THE STORY SO FAR: Anne Heywood, beautiful daughter of a wealthy New York newspaper publisher, goes to Puerto Rico on an assignment for her father's paper. Also on the island are Pete Wilcox, a reporter on her father's paper, now a U. S. Army intelligence officer; Miguel Valera, a Puerto Rican educated in the United States who is a secret U. S. agent; Richard Taussig, an engineer whose identity as a German agent is about to be proved; and Russell Porter, a young American engineer, and his wife, Sue, who has misguidedly given Mr. Taussig some valuable plans. Sue appeals to Anne for help. Anne goes with Taussig to a remote villa. Outside Pete and Valera are waiting.

CHAPTER XVIII

The palms of Anne's hands were coldly moist. "—Where are we go-

"I am going to Brazil," Mr. Taussig replied. "Here is some paper. Please don't try to be either funny or resourceful. It's quite useless, I assure you."

Anne sat without moving for an instant. What was the use? Then she thought quickly. It would be quite easy to leave some kind of a . . . story. She picked up the pen.
"'Dear Pete,'" Mr. Taussig said.
"—I believe that is what you call him?-'I have decided to go away with Richard Taussig.' Anne looked at him steadily "Couldn't you spare me that humiliation, Mr. Taussig? He won't believe it, I assure you. I must have told him already that I think you're unbelievably repulsive."

Mr. Taussig's face hardened into the mottled oyster-gray.

"Continue. 'I know it will be a shock after everything I have said, but that's the way it is. I want you to tell Mother and'. . . Dad or Father, whichever you say . . ." She wrote "Father." Pete would know she'd never say that. "'Tell them they are not to try to find me, because they couldn't. I'm sick of the kind of sheltered life I've always had and this is a chance I'll never get again. We're flying to Costa Rica. I'll write to you some time. Lots' . . . or do you say loads . . . 'of love.'"

"I . . . might as well say loads, I guess," she said. She tried to keep her hand on the pen from shaking. All she ever said really was "Yours," or "All the best, angel." It seemed funny, writing to him. Everything inside her had gone a little numb, all of a sudden.

She pulled herself sharply together. "Where am I going?" she asked. "You are going half-way to Sao Paolo, with me, in the plane out there.'

"Not all the way?" Mr. Taussig shook his head. "Furthermore, it is a non-stop flight, if you're interested." She looked at him calmly. "You mean, I'm getting out half-way there.' Mr. Taussig's mouth tightened to a thin line.

"Take this envelope up, put the letter in it and seal it. I don't want my own fingerprints on it. Thank you. Now take another piece of paper and write to Mrs. Porter.

" 'Dearest Sue,-Don't be shocked, darling, but I'm going away with Mr. Taussig. I decided it this morning. I'm sorry about Russell's plans. I shouldn't have taken them. put them-' "

He stopped. "Write wherever you did put them." Anne wrote quickly: ". . . inside the skirt of my blue jersey dinner dress in the closet." She looked up, clear-eyed. "Yes?"

"Sign it, Miss Heywood."

She wrote, "Love-Anne."

Taussig motioned to her to push the letter over to him. He bent over, reading it slowly. His hands shook a little suddenly, his face was distorted and horrible. She shrank back instinctively. His hand moved toward the gun on the table, and stopped. He got up slowly.

"Miss Heywood," he said, his voice cold and deadly soft. "You are lying. Those plans are not in your room. Nor do you have a blue jersey dinner dress in your closet." Her voice was so steady and cool that she hardly recognized it.

"Nor, Mr. Taussig, do I have the plans. I haven't got them now, nor have I ever had them. The whole thing, as you will probably remember, was your own idea.' He stared at her, livid with fury. In the darkened inner room Miguel Valera moved the bolt on the door slowly and silently. Pete touched his arm. "Wait!" he whispered. The door to the inner room opened as Mr. Taussig was starting slowly toward Anne Heywood. Pete Wilcox took two quick steps to her side, thrust her back across the room. Taussig lurched for the revolver, and as Miguel Valera caught the corner of the desk pad and flicked the revolver onto the floor, he turned and dashed out onto the gallery. Diego Gongaro was already gone. A door slammed; there was the sound of running feet in the court-

Pete tore loose, leaped to the gallery rail and over. Anne moved slowly forward, all the strength gone sober and intent. out of her. Miguel caught her in his arms and held her for a moment. He kept his arm around her, steadying her, as they went to the gallery. The great motors of the black and yellow plane roared. Diego Gongaro was climbing in. Mr. Taussig, running doggedly and with surprising pace, was fifty yards off, far ahead of Pete Wilcox.

Miguel's arm tightened around her waist. He was watching silently, his lips compressed and his face grave.

Then suddenly she felt the violent forward lurch of his body. Her eyes flashed open. The field was alive with soldiers, coming from everywhere, it seemed to her . . . and Pete Wilcox was running down it again. And the plane . . . Something had happened. It was losing what little altitude it had, careening heavily, swaying back and forth. Anne felt her heart had stopped beating altogether. It leveled off. dangerously close to the hillside, the roar of the motors dying out. Anne closed her eyes as it nosed up for one last time, and crashed down, buried almost out of sight in the banana and orange and coffee trees on the slope.

"Let them go, Wilcox! Let them go, I tell you!"

Miguel had not moved or said a word. He was bent forward rigidly, waiting. Suddenly he relaxed. She looked at him.

"Miguel!" He turned to her, his face haggard and tired.

"It wasn't supposed to happen that way, Anne," he said gently. 'It wasn't supposed to get off the ground at all."

Anne started unzipping Sue's frilly blue dress as soon as she closed the door of her room in the Granada and got one of her own out of the closet. She came back into the room and looked around. It seemed ages since she and Sue and Mr. Taussig had been there. A note was propped up in the middle of the bed. She picked it up.

"Anne-I've decided to try to save the pieces like you said. Call me as soon as you can .- Love, Sue." She went to the telephone. Senora Porter had gone to the Airport to meet Senor Porter. She was combing her hair when the phone rang. "Captain Wilcox is here, miss," the operator said.

"Thanks. Tell him I'll be down."

She crossed the terrace. Pete was standing against the marble balustrade, looking out over the ocean. When he turned she had the impression that he was sorting his face out so she wouldn't see what was really in it.

"Hi, Annie," he said. "I hope you don't mind my coming back this way. I thought you'd like to have the latest dope."

"Oh, don't, Pete," she said. "You know I always love to see you."

He grinned. "Thanks, Anne. I wanted to tell you about Sue. She was wonderful, poor little devil. She barged into Fletcher's office, flags flying, this morning at nine o'clock and demanded to be taken to the General and have Old Iron Lungs brought in. Fletcher listened to her a little and did it, and she shot the works." "Oh. Pete!"

"Fletcher said she was swell. She didn't try to find an out of any sort." "What's going to happen?"

"They're pretty human even they are tough," Pete said. guess they figured she'd learned her lesson. Anyway, they wouldn't have to talk to you." stunned. The motors of the plane so much of the goods on Taussig if "Then that's that," Anne said. He grinned at her again. "That's that," he said not very steadily. He stood looking at the ashen tip of his cigarette a moment, his face

"And there's one other thing I'd like to say, Annie. I was all wet about Valera. I'd heard they might send somebody down like that, but I didn't get hep to it until he turned all the papers over to me up at the coffee finca.—I'd just like to say I'm sorry. He's a swell guy."

He tossed his cigarette over the balustrade into the surf. "So I take it all back, Annie. I hope you'll be awfully happy. Because you're a swell guy too." "Oh, don't, Pete," she said.

"You'll break my heart."

"I wish I could," he said. "So long. I suppose-" He stopped. Miguel Valera was coming through the arcade. He came on over. "Am I—"

"I was just going," Pete said. 'You did a swell job, Valera." He held out his hand. Miguel grasped it. Neither of them spoke for an instant.

"Good luck," Pete said. "I hope you'll keep her out of trouble. So long. So long, Annie." Don Alvaro Valera's party for his son's home-coming had been scheduled for Sunday.

"He sees no reason for postponing it," Miguel told Anne. They were lunching at the Mallorquina. "It's a brave face to the world, I suppose. I'm reporting for duty next week, by the way." He looked at her anxiously. "My father wants to talk to you, Anne.' "Have you told him?" He nodded. "He thinks you're splendid." She hesitated for a moment. "Miguel," she said. "There's one thing I must ask you. Who is the girl I asked you about before?" He looked at her for a long time before he spoke. "She is . . . nobody, Anne." "That's . . . not true," Anne said "She's somebody. She followed me around, and she wrote me a note.' He looked down at his glass. Then he pushed his chair back and leaned

"Look, my dear," he said. "She is largely responsible for both you and Wilcox not getting killed yesterday. She is . . . a friend of my uncle Diego Gongare. She has been listening to their talk . . .

Anne hesitated on the doorstep of the Valera home. Miguel took her arm reassuringly. They went through a tiled passage. In the broad lovely patio Don Alvaro came forward, bowing as he took her hand. "It is a great pleasure, Senorita," he said. He led her around to the right where a woman in a heavily bead ed blue crepe dress was talking ex citedly to another woman.

"This is Miss Heywood, Rosa. My niece, Mrs. Arias." They shook hands. Anne glanced along the terrace. There was nothing but women, all sitting in a long row, chattering and laughing. She looked across to the other side. Over there there was nothing but men. She listened with bewildered attention to the voluble stream that Mrs. Arias was pouring out into her ear about poor Graciela having to miss the party to be at her father's side in the hospital. Don Alvaro was gone, Miguel was the center of the group on the other side of the patio. Anne took her place in the row of chairs and sipped the cool champagne punch a servant brought her. So far as she could see she was the only Continental American there. After a few moments Mrs. Arias brought up an attractive woman in a blue linen sports dress and introduced her. She was English. "Is this your first Spanish party?" she asked with a smile.—"I thought

so. You look so bewildered."
"I guess I do, too," Anne laughed "Do we just stay here like this? What would happen if we went over on the other side?'

"You'd go alone. I haven't got that much courage." "But look-there's a boy talking

"But he's engaged to her." "Oh," Anne said. "And there he goes back to the men."

She and Miguel were engaged too, and he could have come and talked to her. But that was her fault. She hadn't wanted it public knowledge until her parents came. Anyway, he was watching her. She smiled across the patio at him.

At lunch they sat at a long table under the trees in a walled garden, Anne and Miguel and the Englishwoman and her husband. It was fun then, except that still most of the women stayed in the house and the men stayed clustered in their own group. The crisp roast pig and the asopao were wonderful, but Anne felt the way she used to when she was a small child and they had Christmas dinner in the middle of the day. She was glad when Don prove wonderfully effective as a Alvaro came and she could get up and move around.

They walked across the garden and into the patio. "Shall we go inside, Senorita?" he said. "I have wished several days (TO BE CONTINUED) liners are giving new side width.

Newest Fashions Are Styled With Exquisite Simplicity

and sophisticated from a simple neckline, somewhat after the manner of a choirboy's surplice. Note the trim fitted waistline. HE wartime plea for fabric conservation has ushered in a new era of costume design. It is one that calls for clothes that are feminine but not fussy, with the emphasis placed on beautiful body lines at the same time it subtly molds to the figure with feminine grace. The exquisite simplicity with which the newer fashions are styled also reflected in the discreet use made of trimmings and the choice manner in which clever detail is worked out so as to achieve "the touch that tells." It will be interesting to watch the development of this movement, for all signs point to the technique that calls for sophisticated simplicity as the fashion creed of the future as well as now. style touch. Speaking for the present, certain it is that the new fashions created

This is a season when handsome wool handknit fashions are looked upon with high regard. A treasured possession is this wool handknit double-breasted topper. It has a thoroughbred air about it which makes instant appeal to women of discriminating taste. Wear it over slacks at home, over skirts or dresses on the street and it will wrap worn over evening clothes. Here is a wrap that will hold good the year round and the more you wear it the more you will treasure it.

wool for this dress, giving it "glitter drama," via rich gilt embroidery that sparkles from the belt, and nobby jewel buttons that lead up to the double loop collar that nestles high under the chin.

The third of these Berenice Holloway originals as shown to the right is a timeless classic. It has all the subtleties of narrow slenderizing lines which modern costume design demands. This dress definitely carries the message of fall 1943 styling. The gently shirred panel eases off to allow front fullness in the skirt. Chunky plastic buttons shine against the dull mat finish of the gray Enka rayon crepe of the dress. The high notched collar imparts an artful

In suits as in dresses you will find that the emphasis is on pencil-slim lines. The smart silhouette that women-of-fashion covet for fall is achieved by wearing a topper in the new short length, such as is creating such a furor just now, over your sleek-skirted suit. The flare of the topper contrasts the slimness of the suit skirt in animated lines that are

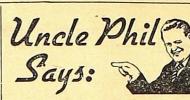

The movement to siren slenderness is particularly noticeable in the new beautifully proportioned sheathlike dinner gowns that are so outstanding in the current fashion picture. Sometimes there is a side movement in the slant drape of the skirt, then again a slashed hemline

Dazzle Belts Set Off Slim Classic Frocks

The new dress theory is that you look smartest when your frock is of the simplest, emphasizing perfect lines and striking color, with trimming conspicuous by its absence. With this model of simplicity you are supposed to add some one or other accessory that simply startles with its "dash and go." For instance, there are dazzling belts that are designed to be worn with classically simple frocks just by way of keen contrast. Handwork and jewels and sequins galore go into the making of these glamorous belts that interpret the effectiveness of a single important highspot for your slim classic dress. The only way to properly sense the extravagant beauty of these belts is to see them with your own eyes in display at smart accessory counters and shops.

Gloves Go Dramatic As a glamorous touch to your costume gloves are cast to play a star role during the coming months. Just now it's the stunning kidskin gloves designed to go with your smart tweeds and tailored suits that you'll be wanting. The swankiest are brief and you can get them in black, navy or brown stitched in sharp contrast with white. To wear when in gala attire there's a treat in store in that a sensational revival is predicted for fine white kidskin gloves. Decorative stitching, embroidery, tucks, beads and sequins will give them intrigue. Some will be styled with shirred insets, others will have eye let cut-cut embroidery ruffling. There's a big season ahead for immaculate white gloves. Pigskin gloves in white and in suit colors are ideal to wear with smart town

Dunking Old Idea Dunking in your "bunchum" is a custom as ancient as Arabia. It was there where the world's first cup of coffee was made from some strange, bright red berries the Arabians called "bunn." The beverage became "bunchum" and was thick enough to scoop out of the bowl with bits of food. Result: Introduction of dunking to the world!

Auto in 1997 $2,000

The motorist who is worrying about the rumors of advancing automobile prices should be glad this isn't 1907. Automobile prices today average about one-third what they were in 1907. In that year the average automobile cost $2,131, with top, windshield and horn extra.

This Is a 'Corker'

Here's a story that may well be termed a "corker." Recently Robert E. Adams of Shreveport, La., mourned the disappearance of $40his whole week's pay. He considered himself a "hard-luck guy." A happy ending came later, however, when he found the money-in his cork leg. Adams said he apparently had put the money in his frousers pocket in which there was a hole, and the money fell through into the artificial limb.

Abnormal Tire Wear

If tires show abnormal wear the trouble may be caused by underinflation or misaligned wheels, according to the California State Automobile association. Another cause of uneven tire wear is unbalanced wheels. At high speed a wheel only slightly out of balance develops a powerful centrifugal force. This force jerks the wheel up and down as it rotates. In addition to abnormal up and down motion there also may be side motion as the heavy spot moves fore and aft. Unbalanced wheels frequently cause shimmy, abnormal wear in steering mechanism, as well as cupped spots in the tire tread.

Washington, D. C. BRITAIN VS. RUSSIA

One thing which distressed the Flying Senators on their round-theworld inspection was the intense rivalry between the British and Russians in the Near East.

The senators reported that around the Gulf of Persia, where the Russians take delivery on U. S. lend-lease airplanes, the British local commander at first refused to let the Russians set up a local lendlease receiving agency. The Gulf of Persia long has been coveted by land-locked Russia as a means of reaching the sea. British opposition presumably was based on this.

Finally the British government in London ruled that the Russians could send an airplane mission to the Gulf of Persia, but even then the local British commander, according to the senators, delayed and tried to block

Now, however, the Russians are established at the head of the Gulf and work in close co-operation with U. S. officials. To save manpower, the U. S. army uses skirted natives to assemble airplanes under the supervision of sergeants and doughboys. Then the planes are turned over to the Russians for inspection. In test flights, the Russians cruise all over the Gulf of Persia area, obviously have ample op-portunity to map out the terrain.

The Russian base is commanded by a live-wire young general who gets along well with the Americans but is eyed with some suspicion by the British.

The senators also reported that when the British were a bit starchy about letting the Russians use the airport at Teheran, capital of Iran, farther north, the Russian army sent in a regiment one night and, without further argument, took over the airport. Since then the British have had to ask the Russians for permission to use it. These are a few of the delicate problems facing the Allies in this suspicious, balance-of-power section of the Near East, where, according to the senators, the chief topic of conversation is the political tugof-war between Russia and Britain.

PATRIOTIC U. S. HENS

The hens of America are really doing all right by Uncle Sam. Their war effort is producing more eggs than the country has ever seen. Though we are sending 10 billion eggs overseas, 50 billion more remain for our frying pans.

This total of 60 billion eggs is an all-time high. Even the domestic 50 billion is an all-time high. Passed around to every man, woman and child, it means 346 eggs apiece for the year, or about one a day. This is a lot better than the average. At the moment, eggs are "tight" in the market, because this is the moulting season, when laying always falls off. But eggs will increase again when the hens resume full-time production, also when the egg-drying business falls off.

This is a new and unexpected turn of events. The tremendously expanded egg-drying business was expected to take a full 20 per cent of our egg crop, but now the estimates are dropping fast. Reason is the British and Russians, after two years of dried egg diet, are getting tired of them. They are politely telling the combined food board and lend lease, "Don't pass those dried eggs around any more."

The dried egg business used a modest 10 million pounds before the war, mostly for cake flour and confectionery purposes. But the sub-marines have made shipping space so tight that space is not available for shell eggs, and the dried egg business has shot up to a capacity of about 400 million pounds.

Some of this capacity is now idle, because of Allied distaste for the product, so more fresh eggs will come onto the U. S. market.

ARMY ADVISES HOUSEWIVES The quartermaster corps feeds so many thousands of mothers' sons that it now dares to tell those mothers how to prepare a roast of beef.

Experiments in army camps show that if you cook a roast at relatively low temperatures, you will have 20 per cent more roast at the end. Cooking at high temperatures shrinks the meat, and dries up the juices.

According to QMC, the desirable range of temperature is 315 to 350 degrees Fahrenheit. Cooking an eight pound roast at this temperature will require 4 hours and 10 minutes.

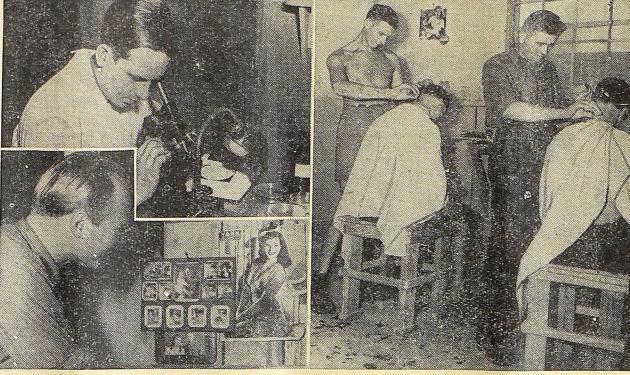

In other words, it takes more time than at a higher temperature (at 400 degrees, it takes only 3 hours), but you save the juices, save vitamins, and will have more roast to

WAR CHAFF

C Officials estimate that if Russia gets out of the war, Germany will be able to double or triple the number of fighter planes which now oppose Allied bombers from England. Many Flying Fortress pilots are not big six-footers, but little fellows who have to stuff a cushion behind themselves in the driver's seat.

@ Experts who know Italy say there are 1,400 railroad bridges in that country, destruction of which from the air would cripple German troop movements completely.

HONORING OUR PARENTS

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:12; Luke 2:48-51; Mark 7:6-13; John 19:25-27. GOLDEN TEXT—Children, obey your parents in the Lord: for this is right.— Ephesians 6:1.

Right relations between children and parents have much to do with the peace and prosperity of a com-munity and a nation. Experience has demonstrated that to be true, but even more basic is the fact that it is in accord with the promise of God.

One of the bad breakdowns in modern life is that of proper honor and obedience to parents by children. In all too many homes God's order has been reversed and instead of honoring and obeying their parents, children (both young and old) have taken the place of "boss," and mother and father must obey if they want peace and rest.

The need for our lesson of today is both great and acute. The future happiness of hundreds of thousands of children and the present welfare of thousands of neglected and bossridden parents will depend on the intelligence and faithfulness with which this lesson is taught in our churches, and the honesty of heart with which we all receive its truth.

I. The Command and Promise

(Exod. 20:12). We are told by Paul that this is the "first commandment with promise" (Eph. 6:1-3). The Lord was not making a bargain with man, or seeking to draw out obedience by a prize, but there is obviously a great reward in the observing of this commandment.

Then, too, as the children of God (if we are such) through Jesus Christ, the first and most important consideration to come before us is, What is the mind and will of the Maker of us all regarding this matter of the relation between parents and children? His words a e plainwe are to "honor" our fathers and our mothers.

The word "honor" carries with it a great many things, but perhaps the three cuistanding elements are respect, obedience, and affection. Our Lord Jesus Christ, who is the Saviour and then the Example of believers, presents a beautiful pattern of true obedience to this commandment.

II. Willing Obedience (Luke 2:48-51; John 19:25-27).

The fact that Jesus was God manifest in the flesh only enhanced His conduct. He who is divine presents an example of obedience and con-sideration both as boy and man which we do well to emulate.

and man" (v. 52), had come to His | coach, said: twelfth year and with His parents had gone up to Jerusalem to celebrate the Passover.

There moved in His heart the con-His Father's business-an altogether proper and commendable purpose, but one which resulted for the moment in separation from His parents. This was far more serious than a physical separation, for we read that they did not understand Him (v. 50).

Tragic indeed are the consequences of our failure to understand our children. Notice, however, that Jesus did not withdraw Himself from their watchful care, nor refuse to obey them even though they failed to understand Him. Equally tragic are the results of hasty and bitter separations brought about by the dis-obedience of children.

2. As a Man (John 19:25-27). The value of our lesson will be greatly reduced if we see only the responsibility of children while they are young. We are the children of our parents as long as we and they

One marvels at the carelessness and hardness of heart that will permit men and women who have time and money for everything else, to neglect their aged parents and even shunt them off into a public institution for care.

III. Hypocritical Disobedience (Mark 7:6-13).

Such an important commandment thinking of the community. To violate it involved a measure of shame Jews of Christ's day devised a scheme which made it possible for player. a man to appear to be very religious were entitled by the law of God.

The man who was so avaricious that he did not wish to support his aged and needy parents could en-tirely evade that God-given responsibility by declaring that his property was "Corban," that is, dedicated by a vow to God. Thereafter no matter how great was the need of his parents they could receive noth-

DEBATE concerning the selection of any all-time football team is a never-ending affair. It is extremely unlikely that any two followers of the game would choose the same eleven men as their favorites.

In the backfield alone it's almost impossible to pick out any four men from the following group—Bronko Nagurski, Red Grange, Jim Thorpe, Cliff Battles, Dutch Clark, Sammy Baugh, Ernie Nevers and Ace Parker. And there are others that deserve mention. The list of great linemen is just as endless.

Most fans would pick Nagurski on any all-time team. Thorpe is another player that immediately springs to mind. Both of them proved their unquestionable fitness to occupy a niche in football's hall Their records are well

There are others who are, for one reason or another, less widely known to today's sports followers, Ken Strong is one, Pudge Heffelfinger is another. Both have had considerable publicity, especially the latter, but neither gets as much space in the record books.

About Ken Strong

Big Steve Owen of the New York Giants believes that no all-time team is complete without Ken Strong. As a scphomore at New York university under Chick Meehan, Strong was one of the best blocking backs of all time. He weighed 205 pounds and was speed-ier than most 170-pound backs.

Later on he was switched to a ball carrier and passer. According to Owen, "he was one of the best ball carriers I ever saw, college and pro. He was one of the best college or pro passers in the game. He was one of the three best kickers pro football ever knew . . . There was no position in the backfield where he wasn't an outstanding star. I don't mean good. I mean great."

When N.Y.U. defeated a strong 1. As a Boy (Luke 2:48-51). The boy Jesus, increasing "in wisdom had whipped a powerful Notre Dame and stature, and in favor with God | squad-Judge Walter Steffens, Tech

He is the best ball carrier I ever saw-one of the best passers I ever saw-as good a blocker as I ever saw-and certainly the best kicker I ever saw -including Jim Thorpe."

> Strong lacked only one thing-the color which causes athletes to grab -and keep-the spotlight. But he had everything else.

Pudge Heffelfinger

Heffelfinger is better known to the older generation, and with good reason. Pudge was named All-America guard on Walter Camp's first team in 1889. The fact that a large smattering of present day gridiron followers are familiar with his record is evidence of his greatness.

Nagurski's present comeback recalls tales of Heffelfinger's amazing durability and stamina. At the age of 44 he went back to see how Yale was getting along. He came close to ruining the Yale line, which was one of the best.

Nine years later, when he was 53, Pudge played 58 minutes in a professional game at Columbus. Bo Mc-Millin, then 22 years old, was his quarterback.

As remarkable a thing of its kind as the sports world has seen was naturally held a high place in the Pudge's activity at the age of 65. He played through a 15-minute period in another pro game for charity, and which men sought to avoid. So the the men who played against him declared he was still a good football

So Nagurski's comeback isn't so even as he deprived his parents of miraculous, even though he had been the honor and help to which they out of football for the past six years.

HE war is bringing many changes in the things we use and the things we do. Women as well as men are learning to handle tools. If a chair is lacking we make one. If we cannot have springs we find a way to make it comfortable anyway. That is the spirit of the times.

Perhaps you have made lawn chairs all with straight cuts of the hand saw. Have you ever stopped to realize that it is almost as easy to cut curves with a compass saw? Curves add comfort as well as beauty and a tufted cushion distributes the weight so that springs are not missed so much. The curved pieces of the charming chair sketched here are shown at the left. You can see how easy they are to cut out of odds and ends of one-inch lumber that you may have on hand. The reinforce ing pieces are all straight cuts.

NOTE—Mrs. Spears has prepared an actual-size pattern for all the curved sections of this chair. Complete dimensions and directions for the chair construction and for making the tufted cushion, with list of materials included. This is pattern 265 and costs 15 cents. Send your order to:

How do scientists explain the apparent "magic" of KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN's relief? Simply thus: ALL-BRAN is one of Natural Control ture's most effective sources of "cellulosic" elements — lack of which in sufficient amounts in the diet is a common cause of con-stipation! These elements help the friendly colonic flora fluff up and lighten the colonic wastes for easy, natural elimination. KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN doesn't work by

"purging"—or by "sweeping you out." It is a gentle-acting, "regulating" food!

If this is your trouble eat KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN regularly. Drink plenty of water! See if you don't find the welcome relief you've hoped for! Insist on genuing you've hoped for! Insist on genuine ALL-BRAN, made only by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

SNAPPY FACTS RUBBER

South America supplied 65 per cent of the world's rub-ber needs in 1290, while in 1922 only about 6 per cent came from that section. Far East plantation development accounts for the drop in the demand for Amazon Valley rubber.

Synthetic rubber is defined as a man-made combination of molecules that form a substance having the chief characteristics of crude rubber.

In 1938 the total of Americancontrolled rubber plantations was about 260,000 acres, mostly in the Far East. These plantations produced 40,000 tons annually, or about 8 per cent of U. S. imports.

Marine Doctors Share Hardships With Fighters

'Offices' Are Crude Dugouts Or Wooden Huts; Several Decorated for Valor.

By TECHNICAL SERGEANT JIM G. LUCAS

SOMEWHERE IN THE SOUTH PACIFIC—(Delayed)— Keeping the marine corps of World War II in fighting trim is not a hit-and-run job.

Wherever marines go in the South Pacific, their doctors go with them. Their "sick bays" range from crude dugouts, at the front lines, to fairly presentable, but certainly not elaborate, wooden huts deeper in "safe" territory.

On Guadalcanal, Tulagi, Tanambogo, doctors distinguished themselves under fire. They have received navy crosses, silver stars and distinguished service medals for valor, others have died in action.

Unable to get into battle, they are doing the same work they did at

When they closed their offices and said goodby to civilian practice, they were moving 10,000 miles to the uncharted islands of the Pacific.

A Typical 'Sick Bay.'

Typical of the hundreds of 'sick bays' now strung over Allied territory in the south Pacific is that directed by Lieut. A. A. Pringos, U.S.N., of 523 Washington street, Petersburg, Va., a graduate of the University of Virginia school of medicine who gave up his practice in New Orleans, La., to enlist in the navy nine months ago.
Lieutenant Pringos' "sick bay" is far enough back of actual fighting that it handles no battle casualties. Those are evacuated from the front lines to hospitals elsewhere.

His job is the routine one of keeping fighting men fit.

Assisting him are 11 navy corpsmen, another doctor and two dentists. The demands on their time are enough to keep them busy 15 hours a day, seven days a week. They are the only doctors in a community of marines with a total population greater than that of many cities in the United States.

An ailing marine is no marine at all. First sergeants know, from past experience, that it is best to be safe than sorry; better to send a man up for examination in case of

Dusting' Gold Coins Was Racket in the Early Days

Because gold as it comes from the mines is somewhat soft, it was not at all uncommon for gold coins or nuggets of the early days to wear down in actual value. "Dusting gold" also became a racket. In Chinatown, San Francisco, elderly Chinese men with infinite patience sat by days shaking sacks of gold coins over a pan. Gold dust rubbed off on sacks and filtered through, and this was salvaged for resale at the mints. Coins were then passed on at their full marked value. Today hardening alloys are added to gold.

Last week we had a country fair n our room. Boys and girls brought their finest pumpkins, tomatoes, cucumbers, flowers and even some canned foods to exhibit. We enjoyed having the other grade rooms visit us and inspect the fair.

The first grade was sorry to have Ernestine Ziehl move to Bridgeport. We now have 23 first graders and 16 second graders.

Jimmie Clement has been out of school for the past month.

Importance of Steel

Steel's effect upon life today is se important that we could give up most other metals-including goldwith less disturbance to civilization. Today's steels are the strongest, toughest, hardest, yet most ductile, elastic and obedient of all metals used by mankind.

The two hgh scoring boys were Junion Clemens and Eugene Lake, with the Hale High school. The afternoon program which followed an enjoyable basket dinner was opened by selections from the Plainfield Township High School Band, under the leadership of Arthur Johnson. Harold Black added accordion selections.

County School Commissioner R. A. Rollin spoke to the group on accomplishments which Grange activity achieved in Iosco county, and complimented the entire Hale community for their forethought and planning of a huge building program include of a huge building program, including the Community Hall and new

Arthur Regers of Grant township gave a most interesting reading, "Hitler's Phone Call."

Agricultural Agent W. L. Finley discussed "Our War Time Agriculture" and emphasized careful plan-ning of an agricultural program adapted to Iosco county soil, climate, labor and equipment. He complimented the group for their revival of the county fair spirit, and expressed the hope that the event might be repeated for years to come.

Col. T. G. Scofield then sold the largest and thickest frosted eakes to the highest bidders, and the afternoon program was closed when Mrs. Alex Robinson announced winners of he day in each of the various classes. Miss Arzell Dodds, home econom ics teacher at the Whittemore school, served as official judge in the Womens Department, while a committee consisting of Agricultural Teacher Frank Gardner, John Johnson and W. L. Finley selected the winners in the Livestock, Poultry, Horticulture, Crops and Garden Produce Classes. First place winners in each class
