Still Time to Fight Late Potato Blight

Late potato blight has shown up during the last couple of weeks at several locations throughout Iosco county, although many fields are still relatively free from this infection and were fortunately missed by the recent frost.

These green fields are still growing hundreds of pounds of potatoes each day, and will continue to do so, if blight infestation can be retarded. By delaying the blight much improvement may be had in storage quality, and indirectly, eating quality will also be much better.

According to County Agent W. L. Finley, thorough spraying with bordeaux mixture every six or seven days through the rest of the growing season is essential for blight control. Many fields were planted unusually late and will require green vine growth for two to four weeks yet if they are to produce satisfactory yields.

Proper storage is very important and the following precautions should be taken by each and every commercial producer, as well as the gardener who grew only a few bushels in his back yard Victory Garden, if loss from blight rot in storage is prevented.

1.—Delay digging until the stems and leaves of the plant are dead. If frost does not kill the vines before digging time it may be necessary to kill them with a chemical spray. Those interested may secure details at Finley's office.

2.—Dig on clear days. Let the potatoes dry off on top of the ground before they are picked up. Use extra care in digging and picking and avoid bruising injuries.

3.—Put only clean dry sound potatoes in permanent storage. Store in well ventilated bins and keep the doors and windows of the storage cellar open until cold weather sets in. Thorough ventilation for the first few weeks of the storage will allow the potatoes to cool and dry, and will help check blight and other types of rot.

4.—If potatoes are stored in pits, use clean, dry straw to cover the potatoes. Do not use potato tops, as they may spread blight. Give the pits plenty of air for the first few weeks by means of straw or slatted flues, which should be closed before freezing weather. Heavy layers of straw and soil should not be added until freezing weather occurs.

To the People of this Community: PLAIN WARNING TO YOU!

Here is a plain warning for you. . . . "This war will last until 1949 or longer if the home front fails to back up our men in battle!"

Frank Knox, Secretary of the Navy. Buy War Bonds.

Bonds to the point of temporary personal sacrifice is the most direct way you can comply with Secretary Knox's appeal.

"Temporary sacrifice" is the correct phrase because you are only lending your money when you buy War Bonds. This government which never has defaulted on an obligation will pay you back $4 for every $3 invested if you hold the bonds for 10 years.

The least you can do is to back the attack with War Bonds today. Buy attack Bonds above your normal Bond buying.

Recess Is Over

CARIBBEAN CONSPIRACY

by BRENDA CONRAD

THE STORY SO FAR: Anne Heywood, beautiful daughter of a wealthy New York newspaper publisher, goes to Puerto Rico on an assignment for her father's paper. Also on the island are Pete Wilcox, a reporter on her father's paper, now a U. S. Army intelligence officer; Miguel Valera, a Puerto Rican educated in the United States who is a secret U. S. agent; Richard Taussig, an engineer whose identity as a German agent is suspected but not yet proved; and Russell Porter, a young American engineer, and his wife, Sue. When Mr. Taussig learns that Anne suspects him he arranges, with the help of Miguel's uncle, Diego Gongaro, to dispose of her. They are driving to the Valera plantation.

CHAPTER XIII

They turned into a long shady lane of mango trees running to the mill yards and got out of the car. Except for Graciela, who stayed where she was with a light shrug of distaste for the dirt and heat and dust.

They crossed the littered yard into the run-down wooden building. It was long and narrow, with a high-pitched roof. The deafening roar of machinery made it impossible for Anne to hear what they were saying to her. She followed the foreman and Diego Gongaro across the sticky dirty floor to the middle of the room, under the great vats built almost to the roofline. Mr. Taussig came behind them. Gongaro took her arm. He pointed to the steep narrow steps leading up to a catwalk at the top of the progressive succession of refining units. Anne looked up at it dizzily.

"Do you mean we have to go up there?" she shouted, trying to make him hear her above the din and roar of crushing wheels and rollers. He nodded.

The dark flower opened inside her again. It was like the dream.

"I can't go," she thought desperately. "I can't."

She turned to look at Mr. Taussig. He was smiling at her. He knew she was afraid. She could see it in the cold blue eyes, unsmiling through the concentric circles of his thick lenses.

She started toward the stairs.

Pete could not have said he smelled a rat when all he could smell was the pleasant odor of fresh bread across the inner court from the Army bakery under the General's office. It was a combination of a lot of things too intangible to put his finger on.

Then he'd thought the heck with it and gone back to his work. He got up, went to the water cooler and came back again half a dozen times, unable to settle down to anything. He got up again, got the file on Miguel Valera and the file on Diego Gongaro and went through them both. He took the Brooklyn saloon-keeper's letter out of his desk and read it for the fiftieth time.

"You let somebody like that man over there come down here and show him the works," he remembered Anne saying. If she could say that after her pointed question about Taussig the day she came, it must mean she was on to something. If she was, and Gus was right, Taussig probably knew it.

Finally it was too much. He reached for the phone.

"Get me Senior Alvaro Valera," he said. He hesitated, and added, "Or Senior Miguel Valera if his father isn't there."

He waited impatiently.

"I'm sorry, Captain Wilcox," the operator said at last. "Both Don Alvaro and Senior Miguel Valera have gone to Ponce for the day. Senior Diego Gongaro has taken some Americans out to the plantation. He has just left."

Pete put the phone down. It was all perfectly open and above board, on the face of it. Only one thing bothered him. It was cockeyed too, but it stuck in his mind. Why hadn't Miguel taken her out to the Central himself?

He got up abruptly and went into Colonel Fletcher's office.

He looked at his speedometer now. Four kilometers and he'd be there. He hadn't any clearer idea now what was compelling him to risk his car and his neck to get out there than he had before he started. All he knew was that some sixth sense he had that had seldom let him down as a reporter was in operation again, and that got out there he must.

He groaned suddenly. A small engine whistled and steamed across the road in front of him. Behind it, jangling and clanking, came a long train of cars loaded with cane. He jammed on the brake and came to a stop. The train came to a stop too. Heaven only knew how long it would stand there before it moved a foot or two and stopped again while they unloaded up ahead. What was time in an industry that still used oxen?

He let his brake out and backed into the path at the edge of the road, got out and hurried along the side of the track. It was the shortest way to the mill anyway. If the train crew thought he was crazy it would probably merely confirm an idea they already had about North American mainlanders. He quickened his pace. He could see a shiny black limousine in the millyard, a girl sitting in it, her head bent forward a little. It wasn't Anne. The golden thing that passed for a head on her never drooped forward that way. It was the girl who'd been at the dock with Don Alvaro.

The sound of the machinery inside the mill drowned out the noise of the jolting cane cars. Pete noticed that the pleasant overtone of molasses a little distance from the mill was not so pleasant close to it. He passed the crane lifting bundles of cane into the hopper. Two peons standing there taking a sample stalk from each car, ticketing it to be tested for sugar content, glanced at him curiously and went on with their work. Pete ran inside. The shed was hot and dirty, and full of violent unseen motion and deafening noise. Men tending the grinding machines turned their heads to look at him, looked silently at each other and went back to their work. He went on, faster, across the cement floor toward the center of the long building. Anne was nowhere in sight.

A man was coming in from the laboratory with a test tube of dark liquid in his hand. He glanced around at Pete, startled at seeing a uniformed Army officer on the floor, and waited with a questioning worried expression on his face.

Pete stopped. "Senior Diego Gongaro y los Americanos. Donde?" he demanded.

For a moment the man looked blank. Then his face broke into a smile. He nodded, looked up and raised his free hand.

"Up there," he said in English. Pete looked up. Anne's slim white figure was outlined above the immense oozing tanks fifty feet above

She was clinging to the hand rail—

him. It looked a hundred just then, and the walk she was on the breadth of a tightrope. A single iron hand rail was all that protected her from the long drop to the cement floor on his side, and God only knew what on the other.

Diego Gongaro was in front of her, Mr. Richard Taussig a yard behind her. She was clinging to the hand rail, leaning forward a little, looking down into some roaring, grinding hell on the other side. Mr. Taussig glanced behind him along the catwalk, and moved a little closer to her. There was something in his dual movement that split into Pete's consciousness like an electric shock. He made a leap forward. The stairway was steep as a ladder and sticky with the silt and syrup flung up from the vats, and he cleared it faster than he had ever done anything in his life. Then he could feel the narrow iron walk vibrate under his feet.

Mr. Taussig turned sharply. Something happened to his face. For a second there was something unspeakably terrible in it. It was gone instantly. The white smiling mask that took its place was inscrutably enigmatic. He stepped back a little. Anne hadn't turned. She was staring down into the grinders, watching the cane come up and go down, caught between the great rollers. There was a look on her face that Pete had never seen there before, and that he wouldn't have known if he hadn't known every mood and movement of it far better than he knew his own. She was scared, petrified with fear. Her hand clinging to the guard rail was white, the knuckles small shiny beads of ivory.

Pete Wilcox wriggled past Mr. Taussig on the two-foot walk and gripped her arm. He felt her body give and sway a little and saw her eyes close.

"You poor little devil," he thought, with a sharp acid tightening at the back of his tongue.

Diego Gongaro, absorbed in something the foreman was trying to shout at him, turned around. He gave an abrupt start.

"Hope you don't mind if I come along," Pete shouted.

"Delighted!" Diego Gongaro shouted back. There was something more than delight in his face. Pete saw him take out his handkerchief and mop the perspiration off his face.

The expression of relief on it was unmistakable. "I'm glad you've come," he shouted.

Anne got into Pete's car and sat perfectly still, her eyes closed for a moment, before she reached down and shook the dust out of first one shoe and then the other. They had walked down from the mill yard, leaving the others back there talking to the foreman.

"You mean you told them a story about having to get me back right away to see the General?" she asked when Pete got in beside her.

"It was all I could think of, just off-hand. I thought some explanation was needed . . . for leaving this down here on the wrong side of the tracks, and barging in and dragging you off. I don't think it was convincing, frankly."

He was thinking of the single glance that passed between Taussig and Diego Gongaro as they came out of the refinery, and he was still trying to fit the whole thing together. It didn't make sense, actually. It couldn't possibly be what he'd thought as he dashed up those steps.

He looked at Anne sitting in a little heap beside him. She was absolutely all in.

She took off her hat and tried to smile.

"I don't know why I was so scared," she said apologetically. "I suppose it was the roar and the heat, and being up so high on that catwalk . . . not being a cat myself."

She took a deep breath and got her lipstick out of her bag.

"I really don't know what I'd have done if you hadn't come. I think I'd have fallen. I kept knowing I was going to. It was horrible, really."

Pete reached down and squeezed her hand tightly for a moment, not saying anything.

"In fact, Pete, I don't know what I'd ever do without you anyway," she said. She smiled wanly. "Every time I get myself in a mess—"

Her voice trailed off.

"Why don't you marry me, Annie," he said when she didn't go on. "Or have I said that too many times? Just for a bodyguard. I'd live out in the dog house, and you could just send me a bone once in a while."

Anne shook her head. "I can't, Pete. I don't know why, exactly. Sometimes I wish I could, but . . . Oh, I don't know what's the matter with me. I'm such a mess. When I'm with you I don't want to be with anybody else. When I'm in a jam it's always you . . ."

She stopped again.

"Why don't you tell me all about it, old girl? What's up?"

He wanted to ask her about Taussig, but not just then.

"We were good friends before I fell in love with you," he went on. "I'd like to stay that way. Why don't you just get it all off your chest.—Is it Valera? You know I'd rather you'd be perfectly honest about it. Even if it hurts a little."

"He's not in love with me, if that's what you mean," Anne said slowly. He glanced at her sideways. She apparently believed it.

"I don't know what happened to me. It's just so different."

"Maybe that's it, Annie," Pete said.

"I don't mean that. Or maybe I do and don't know it. Anyway, I'll get over it, I guess, when I get back home."

"You'll let me know, won't you? Just so you don't do anything crazy, like marrying the guy. That's all I'm really afraid of."

"Why?"

"The old ego in the first place."

He grinned sardonically. "It wouldn't work in the second."

"Why not?"

He slowed down and looked at her. "No stuff, Anne," he said. "You wouldn't marry—"

"I think I would . . . if he asked me. Which he hasn't and isn't likely to. I don't see why not."

"I do," Pete said curtly. "A hell of a lot of reasons why not. It works all right the other way around. The gals get a break when they get an American husband. But not vice versa. The whole setup is different. Their customs—"

"I know," Anne said calmly. "Language, customs, tradition, tastes. I've heard that before. From both Miguel and his father. And I think it's a lot of rot, personally."

"Then you're stupider than you look, beautiful," Pete said. "I suppose you're going to tell me Love Conquers All, next. You've been to too many movies, sweetie."

"Well, maybe it does. Maybe you're just too cynical and sophisticated—"

"Stop being a starry-eyed fool," Pete said shortly. "I know love conquers a hell of a lot, or you'd be out of this car with your neck wrung. I'm serious about this, Anne. You're not going to ruin your whole life just because you've got an overdose of sympathetic glamour."

"I've told you the point has never come up, angel," Anne retorted warmly. "Miguel hasn't even remotely suggested that the idea's ever occurred to him. But if we're having—shall we say an academic?—discussion, I don't see why it shouldn't work out very well."

Fashion-First Fall Clothes Stress Corduroys and Tweeds

always been good sports and workaday clothes in this fabric, for both men and women, but this season something startlingly out of the ordinary has happened, in that men are wearing smart looking suits that are not sports jackets and slacks, as one might expect but they are swank fine-tailored types that are fashioned with utmost finesse as is plain to be seen in the illustration.

In the group pictured, you see Mr. and Mrs. starting out arm in arm for an autumn constitutional, brown cordurex for him, packed with casual details of high-style distinction, red cordurella for her, flaunting pockets that are simply crammed with fall 1943 chic. Time was when men considered corduroy a fabric exclusively for sports and strictly utilitarian wear but war shortages have brought about a new appreciation of the use and versatility of this fabric. This season men will be proving in the wearing that a cordurex suit is just the thing for off-duty hours, for holidays and to give business worsteds a rest, and they are equally at home in city, suburbs or country.

Not a teen-age schoolgirl or a campus queen or a girl in office, typing out a career for herself, but what will yield to the lure of a red cordurella topper such as the blithe spirit to the right in the group is wearing. In the hit parade of early fall coats this youthful model is just about to "steal the show." You can get it in a whole list of fashionable fall colors, the new brass tone, deep velvety green, warm autumn browns galore and it's smart in gray or beige.

And have you seen the new corduroy jumper and pinafore dresses? You can get them simply fashioned or all prettied up with cut out felt motifs or gay peasant embroidery on the bib tops or the suspender effects as the case may be. These corduroy pinafores "wear forever."

Household Hints

In sewing on buttons, place the knot between the buttons and material, which prevents the knot from becoming untied.

Take eggs to the basement or other cool place immediately after gathering. Do not put them in the egg case until the following morning, for eggs cool slowly in a case.

Store coffee jars, once they are opened, in the refrigerator.

Sometimes walls and ceilings become stained and cracked from water. Often this water works its way in under window sills. If you cut a V-notch the full length of loose sills, on the under side, the water won't reach the wall to work its way through the outside walls.

Before papering a room where there are greasy or soiled spots on the wall, add a coat of shellac to the spots if the wallpaper is tight on wall and there are no cracks. This prevents the spots from coming through on the new paper.

Chopped, crisp bacon may be added to your favorite muffin batter for a delicious Sunday morning treat.

Store glassed foods, onions, potatoes, butter and flour away from the light.

A quick and delicious sauce for ice cream or pudding is made by heating maple syrup and adding one-half cup nut meats to it just before serving.

In New Style Mood

Side-Swept Drapery Flatters Figure

For that "new" look see to it that your first fall frock adopts the new side-drape-and-fasten technique in its styling. For figure-flattering, these new side-movement dresses have no equal. In the smart little black dresses, the no-one-side effects are the chief subject of conversation. You will find effects both strictly tailored and simple, yet for dressy occasion as ornate and artfully graceful as dressmaker strategy can make them. Many of the side closings are finished off with ruffles and cascades of either self-fabric or lace. The lace theme is especially adding a flattering touch to the now-so-fashionable simple black daytime dresses. In the tailored effects buttons come in for big play.

Small Hats This Autumn Is Trend Among Designers

So far the trend is almost exclusively toward small hats for fall. This year berets in every conceivable interpretation lead the parade. Smart are stitched velveteens and corduroys that come in sooty black. Many little snappy hats are not much more than mere bands of velvet that are made to fit and anchor firmly on the head. To these are anchored gay feathers, unique fringe or tassel arrangements, and fantasies too numerous to cite. There's lots of passementerie, bugles jet, jewels, embroidery and other Victorian elegancies going into the making of the dressy-type hat this autumn.

Rope and Twine Must Be Made to Last

Supply Is Short, Says Dept. of Agriculture

Farmers must preserve their rope and twine on hand carefully, because very little new can be obtained, the department of agriculture warns. Fibers for rope and twine that used to be imported from the Philippines and the Dutch East Indies are now unobtainable because of the war. Small quantities of henequen and sisal fibers are coming in from Mexico, Cuba and Haiti, but this supply will not aid the situation much.

Rope for agricultural uses will be made largely of jute, cotton and other substitute materials. To take the best care possible of your rope, the department gives the following advice:

1. Store it properly in a dry unheated building or room. It should be clean and dry before storing. Hang it in loose coils on a peg—not on the floor.
2. Avoid kinks. Kinks pulled through a restricted space will shear the fibers and weaken the rope.
3. Don't leave rope where battery acid, drying oils, etc., can damage it, or where animals can chew it.
4. Splices are stronger, and easier, on rope than knots.
5. Don't overload rope. Use the right size for the job.
6. Reverse rope, end for end, that runs through pulleys and tackle to equalize the wear.
7. Save wear on rope by reducing wear and abrasion that occurs when one rope chafes another, when it drags over sharp surfaces, or picks up sand, grit, etc., when it is dragged over the ground.

Binder twine will be very scarce this year, according to officials of the department. To make what you have go farther, they give the following precautions:

1. Use twine only on mechanical binding equipment.
2. Keep all points on binding machines through which the twine passes in the best possible operating condition. This means touching up or repairing worn needles and other eyes, adjusting or replacing badly worn parts and weak or ineffective springs, keeping the cutter knife sharp, or replacing it if necessary. Such precautions are particularly pertinent when using twine made of substitute materials.
3. Tie larger bundles to use less twine.
4. Take care of your present supply—don't leave it out in the weather, or where rats can gnaw it.

New Chemical Kills

Lice on Cattle

A new chemical combination made up of two parts sodium fluosilicate, one part phenothiazine, and one part white flour, has been used successfully to destroy both chewing and sucking lice that infest cattle. In the experiments conducted at the N. Dakota agricultural experiment station, phenothiazine alone, merely diluted with equal parts of flour, in trials on 12 infested animals located in various parts of the state, resulted in a 100 per cent kill of both short-nosed and long-nosed sucking lice in every trial. However, it failed to kill chewing lice. When the sodium fluosilicate was added to the diluted phenothiazine, the mixture killed both chewing and sucking lice.

Pullet Losses Reduced

By Selective Breeding

Under ordinary conditions many poultrymen lose about 25 per cent of their pullets during the first year. In a test conducted by Dr. C. H. Bostian of N. C. State college, where matings were made from stock not bred for improved livability, the loss was 28 per cent. With another group of birds, kept under exactly the same conditions but from matings selected for improved livability, the loss was only 11%.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste
Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery. Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination. There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

Lieut. Sagendorf and Corp Gardner of Sault St. Marie were at the Townhall Sunday and gave an interesting talk on the importance of past duty as regards the army and also showed two very interesting pictures, "America Can Give It" and "Eyes Aloft."

Cards had been sent out to 55 persons who had served on the post, and a bare dozen persons attended the meeting. Lieut. Sagendorf reported that the past record shows that the post has been empty most of the time for the past two months, and asked that more interest be shown in this vital work. She also suggested that a captain of the day be appointed for each day of the week to relieve the chief observer of part of his work. Each captain to be responsible for the attendance of the persons registered for that day.

Pins were given to those present who had served 50 hours. Those not present, who had served 50 hours on the post, can obtain their pins by applying to Dale Johnson.

Mr. and Mrs. George Waters and family of Reno were callers at the Robert Buck home Sunday.

Liquor From Rug

New Jersey liquor board agents literally wrung evidence out of a rug—enough, anyway, to cause a woman to be fined $15 on a charge of possessing untaxed alcohol.

Raiding the woman's home, agents found several broiler bottles on a carpet which was suspiciously damp. They decided on the squeeze play.

To the People of this Community:

ARE YOU REALLY AT WAR?

What does being at war mean to you? Less gasoline for your car? Less sugar in your coffee? Higher prices for your food and clothes? Separation from your husband?

Sure, it has meant all those things, some serious and some really trivial for a period when your actual safety is at stake.

But has the war meant BLOOD, SWEAT AND TEARS to you? In many instances YES. The first stage of invasion has already pushed our casualties over the 100,000 mark.

The gold stars which decorate thousands of our homes today are a challenge to the vast majority of us to do our best in the Third War Loan. No good American wants to see one more gold star added to the firmament of glory. We educate our youth for life, not for death. If they die, they die so that we might live. Every extra War Bond you buy today will back the invasion so that the war will be shortened and so that there will be less blood, sweat and tears for you and your friends.

"Once my ship was a luxury liner!"

"She used to carry fifteen hundred passengers in luxurious comfort—mostly tourists bound for a holiday abroad. Now she's a transport. How many thousands of husky Yanks we pack aboard is a military secret. But we make the most of all the deck space there is—and we get 'em there!"

"I know it's the same way with lots of long distance telephone lines. In peacetime, they handled comfortably a lot of social traffic. Now they're crowded with calls, and a lot of them are war messages that must go through pronto."

Not only must vital war calls be handled promptly, but urgent civilian calls should not be delayed. You alone can judge whether your call is important enough to justify placing it on telephone wires to war-busy centers.

When lines are overloaded, the operator will ask you to limit your call to 5 minutes. Your co-operation will help others who are waiting.

Dunking in your "bunchum" is a custom as ancient as Arabia. It was there where the world's first cup of coffee was made from some strange, bright red berries the Arabians called "bunn." The beverage became "bunchum" and was thick enough to scoop out of the bowl with bits of food. Result: Introduction of dunking to the world!

Abnormal Tire Wear

If tires show abnormal wear the trouble may be caused by under-inflation or misaligned wheels, according to the California State Automobile association. Another cause of uneven tire wear is unbalanced wheels. At high speed a wheel only slightly out of balance develops a powerful centrifugal force. This force jerks the wheel up and down as it rotates. In addition to abnormal up and down motion there also may be side motion as the heavy spot moves fore and aft. Unbalanced wheels frequently cause shimmy, abnormal wear in steering mechanism, as well as cupped spots in the tire tread.

Buy An Extra $100 War Bond During

A Substitute for Hell

Somewhere in New Guinea these wounded soldiers await evacuation. Flat on their backs, in the steaming heat of the jungle, where mosquitoes plague the air and ants and mosquitoes torment weary bodies, they dream of home . . . of clean white sheets and the touch of cool, comforting hands. You can help provide modern hospitals and the medicines they need for their recuperation by putting every dollar you can into War Bonds during the Third War Loan.

U. S. Treasury Department

The Third War Loan is your loan.

The securities on sale fit your purse. Check the one which is applicable to you and buy it to the point of personal temporary sacrifice. Always keep in mind your sacrifice is only temporary because you do not give your money away when you "buy" War Bonds; you lend your money at interest. Your money is not even frozen. In the event of an emergency—and the record shows that Americans are not redeeming their Bonds except in the event of true emergencies—your Bonds are redeemable.

The United States Government has never in its history repudiated a Government Bond. As further evidence of the strength of this country to guarantee repayment of your money, United States potential wealth amounts to $89,000 per capita. Even with the heavy current war expenses, our national debt is only $1100 per capita.

Only a country like ours could make such a deal with its citizens: repay you with interest for a loan of your money to protect you and your family against enemies which would murder, rob, or enslave you.

The number one "buy" for you is the familiar Series E War Bond. Twenty-seven million American workers are buying Series E Bonds at the rate of $420,000,000 a month. Your Third War Loan duty is to buy at least one extra $100 Series E Bond above your regular buying. Buy more if you can.

Keep these facts in mind about the Series E Bonds:

They come in $25, $50, $100, $500 and $1,000 denominations. They sell for 75 per cent of their maturity value. They pay you $4 for every $3 invested if held until maturity, which is 10 years from issuing date. You may redeem them at any time 60 days after issue without notice at stated redemption values. Every Bond carries this redemption table.

PEAKING OF SPORTS

By Bob McShane
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

PRACTICALLY no fight in ring history drew such unanimous condemnation as the recent Ray Robinson-Henry Armstrong set-to in Madison Square Garden.

The once-great Armstrong didn't have a thing. Most observers agreed that the match was a travesty on sport. The clients who paid $16.50 for a ringside seat figured the fight wasn't worth even the admittance taxes. The boys who paid $2.50 for seats were just as loud in expressing their disapproval.

It was a sad evening for many fight followers who had seen "Hammerin' Henry" in his prime. In our opinion, Armstrong was one of the greatest fighters, pound for pound.

HENRY ARMSTRONG

of all time. He was the only man in history ever to wear three divisional crowns simultaneously.

Robinson won the fight just as he pleased—but he made it as easy for Armstrong as possible. And sentiment may have entered the picture to some degree. The night of October 4, 1940, when Armstrong lost his welterweight crown to Fritz Zivic, Robinson was on the same card, making his professional debut. It was said that Ray broke down and cried when Henry lost his title, so much did he idolize the dethroned champ.

Brisk Workout

But sentiment ends with the opening gong. Robinson did little more than enjoy a brisk workout at the expense of the veteran. He handled Armstrong with a minimum of effort. He merely pecked away at his opponent, riddling him with an endless array of long lefts to the head.

Once in a while Robinson would shoot a right-hand punch to the head. Some of these blows landed, albeit with little force. But most of them went wide of their mark and by such margins that several critics were moved to observe that Ray was of no mind to punish the ex-champion unduly.

The New York press was rather bitter about the match. One commentator noted that "... we must exercise restraint and report that the thing was a priceless stinker, priced at $16.50 ringside and $2.50 for the cheap seats. The boys on the roof were robbed. Even if they got in on a pass." Another writer expressed the opinion that Robinson was a lovable character to let Henry stay.

Immediately after the fight Henry announced his plans for retirement. This wasn't a particularly startling pronouncement because Henry has said over and over again that he would retire. But like Sarah Bernhardt, he repeatedly postponed the day. He would hang up his gloves one day, then change his mind the next.

Changed Plans

To show that he was in the groove, Henry followed up his retirement announcement with word that he had reconsidered his decision to depart forever from the game. He said that he had decided to go through with his scheduled 10-round match with Slugger White of Baltimore.

Sam Lampe, White's manager, failed to agree. "I positively will not let White fight a blind man, and that is just what Armstrong is," Lampe declared. "Furthermore, I don't believe a boxing commission in the country would pass Henry as fit for the ring."

This time, though, Henry had some sort of a reason for reversing his decision. Joe Lynch, promoter of the Armstrong-White fight, threatened court action against Armstrong when he made public his plans to quit the game.

It might be more fitting if the paying customers would start court action against Lynch if he attempted to force the fight down their throats.

Roast Lizard

By Robert McCormick

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with Collier's Weekly.)

Every American plane in the Pacific carries a combination cookbook and guidebook, but it's a strange example of either. The main idea behind the volume for the present is to save the lives of fliers forced down in the weird reaches of the South Seas. But after the war, it will be priceless to those of us who actually have the courage to take up beachcombing as a profession.

The book tells us how to roast a goanna to a turn. A goanna is a big lizard, and the tail makes a ravishing dish if properly cooked. The book also tells us that a stuffed bandicoot is elegant eating, that its flesh is scarcely distinguishable from rabbit. The fact that the bandicoot is nothing but a large rat with big ears has nothing to do with its taste.

And the yavato! There's a dish that would thrill you clear down to your toes. Cooked up in a casserole, the yavato is something right out of this world. It's right out of our world anyhow, since it's described as "a large cream-colored grub found in rotting wood."

The book was put together by Dr. Frank Roberts of the Smithsonian Institution in Washington. Much of the information in it was supplied by Dr. William Strong, director of the Ethnogeographic board, which sounds very dull, but the Ethnogeographic board has the delightful job of finding out all it can about the personal habits and environment of other folks all over the world.

How to Find Honey.

The book does more than merely tell how to cook the strange flora and fauna a man is likely to run into on a desolate island in the Pacific. The main body of the book is divided into two columns. First, the name of the food, then a description and an explanation of where to find it and how to cook it.

An ordinary fig may be quite a strange business to a pilot from Brooklyn, for example. Figs growing on trees don't look much like those in packages.

Then there's the honey. Honey is a blessed thing for a hungry wanderer to come across. The trick of finding it revolves around recognizing the insects that make it. In the tropics, the honey bee is a mild, stingless little thing that looks like an ordinary fly. The book tells the boys to tie a bit of white cloth on one of the bees, or sprinkle it with flour, then follow it through its zigzag course to its hive.

There's plenty of food lying around in the Pacific, both on land and in the water. But you have to know how to find it, and how to avoid the items that are poisonous, of which there are fortunately very few.

The coconut palm is practically a grocery store all by itself. The meat of its nut is fine food, ripe or green. The liquor of the green fruit is refreshing. And when fermented, it becomes a powerful wine. The tip-top bunch of leaves on the tree is a true delicacy. It is known as palm cabbage, and it's cooked just like cabbage and tastes like it.

Baked Breadfruit.

Breadfruit is almost as much of an all-round dish as coconut. It grows in a large tree, and the fruit hangs on the tree like green balloons, with pock-marked skin. Breadfruit is a substantial item of food when roasted, baked or fried. After it's cooked, it can be sliced and dried, and it'll keep indefinitely.

But it's not all vegetables and no meat. The book has directions for tracking down and fixing up such things as scrub turkey, wild pigs, barking pigeons, parrots and white cockatoos. The Filipinos are nuts about locusts, particularly when they are pickled in vinegar or fried in salty fat.

Sea food offers a fine variety. The book tells of a number of shellfish that can be picked up around the islands in the Pacific. Things like the cockle, the cowry, the limpet, the conch and a lot of the other creatures, whose principal attraction has been their shells, are nice eating. So are prawns and freshwater mussels.

The Biting Cone.

The wanderer has to watch out for one shellfish, however. It's called the cone, because it's shaped like a pine cone. The cone is not only poisonous to eat, but has sharp teeth that shoot venom into you like a serpent's fangs. Furthermore, it seems to get positive pleasure out of using its teeth.

The book tells how to cook the shellfish if no kitchen utensils are handy. Simply build a fire on top of them. They stew in their own juices and come out quite palatable. Or they can be eaten raw.

ON THE HOME FRONT

with RUTH WYETH SPEARS

NO MATTER if you move from a spacious house to a single room there are certain treasures that will mean home to you. A few books, a piece of china and some perfectly useless but cheering bits of bric-a-brac—all by all means take them with you and make a dramatic setting for them.

light and substantial; will lend glamour even to dime store odds and ends, and may be placed on top of a table, a chest of drawers or a desk. No special skill and almost no tools are needed to make it.

If you do not have a saw to cut the scalloped frame, mark it on plywood and take it to the nearest woodworking shop to have it cut. You may have the straight boards cut at the lumber yard where you buy them. All you will have to do is screw them together; tack on the front frame and paint or stain to suit your room color scheme.

NOTE—A pattern for tracing the scallop design for this graceful shadow box frame; complete list of all materials needed and illustrated directions for making and finishing will be sent for 15 cents. Send your order to:

Shortcake Is Among Point-Saving Recipes

It's Cinderella-time for left-overs! Out of the ice box they come . . . scraps of this and bits of that! With meat and so many other foods rationed, every scrap is precious. Here is a magic recipe to turn those drab tag-ends into tempting, delicious treats that will steal the meal-time show!

Dinner-in-a-Roll.
1 to 1½ cups cooked ground lamb
4 raw carrots
1 small onion
1 egg
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pepper
1 recipe biscuit dough
Grate carrots and onion and combine with left-over lamb. Add egg and seasonings. Mix well. Prepare your favorite recipe for biscuit dough. Roll out ¼ inch thick into a rectangle. Spread with meat filling and roll up. Place in shallow baking pan and bake in quick oven (425 degrees F.) 35 to 40 minutes. Serve with tomato or Barbecue Sauce. Serves 4 to 6 people. All measurements level.

This Takes the Cake.
With rationing and all, chances are the cook isn't coming in for her full share of meal-time compliments these days. If you've been racking your brains to find a way to give your family a real treat now and then, don't forget about cakes!
Yes, it's true that shortening is rationed . . . and sugar, too. That's why this recipe is planned so that you can afford it on a ration budget! And of course, you'll want to be sure of perfect results. So choose your shortening wisely!

What to Do

By PHYLLIS BELMONT

A dry-suds cleaning for your upholstered furniture and rugs will brighten your home considerably. Although this method is slow, it gives good results when properly done.
Make a soap jelly, using mild soap and water—five parts water and one of soap. When the jelly sets, take a cup of it and put it in a mixing bowl and beat with an egg beater. Dip a damp sponge or brush into this foam and rub it on a small area of the article to be cleaned.
After a minute or so, wipe this area with a clean damp cloth. Repeat this process on overlapping areas until the whole article is finished.
When this job is done correctly the article cleaned will not get wet, merely damp—and will dry in an hour.

Yes, ma'am, they're hearty, satisfying . . . they stay with you! You know how fried potatoes not only taste better, but "stick to your ribs" longer than plain boiled ones do!
When you fry, be sure to use a fresh, sweet fat. Then you'll be sure of digestible fried foods that will agree with the whole family.

Delicious Meatless Meal.
A vegetable plate that's different! Dip sliced eggplant in flour, egg and crumbs. Fry in hot skillet containing enough fat to cover bottom. Remove to platter. IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

THE SIN OF MOSES AND AARON

LESSON TEXT—Numbers 20:1-13, 27, 28. GOLDEN TEXT—Be ye angry, and sin not.—Ephesians 4:26.

Sin is a serious matter, and even though men in our day may not call it by its real name, it is as much here as it was in the days of Moses—and it is just as awfully sinful as ever.

Sin is universal; it appears not only among the people, but also among their leaders. God's dealing with it is on the basis of "greater privilege, greater responsibility." No leader, especially in God's cause, can expect special consideration of his weakness. He must meet God and answer for his sin.

I. The Unbelief of the People (vv. 1-5).

It is well to bear in mind that the people of Israel who were now at Kadesh-Barnea, on the borderland of Canaan, had been here once before—40 years before. Here they had rebelled against God in unbelief because of the report of the spies concerning the land. Because of their unwillingness to take God at His word, they had been sent to wander 40 years in the wilderness until the complainers had died. Read that graphic and instructive story in Numbers 13 and 14.

Now they were back at Kadesh—and a new generation shows that the spirit of unbelief and distrust has a hold on humanity, and makes son like father.

They had run short of water. The spring which had served their fathers on the previous visit to Kadesh had run dry.

One would have supposed that all the mighty dealings of God in their deliverances over and over again, would have indicated the need of faith; but they had only a wailing criticism of God and His leaders.

II. The Answer—God's Power (vv. 6-8).

Moses and Aaron, now old men but still God's chosen leaders, took their sorrow to Him (v. 6). It was the right place to go, for power be-longed unto the Lord (Ps. 62:11).

Instead of punishing the people for their unbelief, God calls upon His servant Moses to show them that He (God) is able. At a word from Moses, the rock would bring forth water before their eyes.

Is not that the perfect answer to all man's questioning and lack of faith—the revelation of the omnipotence of God?

But God's purpose is defeated (at least in a measure) by the

III. Unbelief of the Leaders (vv. 9-11).

Instead of taking their place as the servants and subordinates of God, Moses and Aaron claimed that they would provide water (v. 10). Instead of showing God's power by speaking to the rock, and His mercy in providing for the people, they uttered a rebuke; and then, by smiting the rock, took to themselves the honor that really belonged to God.

When called upon to act for God, they acted for themselves, and in their own name. They used for their own glory the power delegated to them by God. Let us beware that we do not fall into the same error.

Let us also note that if the punishment seems severe, we should recall that they had broken a type of Christ. Christ was the Rock. He was to be smitten at Calvary, that the water of life might flow forth. But He died once for sin (I Cor. 10:4) and is not to be smitten again. We need now only speak to Him in faith and receive life.

In Exodus 17:5, 6, Moses smote the rock, presenting the first half of the type foreshadowing the work of Christ; now he was to speak to it, fulfilling the type, and in unbelief he destroyed God's picture or type of redemption. It was a grievous sin.

IV. The Answer—Judgment (vv. 12, 13, 27, 28).

Moses and Aaron were not to be permitted to enter the promised land, because of their failure. No doubt it was true that their departure to be with the Lord was in a sense "far better" for them; and yet it cannot be denied that there was disappointment in not seeing the conclusion of their long and arduous labors.

The lesson is clear. We may serve God long and faithfully, but that is not any excuse for "letting down" in our closing years. We dare not presume, as though our intimate touch with God and place of leadership gave us an "inside track," a right to take it easy, spiritually or morally.

Sin is always sin; and it is especially grievous in one who has the privilege of high position and of power with God.

God buried His workmen; but His work went on. For Aaron there was his son Eleazar (v. 28). For Moses there was a Joshua, "full of the spirit of wisdom" (Deut. 34:9). It is always so. None of us is indispensable.

Fertilize Sea Water and Increase Fish Harvest

By adding fertilizers to sea water, thus increasing the growth of the plants on which fish feed, marine research workers have increased the weight of fish ten times.

Important fish tests are being carried out in a small lake in the west of Scotland under Sir John Graham Kerr, noted marine biologist.

Scientists are working on the theory that sea fish can be multiplied by increasing their sea-plant food by adding nitrogen and phosphates.

If you were to say the first bugle call of the day in the Army is "Reveille"—you'd be wrong. It's "First Call." But you probably know what cigarette gets first call with Army men—it's Camel. And though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. Millions of Volunteers Settle Down to Hard Grind for 3rd War Loan

Washington, D. C., Sept. 15—With the first burst of enthusiasm spent, the "third" army of more than 4,500,000 volunteers settled down today for a steady siege and a day-by-day advance to reach its quota of fifteen billion dollars in the Third War Loan Drive.

Reports from all sections of the nation in the first week of the drive indicated that the battle to "Back the Attack with War Bonds" is progressing "according to plan," but that every possible effort must be exhausted if the goal of at least an extra $100 War Bond for every income earner is to be reached.

First meager reports indicate that in some cities and in some sectors on this important battle front the immediate objective has been obtained and the quota met. In other sections a long hard pull will be necessary in the house-to-house and bench-to-bench canvass which has been undertaken in order to reach every man, woman and child in the United States.

This Third War Loan Drive is a challenge to the American people without parallel in history, for they are being asked to "lend" the largest sum of money ever raised in the life of any nation. It is a challenge to their will to sacrifice to "back the attack" of their husbands, sons, brothers and fathers who are sacrificing everything, even life, so that the people back home may continue to enjoy the freedom and liberty of the American way of life.

Reports from many of the urban sections of the nation indicate that workers are answering the challenge to send their dollars to war to "back the attack." "Fur coat" money, "automobile money," "new appliance money," "new home money" is going into War Bonds for the duration into the assembly lines for tanks and planes, to settle today's job and guarantee a victorious America of tomorrow when every War Bond dollar will pay $4 for $3.

"Labor-management committees are working hand in hand; returned war heroes, film stars, bankers, housewives, professional men, workers, clerks and salesmen—men and women in every walk of life are demonstrating that War Bonds bring unity to American life and that the nation is bonded in a common purpose in this great financing task," Ted R. Gamble, national director of the War Finance Division of the Treasury, said here today.

"The people of the nation are demonstrating that Americans on the home front can and will match the performance of the invading armies in backing the attack when they are called upon to do a job," Mr. Gamble said.

"Never before in history have a people in civilian life been asked to do a job comparable to the task which must be done in this Third War Loan," Mr. Gamble observed, "but we have a sustaining faith in the ability of the American people to make every sacrifice, to meet every test with which they are faced, in the voluntary, democratic way so that our boys in the trenches and on the battle lines may have the tools with which to fight our common enemies."
