2 Dead; 7 Missing in Bay Boat Tragedy

Two definitely known to be drowned and seven young people missing was the report at nine o'clock tonight of the tragedy on Tawas bay, which had occurred three hours earlier in the evening. The young people were from a group of 175, who are attending the annual Young Peoples Institute of the Methodist Church, Saginaw District, which is in session here this week.

About 50 of the young people had gone for a boat ride on the bay with Gordon MacAndrews. About half the number were in MacAndrews' boat, the remainder were on a scow which was being towed. After going up the bay for about a mile, the boating party turned around to return to the East Tawas State dock. When off Mrs. Rose Martin's cabins and about 1500 feet from the shore, water started to flow on the deck of the scow through its scuppers because too many people were on the rear end. Warned of this, some went forward. Then one of the hatch covers floated away allowing the scow to take water. In the panic which followed the young people jumped overboard. Life preservers had been thrown into the water. Some of the young people could swim. Boats from shore and members of the party on the boat picked them up.

Thomas Marr, cabin operator at East Tawas, was the first person from shore on the scene. He brought four of the young people ashore, including Miss Ruth Smith of Bay City, who was the first known fatality. Prolonged artificial respiration failed to revive her. State Police, members of the Coast Guard and many townspeople rushed immediately to scene to help in the rescue work and search for the missing. At about 9:30 o'clock the body of Harry Bascone of Caro was found. The missing young people at 12:00 o'clock were:

Wayne Cross, Caro.
Shirley Peterson, Caro.
Robert Boquette, Cheboygan.
Nels Peterson, Midland.
Ida Minthorn, Reese.
Bertha Smith, Poseyville.
Shirley Dwyer, Saginaw.

15,500 Acres Isosco Land Offered for Oil Leasing

A total of 53,540 acres of state-owned lands will be offered to Michigan wildcat drillers for lease for oil gas development at a sale to be held in Lansing, August 5 and 6, the state conservation department's lands division announced today. Included in the sale will be 15,500 acres in Isosco county.

The leases will be sold at public auction to the highest bidder. The lands scheduled for lease at the August sale were approved by the conservation commission at its July meeting at Traverse City from applications submitted by Michigan oil and gas men and companies.

Inclusion in the applications of areas in Oscoda, Otsego, Isosco, and Antrim counties, where oil and gas development leases have not been sold before, indicates the interest of Michigan oil men in developing new areas in an attempt to find additional oil and gas reserves for the country's war machine.

The lands slated to be leased at the August sale are as follows:

3,440 acres in Antrim counties; 15,500 acres in Isosco county; 600 acres in Oscoda county; 9,440 acres in Otsego county; 440 acres in Bay county; 1,160 acres in Mecosta county; 2,400 acres in Midland county; 5,840 acres in Newago county; 3,680 acres in Ogemaw county; 7,840 acres in Roscommon county; and 3,200 acres in St. Clair county.

Notice to Taxpayers

I will collect taxes at the city hall on Friday and Saturday afternoons from 1:00 to 4:30.

Margaret Lansky, City Treasurer.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Allen and family of Rochester spent the week end with the former's brother, Arthur Allen and family. Their mother is ill at the latter's home.

DR. H. W. CASE DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Funeral Services Will be Held Monday Morning

Dr. Herbert W. Case, well known Isosco county physician, died Thursday morning following an illness of several months. Dr. Case had practiced medicine at Tawas City since 1918.

Herbert W. Case was born August 21, 1882, at Watford, Ontario. He came to the States with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ira Case, when an infant, going to Carsonville, Michigan. He graduated from the Detroit College of Medicine, and went to Alcona county to practice his profession in 1903. Later he established a practice at Tawas. In 1918 he came to Tawas City. Dr. Case had many friends throughout this section of Michigan who held him in high esteem as a physician and friend.

In November, 1905, he was united in marriage to Bertha L. Dwyer of Harrisville, who survives him. He is also survived by his son, Herbert Case, of Detroit and daughter, Mrs. Evelyn Price, of East Tawas. One daughter, Phyllis died in 1924.

Funeral services will be held Monday morning from St. Joseph's Catholic church, East Tawas. Rev. Fr. Robert Neumann will officiate. Burial will be in St. Joseph cemetery.

U. of M. Scholarships For Isosco Boys and Girls

Four Isosco county high schools will each be able to send an outstanding graduate to the University of Michigan every year with no tuition charge under a huge scholarship plan just approved by the Board of Regents, and announced by President Alexander G. Ruthven.

Under the terms of the new arrangement, a full tuition scholarship is established in the name of every one of the 629 accredited high schools and preparatory schools of Michigan. This county's accredited schools, all of which benefit from the plan, are the public schools at Tawas City, East Tawas, Oscoda and Whittemore.

Card of Thanks

We wish to extend our sincere thanks and appreciation to friends and neighbors for their kindness and Rev. Gustafson for his comforting words in our bereavement.

CARIBBEAN CONSPIRACY

by BRENDA CONRAD

THE STORY SO FAR: Anne Heywood, beautiful daughter of a wealthy New York newspaper publisher, goes on an assignment to Puerto Rico where Pete Wilcox, a reporter on her father's paper, is stationed as a U. S. Army intelligence officer. On the boat she meets a young Puerto Rican, Miguel Valera, and an engineer named Richard Taussig, of whom she is immediately suspicious, in spite of the fact that he looks like a typical tourist. She does not know that he is, in fact, a German agent ordered to destroy Puerto Rico's water supply. Pete meets the boat, but does not tell Anne that he has reason to suspect Taussig. Later Anne discovers that her bags have been searched.

CHAPTER IV

Anne put her key in the lock and opened the door. There was a funny taste in her mouth, as if she'd bit into a sweet orange and found it was a sour one.

"I'm glad Pete's in San Juan after all," she thought, with a sudden twinge of conscience. "I wonder what he's doing?"

Pete Wilcox, if she'd known it, was at that moment two floors below her in the Granada bar. He'd watched her all through dinner, seen her gay and charming and radiant as a sunbeam, talking to three men.

The other girl Pete didn't even see. He watched Anne and Miguel leave the dining room.

"They're going to dance," he thought. He looked at himself in the mirror over the bar. The faint green cast of his face couldn't all be midweek, he thought with a twisted grin. "Take it easy, Captain Wilcox," he said to himself.

Anne put her hand out to put out the light, and changed her mind. The room glowed with a faint silver phosphorescence from the rising moon. It was the moon she and Miguel had watched growing rounder and whiter the last three nights, she thought with a little ache inside her.

She shook that off impatiently, crossed the room and looked down into the patio. Don Diego Gongoro had just finished lighting Richard Taussig's cigar and was lighting his own. Then Anne's heart beat a little more quickly. She glanced back at the door, her cheeks flushed a little. The idea that popped into her mind, she knew, was one that should never have occurred to a well-brought-up young woman. She dismissed it sharply.

Her hand shook a little as she opened the door. There was a light over the transom in Room 103. It was not the ceiling light; it was not bright enough. It must be the one on the table or beside the bed. She started trying to remember whether it had been there before. She hadn't looked, she had been so intent on the conflict in her mind as she went into her own room. It might be the maid, she thought, listening. Or Mr. Taussig might have left his light on. She crossed the passage after a moment and tapped lightly on the door. There was no answer and no sound from inside. Her heart was pounding in her throat. She had either to do it or not to do it, she told herself—but she had to be quick about it in any case.

She put her key in the lock and turned the knob. Mr. Taussig had not locked his door. She opened it slowly, glancing back behind her down the hall, and slipped inside. She had taken two quick steps along the passage between the wall and the closet when the dimmed light went off, leaving her in sudden absolute darkness. Somebody inside the room moved with swift catlike silence. She stood rooted to the floor in terror, her voice frozen in her throat. A man's hand strong as steel closed over her mouth, stifling the cry that sprang to her lips. She was whirled around and moved back to the door so quickly and easily that she didn't have time to struggle. The door opened, she was in the hall again; the door closed. She ran, breathless with terror, across the passage into her own room and stood gripping the door-knob, her heart beating violently. Very slowly then she raised her hand to her face and touched it with trembling fingers. In the dim light above the open transom she had caught one flashing glimpse of the man in the room. It was Miguel Valera.

A chill stabbing awareness that she was for the first time in her life up against stark reality that thrust friendship aside, as Miguel had done with her, made her hand relax slowly from her doorknob. She reached out to switch on the light, changed her mind and stood there listening warily. He was coming out. She heard the door across the passage close quietly, the key turn softly in the lock, and his footsteps retreating quickly along the hall. Still without turning on the light she went quietly through the narrow passage between the closet and the wall into her room. She stopped at the foot of her bed, shrouded in white mosquito netting, and glanced back at the door.

"I wonder . . ." she thought. "I just wonder."

What if Miguel Valera had realized there was something odd about Richard Taussig too? That could explain it. He could have left Graciela for a minute just to come up and see, while his uncle and Taussig were talking.

She slipped to the window and looked down into the patio. Don Diego Gongoro and Taussig were still sitting there, their cigars still quite long. That came as a little shock to her. What had seemed an eternity could have been only two or three minutes at the most. Then she started. Miguel Valera was coming through the arcade, alone. Graciela must have been sent home, or something. He strolled across the patio, drew up a chair and sat down with the other two.

Anne stood watching them, her heart rising. Whatever it was, if Miguel was on her side . . . and then she caught her breath sharply. He had said something to Taussig, who turned quickly and looked up at her window. Don Diego turned slowly in his chair and looked up. Miguel was telling them. And she hadn't really thought about that at all, but in some way she had just taken it for granted he wouldn't tell.

"I wonder where Pete is," she thought miserably. It was the same old pattern. It always came back when she was in trouble. If only she knew where to find Pete!

She looked down into the patio again. Mr. Taussig was getting up. Anne's eyes moved across the grass. A man was sitting alone at the table in the corner, where Don Diego had sat reading his paper that morning. She looked away, and then looked back sharply. It was Pete.

Pete went through the lobby and started across the gallery under the portico. The juke box blared from the bar behind him, and with the orchestra out on the terrace a wailing tenor was singing "Perfidia" . . . "I found you, the love of my life, in somebody else's arms . . ." He tossed the cigarette he'd just lighted into a palm tub and turned back again. His orders were to lay off, and in the Army orders were orders. In the newspaper business an editor might not run a story, but he never tried to keep you from getting it if you could. And just now Pete's training and instinct—the old nose-for-news sort of thing—told him not to leave, to go back and the hell with G 2.

The door opened, she was in the hall again.

He went through the lobby out into the patio. The ocean pounding on the reef and breaking again on the rocks just across the balustrade softened the strident scream of music from the bar. The place was empty except for Taussig and Diego Gongoro sitting by the fountain smoking their cigars. They stopped talking for an instant when he came out, and started again, obviously on another subject. They couldn't have been talking about the beauty of Puerto Rico all that time, he thought. He sat down at a table in the corner and ordered a Scotch and soda. The window of Anne's room was dark. There was a light in the hall window, and one in Taussig's near the angle of the wall. He saw it go out abruptly. Probably the maid, he thought.

He saw Taussig look up, and move slightly. Then the light went on again. Taussig moved again, glancing up at Anne's window. Or Pete thought he did. He wasn't sure. It was still dark.

"You must make a visit to my brother-in-law's Central," Diego Gongoro was saying affably. "I shall ask him to arrange it. They are cutting and grinding the sugar cane now, and I'm sure it would interest you. And to his coffee plantation in the mountains. That would interest you very much too. The trees are beginning to blossom now, and they are very beautiful. Perhaps Miss Heywood would be interested too. She is a very intelligent young lady. Perhaps she is too intelligent. It can be a dangerous quality in a woman. I mean, of course, no man wants a woman who—"

He broke off abruptly. Pete Wilcox, trying to look casual and relaxed in a wrought-iron chair that was not designed for either, was listening intently. There was something in Diego Gongoro's tone that implied a meaning underlying the superficial conversational one. He was watching the center arch, and Pete, glancing around, saw Miguel Valera come out into the patio and pull up a chair beside them.

"I was just saying how intelligent your friend Miss Heywood is, Miguel," his uncle remarked easily. Miguel shrugged. "I don't know about that. She's very charming, certainly."

There was no reason to get hot under the collar, Pete told himself. Maybe Anne was deliberately concealing her intelligence. Sometimes she did it without deliberation. Furthermore, there was nothing offensive in preferring a girl's charm to her intelligence. Latins weren't the only ones who did that.

"What have you done with the young ladies, by the way?" Taussig inquired.

"My cousin is with some of my other cousins. Miss Heywood had a tiring day. She's gone upstairs."

"I hope you'll remember your suggestion about the sugar plantation. I'm sure Miss Heywood would enjoy it too."

"I'm sure we can arrange it, Mr. Taussig. I'll speak to my father. Are you engaged tomorrow?"

"I'm afraid I am," Taussig said. "The Army is taking me on a tour of the island, stopping at Borinquen Field for lunch."

Mr. Taussig bowed to both of them. "Goodnight," he said.

Miguel Valera turned to his uncle and spoke again rapidly. Pete caught Graciela's name and "casa," and decided that Miguel was telling his uncle to take the girl home. At any rate Gongoro left. Miguel and Pete were alone in the patio, and the light in Anne's window was still on. Pete, watching with a kind of forlorn hope for one brief glimpse of even her shadow on the screen, trying to make up his mind not to go and call her up just to hear her voice and know she was there, started to get up. As he did Valera rose and came across the grass.

"Good evening, Captain," he said. "If you aren't in a hurry I wonder if you'd join me in a nightcap?"

For a moment the two of them stood facing each other, the Latin tall and slender with gray eyes and black hair, the Saxon tall, lean and rangy with hazel eyes and sun-bleached, tow-colored hair, each taking the other's measure.

"Thanks," Pete said. "Glad to." They sat down. Miguel called the waiter.

"You're at Headquarters, I understand," he said when he had ordered.

"That's right," Pete said. "And you?"

"I was ordered to Buchanan. But my orders were cancelled. I was ready, and thought I might as well come home. It was too cold in New York for me anyway. I'd been up for several months on business for my father."

"You're a lawyer, aren't you?" Pete asked. It sounded as if being a lawyer in a time like this was a little like being a snake in the grass, which was not what he had meant. Miguel laughed.

"A sort of lawyer. You have to know law to manage a sugar Central, these days of government regulation. I don't practice."

"Politics?"

"Politics is in Latin blood," Miguel answered. "Red corpuscles, white corpuscles and politics. It means everything down here."

"What about your father? Has he been in political office?"

"No. My father isn't a United States citizen. After the American occupation we were given the choice of accepting citizenship or remaining Spanish. My father chose to retain his own citizenship. A good many people did. What do you call them—diehards, isn't it?"

"Are they the ones who don't like the United States?" Pete asked. Valera hesitated.

"Would they like to see Spain back?"

Miguel Valera shrugged. "I suppose there's the dream of seeing the scarlet and gold of Spain flying from El Morro. It's natural enough for the people who are predominantly Spanish. If the United States were conquered, you would just wait the chance to kick your conquerors out."

"And what about the Nationalists?" Pete asked.

Miguel shook his head. "The cacique, or leader of the party in power, has said Nationalism is not an issue at the present. I don't think there's any important organized Nationalist opinion here now. The Falangists and the Nationalists are the two extremes—in between you have the moderates.—But I didn't mean to give you a lecture on insular politics. I—"

"One thing before you get off it," Pete said. "Where do you stand in all this?"

"Me?" Miguel Valera laughed. "You'd be surprised," he said. "But as I started to say, this isn't what I wanted to talk to you about. It was Miss Heywood."

Watch Brims! Going Wide, Wider, Widest for Summer

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

of the simple broad-brimmed classic Milan sailors add this flattering veil idea as a perfect gesture in feminine charm.

The young sophisticate to the right has obviously subscribed to the movement to keep oneself looking at her loveliest for men in the service. Part of the program of this flattery-wise young woman is to wear a devastatingly pretty lace-trimmed lingerie blouse. She chooses, as you see in the picture, a model styled up to the minute with a bow at the throat, these neckline bows being a high-spot feature this season. Her generously large off-face bonnet-type hat is made of embroidered pique, with which she wears a veil that is enhanced with circular lace motifs.

THE sudden onrush of wide, wider, widest brims into the millinery picture is most exciting and highly important news for summer. A far cry from the beloved little flower confections that look more like bouquets set atop smartly coiffed pompadours than honest-to-goodness hats, are these enormous brims which are the "last word" in smart headgear.

No matter how many of the bewitching wee flower-plus-veil fantasies in your summertime millinery wardrobe, you really owe it to yourself to add a modish broad-brimmed hat to your collection. Especially is this the fashion-right thing to do, now that the most outstanding costume in the midsummer style parade is the sheer and lovely "little black dress" topped with a big black hat, that may be either a fine Milan, or the type that plays up black magic in sheer horsehair or lace or filmy mesh of some sort or other.

Patriotic, charm-laden and priority free is the exquisite hat of sheerest of sheer black horsehair, that tops the group of big brims illustrated here. This model, designed to frame face and coiffure, is so supple it can be worn in many ways, as it is easily adjustable to versatile lines of grace. It is just such hats as this that best-dressed women are choosing to wear with the pretty-pretty black frocks that are making conversation in the fashion world this summer.

Glamorous sophistication fairly oozes from the black lace hat pictured to the left. The brim turns up at one side, the other side dipping with infinite grace. The manner of tying sheerest of sheer black veiling in an under-the-chin arrangement is a characteristic style trend. Many

Open Mesh Pockets

Here is a sundress you'll love to wear. It has all the styling details that go to make up a perfect play dress and for beachwear it is ideal. The fact that it is a low-cut sun-back model enhances its usefulness. Made of bird's eye pique it launders to perfection. It is available in not only white pique but in candy pink or powder blue. The pockets are of wide open-mesh crochet that tune right into tennis court environs. In her hand this young outdoor enthusiast carries a trim little bolero jacket made of matching mesh bordered with self pique.

Specialized Aprons For Every Task Now

Aprons are specialized today. For work in the garden a blue denim with huge pockets for carrying tools is just the thing. For protecting your dress when you wash the dishes or shampoo your hair, there's the rubberized type done in frivolous colors that are so pretty they put a cheery note into the whole procedure. Then there's the apron that serves as a summer housedress, with ruffles falling over the shoulder and suspender bibs that give you the service of a jumper frock. Most enchanting frilly types are so really charming you keep one always in easy reach, so when the front door bell rings you slip into your flattering frilly apron in a jiffy, so as to greet callers looking your smug best.

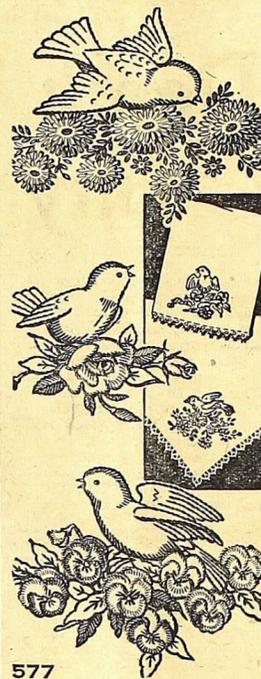

'Midriff Bra' Is Motif In New Sweater Design

Girls who take delight in flaunting the "something different" in fashion are busy knitting a new type sweater that copies the midriff bra idea. The sleeves are short and the abbreviated sweater drapes over the bust in regular bra manner, either tying fancifully with crochet cord and tassel, or fastening with three jewel buttons. For a thoroughly sports type the sweater may be made sleeveless.

British Tan Shoes

This summer shoes are mostly monotone as two-toned footwear is not being manufactured at present. Since British tan is a favorite color, calfskin shoes in this goodlooking practical shade have been accorded high style standing in current footwear fashions.

This Modern Hen Creates Incubator of Her Own

Among the interesting birds on Guadalcanal is the brush fowl, a dark-colored bird about the size of a bantam hen. Instead of setting on her eggs, this mother bird covers them with decaying vegetation. The heat generated by the action of decomposition keeps the eggs at hatching temperature.

The incubation period lasts around 50 days—longer than for any other land bird. As a result, the young have the power of flight as soon as they are hatched.

CREATE joy with your embroidery needle—make these engaging motifs for your own linens or gift linens. The gay bluebirds are symbols of happiness. Their varied flower perches let you use brilliant colors.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Red and yellow paints mixed together give you orange; red and blue, purple; yellow and blue, green. White paint added to any of these colors will lighten them.

Try adding a few drops of lemon juice to rice the next time you cook it. It makes the rice beautifully white and keeps the grains whole.

Gather clover blossoms this summer, dry them, and scatter about the linen closet to impart a delicate fragrance.

Green peppers used for salads are better if first parboiled. Boil the peppers for five minutes, pour off the water, then place the peppers in refrigerator until ready to use.

Earthworms are beneficial to the soil in which they live and no effort should be made to remove them. If considered troublesome, lime water will bring them to the surface.

Keep linens white by packing them in an old pillow case which has been soaked in bluing until it is a deep indigo.

Never pour water on burning fat; it spreads blaze. Extinguish blaze with flour.

Rub up the nickel faucets with cleansing tissues every day. Such rubbing up will lighten the weekly cleanings.

Cleaning is hard on the hands, so equip yourself with extra rubber gloves and wear them every time you do this kind of work. Rub some cold cream under your nails before starting work—you will be delighted to see how quickly you can clean your nails after a good bath.

When melting chocolate, use a small round-bottomed bowl and melt over hot water. Bowl may be set in the top of teakettle or double boiler.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste
Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.
Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness,
getting up nights, swelling, puffiness
under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.
Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.
There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years.

ON THE HOME FRONT
with RUTH WYETH SPEARS

THESE orange crate bedside tables are useful and easy to make; they are very decorative,
too, when fitted out as illustrated.
These were lined with green oil cloth cut, fitted and pasted, as shown. The full skirt pieces were tacked to the top of the sides and lapped a few inches around the back. A top cover with a 3-inch frill was then added. The bed-spread is trimmed with 5-inch frills of the muslin and 1-inch straight bands over seams and for the monograms.

NOTE—These bedside tables are from BOOK 7 which also contain 31 other thrifty home making ideas. BOOK 2 contains a complete alphabet for making monograms similar to the one illustrated.
Books are 15 cents each. Send your or-

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Pig Boat

At sea on a submarine isn't exactly the "life of Riley." In the Battle of the Atlantic, or on the great stretches of the Pacific these sailors know the hazards of their work.

One of the spots aboard these "Pig Boats" that all crew members enjoy is the galley, or kitchen. Space limitations prevent an elaborate setup, but cooks aboard these vessels are justly proud of the meals they prepare for their crews. Your increased purchase of War Bonds helps make submarine life as pleasant as possible.

South African Racket

Cape Providence, South Africa, is preparing drastic action against the money-making racket of "jackal breeders," it is stated in Capetown. It has been discovered that parts of the province professional hunters, who destroy jackals for bounties have been capturing only the cubs, allowing adult animals to escape, and thus providing for the next season's "crop." It is suspected that in certain districts there are secret jackal breeding establishments, the owners of which make big profits by constantly turning in very young jackals. Last year the record number of 36,000 were destroyed at the standard rate of $2.50 an animal. In some districts $3.75 is paid.

Keep Lemon Syrup

Lemon sugar syrup stored in the refrigerator helps you whisk up summer beverages in a jiffy. Make the syrup like this: Boil for five minutes two cups sugar and four cups water, add two cups lemon juice, cool and store in refrigerator. Dilute with iced water or fruit juices when thirst-quenchers are in demand.

'Cake Eating Lady'

In the Seventeenth century, the "cake eating lady" was a familiar figure of English fairs. One such performer ate 12 pounds of cake in less than 30 minutes of each of six daily performances.

Anthologies

Sometimes poets and their publishers make considerably less money from the sale of a book of poems than they do from the fees charged for the inclusion of one or several of the poems in anthologies.

Transform Axis Stronghold Into an Allied Base

After surrender of Pantelleria, a series of patrols was organized to search for stray enemy units and snipers. At upper left three British fighters pick their way through a battered street. At upper right a bulldozer clears away rubble as the island is turned into a base for use against the Axis. Italian soldiers, marines, and sailors stand in line (bottom) waiting for transportation from the former Axis stronghold.

S. convoy movements.

Fighters Put on Their Armor

Members of a crew of a Flying Fortress are shown helping each other don their armored flying vests at a United States bomber station in England. Made of tough manganese steel, these vests protect the airmen from flak shrapnel and fragments of cannon shells. A quick pull on a rip cord causes the vest to fall away from the body.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

GOD ENCOURAGES MOSES

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 3:13-16; 4:10-17. GOLDEN TEXT—Certainly I will be with thee.—Exodus 3:12.

Encouragement is something much needed, and not too often given. The word means to put some new thing into the heart of another, that is, to hearten and assure him, especially in the bearing of a heavy responsibility.

Moses, in all probability the world's greatest military and national leader, was about to lead his people out from under the mighty hand of Pharaoh. His final preparation for that epochal deed and all the years to follow was a personal meeting with God.

Possibly it was the mistake Moses had made and which caused him to be sent into the back of the desert, that now caused him to move with—

I. Understandable Caution (Exod. 3:13).

There is something remarkably fine about real humility. It commends itself to our thinking as the proper attitude of a mortal being, particularly in the face of spiritual responsibility.

Neither God nor man dares extend a high and difficult commission to foolish man who brusquely "rushes in where angels fear to tread." The fact that one feels fully and unhesitatingly qualified to take over such a responsibility is almost a certain indication that he is not the man to assume it.

Moses' request for God's backing must have been acceptable to Him, for He gave Moses—

II. Unlimited Authority (3:14-16).

Moses went as God's messenger. He was authorized to put all the majesty and power of the Infinite One behind his words and acts.

The ambassador must have credentials. God's representative has them. When "they shall say"—what an important and difficult situation that creates. The one who speaks for God must expect not only the scornful bitterness of God's enemies, but also the unbelieving questions of those whom he seeks to serve.

"What shall I say?" asks Moses, and God answers that he may say that "I AM" had sent him. This name of God reveals Him as the eternal, independent, self-sufficient, self-existent, immutable, personal Being. Consider, Christian brethren, whose we are and whom we serve.

But Moses seems to have been unable to see beyond his own human infirmity even in the light of such a glorious revelation, supplemented as it was by miraculous powers, and we find him showing an—

III. Unjustified Humility (4:10-13).

Perhaps we should not call this humility at all, for in one so divinely called and encouraged it was an act of unbelief and almost impertinence.

When God calls a man He knows his limitations. Why then should one plead them as an excuse for not serving? The excuse of Moses that he was not a fluent speaker has been the standby of unwilling workers all through the ages. When asked to lead a prayer meeting, teach a Sunday school class, conduct a young people's meeting, thousands upon thousands have lamely thus excused themselves and missed a blessing.

The perfect answer of God (v. 11) merits attention. God made your mouth and mine. He gives us the power of speech. He asks not the eloquence of polished rhetorical phrases, or the flights of man's imagination. He wants but the incomparable eloquence of His own words on our lips.

No man should think too highly of himself, but let him beware lest he think too lowly about God. We are not sufficient for the opportunity. But God is more than sufficient.

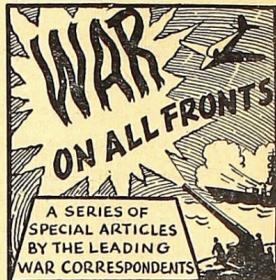

Having called Moses, God saw to it that Moses went on with His work, even though now He had to call in Moses' older brother to help him. It was, in fact, an—

IV. Unnecessary Substitution (4:14-17).

Loving and patient is our God, but, mark it well, there is a boundary line to that patience. Moses went too far in his needless humility, and really reflected on the ability of God. God promptly substituted Aaron as the spokesman.

Gracious was He in thus providing a helper for Moses. But one wonders what Moses missed of blessing and power because of his slowness of heart. To decline the labor and the responsibility of service for God means loss far greater than we may ever know.

God's dealings with Moses speak eloquently to us of His willingness to enable and use a man who lacked some of the gifts for leadership. Let none of us be like Moses and become involved in needless worry about our gifts, and forget God's purpose and enabling power. When God calls, our gifts are not the controlling factor; in fact, they are not a great factor at all. The question then becomes, Is God able? Let us trust and obey Him.

God Will Hear

By William C. Taggart

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with The American Magazine.)

I am an air force chaplain. For more than a year I have lived with men whose daily job is to risk their lives in combat with the enemy.

I have seen these men go off on missions never to return. I have watched them during bombing attacks against our base. I know what they think and feel. I know how they pray.

One of our Flying Fortresses was forced down at sea on its way back to Australia. The crew of nine was given up for lost. Weeks later, nine bearded, disheveled men straggled into camp, and I had the story of their rescue from Maj. Allen Lindberg of Westfield, N. J., pilot of the plane.

"It was before dawn when we crashed," Lindberg told me. "We just had time to shove off on two rubber rafts, without a crumb of food or a drop of water."

"A grim outlook," I suggested.

"Grim enough. The boys were pretty worried—all except Hernandez. Right away that lad from Dallas started praying, and pretty soon he started us by announcing that help was on the way. He didn't know how or when, but something told him that we should be saved."

"I'd only been praying a few minutes when I felt like God had heard me and was taking a hand to help us out. From then on, no matter how bad things got, I was sure we would come through."

The major continued: "You've no idea what hell is like until you have been crowded with four other men on a rubber bubble built for three, and left to drift beneath a broiling sun. Toward evening we thought we saw the peaks of mountains to the west. When they dissolved into mist, Hernandez just prayed harder. He got the rest of us to pray and sing with him. We sang 'Rock of Ages' and 'Lead Kindly Light.'"

"The second day our lips were too cracked and our tongues too swollen for much hymn singing. But the prayers never stopped.

Natives Rescued Us.

"Then something happened. We felt a current reach us and hurry us along. Before nightfall we saw the silhouette of palm trees, the white streak of surf, and—almost beyond belief—the black hulls of three out-rigger canoes.

"Our rescuers were Australian aborigines—black-skinned, kinky-headed fishermen from the mainland several hundred miles away. They told us that, the day before, they had been homeward bound with their catch, when a strange urge came over them. Something impelled them to change their course, and steer for this uninhabited and worthless bit of coral."

Yes, prayer does work. There have been other incidents. Lieut. Frank Beeson of Tuscaloosa, Ala., lay in our base hospital, a gaping shell wound in his shoulder. A pursuit pilot, he had been shot down at Port Moresby. The doctor's verdict was: "He'll never fly again."

"Oh, yes I will," Frank told me. "How do you know?"

"I asked the Lord to give me strength to rejoin my squadron." A few weeks later, after an incredibly short recovery, Frank was on his way back to Port Moresby and more dogfights with the Japs.

I know of men lost and starving in the deserts of Australia, who were found and brought to safety after asking God for help. Of men in bombers shot to pieces by enemy gunfire who, quite literally, "prayed their way" back to base. I know, too, that many times appeals uttered by mothers, wives and sweethearts in the United States stretched a protective mantle half around the globe to shield us in the South Pacific.

Power of Prayer.

One high-ranking general told me that he owes his life, in part, to the petitions voiced by his closest friend and former business partner. I myself am living on borrowed time because my parents prayed for me in a situation of great danger.

As a parson's son, brought up in a devout Southwest community, I have always believed in the power of prayer. I cannot recall a time when it was not an integral part of my daily life.

One of my professors at college was a missionary in China. Captured by bandits, he and his fellow prisoners were taken to a lonely mountain pass. When no ransom was forthcoming, the bandits determined to shoot them the next day. That night he prayed fervently for guidance, and before dawn a thick cloud settled on the pass. Wrapped in this cloud of invisibility, he led his party down the mountainside to safety.

Millions of Americans who in the past relied on themselves are now reaching out for help.

GOOD NEIGHBOR

Many a state department official wishes we could fix up Argentina as neatly as Comrade Stalin thinks we can.

When Willkie was in Moscow, Stalin raised a question about Argentina, describing it as the Axis source of information about ship movements. He couldn't understand why such a condition should be allowed to exist.

"If you have so much power," Stalin told Willkie, "why don't you clean up the country—do something to turn the Axis out of there?"

Willkie found it somewhat difficult to explain that the Good Neighbor policy would prevent such interference, in time of war as in time of peace.

NOTE: State department experts expect that, despite the new Argentine government's reactionary attitude on domestic questions, it will be driven to break relations with the Axis, in order to get lend-lease supplies from the United States. This is what Latin generals want most.

HUMANE BOMBING

Strange as it may seem, the United States air forces are planning the humane bombing of Germany. They want to avoid killing people and destroying non-military buildings. They want to bring the war to a merciful ending.

High ranking officers of the air forces are urging that we conduct our bombing operations in such a way that unnecessary destruction of enemy life and property shall be held to a minimum.

This is part of their thesis in favor of precision, or "pin-point" bombing, as contrasted with the "area" bombing of the RAF. The precision bombing, carried on in daylight, is able to pick out the precise military target, and destroy that without laying waste to an entire city, or killing helpless civilians.

These air forces officers speak of the post-war attitude of nations toward each other, emphasizing that careless bombing would intensify the hatreds of war, and make it more difficult to build a peaceful world.

Somebody will have to rebuild the broken cities of Europe. World ties are now so close that no great areas of destruction can be allowed to remain; rebuilding will have to be done, and only the victors will have the power to do the work.

Therefore, say these exponents of precision bombing, let us have no indiscriminate bombing, but only a precision job, which spares the life and property of the enemy as much as possible.

CHURCHILL THE PROPHET

Students of air power have dug up an old statement of Winston Churchill's, written in 1917, which reveals an amazing foresight in the possibilities and limitations of aerial bombing.

As everybody knows, the Nazi blitz against England, intended to terrorize the people, failed in its objective. On the other hand, the more scientific bombing of the continent by the RAF and AAF—strategic bombing—is now expected to bring Hitler to his knees.

Churchill seemed to foresee both of these developments when he said in a paper on Air Power, written in 1917, that nothing we know about warfare can lead us to believe that bombing for terror alone can cause such a morale collapse as to force a major nation to sue for peace.

Churchill emphasized that air power must single out and attack transportation, factories, and other enemy installations, upon which the enemy war-making ability depends.

England's survival of the blitz gives dramatic support to the first part of that statement, and Allied air power is now proving the second part.

INSTALLMENT BUYING

Business is usually squawking about government regulation, but here is one case where merchants want it continued after the war. They want to cherish and preserve Regulation W.

This is the regulation requiring heavy down payments on consumer purchases. For example, the down payment on a $200 refrigerator today—if you could get one—would be about $60, compared with three or four dollars before the war.

War-time purpose of this regulation is to curb buying and thus reduce inflation. But retail merchants like it for other reasons. It saves them bookkeeping expenses, avoids the nuisance of dunning, and provides cash.

CAPITOL CHAFF

Most carefully guarded targets in all Germany are the synthetic gasoline and synthetic oil works of Blechhammer and Bruex. If they could be knocked out, Germany would be pretty well out of the war. U. S. airmen are itching to get at them.

The Japanese embassy and grounds are being carefully cared for by the neutral Spanish embassy.

Manpower shortage has caused substitution of women for men at the switchboard of the FBI.

JOE KIRKWOOD, the Australian whose trick golf shots have awed galleries from one end of the country to the other, recently was asked to name the hardest shot in golf.

Kirkwood didn't hesitate: "A straight ball."

Almost any spectator who watches Kirkwood perform his trick shots becomes convinced that there isn't a shot he can't make. The things he does with a golf ball are almost beyond belief. But he never has won a tournament of major importance. His explanation for this fact is both simple and logical.

"I've got so many ways of making a shot that I can't concentrate on any one way in tournament play. The fellows who play orthodox golf have a set way for playing every shot and that's a great advantage.

"I've used trick shots in tournaments. Once I hooked a ball around a tree at San Antonio, and a monument was later erected in memory of the shot.

"Another time, while playing with Bobby Jones, I landed in a bunker on the far side of the green, and the only way that I could recover without wasting a stroke was to play the ball backward over my head onto the green. And that's what I did."

The Straight Ball

Kirkwood has the answer to the question of the straight ball:

"It's easy enough to call a low slice, or a high hook, a pull or a fade, but I never feel quite sure when I call for a straight ball. That's the one shot where everything must be perfect, and it rarely is."

In a recent newspaper piece, H. G. Salsinger, top-notch Detroit sportswriter, told of a series of unusual shots.

Ben Hogan, the pride of Texas, last summer that he could sink 50 straight putts from 10 feet out. He made the bet several times and collected every bet he made. But until you know how, don't try to imitate him.

Hogan laid down the flag on the practice green with one end on the edge of the cup. He placed his foot on the staff and rolled it back and forth. The trough-like indentation made by the flag staff wasn't noticed by the gallery surrounding the green, but it was there nevertheless. When he started putting all the balls stayed in the path and rolled into the cup.

Unlucky shots have played all too important roles in determining the outcome of more than one important tournament.

Ed Dudley was eliminated from the Professional Golfers' association championship last year when his ball connected with the head of a spectator.

It was back in the 1938 National Open at Denver that Ray Ainsley took 19 strokes on one hole. His ball landed in a fast creek and he tried to hack it out.

Johnny Revolta missed his chance in the Land of the Sky Open at Asheville when he six-putted a green. That should make John J. Dub feel considerably better.

Jim Turnesa ran into bad luck while playing the 17th hole of the 1942 PGA tournament in Atlantic City. His tee shot landed on a bottle, broke the bottle, and forced him to take eight strokes on a par 4 hole.

Sam Snead hasn't been noted for his good luck. He lost the final round of the PGA tournament at Hershey, Pa., to Byron Nelson, even though he fired a blistering 68, five under par, at Nelson.

The Nelson-Snead match was squared at the end of 33 holes. Both poured long tee shots off the 417-yard 16th—the 34th hole for them. Byron pitched his next stiff. It bit into the green one foot from the cup for a sure birdie three. It was the best shot he made in 209 holes of tournament play. Snead, on in two, rapped a 25-footer into the cup and it bounced out, hanging on the lip. That was the break of the match, for they halved the next two.

Fliers Train on Former Excursion Boat

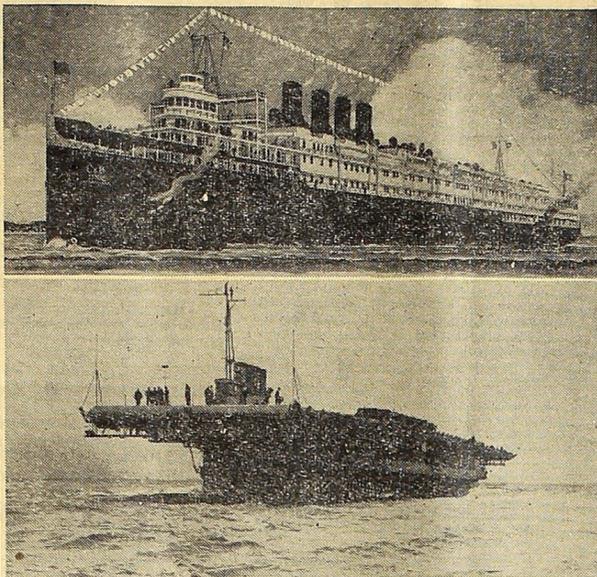

Teamwork Is Keynote Of Operations Aboard Great Lakes Flat Top

If Axis pilots were able to fly over our Great Lakes territory they would probably feel safe from American naval air power. But cruising below them would be a huge aircraft carrier—the Wolverine—with her crew of 225 fighting officers and men. This craft typifies the sudden fighting spirit felt by all Americans after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, December 7, 1941.

For a quarter century she was the Seeandbee, a pleasure cruiser. More than a million vacationers had cruised Lake Michigan aboard her. Then came the war. Her upper decks were stripped off. In a short time the floating hotel had become an aircraft carrier. Shipworkers had wrought a miracle in the former pleasure cruiser.

From early morning until nearly dusk, fliers from the Glenview air station practice landing and ascending on the Wolverine. In operation seven days a week, the flat top per-to break formation prepares to land in response to Lieut. Charles Roemer's quick flick of the signal paddles.

The pilot is directly above the stern. Lieut. Charles Roemer flips his signal paddles. The pilot "cuts" his engine, drops the plane onto the deck, skids to a stop, and another day's work is begun.

Lieutenant Roemer, veteran landing signal officer of the late aircraft carrier Lexington, alone has qualified more pilots than were in the entire fleet when he entered service prior to Pearl Harbor.

Roemer has waved the equivalent of "all's well," and another pilot sets his plane down safely. Nearly 8,000 such landings, without a serious mishap, is the boast of the Wolverine's crew.

No pilot guiding his plane onto the deck of the Wolverine escapes the expert eye of Capt. R. L. Bowman, the carrier's "skipper." A veteran sea-goer, Captain Bowman knows the mannerisms of young pilots, often rebukes them by citing a tale of a mechanical error at sea which perhaps cost the navy a plane or a pilot his life. Then "Happy" Bowman, as he is known to his fellow officers, smiles at the eager pilot and watches him take off for another try.

A native of Manchester, Iowa, 42-year-old Roscoe Leroy Bowman had never been out of his home state until he entered Annapolis at the age of 17 where he became one of the naval academy's football heroes.

Admitting he is anxious to return to sea duty, Captain Bowman performs his task of qualifying nearly 25 pilots daily with a zeal and function that approaches perfection.

Every takeoff is a test of the teamwork of which the crew of the Wolverine is proud.

On the flight deck the pilot races his motor to a deafening roar, keeps his eyes glued on the dispatch officer who will point down the runway, his signal for a take off.

When the officer gestures, the plane jerks forward, the spinning wheels cling to the deck as they catch up with the motor's speed, and the nimble training plane speeds toward the vacant expanse at the end of the deck.

As he races down the flight deck the fledgling pilot is about to learn the big answer. The spinning wheels eat up the length of the runway and the pilot at the last second throws out the stick. In a brief instant he will have taken off successfully and will be within the pale.

Taking off from a floating airfield! The roar of his motor is deafening, but he knows the crew behind him is shouting:

"There he goes!"

The Answers

1. Trickery or sharp practice, especially in legal proceedings.
2. That type of road was invented by John Loudon McAdam, a Scottish engineer.
3. Abraham Lincoln was our tallest President, at six feet four inches. James Madison, five feet four inches, was the shortest.
4. Fourteen.
5. They are citizens of the United States.
6. Three—Illinois, Kentucky and Missouri.
7. That type of hat was first worn at the Earl of Derby's race track.
8. An American buccaneer.

If you know a Navy man, don't ever call him a "gob"—sailors consider the name an insult. You can get on the right side of him though if you offer him a Camel—or better yet, send him a carton. Camels are the favorite cigarette with men in the Navy (Army, Marines, Coast Guard, too, for that matter) based on actual sales records from the service men's stores. And though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. S., and to men in the Navy, Marines and Coast Guard wherever they are.—Adv.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Recapped tires will render satisfactory service—if the tire carcass is in good condition, good workmanship is exercised, inflation rules are observed and speed is kept to 35 mph. Have your tires recapped at a reliable shop.

Scientists have developed the fact that when a car is driven at 50 mph there is a centrifugal force of two tons trying to pull the tires apart.

That our standard of living is affected in many ways by the shortage of rubber will be appreciated when it is known that normally about 50,000 items were made with rubber.

AMERICA IN ACTION

TELETYPE MAINTENANCE

Modern armies require modern communications. Teletype, a system of automatic typewriters reproducing at all connected stations the messages written at any station, is one of the modern communication methods used by the army air forces which operates and maintains all its own teletype systems.

The men who accomplish this task are graduates of the army air forces technical training command's teletype maintenance school. In less than two months, men who knew nothing of communication, nothing of electricity, are trained to set up, and maintain in operating condition all kinds of teletype circuits.

Those who visualize teletype equipment as a heavy and immobile adjunct of newspaper and telegraph offices must revise their ideas. Such equipment is now not only portable in trucks, but even in sections on the backs of soldiers. Field telephone lines may be interconnected with teletype in such a way that several sets of telephone headpieces and teletype machines can all be exchanging messages simultaneously over a single set of wires without interfering with each other.

The students learn how to adjust the machines, how to take them apart for service, how to detect and locate trouble and to handle ordering and replacing of parts. Delicate instruments such as oscilloscope must be mastered in order to locate line and circuit troubles.

But the army teletype man is no slave to a machine. He also has to know how to lay out military telegraph lines and how and where

FUN FOR YOUR FAMILY

By MISS ABBIE CONDIT
National Recreation Association.

Food and fancy free—those were the good old days for the youngsters of our country. And that's what it will be again when peace is won. But until that day youngsters, like their parents, are sacrificing a little of their freedom now to gain it for the future. We find many of them on our farms today, helping with the planting, the care and the harvesting of crops, feeding the pigs, and milking the cows. And at day's end, when chores are done, comes the hearty fun and laughter that relaxes the young hearts and minds. Here's something that moors a child to his mast: a happy and secure life.

If young muscles are tired at the end of the day, a stock of table games will entertain them and give them a chance to rest.

Nothing beats a game of Hearts or Michigan for fun and camaraderie. And a new game, Crazy Eights, played with cards, is a good game for the group. It has plenty of excitement.

Here are the rules for Crazy Eights: Deal seven cards to each player if there are three players; to place wires so they will not be interrupted by enemy fire or other causes. Students actually string such lines on small model poles, showing exactly how they would operate under field conditions. They must know all the auxiliary equipment that goes with a military teletype line, and how to calculate wire sizes, loads and fuses, and how to inspect equipment regularly so as to forestall trouble.

five cards to each if there are four or more players. Turn up the top card of the remaining cards to start the discard pile and leave the rest face down on the table. Players in turn must match the card showing face up, either by playing a card in the same suit or a card of the same numerical denomination. Thus if a six of hearts is turned up, the next player must play either a heart or a six.

All eights are "crazy" or wild. That is, the player who holds an eight may call out the suit and pip value he wishes it to represent. Other players must follow the designation that has been assigned to an eight when it has been added to the stack. Thus if the holder of the eight announces that it is a jack of diamonds, either a jack or diamonds must be played by the next player.

If a person is unable to play, he draws from the pile until he can play, but if he doesn't draw a good card in five tries, he forfeits his chance to lay down a card until his turn comes again. If a large group is playing it is best to limit draws to three tries for each player.

If a player wishes he may draw cards from the stock pile even if he can play from his hand. This often serves to confuse his opponents and increases the interest in the strategy of the game.

The winner is the person who gets rid of all his cards first. Losers count the numerical value of the cards left in their hands for their score. Pictures count ten points, aces one, and if a player is caught with an eight in his hand, 50 points are scored against him.

The game is over when one player has 100 points. The person with the fewest points wins.

Heating Expert Advises Women To Check Their Furnaces Now

Women who had to cope with furnaces for the first time last winter are advised to have their furnaces or stokers placed in starting up condition now.

"Early cold spells often come very unexpectedly," warns Luther Harr of the U. S. Bituminous Coal Consumers' counsel. "Therefore the woman on whose shoulders has fallen the running of the furnace should take advantage of the non-heating season to have the heating plant cleaned and, if necessary, repaired.

The fire box and ash pit should be emptied of all ashes and unburned coal. The grates should be examined and any broken sections replaced. The combustion chamber and other heat-transfer surfaces of the furnace or stoker should be thoroughly cleaned of all soot or fly-ash deposits with a stiff brush. It has been estimated that as little as one-32nd of an inch of soot or fly-ash on the heating surfaces may necessitate burning as much as 5 per cent more coal in a season.

The smoke pipe leading from furnace to chimney should be taken apart, cleaned and examined and, preferably, stored in a dry place. The chimney, too, should be looked over and cleaned. Unused openings should be sealed and broken tile repaired or replaced.

If a warm-air heating plant is used, the warm and cold air ducts should be inspected and cleaned. The room registers or grills should be examined to see that they open and shut fully.

And finally, Mr. Harr advises, the coal bin should be cleaned out and repaired, if necessary, and next winter's coal ordered and put in. Increasing transportation difficulties make it absolutely imperative that coal be ordered as early as possible to be sure of next winter's supply.

County Agriculture Agent W. L.
 Finley said that, while Iosco county is a fine tourist area, its principal industry was agriculture. That last year the production of farms was the highest ever recorded in Iosco county. That this year goals had been set for an even greater production. He emphasized the importance of Iosco County's 4-H Clubs, with an enrollment of 205 boys and girls, and announced that their achievements would be shown at an exhibit to be held here Wednesday, September 1. Some time later, an Achievement Banquet will be held, at which time awards will be made to the boys and girls in the presence of their parents and friends.

Notice

Of Application for Road Alteration
 and Hearing Thereon
 STATE OF MICHIGAN

In the Circuit Court for the County of Iosco.
 In the Matter of the Application for Alteration of a Part of Crosby Road, a County Road in Sherman
 Township in said County.

ORDER OF HEARING

At a session of said Court held in the City of Tawas City in said County, on the 4th day of June, 1943.

Present: Hon. Herman Dehnke,
 Circuit Judge.

Application under the provisions of Sec. 3950, C. L. 1929, as amended, mile of Crosby Road, and South Quarter Line of Section 33, Township

 21 North, Range 8 East, in said Township of Sherman for the reason that it is not practical and costs would be excessive to maintain a permanent road on such location due to erosion of the road bed from the flow of water in the West Branch of the AuGres River along which said highway is located, as in said application set forth, and for location of a road on the North and East sides of the Southwest Quarter of the Southeast Quarter of said Section 33.

It is ordered that the 17th day of July, 1943, at the court room in the Court House in the City of Tawas City in Iosco County, Michigan, at 10:00 o'clock in the forenoon of said day be and is hereby fixed as the time and place for hearing said application;

It is further ordered that notice of the pendency of such application and of the time and place of such hearing shall be given by publication of a copy of this order once each week for three successive weeks previous to said time of hearing in The Tawas Herald, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county, and posting up a copy of this order in three of the most public places in said Township and by personal service of a copy upon the Supervisor of said Township, and upon the State Highway Commissioner, at least 20 days before said day of hearing.

HERMAN DEHNKE,
 Circuit Judge.

"IN 2 HOURS YOUR FACTORY WILL BE FLOODED!"

It had been raining for a week, back in the hills. A farmer, hunting for a stray cow along the creek, looked up and saw water pouring through a widening crack in the reservoir dam.
 He ran half a mile to the nearest telephone and made a long distance call to the munitions plant down the valley where his son worked.
 "You've got about two hours before your factory is flooded," he told them. Because that call got through in time, scores of workers and tons of vital war material were moved to safety before the crest of roaring water could reach the plant.

 Long Distance lines are crowded with calls as never before. Many are war calls which must go through promptly. Others are civilian calls, some vitally urgent, some less urgent.
 You and you alone can judge whether your call is really necessary.
 Please make only the most essential long distance calls.
 If you must call by long distance,
 do all you can to be brief.
