Old Age Assistance Not Effected by Farm Work

A recent revision in the policies of the State Social Welfare Commission provides that the amount of the grant of a person who received old age assistance in April, 1943, cannot be reduced from the amount he received for that month because of agricultural labor.

This resolution which will remain in effect until six months after the termination of the present war, was authorized by an act of Congress. The act makes it possible for persons who received old age assistance in April to engage in farm work, either as proprietors or employees, while continuing to receive their grants of assistance at the April level. It does not, however, apply to persons who have received their first old age assistance checks since April, 1943, nor to those engaged in other occupations.

The assistance grants of recipients having income from employment other than agricultural labor may be reduced or cancelled, depending on the amount of their income after all expenses of employment have been considered. If a grant is cancelled because of income from work other than farm labor, the County Bureau of Social Aid may reinstate it within eight days after receiving notice from the recipient of a termination of employment.

Pressure Cookers Available for Isoco

Word has been recently received by the County U. S. D. A. War Board announcing the number of pressure cookers that have been allocated to Isoco county, and a special rationing committee was appointed by this same board to assist with proper distribution of this equipment. Home canners are encouraged to secure application blanks from the War Board Office in Tawas City, or from the County Agricultural Agent's Office at East Tawas, and return them by July 15th, so that fair consideration may be given everyone when the ration board allocates these cookers in Isoco county.

The board has been informed that three different companies will supply pressure cookers in Michigan, these include: The National Pressure Cooker Company, Eau Claire, Wisconsin; The Burpee Can Sealer Company, Barrington, Illinois; and the Wisconsin Aluminum Foundry, Inc., Manitowish, Wisconsin. It is also understood that cookers will range in price from $14.00 to $18.00, and will be available through local hardware stores.

Gardeners with large farm gardens and those with small Victory gardens have been encouraged to plant crops which would supply the largest possible quantities of nutritious healthy food. Michigan State College recently suggested that nearly every garden should have perhaps eleven different crops which could be classified as essential vegetables. In addition to tomatoes and the snap beans, beets, broccoli, and cabbage, are three others that belong on the list because of the volume and value produced for the space and time required for the production.

Another must is carrots for storage and for summer use. Lettuce for use fresh, onions, turnips, spinach especially for canning and winter squash, complete the list.

Luxury crops in wartime gardening are those that take up space, take seed, fertilizer and sweat, and yet fail to produce the vitamins, the volume or type of crop that can be canned or stored for winter use.

Under the luxury heading are such garden favorites as sweet corn, cucumbers, peas, parsnips and radishes.

In case the garden supplies its fruits throughout the entire year, a careful canning program must now be planned. Authorities tell us that most vegetables should be canned in the pressure cooker. However, this equipment has been rationed and proper application blanks must be filed, if those wishing to purchase pressure cookers in order that the purchase may be made.

County Agent W. L. Finley, today, suggested that all those who interested (Turn to No. 3 Back Page)

by BRENDA CONRAD

THE STORY SO FAR: Anne Heywood, beautiful daughter of a wealthy New York newspaper publisher, goes on an assignment to Puerto Rico where Pete Wilcox, a reporter on her father's paper, is stationed as a U. S. Army intelligence officer. On the boat she meets a young Puerto Rican, Miguel Valera, and an engineer named Richard Taussig, of whom she is immediately suspicious in spite of the fact that he looks like a typical tourist. She does not know that he is, in fact, a German agent ordered to destroy Puerto Rico's water supply. Pete meets the boat, but does not tell Anne that he, too, has reason to be suspicious of Taussig, although his commanding officer so far refuses to act.

CHAPTER III

Anne closed the door of Room 110 behind her and stood for a moment, listening under the open transom. The door of Room 108, a few steps down from hers, had been slightly ajar, and without knowing why or how she had felt that somebody was standing behind it, waiting. She heard it close quietly, and listened for steps along the waxed floor, but there were none. After a moment she went across the room to the window and looked down into the sunlit patio where she and Pete had been. The windows of 108 opened onto the patio too.

She turned and went over to her baggage stacked in the corner on the other side of the window. Again without knowing exactly why, she opened the flat case lying on top of her steamer trunk, and looked inside. It was just as she had packed it, and yet somehow it wasn't. The flat rubber band around the batch of letters of introduction lying on top of her dressing gown was twisted as if it had been slipped back hurriedly. She had put it carefully flat so that it wouldn't mar the edges of one of the envelopes that was broader than the rest.

She looked back at the door, then reached to the table and took her compact out of her handbag. She opened it and struck the powdered feather puff sharply on the polished brass face of her suitcase lock. "Anne the girl detective," she thought as she blew the powder off the way a police inspector had showed her once in New York. On the brass oblong were three clearly defined thumb prints. The most distinct was probably her own, the others were larger.

She began to unpack her things humming softly to herself. As she was almost through she heard the sharp quick click of high heels out in the hall, and a light double knock on her door. She crossed the room and opened it. "Anne! My dear! How simply wonderful!"

The girl standing there, in a blue-checked gingham dress, a blue bow in her fuzzy taffy-colored hair, her baby blue eyes sparkling with joy, held out her hands. "You don't remember me! Why, Anne! It's Sue Porter—Sue Lattimer!"

The sixth form of Miss Oakley's fashionable school for young ladies flashed back into Anne's mind.

"Sue! Of all people! What are you doing here—of all places!" Anne cried. "Of course I remember you. You haven't changed a day. Only where's your uniform? You still look sixteen."

Sue laughed. "Well, I'm not—I'm twenty-three, and Mrs. Russell Porter, and the mother of two hulking infants, aged four and two and a half."

That all flashed back too. Spoiled, willful, curly-headed Sue who got letters from boys when the rest of Miss Oakley's young ladies were gangly and lank-haired and hopeless everywhere except on the hockey field.

"But what are you doing down here?" Anne demanded. Sue sat on the bed and crossed her feet under her.

"Oh, darling, Russell's firm sent him down," she said with a groan. "It was more money, and I thought it would be a wonderful chance for him to get ahead. I thought it would be romantic. You know—the tropics? I hadn't heard about cockroaches and termites. I simply hate it. We're trying to get transferred."

She brightened expectantly. "Did you meet a Mr. Taussig on the boat?"

Anne nodded. "Why?" "Because I want you to help us with him. You see, he's awfully important to Russell. He's one of the world's leading sanitary engineers, and that's what Russell is."

She swung her bare brown legs off the bed and went over to the window. "That's Russell down there with him now."

She turned back, her blue eyes appealing as a child's. "You see, Anne, I have to do everything I can, because . . . well, it was my fault Russell didn't finish M. I. T. He was going back, but the baby came, and so . . . you see?"

Anne nodded, looking over Sue's shoulder. Down at a table by the fountain Mr. Richard Taussig, in a white linen suit and brown-and-white oxfords, his finger tips together in a contemplative arch, looking much more civilized than he had in his curious get-up aboard ship, was listening to the young man beside him.

"Doesn't Russell like it here?" she asked. The corners of Sue's red mouth drooped. She looked like an unhappy six-year-old.

"Yes, he likes it all right," she admitted half heartedly. "It's really me that wants him to get away. That's why I'm having Mr. Taussig to dinner tomorrow night. So he can talk to Russell. You'll come, won't you? And be awfully nice to him? Please, Anne—will you?"

She looked out the window. "Russell's leaving, so I'll have to go now. Remember—eight o'clock. Russell will come for you. Oh, look—there's Diego Gongoro."

A tall heavy-set man of about fifty, with iron-gray hair, the pockmarks on his face visible from where they stood, was sitting at one of the small tables at the corner of the terrace, absorbed in his newspaper and cup of coffee. He had a short clipped mustache and shaggy eyebrows, and an air . . . definitely an air, Anne thought.

"Who is he?" she asked. "He's your friend Miguel Valera's uncle. But he's not like the Valeras. He mixes with the Americans. Of course he's Spanish, he's not Puerto Rican. And my dear—"

She lowered her voice to a whisper. "—He has a mistress. You know it's quite customary down here. It's perfectly above board, except their wives pretend they don't know it. Well, I've got to go. It's perfectly swell having you down. I'll see you tomorrow."

Anne nodded.

She turned back to the window. As she looked down, she saw Diego Gongoro get up and make his way casually through the arcade into the hotel. Almost immediately Richard Taussig got up too. Even more casually he strolled over to the table Diego Gongoro had left and picked up the folded newspaper.

She lowered her voice to a whisper. "—He has a mistress."

He came back to his chair and sat down again. Anne watched him unfold the paper, moving back instinctively a little behind the long chintz curtains. She could see very clearly the piece of letter paper inside it.

Mr. Taussig glanced around him, glanced up at her window, looked down at the paper in front of him a moment, and slipped it unobtrusively into his pocket. He put the newspaper down on the table, got up and strolled into the hotel.

The Officers Club at El Morro was inside the gate, overlooking the golf course, the graveyard and the Atlantic Ocean. It was part of the old Spanish barracks.

When the waiter had gone Anne said, "Look, Pete—do you know anything about a man named Richard Taussig? He was on the ship." "Sure," Pete said cheerfully. He kept from looking at her. "I know all about him. He's an internationally known sanitary engineer. He's dining with the General on Friday, and the Governor Saturday. He has the blessing of Washington. Why?"

"I just wondered. Do you suppose he can do anything about the water supply at the Granada?"

"I wish he'd start here, if he can. But you don't have to worry about Mr. Taussig. He can't help his face. He's Okay."

He poured the rest of his beer into his glass. "Any other information? Public Relations is sort of my job."

"Then do you happen to know Russell Porter?" Anne asked. "My dear, I know everything," Pete said blandly. "Russell Porter is the local representative of Consolidated. He's in charge of a big job they've got."

He looked at his watch. The officers had thinned out, leaving the women sitting around. "I'll see you tonight. What about dinner?"

Anne shook her head. "I'm dining with somebody else." "Not Miguel Valera?" She smiled. "Why not? Don't tell me you're like Sue Porter?"

He looked at her soberly. "Look, Annie. You haven't fallen in love with that guy, have you?"

Her gaze wandered out across the rolling green lawn to the ocean. She had asked herself that all the way from the Granada. The note she'd found in her mail box—"You have a caller, so I won't disturb you, but I'll be around at six and if you aren't engaged may I take you to dinner?"—had set her heart dancing and her eyes sparkling as she stuffed it into her bag and ran out to the taxi. Maybe that was what it was. She hadn't been in love often enough to be very sure about it. But it was something—something new and different.

Miguel Valera waited for Anne to sit down. It hadn't occurred to her that they wouldn't have dinner alone, or that she could be suddenly dashed as she was when she stepped out of the elevator and saw his uncle Diego Gongoro and his cousin Graciela there in the lobby with him.

"I understand you are a newspaper writer, Miss Heywood," Don Diego said. His smile was quick and warm.

Anne was instantly aware of two things. The first was that he thought it amusing that such an attractive young woman should be anything of the sort. The second was that it was odd he should have known it. She had carefully concealed it from Miguel. Pete Wilcox was the only other person on the island who knew it. Unless . . . She thought about the letters in her suitcases. There was one to the correspondent of the press syndicate her father's papers used in Puerto Rico. And that meant that Diego Gongoro must have talked to Richard Taussig during the afternoon—and that they'd talked about her. It was all very curious.

"I've worked on my father's paper, if that's what you mean," she said. "I wasn't much good."

"I am pleased to hear that, Senorita. We believe a woman has a higher place in society. She should let her husband take care of her."

"But if she hasn't a husband?" Anne said.

"That surely wouldn't be difficult for you, Miss Heywood."

Graciela put her untasted cocktail on the table. Her cheeks were flushed.

At no time would Anne ever have believed that the appearance of Mr. Richard Taussig could effect anything but distaste. Just then she was distinctly relieved. She actually found herself smiling and saying "Good evening" with the utmost cordiality to the man she objected to more than any other man she knew.

"Good evening, Miss Heywood," Mr. Taussig said. He turned to Miguel. "You must be delighted to be back home again. It's so perfect here."

Anne found herself blinking a little. Mr. Taussig, dressed in immaculate white linen, was as courteous as Don Diego himself.

"This is my uncle, Mr. Gongoro—Mr. Taussig," Miguel said.

They shook hands. "This is a great pleasure, Mr. Gongoro," Mr. Taussig said. There was nothing to indicate that they had ever seen or heard of each other before.

It was the same when they all went into dinner together. Only once did she have the quick sense of fear that she'd had the afternoon in the ship's library. That was when Mr. Taussig started to put his green guide book on the floor beside his chair. She held out her hand, not because she wanted to see it but because it was something they could talk about that perhaps Graciela could talk about too. She hadn't said a word since he came. Anne tried to analyze what had happened just then. What he said was, "Now, now, Miss Heywood, this is my book." It was bland and playful, but there had been something else in it.

Mr. Taussig put the book down on the other side of his chair. "Of course when the bases here are finished, I imagine your unemployment problem will be bad," he said. "I understand the five-hundred-acre law will work an additional hardship on your economy. Does it affect your father, Mr. Valera?"

"My father is not a corporation, fortunately," Miguel Valera said.

It was the longest meal Anne ever sat through. If her own voice had been a victrola record and her smile on a motion-picture screen across the room they couldn't have been more detached from her. It seemed hours before the coconut sherbet served in polished half coconut shells came and went and they had coffee. At least, she thought as they finally got up to go, she was sure of a number of things she hadn't been sure of before. One was that Miguel had asked her to dinner just because he was Latin and polite to visiting firemen. Another was that Graciela was not bright enough to realize that, or to realize that her open resentment of Anne was stupid. Or maybe it wasn't. Maybe Latins liked their women to be jealous.

But chiefly she knew that she was either stark raving mad or that Richard Taussig was something profoundly different from what they all thought he was.

Blood Tests of Hogs To Stem Abortions

Healthy Looking Swine Can Carry Disease

"Typhoid Mary," who a few decades ago unwittingly spread typhoid fever although not appearing to be ill from the disease herself, has a present-day counterpart in swine which perpetuate infectious or contagious abortion by farrowing apparently healthy litters that may spread the disease.

More than 2,300 blood samples from approximately 32 herds in different parts of the state were tested last year by the department of animal pathology and hygiene at the University of Illinois college of agriculture. About 10 per cent proved to be reactors.

Invariably introduced into healthy herds through the purchase of apparently healthy gilts, sows or boars, the contagious type of abortion can be definitely diagnosed by blood testing all breeding animals in the herd. Results of the test and approved methods of management will enable owners to prevent and control the disease intelligently.

A testing and management program has been outlined by the extension service of the college of agriculture to guide purebred swine breeders in preventing and controlling this malady. Two negative blood tests of all breeding stock in the herd at intervals of six months entitle owners of clean herds to accreditation certificates issued by the state department of agriculture. The disease control plan involves the cooperation of the local veterinarian. Although no charge is made for testing blood samples, owners pay for collecting them. Sterile vials for collecting blood samples are supplied by the laboratory.

All reactors to the test should be fattened for market, but if they are not marketed, they should be isolated at the time of farrowing. Such isolation is only a temporary expedient, since the ultimate aim of herd owners is to eliminate all infected animals. Normal litters from infected sows may be placed in quarantine and raised free from disease. After reacting animals have been marketed, the premises should be cleaned and disinfected.

Agriculture in Industry

By FLORENCE C. WEED

Ramie Fiber

As soon as someone invents a practical machine to tear out ramie fiber ready for spinning, this country will have a new industry. Ramie can be grown especially well in the Gulf states and large yields have been obtained in Louisiana and Florida.

The plant has been grown in China for 3,000 years and was used extensively for cloth before cotton was introduced. In China it is cut, crushed and cleaned by hand, and one man's work only produces from two to six pounds of fiber in a day. To be practical here, the industry would have to be completely mechanized.

Ramie was first brought to the United States about 1855. Experiments in growing this plant have been conducted by private individuals, state agricultural experiment stations and the United States department of agriculture in many states. The most extensive plantings of 40 to 50 acres have been carried on by men who were developing decorticating machines.

There are several plants spinning ramie in this country, and the domestic fiber will find a ready market as soon as machines are developed to extricate the fiber. It has great strength when wet and will not mildew. The fiber is particularly attractive and is so soft and lustrous that as much as 20 per cent ramie may be mixed with silk without changing the appearance.

Cutting Pulpwood

In cutting pulpwood, farmers should know what types of trees to take out. It is also important to know how to cut the timber stand properly. The key to a productive forest is to maintain a good growing stock. A good stand of trees should be left.

All trees which are to be taken out should be carefully marked, and especially so where the job of harvesting is to be turned over to others.

GOD CALLS A LEADER

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 3:1-12. GOLDEN TEXT—Come now therefore, and I will send thee unto Pharaoh, that thou mayest bring forth my people the children of Israel out of Egypt.—Exodus 3:10.

God calls men, commissions, and uses them to carry out His plans and purposes in the earth. What a great truth that is, and how it glorifies the destiny of man to know that it is divinely appointed.

As Joseph Parker effectively points out, the experience of Moses in Midian was a direct dealing with God, whereas we who may not be able to "see the fountain" must "be content to drink at the stream," but should always remember that the stream flows from that same fountain.

"Every man should put to himself the questions. What is my destiny? What does God mean me to be and to do in the world? . . . It is a most pitiable thing that a man should read of Moses being divinely called . . . to a special work" and fail to realize "that God has a special work for every man to do." Let us be careful that we do not "so pervert and misinterpret circumstances as to press them into a justification of self-will" rather than recognize them as "destiny which is beckoning us to duty."

For our instruction and guidance we consider, then, the story of the call of this outstanding leader of Israel. It presents him as a true servant of God, one who was—

I. Personally Equipped.

While it is a blessed truth that God will use any man who surrenders himself to His control and guidance, no matter how limited that man's ability and training may be, it is also true that, other things being equal, the man with the best equipment will be the most useful servant.

God gave Moses a unique preparation. He was first of all a Hebrew, born among the people that he was to lead. He knew the luxury and all the cultural advantages of the Egyptian court (Acts 7:22), with the safeguard of training by his own mother as his nurse.

He observed at first hand the oppression of his people, and made a self-willed and impulsive effort to deal with the problem. The result was that he had a "postgraduate" course of instruction and discipline in the wilderness, where he spent forty years in the school of experience.

We have learned anew from our war experience that training for service is essential. If that is true in military matters and in secular life, it is doubly true in the service of Christ. He does graciously use even the humble and untrained worker, but no one who has a vision of service will be content to remain unprepared.

II. Spiritually Qualified.

Moses was a man who knew God. Had he been a worldly man he would only have been curious regarding the phenomenon of the burning bush. But note how alert and reverent he was and how immediately responsive to the instructions and the call of God.

Here God's future leader was made conscious of the infinite majesty and holiness of God, the need of reverence and godly fear, the purpose of the Eternal One to deliver His people, and the assurance that He would be with His servant. Such a spiritual experience made effective the excellent preparation which he already had for service.

All the training and preparation in the world is worse than useless in God's service apart from that spiritual qualification that comes from true regeneration and dedication to Him.

There is no more pathetic sight than a spiritually powerless church worker going through the motions of service for Christ. If we are in that condition we may be sure that we deceive no one but ourselves.

III. Divinely Called.

Moses was called (vv. 4), commissioned (vv. 6-10), and clad with divine authority (vv. 11, 12) for his great task.

God calls His servants to different responsibilities and in different ways, but the important thing is that we should know that we are in His will and that we are answering His call.

No one has any right to choose full-time Christian service simply as a desirable vocation. In any calling of life man needs God's guidance in order to make a proper choice, but in the ministry or missionary service it is an absolute essential.

If we were more careful to seek His will for every individual there would be less unhappiness in the world. But in the case of the one who goes out to speak for God there is not only the danger of distress, but of real disaster for himself and those to whom he tries to minister, if he is not Christ.

Prepared, qualified, and called, Moses is now ready to meet God before he goes on to his life of holy exploits for Him.

Recreation Kits Contain Books, Films, Even Piano

A dozen different kinds of recreation kits have been given to our soldiers by the war department, says Collier's. For example, Kit "C" contains 2,000 books; "J" sound-picture projectors and films; "B-1" radios, phonographs and an amplifier; "D" violins, guitars, a small piano; "A" boxing gloves and equipment for baseball, football and softball; "F" playing cards, poker chips, dice and sets of many games, including chess, checkers and backgammon.

One thing a soldier is afraid of is a display of emotion. That's why his slang so often sounds derogatory. For example, he refers to the silver eagles on his colonel's shoulder straps as "buzzards." But when he speaks of his favorite cigarette, he says: "Camels." They're first with men in the Army as well as with Sailors, Marines, and Coast Guardsmen. (According to actual sales records in service men's stores.) And though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. S., and to men in the Navy, Marines, and Coast Guard wherever they are.—Adv.

Lights of New York

by L. L. STEVENSON

Pay Off: Recently, as perhaps you read, a Newark woman obtained a maid by including in the compensation, permission to wear her mistress' fur coat. Just about that time, a young Westchester matron, that she might engage in war work, was seeking a maid to look after her home and young child. When she was about to despair at finding the right combination, a young woman of striking appearance called. The interview brought out that she was educated, refined and intelligent, also that she was employed by one of the best known model agencies in New York. Questioned as to why she wanted to change to domestic service, she replied: "I don't see any future in modeling and I love children. Before coming to you, through inquiries, I learned all about you and your family—and that you wear beautiful clothes."

Discord: A scout reports that when Johnny Long was playing in New Orleans, he noticed Rubinoff in the audience. After the number, Long introduced Rubinoff who took a bow. But the audience kept on applauding so the violinist finally walked to the podium, whispered a number to the orchestra's pianist and motioned to Long for his violin which was handed over. As Rubinoff raised his bow, the audience hushed in expectation of a treat. But instead of music, the most awful screeching resulted. Rubinoff, suspecting a gag, glared at Long who for a moment, stood red-faced. Then he understood. Since he is a south-paw fiddler, his violin is strung in reverse. Thus Rubinoff, playing from a normal stance, got only wrong notes. A violin hastily borrowed from the string section (all right-handers) fixed up what looked like an international situation.

Honeymoon Lane: Linda Paige of the Hotel Delmonico, is working hand-in-hand with the chubby little fellow with the bow and arrows and for a variety of reasons, principally the ban on driving, is finding the going a bit tough. The cause of her new industry is the Open House for Officers, located in the hotel. Among the thousands of young men of the Allied Nations who are entertained there are of course many who have matrimony on their minds. Getting married is easy enough but a place to spend a honeymoon right now is another matter. Consequently Miss Paige is busily digging up and listing places that are within easy reach of New York by train or by bus, yet sufficiently remote so that the newlyweds may spend a week or more in a little world of their own.

Co-operation: Speaking of soldiers, they continue to crowd midtown hotels, especially on week-ends. Because of the congestion, some actually sleep in lobbies, or in bus station washrooms, though the situation has been relieved by the opening of several centers where cots may be obtained at small cost. But while the midtown hotels were overcrowded, it seems that inns in the Greenwich Village section had empty rooms. Downtown hotel men got together with midtown hotel men and put into effect an arrangement whereby overflow business is sent to Greenwich Village, the downtown hotels paying cabfare. The system is said to be working satisfactorily to all concerned, the downtown hotels getting more business and the service men free taxi rides.

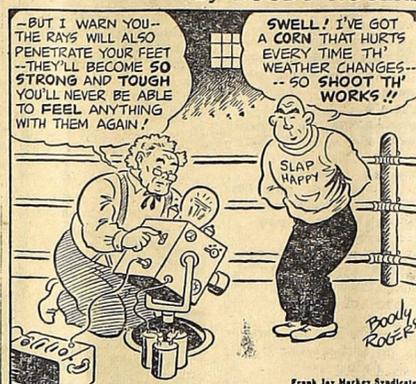

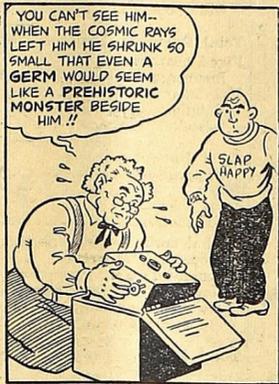

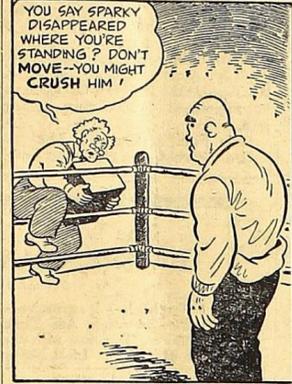

Start: Milton Bacon, lecturer and "God's Country" raconteur of CBS, was born in Missouri and because of his father's death, at an early age was forced to give up school and go to work. His first job was as messenger for a Carthage, Mo., newspaper. He literally set fire to his work. Then, with a friend, he tried to hitch a ride west on the cowcatcher of a locomotive. The engine stopped a few hundred feet from the station with the cowcatcher and the boys right over a fire on the tracks. The engineer saved them. After so much fire, Bacon entered the insurance business which, through the years, took him all over the country. In his travels he met and talked with thousands of persons and it is that first-hand material that now makes up the greater part of his programs.

Olio: Tommy Dorsey thinks it's silly to say women are as young as they look—they can't all be under 30. . . . The Peekskill Military academy has a staff officer named Captain Kidd. . . . A member of the Broadway fraternity leaving for the army was given a farewell dinner at the Cafe Madison the other night. Jack Haley, asked to eulogize him, said: "He was a good man as good men go. And as good men go, he's going."

WATCHERS OF THE SKY

Night and day, at lonely outposts in northern Michigan, thousands of air spotters voluntarily undergo hardship and loss of sleep to protect our industrial areas from bombing raids.

They rarely get into the headlines. Often they watch patiently through the hours without seeing or hearing a plane. But the duty they so faithfully perform is vital. In case of air attack it will be their trained eyes and ears that detect the approach of Axis bombers.

A telephone stands ready in every spotter's post. With the words "Army Flash" the spotter gets an immediate connection with the nearest army information center. And if the aircraft he reports cannot be identified as friendly, fighter planes roar into the air at once to intercept the enemy. At the same time all Civilian Defense centers in the threatened area are warned by telephone to prepare for a raid.

Citizens of Michigan who sleep soundly in their beds at home owe a debt of gratitude to the Aircraft Warning Service.

Abnormal Tire Wear

If tires show abnormal wear the trouble may be caused by under-inflation or misaligned wheels, according to the California State Automobile association. Another cause of uneven tire wear is unbalanced wheels. At high speed a wheel only slightly out of balance develops a powerful centrifugal force. This force jerks the wheel up and down as it rotates. In addition to abnormal up and down motion there also may be side motion as the heavy spot moves fore and aft. Unbalanced wheels frequently cause shimmy, abnormal wear in steering mechanism, as well as cupped spots in the tire tread.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Wigwag
Frequently the Navy, the Coast Guard and the Signal Corps finds it expedient to relay messages without benefit of telephone, telegraph or radio. That is when the semaphore system is employed.

Like a single flag in the "Wigwag" system, the purchase of a War Savings Stamp or Bond, in itself has an infinitesimal effect upon the entire war effort, but when 130 million determined people set their minds to make our War Bond drives successful, the result is anything but infinitesimal. Illuminated Aisles

Going into the gloom of dark cinema houses, people are likely to stumble, bump into others. Ushers with flashlights are nuisances; small lamps placed near the aisle floors illuminate only small areas. American Cyanamid company announced what it considers a better idea: aisle rugs treated with fluorescent dyes, bathed by invisible ultraviolet radiation from small tubes. Such rugs glow softly all over, interfere with nothing on the screen.

MORE PLANES TO CHINA

It can now be revealed that the bottleneck has been broken in transportation to China, and greater quantities of equipment for air operations against the Japanese are being moved.

This is an encouraging development following the successful Chinese operations against the Japs in the Ichang area within recent weeks. Incidentally, these operations have been somewhat exaggerated by the Chinese. It now appears that the Japs did not intend to move against Chungking, nor did they have quite the number of men earlier reported.

The outstanding point, however, is that the Chinese were successful largely as a result of air power. This was a tribute not only to Chenault and the American pilots, but also to a contingent of Chinese pilots flying with the Chenault group.

Until recently it was not desirable to increase the number of planes in China, because the limited supply facilities by air from India constituted a bottleneck. There was no need of having more planes if they could not be supplied with fuel and bombs for operation. Now, however, a greater number of transport planes has been provided for this service and it has become feasible to increase the number of combat planes at the end of the line in China.

PLANES TO RUSSIA

About a year ago, Russian Red army men in Washington almost got down on their knees begging for airplanes. U. S. planes were much scarcer then than today. Production was low and there were also heavy demands from Egypt and MacArthur.

At one time, the Russians actually suggested that the best way to parcel out lend-lease equipment would be to adopt a very simple standard, namely, which army was killing the most Germans.

Gradually, however, planes were sent to Russia, until today they are going in tremendous quantities. This is one reason why the Nazis have lacked heavy superiority in the air, which previously they had.

In fact, the Russians now have shifted their pleas away from airplanes and concentrated them on food. With the breadbasket of Russia in German hands, large sections of the population are starving.

ARMY DOCTORS STYMIED

Next time the army tries to recruit doctors in peacetime, a lot of medicos who patriotically became reserve officers long before Pearl Harbor are going to think twice before they do so again.

Reason is that the doctors who became reserve officers well in advance of war have now been penalized. They are stymied on promotions. Meanwhile, doctors who have come into the army recently have shot way ahead of them in rank.

What happened was that after a lot of reserve corps doctors had been brought into the army, still more doctors were needed. So the medical corps upped its bids. It offered higher commissions as majors and lieutenant colonels.

Meanwhile, when lower ranking former reserve officers raise the question of promotions, the stock reply is: "The tables of organization do not permit it."

☐ Harry Hopkins knew very little about the creation of Justice Byrnes' new War Mobilization office before it was created—though he is a member. Some politicians interpret this as meaning that Harry is slipping in his close personal friendship with FDR—but he isn't.

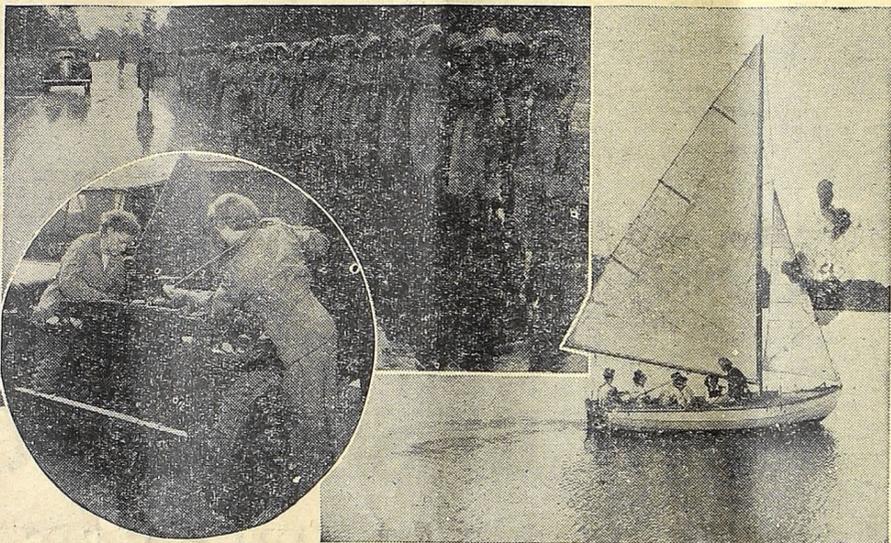

☐ Shenango Depot, Pa., has a stockade where about 2,000 soldiers are detained as prisoners, but thousands of other I-A men are sent there for transfer to other areas. It is a transfer center, and the fact that a man is sent there does not mean he is going to a dumping-ground.

Wounded Raiders Flown From Behind Jap Lines

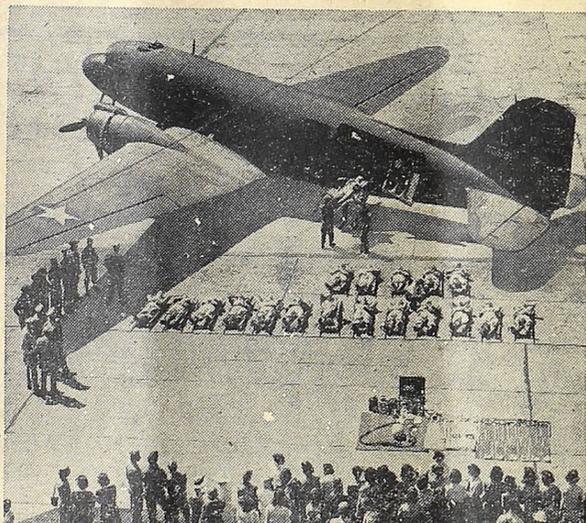

Despite wounds and jungle sores, Pvt. John Yates, a British raider, (left) manages to smile as he is flown from Burma. He was one of the raiding party that blew up railroad lines, supply depots, and disrupted communications 200 miles behind Japanese lines in that area. At center, raiders board that airplane which flew them back to India. They may be distinguished from RAF fliers by their bedraggled condition. A raider suffering from dysentery (bottom right) hangs onto a rope as he drinks water inside the plane.

In snappy sharp cadence a unit of women marines (at top) march smartly to their classes at Camp Lejeune, New River, N. C. The lady leathernecks are wearing their raincoats. At lower left two women marines check the water and oil of a jeep. This is part of the toughening up course which these girls go through before they relieve a male marine so that he can get into a more active post. As part of their course, women marines must take lessons in sailing. A group is shown at right in sailboats. One of the most pleasing experiences for the girls at Camp Lejeune is being served by male waiters in the mess halls.

PEAKING OF SPORTS

By Bob McShane
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Despite the many problems besetting all types of athletics, the National Football league looks with confidence to the 1943 season.

Pointing to the success of baseball as a pattern for the diamond game, Elmer Layden, league commissioner, is optimistic about the outlook:

"I think our members feel that now is the time to assert ourselves, to show that pro football is deserving of its high position in the sports world. Baseball surely had as many problems last year, if not more, than now confront us. I am sure the league will prove it can survive under trying conditions.

"We won't have talent comparable to that of last year and we can't think in these times of great unbeatable teams, but there will be no lessening of competition and games will be as hardfought and exciting as ever. Baseball and other sports have proved that competition is the big factor."

Commissioner Layden added that club owners always have recognized the value of competitive sports, and that the dollar sign wasn't the only guide in affairs of the National league. "Many of them (the clubs) have lost money in normal seasons. Some of them never have realized any profit, but they still continue."

New Franchises

The league, as of the present time, appears to be in a healthy state. It will operate this season with eight teams, and one more ready to go to work in 1944.

At a recent Chicago meeting, club magnates granted a franchise to Ted Collins, manager of radio star Kate Smith and an enthusiastic football fan. Arrangements are being made to set up an organization in Boston. The new team's games are to be played in Fenway park, home of the Red Sox.

At the same session, petitions were received for two more franchises—one from Don Ameche, film and radio star, and the other from Charles Murray, Buffalo, N. Y., promoter.

Sideline observers were somewhat confused when one franchise was granted and the other two were held up. However, the league decided to table until its December meeting the latter two applications in order that a study might be made of the problem, not the least of which is transportation.

Actually the league as it now stands has 11 franchises. Boston's becomes active in 1944. Cleveland's was made inactive for the duration at an earlier meeting this year and permission was given the Pittsburgh Steelers and the Philadelphia Eagles to merge for the season.

Round-Robin

The fact that only eight teams of the 11 will be operating makes it possible, for the first time in National league history, to play a round-robin tournament. Each team will meet every other team in its division on a home-and-home basis and meet each team in the other division once.

The Chicago Bears, Chicago Cardinals, Green Bay Packers and Detroit Lions compose the Western division, with the New York Giants, Brooklyn Dodgers, Washington Redskins, and the Pittsburgh-Philadelphia club grouped in the East.

A franchise will be nothing new for Boston. It was in the league until 1936 when George Preston Marshall, owner of the Washington Redskins, pulled out of that city in favor of the nation's capital. It was Marshall who made the motion that the league grant Collins a Boston franchise effective in 1944.

The Boston franchise becomes operative just prior to the December draft meeting, which will allow the new club to get in on the college player draft. The league, together with club officials, figured it would be smart policy to delay Boston's entrance for a few months to prevent many of the mistakes which might have resulted from hasty organization.

☐ All six recognized world marks in high hurdles are held by American athletes.

Woman Pilot

By Cornelia Fort

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with Woman's Home Companion.)

(Here is one of the most remarkable articles ever published—a personal story by the first woman pilot to die on war duty in American history. Shortly after it was written, Miss Fort, 24, of Nashville, Tenn., was killed when the bomber she was piloting crashed in Texas.)

I knew I was going to join the Woman's Auxiliary Ferrying squadron before the organization was a reality, before it had a name, before it was anything but a radical idea in the minds of a few men who believed that women could fly airplanes. But I never knew it so surely as I did in Honolulu on December 7, 1941.

At dawn that morning I drove from Waikiki to the John Rodgers civilian airport right next to Pearl Harbor, where I was a civilian pilot instructor. Shortly after 6:30 I began landing and take-off practice with my regular student.

Coming in just before the last landing, I looked casually around and saw a military plane coming directly toward me. I jerked the controls away from my student and jammed the throttle wide open to pull above the oncoming plane. He passed so close under us that our celluloid windows rattled violently and I looked down to see what kind of plane it was.

The painted red balls on the tops of the wings shone brightly in the sun. I looked again with complete and utter disbelief. Honolulu was familiar with the emblem of the Rising Sun on passenger ships, but not on airplanes.

I looked quickly at Pearl Harbor and my spine tingled when I saw billowing black smoke. Still I thought hollowly it might be some kind of coincidence or maneuvers. It might be, it must be. For sure, dear God!

Then I looked up and saw the formations of silver bombers riding in. Something detached itself from an airplane and came glistening down. My eyes followed it down, down, and even with the knowledge pounding in my mind, my heart turned convulsively when the bomb exploded in the middle of the harbor.

I knew the air was not the place for my little baby airplane and I set about landing as quickly as ever I could. A few seconds later a shadow passed over me and simultaneously bullets spattered all around me.

Suddenly that little wedge of sky above Hickam Field and Pearl Harbor was the busiest, fullest piece of sky I ever saw.

We counted anxiously as our little civilian planes came flying home to roost. Two never came back. They were washed ashore weeks later on the windward side of the island, bullet-riddled. Not a pretty way for the brave little yellow Cubs and their pilots to go down to death.

When I returned, the only way I could fly at all was to instruct Civilian Pilot training programs. Weeks passed. Then, out of the blue, came a telegram from the war department announcing the organization of the WAFS, and the order to report within 24 hours if interested. I left at once.

Because there were and are so many disbelievers in women pilots, especially in their place in the army, officials wanted the best possible qualifications to go with the first experimental group. All of us realized what a spot we were on. We had to deliver the goods or else. Or else there wouldn't ever be another chance for women pilots in any part of the service.

The attitude that most nonfliers have about pilots is distressing and often acutely embarrassing. They chatter about the glamour of flying. Well, any pilot can tell you how glamorous it is. We get up in the cold dark in order to get to the airport by daylight. We wear heavy cumbersome flying clothes and a 30-pound parachute.

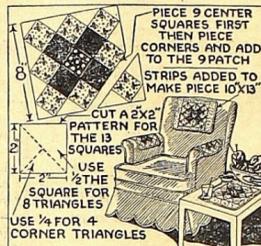

You are either too cold or too hot. If you are a female your lipstick wears off, and your hair gets straighter and straighter. You look forward all afternoon to the bath you will have, and the steak. Well, we get the bath, but seldom the steak: sometimes we are too tired to eat and fall wearily into bed.

None of us can put into words why we fly. It is something different for each of us. I can't say exactly why I fly, but I "know" why as I've never known anything in my life. Of this I am most positive.

I knew it when I saw my plane silhouetted against the clouds, framed by a circular rainbow. I knew it when I flew up into the extinct volcano Haleakala on the island of Maui, and saw the gray-green pineapple fields slope down to the cloud-dappled blueness of the Pacific.

Modern Uses for Quaint Patchwork

THERE is endless fascination in old-fashioned quilt blocks, and there are many modern ways to use them. They make marvelous table mats that really protect the finish of the table, and are being used for luncheon mats as well as for occasional tables. Pieced and quilted sets protect the backs and arms of upholstered chairs and keep your new slip covers clean.

The block shown here is easy to piece. It should be lined with muslin and interlined with one layer of cotton sheet wadding. These three layers should be quilted together either with diamond quilting or with running stitches following the lines of the pieced pattern. Edges are bound with harmonizing bias tape.

NOTE: Quilt blocks also may be made into unusual borders for curtains and luncheon cloths. There are complete directions for pieced border designs in BOOKS 5 and 6 of the series offered with these articles. BOOK 6 also shows an old star design pieced to make pot holders. SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

The first privately owned turpentine toll company to be organized in this country was the Philadelphia and Lancaster Turpentine Co., incorporated in 1792. New York was the first state to charge an automobile registration fee to pay highway costs and in 1901 collected $954 in such fees.

In 1843 an English woman obtained a patent for a pavement material consisting, among other things, of "oil rubber."

Flaven per cent of the tires of the 25,400 passenger cars on New Jersey farms were found to be "bald" in a check made by Rutgers University.

BEDTIME STORY
By THORNTON W. BURGESS

CHATTERER AND SAMMY JAY QUARREL

When people lose their tempers,
Oh, what a sorry sight!
They call each other dreadful names
And sometimes scratch and bite.
The Merry Little Breezes ran
And hid themselves away
When Chatterer his temper lost,
And so did Sammy Jay.

It really was too dreadful! It quite spoiled the day for all the little people who were within sound of their voices. You see, Sammy Jay had discovered that it was Chatterer and not a trap set by Farmer Brown's Boy that had given him such a fright at Farmer Brown's corn-crib, and right away Sammy's temper just boiled over. Chatterer had his mouth so full of corn that he couldn't say a word, but he could run and run he did — scampering across Farmer Brown's dooryard to the shelter of the old stone wall on the edge of the Old Orchard with Sammy after him screaming, "Thief! thief! thief!" at the top of his lungs.

"My gracious, what a racket!" exclaimed Farmer Brown's Boy as he opened the door. "That Jay is making such a fuss about I should think there was a fox about." He put his milk pails down and stepped back into the house. In a minute he was out again with his terrible gun in his hands. He went straight to the old stone wall, where only a few minutes before Reddy Fox had been hiding, and it was well for Reddy that he had slipped away the minute Sammy Jay began to scream at Chatterer. Farmer Brown's Boy looked disappointed when he saw no signs of Reddy. Then he went over to the little house of Bowser the Hound and unchained Bowser. Bowser wagged his tail and yelped with delight when he saw the gun, for he dearly loved to hunt. He ran ahead back to the Old Orchard, and almost at once his great deep voice told all within hearing that his wonderful nose had found the tracks of Reddy Fox.

"I thought so," said Farmer Brown's Boy. "I thought there had been a fox here." Then he sighed, for he would have liked nothing better than to go hunt for Reddy. But there were the empty milk pails, and Farmer Brown's Boy is not the kind who runs away for pleasure when there is work to be done. He called Bowser and chained him up again, and then went to the barn.

Sammy Jay had flown away as soon as he saw Farmer Brown's Boy and his terrible gun. Chatterer had hidden in the old stone wall, where he safely stored away the corn with which his cheeks had been stuffed. As soon as Farmer Brown's Boy had gone to the barn to milk the cows, Sammy Jay slipped back to the Old Orchard to look for Chatterer and his temper hadn't improved a bit. He soon saw Chatterer running along the old wall and once more began to scream, "Thief! thief!" And now that his mouth was empty Chatterer could reply, and you know Chatterer has one of the worst tongues of all the little people of the Green Forest.

"Thief, yourself!" he screamed back. "Thief, yourself! You stole my corn!"

"It isn't your corn any more than it's mine!" screamed Sammy. "I told you about it in the first place. Thief! thief! thief!"

And from that they fell to calling each other worse things. The Old Orchard never had heard such a quarrel—never! It was dreadful! All day long they kept it up. Twice Farmer Brown's Boy came down to see if that Fox had come back, and he scratched his head and wondered what all the fuss was about. At last, Sammy Jay had a thought.

"I'm going straight over to the Green Forest to tell Shadow the Weasel where you are living!" he cried suddenly. "When he finds you you won't steal any more corn or be so greedy that you won't let other people have a share."

Smartly Styled Play Clothes Lead in Vacation Wardrobe

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

IF "ALL WORK and no play makes Jack a dull boy," by the same token "no play" makes Jill a dull girl. So "the play must go on" as well as the work so as to qualify 100 per cent perfect in body, mind and spirit. The American nation has ever been a firm believer in the efficacy of sports and games as a brain and body conditioner, and more than ever the play idea is being encouraged during off-duty hours for those who are working on the home front to help win this war.

This zeal for play as a means of keeping fit to meet the heroic struggle now going on has brought a challenge to do something about it in way of devising apparel that will be functional at the same time that it adds color and glamour to whatsoever the environs. To the credit of our designers be it said that they are not missing a trick in creating the cleverest easy-to-wear and easy-to-behold play costumes and work outfits as ever a season brought forth.

Now that such a vast number of automobiles is being laid up for the duration, cycling takes on a new significance. Gray flannel slacks tailored man-fashion, as here pictured, are ideal for cyclists to wear. The pretty maiden in the picture wears with her brief flannel slacks a basque-type jersey, striped of course, for stripes are the rage this summer.

The lovely girl seated so nonchalantly atop an accommodating fence as pictured evidently has a talent for playing the "squeeze box." Another of her obvious talents is exploiting glamour, as she does in this instance, aided and abetted by an attractive shirtwaist and slacks outfit. The waist is done in crisped and immaculate striped percale. Without a doubt striped cottons are putting up a valiant challenge to gay colored florals this year.

For a many-purpose costume to include in your vacation wardrobe, you will find a neat short overall ensemble such as the charming tennis player in wearing in the picture will prove ideal for sports, working in the garden, for beach strolls or tennis or whatever your hobby may be. Her brief overall is of red corduroy, with which this attractive young woman teams a classic white spun rayon shirt that launders beautifully.

When getting beach togs together be sure to look up the cunning fishnet shawls with deep self fringe that girls are wearing over their pinafore play suits. In bright red, these shawls are simply devastating, making the wearer look like a gypsy queen or a picturesque senorita. Be it said, however, that it is not the intent to wear these shawls over the head as a mantilla or fascinator, for according to the latest fashion code they are much smarter as shoulder wraps.

Speaking of pinafores, the latest gesture is to wear them over beach suits and play frocks. The stores are putting forth such a tempting array of pinafores that just bubble over with fascinating and novel ideas, that all of fashion's followers are developing into ardent pinafore fans. Worn with a shirt waist, pinafores achieve a new-type play frock, or, sans the waist, they qualify as sun suits you'll love to wear. The peasant shops are doing a thriving business on vividly colorful pinafores, some of them gaily embroidered.

The importance of ankle-depth slacks suits cannot be overstated. These are tailored with trim pocket effects, and women are wearing them "to market" and all through the active hours of the day.

Hat Ensembles

Nowadays when you go to a millinery shop you don't see just hats. What your eyes really do envision is a showing of the most fascinating sets of hats plus accessories that fancy can picture. Sometimes it is a smart sailor, made of gingham with long gloves of the identical gingham. Perhaps it is a hat of eye-letted pique with a dicky of the same material. The story of hats with matched bags is a continuous one that exploits novel and striking ideas.

Here is an attractive matching hat and bag done in navy, red and gold plaid taffeta. A navy veil tied in the back keeps the hair in place. Your hat and bag need not necessarily be made of taffeta for as chic as taffeta is acknowledged to be this summer, milliners are also turning out stunning sets done in cottons, such as glazed chintz, gingham or pique.

Necklines Are Cut Low This Summer

Although the new daytime dresses are simple, and made for the most part of cottons and other smart washables, they have great charm and individuality in matter of little accents, such as the new lowcut necklines. A dress is known by its neckline these days, for designers are making a big play on creating flattering effects with necklines so low cut that in days of yore, they would be regarded almost as evening décolletage. Innocent looking little lingerie blouses charm with deep and wide square necklines, and the new rounded U-neck is one that is getting special promotion, not only in blouses but in pretty summery dresses of every description. It's a new era of dress that is developing, and in so doing achieving a maximum of new beauty and interest.

Novelties for Head

It is a season when novelties for the head play a conspicuous role in the scheme of things fashionable. One of the cleverest ideas is the "bicycle clip" that balances a cluster of flowers over each ear. The newer clips are velvet or ribbon covered. Sometimes the flower arrangement is a single motif to one side. These bicycle clip novelties are suitable for any headsize or any hairdo. A veritable landslide of tiny foundation collars with whimsical veils and gay flowers has descended upon fashion's domain this summer. Another interesting item is the snood that has tiny single flowers spattered all over. The newest veils, too, are animated with wee bows that look as if they had been simply dropped here and there.

The WORLD-FAMOUS FIRESTONE DeLuxe Champion TIRE IS NOW BEING MADE WITH Firestone Butaprene THE MARVELOUS New SYNTHETIC RUBBER

JUST as you'd expect, Firestone is FIRST to build the tire of tomorrow for the car owners of America. It is only natural that Firestone should be the leader in working out new processes, in creating new compounds and in building better tires from American-made rubber, for Firestone has always been the pioneer in developing new materials, new methods and new machines that have resulted in tremendous advancements in tire design, construction and performance.

From Firestone have come such revolutionary improvements as the FIRST straight side tire, the FIRST rubber non-skid tread, the FIRST commercial demountable rim, the FIRST patented Gum-Dipping Process, the FIRST balloon tire, the FIRST Saffi-Lock Cord Body, the FIRST Super-Speed Construction and the FIRST practical pneumatic tractor tire.

In 1933, Firestone built the FIRST synthetic rubber airplane tires for our armed forces. In 1940, Firestone built its FIRST synthetic rubber passenger car tires at the New York World's Fair and began the manufacture of its own synthetic rubber, called Butaprene, the same type that was later adopted by the Government. In 1942, Firestone became the FIRST company to produce synthetic rubber in a Government-owned plant and later became the FIRST to make synthetic rubber using butadiene made from grain alcohol. And today Firestone is making synthetic rubber tires for passenger cars, trucks, buses, airplanes, tractors, farm implements and all types of war vehicles.

All of these years of experience, all of the knowledge that made these FIRSTS possible have been called upon in producing the new Firestone DeLuxe Champion Tire made with Firestone Butaprene. It is now ready for the car owners of America as released by the Government. But do not think that the crisis is past. America's greatest rubber supply is still on the wheels of its 27,000,000 cars. So you must continue all of the rubber conservation measures that have been so effective. However, if you are eligible and require new tires, remember this — in mileage, in strength and in safety the new Firestone DeLuxe Champion Tire upholds the Firestone tradition of "Best in Rubber — Synthetic or Natural."

Listen to the Voice of Firestone with Richard Crooks and the Firestone Symphony Orchestra, under direction of Alfred Wallenstein, Monday evenings, over N. B. C.

Finley also said that there is still time to plant important crops like tomatoes, carrots, beets, corn, beans, cabbage, turnips, squash and rutabagas.

Peas sown this late probably will not pod well in summer, spinach likely would go to seed in hot weather and it's too late to get head lettuce headed with good quality heads.
