New Gas Ration Books

The plan for the renewal of A and D books for automobile and motorcycle owners is as follows:

1. Pick up an application form at your service station.
2. Fill out the form and mail it to your War Price and Rationing Board, together with the back cover of the present A or D book (properly filled out) and the current tire inspection record showing that the proper tire inspections have been made. Make sure that tire serial numbers are correctly written in. In case a new tire has been acquired, the new number should be written in and a note attached explaining this to the board.

Any motorists who have not had at least one tire inspection by a qualified inspector will be denied a renewal.

Applications should be filled out as soon as possible in order to insure that the new books may all be issued by July 21 when the present books expire.

Increased Interest Taken In Iosco Cattle Ranch Lands

Recent changes of ownership in ranch and large farm properties in the Iosco county area indicates an increase of interest in the possibilities of this section's grazing and grass lands.

The sales were:

Paul Donahue of Unionville and Dr. Theron Donahue of Cass City purchased 1,440 acres of the Prescott ranch, that portion known as the "Little Farm," Charles T. Prescott purchased 1,960 acres of the Prescott ranch; James Mielock of Alabaster purchased 1,450 acres of the W. T. Hill Ranch in Reno township; Fred G. Stork, Sr., and Fred G. Stork, Jr., of Saginaw purchased the Bentley Ranch in Reno township and the Cleveland Ranch at Hale.

All of these purchases were made by men who are primarily interested in the production of beef cattle. The Donahues own and operate a large farm of 1,000 acres in Southern Michigan. They have 350 head of cattle on the newly acquired property at Prescott, and will establish a breeding herd of 200 cows. Feeder calves will be produced here for their southern Michigan farm. The Donahues are practical farmers and cattlemen.

Charles T. Prescott, who is president of the Northeastern Michigan Hereford Calf association, is one of Michigan's outstanding cattlemen. For four generations the Prescott family have been interested in the growing of fine beef cattle. The ranch in the above mentioned transfers was established by C. H. Prescott and was known as the Richland Farms. Some of outstanding Short-horn cattle of the country were produced on the Richland Farm. James Mielock, who recently purchased a portion of the Hill Ranch, has been interested in the breeding of Hereford cattle for several years. He has a fine herd in Alabaster township.

Fred G. Stork, Sr., and Fred G. Stork, Jr., are members of the Stork Engineering Co. of Saginaw. Their purchases of the Cleveland Ranch, the Bentley Ranch and other Iosco western Iosco county lands have been made during the past year.

MOSHIER CASE HEARD BEFORE SUPREME COURT

Seeks Reversal of Judge Dehnke's Denial of New Trial

On June 21, 1941, Judge Herman Dehnke denied a motion for a new trial for Mrs. Winnifred Moshier, who was then and is now serving a sentence for the murder of Little Bobby Kenyon. Some time later an appeal on Judge Dehnke's denial was made to the Michigan Supreme Court. A hearing on that appeal is being held at Lansing this week. New evidence will not be brought in, but arguments of the attorneys will be heard. The prosecuting attorney's department is being represented by Judge H. Read Smith, who assisted in the prosecution at Mrs. Moshier's trial. Briefs had been previously filed with the court.

Mrs. Winnifred Moshier was convicted of manslaughter October 19, 1940. The charges against her grew out of a confession and statements made in which she admitted that she had killed Little Bobby Kenyon in June of 1936 and then threw his body in the AuGres river in Reno township. Mrs. Moshier, her husband and family were at the time of the tragedy living near the place where the boy's body was found. The confession, made several years later while the Moshier family was residing at East Tawas, was secured through the efforts of Mrs. Byron Brooks of this city and the State Police. Mrs. Moshier later repudiated the confession and statements. At the end of the five day trial held in October of 1940 the jury brought in a manslaughter verdict.

W.N.U. FEATURES

THE STORY SO FAR: Robin Dale, a young artist, goes to Moose Bay to see her fiancé, Will McPhail. When Will is accidentally killed, his brother Angus blames Robin. She goes to Angus' fishing cruiser to see him. While she is on board the boat sails, carrying her, Angus, Pat Donohoe and Romeo toward Labrador. The boat is seized by a man named Jenkins, who is trying to escape from a government patrol. The boat runs aground and sinks. When Jenkins tries to steal the last of the food there is a free-for-all fight, and Pat and Mr. Jenkins are both hurt. Romeo escapes in a passing fishing boat without telling the others.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER XVII

"We might manage something with powder out of the cartridges in the pistol," Angus said. Pat, using Romeo's knife, had managed to split some flakes of dry wood out of the heart of one of the chunks of drift and to prepare fine dry shavings. Angus removed the bullet from one of the shells and mixed powder and shavings together, and flashed the primer into the mixture. The experiment succeeded.

Angus said abruptly: "We'll have a bigger fire tonight, but we'll need more wood for that. Miss Dale, you and I can go hunt some—if you're not too tired."

She was sure she was not. They descended the broken rocks slope below the shelter till they came to the shingle beach, exposed at low tide; and they followed it along, salvaging small bits of drift here and there. Angus was able to carry under his arm what little wood they found in their progress around the northern end of the island; but at last they came upon a real treasure, a spruce bolt four feet long and almost a foot thick. Angus picked it up and turned to face her and his eyes were shining.

They were as happy as children over their find. Angus dropped the bolt of pulpwood and went to heave at the stump. "I can carry it," he decided. "I'll get it on my shoulders." He turned it on end, the roots uppermost, and squatted and chose his hand holds and stood erect with the burden on his back. "I'll come back for the other," he said.

She was sure she could carry that. Angus said, already panting: "Don't it's too heavy." He strode strongly away along the beach. When they came to where that stick of spruce lay, she picked it up in her arms like a baby and tried to follow him.

But the bolt was terribly heavy. Her arms ached as though they were being stretched on the rack, her legs were weak, and her knees almost refused to support her weight. When she came to the foot of the rubble slope below the shelter, Angus was already halfway up it.

She had not till then seen Pat Donohoe, busy at some strange task on the slope below the shelter. On his knees, he was building a rock pile, long and narrow, laying each boulder with care. When she came up to him she asked:

"What are you doing, Pat?"

He looked at her gravely, without replying; but his silence answered her question, and her eyes filled. She went on hurriedly, looked past Angus into the shelter. Mr. Jenkins was not there.

They had a fire presently in the mouth of the shelter, with a crevice at the top of the barrier to let the smoke circulate. She and Pat stayed there; drying their clothes, drying the seaweed that served as their mattress, revelling in the delicious scalding warmth of the flames, choking in the smoke. Angus had departed again to see what he could find. She was asleep when he returned with another log and some smaller stuff; and looking up at him she realized that he had grown terribly thin. His eyes were sunken, as though the flesh back of them was gone. She was full of a great compassion, a rich tenderness. She wished to take him in her arms. He dropped his burden and stepped over their fire into the shelter, and began to fumble in his pockets.

"Brought our supper," he said triumphantly. He produced handfuls of diminutive, snail-like shellfish. "The seaweed's full of them," he said. "We'll live high."

She watched him carefully break the snail shells, collecting the tiny bits of flesh on a flat rock. He tilted the slab to face the fire, and the snails shriveled and charred in the reflected heat. Robin thought the odor of them delicious; but they proved thin and watery, containing no real sustenance. The bit of food served only to awaken hunger pangs that had begun to dull.

They allowed the fire to go out. "We've none too much wood," Angus said, "and we'll have to keep some for a signal fire when it clears." He left them presently to go tirelessly questing around the island that was their prison, and Pat slept, and Robin thought wearily that the sun would never shine again. The wind, without ever rising to gale force, yet persisted out of the northeast; it spat rain at them; it brought a sprinkle of sleet or snow on an occasional colder gust. Life slipped out of her that afternoon. Till now she had been hungry and cold; but also she had wished to live, had fought to live. Now she no longer greatly cared whether she lived or died. Angus came back at dusk, and she slept between him and Pat, and when she woke it was broad day and he was gone again. She spoke his name, and Pat said: "He's up on top ma'am, keeping watch, case anyone comes handy by."

She did not see Angus till she came close to him. He sat on the shoreward side of the monument, his back against it, his chin on his chest.

When she touched him, he roused instantly. "I was resting," he confessed, shamefully. "I went to sleep." She said: "I want to tell you something, Angus."

He thought she was delirious, held her close, tried to lift her. She shook her head. "No, don't," she said. "I'm all right. Only I'm dying of course." She smiled, wrinkling her eyes at him. "Like the apple trees, Angus. I'm dying, don't you think? Bearing apples is their way of loving, isn't it? Angus, I love you."

She laughed in flooding happiness.

He lifted her, stood erect. She wondered how he could. "How can you still be strong?" she whispered. He bore her down toward the shelter. "Do you love me?" she asked quietly.

He said: "Hush! We'll be all right."

So she knew that some things could never change; yet when he brought her back to the cave under the ledge, she made him hold her till she fell hard asleep in his arms.

Robin knew nothing after that till she woke between rough sheets, with something warm and delicious trickling down her throat. She tried to call Angus, and her closed eyes filled, and tears welled out between her lashes, and someone said tenderly: "There, poor lamb!"

Robin wanted to be comforted and petted and tended, so she cried a little more, and a woman with rough hands was kind to her, and she slept for hours or days, and woke to a room full of sunshine, and the woman said:

"What a blessed man!"

"Well, my dear, you've a bright eye on you this morning? You're better, I'm thinking."

They went along the rugged coast to Corner Brook in a lubberly motorboat that smelled most mightily of cod, and it rolled and tossed on the greasy seas and pot-potted at its business in a humdrum way. Pat sat with his leg in splints stretched out before him; and Angus stayed near Pat, and he had no word for Robin at all.

Angus scarce spoke all that journey, but Pat talked to her. Pat was an understanding big brute of a man. At Corner Brook he insisted they leave him there till his leg could mend. He said she and Angus must take the train and catch the boat at Port aux Basques. "Sure and I'm fine, sorr," Pat declared. "I'll let you hear when I'm fit for traveling again. Now be off and see the young lady safe home."

So she and Angus took the train together; and at dusk that evening they stood on the after deck of the Caribou, watching the last lights of Port aux Basques turn yellow and then disappear in fog behind them. Robin had accepted defeat. Angus would never change. He would never love a woman. He would see her safe on her homeward way; but that was all.

Safe? She thought she would never be safe and at ease again. She asked: "How did they come to rescue us, Angus?"

"By the time they got Romeo ashore he was delirious," Angus replied. "Something he said started them wondering, and they finally sent a second boat to the island to check his story."

Robin pondered this a moment, then asked: "How can I get to Rimouski? My car is there." She wore a dress bought in Corner Brook. "I've no clothes, nor money. You had to pay for these things I'm wearing, and you'll have to lend me money for a railroad ticket."

"If you write a cheque, the purser will cash it."

She stared at him in the darkness, hurt beyond words. Then she turned, and he went with her to find the purser. She asked for a blank cheque, filled it in. With the money in her hands she turned to Angus.

"Now, how much was it?" she asked. "Clothes, tickets, everything?" He told her, to the penny. "You're Scotch, aren't you?" she reflected gravely, and gave him bills and waited for her change. Then she said: "Good night," and went to her cabin and hoped she need not see him again.

But in the morning when she appeared, he was waiting at the end of the corridor. "We're in," he said. "We're tied up at the dock, waiting for the immigration men."

"Are we?"

"Yes!" He spoke almost roughly. He said: "You're safe now. You don't need me any more. You don't owe me anything. You're not dying. You're all right."

Robin looked up at him with a sudden beating interest. "Yes," she assented. "Of course I am. Why?"

His hand gripped her arm so hard she wished to cry out, but she was not sure whether she felt rapture or pain. He said harshly: "You were crazy, delirious, on the island; but we're both sane now. There's no apple tree business in this! I want to—marry you!"

At his own words perspiration beaded his brow, and his lips were white with fear. He was a little boy. . . . She laughed in flooding happiness. "Heavens to Betsy!" she whispered. "What a blessed man!"

AGAIN fashion's spotlight is turned full force on cotton fabrics. No wonder that cottons are so vastly important, for the present wartime way of living calls for sturdy serviceable duration fabrics, and cottons are just that. When it comes to economy, practicality, versatility and attractiveness, made more so by the intriguing styling designers are giving them, cotton fashions offer the best clothes investment one can make in these days of high patriotism and earnest endeavor.

Not only are cottons economical in purchase price, but they don't have to be pampered, as most of them can be tossed into the family washing machine with minimum time and effort, and many of them require little or no pressing. It is just such practical qualities as this which make cottons absolutely essential to our wartime way of living. The American public itself confirms this by having used during the past year 12 billion yards of cottons, which is 50 per cent more than in normal times.

Let's take a look at this season's cottons, which make practical wearability, serviceability and simplicity of line their plea. It's the unusualness of the cotton fabrics themselves that's making big news. There's denim, for example, ordinary kitchen-drudgery, farm-labor denim, suddenly becoming the toast of the elite as the smartest-ever fabric for city sophisticates to wear. Made up in town suits, in skirts to team with dainty blouses, and in Victory garden work clothes, denim has certainly gone on parade. Then there's news in striped ticking, looking as clean and fresh and eye-appealing in tailored modes as you please. Cotton tweeds, too, in stunning large pastel plaids as well as conservative green plaids look new and exciting.

Other popular cottons include gabardine, Bedford cord, seersucker, gingham, chambray (especially in gray), and a giant waffle pique known as "Quiltweave," many of them as beautifully tailored as the best of woolens.

For softer afternoon types there are crinkled organdies, voile, eyelet batiste, dotted swiss and pique, and a new cotton mesh which is cool and good looking. Dinner types prevail among evening gowns, which tend toward the sweet young styles in glazed chintz, flowered sateen, organdie, as well as pique.

The theme of these few paragraphs, however, have to do with practical workaday fashions, such as the white-collar gingham frock centered in the group. It's a type tuned to marketing and kitchen duty and even town wear, if your stork is on summer schedule. The dress is easy to adjust because it's full from the yoke and ties to fit with the sash. You can get it in red, green or brown woven cotton checks.

Victory garden workers have discovered that cotton play suits are just about the most practical thing they can wear while digging and hoeing and weeding. Shown to the right is a three-piece consisting of clam-digger shorts, and a button-on skirt of blue-and-white striped Bedford cord, the blouse being of white poplin trimmed with blue rickrack.

The golf enthusiast in the inset wears a striped chambray shirt. There are matching shorts with this (not shown) and the gloves are of crocheted cotton string.

American women are wise also to the fact that the two-piece swim suit that has a matching beachcoat is a sensible buy, in that the coat can alternate as a housecoat. You can get these suits made of glazed chintz, percale, poplin or gingham. Women who work also want slacks suits of denim, gabardine, covert, corduroy and seersucker.

New Sleeves

Watch sleeves! This is a season when they are made to play all sorts of high-style capers. So be sure that your sleeves are of the newer types that date your dress or your blouse as of summer 1943 vintage. Here you see a gown pictured that is sleeved most intriguingly with new-type flaring capelike sleeves with scallops daintily applied with cutout petals of the very fine rayon chiffon in fresh periwinkle blue and white print which fashions the entire dress. This season's sheer rayon prints were never prettier, and for warm summer days they make the dress ideal. This most attractive dinner gown is of the now-so-fashionable short length.

The Farmer's Wife Gets Smart Prints

It seems that big mills are continuing to turn out many colorful prints on bag sheetings sold on priorities for feed bags. Using old rollers as they do, the sheeting is apt as not to be printed in designs that once held forth on some of fashion's most style-minded cottons. Women on the farm are collecting these bags which count up into numbers, converting them into fashions for the family. The fact that a craze for home-sewing is sweeping the country plays right into the hands of willing seamstresses. Then too, pattern-makers are making it a point to create styles of simplicity that can easily be made at home.

New Sport Frocks With a Glamour Touch

Here's something new. It is the sports dress that has gone glamour-conscious. Not that this utilitarian type of frock is giving up any of its serviceability, but it is a fact that this season fashion does not frown upon a few trimming touches on otherwise very simply tailored casual dresses. In some of the better shops they are showing dresses of wrinkle-resisting spun rayons that are prettily colorful, and that take on perhaps a bit of embroidery, or scallops down the front opening of coat dress types. Smart indeed is a spun rayon frock that takes on a high-style touch of eyelet embroidery epaulets over the shoulders.

Eyelet Embroidery

The new black and navy sheer frocks are often animated with little frills of eyelet embroidery. The same embroidery often edges vertical slit pockets in the skirt. Hats made entirely of starched eyelet embroidery are also very smart.

MANY women who have learned to sew for the Red Cross are also sewing for themselves. They are thinking of sewing as a craft and taking pride in their tools. Many who do not have space for a sewing room are planning efficient closets to house equipment. Here is a model sewing cupboard from my new book Better Dressmaking. There have been many requests for dimensions and here they are.

The cupboard is six and one-half feet high; four feet wide and twenty inches deep. The dress form compartment is five feet six inches high and twenty-four inches wide. The ironing board compartment is four feet ten inches high and eight inches wide. This leaves ample space for shelves for the pressing cushions shown at the top; the sleeve board; iron; water pan and sponge; stout slide-in boxes for findings; notions and patterns; and a lower shelf for fabrics. The construction throughout is of half-inch plywood.

NOTE: If you are in need of more closets and storage space you will find directions in BOOK 7 for a linen closet built into waste space. Also in BOOK 8 there are directions for making door pockets to use every inch of space in your clothes closets. Booklets are 15 cents each. Send requests for booklets direct to:

Lesson Frugal Manager Taught Stuck With Driver

The works manager of a certain railway company had a reputation for meanness.

The pet bee in his bonnet was oil and waste. He was always driving home the fact that if every employee was careful with oil and cotton waste, much money would be saved.

One day he was having a few words with a very new driver.

"Tell me," he ordered, "what would you do if you were driving one day, and saw an express thundering towards you on the same line?"

The novice thought hard. Then: "I'd grab the oilcan, I'd grab the waste—and I'd jump!"

It wasn't until a foolish young wife, seeking to help her husband's career, put into Tausig's hands the very documents he wanted that the real peril of his presence became clear—and then it was almost too late!

Fight the Forgery Racket!

By FRANK J. WILSON
Chief, United States Secret Service

WE HAVE repeatedly warned those who receive government checks not to endorse them until they are in the presence of the persons they ask to cash them. Now we make a recommendation to storekeepers, cashiers and others who accept government checks:

If a government check is already endorsed when it is presented to you, insist that it be endorsed again in your presence. Then compare the handwriting. Be sure the endorsement is spelled exactly as the name appears on the face of the check.

If a check forger presents a check which is already endorsed, it is possible that he has copied the genuine signature of the payee. In this case, if you ask him to write the name again in your presence, you may quickly detect the forgery. If he has stolen the check already endorsed, you may be able to prevent suffering and hardship on the part of the person from whom the check was taken.

Remember—don't pay off on a name. Pay off on the person behind it.

Watch Your Kidneys!
Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste
Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.
Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, itching at nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Figure It Out Yourself. How can you effectively join in saving all the little children of the world from human slavery, death and injury from the Nazis and Japanese? Put more and more of your pay into war bonds every payday. Your savings will go to war in the form of war equipment and other munitions. How much more should you put into war bonds? The only ones who can answer that are—you and your family. It's up to you to decide just how much more you'll do to win the war.

If you were fighting in the Solomon or in Africa or forcing a landing in Europe you'd like to feel that the folks at home were back of you—all the way—you'd be proud of your family and your friends if you knew they were buying war bonds not at 10 per cent or 15 per cent, but with every cent beyond that which they need for necessities.

Abnormal Tire Wear

If tires show abnormal wear the trouble may be caused by under-inflation or misaligned wheels, according to the California State Automobile association. Another cause of uneven tire wear is unbalanced wheels. At high speed a wheel only slightly out of balance develops a powerful centrifugal force. This force jerks the wheel up and down as it rotates. In addition to abnormal up and down motion there also may be side motion as the heavy spot moves fore and aft. Unbalanced wheels frequently cause shimmy, abnormal wear in steering mechanism, as well as cupped spots in the tire tread.

BRITISH-INDIA PROBLEM

It will probably be denied, but the inside fact is that U. S. Ambassador Bill Phillips came back from India with a blunt, in spots bitter, report against the British.

He felt that the United States should do something about the festering Indian political situation, that the Indian army and people could not be a force in the war until the question was cleaned up. Also he was straight-from-the-shoulder in his criticism of Field Marshal Wavell whom he feels is not suited for the job and should be removed.

Phillips not only gave this report to the President but he also had a conference with Winston Churchill.

Ambassador Phillips' report is most significant, because he has been pro-British, served as minister to Canada, has been a consistent believer that our policy must go hand-in-hand with the British. Phillips is mild, not addicted to crusading, but a thorough, conscientious diplomat, reporting what he believes to be the facts.

Among other things, Phillips reported that mediation between different Indian factions and the British government was possible now; also desirable. He feels that if some such move is not undertaken now, he should not go back to India, nor should any other U. S. ambassador, since the presence of an American envoy would be taken as the stamp of U. S. approval for British policy.

What the President said to Churchill on the Indian problem is his secret. But it is known that Roosevelt has hoped for a year that the British would do something about India. However, he also feels very strongly that the United States should not interfere in Britain's colonial problems.

Meanwhile, the British, with an army large enough to handle any problem inside India, seem content merely to sit on the lid—despite American pleas that the Burma road must be reopened and despite the fact that Indian troops will not fight the Japs wholeheartedly unless they have a small investment in the Four Freedoms for which they are supposed to fight.

WOMAN WATCHES ARMY COOKS

Miss Mary I. Barber, Washington's first dollar-a-year woman, has now begun to bring long-needed thrift to army mess kitchens. If Miss Barber has her way, the army's 250,000 cooks will be persuaded to make soup out of the leftovers and cut down the quota for the garbage pails.

In fact, her save-left-overs idea has already gone so far that certain pig farmers near army camps are complaining that they don't get enough garbage these days.

Miss Barber was borrowed by the quartermaster corps from the Kellogg company at Battle Creek to teach tough mess sergeants, among other things, that a camp menu does not have to be arranged one week in advance, and stuck to religiously. If, for instance, a camp mess has several hundred chickens left over from Sunday dinner, they can be used on Monday, not thrown into the garbage pail.

Unfortunately, a lot of mess sergeants had been doing that, partly because the menu for Monday was already arranged. Also it is against the law for the army to sell food, nor can it be given away. It must be thrown away. This has been done in the past via garbage trucks to the highest bidding hog dealers.

Now, however, Miss Barber is helping to arrange master menus, which though they specify soup, do not name the variety. This gives the cook an option to make soup out of whatever his left-overs permit.

This all sounds simple to the average housewife, but believe it or not, it has not always been done by the army.

Another trick is to save all dripping fats from bacon or sausage, and use them in a cream sauce for cauliflower, or other vegetables.

WHITE HOUSE BLACK MARKET

The White House is having its troubles with the Black Market. The White House architect called up the Georgetown Electric company recently to buy No. 12 copper wire for rewiring a part of the Executive Mansion. But there was no copper wire to be had.

"Where can we get it?" the architect asked.

"Baltimore, on the Black Market—only it will cost you 20 cents a foot instead of seven cents."

"Well, we can't have anything to do with the Black Market," was the White House reply, and the architect went shopping elsewhere.

INDIAN MERRY-GO-ROUND

Imprisoned Mahatma Gandhi has asked the viceroy for permission to communicate with the Mohammedan leader in an effort to effect Indian unity, but the viceroy has refused.

Raj Gopal Chari, important Indian leader, has asked the viceroy for permission to see Gandhi in order to compose Indian differences. Again the viceroy has refused.

Suspicion is that the British don't want Indian differences adjusted or composed.

FEDERAL ACTIVITIES IN AMERICAN BUSINESS

IT SEEMS ONLY A FEW SHORT YEARS AGO, but it was in the early twenties, that I was in Washington attending hearings on a bill which, if enacted, would have taken the government out of the business of competing with private enterprise. The desired law would have stopped the government from printing envelopes. That bill never got onto the floor of the house, although Democratic members of the committee all voted to report it favorably.

The government's competition with the job printing offices of the early twenties was but peanuts as compared with the government's business ramifications of today, exclusive of the conduct of the war or the routine of conducting the government.

There seems no way of determining how extensively the federal government has engaged in business, thus competing with its citizens, or the thousands of cases in which it has become a partner by supplying funds in exchange for stock holdings. Congress has attempted to get a report on the ramifications, but without success. The Citizens' Emergency Committee on Non-Defense Expenditures, after many months of research, assisted by Senator Byrd's committee, has dug out a total of 57 government corporations, and that is not all, nor does it include any of those in which the government has acquired a partnership by stock purchases.

Twenty-six of the 57 corporations represented a total investment of $35,129,000,000 on January 1, 1943. That represents money borrowed on the government's guarantee but it is not included as a part of the national debt. The additional stock sales of these 26 corporations for the present fiscal year, and for which the government is obligated, amount to more than the total net farm income of $10,200,000,000 for last year.

The 57 corporations offer competition for private business in many lines, including banking, building and loan, transportation, both rail and water, sale of electrical appliances, crop and other insurance, including bank deposits, sale of metals and minerals, manufacture of cement, manufacture of rubber, partnership in hotels, business and office buildings, production of spruce trees.

These 57 government corporations, which are competing with privately owned business, pay no taxes and have no interest charges. Thirty-two of them are not subject to an audit of any kind. Several of them loan money on farm and home real estate and have foreclosed on mortgages to a total valuation of $5,638,000,000. The property acquired under foreclosure is offered for sale at nominal prices, thus depreciating other farm and home values.

The government in business in competition with its citizens has shown a remarkable growth since the early twenties.

—NUMBER ONE BUSINESSMAN
SOME SIX YEARS AGO, Lewis Brown, president of Johns-Manville, told me he was working at the job of "selling agriculture to industry." "Why not also sell industry to agriculture?" I asked. "Why not show the farmer that he is an important part of business?"

The fact is, agriculture is as much a part of American business as is the building of automobiles or any other manufactured product. The farm is but a factory. Its raw materials are rain, sunshine and earth. Out of these ingredients it produces corn and wheat and many other manufactured products. It processes these products into pork, beef and mutton.

Yes, the farm is a factory, our most essential manufacturing and processing plant. Should the farm plants close, no others could long survive. The farm is the foundation on which business of the world is built and the farmer is No. 1 among our business people. He should be recognized as such by himself, as well as by others.

BUDDING BUREAUS

IN WASHINGTON, BUREAUS grow with the rapidity of Jack's beanstalk. I knew the office of information of the department of agriculture when it consisted of three people. That was in 1913. In 1917, the occasion for the department ceased to exist, but the department continued. An appropriation of more than one million and a half dollars is asked for it for 1944. I wonder why?

BABYLON AND BERLIN

LIKE NEBUCHADNEZZAR OF OLD, Hitler should be able to see the handwriting on the wall. An Allied army once landed in Europe, the end of Naziism should not be far away. The sins of Berlin will destroy it, as Babylon was destroyed. Let us hope it may be a lasting lesson.

HERE IS A RECIPE for saving paper. Take the adjectives out of the publicity "hand-outs" of the government's propagandists.

End of War for Nazi Generals

Monocled Gen. John von Broitch apparently still thinks he is in charge of the situation as he crosses the threshold of an Allied headquarters after his capture in North Africa with 200,000 other Nazis. In front of Von Broitch is another captive, General Cramer. Captured generals receive all the courtesy due their rank and Von Broitch looks as though he expects it.

Digging in Gardens Instead of Mines

These coal miners are shown working on their victory gardens after leaving their posts in the mines. For the second time within a month virtually all mines employing UMW members were paralyzed by lack of manpower. A nation-wide dim-out to eliminate all nonessential use of electricity and a 25 per cent curtailment of all train travel were mentioned as possible coal saving devices should they be necessary.

A Different Kind of War

Chessboard warfare is very different from the bitter conflicts these Purple Heart wearers have weathered in the Tunisian campaign. They are, left to right, Corp. Vernon D. Tifford of Los Angeles, Calif., Pfc. Robert G. Ussery of Rockingham, N. C., and Pfc. Raymond Deadman of Boston, Mass. They are recuperating at the Halloran hospital in Staten Island, N. Y., from wounds received in action.

Speaking of Sports

By Bob McShane

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

THE American league seems to be in the midst of one of the greatest flag races in its history. At the time this is being written, only six games separate the league leaders from the tail end club.

President Ed Barrow and Manager Joe McCarthy of the Yankees recognize that the war has done an excellent job of leveling off talent and that they are going to fight a harder battle than any Yankee outfit has had since the time of Miller Huggins when they nosed out the Browns by one length in 1922.

The 1943 pennant race may be even more exciting to watch than in 1940, when the Tigers beat the Indians by a game and the Yankees were right on top of Cleveland.

Ed Barrow is often the forgotten man in speaking of the highly successful Yankees. To McCarthy and the big names on the team roster goes much of the credit. And naturally so. But President Barrow deserves whatever plaudits may be awarded him.

No. 1 Yankee

Barrow has been with the Yankees since 1921, the year of their first flag. And by this time he is more of a Yankee than any other man. He has been president of the club since January, 1939, following the reorganization after the death of Col. Jacob Ruppert.

Barrow is a big man physically. He has a tremendous capacity for enjoying life. Prior to his joining the Yankees, he had a varied and interesting career. He was president of two minor leagues and manager of seven teams, including Wheeling, Patterson, Indianapolis, Toronto, Montreal, the Detroit Tigers and the Boston Red Sox.

His first year in organized baseball brought him unusual success. He was managing Wheeling in 1895. The team finished first in the split season of the Iron and Oil league, then shifted its franchise to the Interstate league and wound up in the top spot of that circuit. Incidentally, Zane Grey, later to become famous as a novelist, was one of Barrow's outfielders that year.

He was still in his teens when he organized and ran his first team, a semi-pro outfit in Des Moines. He first pitched, then moved to the outfield.

The Big Scramble

The Yankees haven't won the pennant yet—and they know it as well as the seven other teams of the circuit. But they know, too, that they are going to make it as tough for competition as they possibly can.

McCarthy is quite happy over the mound situation, and he is extremely proud of one Ernie Bonham, whom McCarthy has named as a 25-game winner this season. Bonham almost reached that figure last year with a record of 21 victories and 5 defeats.

McCarthy isn't the only one who is sold on Ernie. Almost any hitter in the league will name him or Tex Hughson of the Red Sox as the best pitcher in the league. Both have their supporters and there's little to choose from either way.

In speaking of Bonham during spring camp, McCarthy said: "Look at his record for last season. He wound up with 21 victories and 5 defeats. Two of the defeats he suffered were by 1 to 0 scores, and both were in late innings. Then take a look at his earned run average, 2.27. That shows we didn't have to get many runs for him to win. Well, this year we'll have to get even less runs for him. Many of the good hitters have gone into service. The percentage favors him."

SPORTS SHORTS

Bill McGowan, American league umpire, names Cecil Travis, formerly of Washington, as most admired by his fellow-umpires for gentlemanly conduct. Travis now is in the army.

Bill Tilden never selects a new tennis racquet by its weight. He merely swings it a few times, and if it suits him he takes it.

Fifty games were played in the Southern association between an umpire had to order a player off the premises.

Land Bridge Across Pacific

By Corey Ford

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with Collier's Weekly)

Toward the middle of August last year, our American pilots in the Aleutians began bringing back reports of sudden and furious Japanese activity on Kiska island. Road construction had been started there, two seaplane hangars and ramps were built, huts and camp buildings were hastily thrown up, sandbagged and revetted, a submarine base was constructed west of Salmon Lagoon.

Telegraph poles, brought all the way from Japan, lined the company streets. New gun emplacements were dug on North and South Heads, underground passages were channeled beneath the rocks, and anti-aircraft grew steadily more intense.

With Oriental thoroughness they even gave Kiska Island a new name—Narukima, which means "Ringing of the Gods." What that means is anybody's guess.

U. S. Army Engineers Busy.

But while the Japs were developing their base, our army engineers were not idle. On an island in the Andreanof group, only a fighter plane hop from Kiska, intelligence scouts had secretly surveyed a site for a new landing field. Now, as August drew to a close, one of the most remarkable armadas of the war set sail from the Alaska mainland under the protecting cover of a navy convoy and the ever vigilant PB.Ys. There were lumbering transports, a few old freighters, a fishing scow or two, several converted barges, a side-paddle river boat, even a little tug hauling a four-masted schooner loaded to the gunwales with gasoline. Every hold was jammed with guns, crates, construction gear. Every inch of deck space was jammed with men.

U. S. Flotilla Heads West.

Curtailed by dense fog—and for once everyone gave devout thanks for the foul weather—the strange flotilla headed westward. No Jap patrol plane marred the murky skies, no prowling submarine spotted them from the sea, as the convoy crept at snail's pace past the dangerous reefs and shoals that mark the shores of the Andreanofs, breast-ed the mountainous tides and anchored safely at last in the shelter of the island.

The rattle of chains in the hawse-ropes had hardly died away before our troops under full field equipment had clambered down the rope nets into the landing barges. Driving rain and icy seas soaked them to the skin, but at least the storm insured the landing operations against air attack. Artillery protection was quickly established. Jeeps, command cars, caterpillar tractors, trucks splashed toward the beach.

New Base Takes Shape.

The members of the ground crews pitched in and carried on their backs the equipment for the base that was fast taking shape under the noisy activity of bulldozers and caterpillars. For ten days, they worked in sopping clothes, ate out of tin cans and snatched occasional hours of sleep in the mud and rain.

The expedition landed on Sunday, August 30. On Friday, September 11, the vanguard of a squadron of fighter planes dropped out of the gray skies onto a finished runway.

At last with a base only a couple of hundred miles from the enemy, we were able to cut down the worst of our weather losses and to put a striking force of fighters and medium bombers over Kiska.

Our initial visit was in the nature of a celebration. The mediums went in over Kiska at 50 feet—believed to be the first deck-level mission ever conducted by American bombers—and destroyed three large transports. Fighter planes swarmed over the target like small boys raiding an apple orchard, shot up everything on the water, and shot down everything in the air.

Week after week, month after month, the aerial slugging match went on. All fall and winter and spring, amid the foulest flying conditions anywhere in the world, the navy patrol planes would scout the lonely seas. Now and then, when the skies opened up, army bombers and fighters would take up to drop another lethal load.

They knew the stagg ring toll the weather was taking in ships and men; they knew the hopelessness of dislodging the enemy by intermittent bombing raids alone. But they knew that slowly, ever so slowly, we were inching westward closer and closer to the Kiska guns, and our forces were readying themselves during the spring for that all-out offensive which would drive the invader forever from our islands.

"There are many roads which lead right to Tokyo," President Roosevelt said recently, "and we shall neglect none of them."

Lead Arsenate On Ground Won't Hurt Gardens

Gardeners who have hesitated to start Victory gardens in lawn or other areas sprayed with lead arsenate have been assured by the latest findings that their fears are groundless. There is no indication that toxic quantities of either lead or arsenic are found in vegetable products raised on soil that has been even heavily sprayed, the report states, although it cautions that lead arsenate, as a highly effective insecticide toxic to human beings, must naturally be treated with respect.

Careful study of the insecticide health problem has been given for many years by the United States department of agriculture and the United States public health service and by various state organizations in the West, particularly in Oregon and Washington. The apple country of Wenatchee county, Wash., probably receives the heaviest application of lead arsenate spray to be found anywhere in the world. It is, consequently, an excellent area to study fruit contamination from insecticides. Investigation discloses no evidence that either fruits or vegetables are so seriously contaminated by a solution of the spray material in the soil and its entrance into the fruit or vegetable products of that region that its presence is a matter of hygienic concern.

Analyses made of the water in the irrigation ditches running through these orchards indicate only a slight amount of both lead and arsenic, well below the limits set by public health standards for drinking water. As a matter of fact, both lead and arsenic are found as a native constituent in many soils in the United States. A recent press release from the bureau of entomology, United States department of agriculture, specifically states that no danger is to be apprehended from this source. Home gardeners need not therefore give this subject any thought as a deterrent to the use of a lawn or other sprayed area for their Victory gardens.

What to Do

By PHYLLIS BELMONT

If you have acquired any bad speech habits begin at once to overcome the fault. Some of the most common faults are drawing, talking with the teeth clenched, talking in a nasal pitch, muffling your words and talking too quickly so you are out of breath. Listen to your voice when you talk and see if you are guilty of any of these faults. If you are, practice speaking, think about what you are saying and clear up these defects. They are annoying to others and keep you from creating the good impression you want to make. Ledger Syndicate.—WNU Features.

Radar—Our Silent Invisible Ally; Its Birth and Development Related

"Possibly an arrangement could be worked out whereby destroyers located on a line a number of miles apart could be immediately aware of the passage of an enemy vessel between any two destroyers in the line, irrespective of fog, darkness or smoke screen."

This phrase, written in September, 1922, by Dr. A. Hoyt Taylor and Mr. Leo C. Young of the Naval Aircraft Radio Laboratory, Anacostia, D. C., marked the birth of "Radar"—our invisible, powerful, mysterious war ally.

The term Radar means radio-detecting and ranging. It is probably playing a big part in Allied land and air victories. Its full importance probably cannot be revealed until after the war.

After thoroughly studying a report submitted by Dr. Taylor in 1930, the navy radio division of the bureau of engineering assigned the naval research laboratory this problem:

"Investigate use of radio to detect the presence of enemy vessels and aircraft. Special emphasis is placed on the confidential nature of this problem." Meanwhile the theory of reflection from moving objects had been confirmed by experiments conducted in co-operation with the dirigible, Akron. Radar was brought to the attention of the war department by the secretary of the navy, who wrote:

"Certain phases of the problem appear to be of more concern to the army than to the navy. For example, a system of transmitters and associated receivers might be set up about a defense area to test its effectiveness in detecting the passage of hostile aircraft into the area."

In June, 1936, five years before Pearl Harbor, representatives of the bureau of engineering witnessed a demonstration of aircraft detection equipment at the naval research laboratory. Rear Admiral Bowen, then chief of the bureau, directed the plans be made for the installation of a complete set of Radar equipment, as then existed, aboard ship. Radar was tested during Pacific maneuvers that fall. After more exhaustive tests aboard the USS New York, Vice Adm. Alfred F. Johnson, commanding the battleship division, stated: "The equipment is one of the most important radio developments since the advent of radio itself."

In September, 1940, representatives of the British Technical mission held a series of conferences with representatives of the navy department and the naval research laboratory at which time much technical information relating to Radar was exchanged. Previously it had been known that Great Britain was in possession of a system for detecting aircraft but most of the details of the British system were unknown here. During this conference with the British Technical mission, it was found that the British equipment was similar in many respects to the equipment developed by the naval research laboratory, and members of the British mission stated that the British development had resulted from articles reporting the preliminary work between 1926 and 1930 of Dr. Taylor and Mr. Young, of the naval research laboratory, and Dr. Breit and Dr. Tuve, of the Carnegie Institute, studying the height of the Kennelly-Heaviside layer. With this preliminary study as a base, the British independently had developed their Radar system and independently had arrived at frequencies and circuits very similar to those developed in this country.

In the Navy a floor is a "deck," doors are "bulkheads," downstairs is "below," and a cigarette is a "Camel." At least, Camel is the favorite cigarette among Navy men, as it is among men in the Army, Marines, and Coast Guard. (Based on actual sales records from service men's stores.) And a carton of Camels is a favorite gift. Though there are now Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. think of a runaway or a gent who has spent his life eating not wisely but too well. Instead, it's a particular kind of a job at a sewing machine, just as a trolley operator doesn't mean a street car motor-man but a lad who does the finishing and icing in a bakery.

Forms of Genista
The different forms of genista have the common name of broom.
They are spoken of as the brooms in Europe, while in America we hardly hear the name. They enjoy a sandy loam, but in every case the drainage must be good.

'Cake Eating Lady'
In the Seventeenth century, the 'cake eating lady' was a familiar figure of English fairs. One such performer ate 12 pounds of cake in less than 30 minutes of each of six daily performances.

Adhesive Tape Stains
To remove adhesive tape stains from fabrics, apply kerosene or carbon tetrachloride, and then wash the stain with warm suds.

Car Knocker
A car knocker does not criticize your automobile. He's a tank car repairman in the car building industry.
