4-H Achievement Banquet Next Wednesday in Hale

PREMIUMS AND AWARDS TO BE GIVEN

Celebrate Completion of 1943 Summer Projects

The 4-H Clubs of Iosco county will celebrate the completion of their summer projects at a banquet at the Hale Community Hall, Wednesday evening, October 20. The banquet, which is complimentary to all 4-H members who have completed their summer projects and to all 4-H leaders, is scheduled at 7:00 o'clock. Ladies of the Hale community are preparing the chicken dinner.

County Agent W. L. Finley said this afternoon, "We are doing everything possible to encourage parents and friends to attend this new type of 4-H event, in order that they may better realize the importance of 4-H Club work during a period when food production is so important. I wish the banquet might be complimentary to the parents also, but our funds will not permit so they must pay $1.00 each for their portion of chicken dinner."

The evening program which has been planned by the County 4-H Club Council, will be opened by group singing. Council Chairman N. O. Sibley will then introduce the toastmistress, Mrs. Elsie Roeske. Assistant State 4-H Leader Corrine White will announce club and county honor members, and distribute the Certificates of Achievement and premiums won by the girls in their summer projects. L. H. Rhodes, district 4-H leader, will award the livestock, crops and garden members with their certificates and premiums, and will announce county winners in the boys' projects. The Bentley sisters will add musical entertainment to the program.

Wayne Grimm, superintendent of the Whittemore Schools will serve as principal speaker by discussing subject: "A Youth's War Time Program."

The program will be closed with a Candle Lighting Ceremony by the County 4-H Service Club members.

LEADERS' MEETING

The above evening banquet will follow the annual fall leaders' meeting. This leaders' meeting will begin at 3:00 o'clock in the afternoon, when members from the State Health Department will present new health and victory projects that are being offered the schools and 4-H club people this fall and winter.

State and district 4-H club leaders will point out changes which may be made during coming months in the clothing and handicraft projects in order that they better meet war time conditions and activities.

Bronson & Goupil Buy Former Ford Garage

Arnold Bronson of Hale and George Goupil of Detroit have purchased the Kane Garage in this city from H. E. Friedman. For many years this building was the home of the Ford Sales in this territory and one of the leading garages in northern Michigan. It has not been in operation as a garage for the past two years.

In an interview today, Mr. Bronson said that the business would be opened as soon as the labor situation and conditions would permit. That this might not be until after the war. He said that the purchase of garage here would not interfere with his business at Hale.

In Memoriam

In memory of Mrs. Emily May Katterman, who died October 17, 1942.

We are longing, longing
For the hand that held our own,
Guided all our tiny footsteps,
Through our childhood days are flown.

The hand that smoothed our pillow
And eased our brows at night,
The touch that banished sorrow,
Brought us comfort, peace and light.

We are longing, longing
For the mother's love and care,
For the words that stopped all grieving,
And the smile so sweet and rare.
For the heart that knew no byways
Save to love's unstinted store,
And as years press on, Dear Mother,
We are longing more and more.
The Husband, Children and Grand-children.

Local Observation Post on Alert Basis

Twenty-four hour service at the Tawas City Airplane Observation Post has been discontinued. The presidential pronouncement discontinuing the local post and similar posts throughout this area was announced by a telegram to Chief Observer L. H. Braddock from Col. Norman M. Nelsen. The post will be on an alert status with observers on duty each Wednesday afternoon. Daily inspections of the post will be made by the chief observer.

The Tawas City Airplane Observation Post has been in operation for more than a year and is said to be one of the best in this area. On September 20, Lieut. Doris E. Sagerdorff of Fort Brady conferred wings on 68 observers who had served more than 50 hours at the post. An additional number of observers have since completed their 50 hours of service. The personnel of the post were from both Tawas City and East Tawas.

Mrs. Davidson Praised As Red Cross Worker

May we pay tribute to one in our midst who has for many years been entrusted with a variety of roles in Red Cross services.

Motivated by wholesome, civic minded interest in her neighbor's welfare, Mrs. W. C. Davidson of Tawas City gave expression to her desire to serve people, by helping for several years in the distribution of clothing throughout the county. When the Welfare Agency became available, her work in that field was no longer necessary.

However, in 1934, she accepted the office of secretary-treasurer of the Red Cross organization and served for six years. Later she acted in the capacity of Roll Call chairman for two years.

Because of her varied experience in handling civic problems, Mrs. Davidson was appointed County Home Service Chairman when this last emergency arose. In this field she fulfilled a variety of roles, her service extending to our active service men and families, ex-service men and families, and occasionally to civilians.

E. John Moffatt, Red Cross chairman, says "We regret the fact that Mrs. Davidson is no longer able to assist. Her co-operation and efforts on the staff have been outstanding. Upon her rested the great responsibility of maintaining morale in the servicemen's home, and of providing vital information to the military."

Ellis-Brown

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at 8 o'clock Saturday evening, when Miss June Ellis was united in marriage to Pvt. William Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Brown, of this City. The candle lighted ceremony took place in the Baptist church before a background of brightly colored Autumn foliage and late fall flowers, with Rev. Paul Dean officiating.

The bride was attended by Miss Anna June Gordon, Orville Brown of Detroit and brother of the groom, was best man.

"Oh, Promise Me" was sung by Miss Vivian Yost, accompanied by Mrs. A. W. Colby at the piano. The wedding party entered the church to the strains of Lorengren's Wedding, played by Mrs. Colby. The bride was given in marriage by her brother-in-law, Edward Lixey.

The bride wore a rose wool street length dress and her corsage was of roses and baby breath. The bridesmaid wore a powder blue street dress and her corsage was also of roses.

Pvt. Herbert Ziehl, home on furlough, from Fort Meade, Maryland and Kenneth Fehselt, acted as ushers.

A reception was held at the Brown home, following the ceremony, by 35 close friends and relatives.

The young couple left on a short wedding trip to Detroit and returned Monday to spend the remainder of Pvt. Brown's furlough with his parents. He left on Wednesday for Camp Gruber, Oklahoma.

IN the SERVICE

Lieut. Bessie Metcalf, APO 708, care of Postmaster, San Francisco, California, a nurse in the 2nd Evacuation Hospital in the Pacific area, in a letter to her mother, Mrs. Frank Metcalf of this city, writes:

"We have an ice cream store on the Island now, and travel through the jungle for about 13 miles for two dishes. How Americans do like their ice cream! Its made from Drimix powder, with water added, and it's wonderful.

"Mrs. Roosevelt went through our hospital the other day and we all met her. She won most of us over completely, and everyone was thrilled to meet her. She presented a Purple Heart to one of the patients, and sat and talked with many others.

"Work is letting up a bit and we've been able to go swimming and on picnics. We get around to the camps for dinner, and that's always fun."

Julius C. Musolf, S. C. 3rd Class, writes that he is now in sunny California and enjoying it. His address is Julius G. Musolf, S. C. 3rd Class, C. B. M. U. 531, Headquarters Co., Camp Parks, California.

Pvt. Albert Siegel writes that his new address is Pvt. Albert J. Siegel, A. S. N. 36855785, APO 72-42, care of Postmaster, San Francisco, Calif.

Dear Percy:

Just a little note to let you know the change in my address, so that the Herald catches up with me a little quicker.

We are in California, just across the state line from Yuma, Arizona. We came that far by train, but from here we convey towards Los Angeles, and will be around Death Valley about six weeks.

It is sure warm out here in the desert—around 90 and 95 in the shade, and cactus don't give much shade. I suppose you are getting out your woolens, and we run around in our undershirts.

East Tawas P.-T. A.

The P.-T. A. executive meeting was held at the school last Monday evening, followed by the Halloween party committee meeting.

The P.-T. A. has accepted the responsibility for two Halloween parties and hope to have all the parents help. One party will be held on Friday afternoon, October 29, at the school house and will be for all grades up to and including the sixth. The other party will be held Saturday evening, October 30, at the Community house and will be for the 7th and 8th grades, the high school and the 7th and 8th grades from St. Joseph school. More plans for the party will be made at the regular P.-T. A. meeting Monday evening, October 18. All parents interested in making these parties a big success should plan to attend this meeting. President's Day will also be observed and Miss Helen Applin, the historian, will give the local history of the P.-T. A.

APPEAL FOR NEW MOSHIER TRIAL DENIED

Supreme Court Sustains Judge Dehnke In Case

Last Monday the State Supreme court denied the appeal of Mrs. Winnifred Moshier for a new trial. Mrs. Moshier is now serving for manslaughter in the Detroit House of Correction in the slaying of Little Bobbie Kenyon, June 22, 1936, whose mutilated body was found five days later in the AuGres river in Reno township. At the hearing held before the supreme court in June, Attorney Bernard Frazik represented Mrs. Moshier, and Judge H. Read Smith appeared for the prosecuting attorney's department, representing the People of the State. Judge Smith had acted as assistant prosecuting attorney in Mrs. Moshier's trial in November 1940.

At the time of his death the boy was living with his aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. George Thomas.

Mrs. Moshier, on Feb. 20, 1940 confessed the slaying, but later repudiated the confession. She was found guilty by an Iosco county jury and sentenced Nov. 4, 1940, by Judge Herman Dehnke.

Mrs. Moshier was sentenced to serve 14 to 15 years in the Detroit institution.

The court said unanimously that it could find no foundation for the defendant's contention that she was not properly represented by counsel at her trial, that her confession had been obtained by trickery or that new evidence pointing to her innocence had been unearthed.

Famed Religious Group Here Sunday Oct. 24

The well known Students League of Many Nations will be at the Tawas City Baptist church Sunday morning, October 24.

The Students League of Many Nations is a group of students from the Practical Bible Training School of Binghamton, N. Y. Members of the group will dress in national costumes, speak and sing in their native language, with translations. They give personal experiences that will hold the audience spellbound.

The public is invited to attend this meeting, Sunday, October 24. There will be no services at the Hemlock Road Baptist church that morning but the congregation will co-operate, and attend the services here.

The admission will be free, but a free-will offering will be taken.

Announce Dairy Adjustments Payments

The War Food Administration has announced that dairy feed price adjustments payments, ranging from 25 cents to 50 cents per hundred-weight for whole milk delivered and 3 cents to 6 cents per pound for butterfat, will be made to producers from October 1 to December 31, 1943.

In most cases the payments will be made directly to the dairy producers. Where payments are made directly, records of whole milk and butterfat and feed purchases, including hay, and the supporting evidence will be filed at County Triple A. Offices. Because of the necessity of submitting these records in order to get payments, all dairy producers should be advised to immediately keep accurate records of their dairy sales and feed purchases beginning October 1, 1943.

The War Food Administration points out that the dairy feed price adjustment program is for the three month period. It is expected further consideration will be given to the general milk production program by Congress and appropriate administrative agencies before expiration of this period.

CARIBBEAN CONSPIRACY

by BRENDA CONRAD

THE STORY SO FAR: Anne Heywood, beautiful daughter of a wealthy New York newspaper publisher, goes to Puerto Rico on an assignment for her father's paper. Also on the island are Pete Wilcox, a reporter on her father's paper, now a U. S. Army intelligence officer; Miguel Valera, a Puerto Rican educated in the United States who is a secret U. S. agent; Richard Taussig, an engineer whose identity as a German agent is suspected but not yet proved; and Russell Porter, a young American engineer, and his wife, Sue, who has given Mr. Taussig some valuable plans. Realizing her mistake, Sue has come to Anne for help. Anne agrees to meet Mr. Taussig, who thinks she has them.

CHAPTER XVII

The little hills along the horizon were like small conical dops of green and brick-red ice cream dotted over the landscape. The narrow road, winding and curving between the sweeping lanes of flamboyants was lovely. It must be very beautiful, Anne thought, when the trees were scarlet with bloom.

"Where are we going?" she asked. Mr. Taussig turned back with a smile. "I think we might tell her. Or shall we surprise her?"

"We are going to a coffee plantation, Miss Heywood," Diego Gongaro said.

The road was full of Army trucks now. She kept thinking how easy it would be to call out to one of the blond sunburnt boys at the wheel. But she didn't do it. Then they were climbing, the tires shrieking as they went around hairpin curves with steep banks on one side and scarred bare cuts on the other, in the face of the hill where they'd widened the road. Below them was a river and a power plant. Mr. Taussig opened his guide book and unfolded the map on the back cover. Anne saw him take a pencil out of his pocket, make a circle on the map and fold it again. She straightened up a little, a sudden idea dawning in her mind.

The map was not like the one in her book. The island in the center of it was not the same size, or the same color. It was more elaborate and detailed and took up most of the page, while hers was a small rectangle in the middle of a lot of ocean.

She settled back in the corner feeling Diego Gongaro's eyes on her face. It was in the car again, the thing she'd felt on the way to the sugar mill. It was danger.

On the left the bank sloped across a field of cane to a narrow valley of pasture land. She could see a few cows grazing, and as they rounded a sharp curve she saw a yellow and black airplane sprawled in the pasture, like a great grounded wasp. She sat quietly waiting. The road curved again, and they came up to a faded blue stucco wall with a broad archway in the center. They drove through open iron gates and pulled up at the house, blue stucco also, with dark balconies at the upstairs windows, closed tight and heavily shuttered.

"Here we are," Gongaro said. He handed her out onto the marble slab in front of the door, then reached into the car and picked up her handkerchief. "Is this yours, Señorita?"

"Thanks," she said. "I'm always doing that."

"I know," Diego Gongaro said. She understood that the remark had some meaning, but not knowing what, let it go.

"The house is yours, as the Spanish say, Miss Heywood," Taussig said.

He followed her into the cool foyer. The irony in his voice tapped out a sharp warning in the back of her head.

"Upstairs, please, Miss Heywood," Diego Gongaro said. He opened a double door at the top of the stairs.

"There is your story, Miss Heywood," Taussig said. He pointed to the plane lying in the field.

Anne waited. She was not afraid now. It was as if the alert had sounded, and she was ready, every nerve poised and keen.

"Please—sit down, Miss Heywood."

His whole intonation and the rigid posture of his body made it sound exactly as if he'd said, "Bitte—setzen Sie sich, Fraulein." She hadn't thought of him that way before. She sat down. Gongaro moved to the gallery and stood there, his hands behind his back twitching impatiently. Through the spindles of the balustrade Anne could see a man crossing the field to the plane. It was their chauffeur. She could tell by his cap and the outline of his head.

She looked back at Taussig. He was pulling open the fastener of his brief case. She watched calmly as he took out a small blue steel automatic and put it on the desk beside him. She wasn't frightened. It came to her with a burst of something like joy that she wasn't.

"Go on, Mr. Taussig," she said.

"Airplanes themselves are no longer news. Perhaps you know that."

"That plane is news, Miss Heywood," he said curtly. "As you will soon see."

The khaki-colored field car mounted the steep road above Cayay. Two long fingers of light reached out in the dark. The sharp empty curves sprang into relief and vanished in the blackness as the powerful motor skirted the high naked banks. Below them the valleys were heavily blanketed with mist as dense as white snow.

Pete Wilcox sat behind the driver and the soldier with him, perched up in the topless vehicle built for speed over rough terrain and not for looks. He hung on with one hand and held the ear phone of the two-way radio to his ears. The first message had come through as he passed the barracks at Cayay. "Calling P.J.W. Calling P.J.W."

Then the code. Their car was leaving the Granada. He was waiting impatiently. "Acting on Information Received," as they put it in G 2, it wasn't the first time since he'd left San Juan at 4:45 that the ghastly doubt had come to him that Information Received might have been cooked up especially to get him out here.

He waited. "Calling P.J.W. Calling P.J.W." the soft monotonous voice said in his ear. Their car was passing Fort Buchanan.

He looked at the spot on his map that was supposed to be their destination, and settled back, grim-faced and hard-eyed. They had begun to descend the other side of Cordillera. The scout car swayed from side to side around the hairpin curves. The soldier in front of him was pale green but not actively sick . . . yet.

"This about it, sir?" he called back over his shoulder. The bank dropped down below them in a tropical jungle, lush and green and dense.

"We want an iron gate on the right," Pete said.

"Okay, sir."

"They made another sharp turn. That it, sir?" Pete saw it at the same time, set in a ten-foot hedge of hibiscus and roses. It was a high ornamental grille, barred, bolted and tied with a chain. A sign in Spanish said "Private Property. Beware of the Dogs."

"Go on, Mr. Taussig," she said.

The driver grinned. "I guess they don't want anybody to come see 'em, Captain."

Around the first half circle of the winding road beyond the gate the driver pulled into the bank.

"Okay, sir," he said. "Him and me are surveying this road. That the idea, sir?"

Pete nodded. "Be careful you don't get run over."

They got out instruments and set them up. Pete waited with the earphone on his head. He was getting jumpy again. He had recognized the voice on the phone. Its owner was to meet him here—if and when, he thought. He lighted a cigarette. The hands on the clock on the dash and the hands of his watch moved together in a slow conspiracy. Finally it came, low and monotonous.

"Calling P.J.W. Calling P.J.W." Their car was going through Mayaguez. Borinquen was signing off. The rest was up to him.

He took the phones off and jumped out of the car. "Get going, boys," he said. "A man's coming. He'll ask for me. I'll be up that mule track. Keep your eye on the road below. A black car will go in the gate. Give it half an hour, and then park across in front so nobody can get out, and sit tight."

"Oh, boy!" the driver said. He saluted with a broad grin. "Yes, sir."

"Don't shoot unless somebody pulls a gun. Shoot hell out of anybody who does."

He made his way up the mule track through the coffee trees. It was cool and green under the ferny branches covering them with shade. He kept climbing, trying to get the idea out of his head that he might be walking into some kind of a trap laid for himself as well as Anne.

At last he came out into a clear flat patch of ground and looked down. He could see a valley below and the red-tiled roof of the house. Beyond it he caught the gleam of the sun on the shiny nose of a trimotored plane.

Suddenly he straightened up at a new sound in the stillness of the green mountain top, dropped his cigarette, put his foot on it and waited, his face grim and his jaw tight. Miguel Valera was coming up the mule track.

He came into the clearing and stopped. For a moment the two of them stood looking at each other with steady appraisal. Miguel Valera came forward.

"We're going to start down," he said. "We can get there before they do. If you don't mind doing as I tell you, there ought not to be any trouble. We have plenty of time."

"Before we go," Pete said quietly, "I'd like to know where you stand in this business."

"At the moment my chief interest is Miss Heywood," Valera answered evenly. "The rest of it is up to you. I'd like to keep out of sight if possible, for reasons of my own. If I can't, Okay. Are you ready?"

Pete looked at him for an instant. "All set," he said.

They crossed a ravine and started up a rounding slope.

"What about your people?" Pete asked.

"The peons?"

"Yes."

"They're all right. The common people have an idea what democracy means, even out here."

The road ahead of them was lined with royal palms. A man came riding out of an archway in the blue stucco wall. He nodded at Miguel and set off down the road. They crossed the dirt compound and entered the house.

"Upstairs," Miguel said.

"I don't get your part in all this," Pete said. "Whose side are you on?"

"My people's," Miguel said calmly.

"That depends on your point of view, doesn't it?"

"I think not.—Be quiet. They're coming."

Pete looked at him in the half-dark. It could still be a trap.

"—It is a story, Miss Heywood," Mr. Taussig said, "that I should not have told you if you'd minded your own business. Perhaps I should be as concise as possible, because time is precious."

Anne crossed her knees and leaned back in her chair. "There is not much point in your taking notes, since unfortunately you will not be able to write the story. I'm telling it to you to keep my end of the bargain, and because there is a little writing I'm going to ask you to do.—And please, Miss Heywood, don't be so detached. It's annoying. If you think this is a joke, you are quite wrong."

"I'm just interested, Mr. Taussig."

She spoke calmly. It was the fatalism of the end of the road. It was even a pleasure to be able to make him angry.

He recovered from his annoyance. "You may remember the five gentlemen you spied on under the courtyard stairs night before last," he said. "If you had not left your handkerchief there we might not have realized how stupid you were being."

"—He doesn't know Miguel was there," Anne thought. "It was stupid," she said.

"The gentlemen—three of whom are with you today—feel that something must be done to save their work. For your story, our work is simply to render the Gibraltar of America hors de combat when the signal is given."

He tapped his brief case. "The plans are simple and very carefully organized. I regret there isn't time to go into them in detail. I think I hear the motor of our plane being tuned up. We have a skeleton organization, however, that will function. The plane you see out there, for instance, serves a dual purpose. It brings money, and it brings ammunition. Both are downstairs in the storage rooms we passed, under a couple of feet of coffee beans—which, since the market is so bad, Don Alvaro wisely refuses to sell."

"Does Don Alvaro know about it?" Anne asked slowly.

"Don Alvaro," said Mr. Taussig, "has the old-fashioned idea that wars are fought and won or lost on the field of honor."

"How very quaint of him."

A cobra glint shone in the concentric circles of his spectacles for an instant.

"His brother-in-law, however, has the modern notion of the bloodless war. When the time comes, for instance, your Panama Canal will fall with very little loss of life, and quite intact."

"I wouldn't count on it too heavily," Anne said.

"As you won't be here to see it, Miss Heywood, you can take my word that it will. There are a great many Sue Porters in the world."

He reached under his coat, brought a tiny camera out of the concealed pocket in his sleeve and put it on the table.

"I was able to micro-photograph the charts before you stole them, fortunately. One of the notes I will require you to write will be to Mrs. Porter, telling her where you put them.—So, if you will just take this pen, Miss Heywood, and write as I dictate, we will get under way."

Doug and Dai

By R. H. WILKINSON
Associated Newspapers.
WNU Features.

DOUG PAYNTER came into the dining room and saw his wife's pocketbook lying conspicuously in the bowl on the table which she used for a centerpiece. He picked it up and opened it. Bills and loose change were stuffed carelessly inside.

Doug's mouth set grimly. He stalked into the bedroom where Dai was sitting at her dressing table arranging her hair.

"How many times have I spoken to you about leaving your pocketbook lying around in plain sight?"

Dai inserted the last pin in her chestnut brown hair. "A thousand at least," she replied brightly. "Would you mind not bothering me now, darling. I'm in a frightful hurry." She selected a cerise dress from the closet and dropped it over her head.

A white line appeared around Doug's mouth. "Dai, this is the end."

"The end of what, darling?"

"My endurance. I can't put up with it any longer. Your carelessness, I mean."

"Oh, for heaven's sake, Doug!"

"I'm quite serious, Dai. If I were a rich man it would be different. It wouldn't matter if ten or twelve dollars were stolen."

"Stolen? Oh, Doug, that is funny! I've never had a cent stolen from me in my life."

"Abe Furbush had never been hit by an automobile until last week. Now he's dead."

"Oh, for heaven's sake!"

"You can stand there and say 'for heaven's sake' from now till Doom's day. I'm finished."

She looked up suddenly, her eyes wide. "Finished? Doug, you're not serious. Not just because I left—"

"It isn't just what happened today. It's ever day, all the time. Not only leaving your pocketbook around, but carelessness in everything you do."

She stared at him, seeing for the first time the grimness in his eyes, the white line about his mouth.

"Very well, Doug," she said quietly. "If that's the way you want it."

It wasn't as easy as he expected it would be. Before two days had passed Doug decided he'd rather have Dai back with all her careless habits than anything in the world. But pride and stubbornness forbade him calling her up. If he had thought that she might get in touch with him, beg his forgiveness, promise to do better in the future, he was bitterly disappointed.

He looked at his watch. Four forty-five. In fifteen minutes he would be through work. He would leave for home. Home! A rooming house on Blossom street. A lonely dinner in a near-by restaurant. He sighed deeply and picked up the evening paper. Almost instantly his eye fell on an item on the front page.

"Occupants of Apartment House Robbed by Masked Bandits. More than three thousand dollars taken from residents of 184 Astor street."

"Good heavens!" Doug sat bolt upright. That was his address. Dai must have been one of the victims. A horrible fear gripped him. He seized the phone, dialed his insurance company. "Hello, Joe? This is Doug Paynter. Did my wife cash in some insurance policies with you today? She did? Oh, Lord! Well, thanks. So long."

He rang the bell of the apartment. After a long time he heard a step. Then the door opened. It was Dai. Obviously she had been crying.

"Dai!"

"Oh, Doug!"

He took her into his arms, holding her close, talking to her comfortingly. "I got here as soon as I could, honey. I just read it in the paper. You poor kid."

"Read what in the paper, Doug?" She sniffed.

"About the robbery," he said, handing her his handkerchief.

"Oh, that." She blew her nose vigorously. "It was pretty awful."

"Did they get it all—the insurance money?"

She shook her head and stuffed the handkerchief back into the pocket of his coat. "They didn't get any." She smiled at him. "They didn't look in the right places. You see, when I got home with the money I dropped it in the bowl on the dining-room table and neither of the bandits thought to look there. The police officer who came to investigate said I was awfully clever, because thieves never look in the most obvious places. Oh, Doug, you do love me, don't you? You are coming back? And you'll never leave me again, will you?"

Doug took a deep breath. "Yes, yes and no," he said and kissed her.

Old King Cole

Old King Cole, legendary character of nursery lore, ruled a town in eastern England appropriately named Colchester. Although the name does not memorialize the Falstaffian figure, Colchester has named one of the massive bastions of the old Roman wall Colkyng's Castle.

The history of Colchester may be traced to the Roman occupation of Britain. Among the early Britons it was known as Caer Colun, which, in the era of the Angles and Saxons, was changed to Colne Caester. Colchester is in normal times a garrison town. It is 52 miles from London.

Spotlight Fabrics for Fall Cite Satin, Jersey, Velveteen

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

CURRENT dress collections leave no doubt as to the forthcoming importance of satin, jersey and velveteen on the fall fabric program. It's nothing short of a revelation to note how charmingly and with what versatility these materials are being fashioned into dresses, jackets and even short topper coats, as well as accessories of every description.

The clamor for satin had its beginning in late summer and now all signs give promise that more satin, both in black and colors for daytime, as well as evening, will be worn this fall and winter than we have seen for years. Not only is the all-satin dress given high fashion rank, but designers are especially finding new outlet for creative genius in that they are given opportunity for endless play of imagination in teaming satin with other materials, notably smart wools or rayon weaves and they are even trimming velvet gowns with satin this year.

With refreshing originality and resourcefulness, great cunning is expressed in such accents as unique midriff insets. For that matter, novel insets of satin are liable to occur most anywhere fancy happens to dictate. Sleeves, yokes, revers and pockets, also buttons and bindings, rippling revers, neckline ruffles and bows galore add gleaming highlights to the new dresses and suits. There is also a revived use of satin applique worked out most artfully in scrolls, florals and other motifs in a manner that contributes a touch of elegance to the present modes.

The attractive gown shown to the left in the illustration is one of the reasons why satin is proving one of the big fabric successes of the present season. Note the emphasis placed on simplicity in the styling of this gown. The use of self-satin bow-tie fastenings is also very effective.

Braid-Trim Crepe

There is no limit to color as designers are playing it up in this most attractive daytime wool frock. This one-piece gold colored wool crepe dress is given style distinction with brilliant red and gold gaucho braid and the famous gaucho drape in two front skirt panels. Which goes to show that this smart model reflects Mexican influence. The buttons, too, are made of gold braid, which also is in true a la Mexicana manner. The sleeves are long and loose. She wears a sable hat.

Mesh and Lacy Hose

With your lace-trimmed black sheer wear lacy-mesh sheerest of sheer black hose. The idea of lacy mesh is also growing in favor for daytime wear in the regulation hostery shades.

Jeweled Gloves Lend

Sparkle to Costume

Gloves protect the hands, but they do more than that this season. They give flip to the simplest tailored costumes and to this end they are made to be ornamental as well as useful. One of the keenest novelties showing this year in the glove sections is the jeweled bracelet glove. The glove is fashioned of black mocha. The jewel motif features a combination of nailheads and vari-colored glass stones. There is a double row of the nailheads and colored stones simulating a bracelet effect. Gloves with embroidery or gold kid trim are effective. The long cocktail glove that is laced up the back with gold kid is very interesting. It adds the perfect dress-up note to the sheath-type cap-sleeve crepe dinner gown.

Pastel Wool Toppers

Something new in coats is the topper in dusty pastel wool that is individualized with dark fur Tuxedo panels down the front. Dusty pink with black Persian makes a handsome contrast. The purple topper lined with flat gray fur is stunning to wear with a gray suit. The fur-lined Mandarin coat is another outstanding fashion.

'Made to Order' Ornaments

In an up-and-going millinery department, a leading store makes a wonderful display of artificial flower, fruit and vegetable gadgets together with bows and items of lace which can be mounted on combs, hairpins, barrettes or headbands. You choose the fantasy you like best and an expert makes it up "while you wait," mounting it on whatever anchorage base you prefer.

AS PLEASING and gay as finding a real four-leaf clover—this pretty apron with the applique of green clover leaves. A bit more than half-a-yard of material will serve for the apron—scraps of light and dark dotted or figured green materials make the easily applied leaves. Use the paler green shade for the waistband. Use organdie for a "party" apron—muslin, percale or bleached muslin for an everyday apron.

Due to an unusually large demand and current war conditions, slightly more time is required in filling orders for a few of the most popular pattern numbers.

Plowing Aerates Soil, Stimulates Reactions

Lower Yields Caused By Excessive Cropping

While American farmers have undoubtedly plowed their soil too much in the past, the problem of declining crop yields is not due to excessive plowing, but to the removal of fertility without returning plant food to the soil, according to Dr. William A. Albrecht, chairman of the soils department of the University of Missouri.

"During the importation of the plowing idea and the application of the plowing practice in the United States, our ancestors did not recognize their transition to soils that are mainly silt loams, which demand less plowing than European clay loams. They failed to appreciate the connection plowing might have with their movement from regions where rainfall comes regularly in small showers to those where a large share of the rains are torrential. This shift from maritime to continental climate was not appreciated until much plowing under torrential downpours caused erosion of almost catastrophic magnitude over our most productive areas.

"Yes, we have plowed too much, as our hindsight forcefully tells us. But surely our foresight is better than to allow refusal to plow in the future.

"Plowing does aerate the soil, as any soil microbiologist will testify. As a consequence of the change of atmosphere in the soil, and because of the stirring by the mold-board plow, there is new 'life.' The soil is a factory in which much energy is expended. It is transforming many substances, oxidizing or burning tons of carbon dioxide, sulfur to sulfur dioxide, ammonia to nitrate and other similar combustions. Were this performance not proceeding in the soil, life on the globe would soon become extinct. Facts such as these are disregarded as part of the soil's contribution to crop production by him who would not plow. But continued and excessive cropping without paying back the soil's plant food debt, reduces the output of the nutrients left over in soluble form by microbial activity."

Rotation grazing increases the nutritional value of pasture plants, as thicker turf results from using only a small part of pasture area at a time. High-producing cows have shown increased yield when grazed in this way.

Ground Wheat Preserves Grass Silage Well

Wheat is just as satisfactory a preservative for grass silage as corn, says C. B. Bender of Rutgers U. Describing how to use wheat in silage making, he says, "The grain should be ground fine and applied at the rate of 200 to 250 pounds per ton of green alfalfa as it goes through the throat of the chopper. With mixtures of grasses and legumes, use 150 to 200 pounds per ton depending upon moisture content. The higher the moisture content the more ground grain is needed. With timothy or green cereal grains, add 100 to 150 pounds of the ground grains per ton. "It is not difficult to apply the grain," Bender says. "Build a hopper over the throat of the chopper large enough to hold 100 pounds of ground grain. Have a sliding panel at the base of the hopper which will regulate the flow of grain. It is advisable to brace one side of the hopper to the side of the ensilage cutter so that the vibration will help the flow of grain. "Grain is more than just a preservative. It reduces seepage, increases the total nutrient content of the silage and increases the protein content. It is also a convenient way of feeding part of the grain ration to cows."

"Hi, Mom it's Joe!"

The call home means a lot to a man in the service. Most of the time he's too busy to get near a telephone, but between 7 and 10 in the evening he sometimes has a chance to make a call.

You can imagine what a disappointment it is for him if he finds all the long distance lines are busy.

By avoiding the use of long distance during those hours — 7 to 10 P. M. — you're giving soldiers and sailors a break they surely deserve. And if you have a man of your own in the service, remember it's better to let him do the calling. If you place the call, it may be difficult to locate him.

Collects 288 Rare Odors

Collecting rare odors is the hobby of Dr. Ralph Bienfang of the University of Oklahoma school of pharmacy. He has 288 of them from far corners of the earth, such as oil of rose from Baghdad; hyssop from central Asia and zdravetz from Bulgaria. Dr. Bienfang preserves the odor in oil and transfers it to a card. The card holds the odor for as long as two years and is filed in a card index.

TURKEYS AND THE ARMY

The army is beginning to wonder if it hasn't over-extended itself on the business of turkeys. It has ruled that civilians may not buy turkeys for their Thanksgiving or Christmas dinners—or for next Sunday's dinner, for that matter—until the army has acquired 12 million pounds for the armed forces overseas.

That sounded all right, until somebody in the quartermaster corps began figuring out what you could do with 12 million pounds of turkeys. For generous portions, you can figure that 100 pounds of undressed turkey will feed 100 men.

The number of men in the armed forces overseas, including army, navy, and marines, is around two million. Allow each man a pound of turkey for Thanksgiving and another for Christmas, and you reach the total of four million pounds.

But the amount reserved for this purpose is three times four million, or 12 million pounds.

When certain food experts in the quartermaster corps realized this, they started to do some fast telephoning. When last heard from, they still didn't know what two million men would do with 12 million pounds of turkey—except eat 'em.

NAZI PSYCHOLOGICAL WARFARE

Beware of false rumors about Germany. The Germans, masters of psychological warfare, are watching every opportunity to take advantage of American credulity. They know that Americans are optimistic by nature and that we are prone to believe any story about miraculous victories or fortunate events.

Apparently it was this method of psychological warfare which prompted the reports that Hitler had been deposed in favor of military authorities.

It has now been definitely established that no such event took place. State department officials now say flatly that the whole thing was a false report, from beginning to end. It was so generally reported, however, that they believe it must have been prompted by Germany. The motive in such a case would have been to make Americans rush to the conclusion that Germany was tottering and the war was not far from finished. This would have the effect of weakening our bond drives and similar efforts.

Note: The Nazi news report of Hitler's ousting came via Spain.

ARMY'S FAVORITE FOODS

Since the Truman committee's investigation of food waste in the army, the quartermaster corps has been as frugal as a Dutch housewife. Elaborate studies have been made of what the soldiers eat and what they leave on the plate, with the idea of cutting down the percentage of garbage.

After watching the eating habits of 16,000 soldiers at Chanute Field, Ill., the quartermaster corps gave each dish a rating, according to its popularity.

Roast chicken and apple pie rated 100. So did roast duck and roast ham. But creamed ham rated only 55. (QMC dietician Mary I. Barber explains: "Not many men like mopped up food. Artemus Ward said: 'When I eat hash, I like to know what I'm eating.'")

No matter what you may do to butter up spinach, it remains spinach and the soldiers gave it a rating of 41. It was just about the lowest of all.

NO TIRES FOR RUBBER CZAR

Col. Bradley Dewey, who succeeded Big Bill Jeffers as rubber director, says he wishes he could get his hands on a set of synthetic tires. He is now in charge of the program which promises to produce 30 million synthetic tires by the end of next year, but he is not able to try synthetic tires on his own car.

"I wish," says Colonel Dewey, "that OPA would let me have a set of the new tires. I'd like to try them out. I understand they skid less than natural rubber. Not that I drive at skidding speeds, mind you, but I'd like to see what they would do."

"Some of the taxi drivers out in Akron have new synthetic tires, and they swear by them. But I'd like to see what they would do for me."

Reason for Dewey's inability to get tires is that though he is in charge of the entire program, he is obliged to apply for tires through OPA, like any other citizen. And since his present tires are reasonably good, he can't get any new synthetic tires.

MERRY GO ROUND

A high, air-minded war department official says the length of the war depends on the weather this winter. If the weather is favorable for flying, the war in Europe might be over before next summer.

Brig. Gen. Glen C. Jamison, of the Thirteenth air force, South Pacific, pays high tribute to Negro engineers who built roads, airfields, and living quarters in the Solomons and New Hebrides, using native construction materials and thus saving shipping from U. S.

JESUS AND THE SABBATH

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:8-11; Isaiah 58:13, 14; Mark 2:23-3:6.

GOLDEN TEXT—And he said unto them, The sabbath was made for man, and not man for the sabbath.—Mark 2:27.

The sabbath was essentially a day of rest and worship; hence the principles which surrounded it and directed its life may be applied to our day of rest, which is the first day of the week—the Lord's day.

That word "rest" sounds a little strange in this busy world of ours, and yet it is an important one. It means quiet for the struggling one, calm for the troubled, repose for the weary, tranquility for the disturbed, cessation of labor for the worn-out one.

God in His infinite wisdom saw that without rest man would soon destroy himself, and He made provision for one day in seven when labor should cease and man should be free for that recreation of soul and body which should fit him for the labor of the week.

Our lesson answers two important questions about our rest day, namely, Why? and How?

I. Why We Keep a Day of Rest

(Exod. 20:8-11; Isa. 58:13, 14).

The chief reason is that God commands it. One day out of seven is for our recreation by rest and worship. That should be sufficient to cause His people to "remember" the day "to keep it holy."

Doubtless it is true that essential war work and related activities must be carried on, even on Sunday. God did not forbid works of necessity. But even though there is this need, who will deny that many use Sunday for work that is not essential—and countless others devote it to godless pleasure.

Notice that the day of rest was to be not only for the family, but also for servants and for visitors. The employer who unnecessarily operates his factory or office on Sunday violates this commandment. Note also that the man who is to rest on the seventh day is supposed to work on the six days.

The precept of Exodus 20 is enforced by the promise of Isaiah 58. The man who delights in keeping God's commandment regarding the day of rest, will find that God delights in and honors him. Both men and nations have found this to be true.

II. How We Keep a Day of Rest

(Mark 2:23-3:6).

The formalists of Christ's day, the Pharisees, had overlooked the heart of God's law and the holy living which it was intended to produce, and had bound up even the observance of the sabbath (which was intended to be a day of rest and gladness) in such a mass of technical "thou shalt nots" that it was a day of fear. They had a false outward profession of worship and had entirely missed the true spirituality of God's law, a fact which drew upon their heads the anger and rebuke of our Lord.

The two incidents in this portion of our lesson reveal that under the cloak of earnestly observing the law of the sabbath, the Pharisees were actually covering their own hypocrisy and their hatred for Christ.

The accusations against the disciples because they had taken and eaten grain was not on the ground that they had stolen, for the law (Deut. 23:25) guaranteed that right to the one who passed through his neighbor's field. The Pharisees contended, however, that the disciples had worked on the sabbath in picking and hulling the grain.

The healing of the man with the withered arm revealed that back of their professed concern for the sabbath was a real hatred for Christ. It is an appalling thing that in the house of worship on the very sabbath day, these men, outwardly so religious, were plotting against our Lord.

"They watched him," and even so the enemies of the Cross watch us who are His followers. They are not concerned that the man with the withered arm, or with the withered soul may be helped, but only that they may find something to condemn.

Jesus cuts across human hypocrisy and hatred to declare that the true keeping of the sabbath is to do the work of God. No work of necessity (like plucking the grain) or of mercy (like healing the withered arm) is ever out of place on the day of rest.

A word of caution is needed, for some have sought to interpret this Scripture as providing biblical ground for doing all sorts of things on their day of rest. That day is for man's good, not for his destruction. His greatest good is served by rest, worship, spiritual development, Christian fellowship, and the doing of deeds of necessity and mercy.

The desecration of the Lord's Day in our time is a serious matter. Let us not contribute to its deterioration. America needs Sunday as a day of rest and worship.

The report that Gen. George C. Marshall was under consideration for the post of global commander in chief of all Anglo-American armed forces, caused widespread comment in both military and political circles. ONLY one thing is certain during the current football season—spectator interest is as great as ever.

This was proved quite definitely on the opening day of the college gridiron season. Four games in the Midwest that were open for civilian patronage, and Notre Dame at Pittsburgh, drew a total of 176,996, or an average of 35,399—much better than had been expected or predicted.

But that is about the only aspect of the game this year that can be taken for granted. Most of the others are surrounded by question marks.

The schools which did not benefit from the navy's V-12 programs were expected to furnish comparatively little in the way of top-flight competition. However, the strength of these civilian teams in the Western conference came as a pleasant surprise. These teams include Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, Indiana, Ohio State and Minnesota.

Navy Power

These teams were not bracketed with Northwestern, Purdue and Michigan. Their manpower resources were too great. Particularly was this true of Michigan.

Elroy Hirsch of Wisconsin and Bill Daley of Minnesota were two of the country's finest backs last fall.

Both are fast, powerful ball carriers. Michigan got both men this fall in the navy assignments, and with them the Wolverines got the best backfield in the country.

But the civilian teams crossed up many of the crystal ball experts. Indiana gave Lynn Waldorf, Northwestern coach, a bad case of the jitters. The Wildcats didn't measure up to expectations against a surprising Indiana eleven. The Hoosier line handled the Wildcats' ground game quite effectively. A youngster named Bob Hoernschemeyer, who would have been an ineligible freshman under normal conditions, was the mainstay of a fighting Indiana team.

A strong Wisconsin team, rebuilt after losing to Marquette, played Camp Grant all even for 59 minutes and 55 seconds before losing by the margin of a field goal. Minnesota rolled over Missouri, and gave definite notice that they would make more than a gesture of the present season.

Minnesota is always a team to watch. The Gophers are strong for size—and plenty of power—but they never sacrifice speed. Their record is one of the best.

Past Champions

Ohio State, national champions of 1942, didn't fare too well when they lost their opener to the Iowa Sea-hawks, 28 to 13.

Purdue established themselves among the powerhouses when they beat Marquette by three touchdowns and a shut-out. Observers state that Tony Butkovich, Illinois transfer, is a much better full-back than last year and may be one of the very best before the season ends.

Purdue doesn't play either Northwestern or Michigan, and has an excellent chance to tie for the Big Ten title.

The basic reason for the good showing of the civilian teams is that they are well coached. Because of the civilian status of many of their players, they have had considerable practice time. This was quite evident as they made their debuts. And it was just as evident that Northwestern, for instance, went into the Indiana tussle with far too little practice. Because of navy regulations, that problem is almost impossible of solution. Navy work must come first.

It is obvious, of course, that the status of the civilian teams will change overnight. Those teams will lose talent to the services as the season advances.

All in all, the football picture is muddled. But interest in the game has not slackened. The merry click of the turnstiles every Saturday afternoon is ample proof.

SPORTS SHORTS

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Success of the Dutch in transplanting the quinine tree from Peru to Java helped encourage interest in the development of rubber plantations in the Far East in the early 1870's.

With all the discouragements of rubber and gasoline restrictions, automobile registrations at the end of 1942 were only 5 per cent lower than in 1941, a record year. Commercial vehicle registrations were down 5.5 per cent.

It is estimated that at one time there were between 200 million and 500 million wild rubber trees in the Amazon Valley and that less than 10 per cent have been tapped to date.

U. S. Soldiers Eat Plenty, Waste Little

Sergeant's Rules Cut Food Loss To Minimum

WITH AMERICAN ARMY, NORTHERN IRELAND—If you find your name in big letters under a "I Wasted Food" sign that decorates the doorway of a United States army Eighth air force composite command mess hall, you'll know Boss Cook Hosey Stewart is on your trail. He'll be on it for one week, and your name will be up there for one week.

"Just an idea," says Staff Sergeant Stewart, a friendly easy-going fellow from Hammond, La. "A guy don't like to see his name up there before everybody."

Apparently that, and some other ideas that Stewart cooked up, do work. Inspection of the garbage pail after dinner revealed the contents were less than a soldier would put in his own mess kit to take to his table—and more than 150 men are fed here—hungry men who eat all they want and eat a lot, but men who don't waste food.

Stewart and his crew of five cooks working under supervision of First Lieut. E. H. Rouse of West Newton, Pa., mess officer, have accomplished this by applying all the tricks and angles of the trade day after day. But Sergeant Stewart gives credit to his assistants.

Men Take All They Want.

Every day, every meal, an assistant stands at the mess line with a little note pad. Any man is allowed to take all he wants on the self-serve plan. But if he takes more than he eats, his name goes down in the book. If he does that too often, Hosey racks him up on the board and that usually fixes it.

Stewart and his staff constantly exercise great care in the ordering, preparing, and storing of foods. One month the sergeant guessed exactly right on the majority of items drawn. Here are a few cardi-

Sergeant Hosey Stewart of Hammond, Louisiana, posts up the names of soldiers who have not been eating all the food they ordered. This silent reprimand has resulted in a marked reduction in wasted food.

Silent Rebuke

nal principles followed by him and his men:

First, ordering. Never order more than you think you'll need, and order frequently at short intervals to prevent waste and spoilage. Second, preparation. If there are any left-overs, you get them back in the form of soups, stews, meat pies, etc. Maybe not like mother used to make but the boys say they're not bad at all. They shouldn't be, for the army has a whole unit in England constantly working on good left-over and other recipes.

Third, proper storage and inspection. "Take bread, for instance," the sergeant explained. "That bread box has to be cleaned every day, every loaf taken out and inspected for mold. It's got to be watched and kept clean and dry because this is a pretty damp climate. Vegetables the same way. You see here—" he opened up the potato bin—"if there's one bad, we take it out. Same with these cabbages. Keep watching it, and you won't lose much."

Also Save Scrap. "Every box that comes, we save that," he said. "We return everything to the salvage depot at the end of every month. Cardboard boxes, wooden boxes, bread sacks, potato sacks, tin cans. I suppose they make bullets out of them, or maybe airplane parts. Nope, we don't let anything go to waste around here."

"Do you have any trouble getting co-operation out of the fellows you're feeding?" Sergeant Stewart was asked.

"Nope, no trouble at all. We're tryin' to win the war same as anybody else. Long's they get enough to eat, you won't hear any complaints out of this outfit. Oh, everybody's got to get in a little hollerin' now and then—but they don't really complain, and that's what counts. We get along fine."

AMERICA IN ACTION

'SEND MORE WACS'

ALLIED FORCE HEADQUARTERS, NORTH AFRICA.—"I've got just one thing to say about these women soldiers and that's give me more of them!"

That's what Capt. Sol Gershon of the central postal directory in the North Africa theater of operations says about the Women's Army corps.

"It is imperative that we do not 'lose' a soldier in the records," the captain explained. "We have a card for every soldier who enters this theater—and that card must follow him. It's a herculean job that looks like it would take a whole field army to do. But we have got less than 100 WACs here. And they just won't go home at night until they're caught up with their work. And can they file cards! Why, the first day that new bunch filed 43,000 cards in one shift!"

This is the section where mail is forwarded to wounded soldiers. If a soldier is wounded he is immediately evacuated to the rear. The medical soldiers who take him to the rear cannot possibly leave forwarding addresses with men busy fighting. At the first hospital station the soldier is routed to the hospital established to take care of his class of wound. Naturally, this soldier's mail is directed to his unit and when it arrives after he has been wounded and evacuated, it is turned over to his company officer. He immediately marks it "Hospital Unknown" and dispatches it to the Central postal directory.

WACs take over at this point. Hospitals are checked daily, cards are filed and cross-filed. They follow the wounded soldier via report and card file so that they know where he is almost as soon as he arrives there.

You women who are working for defense—taking first aid courses and sewing for the Red Cross still must do a little entertaining.

The Red Cross sewing units usually meet in various homes. So when it's your "turn" to have the ladies in, serve a luncheon of hot cream soup, and follow this with a salad or sandwiches served on tiny individual trays. ## Battlefield Salvage, Scrap, Reclaimed, Made Into New U. S. Fighting Weapons

Thousands of tons of battlefield salvage and scrap are being returned to the United States, the war department has revealed. As much as possible is repaired in war plants, and scrap iron is disposed of through normal trade channels for return to the war effort.

Weapons the Japs have hurled against Americans in the Pacific theater of war and Nazi planes and tanks which fell into Allied hands in North Africa and Sicily are included in the growing scrap pile which is turned into new and improved weapons.

The number of items and the volume of this battle scrap and salvage are increasing by such proportions

Wrecked Japanese Zeros at a Brooklyn salvage depot are examined by U. S. army officers. This material will be reclaimed and eventually fired back at the country from which it came.

that the army found it practical to establish a segregation yard at a port of embarkation.

In May ships docking at a single port deposited 1,500 gross tons of ferrous scrap and 400,000 pounds of non-ferrous scrap. In June, the salvage from battlefields received at this port included 2,700 tons of ferrous scrap and 763 tons of non-ferrous scrap. The salvage also included 1,000,000 pounds of scrap rubber.

Hundreds of boxes of repairable airplane engines are included in the returned cargoes. Tons of oxygen and acetylene cylinders, many thousand ammunition containers and many more thousands of items for different technical services are being returned and sent through the proper channels for reprocessing, the army announced.

In May, it was added, the items for repair and eventual reuse received at one port included 4,400 55-gallon steel drums, 135 tons of half track, 55,000 pounds of shoes, 90,500 pounds of clothing, 10,000 pounds of webbing, and 10,500 pounds of canvas.

Scrap is returned to this country for reprocessing as only one phase of the army's salvage program. The story of assembly lines near battle areas, and repair shops of every conceivable type in the war zones makes another dramatic chapter in the history of this global war.

Paratrooper Over Italy

By Frank Herkness

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with The American Magazine.)

We jumped at midnight. For 30 minutes the jump door had been open, and the lieutenant, our jump master, had been standing there looking out into the moonlight and waiting for the red-light flash which meant to stand up and hook on chutes.

We had been flying a long time—much longer than actually needed to come from the African camp to Sicily. But, to throw the enemy off, we did not fly there directly.

Maybe there will never be such a night again. I've heard that 2,000 planes and 4,000 boats took part in the invasion, and I can believe it. The sky around us was filled with cargo transport planes, all loaded with paratroops, all heading for the same place, like a billion bees.

All of us were excited. For exactly one year and three days we'd been training for this, our first battle action. Three days before, we'd celebrated the anniversary by killing three beef cattle for dinner. And now the target was a few minutes ahead of us. We passed over the Sicilian coast and knew it wouldn't be long now.

The red light flashed. All of us stood up, fastened our chutes to the jump cable, and waited. Waited for what seemed hours for the green jump signal from the pilot. The plane was rocking from side to side, much worse than it ever did in the 15 practice jumps we'd made—I still don't know why.

Directly ahead and behind us we could see faintly glowing green lights—formation lights of planes ahead and behind.

Lieutenant Disappears. The pilot's light suddenly flashed. Officers always jump first. The lieutenant yelled, "Let's go!" and leaped out into the moonlight. We never saw him again.

We followed him instantly. The plane emptied in ten seconds. I was the last to jump. The plane seemed to be going unusually fast. My chute snapped open with a terrific jerk, and my carbine disappeared. So the only weapon I had was a long trench knife.

I should have been able to see all the other chutes in our party, but I could only see one, and realized something had gone wrong. Plans called for us to be dropped at 600 feet, with the plane slowed down to almost stalling speed—about 100 miles an hour. This was so we would spend less vulnerable time floating down, and also so we would be close together when we hit.

As it turned out, we were dropped at full speed—almost 200 miles an hour—and from 1,500 feet. That's why I could see only one other chute. I kept my eyes glued on it and pulled at my shrouds to follow it.

I landed hard but safe in an orchard. The rest of the boys landed nearby. Comparing notes, we were convinced that we had been dropped in a comparatively strange country, nowhere near our target area. Actually, we were at least 50 miles off—some time I'd like to know why.

This was all orchard country, which seemed dotted with enemy troops, forcing us to move carefully. There was spasmodic firing everywhere, but we managed to avoid the enemy. We spotted the main road and headed for it. We had crept along it about 500 yards when we were challenged. It was another American, posted there in the bushes to lead anybody to a nearby farmhouse which was being used as an assembly point and first-aid station. We went in.

From prisoners we learned that we had landed a few miles from Avola, a coastal town which the British even then were attacking. There was a little hill about 200 yards from the farmhouse where, as soon as it got light, we could see the whole scene. I'll never forget it. British landings being made against airplane and artillery opposition. We could help those boys by hitting the enemy in the rear. That's what we did. Maybe it was a good thing we landed where we did. I think we did more valuable work than we would have done if we had been dropped right on the bull's eye.

From the hilltop, as far as I could see, British ships were lying just offshore, with lines of little boats moving back and forth, bringing in more British Tommies. They were getting plenty of enemy attention. From the hills, Italian artillery was going full blast. Shells and bombs were bursting among the ships, but the little boats kept coming anyway.

It was about eight in the morning when we reached Avola and it took us until 2:30 in the afternoon to advance a little more than a mile toward the town square.

ON THE HOME FRONT with RUTH WYETH SPEARS

SOME people have a talent for making guests comfortable and they are not always the people with big houses and what used to be called a spare room. Many a homemaker today is graciously sharing limited space in a house or apartment because war conditions make her feel that is part of her contribution.

This sketch shows an ingenious frame under which a folding cot may be stored in a hall or other out-of-the-way corner. The frame has a full skirted cover of denim trimmed in bands of flowered chintz. On top there stands a medicine closet with feet made by gluing spools in place. This cabinet gives a convenient place for toilet articles and the mirror door is well lighted with wall brackets connected with a floor outlet.

One thing a soldier is afraid of is a display of emotion. That's why his slang so often sounds derogatory. For example, he refers to the silver eagles on his colonel's shoulder straps as "buzzards." But when he speaks of his favorite cigarette, he says: "Camels." They're first with men in the Army as well as with Sailors, Marines, and Coast Guardsmen. (According to actual sales records in service men's stores.) And though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. Paint Melts Path Through Ice on Far Northern River
By painting 29 miles of ice black, Captain H. Wheeler, owner of the steamboat Casca, was able to lessen the length of time that navigation was ice-bound and to make his sailing on the Yukon river three weeks earlier in the season than usual.

He conceived the idea that the period of inactivity for his boat might be substantially reduced by increasing the melting point of the sun's rays. Household brooms and brushes and paint made from lampblack and refuse oil were used to paint a strip 40 feet wide. Within a month the blackened strip had cut itself a channel a foot deep in the ice and its edges were as evenly chiseled as if they had been cut with a saw. Every day the blackened surface ate deeper into the ice until the lake channel was clear.

This is a striking demonstration of the established and easily demonstrable fact that black or dark surfaces become much hotter when exposed to the sun's rays than do white or light-colored surfaces.

Soldier's Mail

The War Department in cooperation with the Post Office Department will return all mail for soldiers overseas which is improperly or incompletely addressed, it was announced today by Colonel S. D. Ringsdorf, District Commander, District No. 1, Sixth Service Command, Army Service Forces, with headquarters at Detroit.

Colonel Ringsdorf explained that: "Effective October 1, 1943, all insufficiently and incorrectly addressed mail and second class publications received at ports of embarkation will be returned to the senders without directory service being given. In the case of publications of the second class, only the address portions of wrappers will be returned to publishers."

Mail addressed to overseas Army personnel must show, in addition to the name and address of the sender, the soldier's name, rank, army serial number, branch of service, organization, A.P.O. number and post office through which the mail is to be routed. An example of the proper address:

Private Joe Doe, (19743685)
Company F, 167 Infantry,
A.P.O. 810, C-o Postmaster,
New York, New York.

According to Colonel Ringsdorf, mail to Army personnel within the continental United States should be similarly addressed, except that the inscriptions "C-o Postmaster" should be omitted.
