miners. Lloyd George, then prime minister of England, was credited with settling that strike and putting the miners back to work. He told me, just before the end of the war, that he did not settle the strike. He said he tried, and failed. After he had failed, King George V went to Wales, attended the meetings of the miners, visited many of them in their homes, and induced them to go back to work.

King George V told a small group, of which I was a member, that he strike on the part of the Welsh min-

LOAN OR STOCK?

WHEN IS A LOAN NOT A LOAN, but a purchase? That is a question to which the Chicago and North Western railroad would like an answer. According to Raymond Moley, the railroad borrowed money from the Reconstruction Finance corporation but when it attempted to repay the loan, the government would not take the money and insisted on turning it into a stock ownership. It makes the government a part owner of that transportation system and it would indicate the policy of the government in becoming a partner in the business of America. That is not what the American people want or expect of government.

Despite mechanization, the army needs the lowly mule. These three have been picked from a mule market in St. Louis, Mo., to be transported to a branch of the armed service. The demands of military forces have caused prices on mules to soar and there is a brisk rush of trading each day for this cross between a jackass and a mare.

PEAKING

HE much-debated question-just how good a fighter is Beau Jack? —was answered quite specifically when the lightweight champion lost to Bob Montgomery, rangy Philadelphia Negro, before a capacity crowd in Madison Square Garden.

The fight definitely will not rank as one of ringdom's great speckacles. Certain vulgar people were heard to make snide remarks concerning the caliber of present lightweight boxers. But both boys gave all they had. Both were game, courageous and willing to take a chance. But fighters like Barney Ross, Tony Canzoneri, Henry Armstrong and Lou Ambers could have whipped either man with a minimum of difficulty.

Beau Jack was 3-1 in the ringside betting, after closing in the afternoon marts at 2-1. From that angle it was the biggest boxing upset of the year. The decision of Referee Arthur Donovan and the two judges was unanimous, none of them giving Montgomery less than nine rounds. One press association scored 11 for Montgomery, three for Jack and one

The Records

From the record the fight was slated to be a good one. The Beau hadn't lost a fight in two years, his defeat-free span of 16 bouts stem-ming back into late 1941. Montgomery's record of 50 victories in 59 fights, 27 by knockouts, including five non-title meetings with lightweight champions, (three times with Sammy Angott and twice with Lew Jenkins) was extremely flattering.

But the boys couldn't hurl statistics at each other.

From the spectators' viewpoint, the fight at least was an active affair. Both men kept flailing away. Beau Jack started his usual routine of left-hand jabs, often landing six or seven without being stopped. But he carried a fly swatter instead of a post maul. And the Beau tired quickly. Neither man ever had fought a 15-round battle before, but fought a 15-round battle before, but it was Montgomery who proved to have the greatest reserve. And that wasn't the most surprising thing in the world.

Even in his 12-round engagements Jack had shown a tendency to weak-en before the close. It is obvious that no athlete can retain his original drive through a dozen rounds of hard going. But Jack has the habit of running down suddenly. He doesn't lack courage, but his stamina gives out.

Drawing Power

Regardless of his staying power, Beau Jack has even more important slavia has signed the Axis pact." drawing power. In his last four The Serbs were stunned at the infights he has pulled in about a third of a million dollars. His two In Belgrade there was a death-like fights with Fritzie Zivic-in February and March-brought in a little over $70,000 each. The gate for the Henry Armstrong match on April 2 was $105,000, and the Jack-Montgomery bout brought in $85,000.

The defeat certainly did not bolster Jack's stock, but the colored boy from Georgia will be given a return bout for the title. The fight contract contained the all-important provision.

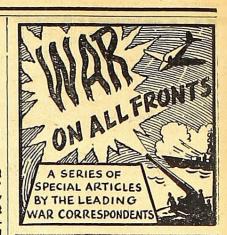

Boxing as a whole is not very well off. Perhaps the main reason for the lack of national interest is that very few people know who the various champions are. Seemingly they don't care.

Not so long ago any fight involving the lightweight championship slavery to Europe, as once before, would be a top sports event. These in 1389, the Serbs' heroic stand matches ranked second only to heavyweight title bouts.

But today the individual who can name the champion and a couple of strong title contenders in any weight classification is a very well read individual.

The Reasons

The lack of good fighters is one of the reasons. But too much emphasis has been placed on that aspect. The various boxing commissions-state and national-deserve much of the blame. They can't seem to agree on title holders. Whenever the favorite son of one particular commission doesn't get every possible break the members of said commission virtually sever relations with other similar organizations. Mediation doesn't seem to be even a last resort.

Guerrilla Girl In Serbia

By Ruth Mitchell

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with The American Magazine.)

During my 31/2 years in the Balkans, I came to know that part of the world as no American woman has before. The Italian occupation of Albania drove me out of that country into Jugoslavia. There I met the Serbs. I liked their way of living and their principles. And because I found them most perfectly expressed in a Serbian organization of guerrilla fighters called the Chetniks, I eventually joined them and became, myself, a Chetnik. But not at once. There were many months of adventurous travel, during which I was often hounded by Axis agents and accused of being a spy. I witnessed the growing menace of domination by greedy, swaggering, war-mad Nazis and Fascists. I became involved in the struggle of the Serbs to maintain their freedom.

Joins Chetniks.

So it was that I found myself one day in the presence of that old Chet-nik leader, Voivoida Perchanatz. It was March 3, 1941, in Belgrade, where I had been living for nearly a year. I had come to join the Chet-

Some months before, my name had been entered in the big, wellworn book of candidates, sponsored by a noted member of the organization. I had been trained in the code of Chetnik fighting and taught how to use dagger and revolver. Now I was ready. I stood before the ven-erable leader, with my right hand on the crossed dagger and pistol, repeating after him the oath:
"Do Smrti za srbiju—tako mi bog pomogao." It means, "Till death for Serbia, by the help of God."

Name Crossed Out When Joining.

That was all. Then Perchanatz took the big, old book and solemnly drew a line through my name. "Your life," he said, "is no longer your own. It is given to Serbia.'

This is the only organization in the world, I think, in which your name is not put down, but crossed tory will rise the sun of Liberty!"

Since I was to do intelligence work, my joining was to be kept secret at that time. Many of the leading men of Serbia-politicians, judges, professors - are Chetniks, their membership a dead secret. I was given the customary poison, which I sewed in the collar of my coat, where it could be chewed if my hands were bound. Serbs Were Stunned.

Soon after I became a Chetnik, events in the Balkans moved to a swift climax. Bulgaria joined the Nazis, and on the morning of March 25 the news was flashed: "Jugocredible sell-out of their government. calm for two days. No Serb showed his face on the streets, but behind closed doors a momentous determination was gathering.

It broke on March 27. On that fateful day, for the first time a small nation of Europe declared war on Germany before it was itself attacked. Little Serbia had decided to battle the monster. And from that day onward, and because of that decision, everything went wrong for Germany.

It was the Serbs, whom Germany expected to brush off like a troublesome mosquito, who spoiled her aim, destroyed her timing. I believe their courageous action saved the British empire and - yes - America, from saved Europe from slavery to Asia.

The Nazis had intended to attack Russia in March-my information told me March 16. Hitler had expected to have Jugoslavia in hand and thoroughly "co-ordinated" by then. Instead, he had to fight.

He had to detach an army intended for Russia and send it down into the Balkans to secure his rear-an army of not less than half a million troops. It took him three months to do what he had expected would be done by routine penetration and ter-rorization, in no time at all. There can be no question that if Germany had had those three spring months in which to concentrate her full force on Russia, she would have taken Moscow and that life stream of the Soviet, the Volga, and Russia would have been out of the war-a serious situation for the Allies.

Britishers in Tunisia are splitting their sides over this one. One of the Tommies there lost his bayonet, and rather than face the consequences of admitting the misdemeanor, carved out an excellent imitation of the missing weapon. For weeks he went about his duties with the fake concealed in his scabbard, safe from censure so long as his handiwork went undetected. When the inevitable order came to "Fix Bayonets," however, he was undone. He simply stood there, his scabbard untouched.

The sergeant demanded an explanation. "It's a promise I made my father," said the Tommy. "As he lay on his death-bed I told him I would never bare a bayonet on the anniversary of his death."

"That's the damndest fish story I ever heard!" the sergeant thundered. "Lemme see that bayonet!"

"For breaking a solemn promise," said the Tommy as he slowly drew forth the bayonet, "—may the Lord turn it to wood!"

An MGM writer decided he wanted to get into the Army. "I'm serious," he told pals. "I want to be one of the best soldiers."

And this is what happened at the induction center. He remarked that the place was crowded and that it was so stuffy. The psychiatrist heard him and marked down "Claustrophobia."

"Oh, please," said the scrivener, "don't do that, I'm just over-anxious."

The man wrote: "Nervous." "Oh, look now," said the lad. "I'm not nervous. I was drinking last night." The man wrote: "Alcoholic."

"But I don't drink much," he interrupted, "I'm all keyed up. To be awake I took benzedrine.

The man wrote: "Drug addict." The poor guy is back at MGM.

When Larry Lesueur, the CBS correspondent, visited a soldiers' hospital in Moscow, he chatted with a wounded man who the doctors said wouldn't be able to fight again. Lesueur asked the soldier what he planned to do and was told that he intended to go back to the front. "You can't," said Lesueur, "—there are plenty of men to take your place.

"You don't understand," was the Russian's reply. "No one can take another's place in a fight."

A reader requests the origin of the word "racket." It was underworld-ese for "party." In the old days in New York on the lower East Side when mobsters ran a dance or affair for a pal in a jam-they sold tickets to it.

"We're gonna have a racket Fri-day night," they'd say. Often small-time gangsters would employ that theme to get ready money, with no thought of holding the event. Such cheats were called "racketeers." And when a stranger was being checked, they'd ask: "What's his racket?"

Some of us were gabbing about pungent drama criticism. A Broadway vet recalled Woollcott's slap at a second-rate musical. "The plot," he wrote, "hasn't a leg to stand on and there are chorus girls to match."

Pvt. M. Wilk of "This Is the 'Army'' tells of the bloke who brought his troubles to The Good Will Hour. "Mr. Anthony," he began, "my best friend ran away with my wife. They've been gone a month -and, Mr. Anthony-I miss him!"

The "all-girl city" is Arlington Farms, being built by the Public Buildings administration of the Public Works agency, and it will be populated by girls and women from every state employed in the war department's Pentagon building and Navy Department No. 2.

Arlington Farms will consist of 10 large hotels, each two stories in height and each housing between 600 to 700 girls, besides a huge cafeteria building, a recreation building, administration building and post office. It is the largest of six housing projects, four under construction and two tentatively planned.

The broad acres of what once was the department of agriculture's experimental farm have been leveled and landscaped into the site for Arlington Farms, complete with streets, roads, walks and all requirements of a small city.

The 10 big hotels that make up Arlington Farms are designed in modern style and built with a new type of structural insulating wall material known as Cemesto, developed by the Celotex corporation.

The buildings are of engineered timber construction with walls of insulating panels. These panels comprise the complete wall, including exterior and inside finish and ample insulation against heat and cold.

Each unit will be complete, with its own staff, its own management, its own house mother, its own director of social and athletic activity. Each has private parlors, private dining rooms for parties, and small but adequate kitchens where the girls can cook when entertaining. Each has its own lounge, large and attractively furnished, and each has last threw or touched the red hot a range of "banquettes" where the shooting cracker must exchange girls may entertain guests and where places with him and so become "it."

ADVANCED INSTRUMENTS TRAINING

The maze of 40 or 50 dials and controls that stare out from the instrument board of a large bomber is just as complicated as it looks. It takes a skilled man to adjust and care for them. Such skilled men are products of the army air forces technical training command's advanced instruments' course at Chanute Field, Ill.

Such instruments require constant attention and, needless to say, bullets or crackups wreak havoc among them. It is the task of graduates of the instrument school to test them frequently to keep them in order, make adjustments and repairs and diagnose their condition in case of major injury, to determine whether they may be repaired or are hopelessly damaged.

Students first take up the mechanically operated instruments, such as pressure gauges, altimeters, rate-ofclimb and airspeed indicators, driftmeters, chronometric tachometers and the like. After several days of exploring the principles on which these instruments operate, and of ? taking them apart, re - connecting them, adjusting and testing them, the students pass on to electrically operated instruments like the electric tachometer, fuel mixture indicator, and the autosyn instruments, a type which show at a glance whether such elements as wing flaps and landing gear are in operating order. Work is done on the indicating and transmitting apparatus, and again all the working tests are mastered.

Third in order come the most complicated instruments of all, those operating on the gyro principle, such as the bank-and-turn indicators, directional gyro compass, flight indicator or artificial horizon, and at least three types of the automatic pilot. The automatic pilot, mainstay of long-range bomber operations, is difficult to master, as it is a highly complex instrument. But by this time students have been so thoroughly initiated into instrument technique that few fail to become masters of it.

The final stage is that of practical application of the principles and knowledge gained in previous phases. Test work is done on instruments actually installed in planes, and done under conditions as near like those of field operation

Airplane instruments usually have oil running in or through them. Hence tests of the students include a "cold-test chamber" in which instruments are placed with dry ice, duplicating conditions far aloft. Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Flier's Oxygen Mask Must Be a Perfect Fit

In high altitude flying, a perfect-fitting oxygen mask is essential. Upon this perfect fit depends the very life of combat crews when flying at extreme altitudes. To obtain measurements for the design and construction of masks providing the absolute snugness necessary, an anthropological survey among 1,454 aviation cadets was undertaken under the direction of the air surgeon, Brig. Gen. David N. W. Grant. By analyses of the measurements it was found that face and head structure of American citizens fall into seven principal categories. Models of these seven categories were made and new masks were built to fit

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Improper brake adjustment is a rubber-waster. Have your brakes checked regularly. If one wheel "takes hold" before the others, its rubber carries the full brunt of stopping the car, with resultant excessive rubber wear.

In their search for rubber substitutes, scientists are now probing myrcene, a turpentine derivative discovered about fifty years ago. The list of rubber "sources" is growing almost daily.

It is expected that the 1943 harvest of the United States will total 600 tons, all guayule. Nor-mally this country consumed about 600,000 tons of rubber

Wooden Sole Makes Its Bow

"All God's chillun got shoes" now has a proviso added-if all God's chillun got Coupon 17. Army needs and those of lend-lease gobbled up just about all the shoe leather lying around loose, so civilians must make one pair of shoes do where they were accustomed to conga through life on two or three pairs during the same period. Some of our shoemen, seeing this crisis coming, began experimenting with "ersatz" shoes that contain little or no leather. A stylist has come up with a likely substitute for soles-wood-just plain lumber.

Picture at left shows a bandsaw operator cutting out the rough shape of the sole. At right is Norman L. Woodward, the genius who designed wooden soles to which he is giving the final check here.

"So I know what the Telephone Company means by 'overloads.' There's a point beyond which you can't overload a plane - or a long distance switchboard. On top of all the war calls that must go through fast, civilians are doing more calling - some are urgent calls, others less important. Any call, regardless of its destination, may slow up the handling of other calls."

Remember-you're rendering a public service when you cut down on long distance calling.

Please make only the most necessary long distance calls.

If you must use long distance, do all you can to keep your call brief.
