THE STORY SO FAR: Anne Heywood, THE STORY SO FAR: Anne Heywood, beautiful daughter of a wealthy New York newspaper publisher, goes to Puer-to Rico on an assignment for her fa-ther's paper. Also on the island are Pete Wilcox, a reporter on her father's paper, New 2 H S Wilcox, a reporter on her father's paper, now a U. S. Army intelligence officer; Miguel Valera, a Puerto Rican educated in the United States whose orders to re-port to an army camp were abruptly cancelled; Richard Taussig, an engineer whose identity as a German agent is sus-pected but not yet proved; and Russell Porter, a young American engineer, and his wife, Sue, who believes Mr. Taussig can help Russell. Anne lets Taussig know she suspects him. He has gone to see Diego Gongaro, Valera's uncle.

CHAPTER VIII

Taussig put his green visored cap on the table and removed the dark lenses from his spectacles.

"I've been wasting my time being cautious," he said.

"Wasting-did you say?" "I did. I'm afraid it's true."

He hesitated. He did not want to offend the man who was supposed to be his chief lieutenant. Nevertheless . .

"Don't you think, Gongaro," he said, "that perhaps you regard women too highly?"

Diego Gongaro's face broke into a warm smile. He raised his hands and shoulders in an eloquent gesture of amused denial.

"On the contrary, my friend. It is you. I think women charming, but-shall we say?-somewhat stupid. They are controlled by emotion, not by intelligence."

"But the American girl," Taussig said curtly, "is not controlled by any of you."

Anne finished the last of the gold-en slip of papaya in front of her and pushed back her cup and saucer. She'd expected the coffee to be wonderful, but it was flat and tasteless as the worst of the common brews at home.

She picked up the pile of letters of introduction she'd brought, and looked them through for the dozenth time. It was always a question whether the people they were ad-dressed to would think it ill-mannered if you didn't present them, or be delighted not to have to do anything about the transient daughter of a friend of a friend they'd probably forgotten they had.

She finished dressing, took her let-ters and started for the door. As she opened it a bellboy came out of the service stairway. He smiled at her with an intent interest in his eyes that she didn't understand.

"Senorita Heywood," he said. "Don Alvaro say you come down right away."

It was so shockingly peremptory that Anne felt a warm flush springing to her cheeks. She was on the point of saying he could tell Don Alvaro Valera to go to blazes when the boy said anxiously,

"He say if you please, senorita. do not put in English the way he

There could be a dozen reasons why he mightn't want to see her just then .- Or be seen by her, Anne stopped in the middle of the she added with a vague sense of unbroad sun-baked Plaza Principal easiness. She glanced back at the and looked around her in surprise. Five minutes before it had been door. A man was coming now who looked rather more as if he belonged crowded with people, teeming with motor cars, carts of all sorts, fruit there. He was small and dark, with a blue shirt open at the neck and cotton trousers and straw hat that had both seen better days. He was venders and flower sellers. Now it was as empty as if an inaudible airraid warning had been sounded, and coming down the hill. life of every kind had taken miracu-lously to invisible shelters. It had Anne moved out to the sentry box and wandered aimlessly along, looking up at the blackened time-stained wall. The man came through the gate and went down the ramp to the long pier stretching out into the shallow dirty water of the bay. The pier was empty except for a man at the far end leaning over the barrier; watching the harbor.

Anne went back to the stone battlement in front of the pilastered gate, watching the two of them. The man at the end of the pier had turned and was coming back, stop-ping once to level his camera at the seawall with the gardens and white round towers of Fortaleza shining above it. Anne leaned for-was very pleasant. She had set out ward. It was Mr. Richard Taussig to see the old city without realizing in his yachting cap, with the breeze flapping his white linen trousers around his ankles the way it had on the promenade deck of the ship. She stepped quickly down from the ledge and slipped into the sen-try box. Through the narrow slit in its circular wall she could see Taussig shade his eyes with his hand and look along the ramp.

The man from the house in Caleta San Juan stopped from time to time to look down into the muddy water. In a minute or two they would pass each other. Or would they? Anne waited. The Puerto Rican stopped again. Mr. Taussig was on the other side of the narrow pier taking another picture of La Fortaleza. Then, as casually as an ordinary tourist, he crossed over within a couple of feet of the other man, and to all intents and purposes devoted himself to taking snapshots of the unlovely expanse of beach and wall under the Casa Blanca.

Anne glanced at her watch. Eleven minutes dragged slowly by on its tiny face before either of the two men below her moved—the tourist or the native. It was a long time for anybody to stand in the broiling midday sun looking down into the mud. Then quite abruptly Mr. Taussig moved away and was coming up from the pier.

of tricks this year. With a change of any simple frock, and dress vaingloriously to occasion. That's why women who know their fashions are accumulating collections of dickeys replete with all sorts of ideas, from the new types done in blouse stylings made of gingham, plaid taffetas, finest of snowy cottons that launder like a handkerchief, to the most adorable fluffy-ruffle fantasies, all lacy and frothy and too sweetly feminine for words.

Speaking of the new dickeys in blouse stylings, they are more than decorative neckwear types. They have shirtwaist fronts so that with the jacket open they look like a complete blouse. The back of these blouse-styled dickeys is of the same fabric, so that they tie about the waist and "stay put." They're designed with practical wartime liv-

Whale Swims Underwater With Its Mouth Open

You know that a whale breathes air through its nostrils, just as you do. But you also know, if you are a swimmer, that you keep your mouth closed while you are under water. Not so the whale. It swims with its mouth open, so that it can collect the huge quantities of small fish and sea creatures that it needs for food. How's it done?

Nature has provided the whale with a longer windpipe, reaching the nostril opening at the back of the mouth. Thus, although it can swim along with its mouth open and full of water, none can get into the lungs.

Incidentally, the quantity of food that a whale consumes is enormous. Whalers tell us that the stomachs are often full to bursting-point, and the contents would amount to several carloads!

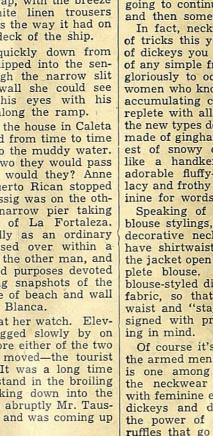

Relative Values A wise man is he who knows the relative value of things.-Dean Inge.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER The basis of modern rubber usage is vulcanization, a word that is derived from Vulcan, the Greek God of Fire.

> The cryptostegia vine yields about 17 drops of rubber latex a day, a seven-year-old Hevea tree three to six pounds of rubber a year. Properly treated Hevea trees, when 10 years old, can give from 1000 to 1500 pounds of rubber per acre per year. About eleven lovely for an office date, try a sheer batiste dickey highlighted with multi-colored peasant embroidery, add other white accessories and you will step out in a gay mood.

Neat and trim for busy schedules, yet dressy enough for dinner and an evening of fun is the softly ruffled dickey of smooth sharkskin shown below. If you have ever worn sharkskin in blouse, dress, suit or topper, fashion has no need to tell you how beautifully it launders. Yes indeed, a dickey of white sharkskin will never wear its welcome out. Anne smiled. "Of course. Thank you." It was just that sort of difficulty in communication, she thought, that accounted for a lot of misunderstanding.

Don Alvaro rose from his seat and bowed.

"You give an old man a great deal of pleasure, senorita."

"Thank you," Anne said. She sat down, wondering. The waiter apparently wondered too; she noticed that he almost stumbled into the fountain when he saw her sitting down

"I have taken the liberty of ordering you the coffee from our finca that they make for me here," Don Alvaro said. "But perhaps you prefer American coffee. Most of your people do. It has very little appeal for us."

"It's wonderful," Anne said, sniffing the full rich aroma. It must have been American coffee she'd had for breakfast. She tasted it. "It is wonderful!" she cried.

Don Alvaro looked pleased. "National tastes differ, of course," he said.

"I know," Anne said quickly. "And language and customs and traditions.'

He looked at her a little puzzled. She smiled. "I'm just quoting your son."

Don Alvaro looked silently out across the ocean for a moment. Then he said gravely, "I'm happy that he remembers. I was afraid he had forgotten."

"-This is why he asked me down," Anne thought. She felt her heart lighten. It could only mean . . . She dismissed that quickly. Don Alvaro was looking at her with a kind of sadness and wisdom that was disturbing in spite of the sudden glow inside her.

Don Alvaro smiled faintly.

"I wanted to ask you if you would give us the pleasure of dining with us in our home some evening soon, Miss Heywood," he said.

"Thank you-I'd love to," Anne said simply.

"And my brother-in-law says you wish to see a sugar mill," Don Al-varo said. "Would you care to go tomorrow?"

"It would be wonderful."

"I believe his friend Mr. Taussig is to go along also-if that is agreeable to you."

Miguel Valera. She had not been sure as he turned, but she was sure seeing his back in the three or four steps he took before he vanished. But why had he vanished? He must have recognized her.

For a moment she hesitated about going on down, and decided that would be silly. As she got down there, she was not quite sure which door he had gone into. They were close together, all open, all dark and dank inside, with zigzag stairs going up narrow wells. They were all seemingly deserted too. She went on without looking into any of them . . . if he wanted to avoid her, that was his privilege. But as she passed one house she had a she passed one nouse sne nad a sharp feeling that she was being watched. A pink cotton curtain, stained brown with moisture, blew out of a second-story window and blew back again. Or half of it did—the other half stopped, because some one was standing behind it, looking down, watching, waiting for her to pass. She quickened her step to the bottom of the hill and hurried through the great gate set in the massive thickness of the ancient city wall. She crossed the ramp to the domed sentry box beside the protecting battlement, and turned around. She wasn't mistaken. It was Miguel. He had come out again and was going rapidly up the hill. She could see him through the shadowed rectangular frame of the gate. She knew the way he walked, the set of his head, the movement of his shoul-ders. They were as distinctive as up toward the Cathedral. Anne looked at her watch again and waited, ostensibly interested in the simple elegance of the palace facade and the handsome field blue-uniformed policeman on duty at the entrance. It was less than three minutes before the Puerto Rican came slowly through the gate and disappeared up the hill.

"You can come in and see the palace if you want to, miss," the

"Some other time." She smiled and turned across the tiny plaza into Fortaleza Street. Richard Taussig had certainly been waiting for the other man. If there was nothing illicit in their meeting, why had they gone to such elaborate trouble about it? And what did Miguel have to do with it?

She walked slowly along the narrow street At the corner, as she waited to cross, she felt a light touch on her elbow.

"What are you doing out at this hour, Miss Heywood?'

Her heart gave an excited little leap as she turned. It was Miguel Valera. It flashed through her mind that he had been waiting there for her . . . to find out if she'd seen him, maybe. But that didn't matter, not really.

"I've been seeing the city-foot tour Number One," she answered gaily. "I like to do things the hard way. What you're doing out at this hour is more to the point?" He looked down at her, smiling.

"I'm taking you to lunch," he said. "Don't you know you'll be ill, wandering around in the sun and not eating?"

He hadn't answered her, but that didn't matter either. The sun had made her a little dizzy . . . unless it was the light touch of his hand on her arm as he took it to guide her across the street.

"I'm so glad I'm here!" she said impulsively.

His hand tightened for an instant. Then he dropped it abruptly.

"I'm glad I came back home, now," he said-rather quietly, it seemed to Anne, so that she looked up at him quickly. "Weren't you always?"

"Of course." He laughed. "Let's go to the Mallorquina. Or have you been?"

Dog Collars Recall Victorian Days

In the revival of the dog collar, or dowager's bandeau if you prefer, comes big jewelry news for fall. It appears in smart new millinery collections, matching ornaments on hats. Manipulated on a velvet ribbon base, it is made resplendent with jewels in cabochon shape, starshaped sequins, and mirrored discs. Ensembled with ribbon tie-on bracelets, they set off plain and simple black dinner gowns to perfection. They are being shown with separate brooches to pin on at some vantage point. They also are designed with simple embroidered or beaded decoration to go with the cocktail frock. Often the dog collar is complemented with matching earrings.

Personal Telephone Number Booklets

YOUR Telephone Company has prepared per-sonal telephone number booklets for you in two convenient sizes. One fits your pocket or handbag, and has space for 215 names, addresses and tele-phone numbers. The other, for home or office use, will hold 228 numbers.

Even now, when operators are busier than ever before with vital war calls, more than a thousand hours are lost each day by unnecessary calls to "Information" - requests for numbers that are listed in the directory.

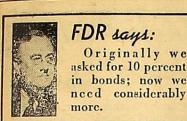

To help eliminate that waste of switchboard and operators' time, here are two things you can do -

- 1. Look up the number in the directory first. Call "Information" only when it is not listed.
- 2. If you must ask "Information" for a number, write it down in your personal directory so you will have it next time.

You can obtain your handy directory booklets — free — from any Michigan Bell business office, either by writing for them or calling in person.

This is a desperate situation a war emergency. Something must be done QUICKLY!

And only we who live in the pulpwood cutting areas can do anything about it.

This is OUR responsibility.

CHAIRMAN, NEWSPAPER PULPWOOD	CAMPAIGN

How the problem can be solved

Mr. Donald M. Nelson, Chairman of the War Production Board, gave the key to the solution in the following statement:

"If every one of the more than 3,800,000 farmers in the 27 pulpwood producing states were to devote 3 EXTRA days in 1943 to cutting pulpwood, we could overcome the threatened 2,500,000 cord shortage with wood to spare."

If you are now cutting pulpwood part time; if you have cut it in the past; or if you have never cut it but know how to use an axe and saw, will you pledge 3 EXTRA days (at regular pay) to meet Mr. Nelson's challenge?

Fill in the coupon. Mail it to this newspaper and you will receive the pledge badge which identifies you as a Victory Pulpwood Cutter.

This is a war emergency.

Washington, D. C. ASSIGNMENT IN SICILY

Unsung U. S. heroes who contrib-uted heavily to Mussolini's down-fall were Italian-American boys smuggled into Sicily several weeks before U. S. troops landed.

How they got ashore must remain a military secret. But the fact that they got there is now recognized as a part of military operations, just as the advance landing of Lieut. Gen. Mark Clark in North Africa, carrying bags of U. S. gold.

These Italian - Americans were especially trained in the dangerous, delicate job of winning over military garrisons in advance of a landing force. In Sicily they had the advantage of speaking the language and being able to visit the homes of their relatives, few of whom loved Mussolini. From there they were able to work around to various military leaders.

It has long been known that Italian military leaders were of two types. One is the professional soldier like Field Marshal Badoglio, who was in the army before Mussolini's time and has no love for the Fascists. Also he has no love for the Nazis, and so was not too difficult to win over to the Allied side. Other type of Italian military leaders is the Fascist Blackshirt, who rose through favors from Il Duce, but who usually is susceptible to coin of the realm. Presumably U.S. advance scouts were supplied with what General Clark took with him in advance into North Africa.

At any rate, expert advance work by patriotic Italian-Americans, plus the popularity of the United States in Sicily, contributed to one of the most bloodless landing expeditions in history.

Also the psychological shock of the headlong U. S. rush through Sic-ily was what toppled Mussolini off his thorny throne.

GEN. GIRAUD'S WATERLOO General Giraud was shown all the sights of Washington during his stay here, including the war department's massive Pentagon building, rated as the largest office building in the world.

After the French commander had been led through the labyrinth of Pentagon corridors to General Staff headquarters, and later out into the sunlight, he was asked what he thought of the place.

"Well," remarked General Giraud, "I've escaped from two German prisons, but I could never get out of this building.' * * *

The chickens hatched when American ships were put under the Panamanian flag to avoid neutrality laws are now coming home to roost.

The capture of Rendova island, a stepping stone to the Japanese air base at Munda, has brought American soldiers face to face with "General Mud"; Top: Marines carry a generator through the mud in preparation for a barrage on Munda. Bottom: Two men set up an automatic rifle emplacement on Rendova. Americans controlled the island the same day they landed. A total of 101 Nipponese planes attempting to break up the landing were shot down.

HERE are certain golf shots that will always live in memory -both of the men who hit them and the spectators who saw them. They are the shots which, more than anything else, helped decide the outcome of many a great tournament.

James S. Kearns, well-known Chicago sports writer, recently recounted a few of those shots-to which he was an eyewitness. Kearns speaking:

"There was Harry Cooper, on the 14th tee at Baltusrol in 1936, on his way to what seemed a certain victory in the National Open as a proper reward for 10 long, stout-hearted years of trying.

"Coop had the biggest gallery on the course that day, and not a per-sonal marshal. He had broken the all-time 54-hole record, and yet the United States Golf association sent him into the final round with nobody to protect him from the crowd . . Nobody but Estelle Armour, Tom's wife, and Nellie Cruickshank, Bobby's wife, who knew enough of golf to try to give a player the fair chance he deserved.

Heartbreaker

"Well, Cooper stood on the 14th tee with the mob milling around him, and the National Open championship just at his fingertips. He swung away and asked for order. He swung back again . . . And again the front row of spectators was jammed for-ward, so close he couldn't swing down at the ball. Finally, on the third try, he hit the ball—into the bunker beside the par 3 green, and right there was opened the door through which Tony Manero slid to take the title.

"There was a Monday morning in Philadelphia in 1939, when it was steaming hot, and when players and watchers alike were dead weary from a week of heat and five days of golf. Byron Nelson and Craig Wood, who had come through a playoff with Denny Shute on Sunday with scores of 68 in a desperate battle for the National Byron Nelson Open title, were engaged in a second playoff.

"Off the fourth tee, Wood had belted the better drive, maybe 20 yards. Nelson squared off to his second shot on that long and difficult par 4. He must have been 220 yards from the flag when he drew a bead. He fired the shot the way a Garand rifle might be fired . . . Dead on line, low and whistling as it went. The ball struck, bounced twice, rolled, fell into the hole. There the 1939 Open championship was settled.

Sub Hunting

By James Hirshfield

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with The American Magazine.)

I was on the bridge of the coast guard cutter Campbell, escorting a big convoy, when there came a message, reporting a submarine 25 miles south of us. We charged full speed for the spot.

Whether we got that first submarine I don't know—you seldom know -but we didn't have time to worry about it. A signal crackled through from another vessel of the escort, a British corvette. With a sister corvette she was attacking another U-boat she had picked up on her sound gear.

With the two corvettes we converged like arrows on the U-boat. Over a wide area we sowed ashcans. The sea went mad with geysers. Then a great patch of Diesel oil appeared on the sea. It smells like kerosene, but to a submarine hunter's nostrils it is sweeter than violets, for it means that a U-boat has been sunk or damaged. From engine-room to bridge there was joy in the Campbell.

Whole Convoy Attacked. It was then about 1 p. m., and very black. After a final search of the area, we ran back toward the convoy. Presently a splotch of cold, white light appeared on the horizon. It grew brighter as we drew nearer, and we heard the rumble of distant explosions. My heart sank. Those lights meant the whole convoy was under attack. Escort ships were throwing up star shells to light the sea better to fight off the raiders. Leaving the slower corvettes in our wake we raced for the convoy, but before we reached it another message came in from the escort commander. It confirmed my fears. Several ships, had been attacked. One had fallen behind. The Campbell was to go to the rescue. I didn't like leaving the convoy just then, but orders are orders. Foam boiled under our keel as we reversed course. An hour or so later we found the ship 10 miles astern of the convoy. She was just sitting there in the darkness. As we sighted her, a tall tower of water erupted on her port side. The ship was under attack.

Hole Torn in Campbell. Soon we were under attack ourselves. An explosion tore a great hole in the water just astern of the Campbell. It was mighty close. It really shook us up. It sounded as though we were on the inside of an

* * * AXIS DISTORTIONS

The Axis radio is trying to scare up a war in South America. The Bolivian army, with Peru's support, according to the Axis, is about to launch an attack on Chile to gain a port on the Pacific.

Here is the only grain of truth be-hind this propaganda: When Bolivian President Penaranda returned to La Paz from his visit to the United States, he stated publicly that Bolivian aspirations for a seaport had never been abandoned, that when the opportune time arose Bolivia would assert that claim.

Truth is, however, that Penaranda had no such militant motive in mind. Furthermore, moderate elements in Chile assert they would be perfectly willing to discuss the sale of the port of Arica to Bolivia.

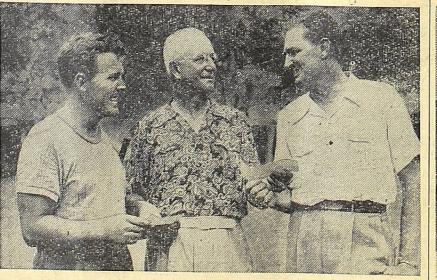

If the Chilean moderates actually bring about negotiation for the sale of Arica, they will set a new high in good neighbor relations. It has not been long since the territorial ambitions of South American countries -as in the case of Peru vs. Ecuador and Bolivia vs. Paraguay-have been settled by a resort to arms. * * *

I ran to the starboard side of the bridge, where the men stood pointing. The periscope had vanished. The submarine had crash-dived. We gave it the works.

It soon found that it couldn't, and submerged in a hurry. Again we laid down a pattern of depth charges.

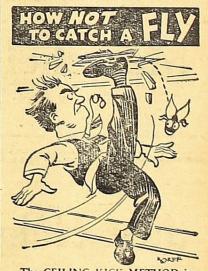

Later that night we sighted our sixth. It was on the surface, about 500 yards off the starboard bow.

For the 12th time in a little more than 24 hours, our gongs clanged "general quarters." The men sprang to their battle stations. We swung hard right to ram. The Campbell raced down on the sub with guns blazing at point-blank range. We really caught that U-boat napping. It was a big one with a large conning tower and heavy armament. We could see men on the deck. Shouting wildly, they tried to bring a deck gun into action. They never had a chance. We raked their deck from stem to stern with machinegun fire.

By MISS ABBIE CONDIT National Recreation Association.

What are the churches in your community doing for their young people?

Many churches are doing a great deal. Perhaps you will be interested in a letter which came to the National Recreation association from a minister in the Midwest and in the suggestions which were offered in reply to his questions. He wrote:

"We have recently acquired a meeting room in the basement of our church building. The room measures 30 by 50 feet. Upon occasion it must become part of a large auditorium; however, some permanent equipment can be set up. We already have ping-pong tables and dart ball, and are contemplating shuffleboard and other games, and a workbench in a small alcove. 'Could you:

"1. Suggest material which would help us in furnishing our meeting room.

Suggest material that would "2. help us determine the correct balance between the religious and recreational, as well as purely educational, features of our program.

Make suggestions for a game book library with which our young people could plan their meetings which you think might be of value to us."

In reply the association wrote: "In giving you suggestions for furnishing your church recreation room and planning its program, the first and most important one is to let the young people themselves do as much of it as possible. The older groups can build, buy, or beg small, sturdy tables and chairs just large énough for two people who are checker or chess addicts. We advocate the small size because the games can be painted on their tops, thus saving the buying of game boards, and because they can be moved easily and readily, either out of the way entirely or for new arrange-ments suitable for special programs. "Privacy for those interested in crafts or discussions may be had by building and using simple screens, also easily movable. A raised platform, made in sections so that it too may be stored away, is very useful. "The girls can make the curtains, paint the furniture, and perhaps make rag rugs.

"The second point that we would emphasize is to work out, with the young people's groups, objectives, both immediate and long range. "The choosing of these objectives will open the door for program coordination.

"Also, music and drama can be and socials. "4. Offer any other suggestions co-ordinated in daily or weekly pe-

II. Water from the Rock (Exod. 17:3-6)

"And the people thirsted"-for the daily manna was not enough, they must have water. Needy, yes, constantly needy are God's children. "Every life knows the bite of flecessity . . . every soul cries out in pain because there is wanting some completing favor, some culminating and all-contenting benediction. Here it is bread; there it is water; but everywhere a famine . . . in many a case a famine of soul, a spiritual destitution, a consciousness of a void which time cannot satisfy or space content."

God always provides. There is a rock in the wilderness. But what pleasure does a murmuring people find in a rock when they famish for water? It is God's delightful custom to meet our needs in unexpected ways and by means which we do not understand. Even our physical necessities come from unthought of sources.

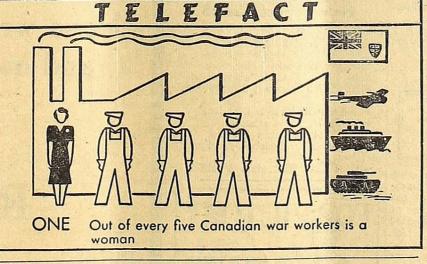

III. Christ, the Bread and Water of Life.

Our lesson does not give the New Testament application of Israel's experiences, but let us not miss that blessed spiritual truth.

In John 6:31-33, Christ is declared to be the true bread from heaven, of which the manna was but a type. Paul speaks in I Corinthians 10: 1-4 of this incident in the history of Israel, saying that they "did all eat the same spiritual meat, and did all drink the same spiritual drink; for they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them: and that Rock was Christ" (see also John 4:14). Hungry and thirsty soul, you who are still unsatisfied after tasting all that life apart from Christ has to offer, will you not, just now, take Him?
