Tawas Township Man Wins $500 Garden Prize

HENRY SCHATZ SUCCESSFUL IN STATE CONTEST

Mrs. Ross and Mrs. Barnum Take Regional Prize Money

THREE REGIONAL CONTEST WINNERS

In addition to winning honors in the State Wide Contest, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Schatz won in the regional contest. Other Iosco county people to win in this contest were Mrs. Ernest Ross, wife of Rev. Ross of this city, for home grounds and gardens, and Mrs. Martha Barnum of Whittemore, in the urban garden contest.

The regional contest included at Crawford, Oscoda, Alcona, Roscommon, Ogemaw and Iosco counties.

Henry C. Schatz of Tawas township, when informed that he had won $500.00 in the State-Wide Farm Victory Garden Contest, said he "wouldn't believe it until he received the award."

His garden is located six and one-half miles northwest of Tawas City. He moved on the farm in September 1942 when he retired from his business as funeral director in Detroit. Until this spring he had not planned on raising a very large garden, but due to the food shortage, and with the intent of helping the war effort, Mr. and Mrs. Schatz decided to plant a garden. On the insistence of his brother-in-law, Walter Miller, who furnished them with an application blank, the garden was entered in the contest.

There were 21 gardens in Iosco county entered in the contest, and the first inspection was made July 13 by committee which consisted of F. O. Potter, farm security administrator, Paul Newcomb, supervisor of the Huron National Forest and W. L. Finley, Iosco county agricultural agent. In selecting the gardens which are contributing greatest in the production foods for the War Program, the judges took in consideration the following points, plan of garden, soil condition, cultural practices, number and kind of vegetables grown, succession cropping and quality and production. The second inspection was made August 13 on the same basis.

Mr. and Mrs. Schatz said that the day the state judges came to see the garden, they had gone to pick blackberries and had not spent extra time in getting the garden dressed up for the inspection. When they were informed the garden had been inspected, they felt that all chance of winning in the State Contest had vanished. Mr. Schatz said that he had planned on spending some extra time to get the garden looking at its best before it was inspected.

When asked for the amount of produce he had taken from the garden, he said that they had given away a considerable amount to the neighbors, but he could account for the following: Twenty-two bushels of potatoes, three bushels of onions, three and one-half bushels of green peppers from 36 plants, 10 bushel of corn to date, and corn still ready to eat, 200 pumpkins, 10 bushels of tomatoes and several bushels still on the vines, three bushels of carrots, three bushels of beets, 36 heads of early cabbage and 50 heads of winter variety, 10 bushels of cucumbers, a large quantity of butter beans, 50 dozen stalks of celery and a large quantity of melons.

Since last September, when Mr. and Mrs. Schatz moved to their farm, they have spent considerable time to beautify the entire premises. The garden has a row of flowers the entire length of the west side and Mrs. Schatz says she plans on planting flowers next year along the entire front line of the farm. Their home is completely modern, including all electrical conveniences, and the basement is well stocked with canned fruit and vegetables.

2nd Lt. Herbert H. Zollweg, somewhere in Sicily with the U. S. Army, last week wrote to his father authorizing him to purchase a $1000 War Bond for him.

Lt. Zollweg is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Zollweg of this city and is a graduate of Tawas City High school. He enlisted in the army in February 1941 and began his training on the West Coast. In September 1942 he was accepted as an officer candidate and received his training at Fort Benning, Ga. Upon completion of this course he was awarded his gold bars and transferred to Camp Shelby, Miss. for further training.

In May, 1943, Lt. Zollweg was sent overseas. After spending a brief period in North Africa, he took part in the invasion of Sicily.

Herbert's letters are cheerful, but is anxious to come home and feels that by "backing the attack" with bonds on the home front and giving his all on the battle front, it will hasten his return to his loved ones.

Mr. and Mrs. Zollweg have two more sons in the service of their country. Walter, who is attending aerial gunnery school and Richard, aboard a submarine.

Lieut. Robert Rosenberg, navigator, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hyman Rosenberg of Flushing, N. Y. has been reported lost in action. His mother is the former Amelia Meyers, sister of Mrs. Clara Barkman.

In a V mail letter this week to Barbara Kienholz, Lieut. Dorothea Arnold says that she was in North Africa and had a nice trip across. She had been wading in the Mediterranean and says that it is a beautiful blue and white beach, makes a wonderful scene. Their hospital is in a tent and the nurses are housed in tents.

IOSCO COUNTY TO MAINTAIN STATE ROADS

Maintenance Contract to Go Into Effect October 1

The Iosco County Road Commission will assume maintenance of state trunk lines in this county October 1 under contract with the state highway department, Highway Commissioner Charles M. Ziegler announced yesterday in Lansing, following a conference with members of the Iosco County Road Commission.

Attending the conference with the highway commissioner were: Ernest Grego, chairman of the Iosco County Road Commission; John Mielock, commission member; J. N. Sloan, superintendent and engineer; and Senator Ben Carpenter.

Mr. Ziegler said his study of the situation shows that the Iosco Commission is fully capable of assuming maintenance of the state trunklines in this county and conform to the high maintenance standards set by the state in such contracts. These contracts are cancellable by the state on 30 days notice, if its standards are not met. Mr. Ziegler also explained that the contract is in line with highway department's policy of economy, efficiency and savings in manpower and public funds.

He said the contract will mean elimination of the dual highway maintenance organizations in this county, thus requiring less equipment and less men when the county assumes all highway maintenance work.

The Iosco County Road Commission now maintains 789.2 miles of roads, while the state maintenance crew has been maintaining 90.3 miles of state trunklines.

The county will require very few additional men and only a part of the equipment used in state maintenance to carry out its new contract with the state. Thus, there will be a saving of several thousands of dollars annually and this can be used in new construction.

The county commission has advised highway department officials it will endeavor to use such additional workers as it may require to fulfill its new contract from men now employed in the state highway maintenance organization in Iosco county. The others will be released and made available for possible war jobs, the commissioner said.

Iosco county will be allowed to buy such state equipment as it may need to carry out its new contract. The rest of the state equipment will be placed in the state equipment reserve which is being used for state replacement needs and to supply counties which are finding it almost impossible to buy new road machinery under today's restrictions. The commissioner also announced that in addition to Iosco county, the state will enter maintenance contracts with Roscommon, Leelanau and Grand Traverse counties effective October 1.

When Commissioner assumed office in April, 32 counties in the state were maintaining state trunkline highways under contract. Since April the highway department has contracted for with six additional counties, Kent, Wayne, Ontonagon, Missaukee, Delta and Clare. The four announced yesterday make a total of 42 counties now having contracts with the highway department for maintaining state trunklines.

Expert Will Discuss Vegetable Storage

O. I. Gregg, extension specialist in gardening from Michigan State College, will meet with interested gardeners of Iosco county, Wednesday, September 29, to discuss vegetable preservation and proper storage.

At 2:00 o'clock p.m., according to County Victory Garden Chairman, Mrs. J. N. Sloan, he is scheduled for a meeting at the Whittemore High School, where gardeners from the west part of the county may attend and secure the latest suggestions on winter storage. Reminders will be thrown out regarding activities that should be carried out in the garden yet this fall in order to secure greater production in 1944. A couple of these fall suggestions will probably be the planting of wheat or rye to be plowed under next spring as green manure, and if quack grass caused plenty of sore hands this summer, he will probably suggest a shallow plowing late this fall to be repeated by a deep plowing early next spring.

For the gardener living in the east half of the county, Mr. Gregg will repeat his suggestions at 8:00 o'clock in the evening at the court house at Tawas City.

Mrs. Sloan said that every Iosco county citizen is invited to attend one of these meetings Wednesday. Those who had no gardens this year will surely want one in 1944, and should avail themselves of the information which Mr. Gregg will offer.

CARIBBEAN CONSPIRACY

by BRENDA CONRAD

THE STORY SO FAR: Anne Heywood, beautiful daughter of a wealthy New York newspaper publisher, goes to Puerto Rico on an assignment for her father's paper. Also on the island are Pete Wilcox, a reporter on her father's paper, now a U. S. Army intelligence officer; Miguel Valera, a Puerto Rican educated in the United States who is a secret U. S. agent; Richard Taussig, an engineer whose identity as a German agent is suspected but not yet proved; and Russell Porter, a young American engineer, and his wife, Sue. When Mr. Taussig learns that Anne suspects him he arranges to dispose of her. Pete Wilcox saves Anne, but is jealous of her friendship with Miguel.

CHAPTER XIV

The shiny black limousine drew up under the portico of the Granada Hotel. Mr. Richard Taussig got out. "It's been very pleasant, and most interesting," he said. "Thank you so much. Good-by. Good-by, señorita."

It had been a mistake to allow Graciela to call Miss Heywood. Graciela was discontented, seething and highly unpredictable. Her father's confidence in his continuing hold over her was to Mr. Taussig's realistic mind stupidly unrealistic.

Mr. Taussig shrugged his shoulders and went into the lobby. As long as it didn't interfere in his plans . . . And there had been enough interference already. He had been trying to figure that out on his way home. It had a little of the smell of Fate to it, the more he thought about it. Perhaps it was just as well . . . if he could figure Wilcox out properly.

He was still thinking about that forty-five minutes later as he came through the iron grided gateway into the inner courtyard of Albert Benoit, coffee and sugar importers, his green visored yachting cap on his head. He went up the stone steps to the first-floor gallery. At the top he paused, waiting for Diego Gongoro coming out of the arched tunnel from Juan de Pinzon Street.

"I must frankly admit I was disturbed this morning," Gongoro said casually. "I was afraid our young friend might lose her footing so high above the floor. It would have been most unfortunate."

"Most," Mr. Taussig agreed equably. "However, I was watching her very carefully. Shall we go in?"

"I always admire finesse," Diego Gongoro said irrelevantly.

He waited until the door was closed.

"In view of the flattering attention we have been favored with this morning by a certain member of the Military Intelligence, I wish each department to function without communication with any other, until . . . let us call it X-Day. When that comes, it will be in coordination with the concerted movement throughout the Caribbean area, Central and South America. Until then, Gongoro will continue the organization of personnel for the eventual destruction of all water facilities."

He took out his handkerchief and wiped his dark lenses.

The dark man with the black mustache moved suddenly.

"I . . . wonder," he said quietly. "I have an exhibit—two exhibits, in fact. I think they will interest you."

He went to a desk in the corner and took a folded piece of paper out of a drawer.

"I saw a friend off on the strato-liner for Rio this morning with the information for Bauer. This new filtering station here has caused us no end of trouble. I think the safest thing to do is chop up the sending unit we got last fall."

He came back to the table. "When I returned to the office from the airport, I found this under the stairs in the yard. The cat was playing with it."

He opened the folded paper and took out a small linen handkerchief. It had been white, but it was crumpled and slightly soiled, as if it had been moist.

"It's an expensive trifle. And expensively perfumed. Also monogrammed. The initials are A. C. H."

He looked up.

"It was not there when we came in last night. I turned my flashlight around the yard, to be quite sure of everything."

The silence in the room lasted for some time.

"What is Exhibit B?" Mr. Taussig inquired quietly.

"It is a golden hair," Albert Benoit said. "It was caught in the rough plaster on the wall under the stairs, at a height of five feet eight inches. I presume the average heels are about two inches high. In which case the owner of this would be approximately five feet six inches."

Diego Gongoro knocked off the long cylinder of gray ash from his cigar.

"It is most unfortunate," he said urbanely.

"Most," Mr. Taussig said. He got up. "Good day, gentlemen."

He went down the stairs and stopped in the courtyard, looking at the space where Anne Heywood must have been, trying to recall where they had stood the night before and what they had said. A clerk crossing the patio with a sheaf of papers in his hand looked at him and quickened his pace, slightly startled. Mr. Taussig crossed the court and went out through the tunnelled arch.

Something would have to be done now, and rather quickly, he was thinking. She couldn't have been alone, unless she was braver or a greater fool than he thought she was. And that meant one thing, obviously: that Wilcox had been with her. They must have followed him out of the restaurant, though he'd thought they were both so absorbed in what was obviously a pretty tense quarrel that they weren't aware he'd gone.

He hailed a taxi. "La Granada," he said.

That would explain Wilcox's appearance at the Central. In that case, nothing had been said that he had regarded as evidence. It meant that she had talked, however, though what she could say he didn't know. And G 2 was hardly likely to listen to her suspicions in the face of his credentials.

He looked at his watch. The question was whether to go to Mrs. Porter's or let it ride for a while. If Anne Heywood turned up, it would be a waste of time. On the other hand she might not come . . . or he might manage it before she got there. All he needed was half an hour in his own room with the specifications. He could return them after he'd got a microscopic photostat, and no one would know the difference. After that he could look at churches and schools to his heart's content.

"Then you and I can have a comfortable chat," he said.

"I'll go on," he said as he saw the crushed raspberry and cream outline of the Granada through the palms. "I'll give you the address." He took out his notebook.

The magazine Sue Porter had been trying to force herself to read slipped off her lap into the white string rug. She sat perfectly still for a moment; then her face crumpled and she buried her head in the cushions, unable to keep the tears back any longer. He wasn't coming. She'd known it all afternoon. And she shouldn't have phoned. Half a dozen times since five o'clock she'd forced herself not to, but the last time she couldn't help it.

"I'm sorry, Mrs. Porter. Mr. Taussig came in an hour ago and left right away. He didn't say when he'd be back." The telephone girl at the Granada had recognized her voice, and Sue could hear her laughing as she put down the phone. Her cheeks were burning. The girl thought she was running after Taussig because she'd phoned so many times and left messages he'd not bothered to reply to. If Russell knew he'd be furious. He didn't get angry often, but when he did he was terrifying.

Sue raised her head and dabbed at her eyes with her moist wadded handkerchief. She'd planned it so carefully. The silver tray with the decanter and glasses on it was out on the kitchen table. The ice cubes would be melted by now and the canapes soggy and unpleasant-looking. And she'd rehearsed it in front of the mirror a hundred times during the day.

She'd be casual and charming. "—Why, Mr. Taussig! How awfully nice. I really didn't think you'd have time to come, you're so terribly famous. Do sit down and let me see if I can find something for you to drink. It's been ghastly hot all day, hasn't it?" Then she would say Russell had been called away unexpectedly, and get around to the specifications. She glanced wretchedly into the dining room where she'd put them on the sideboard, the corners of her mouth trembling. Suddenly she straightened. There was a step on the porch. She flashed up and around. Mr. Taussig was standing in the door, smiling, his hat in his hand. Sue stared at him. She hadn't heard him come up the stairs or cross the wide veranda.

"My dear Mrs. Porter, I thought you expected me," he said pleasantly.

"Oh, I did, but I . . . I thought you weren't coming." It came out before she realized she was saying it.

"My dear child!"

Mr. Taussig laughed and wiped the perspiration off his broad pallid forehead.

"I'm a business man, and when I come across anyone as promising as your husband I'm hardly likely to miss an opportunity to talk to him."

Sue flushed. "But he's not here—I should have told you," she said quickly. "He had to go to St. Thomas."

She'd planned it so differently. She'd been going to say, "You'll think I'm dreadful not letting you know my husband isn't here. He's frightfully sorry. You see, the Navy's having water trouble and needed somebody really good, so Russell had to fly over to St. Thomas to give them a hand."

Mr. Taussig's disappointment was obvious, but his recovery was more than gallant . . . perhaps because he had known all that before he came.

"Then you and I can have a comfortable chat," he said. He sat down on the sofa where he could keep his eye on the front steps. "In fact, I think it's probably better. Because—if you don't mind my saying so—the trouble with your husband, my dear girl, is that he hides his light under a bushel. He's too modest. He needs somebody to push him a little. He's so off the beaten track down here that unless he lets people know what he can do, he'll find himself in a rut. Men not half as well equipped as he is will be picking the plums, merely because they're on the spot."

"I know," Sue said eagerly. "That's what I've tried to tell him. But he thinks if he does a good job the company will know it, and—"

"And keep him down here where they won't lose him and don't have to pay him what he's worth," Mr. Taussig interrupted calmly. "I know all about that."

He took a cigarette out of his case and lit it thoughtfully.

"Of course I'm interested in him particularly," he said. "I was tremendously impressed by what was said the other evening. And very selfishly, I'd better add. You see, we have a project—a very big one—with a problem not unlike the one you have here. I don't want this to go farther."

He looked appraisingly at her. "—How discreet are you, Mrs. Porter?"

"I can be very," Sue answered quickly. She realized she'd been holding her breath, waiting, and that she had to be calm so he wouldn't see how much it meant.

He tapped the ash off his cigarette. "Well, this is it, Mrs. Porter. I heard about the construction down here, though not about your husband. He wasn't mentioned. I've been looking for a man for the last fifteen months. I'm not sure, of course, that you'd be interested. The living conditions won't be easy. I ought to tell you that. That's one of the reasons we want a young man. The salary would only be about twenty-five thousand a year, but the man who went would be known throughout the civilized world. Of course I don't know . . ."

Sue closed her eyes. All the things they could do . . . for themselves and for the children! She held her breath again.

"I'm not sure your problem here can be done, of course," Mr. Taussig went on equably. "If it can, your husband is the man we want. I suppose the thing to do is wait until the job's finished, and see . . . if we can wait."

"But the specifications are all drawn up!" Sue cried. "Russell says they're absolutely perfect! Oh, why don't you just look at them? You could tell, couldn't you?"

Mr. Taussig shook his head skeptically and waited. She jumped up, ran into the dining room and came back. Two bright pink spots burned in her cheeks, her blue eyes were as full of hope as the dawn.

"Just look at them a minute!"

She thrust the thick roll of linen prints into his hands. He unrolled them without haste, and studied the top one deliberately. He could hear her breath coming quickly and see the pulse pounding in her throat as she sat there beside him. After a moment he looked up at her with a smile.

"Mrs. Porter, I really wouldn't be surprised if your husband isn't exactly the man we've been hunting for, one end of the world to the other," he said simply.

"Oh, I'm so glad!" Sue whispered. "You don't know how I want him to get away from here!"

"Of course I'll have to go through all these, rather carefully," he said. "It's a complicated setup. I wonder . . . No, I don't suppose we could do that."

"Do what?"

"I was just thinking that if I could lay them out on the dining room table," Mr. Taussig said, "I could see them all at once. But someone might come in, and it's better to keep this to ourselves."

Attractive School Wardrobe Of Restyled Old Garments

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

THIS year, even though the family budget is taxed to the limit, you can still win summa cum laude for your school wardrobe on the double score of high fashion plus economy. One thrifty way to increase your style rating is to start a sewing plan for salvaging closet slackers that can be made over into new garments just by adding a minimum of new fabric.

For instance, the wonder worker of a school wardrobe is a three-piece costume (jacket, vest and skirt) that can be worn together or equally as well with other things. For this salvage project, as shown centered in the illustration, you need collect only the vest and trousers of a man's cast-off suit. If you are lucky enough to find a glen urquhart plaid, your costume is destined to be a fashion standout. The vest can easily be cut down and refitted to your size with the aid of one of those dress-form twins of plastic-like material that local sewing centers mold in exact counterpart to your figure in about 30 minutes. The trousers when cut apart and turned upside down are easily converted into a sleek fitting skirt. Finally the cardigan-type jacket, made of some new material like flannel or spun rayon, completes the costume. The plaid, as you will note in the picture, is used for trimming the jacket edges with heavily rolled binding. For this, use the binder attachment which is available in your sewing machine kit.

Another candidate that rates high in school fashion circles is the jumper dress, as pictured to the right in the group. If you have an outmoded velveteen woolen dress or robe, you can reclaim it even if you are a beginner sewer, just by taking a few lessons in the thrifty art of make-overs at your local sewing center. If your old dress has fairly simple lines, you may be able to transform it into a jumper just by removing the old sleeves and possibly the worn portion around the armholes, and slashing the neckline into a plunging V-shaped effect. If you would like to change the "facade" of the dress, try the double-quick job of a front-buttoned closing from neckline to hem. There's a little buttonholer attachment that comes in sewing machine kits that will make perfect buttonholes for you in a jiffy. Of course you will be wanting a fingertip wool jacket. If you are lucky enough to salvage father's old camel's hair number with a simple pattern, you can recast it into classic lines like the nifty coat worn over the buttoned-up-the-front reclaimed jumper frock, as here shown. This topper in strictly classic lines will look right this season and for many seasons to come, worn over other dresses and with slacks as well.

Plaid and plain costumes are college loves, and a two-piece overblouse and skirt version as seen to the left in the picture is one of the leaders. A cast-off plaid bathrobe would be perfect salvage material for the pleated skirt, also collar and cuffs. Less than two yards of new material would then be needed for the plain overblouse.

If you have stowed away in your closet clothes that are really good and wearable which may have become dull and uninteresting, you can add lively interest simply by touching them up with looped braid or self fabric cord. You can make the latter on your sewing machine—yards and yards of it with little effort. The pen and ink sketches in the background offer a few suggestions in way of up-to-the-minute effects that can be easily achieved. For instance, you can create the illusion of curving pockets, positioned high on a jacket front, just by attaching looped fringe edging below the lapels in raised eyebrow fashion. Effective in making a narrow skirt look wider are rows of braid that form a border at the hemline, as sketched below.

Autumn High Style

Hollowcut velveteen, one of the lovely cotton pile fabrics everybody's calling for, has become a classic for winter suits and coats. This man-tailored suit with the easy skirt and three-button flap-pocketed jacket is a good year-round basic for your wardrobe. Both jacket and skirt are good mixmates. The jacket goes with slacks and other skirts. The skirt teams smartly with plain or dressy blouses. The gay plaid beret and huge soft bag of novelty velveteen by Alfreda bespeaks a last-word fashion in accessories.

Feather or Flower Makes Head-Dress

By this time after a summer of experience women have discovered that a feather or a flower posed provocatively in an artfully arranged pompadour can work miracles in way of flattery. Now this idea, so all-prevailing, of wearing a feather or flower in the hair, has developed something. That something is an array of the cunningest looking hats, if they might so be called, that in the final analysis prove to be nothing more or less than a flower or a cluster of flowers or perhaps an ostrich plume or fancy feather fastened to a clever ribbon device or bandeau. Worn atop of the head they are simply devastating in way of chic and feminine charm. Thus the flower or feather-in-your-hair is carrying on into the fall season and on gala nights during the winter social season the fashion will, from all indications, continue triumphant-ly.

New Suspender Slacks

In the sports department they are showing smart slacks with detachable suspenders, and mind you the suspenders are designed for "looks" as well as giving practical service. They are cunningly embroidered or else appliqued with felt cutouts of vivacious coloring. Being detachable, these gay and fanciful suspenders styled with a novel girdle effect can be worn with any skirt, being especially effective with the new corduroy and velveteen types.

PATTERNS SEWING CIRCLE

1763 Neat Design.

PARED down to that absolute simplicity which the new L-85 cloth conservation order decrees, this dress achieves true distinction! It is smart for gabardine, flannel, foulard or homespun weaves.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1763-B is designed for sizes 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 34, short sleeves, requires 3 1/2 yards 39-inch material. Due to an unusually large demand and current war conditions, slightly more time is required in filling orders for a few of the most popular pattern numbers.

SEWING CIRCLE PATTERN DEPT. 530 South Wells St. Chicago. Enclose 20 cents in coins for each pattern desired. Pattern No. Size. Name. Address.

But It Seems the Simple One Was Not Old Andy

In a little wayside town there lived old Andy, who was what is called in some parts a "natural." He was simple-minded and the villagers used to show him off to visitors by offering him two coins, a big five cent piece and a small silver dime. Andy would invariably take the nickel.

One day a visitor from other parts said to him: "Say, Andy, don't you know the difference between a nickel and a dime?"

"Sure," said Andy. "I know the difference between a nickel and a dime, but if I took the dime once, they would never offer me either one again."

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Woodwork which has been attacked by mildew should be thoroughly dried out. Floors and woodwork may then be wiped with a damp cloth dipped in water containing a small amount of kerosene or in a 5 to 10 per cent solution of borax and water.

Two-quart jars may be used in canning tomatoes and opened for use in winter when they will keep if not eaten at once.

Use bacon fat as shortening in waffles, pancakes and muffins. It flavors them nicely and conserves fats at the same time.

Wash and drain salad greens—lettuce, radishes, celery—before storing. Store in a cold place, preferably in covered dish in refrigerator.

To speed up dish drying, take a dry towel in each hand.

To make a convenient platform for scrub pails, or other cleaning equipment that has to be moved from room to room, attach rollers to a piece of board 15 inches square. Saves lifting, and makes cleaning easier.

If the paint can has a deeply recessed edge, punch a few holes in the edge before starting to paint. The paint which usually collects on the top of the can will run back into the can instead of on the outside of can.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

If authorities prove to be correct, post-war tires may give 75,000 or more miles of service. Super-tough rayon, nylon or improved cotton carcass will help to make this mileage possible.

Army raincoats formerly containing 40 per cent crude rubber now are made almost entirely of synthetic resin and oil-treated material. Crude rubber content of boots and overshoes has been cut about 40 per cent.

A complete armored division on the road has 13,488 tires in use, not counting spares and reserve supplies.

EVENTS of the past season have done little to cheer the days of Mel Ott, manager of the New York Giants.

For the first time in his career with the Giants, dating back to 1926, Ott is on the receiving end of an unkindly symphony of bleacherite boos and hisses.

"I don't blame them," he told reporters. "I shouldn't be out there. But what can I do? I've got nobody else."

Solidly in last position in the National league, the Giants are one of baseball's present-day tragedies. It isn't right that the veteran Ott should be forced to carry on in the outfield — he hasn't the physical stamina necessary for the job. The added headache of managing the Giants is too great a cross for an average mortal to bear.

Ott should be running the Giants from the bench, but he has absolutely no replacement and none is in sight. The team is without reserves, both outfield and infield.

Memories

This is no fitting reward for a man who, in former years, meant so much to Polo Grounds fans. It is hard to realize that when Ott started playing ball with the Giants in 1926, a large share of old timers were in their prime.

Ott has been around a long time. It was in 1926, Ott's starting year, that Frank Frisch was traded with Pitcher Johnny Ring to the St. Louis Cardinals for Second Baseman Rogers Hornsby. In 1926, Leo Durocher was with Atlanta in the Southern association, Jimmy Dykes was doing his daily chores in the Philadelphia infield.

That same year Gabby Hartnett was with the Cubs. His best years were ahead of him. In 1926 Babe Ruth knocked 47 home runs for the Yankees, hitting .372 for the season. Herb Pennock won his greatest number of victories for the Yankees with 23 games in the win column. Dazzy Vance still had several years to go with Brooklyn. It wasn't until February, 1933, that Vance was traded with Shortstop Gordon Slade to the Cardinals for Infielder Jake Flowers and Pitcher Owen Carrol.

It was November 2, 1926, that Ty Cobb was released by Detroit and signed with the Athletics three months later. John McGraw didn't know whether to play Bill Terry at first or in the outfield. And Terry had his 10 best hitting years ahead of him.

The Front Office

You get the idea. Ott has been around a long time. He has seen some of the best go over the hill.

Ott is no youngster. And he deserves a better fate.

To the Giants' front office must go much of the blame for the team's miserable standing. War has imposed many new demands upon all baseball clubs. Those who were equipped to meet those demands have been successful. The others haven't. Managers no longer have the power that once was theirs. The front office makes the player deals, builds the team. The Giants' front office is out of the running. Ott is not to blame.

The future looks none too bright for the once greatest ball club in New York. It takes a long time to rebuild.

Attendance at the Polo Grounds reportedly is off by more than a third. This compares unfavorably with a decline of 8 per cent throughout the National league and a decline of 6 per cent throughout the American league.

SPORTS SHORTS

Henry Armstrong's real name is Henry Jackson. His ring name was borrowed from a boyhood chum in St. Louis.

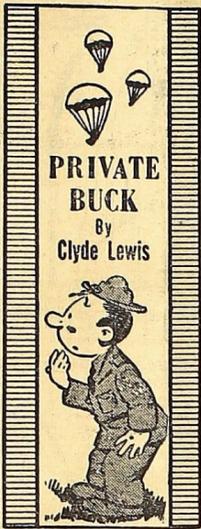

Louisville lost 26 games in a row in 1889.

Cleveland is the only major league club that doesn't outfit the bat boy.

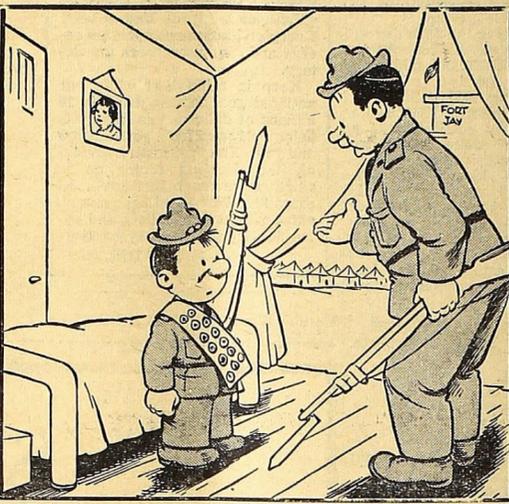

George Bird and Hillyard Bird are Pennsylvania's 1943 tackles. They are not related.

Roxie Lawson, one-time Tiger pitcher, is enlisting recruits for the navy.

"NO MORE 'DOSING' FOR ME!"

Says happy ALL-BRAN eater!

If you've been "dosing" without getting the lasting relief you wanted, this letter may offer you real encouragement:

"Permit me to compliment you on your wonderful product, KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN. It certainly lived up to its promises, with me! I'd been taking manufactured laxatives for a long time! But, no more dosing for me, thanks to KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN! I've adopted it as my standby!" Mr. Alexander Klein, 630 West 170th Street, N. Y. C.

Yes, KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN really "gets at" one big cause of constipation—lack of sufficient "cellulosic" elements in the diet—because ALL-BRAN is one of Nature's most effective sources of these elements! They work by helping the friendly colonic flora fluff up and lighten the colonic wastes for easy elimination. Not a harsh purgative! Doesn't "sweep you out"! ALL-BRAN is simply a gentle-acting, "regulating" food! If this is your trouble eat KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN regularly. Drink plenty of water. See if you don't find you can give up "dosing" for good! Insist on genuine ALL-BRAN, made only by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

Abnormal Tire Wear
If tires show abnormal wear the trouble may be caused by under-inflation or misaligned wheels, according to the California State Automobile association. Another cause of uneven tire wear is unbalanced wheels. At high speed a wheel only slightly out of balance develops a powerful centrifugal force. This force jerks the wheel up and down as it rotates. In addition to abnormal up and down motion there also may be side motion as the heavy spot moves fore and aft. Unbalanced wheels frequently cause shimmy, abnormal wear in steering mechanism, as well as cupped spots in the tire tread.

Sketch of a Victorious Invasion Route

This sketch was made by the English artist E. G. Lambert as the Allies were bombing Messina harbor. It shows the entire area of the strait of Messina from the air. Across this strait, which separates Sicily from Italy's toe, the British Eighth army spearheaded the first invasion of the European continent which resulted in Italy's surrender. The distance across the strait, at its narrowest point, is two miles. Prior to landing on Italy proper, Allied batteries along the Sicilian coast shelled Axis positions across this stretch of water.

Afrika Korps Men Save Peanut Crop in Georgia

Harvesting peanuts occupies most of the time of these former German soldiers, once dubbed "super-men." They were members of the Afrika Korps, first German troops to collapse. Farmers at Dublin, Ga., praise the work of the war prisoners and credit them with saving the peanut crop. Left: This "superman" swung his pitchfork with such zeal that he broke the handle. Center inset: Time out for lunch is taken by the prisoners. Right: Under a warm southern sun, these men apparently are regaining health and composure. One tenderly holds a baby rabbit caught in the field as his curious comrades surround him.

Washington, D. C. ALLIED CO-OPERATION BETTER

Officials who have attended all the big strategy powwows—Washington, Casablanca, Washington again, and Quebec—declare that there is progressively better Allied co-operation, and a gradual disappearance of the friction which beset earlier conferences.

In the dark days just after Pearl Harbor, the British were plugging for an all-out war against Hitler, while the U. S. officers, outraged over Pearl Harbor, were out to scalp the Japs.

The decision to swing our weight with the British was made only after President Roosevelt had exercised his authority as commander-in-chief and overruled ambitious U. S. plans for the Pacific.

After that decision, there came disagreement about where to strike in the European theater. U. S. army staff officers argued in favor of a cross-channel operation, but Churchill and the British staff shrank from spilling blood against the steel-and-concrete shoreline of France and the Low Countries.

Instead, Churchill wanted the U. S. army sent to North Africa, to aid in the reconquest of the Mediterranean. Again, Roosevelt supported Churchill against his own military chiefs, but not until after strong debate in the inner councils.

Another issue was the question of aid to Russia and Britain, which U. S. army and navy officers wanted to cut down from the Roosevelt-Hopkins-Churchill estimates. The Russian cause was upheld against all comers by Harry Hopkins, and Maj. Gen. James H. Burns, executive of the munitions assignment board. Burns' favorite remark is, "Those Russians are killing more Germans than anybody else, and they ought to have the equipment to keep up the good work."

The major decisions that have come from all the controversies have now borne favorable fruit. The Mediterranean is cleared, U. S. forces have been tested under fire, landing operations have had full dress rehearsals for the bigger job of crossing the channel, and the Russians are "keeping up the good work."

So when the British and Americans get together now, there is much more warmth than at one time. There still are some friendly differences as there must be when strong men sit down together, and it is reported that U. S. military leaders still chafe at lack of action across the channel. But on the whole, success is making the road easier.

MILK SHORTAGE

Most serious food problem facing the civilian population at the moment is the threatened shortage of milk.

White House farm advisers warn that we will have a very real and acute milk famine on our hands unless the War Food Administration and the Office of Price Administration act quickly to adjust the price of feed grain for dairy cattle.

Due to higher feed costs, dairy farmers, especially in the East, are unable to sell their milk under OPA price ceilings and stay in business. Dairy farmers in Pennsylvania and other Eastern states, hard hit by the drought, have been losing as much as $35 per cow because of lack of pasture. As winter draws on, the pasture problem, plus higher feed costs, will vitally affect milk production all over the country.

So far the War Food Administration, under its new chief, Marvin Jones, has done nothing to meet this pressing problem. But unless he does the President will be urged to take matters in his own hands and arrange for feed price subsidies through legislative action. Failing that, he can, by an executive order, provide feed funds from the Commodity Credit Corporation.

The war department has supplied figures showing the amazing distance which the average soldier travels in the course of training.

From the time of his induction to embarkation, each soldier is transferred six to eight times, for an average distance of 850 miles each time. This makes a total equal to two complete trips across the continent.

In World War I, there was far less troop movement. The average number of transfers was only three.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

ABIDING VALUES FROM ISRAEL'S HISTORY

LESSON TEXT—Deuteronomy 11:13-25. GOLDEN TEXT—Righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people.—Proverbs 14:34.

What makes a nation great? God's dealings with Israel answer that question. The history which we have briefly touched upon in our study of the first four books of the Bible is reviewed in Deuteronomy.

Moses, realizing that the end was at hand for him and that a new generation was about to go into the promised land, reviewed the history of the people, restated their laws, and renewed the appeal of God for their loyal obedience. This record is found in the Book of Deuteronomy, from which our lesson is taken.

We find here that the nation which is truly great—

I. Worships the True God (vv. 13-15).

There is a fundamental factor which must underlie all real national greatness—love of God. This has an inseparable corollary—serving Him "with all your heart, and all your soul."

Says the wise man of Proverbs (14:34), "Righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people." We have well-nigh forgotten that fact. We need to be reminded of it again in God's word to Israel.

What is the result? The blessing of God upon the land, the giving of abundant harvest, in fact, the open-handed generosity of God.

II. Heeds God's Warning (vv. 16, 17).

This is the negative side. God dealt with Israel through promises if they were faithful, and the threat of judgment if they forgot Him. One is as important as the other in the leading of a nation—and in the rearing of children. We, like our heavenly Father, should faithfully keep every promise; but we should just as surely fulfill every warning of coming judgment.

America has seen the handwriting of God in warning concerning its waywardness and sin. Will it heed and avoid further judgment?

III. Honors God's Word (vv. 18, 19).

Loving God and His Word is not a matter for theological speculation or for sanctimonious discussion in some dark cloister. Thank God the Christian faith is at its best in the ordinary affairs of life. It finds its proper place in the tender relationship of parent and child. Its teachings are pure, delightful, simple and entirely appropriate to any occasion, whether one sits or rises, walks or lies down. God's words are the words to be laid up in the heart and in the soul, to be taught to our children, to be the constant and normal subject of conversation.

IV. Testifies for God (vv. 20, 21).

Here again we have the home before us. And it is, of course, the home which makes the nation. If the home speaks for God, the nation will do so, inevitably and effectively.

We may not, as did the pious Jew, fasten a little container bearing God's word on our doorstep, but we may make the home itself and the life of its inhabitants an effective testimony for God before our neighbors.

It is obvious that the home either speaks for or against God. A profession of faith in Him, an outward reputation for adherence to religious principles which does not vitally touch our dealings with one another and with the community in which we live—these clearly testify not for God but against Him. On the other hand, who can estimate the value of a sweet and orderly Christian home? Whether it be on a dusty city street, or on a quiet country lane, it is a light that cannot be hid.

V. Counts on God for Victory (vv. 22-25).

God promised that if Israel diligently kept His commandments, loved Him and walked in His ways, they would be a nation that would overcome and dispossess their enemies, and prosper in every good purpose.

God desires the nation which honors His name to stand before the other nations of the earth victorious and prosperous.

The purpose of the Lord for Israel was a far greater one than they ever achieved, because they fell into sin and drew back in unbelief. The limits of the land which He proposed to give them, as stated in verse 24, far exceed that which they did possess in Palestine.

God's plans are large plans. His promises to us, like those to Israel, are stupendous. We need to learn to take Him at His word.

"No man shall be able to stand before you" (v. 25) was the promise to Israel. "Ask what ye will" (John 15:7) is the promise to us. They failed because they did not believe God. Will we fail for the same reason?

PRIVATE PURKEY ON TOMATO HARVESTING

(News Item—Soldiers in eastern training camps are assisting farmers with the tomato harvest.)

Dear Harriet—

Lest you get the wrong idea about a new detail I just got harvesting and canning tomatoes I am just writing this note. I know how at first thought it seems funny to think of a jeep who joined up for a global war being in the tomato business, but it is important work, Harriet. When I and a lot of others got orders to help pick tomatoes I did not like the idea of being a Tomato Zouave. I told Sergeant Mooney there was nothing about tomatoes in my draft papers and that my number was drawn from a fishbowl not from no tomato can.

Sergeant Mooney says "Shut up, dogface, and do what you is told. You are lucky to get tomatoes. It could be watermelons!" I says to him, "Lissen, sarge, I joined up to be a hero and I never seen no hero with tomato sauce on him." He tells me "You are going to see one now, my boy."

Well, I am very firm with him and I tells him I was drafted to do a lot of things but that none of them had anything to do with ketchup. I tells him I took a oath to fight for four freedoms none of which has got to be picked off of a vine or pressed into a tin can. Also I explains to him that the Atlantic Charter was not drawn up in no tomato patch.

Even when I am arguing that my contract makes no mention of any work among vegetables outside of a clause where I am serposed to get a couple of cabbage-heads named Hitler an' Tojo, he just slips me a sunbonnet and a pair of overalls and tells me that while it wood be bad enuff for a jeep to be took up on charges of mutiny in the face of the enemy it wood be worse to be charged with mutiny in the face of a tomato.

I am kind of proud on account of I am one of the fastest tomato pickers in my outfit. (I get a average of 97 which is very high. All the boys say I must of had experience and they don't believe me when I say I never picked one before in my life an' always had a idea they grew on trees. The sarge has thrun out a claim that I am a pro.)

Well anyhow, in a war like this we should all do what we get told to do and wherever I can help is okay so long as the sarge don't put me on no detail to pick prickly pears. I send you all my love, my darling Harriet.

Oscar.

HIMMLER, MAN OF CHARM

"Hitler assured the German people that Heinrich Himmler, newly named for important duties at home, is a kindly, sympathetic man."—News item.)

Do not worry, fellow Germans—Don't feel frightened, sad or blue As I name that gentle fellow Heinrich Himmler over you! Do not credit silly rumors That he is a man of hate; Oh, I really can't imagine How such tales originate!

He's the kindest of persons— Ah, that gentle placid face! He's a tribute to the virtues Of the superdooper race; Treat all talk of ruthless tactics As just simple liverwurst; Himmler wouldn't harm a housefly— (If the housefly saw him first!)

Just the chief of the Gestapo— This he is and nothing more; He plays softly "Hearts and flowers" To drive out the trials of war; He's my Good Will Delegation— He's my little Fairy Prince— He's Sir Galahad (in German)— He's my Chief of Gentle Hints.

He's the Boy who's Kind to Birdies— He feeds pigeons in the parks; He's our own Big Brother Movement And writes verses on the larks; He helps ladies over crossings, He gives kiddies' heads a pat; When he rides in elevators He will always lift his hat.

Heinrich Himmler! How you'll love him!

In his presence each heart melts. Bring your troubles to him freely And do what he says . . . OR ELSE!

Rally round this knight so shining, Never doubt his gentle touch; And remember, fellow Germans, Himmler will not hurt you . . . MUCH!

A Gallup poll shows that a majority of women favor a draft of the fair sex for noncombatant war work, with men opposing the idea. The opposition of the men is easily understood. They don't want to listen to all those arguments over why the draft board chairman accepted that homely Smith woman and deferred the eye-full known as Miss Jones.

One thing is certain: if we have a draft of women the day when the draft boards have the last word will be over.

U. S.-Canadian Religious Week Endorsed by FDR

Local Church as Basis for World Christianity Is Basic Theme.

"Unless we have faith in freedom, in brotherhood and in the rational direction of life, a faith undismayed by all obstacles, our labor and our sacrifices in the present struggle must assuredly be in vain."

With these phrases, President Roosevelt endorses the 13th annual Religious Education week in a letter to Dr. Roy G. Ross of Chicago, Ill., general secretary of the International Council of Religious Education.

Religious Education week runs from September 26 to October 3 and will be observed throughout the United States and Canada. Attention will be focused upon the importance of the local church in community building as a foundation for a world-community based upon Christian principles.

Other Leaders' Endorsements
Other national leaders, including John Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and Governor Arthur B. Langlie, state of Washington, also have endorsed the value of emphasis upon religious education on a community-wide basis during the week of September 26 to October 3.

"Religious education has an important part to play in the teaching of our youth," declared Mr. Hoover in a statement concerning Religious Education week. "If more American homes were cognizant of the leading role which the Sunday School, Young People's meetings, and similar groups have to our youth, we would not now be confronted with the rising tide of juvenile crime."

"If the proper application of the aims of Religious Education week is made, I am certain that the work of the future months will be reflected in the results of the nation-wide fight against child delinquency," Mr. Hoover declared.

Character Basis of Strength
Commending Religious Education week as "a period for reverent consideration of spiritual values in our lives," Governor Langlie states: "The strength of every one of our American communities is the character of its citizens. This strength is in proportion to the prevalence of honesty, kindness, social responsibility and a spirit of mutual helpfulness. This spirit has its basis in Christian teaching."

Interdenominational co-operation in thousands of communities during Religious Education week will center attention upon community-wide activities such as service enlistment and recognition of Christian workers, home visitation, interchurch fellowship programs and Christian Community building projects.

1944 Production Goal 5% Above This Year's

Farmers Must Plant 380 Million Acres

Record acreages of soybeans, dry beans and peanuts harvested in 1943 will be topped in 1944 if national requirements for these crops are met, according to War Food administration reports. Special emphasis will be placed on these foods, as well as on cereals, dry peas, potatoes, canning crops, and flax and feed crops in planning new seedings.

Farmers are expected to plant a total of 380 million acres, or 5 per cent more than in 1943, with largest increases on peanuts, dry peas and wheat. A national planting of 68 million acres has already been asked on wheat, 26 per cent more than in 1943.

Peanuts and dry peas will probably be up as much as 30 per cent, and increases for dry beans and soybeans may be 14 to 18 per cent,

A Connecticut farmer and his committeeman discuss production problems. These committeemen are farmers themselves, elected by their neighbors in each county. Their job is to work with the Agricultural Adjustment agency and other government agencies in giving advice and assistance to the nation's food producers. Committeemen can be helpful in obtaining priority ratings on machinery and building materials, in getting loans, or in hiring farmhands.

more, above the current harvest acreage, it is announced. Both types of potatoes, regular and sweet, will be stepped up with corn showing a small increase.

Hemp and flax, it is pointed out, although not food crops are of first importance to the war. Hemp for rope and flax for oilseed are in the front line of every battle.

Feed crops will receive emphasis because of increased needs for more livestock, and the importance of maintaining production of eggs and milk at the level of 1943, or raising output on both commodities. Considerably more beef and veal will be sought in 1944, but pork production is not expected to exceed 1943 by more than a few per cent. The development of the 1944 livestock program will depend in large measure on the feed yields from 1943 crops. Extension of pasture will be urged to relieve this feed shortage. All idle land should be planted to some cover crop such as alfalfa, clover, or some cereal grain. Rye and some varieties of wheat serve well as over-the-winter coverage. This policy also returns needed minerals to the soil.

Planted acreage should be expanded without plowing up land which should be kept in grass. Using idle crop land, out of production in recent years, and speeding up the cycle of crop rotation on farms where it is feasible are the answer, according to Marvin Jones, WFA administrator. He also pointed out that sound farming methods must be employed to insure high yields over a period of years, since food demands will continue to be heavy for a long period to come.

The War Food administration will continue its program of support prices to establish desirable price relationships, it is announced, making it easier to obtain adequate increases in most needed crops and generally to balance total production.

In determining crop emphasis, farmers even in the principal wheat states of the Great Plains have been asked to give priority to dry beans, potatoes, flax and grain sorghums in some areas. First call in the Pacific Northwest is also for dry peas, dry beans, canning crops and potatoes. Soybeans, corn, dry beans, potatoes, flax and canning crops will be emphasized in the Corn Belt and Lake states. Larger wheat acreages than this year will be needed in the Southern and Eastern states to supply local food and feed needs.

Punch a tiny hole in an egg shell; let the egg run out (eat the egg of course) then decorate the egg with a funny face to wear on your lapel. One girl sent us famous radio characters made out of egg shells with yarn hair and funny felt hats. Another girl decorated three eggs to look like Hirohito, Mussolini and Hitler and fitted them into grooves on a cardboard box with the slogan "Buy war stamps and smash these bad eggs." It boosted the war stamp sale in her school.

What to Do

By PHYLLIS BELMONT

A girl I am very fond of is graduating from nursing school and entering the army. I would like to give her a small gift but don't know what she would like. Can you help me?

Answer—Since the girl is entering the army you are very limited in your choice of gifts. These girls, especially on foreign duty, lead a very Spartan existence. A very tailored slip would be nice, a nylon one particularly because it does not require ironing. Hosiery is always acceptable if you know the proper kind that is worn with the uniform.

If you really are "stuck" send the girl the money and tell her you hope she will buy something for herself that she especially wants.

From Alaska to Brazil USO Libraries Get Books to Service Men, Women.

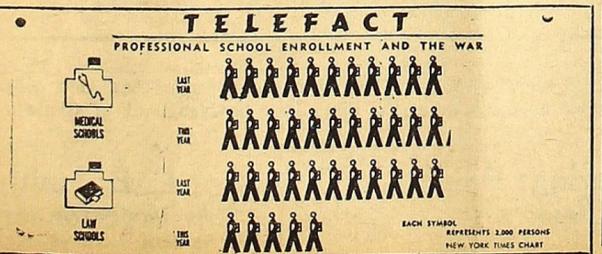

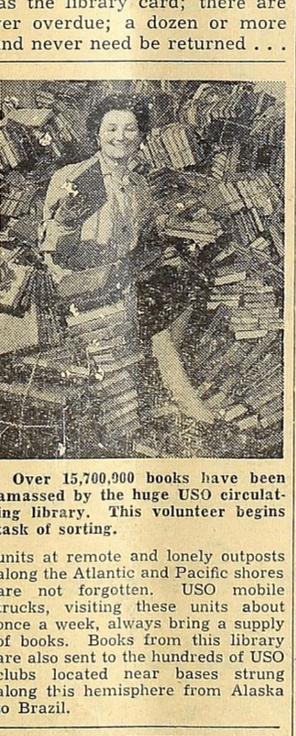

CHICAGO.—Uniforms serve as the library card; there are no fines because books are never overdue; a dozen or more books may be drawn at a time and never need be returned. . . . Sounds like a librarian's nightmare. It's the USO circulating library, with over 15,000,000 books in transit throughout the allied world.

Thousands of volumes shuttle back and forth across the nation daily. This is how it works: A serviceman—or woman—westward bound, walks into a USO club or lounge in Philadelphia and helps himself to some books to read on the train. In Chicago he leaves those he has read in book-deposit boxes and takes on more which may be exchanged in Kansas City for replacements which he reads en route to San Francisco. He deposits those read and takes the balance to his new camp or post, or passes them on to his buddies in uniform, puts them in the camp library, or may even take them aboard his ship going to the South Pacific.

Purpose of the apparently lax library rules is to overcome the phobia of an unreturned book. With this final barrier to reading removed, USO officials declare that books are in constant demand. There are never too many. Because of the self-circulating principle, books are seldom out of circulation. And they are being read, not decorating library shelves.

units at remote and lonely outposts along the Atlantic and Pacific shores are not forgotten. USO mobile trucks, visiting these units about once a week, always bring a supply of books. Books from this library are also sent to the hundreds of USO clubs located near bases strung along this hemisphere from Alaska to Brazil.

SCHOOL NOTES

The opening game of the baseball season was played at the Tawas diamond last Friday. The opponents being our nearest neighbors, the East Tawas nine.

This game was the initial appearance of the two teams under their new coaches, Tawas City being coached by Otto Rahl and the East Tawas group under J. E. Liddicoat. The game got off to a poor start, which continued throughout, was not as exciting and fast as we hope to see in the future. We also hope that Dale Landon, the Tawas City hurler, will continue to pitch "No hit, no run" games, with scores like 2-0.
