ALFRED R. WEIR SUCCUMBS TO LONG ILLNESS

Rites for Former Probate Judge Held Thursday

Former probate judge, Alfred R. Weir, one of Isosco county's prominent and highly esteemed citizens, passed away Tuesday at his home at Oscoda at the age of 84 years. The deceased had been an invalid for the past three years. Since a young man he had been identified with the Loud Co. at AuSable and Oscoda.

Born August 9, 1859, at Glen Allen, Ontario, Alfred R. Weir came to AuSable when 18 years old, where he entered the Loud Co.'s store. For 26 years he was agent at the Union Steamboat dock. At the conclusion of the Detroit & Cleveland steamboat service at AuSable, he became land man for the Loud interest, in which capacity he remained until his death. He had also acted in similar capacity for the Consumers Power company for the past 30 years.

Always interested in civic affairs, he was elected judge of probate in 1900. This office he held until 1912 when he was succeeded by the late Judge David Davison. For many years he served as secretary of the AuSable board of education and for several years he was secretary of the board of education of Oscoda township. He also served Oscoda township as supervisor for a number of years.

Judge Weir had been very prominent in Masonic circles. He was a past master of AuSable Lodge, F. & A. M., and a past high priest of Isosco Chapter, R. A. M.

The deceased is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Mable McCuaig of Alma and Mrs. Edna Gresham of Oscoda; five grandchildren and three great grandchildren.

Masonic funeral services were held Thursday afternoon at the home and cemetery, with Henry Dingle of Oscoda, acting master. Friends from this city who attended the funeral were Judge H. Read Smith, N. C. Harting, James F. Mark and Carl B. Babcock.

18-Year Old Students Would be Deferred

A new law passed by Congress and signed by the President on July 9, 1943, makes it possible for 18-year old high school students to remain in school until the end of his academic year. This means that students who are entered in mid-year graduating classes or whose accelerated program allows graduation at some other time during the year may be deferred until their school year has been completed.

Because this Act will make accelerated and adjusted programs advantageous to some students who will thus be enabled to graduate or to complete a school year before induction, superintendents and principals are requested to bring it to the attention of students and their parents and to make all possible adjustments toward this end of the school program.

Caution Berry Pickers On Forest Fire Hazards

Fearful that the large influx of berry pickers into the northern part of the state will bring in its wake more forest fires to the north woods, conservation department officials are urging berry pickers to use extra caution in putting out cigarettes and camp fires.

With little rainfall since the beginning of July, the forests are now dry and flammable, and with the great increase of wood users, officials fear that Michigan's fine forest fire record for this year will be marred if berry pickers do not make a conscious effort to use caution with camp fires and in smoking while picking in the woods and plains.

Officials assert that the plains and slashing areas, where Michigan's three great wild berry crops occur—blueberries, raspberries, and blackberries—are especially hazardous, because once these areas dry out, they do not green up again until the following spring.

Tire Ration Applications

Persons having applications for tires or tubes on file with the local Board will be notified as soon as their application has been approved or rejected.

Hobart Brayman, chairman of the Tire Panel, states that due to a limited tire quota, the board is unable to approve as many applications as there are now on file.

Card of Thanks

I wish to thank all of my friends for their kindness and the gifts and cards given to me during my illness.

I. C. C. Examiner Recommends Abandonment of Prescott Branch

Following a recent hearing of the Detroit & Mackinac Railroad and interested citizens served by the Prescott division of that road, before a meeting of the Interstate Commerce Commission held at Bay City, the Interstate Commerce Commission examiner recommended that the commission allow the railroad company to abandon the Prescott division on the basis that such service was furnished at a loss by the company. An order allowing the abandonment has not been issued by the commission, but such an order, it is thought, will be forthcoming in the near future.

The Prescott division is a portion of what was the main line of the railroad when purchased by Alger, Smith & Co. The railroad originally built by the Hale lumber interests extended from Tawas City to the timberlands of western Isosco county. Later it was purchased and operated by C. H. Prescott & Sons and extended to their timber lands. In 1833 it was purchased by Alger, Smith & Co. and the road was extended to Alger, on the Michigan Central railroad where a terminal was established. This portion of the road was completed in 1884 and a bridge across the Rifle river was constructed that summer. It was said at the time to be the highest bridge in Michigan. That year the road was built north to AuSable.

Known as the Detroit, Bay City & Alpena Railroad, it had stations at Alger, Moffatt, Prescott, Mills, Whittemore, Arn, Tawas City, East Tawas, Bristol and AuSable.

In 1897 H. K. McHarg, Sr. and associates purchased the road. A main line was built from Emery Junction southward to Bay City, and that portion of the road from Prescott to Alger was later abandoned.

Body of Army Flier Found in Lake Huron

The body of Second Lt. Nathaniel Hill, 24, of Washington, D. C., killed last June 16, when the Army training he was piloting crashed into Lake Huron, was recovered near Oscoda on Monday.

Lt. Hill's parents live in Washington. Also killed in that crash was Second Lt. Luther L. Blakney, 25. His body was recovered the following day.

Recovery of Lt. Hill's body clears up the disappearance of the three Negro Army pilots who lost their lives within a relatively short space of time in Saginaw bay and Lake Huron plane crashes.

In later years he followed the trade of carpenter at Hale. He served Plainfield township as supervisor for 16 years and was township clerk for three years. Finley Advises Farmers On 1943 Feed Problems

It is now a well known fact that livestock and poultry in Michigan which consume large quantities of concentrated foods are very apt to experience feed shortage before harvest time in 1944. Due to extreme moisture conditions in the spring of 1943 much of the small grain acreage has not been planted this season. Livestock numbers especially swine and poultry have been greatly increased in Michigan and Isosco county is no exception to the rule.

For this reason County Agricultural Agent Wilton L. Finley warns the farmer of Isosco county to carefully study the small grain needs of their livestock and poultry for the coming twelve months period. A Michigan State College folder entitled "Soil Management During War" may be helpful in figuring this feed demand, and is available upon request at the county agent's office. In an attempt to increase the amount food available for war purposes and also to increase the fats and oils which are used in war production plants, farmers in this county and nearly every other county of the United States were encouraged to increase swine and poultry production.

At the present time with a government controlled price upon pork of somewhere between thirteen and fourteen dollars per hundred weight farmers are encouraged to market their hogs at a somewhat lighter weight than has been advocated during the past few months. The market demand now calls for top hogs in the weight range of one hundred eight to two hundred twenty pounds rather than the three hundred pound bracket we emphasized a few months ago.

Michigan normally carries some twelve million laying hens. This number will without question be increased during the coming winter, and with Isosco county's normal poultry flock of some thirty thousand being increased to perhaps fifty or sixty thousand comes the problem of securing grain in order that this poultry may go to market at the desired weight, and that the hens continue to produce effectively during the next few months. If the laying flocks are not all times making a sixty per cent egg production there are definitely too many loafers in the flock which should be culled. This in itself would save much feed and would be an economical adventure. Feed hoppers should also be checked. If poultry are wasting feed, the feed level in the hopper should be lowered, perhaps wider flanges should be placed upon the sides of the feeder to prevent this unnecessary loss.

Protein supplements such as soy bean meal, dried meal, dried milk, meat scrap, and linseed meal are practically out of the question for livestock feeding. For this reason poultry and swine herds should be placed upon alfalfa pasture at once. It may be necessary to frequently clip the alfalfa so as to keep it small and fresh at all times. The farmer should also make plans to harvest and carefully store several loads of the best second cutting alfalfa hay that is available upon the farm where it can be secured at any time during the winter for the poultry flock and the swine herd.

18-Year Old Youths Must Register at Once

The state selective service headquarters, reporting that many Michigan youths upon reaching 18 years of age are slow to register with their local draft boards, warned today the young men were risking serious federal penalties.

A spokesman said some local boards were receiving registrations from "new" 18-year-olds as much as six weeks late and that substantial numbers of itinerant farm laborers were known to be negligent about registering.

Youths are required to register with the nearest draft board on the day they become 18 years of age. If they live in another section their registrations will be forwarded to the proper draft board.

Approximately 4,000 18-year-olds are registered monthly in Michigan, increasing reserves to meet manpower calls by the army.

CARIBBEAN CONSPIRACY

by BRENDA CONRAD

THE STORY SO FAR: Anne Heywood, beautiful daughter of a wealthy New York newspaper publisher, goes on an assignment to Puerto Rico where Pete Wilcox, a reporter on her father's paper, is stationed as a U. S. Army intelligence officer. On the boat she meets a young Puerto Rican, Miguel Valera, and an engineer named Richard Taussig, of whom she is suspicious, although she does not know that he is actually a German agent ordered to destroy Puerto Rico's water supply. At the hotel in San Juan Anne's luggage is searched. She suspects Taussig, but when she goes to his room to investigate she is surprised by a man she recognizes as Miguel Valera. Valera warns Pete to send Anne home.

CHAPTER VI

It was half past five when Richard Taussig got out of the Army car in front of the Escambron Beach Club. He went through the cool lobby and turned left past the bar and out onto the boardwalk above the smooth saucer curve of the beach. It was pleasantly crowded and gay with laughing people sitting in white chairs under the long fringe of palm trees, with tall frosted glasses in front of them. A few people were swimming in the protected surf, and children were building forts and castles in the clean white sand.

Mr. Taussig walked along under the palms until he came to a curve where the boardwalk followed the beach. A girl in a white satin bathing suit and a red cap was coming up the sand toward a man sitting alone, reading, at the end of the terrace. Two young men lying on the beach watching her with interest turned their heads the other way as she joined her father.

"Perhaps Gongoro is smart to keep an eagle eye on her," Mr. Taussig thought, advancing toward them. They tacitly assumed she'd marry young Valera, apparently. If he had Graciela around, he wouldn't be wasting his time on the Heywood girl himself, he thought, if he were Miguel, but apparently the cold northern lights were attractive if you were born under the Southern Cross. And there was no accounting for tastes, anywhere in the world. Mr. Taussig had been around long enough to know that. He smiled at Graciela and shook hands with Diego Gongoro.

"Have you seen your picture?" Don Diego held out the paper, smiling broadly.

Mr. Taussig looked at it and nodded. "United States papers please copy," he said. He tore the photograph out and put it in his pocket.

"How is Miguel getting along with the American girl?" he inquired casually, lighting the cigar Diego Gongoro held out to him across the table.

"She's extraordinarily beautiful, of course," Mr. Taussig said placidly. "And very rich. Or her father is, and she's the only child. She'd be an excellent match . . ."

Graciela moved suddenly, catlike. "If you don't care what kind of a girl you marry," she said. There was an unmistakable malice in her voice. Mr. Taussig smiled secretly. He could see her sharpening one of woman's oldest weapons.

"She's one of America's best families, and a very nice girl, I understand," he said.

"If nice girls go in other people's rooms in hotels . . . when they aren't there, then I'm sure she must be very nice," Graciela said calmly.

Mr. Taussig almost started, in spite of the rigid control that was one of his chief characteristics. He blew a long ribbon of fragrant smoke between his soft lips.

"Whose room? And how do you know?" he asked easily.

"Yours," Graciela said. "I know because I went up to my cousin Luisa's room to borrow some powder, and I saw her come out of her room and go to yours."

"—Mr. Porter is waiting, Miss Heywood."

"Thank you," Anne put down the phone. Through the open transom she heard Mr. Taussig's bell ring almost at once. That meant that Russell Porter was picking them up together. She went quickly over to the dressing table and looked at herself in the mirror. Her face was too pale. She shouldn't have worn a white dress—a red one would have been better. But it was too late now. She knew Mr. Taussig was waiting until he heard her door open. Her hands were cold, her knees were shaking a little.

They drew up in the drive in front of a brightly lighted house perched up on stilts in a tropical jungle of flowers and trees. Concrete steps led up to a wide veranda that ran around three sides of it. Anne thought she'd never seen anything more charming. It was gay with brightly flowered chintz and bamboo furniture as cool and airy as it was comfortable.

"Oh, Sue, this is lovely!" Anne cried.

Sue Porter came eagerly forward. She kissed Anne on the cheek and held out her hand to Mr. Taussig. "This is Terry, Anne."

She introduced a slightly pudgy young man in a crumpled white dinner coat, his black tie slightly askew. He scrambled to his feet. Then his eyes popped with pleasure. "By Jove, Sue—you didn't tell me she was a knock-out," he exclaimed.

"Don't mind him, Miss Heywood. He's always like that." The girl reclining in the bamboo chaise longue moved her feet over.

She looked up at Anne with a small dead-pan sort of face that didn't look stupid but certainly didn't look very bright. She had on a sea-green chiffon dress a little lighter than her eyes, and almost no makeup, and her hair, pushed casually back, hung in a long bob around her neck.

"Sue's busy with the guest of honor," she said. Her voice had the same slow monotonous quality as her face. "My name's Barbara French. That's my husband over there erupting the soda all over everybody. He always does. His name's Ben. Yours is Anne, isn't it?"

Anne nodded and sat down on the cushion at the end of the long chair.

"It's supposed to be a cliché to ask people how they like it here, but I'm interested," the girl said.

"I like it," Anne said. She said "Thanks" to Ben, bringing her a Scotch and soda.

"This is Anne Heywood, Ben. We're going to like her."

"I hope she's going to like us," Ben said, grinning and sticking out his hand. "It's wet—there's something wrong with Russell's soda."

"It's probably got carbon dioxide in it," Barbara said. She looked up at him with her unsmiling eyes. "Sometimes it has."

"Not often," Ben said. "One bubble to a bottle. I'll be back. Say, where did Sue pick up that egg?"

"In the bottom of last year's nest," Barbara answered calmly.

Sue smiled enchantingly. "—Don't pay any attention to Barbara, Mr. Taussig. She's just being contrary."

She put her napkin down on the table. This was the moment she'd been waiting for. The men could sit and talk, and Russell would have his chance.

"Shall we let the men have their coffee here?"

She started to get up, but Mr. Taussig was out of his chair.

"Frankly, I prefer coffee with the ladies," he said blandly.

Sue had not gone to Miss Oakley's for nothing.

"How wonderful!" She smiled brightly and led the way through the dining room back to the porch.

Anne glanced at her watch. It was almost time to go. The party had settled into three groups, with Barbara and Terry and a silent young man who became voluble only at the mention of a race horse in one of them in the center of the porch. Behind them Ben was with Sue and Russell talking to Mr. Taussig. The others were playing some kind of game inside the living room.

Anne was listening to Terry and Barbara arguing the distance to a place she'd never heard of. She was listening more intently to the conversation behind her. Mr. Taussig was saying it couldn't be done. Anne had missed what it was. Russell Porter was insisting that it could.

"We're doing it," he was saying. "Right here, now. It's a wonder Colonel De Voe didn't show it to you this afternoon."

"There was so much to see," Mr. Taussig said. "Our time was limited. My point is that it's one of those engineering dreams that's a practical impossibility. If you can do it you're a wizard, my boy."

"That's just what he is, Mr. Taussig!" Sue cried. "Darling, why don't you show him those drawings you have, with all the specifications in them. Then he'd believe you."

It seemed to Anne that there was an abrupt little silence. She couldn't be sure, because Terry was trying to beat down Barbara's monotonous resistance to something by banging on the table. "I tell you it's crazy!" he was shouting. Then she heard Russell Porter saying, "I'd like to, Mr. Taussig, but they're not supposed to be shown around. You know how it is."

"Certainly," Mr. Taussig said. "And very wisely, in my opinion."

"—Run along, little girl, and look after your children. I hear one of them squalling."

The interruption was affectionate, but firm. Anne watched Sue's face as she went a little blindly but still smiling toward the living room. She was almost in tears.

Barbara got up too. She held her hand out to Anne.

"You're coming to the Club tomorrow, aren't you? Five o'clock?"

Her expressionless green eyes were fixed past Anne on the three men in the corner.

"Russell's all right," she said. Anne started.

A faint smile, if such a brief shadowy thing could be called a smile, moved in Barbara's face.

"—Ben, we have a home of our own," she called. "Good-by, Russell. It's been nice. Where's Sue? —Can we take Anne home?"

Sue came gaily out of the house. "But darling—it's early!"

"No, it's late."

Mr. Taussig came forward with Ben and his host.

"This has been delightful, Mrs. Porter," he said. He took her hand and smiled. "I like that man of yours," he added, lowering his voice.

"But something has to be done, doesn't it?" (That was Barbara.)

"Of course it will ruin the Island," Sue was saying.

"—She's talking about the law to prevent corporations from owning more than five hundred acres of land," Terry said, tackling his lobster thermidor. Anne listened. She couldn't distinguish the voices behind the scraps of conversation that pelted around her ears like rain on a tin roof.

Smart, Practical Swim Suits Of Sea-Worthy Rayon Weaves

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

DON'T be surprised to see swim suits a long way from the water this summer. This year is double duty year, and bathing suits are no exception to the patriotic rule that worth-while clothes are those that fill more than one useful role in the duration wardrobe. Smart little amphibian costumes in fine rayon fabrics, as luxurious as those used in your best dress-up frocks, are styled to act as playsuits as well this season. They're sunsuits, too, and you'll bask on your apartment house roof or in your own backyard in the same attractive suit that you wear to dive through the surf or dabble happily in the rediscovered old swimmin' hole.

Like all active clothes this year, the swim-and-play suits are pretty. Lovely sea-worthy rayon fabrics such as shantung, jersies, sharkskins, taffetas, flat crepes, bengalines and failles are cut on slim, gracefully simple lines with emphasis on fabric, color and gay patterning. Brightly plaided rayon taffetas, checked rayon crepes, solid-color rayon failles with self-color satin designs, and exotically printed rayon jersies are all favored choices that need little in the way of added trimming for effective styling.

Fashion plays no favorites between one and two-piecers this season. One-piece suits appear in both slim fitted maillot versions and in soft dressmaker types. The maillots, beloved of energetic swim enthusiasts, are generally knitted in nubby rayon or soft rayon chenille or maybe smoothly molded in fine rayon jersey. This season's maillot usually has at least a half-skirt across the front and may have a brief all-round overskirt for grace. Well cut bra-front bodices and shoulder straps that tie or button adjustably in the back contribute to nice lines and comfortable fit.

Outstanding in dressmaker tailored one-piece styles are the princess silhouette and the empire line. Referring to the illustration herewith, crisp and fresh as a sea breeze is the perky two-piece bathing suit to the left above, which uses snowy rayon sharkskin for its brief flared skirt and smoothly fitted bra-top. Grecian drapery is used for grace and figure flattery in the soft one-piece swim-and-play suit of vividly printed fine rayon jersey shown to the right. Molded bow-knot draping swatches the bra-top bodice and waistline above the brief gored skirt.

There's glamour for beach and play wear in a charming princess bathing suit as shown centered above. Here is a type which is as nice for matrons as for misses. Here fine bright red rayon faille with self-colored satin dot is styled with smoothly draped bodice and adjustable shoulder straps which lace through the sides and tie comfortably at the base of the modified back décolletage.

Summer Negligee

Dimity printed with dainty rosebuds is an ideal cotton for a summer negligee to make you look and feel as refreshing and lovely as the rosebud print itself. The founced bertha continues as a graceful cascade ruffle all down the front, giving a slim and flattering line. There is revived interest shown in pretty house robes and negligees, now that so many are spending the summer at home.

Peasant Accessories

Contribute Color

Peasant influences continue to contribute gay color and intriguing accents to fashions for the teen-age and college girl set. You find such thrilling accessory threeosomes in the shops as the laced up the front sleeveless form-fitting basque made of bright felt, green, red and other colors. Lovely is a "set" that includes a basque done in French blue felt appliqued with gay felt flowers and embroidery. There is a little pillbox to set on the back of the head which is matched to a drawstring bag. Cunning to wear with the blouse and skirt costumes "all the girls are wearing" this summer. Cap, mitts and little scarf of crocheted white wool with bright embroidered motifs and edged with red is another schoolgirl's delight in prospect for fall.

Unique Scarf

Something new and novel is the signature scarf which one finds in the neckwear departments. It goes without saying that it will make direct appeal to college girls and juniors who are looking for thrills along fashion's highway. These scarfs are of colorful washable silk. They have the insignia of the three commands, the four armies, 13 corps, and 74 divisions.

Plastic Buttons

Buttons for "looks" and buttons for practical use are very much in the fashion picture these days. There is a series of plastic buttons that are decidedly new. They look like amber and work in beautifully with the popular browns.

PATTERNS SEWING CIRCLE

Colorful Set

THE prettiest little girl for miles around will be the one who wears this ensemble—darling bolero, jumper and panties.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1781-B designed for sizes 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 years. Size 3 jacket with trimming for dress and pantie takes 1 1/4 yards 35-inch material, dress and panties 2 1/4 yards.

Teen Ager's Pet

THERE'S such flattery in the princess frock that it goes on and on as a favorite fashion of teen agers. Today's princess pattern presents a new wrinkle, too—lacing—emphasizing the smooth figure following seams at the waistline! Try this model at once if you are looking for a sweet pretty frock.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1732-B is designed for sizes 11, 13, 15, 17, 19. Corresponding bust measurements 29, 31, 33, 35.

Bananas Launch Ship

Greasing the ways of shipyards to permit thousands of tons of steel to slide smoothly into the water at launchings of battleships requires about 45 tons of a special grease. Once, when a surplus of overripe bananas was a disposal problem in one port, they were used to grease the ways for launching.

ON THE HOME FRONT

IF YOU are furnishing a combination living and dining room with odds and ends from the family attic why not use paint and inexpensive fabrics to harmonize unrelated pieces?

Here a combination chest and dish cupboard has been made from an old dresser. The cupboard at the lower right sits on top of the dresser and a quarter round molding nailed to the dresser top holds plates in place. Both dresser and chairs are painted cream color and quaint Dutch designs in gay colors are stenciled on them. The chair seat covers repeat the colors in these designs. Pieces of the cracked mirror of the old dresser are cut to fit painted picture frames and typical Dutch tulip designs are stenciled on the glass.

NOTE: The painted and stenciled designs used by Early Dutch settlers in America are full of sentiment for us today. The Dove of Peace and Hearts and Flowers were favorites. Mrs. Spears has prepared a large sheet of authentic designs with complete instructions and color guide for decorating furniture and other household articles. Ask for Pattern 262 and enclose 15 cents. Free the Seas

Before we win the final battle with Hitler's Nazis all navy men are agreed we must win the battle of the Atlantic; that is to free the sea lanes of the German U-boats.
A year ago we were building 54 cruisers and nearly 200 destroyers or just about enough for a two ocean navy.

Now we have come to realize that this war is to the finish, "winner take all," and our Government is building a five ocean navy.
That is why we are being asked to increase our subscriptions for War Bonds. That is why we must do it.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D. Of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for August 1

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education; used by permission.

GOD DELIVERS HIS PEOPLE

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 5:22, 23; 6:1-7; 12:51.
GOLDEN TEXT—Call upon me in the day of trouble: I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glorify me.—Psalm 50:15.

Why doesn't God do something? People are quick to ask such a question in a time of crisis. Today they want to know why God permits the war to go on. In the day of our lesson Moses wanted to know why God did not deliver His people from Egypt. He and Aaron had been appointed of God to lead them out, but their first efforts only met with failure and increased persecution.

The complaint of Moses, and the response of God make an instructive story for our consideration and guidance. It will answer our questions.

I. Moses Said, "Thou Hast Not Delivered Thy People" (Exod. 5:22, 23).

When the efforts of Moses brought heavier burdens on the people they blamed him and Aaron for making their situation worse. This sorrow and shame made them doubt God's calling and commission. How quickly men are discouraged in their purpose to serve God.

The people were wrong in their attitude. They should have been patient. They ought not to have assumed that the loss of the first skirmish meant the loss of the whole campaign.

Are we not just like them? The new minister or the recently elected Sunday school superintendent makes a mistake and instead of helping him to pick up the pieces and start over, we decide that he just will not do, that we must have a change.

Even though the people were wrong, however, the man of God should not have lost his faith and accused God of failure to keep His promise. He was supposed to have learned the lesson of patience in the long years on the backside of the desert. Had he forgotten the experience of the burning bush?

II. God Said, "I Am Jehovah, Thou Shalt See What I will Do" (Exod. 6:1-7).

In other words, Moses was to remember that he was dealing with the Eternal One, unchangeable, and always true to His word and able to make His will come to pass.

So often men in dealing with God think of Him in terms of their own weakness and failure. What we need is to have a Godlike conception of God, not a manlike idea of Him. God is the infinite and Eternal One with whom we have no right to quarrel, and whose dealings with us are too high for us to judge (Ps. 139:1-6).

God's covenant with His people was established (v. 4). He had heard their cry (v. 5) and His deliverance was sure (v. 6). The only thing Moses had to do was to wait and see God work.

That word "wait" is a little one. It seems to call for no effort, to be easy of fulfillment; yet it seems to be the hardest thing for a human being to do. Men who carry the burden of active warfare with ease and with honor become discouraged and sick when they must sit in a prisoner's concentration camp and wait for deliverance.

Christians who can speak and work for God when things are active and moving become querulous and despondent when they have to wait for something to happen, or when they are laid aside for a time.

His promise is sure. That is not just a religious sentiment. It is a fact, and it is proved by history. Note that in the case of Moses—

III. History Said, "It Came to Pass the Selfsame Day" (Exod. 12:51).

Moses had to take God's word, for "the selfsame day," which we read here came later. It came in God's own time, after He had, through Moses, humiliated and broken the hard will of Pharaoh. Then He gave His people the great memorial feast of the Passover, teaching them the needed lesson that redemption is by the shedding of blood.

In that night Jehovah did bring the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt. That deliverance was as certain the day He made the first promise to Abraham (v. 3, and Gen. 12:1-3) hundreds of years before, as it was now that it had been accomplished.

History is really God's story, revealing His outworking of His plan for mankind. The torn and blotted pages are man's handiwork. Sin and unbelief have caused him to hinder the work of God, but God is not defeated, and in the midst of man's self-created chaos, He proceeds quietly to work out His own purpose.

The many prophecies of Scripture which have been fulfilled not only prove its divine inspiration, but demonstrate its dependability. Every promise of God is "yea and amen" in Christ (II Cor. 1:20, 21). We can count on that!

Every 7th Girl A Spinster?

By Aram Scheinfeld

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with Collier's Weekly)

For the first time in history the United States is confronted with a big shortage of potential husbands. The situation already is so serious that one out of every seven girls now seems headed for spinsterhood. And if we add to this the young widows and divorcees who won't be able to marry again, we are threatened with a standing population of millions of women—six, seven, eight million, no one can estimate exactly how many—who will have to go through life without husbands.

This simple fact is social dynamite. It can rock the foundation of our social system and attitudes toward sex, cut down our population, change our American way of life.

Those who best understand the dangers ahead—our population experts, sociologists, economists and psychologists—are genuinely concerned. They have seen throughout Europe, notably in Sweden, England, France and Germany, the grave changes that have accompanied marked reductions in the proportion of men to women. They know that unless we begin planning speedily and realistically to meet the unbalanced situation of the two sexes, it is going to be difficult to maintain our present-day moral and social standards.

You can't blame the situation on the war. It will make things worse, but it isn't the primary cause. Long before it started, there had been a steady drop in the ratio of men to women in the United States. If the war ended today and we could recall to life and health every one of our casualties, there still would not be nearly enough men to provide husbands for all our girls.

Men Less Resistant. There are two fundamental causes for our man shortage. One is biological, affecting the whole civilized world: the fact that males are inherently weaker in resistance to disease and death. The other cause is peculiar to the United States, and results from our having used up the artificially created male surplus brought in by past immigrations.

Most dramatic is the biological factor: Males enter the world with the cards stacked against them. No matter how we might equalize conditions for both sexes—by abolishing war, or eliminating accidents and added strains on men—males are destined to die off at a faster rate. That fact now is known to apply not only to human beings, but to most of the animal kingdom. From mice to elephants, from birds to flies and fish, in almost every species the male is biologically less resistant, and has, on the average, a shorter life span.

One of the most interesting experiments on this point was made at the New York aquarium, with guppies, the familiar little tropical fish that give birth to live offspring. Expectant mamma guppies were placed in one tank, and after their hundreds of progeny had been born and had grown for a certain period, they were counted by sexes. It was found that the females outnumbered the males two to one.

One of the reasons for this much higher survival rate of females is that males are more likely to enter the world with inherited defects. Another is that the female organic mechanism is better able to adjust to sudden internal upsets or external adversities.

Among infants dying in the United States before their first birthday, at least 25 per cent more boys than girls are carried off. During childhood this mortality ratio drops, but at maturity the male death rate goes up again, and thereafter the death toll among men is at least 25 per cent higher than it is among women. By the time the mid-twenties, the principal marriage years, are reached, the original surplus is completely gone, and thereafter women increasingly outnumber men.

One remarkable fact is that as the "expectation of life" has been extended, women have profited more than men have. From 1900 to 1941, the expectation of life at birth had been increased by about 15 years for males, but 17 years for females.

Up to this present generation, we always had more than enough men to go around, with "seconds," as well, for young widows and divorcees. We were still able to draw upon the heavy surplus of foreign-born males brought in by previous immigrations. Now the situation for American girls is something like playing "Going to Jerusalem," using men instead of chairs. With each turn of the years, additional men have been yanked away and more girls have been left to stand alone.

Washington, D. C.

CORN 'SIT DOWN STRIKE'

High ranking officials of the agriculture department are frank in saying that farmers are impeding the war effort just as much as striking coal miners when they stage a sit-down strike on corn.

Feed corn is desperately needed by poultry farmers, dairy farmers, and corn processors. But corn is not moving to market because farmers are holding for a higher price.

The typical farmer in the corn belt today is looking at his bins full of corn and reasoning that he might as well hold it for a while, since he doesn't need the cribs yet, and since the price might go up.

Washington is partly to blame for this. The attacks on OPA, the firing of Chester Davis, and the congressional demands to set aside the price ceiling, all have created uncertainty. So the farmer sits tight, saying, "I'll just wait till they make up their minds."

But when thousands of farmers do the same thing, it creates a scarcity which throws the national economy out of gear just as much as the lack of coal production. The patriotic thing to do, say Washington officials, is to send your corn to market now, especially since the farmer is guaranteed the benefit of a price rise, if it comes.

Meantime, the corridors of the department of agriculture are seething. Pressure for a corn rise is terrific. This is Marvin Jones' first big battle.

WICKARD GOES SHOPPING

Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard went shopping with Mrs. Wickard the other day. He stood in the grocery store watching the shoppers, while Mrs. Wickard did the buying.

He noticed a crush in front of the meat counter, while the vegetables, including potatoes, were going begging.

"That's human nature for you," mused Wickard. "Only a few weeks ago, when potatoes were short for a few days, there was a great howl from the public, and potatoes were sold in the black market. Now there's plenty of potatoes—but everybody wants meat."

When Mrs. Wickard appeared from the crush, she announced with pride that she had some meat.

"How much did you pay for it?" asked Wickard.

"Nine points," replied Mrs. Wickard.

"No," said the secretary of agriculture. "I mean how much money—how much a pound?"

"Oh, I don't know," she said. "All I know is it cost nine points out of my red stamps."

Wickard shook his head. "That's the trouble with you women," he said. "You're not thinking about the cost of food, but only whether you can get it or not. How do you expect merchants to hold to the price ceilings, if you don't even know what you pay?"

Mrs. Wickard promised to do better next time.

Want to Move Fast.

The method used in invading Sicily was a compromise among land, air and naval elements, resulting in the "peculiar amphibious operations" Churchill talked about. But the air forces believe they can move even faster and more effectively in conquering other parts of Italy if they don't have to be tied down by classical warfare.

For instance, with bases in Sicily, army airmen think they can so pulverize the industrial plants of northern Italy that they can bomb that country out of the war without waiting for huge landing operations to come up and help them.

Then with air bases in northern Italy, they are within range of the hidden synthetic gasoline and rubber factories which Hitler has moved into Austria and Czechoslovakia. Thus, step by step, the air forces believe they can knock out the enemy without resorting to classical warfare.

Axis Planes Knocked Out.

Here is one significant thing army airmen point to. During the ten days just before we invaded Sicily the Nazis had been sending a lot of new planes into Sicily and southern Italy.

But after one day of fresh Axis air strength, which was heavily damaged by U. S. planes, there followed a day or two of weak resistance. In other words, Axis planes were knocked out and had to wait for reinforcements. These reinforcements kept coming up until about two days before the invasion, after which Axis air resistance was light.

CAPITAL CHAFF

Since the Washington Post exposed the use of diplomatic cars for driving to dinner, many a Washington diplomat has been going out on foot.

Among five Washingtonians who were penalized for pleasure driving was John Quincy Adams.

One reason for the Nazi announcements that an Allied invasion will start on such-and-such a date is that if the invasion does not materialize, Hitler can boast that it was called off because of German strength.

THE return of Patty Berg, brilliant Minneapolis professional, to the golfing wars was a pleasant event to the thousands of persons who watched her win the recent Women's Western Open golf tournament at Chicago.

As you know, the buxom Miss Berg was told by physicians after an automobile accident in Texas in December, 1941, that she would be lucky to walk again, let alone play golf. But the golfing galleries saw Patty trudging over the fairways with her knee still bound tightly. Although she limps slightly, she has good reason to be proud of the progress.

Her heartening comeback did not come without a great deal of effort. She explains it simply.

"A year ago I started practicing for half an hour a day until I got so I could pivot fairly well. Then I started playing a few holes at a time, finally working it up until I could go the full round only several months ago. But I never played more than 18 holes in one day until now. Going the 29 holes to win twice convinced me my comeback is a success.

Recovery Route

"Another thing that is a tremendous help is swimming. I go to an indoor pool every morning—when not in a tournament—and swim for about 30 minutes. Then I straighten my knee by pumping a bicycle. You'll find me out riding a bike every day now."

Then, too, she has altered her playing methods to some extent. Patty credits Les Bolstad of Minneapolis, one of the Northwest's best-known pros, with changing her swing and stance to ease the pressure on her injured knee.

About Bowling

Despite the many obvious handicaps confronting it, bowling recently wound up one of the most successful seasons in history and still retains top place as the most popular year-round participant sport.

A report released by the American Bowling Congress shows that there are 16,000,000 Americans now spilling pins. This total includes 13,500,000 men, 2,000,000 women and approximately 500,000 youngsters. Of these, 14,200,000 bowl against tenpins—the big pins—and 1,800,000, principally along the eastern and southern seaboard, roll against duckpins and candlepins.

It may surprise you to learn that the busiest bowling proprietor in the country is your Uncle Sam, who manages 2,027 alleys at army, navy, marine and coast guard stations.

Figures also show that where bowling is made available to men in the armed forces it is one of the most popular on-post recreations, in the majority of cases supporting itself and providing additional funds for other recreational facilities.

Statistics aren't the most fascinating things in the world, but it may be fairly interesting to learn that the ABC estimates that 6,000,000 men and women between the ages of 40 and 50 are regular bowlers. Five million are found between the ages of 30 and 40, and so on down the age classifications.

The hold bowling has taken throughout the nation is a strong one. There are approximately 70,000 bowling alley beds in 10,000 establishments over the country. This is approximately a 300 per cent increase in the availability of bowling over 1935-36 figures.

From the standpoint of organized bowling, Detroit is the leading city, having one team for 112 persons. Illinois is the leading state with 27,661 teams.

You and the other 15,999,999 bowlers spend $221,000,000 on the game each year, organized bowlers paying $76,250,000 of this amount. The "capital structure of retail bowling establishments," according to the report, amounts to $770,000,000.

Team membership figures were not available, but the ABC estimated there was a reduction of about 15 per cent in that category.

WAVES Need 50,000 Patriotic Women

Lives of Airmen May Depend on Quality Of Their Work.

Naval fliers running gantlets of death in combat zones have a particular bond of friendship with some WAVES back home.

In fact, the lives of these pilots and crews may depend on the efficiency of parachute riggers, who are performing one of the most important tasks in the women's reserve.

Women who sew and who know materials are especially qualified for this work. They must learn to pack a chute under emergency conditions without the aid of packing tools or loft conveniences. They must also be able to operate a sewing machine, repair fabric equipment used in aviation, make minor repairs to flight clothing, recognize stains found in chutes, and make minor repairs to inflatable flotation equipment.

The parachute rigger has considerable responsibility in the care and handling of silk and synthetic fabrics, and also in knowing the tensile parachute rigger must be able to repair any defect or damage in parachutes or other lifesaving equipment. Each parachute that has saved a man's life is decorated with a gold star, not to praise the parachute, but to credit the parachute rigger.

Actually, the need for women in the nation's armed forces is becoming increasingly urgent. Feminine response to the country's call for WAVES and SPARS has not been nearly enough to meet the widening demands of the navy for patriotic women.

Approximately 20,000 young women have already donned WAVES uniforms but opportunities still exist for an additional 50,000 women who wish to do their part in hastening victory and, at the same time, prepare themselves for attractive peace-time occupations.

Enrollees in the women's reserve of the navy must be between 20 and 36, in good physical condition, with at least two years of high school education. Women seeking commissions must have had two years of college and two years of business experience.

WAVES enlistees report to Hunter college, New York City, for a five-weeks general indoctrination course which includes drilling, naval traditions, and customs, and a series of skill and placement tests to determine the best training for the individual. Personal preference regarding type of training is given every consideration. At Hunter she will receive the attractive navy blue uniform that identifies her as a proud member of the naval reserve.

Upon successful completion of this course the enlisted WAVE is sent to one of many specialized training schools located throughout the nation. Here, she will undergo a 13-weeks' program that will equip her with the knowledge and practical experience necessary to fill a job of responsibility in the navy.

Various colleges throughout the country, as well as certain naval training stations, have been converted into service schools for specialized training for WAVES. More service schools are being established all the time as the need for specialized training increases.

Enlisted WAVES may now apply for officer training after six months' service. This new policy increases the opportunity for officer commissions to enlisted women since their commanding officers may now request a waiver on the educational requirement. Applicants will be recommended on the basis of general bearing, executive ability and leadership qualities.

AMERICA IN ACTION

MERCHANT MARINE SAFETY DEVICES

The safety devices on the ships of our Merchant marine are helping to defeat the Axis submarine campaign. To date more than 5,000 American seamen have been returned to America from foreign ports which they reached after their ships sank. Every one of these men who was able to go back to his job at sea, secure in the knowledge that the ship he sails on will carry every possible device which modern science can devise to protect him. It is a triumph of American ingenuity over Axis terroristic methods.

Today every American ship carries a full complement of lifeboats equipped with an amazing list of safety devices. Rigged with sails and many carrying auxiliary motors, the boats contain compasses, bullet-proof water tanks, hydrographic charts, air tanks, smoke signals, boat covers, and first-aid kits which in themselves are miniature field-hospital units. Several sets of fishing tackle are even included as a potential means of supplementing the scientifically devised food supplies on board. These food provisions are prepared under the supervision of army and navy dietetic experts and contain the highest vitamin and caloric contents.

That's why 5,000 American seamen are back at their posts today. But these 5,000 are only a small part of the army of seamen necessary to operate our huge merchant fleet which night and day is carrying the equipment and supplies needed by our fighting men and their allies all over the world. The War Shipping administration estimates that by the end of this year 120,000 men will be needed. Mates, engineers, able seamen, cooks and bakers are urgently needed. Those who want to help the Merchant marine can do so now by going back to sea. The United States Employment service or the Recruitment and Manning Organization of the War Shipping administration will help them do so.

From an old French word "mes" derived from the Latin word "missus" meaning a course at a meal, comes the Army's name "mess" for its breakfast, dinner and supper. Favorite meal with the soldier is chicken dinner—his favorite cigarette, Camel. (Based on actual sales records from service men's own stores.) A carton of Camels, by the way, is a gift that's always welcome. And though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. S., and to men in the Navy, Marines, and Coast Guard wherever they are.—Adv.

MEAT GOES FAR WITH ALL-BRAN "BRANBURGERS"

Here's a new way to serve that old favorite, the hamburger. Make it with KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN to stretch the meat supply, to give the popular hamburger new interest, and to get ALL-BRAN'S nutritional benefits—valuable proteins, carbohydrates, vitamins and minerals.

Kellogg's All-Bran Branburgers
1 egg 1 tablespoon
2 teaspoons salt 1 chopped parsley
1/4 teaspoon pepper 1 cup milk
2 tablespoons 3/4 cup catsup
minced onion 1 cup Kellogg's All-Bran
1 pound ground beef

Beat egg slightly, add salt, pepper, onion, parsley, milk, catsup and All-Bran. Let soak until most of moisture is taken up. Add beef and mix thoroughly. Shape into 12 patties. Bake in hot oven (450° F.) about 30 minutes or broil about 20 minutes.

Yield: 6 servings (12 2 1/2 inch branburgers.)

FUN FOR YOUR FAMILY

By MISS ABBIE CONDIT
National Recreation Association.

With picnic days here, some of the old but always popular stunts begin to come to mind. There are other social occasions, too, when these "hardy perennials" bloom anew! Do you remember these?

You're Out. On a goal line place a number of 2-by-12-inch blocks of wood on end, three feet apart. If for example 12 blocks are used, 14 players stand three feet apart behind a starting line parallel to the goal line. On signal contestants run and grab one of the small blocks. The two who fail to secure them are eliminated. Ten blocks are now placed in a row and the 12 who secured them during the first race run again. This elimination is continued until two contestants are trying to secure the one remaining piece.

Barrel Roll. Place an empty nail keg or small barrel on its side on the starting line in front of each contestant. At a given signal, the runner rolls the keg around a designated goal and back to the starting line. Permit players to use both hands. For variation insist that players roll keg by kicking it with their feet only.

Air Line Race. Pieces of wrapping string about 30 feet long are needed for each contestant, one end of each threaded through empty paper cups. The ends of each string are then held taut—shoulder high—by individuals not participating in the game. The cups are all arranged in line at one end of the strings with open ends toward the contestants. At a given signal each player is to blow his cup to the other end of the thread, by blowing into the open end. The first one across the finish line is the winner. Contestants should be warned that the use of the hands and any other part of one's body in getting the cup to the finish line is not permitted. Ice cream cones can be substituted for paper cups.

Bottle Filling. Provide each player standing behind a starting line with a small cup or water glass. Directly behind him put a can or pail of water. In front of each participant, at a distance of 30 feet, place a large, small-necked bottle. On the word "go" each player fills his cup, runs to the bottle and pours the water in it. The player returns to the pail of water as many times as is needed to fill the bottle. The winner is the player whose bottle is first to be filled. This might also be conducted as a single file relay with players taking turns in running back and forth and filling the bottles. Remember that all cups and bottles should be of the same size.

Farmyard Conversation. Contestants, one at a time, imitate the sounds of familiar farm animals—cow, calf, sheep, chicken, duck, turkey, pig, dog, cat and others. Judges decide as to who is the best imitator.

More Allotments for Dry Goods Stores

"We must bring the shrinking supply of civilian goods as close as possible to where people live, in most cases this will mean definitely favoring the smaller retail outlets by giving them more goods to distribute than their past performance would entitle them to," points out Wayne Chatfield Taylor, our under-secretary of commerce.

With this encouragement from the government, the dry goods stores in smaller towns are getting more and more goods, as customers are unable now to take long trips and are buying more in their neighborhood stores.

The selection of goods in these stores is wide, for you can get everything from smart white gloves to baby pants. The wholesalers from which these stores buy have been generous in giving advice as to how these goods should be displayed and merchandised, so that the windows and counters are attractively arranged and enticing.

The turnover is so rapid that stocks are always fresh and the styles modern and up to date. This is possible because the average family income has increased enormously, not because one member's salary has been raised to such heights, but because in many cases every member of the family is working even down to Johnnie delivering packages after school.

"Let's allocate our supplies where they can be most conveniently and economically distributed," says Mr. Taylor.

What to Do

By PHYLLIS BELMONT

With clothes rationing staring us in the face, we had better give thought to preserving the clothes we have.

Anything that is washable, should be laundered frequently as perspiration and dirt in garments will rot the sturdiest material in time.

The mending and darning basket will be put to work again, and patches may become stylish. There are many ways of hiding a darned or mended spot, and patches need not show. A pocket may be placed to cover a worn spot, or a worn elbow may be covered with contrasting material.

Always mend garments before they are laundered, as the darning or patching won't show so much that way.

Civilian Week-End Travel Hampers War Transportation

Week-end pleasure travel by intercity train and bus is practically eliminated for the duration, reports the Office of War Information—not only because such travel interferes with war transportation, but also because, the way things are, week-end travel is no pleasure.

Railroad and intercity bus companies are in agreement that week-end pleasure travel should be eliminated. Their service in carrying the essential war traffic under great difficulties has won official recognition. Contrary to the peacetime practice of advertising the lure of recreational spots for America's millions of week-end travelers, transportation companies, as well as the Office of Defense Transportation, are urging civilians to stay at home over week-ends.

Furlough travel for men in the service reaches its peak on week-ends and a holiday week-end increases that rise. Civilians should travel in the middle of the week.

Preview of Barrage Balloon Defenses for New York City

Officers and civilians are watching the upward flight of the first barrage balloons in the metropolitan New York area, in a preview by Maj. Gen. Sanderford Jarman's anti-aircraft artillery command. The captive balloons with their huge cables will hode ill to any low-flying enemy bomber that may wish to tackle New York. The effectiveness of balloons has been demonstrated in the battle of London.

FAILURE TO FURNISH THIS REPORT TO THE DEPARTMENT OF STATE BY ALL DRIVERS OR OWNERS WITHIN TEN DAYS SHALL CONSTITUTE A MISDEMEANOR AND SUFFICIENT GROUND FOR THE SUSPENSION OR REVOCATION OF OPERATOR'S LICENSE AND REGISTRATION.

Automobile accidents resulting in personal injuries or death must be reported to the Secretary of State within ten days by the drivers and owners of all cars involved, regardless of who may have been at fault, under the newly amended Financial Responsibility law which becomes effective July 30, 1943. This report is in addition to those now made to police or other law enforcement agencies and failure to file the report on time constitutes a misdemeanor and sufficient ground for suspension of the driver's license and car registration. The form provided by Secretary of State Herman H. Dignan is very simple as shown above and may be obtained from police and sheriff's departments or from a Department of State branch office. Motorists who are not familiar with the new provisions of the law may obtain a booklet setting forth its benefits and penalties from any gasoline station or at license plate office.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred T. Luedtke of this city received the following letter from their son, Frederick, who is stationed somewhere in Africa:

June 30, 1943.
Dear Mother, Dad and All:
I don't know how successful I will be, but I'm going to try and answer your letters. I received six letters yesterday. The first part of yesterday didn't go so "hot." You know, those little things that turn up, and sort of upset the day? But the six letters seemed to put a different hue on everything, and then to make a perfect day my "first class" became official. I knew I had made 1st class electricians mate, but until it is OK'ed by the C. O., it isn't official.

So sorry to hear that Art Dease's father died. Although we were mere acquaintances in Michigan, in Africa Art and I were real pals. I saw him every night when we were near each other, and we really had nice chats about all the things we used to do when we were home, and what we were going to do when get back. Our chief boatswain just got word yesterday that his mother died the 28th of May. Sometimes it's rather hard to find us, that is get mail to us—and you can be sure if it takes our own government a month to locate us sometimes, how long will it take the enemy?

I've received two Herald's so far. I guess they'll be coming regular now. It's ancient history by the time I get it, but I read it from cover to cover, and then the rest of the crew reads it.

Don't worry about me, because it will all turn out for the best in the end. Take it easy.
Your son,
Frederick.

In the further discussion of the feed situation with Finley, he asserted that every farm in Iosco county should have from a few to many acres of fall planted wheat; and rye so that a re-occurrence of this feed shortage will not be experienced in Iosco county in the later part of 1944. "We have no guarantee," said Finley, that this excess moisture problem will not re-occur without question continue during that year and every possible plan should be used to divert all labor possible from the rush season in the early spring of next year.

Adequate poultry disease control is still another way which feed may be conserved. In case poultry disease or parasites are a problem, Finley suggests that farmers contact his office as quickly as possible.

It is now too late to construct labor saving equipment such as a sweep rake in order to harvest the first cutting of alfalfa hay, however it might be well to make plans at once so that this type of equipment can be used in harvesting the second crop which is so valuable as a source of protein, when other cereal and concentrated feeds are difficult to secure.
